Simon to announce plans regarding SIUC

By David R. Kazak
DE Government/Politics Editor

Sen. Paul Simon (D-Ill.) will officially announce today his intentions to teach at SIUC.

For more information on Simon
see page 10

The 10:30 a.m. announcement on the steps of Shryock Auditorium, which Gov. Jim Edgar will attend, is coming on the heels of an SIUC publicity boom from last week's visit by President Bill Clinton and has SIUC administrators excited about his possible arrival.

College of Mass Communication and Media Arts Dean Joe Foote, said Simon's prominence on the world stage should be more than enough to get anyone excited that he would choose SIUC.

"This could be the greatest opportunity in the history of SIUC," Foote said. "We have not had a man with the depth of interest this man has. He is known around the world for his political courage."

Foote, as well as University Relations Executive Director Jack Dyer, had no comment over the weekend about today's announcement nor would they confirm that Simon has definitely signed on at SIUC.

"Let's let him talk," Foote said. "It's his day."

College of Liberal Arts Dean John Jackson also would not comment about today's announcement, but said in an Associated Press story Friday, the University will be creating a new position for Simon.

"I think if there is a unique niche he has, it is in the area of journalism, mass communication and that impact on public policy-making and on American politics," Jackson said to the A.P. "He straddles both of those worlds very nicely."

Although Foote did not say specifically what Simon would teach, he did say he had a lot of ideas about what Simon could do when and if he comes to SIUC. He said he would talk about those ideas after the announcement.

Neither Simon nor his spokesman David Carle, would talk about Simon's future plans. At a fund-raiser Sunday for U.S. Rep. Richard Durbin's campaign for Simon's soon-to-be vacated Senate seat, Simon said, "Any questions about my future plans will be answered tomorrow."

But Simon's wife Gene said she is making plans to stay at her Makanda home permanently and is glad her husband has chosen to join SIUC. She said Simon will be starting at SIUC in January 1997.

"For 22 years, we have been living at two homes," Gene Simon said. "Now we're here to live permanently. (Paul) is elated and excited."

In 1972, Simon taught journalism at Sangamon State University in Springfield, which is now a part of the University of Illinois school system. He has been active in politics since the late 1960s. Before that, he was the owner/editor of the Troy Tribune, a small Southern Illinois newspaper.

Contractor concerned for protester safety

The owner of a logging company hired to cut timber in the Cripps Bend area of the Shawnee National Forest says he is concerned for the safety of protesters at the logging site who plan to stand in the way of the operation.

Stan Curtis, owner of Carbondale Veneer Co., said protesters who are camping out at Cripps Bend, located near Pámona, are placing themselves in danger. He said when his company logged part of a seven-acre region of the forest six months ago, protesters were risking their safety. "I'm worried (about the protesters) because it is a matter of safety," Curtis said. "They don't know how close they came to getting hurt six months ago. They were down there in shorts and sandals hanging in the woods and not knowing where the timber-cutters were cutting."

Curtis said he understands why the protesters want to prevent the logging, but he said he is only trying to fulfill a job that the Forest Service is paying him to do.

"I'm just out there trying to do a job," Curtis said. "All we do is fulfill a project."

Curtis said he is still unsure of when the logging will begin. He said the final go-ahead for the logging will come from the Forest Service.

Despite warnings of danger, protesters said they are prepared to stay in Cripps Bend until a decision regarding the logging is made in court.

"We plan on maintaining a vigil here until the case is settled in the courts," Jim Reh, a logging protester, said.

Environmentalists said they are uncertain when an appeal in a lawsuit against the Forest Service to stop the logging at Cripps Bend will be filed, but the details of the appeal

USG Senate officials oppose actions taken toward grills

By Wendy J. Allyn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Undergraduate Student Government Senate is officially opposing actions of Residence Hall Dining administrators who recently reduced working hours of the Lakeside and Saluki Grills.

Two resolutions concerning the grills passed at last week's senate meeting. One opposes administrators, who the resolutions accuse of failing to execute a plan providing continuous service of both the cafeteria and the snack bars to students. The other states that not executing the plan has had a negative effect on University Housing residents and student employees of the grills.

Both the Lakeside and Saluki Grill facilities extended services early this semester after students responded to polls conducted in the spring indicating that they wanted an alternative to the cafeteria. "Some students want freshly cooked hamburgers and chicken breasts for lunch," said USG Sen. Josh Valtos. "A lot of students are upset because now they have to eat in the cafeteria."

Not only have hours now been restricted to 5 p.m. to 11 p.m., but some students who were employed when the grills opened at 11 a.m., lost their on-campus jobs.

USG Sen. David Vingren, said his biggest concern is students who

EVENTS MAY BE OVERTAKING U.S. BOSNIA PLAN—
ZAGREB, Croatia—The scenario sounds stranger than fiction. It is 1995, six years after the fall of the Berlin Wall. The Cold War is over, and the barbed wire fence across Europe that separated armed American and Russian troops is history. But tensions spilling over from a small war in the Balkans are tearing Europe apart. So the U.S. government proposes to end the war by dividing the disputed territory—Bosnia-Herzegovina—into two equal states. But the scenario is not fiction. Whether the plan becomes reality depends on two government bodies that are sure to have reservations: the U.S. Congress, which by a more than two-thirds majority voted last month to lift the arms embargo that has prevented Bosnia from recovering its territory; and the government of Croatia, which this summer recaptured its Krajina region from the Serbs and became the most powerful player in the Balkans.

BACK-TO-RUSSIA MOVEMENT GAINS MOMENTUM—

MINSK, Belarus—School No. 216 here, a public academy for gifted children grades one to four, is a few weeks younger than the sovereign Republic of Belarus and a good indicator of where this former Soviet state is heading. Opened in early 1992, the school was required by a law to offer a curriculum in the renaissance Belarusian language alongside the traditional one in Russian. But when No. 216's smartly decorated classrooms opened for school this month, the native tongue was all but silent. Once rated among the top Belarusian-language schools, No. 216 now teaches the three Rs—in Russian only. The turnaround is a giant leap in Slavic Belarus' retreat from a separate national identity that most of its 10 million people never asked for.

RED CROSS REUNITING LOST RWANDAN FAMILIES —

KIGALI, Rwanda—So far, 25,000 parents have approached the Red Cross and the U.N. children's agency, UNICEF, looking for their missing sons and daughters. At the same time, relief officials have registered 80,000 "unaccompanied" youngsters from Rwanda's descent into dementia. How many others might be unregistered is pure guesswork. In the waiting room, each family quietly told its story. One mother wearing saddle shoes lost track of her 6-year-old daughter in the dark night of April 15, 1994, when shooting started and everyone for miles panicked and fled into the countryside. And so on.

ROBBERS USE OF VICIOUS DOGS ON INCREASE —

WASHINGTON—Dogs such as Rottweilers and pit bulls, often mistreated to encourage aggressive behavior, are becoming a weapon of choice for robbers as well as youths seeking to establish neighborhood reputations as macho men. Although statistics are inconclusive, police and animal-control officials can recount incident after incident in Washington and the surrounding area in which dogs have been used instead of guns or knives to intimidate victims. Police officers have to consider dangerous dogs as one more weapon they might encounter on the street.

DEVELOPERS LOOK TO REINVENT SHOPPING MALLS—

Flip off that big-screen TV and pull yourself out of that Barcelona lounge. Corporate America has new plans for your leisure time. And to make sure that you leave that pricey home entertainment center behind, developers are looking toward reinventing a staple of suburban life—the shopping center. With nearly 20 square feet of retail space for every American, developers have little choice but to abandon their cookie-cutter approach to malls. But the new centers will use massive movie complexes to draw crowds—hoping they will stick around to eat, shop and play.

Protestors use tours to explain position

By Aaron Butler
Associate Editor

Environmentalists showed their side of the Cripps Bend story to the public yesterday when a tour organized by SIUC students brought two groups to see the controversial logging site first-hand.

Members of the SIUC Student Environmental Center advertised the tour Saturday by handing out flyers, and early Sunday afternoon those interested drove or were driven to the site.

John Wallace, a member of the Natural Forest Network from Makanda, said a group of about 35 students and members of the Carbondale community came to tour the logging site.

Wallace, who led one of two groups of visitors, said he felt the tour was a success and wants to prove to as many of the public as possible that the timber sale is far larger than the U.S. Forest Service is saying.

"I'm tired of hearing the seven-acre figure over and over," he said. "There are 20 to 30 acres being logged out here."

Kristen Kordecki, another protester who guided the tour, said although the cutting at Cripps Bend is said to be selective, the roads cut through the forest create swaths eroding earth without any growth.

"We will lose twice as many trees as they cut for the roads because of erosion," she said. "We have already seen trees fall into the road because the soil has been washed from their roots."

International Student Council offers opportunities to students

By Cynthia Sheets
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Encouraging peace and unity between cultures are main goals of the International Student Council for the new semester, council members say.

"We are bringing people together at SIUC to share ideas, promote unity and enhance cooperation," Sahabo Mohamud, vice president for Internal Affairs, said.

The council met at its first meeting of the fall semester Thursday night, and formed a recruiting committee to be headed by James Quisenberry, the director of International Programs and Services.

Wan Kamal Wan Napi, council president, said there are currently 46 different countries represented on the Carbondale campus, with around 3,000 international students in the population at SIUC.

"Currently on the council we have 36 students, and they range anywhere in nationality from Africa to Turkey," he said.

Wan Napi, a graduate student in Public Administration from Malaysia, said the biggest event the council is known for is the World Cup soccer tournament it hosts each year.

"The soccer tournament brings different people and different cultures together," he said. "During the game, people fight to win, but at the end of the game, you can see the relationship between the international students is very good.

"It's a very good bridge to people—you can see people working together in sports activities," Wan Napi said.

Two other major events organized by the council are the International Festival and the International Olympics, the latter of the two just introduced last year, Wan Napi said.

The International Festival is a week long celebration for students from nations world-wide to share different cultures with others at SIUC, and the event is usually held during the first part of the spring semester.

The International Olympics consisted mainly of track events held in McAndrew Stadium, with a ceremony being held prior to the start of the games similar to the Olympic Games style.

Tug-of-war, the 4X100 and 4X400 relays, and high jump were among the competitions, Wan Napi said. The competition is slated this year for Sept. 30.

Northeast side residents complain about city services

By Alan Schnepf
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Residents of Carbondale's northeast side voiced their opinions about what they perceive as inadequate city services at a town meeting Thursday.

About 40 residents gathered in the Thomas Elementary School gym to discuss several concerns of the northeast side including unfair law enforcement, poor street maintenance, misuse of park funds and possible environmental dangers in the area.

The meeting was held by the Citizens Advisory Committee, a group that gives advice to the Carbondale City Council, but does not vote on any city legislation.

Cleveland Matthews, community relations officer for the city manager's office, said the northeast side has a higher density of African-American residents than any area in Carbondale. He said there are only about 30 white residents out of the 4,700 people in the neighborhood.

After a short introduction, residents were randomly divided into four groups, each with two committee members, to talk for about an hour. After the group discussions, four committee members, one for each group, made presentations of the issues brought up by the residents.

The attitudes of police officers to people living in the northeast side was mentioned by several people.

One resident, Madlyn Stalls, said she once came home with some friends to find a police officer in her backyard.

"I said 'excuse me, is there a problem?'" Stalls said. She said the officer was rude and even upon learning he was in Stalls' yard, did not explain why he was there.

"This is an example of police attitude to people here," she said. "Like we can be treated any way. Give me human courtesy, like you would anyone else."

People also complained that there was selective enforcement when citations were issued for overgrown grass and noise violations. Residents said one household is sometimes cited for a violation, while one nearby is ignored.

There were also requests for the Carbondale Park District to put up a pavilion in the neighborhood so residents would have a place to have picnics without traveling across town. People said some of the park district's funds have been allocated to activities they cannot afford, such as golf.

There were also complaints about the way residents are treated when dealing with city employees. Several people said they were not given respect when they sought city services.

"I think there's a sentiment to devalue poor and black people seeking city services in Carbondale," Stalls said.

People also expressed concern about an old waste treatment plant near an elementary school. Residents say the plant still gives off an awful stench.

Another environmental worry was an abandoned railroad tie plant that was closed down by the Environmental Protection Agency about five years ago.

Matthews said creosol, a compound used to treat the ties against weathering, was found to have saturated some of the ground around the plant. The EPA has banned creosol use because of health risks associated with it.

Moro waives extradition

By Carey Jane Atherton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Alleged kidnapper John D. Moro, 34, of Centralia, waived extradition back to Illinois, but his return to Jackson County is pending a possible child rape or child molestation charge in Washington.

States Attorney Mike Wepsiec said Moro waived extradition back to Illinois in Kitley County Superior Court last Thursday. Wepsiec said this means Moro will not contest returning to Illinois to face charges.

If Washington prosecutors do not find sufficient evidence to charge Moro with child molestation or child rape, Wepsiec said Moro will be back in Jackson County "within days."

John D. Moro

Department of Children and Family Services, prior to the alleged kidnapping.

Wepsiec said the complaints never went to trial, but credible evidence was found.

Kitley County Deputy Prosecutor Candace Hooper, said prosecuting attorney Greg Zempel has until Moro's court appearance today at 1:30 p.m. to file possible rape and molestation charges.

In Jackson County, Moro is accused of abducting his daughter, Demetria, at gun point from Giant City Elementary School. After a nation-wide, two-week-long manhunt, Moro was apprehended by FBI agents in Ellensburg, Wash., last Tuesday.

Moro was arrested on a Jackson County warrant for aggravated kidnapping and a federal warrant for unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

Demetria's mother, Kelly Kurtz, of Carbondale, flew to Washington last week and has brought her daughter back to Illinois.

Since his arrest, Moro has been in the Ellensburg jail.

Policies at SIUC in need of review

AN SIUC STUDENT'S ATTEMPT TO HAVE A grade changed in a physics class has turned into a matter of pursuing justice. Brent Ibata says an assignment he handed in to the Physics Department was lost by the department. He says this has affected his chances of getting into his preferred medical schools because it dropped his average in the class to an 89.2. The DE supports Ibata in his effort to fight for the higher grade out of the principle of what he thinks is right. The DE believes the policies of the College of Science need to be reviewed as a result of this incident.

THE PROCEDURAL POLICY OF THE COLLEGE of Science is to accept complaints addressed to the professor of the class up to 30 days after the grade is issued. If the request for a grade change is denied, as it was in this case by professor Kenneth Johnson, then the complainant has the option of going to the department chair with the complaint within the 30-day period after the final grades are mailed by the University. Dr. Rohnjia Tao, chairman of the physics department, said there was not a hearing because Ibata did not meet the 30-day deadline.

In the attempt to go one step further with the issue, Ibata brought the matter to the attention of Associate Dean of Science William Dyer. The appeal was again denied because of the failure to meet the 30-day deadline after the complainant's receipt of the decision by the department chair. Now Ibata has taken the matter to the office of Ben Shepherd, vice-president of academic affairs.

IBATA EVEN HAS GONE AS FAR AS ST. LOUIS, to take a lie detector test to prove he handed in the assignment. While at Executive Screening Services, Ibata took a test administered by Clinton R. Cook who asked him if he turned in the assignment, whether he turned it in on time and if he completed it on time. Ibata answered "yes" to all three questions. Cook, in a written statement, said, "It is my opinion that Brent A. Ibata was being truthful when he answered the aforementioned questions."

IBATA HAS EXERCISED CONSIDERABLE effort in proving what he believes is right. Professor Johnson, in a signed statement to the chair, said to the best of his knowledge an assignment had not been lost in the 15 years he had taught this and other courses. But there is always a chance that after 15 years, one mistake has been made and just has not been acknowledged by the department or Johnson. Tao sought the opinion of Richard G. Haggerson, university legal counsel, who stated that in such a case the burden should be on the student to provide proof of his deposition of the homework by deadline.

TAKING A LIE DETECTOR TEST, SEEMS TO BE strong evidence that the homework was handed in on time. The fact that Ibata had received an "A" average on each one of the other assignments in the course also seems to lend credence to Ibata's claim that the homework was indeed "lost" by the Physics department. The DE recommends a review of procedure policy to promote just outcomes when incidents such as these occur. The DE would also recommend a fair hearing for Mr. Ibata who appears to be a policy victim.

Letters to the Editor

Clean, righteous living only way to find true personal happiness

Peace of mind and contentment of the spirit and soul is seemingly unattainable to many, yet being happy rests in the heart and on the lips of the voiceless masses. A friend who read my words in the DE on Feb. 17 wanted to know the inner meaning of my first letter without the symbols, similes or signs of poetic language. Basically, he said "When you give it to me, Brother Enoch, give it to me raw."

You want it raw? Are students in school to receive degrees in knowledge and in the ability to think for themselves, or are students here to memorize "scholars" and theories and get degrees in quotology? Should students fight the falsehood that is seen in the curriculum, or should students recite falsehood back to get an A, learn nothing and leave school with a B.S. degree? (B.S. is exactly what it is.)

Are students in school to learn the best way to roll a blunt, how to pass out from drinking without getting their stomachs pumped, or how to perform as many sexual positions with as many people as possible? I know, everyone is not doing this, but many are.

All we really want is to be at peace—we want to be happy. Is happiness found in that never-ending blunt, which frees you for a period of time but punks out on you and leaves you lower than you were from the start? Is it worth the pain that comes in the end of sexual escapades with people you do not love?

Well, what is the alternative to the so-called college life of promiscuity, drunkenness, wild partying, fighting, foolishness and ignorance in the name of youthful exuberance?

Clean righteous living, based upon principles of freedom, justice, equality and truth that are applied in our everyday lives. This bears witness to the great men and women of the creator, who were sent to different people in different parts of the world at different times, giving the one uniting principal which is the submitting of our wills to do what is right.

Parking etiquette could make it easier find a space on campus

As most of you know, parking at SIU in the morning is stressful and chaotic. It appears that many of us have come to create our own rules of parking etiquette which often conflict with other people's understanding of the rules. For this reason, I decided to make public the proper etiquette involved in parking at SIU. Before I describe the rules of parking, I must define the vocabulary. Cruisers: the cars that fly through the parking lots in search of a vacant space or someone just about to leave. Stalkers: the cars that slowly drive behind people as they walk toward their cars. Vultures: the cars that sit idling at the ends of rows, causing chaos and hoping someone will vacate one of "their" spaces. Cheaters: the cars who spot people walking through the parking lot and offer them a ride to their car. Be advised that allowing a cheater to drive you to your car is not recommended, since it is not safe to accept rides from strangers.

entitled to the space vacated by the person they delivered.

1. The vultures get parking priority over the stalkers and cruisers. As a vulture, the first car to a row gets any space vacated in the row. Therefore, if a car at the opposite end of the row also decides to become a vulture, she/he will get the second space that is vacated, regardless of the proximity of the first vacated space, and thus creating an alternating system.
2. The stalkers get any vacated spaces not protected by vultures or obtained by cheaters.
3. The lowest priority parkers are the cruisers who are entitled to any space not covered by vultures or obtained by cheaters or stalkers.

I hope that rules of parking etiquette help alleviate some of the confusion, dirty looks, and/or fights. Happy Parking!!

The rules:
1. While it appears unfair, the cheaters are always

Article about Greeks misinformed

This letter is in regards to the article published in Thursday's paper. I was not as offended as I was confused. The article seemed to bash Greek life and it seems obvious that the author had no clue what she was writing about.

Greeks respect non-Greeks, and as a Greek, I expect the same respect. The article stated that Greeks are not individuals. I can speak for my house and the other houses when I say that no two people are alike in any sorority or fraternity. We are not "manifestations of somebody else's ideals" as the article stated. We are who we want to be; we are not conformists.

I respect the author's opinion, but I do not approve of the fact the entire Greek system was put down. I am a much more confident and well rounded person because of my experiences in a sorority. Our lives do not revolve around our looks. Yes, we want to appear nice looking and presentable, but don't most people? I don't think wanting to look nice is a crime.

The article stated that we should concentrate on our accomplishments and our minds, and we do that. We do more community service and sponsor more events than any non-Greek organization. Grades are also very important to us and our GPA's prove it.

I understand why many people choose not to be part of Greek life, but understand why we choose to be. We have great social lives, get good grades, are able to form friendships by the dozens, and get to help others. It's a great life!

Movie review is fantasy, not movie

Before anyone has the right to give an opinion about a movie and its contents, I think that some investigation should be done. First of all, the movie To Wong Foo is not at all a "full-fledged fantasy." For Mr. Butler's information, the costumes, pageants and glamour shown in this movie is all too close to real life. I have gay friends, of which some are drag queens, that participate in pageants and have even wilder and elaborate costumes which win them crowns that Miss Universe herself wishes she had. In the gay world, there is a "Miss Gay USA" Pageant, resembling the "Drag Queen of the Year" Pageant in the movie. It was held in St. Louis last year, which goes to show how close this world is to yours.

People may think that some of the situations were absurd and the movie was full of "visual gags", but it is real and a part of some people's lives. Of course you cannot see the effectiveness of this movie because you have never been around this lifestyle and therefore do not allow yourself to understand the real life situations.

These "queens" were traveling to Hollywood make it big in their world. Along the way, they did come in contact and deal with those situations of "domestic violence, sexual harassment and police brutality." But, they also dealt with respect, love and pride for themselves and their friends.

Lastly, the fact that the movie has gay protagonist should not have any affect on the box office's ability to pull in money. When I left the theater, I turned around to find many opposite sex couples, families and yes, even children there to watch the movie. This is a fun movie that happens to include some serious problems in today's society. It just goes to show that everyone is part of society, no matter who they are and what situations they have to face.

are already written. The appeal, claiming logging would disrupt the habitat of songbirds, would allow a previous case to again come before Judge Phil Gilbert. Once the case is under re-examination, a restraining order would be issued, keeping loggers out of the Cripps Bend area, environmentalists said. In July, environmentalist Bill Cronin filed the first lawsuit against the Forest Service, claiming they had not undergone proper guidelines in assessing the impact a logging project would have on the environment. Last Tuesday, Gilbert ruled on a technicality in the case, giving the Forest Service the right to log the area. Since ruling, environmentalists have been camping at Cripps Bend protesting the logging.

have lost working hours and wages. "I'm going to try and see to it that those students can get those hours and wages back," Vingren said. University Housing Director Edward Jones has said the hours were reduced because some students misused their meal cards at the snack bars by purchasing non-food items or items such as "junk food" that do not constitute a meal. Some senators said the new hours are unfair to students because administrators never specified which items from the grills could or could not be put on meal cards. "I understand their concern, but why didn't they stipulate what the students could use their cards for?" Sen. Jemal Powell said. "Instead of trying to rectify the problem, they've acted drastically." Valtos said he suspects Jones was upset because students were using the cafeteria less when they had the option to eat at the grills all day. He said this may have prompted administrators to open the grills later.

Since the cafeteria deals in mass quantities of food, Valtos said it may have been more economical to limit the hours of the grills so students will have to use their meal cards in the cafeteria more often. "If they're dealing in mass quantity, they're going to make more money," Valtos said. "It's obvious there was an alternative motive." Vingren said he met with Jones last week and discussed the situation briefly, but there are no specific plans to resolve the situation right now. He said Jones is concerned about the student workers and does not want to overlook them. Jones could not be reached for comment Sunday. Valtos said although USG does not have the power to reopen the grills during the day, the senate will oppose it and work with administrators to change the situation. "They are working with Ed Jones to help solve the problem," he said. USG President Duane Sherman said the housing senators are handling the situation in the best possible way at this time.

Hong Kong sends signal with vote

The Los Angeles Times

HONG KONG—"I wanted to send a signal to China that Hong Kong people want to keep their freedoms," said Carina Loo, a 30-year-old investment manager. "I thought if enough people voted, it might influence the way China deals with us after 1997." Early results show that signal is loud and clear. Pro-democracy candidates won emphatic victories over rivals allied with China, and more people voted than ever before, under a franchise-expanding program introduced recently by Gov. Chris Patten. Still, the 36 percent turnout was 3 percentage points lower than in the last legislative elections here. "Everyone in Hong Kong and out of Hong Kong will have to take account of what the voice of Hong Kong has said today," Patten said early Monday.

Konlecki, a senior in elementary education, showed the group a stack of trunks at the "landung," where the cut trees are brought. "These are the dead bodies," she said. "They leave the tops behind, and the dried wood creates a fire hazard."

She said many of the visitors were shocked to see first-hand the damage done to both the smaller trees in the cutting area and the protective canopy of mature trees sheltering the saplings and undergrowth.

"These young trees won't live," she said. "Without a canopy above them they are directly exposed to pounding rain, then the direct sunlight evaporates the moisture quickly, drying the soil until nothing can grow. "A lot of people couldn't believe the destruction," she said. "They were completely disgusted that these trees will become tables."

Wallace said those who want to show support for stopping the cutting should write their senators, state representatives, and even the President.

"Unfortunately, the environment alone doesn't mean much to many politicians," he said. "But tax money does, and timber sales not only lose money, they destroy natural resources. There is no reason for doing that."

Residents

Some residents said street maintenance and fighting in their neighborhood needed improvement. They said deteriorating, dark alleys often attracted unpleasant activity they did not want near their homes.

Robert Harper, chair of the committee said he was pleased with the results of the meeting and promised people that he would make their concerns known to the Carbondale City Council.

"You've given us a lot to talk about," he said.

Harper also said the turnout increased the chance for more town meetings in other areas of Carbondale, including SIUC.

Matthews also said the meeting was a success, noting that town meetings have been held before, but never with a turnout as good Thursday's.

"I feel good about it," he said. "We got good publicity. The word got out. We only had five or six people at some of the last meetings."

Residents also said the meeting was a good step but were not sure that it would solve any of the problems residents were concerned with.

"It was a good exchange," northeast side resident Gilbert Poindexter Jr. said, "but I really don't think there will be a lot of changes down the line. We've done this before."

CLINTON

SIUC was the backdrop for a major policy speech on education funding and student financial aid.

Thousands of people — between 10,000 and 15,000 by most accounts — jammed shoulder-to-shoulder on the Pulliam Lawn and sprawled on nearby grassy slopes.

Eleven carefully selected college students met with the nation's elected leader for an informal discussion on real financial issues facing students.

A Republican congressman's press conference challenged the process by which those students were selected.

A "Death to Education" rally was canceled at the White House's request, when officials thought it might take some of the spotlight from the president.

Outstretched hands and mingling of several generations, of all political persuasions, were drawn to campus to be part of the first visit by a sitting U.S. president since 1947.

The presidential motorcade's made an impromptu stop in front of Mugsy McGuire's and for 15 minutes the president chatted with people lucky enough to be at that spot at that time.

Arrival was slightly after 9 a.m., with departure at approximately 2 p.m.

Monday, Sept. 11, 1995, the day President Bill Clinton came to SIUC.

The Daily Egyptian presents these pages to commemorate the occasion.

Fundraiser starts Durbin's campaign for Senate

By David R. Kazak
DE Governmental Affairs Editor

In an effort to raise $20,000 for U.S. Rep. Richard Durbin's Senate seat, which is up for election next year, Simon played host to area Democratic supporters at his home in Makanda Sunday.

Durbin said he is seeking to be a "successor" to Simon, who has announced he will not seek re-election next year. Durbin is gearing up his campaign to include fund-raisers across the state designed to gain wider recognition. Durbin's downstate director of finance Michelle Ishmael said.

Those who paid $25 for the BBQ lunch at the Simon residence said they were surprised and impressed by the number of people who turned out for the event, but they also pointed out the campaign will be an uphill battle for Durbin.

"For a crowd to show up like this and show their support, well, it's kind of exciting," Ishmael said. "It's going to be an exciting year, but we know the Democrats have to have a strong showing next year. Clinton has to do very well."

Matt Deffley, of Murphysboro, said he came out to support Durbin and that he was impressed by the turnout.

"I think the support he has is really great," Deffley said. "I want to know more about him though. But still, it is obvious he has the support of Paul Simon."

Simon has endorsed Durbin on many occasions since Durbin's announcement earlier this year that he would be seeking Simon's seat in the Senate.

During the fund-raiser, Durbin said he was pleased with Durbin and that Durbin would make a good senator because he is already familiar with the intricate workings of Congress.

"I've even had some Republican senators tell me that if there could be a secret ballot, they would vote for Dick," Simon said. "He knows people in Congress, and he knows the Senate."

Durbin said anyone who is a successor to Simon must understand Simon. Durbin said he fills that position well.

As a sidebar to supporting Simon's Direct Student Loan Program, Durbin said he wants the program to be called the "Simon Loan Program."

Durbin said he would work to save what he could of Simon's financial aid programs because he said Simon has already proven they work.

"The only people unhappy with the Direct Student Loan Program are the banks that have made money off students," he said. "They are resisting these new student loans."

"I will make sure these student loans are available," Durbin said.

Durbin also touched on other issues, including Medicare, jobs and minimum wage.

"There are too many people struggling to make ends meet on the current minimum wage," he said "That needs to change."

College of Liberal Arts Dean John Jackson said Durbin is well-known in Southern Illinois but will have a lot of work to do in making his name known in Chicago.

'West coast offense' really 49'ers' attack

By Dom Amore
 The Hartford Courant

First, let's deal with the name. "Frankly, I'm getting a little tired of hearing the term 'West Coast Offense,'" Green Bay Packers coach Mike Holmgren said. "It started as the '49ers Offense,' and everyone who has coached under Bill Walsh at one time or another has ... well, why can't we call it 'The Packers Offense?' ... Oh, I'm just kidding. Bernie Kosar, I guess, started calling it the West Coast Offense. He's pretty smart, so maybe we should leave it."

Whatever the title, "it's a short passing game, a controlled passing game," said Holmgren, a former 49ers offensive coordinator. And philosophically and geographically as you can be from the West Coast, have added a few of its plays to coach Dan Reeves' run-dominated offense.

"It makes sense," Giants quarterback Dave Brown said. "The downside is wind and rain and snow."

But as Lombardi Tropics pile up at 49ers headquarters—they have five—more and more teams, regardless of their home climate, are hiring former San Francisco coaches and installing the offense perfected by Walsh and Montana.

The Philadelphia Eagles, Denver Broncos, Los Angeles Raiders and Kansas City Chiefs run the West Coast most strictly. The Minnesota Vikings and Tampa Bay Buccaneers incorporate a lot of it.

Even the New York Giants, as far as far as the West Coast, have added a few of its plays to coach Dan Reeves' run-dominated offense.

Freshman Colleen Bouck, who watched the race from the sidelines due to a case of the flu, said the team had a tough time keeping together at the beginning of the race.

"There were probably 500 runners, and the first half mile was uphill, so it was tough to keep your spot," she said.

Koerner said the first half mile did separate the runners.

"We got broke-up and kind of separated after the first half mile uphill," she said. "It was a good, tough course."

Saluki women's coach Don DeNoon said hard training was also a factor for his team, but his team didn't run as well as he thought they would.

"We trained very hard, and just left it on the practice course," he said. "I thought we'd run at least a minute faster per runner."

DeNoon agreed with Bouck and Koerner, saying that the first half mile hurt the team.

"I think they got into too much of an oxygen debt going up that first hill," he said. "That hill took them away from each other."

Koerner said she, like the men, had some tired legs, but that was not the only problem.

"I was a little sore," she said. "But I really wasn't into it mentally."

Co-captains Kelly French and Koerner were top finishers for the Salukis, placing 26th and 38th, but DeNoon said his team was not close to finishing better than eighth.

"We weren't even close to eighth place," he said. "We were 84 points behind eighth and only 14 points from 10th."

Rockies look to win West

The Los Angeles Times

Does it matter to the Colorado Rockies if they win the National League West title or reach the playoffs as a wild card? Indeed. They would play the first two games at Coors Field no matter what, but as a winner they would play the Cincinnati Reds, against whom they have a two-year record of 12-4 in Denver. As a wild card, they would play the Atlanta Braves, against whom they are 3-16 in Denver and 6-30 overall.

Fearing the worst, perhaps, Red General Manager Jim Bowden emerged from a Rocky sweep in Denver last week calling Coors Field a joke and the world's largest pinball machine, "a place where they play arena baseball."

It should be no surprise that a team owned by Marge Schott would withhold $81,395.39 in salary that Ron Gant of the Reds lost when suspended four days for fighting with Pat Borders of the Houston Astros, but it came as a surprise to the disappointed Gant, who also seemed to forget that the Reds paid him for a year while he sat and recovered from a broken leg.

"I'd like to stay here four or five more years, but not paying me during the suspension doesn't show me much," Gant said. "I was sticking up for the team when I got suspended. I won't forget it when we negotiate."

The San Diego Padres began a weekend series against the Chicago Cubs with the redoubtable Fernando Valenzuela being their only starting pitcher to have a victory in the last 23 games. Valenzuela (6-3) has won four of his last five starts, with an earned-run average of 1.80 in that span.

Trammell, Whitaker record unnoticed

Newsday

Like Cal Ripken the week before, Detroit Tigers teammates Alan Trammell and Lou Whitaker set an impressive record for longevity this past week. But unlike Ripken, hardly anyone noticed what Trammell and Whitaker did.

This great Tigers duo broke the mark for playing in the most American League games together by combining in their 1,915th game on Wednesday. What's odd is that they barely received any notice for their accomplishment. Or even applause.

Officially, all of 8,967 fans attended at Tiger Stadium on their record-setting day. However, a turnstile count revealed that only 3,869 were actually in the house. This was a normal midweek, school-day Tiger Stadium crowd. No more, no less.

"I thought maybe a lot of people thought it was a night game," Whitaker said. "I thought maybe they didn't open the gates yet."

There were no curtain calls for Trammell and Whitaker. No 20-minute ovations. No emotional tours around the field. No testimonials from Hall of Famers. No news conferences. The biggest thing that happened was that they tipped their caps a few times when they were applauded.

Shortstop Trammell said he didn't want anything special done. Nor did second baseman Whitaker. In that respect, they got their wish. Still, this duo did not get its due. As Whitaker said, "We've been together longer than lots of husbands and wives."

It should also be emphasized that Trammell and Whitaker are more than just two guys who hung around a while. Both are borderline Hall of Famers, though the guess here is that neither one makes it.

Trammell has been an excellent shortstop who has been overshadowed by Ripken and underappreciated by many.

Whitaker has offensive statistics that compare to those of Joe Morgan and Ryne Sandberg in most respects, with the notable exception of stealing bases, at which the two National Leaguers excelled. When asked about the Hall, Whitaker says he deserves entrance; Trammell defers to others. Both undoubtedly will be hurt by a lack of interest in the Tigers.

Trammell and Whitaker aren't particularly close off the field. But on the field, they have been inseparable. They came up together in 1977 and probably will go out together. Manager Sparky Anderson said the youth-emphasizing Tigers will employ the duo in only two more games this season: the final home game and the final game. Whitaker has said he will retire at season's end, and Trammell is likely to follow suit.

So they won't threaten the major-league mark of 2,015 games together, held by Ron Santo and Billy Williams of the Chicago Cubs. But technically, the mark of Trammell and Whitaker is more about teamwork given that they form a double-play combination.

Fittingly, on the record-setting day, Whitaker hit a game-winning three-run home run off Milwaukee's Mike Fetters in the ninth inning of the 5-3 game. After Fetters walked Chad Curtis to bring Whitaker to the plate, Anderson said he predicted the Whitaker homer. "I said, 'This thing's over,'" Anderson recalled. "I've seen it too much. He'll never say it, but he wanted this day for him."

Despite following the plan to cut payroll and turn a very old team into a reasonably young one, Tigers GM Joe Klein appears to be in jeopardy of losing his job.

One possible replacement is San Diego Padres GM Randy Smith, who knows Tigers president John McLalle from their days together with the Colorado Rockies.

Klein has helped pare the Tiger payroll from $42 million last year to about $30 million this year and also has put them in position to knock it down to $21 million or so next year. Plus the Tigers' rotation now consists of five 25-or-younger pitchers, including a few with promise: C.J. Nitkowski, Clint Sodowsky, Jose Lima, Felipe Lira and Sean Bergman. All but Bergman are rookies. Said Anderson of Sodowsky: "He's the first pitcher I've seen here, period, in my 17 years who's come up and looked like a major-league starter. Which doesn't exactly say too much for the other guys."

Klein, saddled with overpriced contracts of the previous regime, has made a slew of trades, and there really isn't time to see whether they have worked. He got former No. 1 pick Phil Nevin for Mike Henneman, who was done with the Tigers after this year anyway. The player to be named later in the Juan Samuel deal was Phil Hiatt, a Kansas City Royal with some power potential.

Cincinnati Reds infielder Mark Lewis (as part of the David Wells deal) also appears to be on the way to Detroit. Klein also was the one who got the Tigers a viable catcher, John Flaherty, for a useless one, Rich Rowland.

The Rockies are getting cocky. After winning five of six from the Reds and Atlanta Braves, Andres Galarraga said of the Reds: "They don't want us" in the playoffs.

Reds Manager Davey Johnson, who has his own problems (he's on his way out despite another fine job), shot back at Galarraga. "Maybe he should write his own newspaper column."

Johnson's comment was a reference to David Cone's ill-fated 1988 National League Championship Series tabloid column, in which he ripped Los Angeles Dodgers reliever Jay Howell.

Acting Commissioner/Brewers Owner Bud Selig is having trouble on the home front. After a referendum to fund the Brewers' new proposed stadium was overwhelmingly rejected by voters, Selig was hopeful that he could get state legislation to help with the stadium.

However, fan backlash was behind recent postponement of the vote. Nobody believes Selig wants to leave his hometown, but he eventually may feel backed into a corner....

Brewers GM Sal Bando ripped the Brewers for their major fade in the wild-card race. However, Bando should not lose sight of the fact that it was a minor miracle that the Brewers were involved in the first place. Manager Phil Garner deserves kudos for the job he's done.

Ruben Sierra, complaining about playing time during the wild-card race, is showing signs he may turn out to be a worse team player than Danny Tartabull. And that's saying something. George Bradley is the last guy Gene Michael wants to replace him as Yankees GM, as has been rumored. Bradley was the guy Michael forced out in a power struggle in 1990.

Second half offensive flurry too late for Dawgs

By Doug Durso
DE Sports Editor

because his squad played good enough to get a victory.

"It's a tough loss because we played well enough to win this ball game in terms of effort," he said. "We were hurt in the first half in terms of silly penalties and our special teams really hurt us."

"Their points were set up off of special teams and that really hurt us."

The two blocked punts gave Arkansas State great field position and the Indians were able to take advantage for two touchdowns. Both snaps were high, but Watson said only one was a bad snap — the other was the lack of protection.

"On the first one, yes, the second one I think there was a protection error on what would have been the left side," he said.

The Salukis also had a punt blocked in their first game against Southeast Missouri State.

SIUC committed 11 penalties in the game, including several that came on third down, giving the Indians automatic first downs.

"They (penalties) still come at the wrong time," he said. "I'm really getting fed up with it, because those things are the hidden yardage things that take you out of ball games."

"And if you eliminate the penalties and play better on special teams you win this game, because we played well enough to win this ball game."

Watson was impressed by SIUC's defense, which didn't give up a point in the second half.

"Defense did a great job," he said. "The kids really played very, very well."

"They really did a nice job of stymieing them (Arkansas St)."

Trailing 14-0 at halftime, the Dawgs started rolling in the second half with Ryan Given connecting on a 21-yard field goal late in the third quarter.

Then, quarterback Danny Smith, with running backs Karlton Carpenter and Coc Bonner, drove the Salukis 80 yards on 14 plays capped by a Bonner one-yard dive.

Arkansas State stopped the Salukis' momentum, holding the ball for the rest of the game including coming up with several third down conversions.

The Dawgs offense was sparked by Carpenter, who rushed for 82 yards, and caught five passes for 46 yards.

After a shaky first half, Danny Smith settled down and completed 13 of 26 passes for 140 yards. Watson said he thought Smith did a decent job at the quarterback position.

"I thought he did a nice job at running just the base offense," he said. "We didn't ask him to get real cute on anything. We just asked him to go out there and lead them and we had a lot less confusion this week — he did a nice job."

The Salukis will try and stop their two-game losing skid when the Dawgs take on Nicholls State Saturday at McAndrew Stadium. Kickoff is at 1:30 p.m.

It is getting better.

The SIUC football team outplayed Division I-A Arkansas State for much of the game Saturday, but costly mistakes allowed the Indians to squeak by the Salukis 14-9 in Jonesboro, Ark.

Eleven Saluki penalties combined with two blocked Mark Gagliano punts contributed to Arkansas State's 14 first-half points.

SIUC controlled the second half, scoring nine points, but the Indians were able to hold the ball for the last 6:49 of the contest to steal the win.

Saluki head coach Shawn Watson said he was frustrated

Filmmaker speaks at SIUC basketball program fundraiser

By Michael DeFord
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Don't look at basketball players only as athletes, "Hoop Dreams" creator Steve James said.

James, an SIUC graduate, spoke to an audience of more than 150 people Saturday night during a fund-raiser for the SIUC men's basketball program.

James said the challenge for athletic supporters everywhere is to look at the ones who play basketball and look past them as players.

"The basketball dream is not really about basketball," he said.

"It's really about wanting to have a little piece of the American dream that most of us take for granted.

"The guys that come through here provide a lot to this university in terms of prestige and entertainment. They earn those scholarships and when they leave here, we as a larger community should try to see that we do everything we can to help them move on when basketball is over."

"Hoop Dreams", touted 1994's best independent documentary, follows the lives of Aurthur and William, two inner-city youths who are recruited into prep school to play basketball.

James said he hopes after viewing his film, young players walk away with the understanding that basketball is not the only thing in the world.

"I hope young guys who are players do not come away with the feeling that they will make it to the pros," he said.

"There is lot more to it than just going out there and shooting hoops."

James applauded the efforts set forth by men's basketball coach Rich Herrin to better education opportunities for players. Herrin said the funds raised Saturday night go directly to the men's basketball program.

"The money raised is used for men's basketball," Herrin said.

"It's used a lot for summer school and for a young man that needs the fifth year to graduate.

"It's also used to help us travel and charter our flights," He said. "Instead of missing three days of school, players miss only one day of school."

"If we go commercial we have to bus to St. Louis the day before, stay over that night and play the next day, so we miss three days of school."

Cornhuskers' Phillips not always good

The Washington Post

It has been a difficult week for Ty Pagone, the assistant principal at Baldwin Park (Calif.) High, where Lawrence Phillips, the star Nebraska running back, attended school.

Pagone became a mentor of sorts to Phillips, who grew up in a group home for the most part, and was starved for adult role models when he landed in Pagone's office more than five years ago.

He was thrilled when Phillips earned a scholarship to Nebraska, proud when Phillips helped lead the Cornhuskers to the national championship last season.

And Pagone was heartbroken when he heard last week that Phillips had been arraigned on misdemeanor charges of assault, trespassing and injuring property after witnesses said they watched him climb a wall to attack his ex-girlfriend.

This incident involving Phillips, who has a history of disciplinary problems, has been the chief topic at the dinner table in the Pagone household, where Pagone and his wife are raising their own son and daughter. The family members all know Phillips. They all care about him. Their viewpoints, however, are not all the same.

"We talk about this, and my daughter sees this differently," Pagone said in a telephone interview last week. "All she keeps saying is, 'What about the girl? What about the girl?'"

It is, of course, the most important question. What about Kate McEwen, the one who, police reports and witnesses say, was thrown to the floor and dragged down three flights of stairs? She, too, is a student-athlete at Nebraska.

Unlike Phillips, she has not been on campus this week. She has not been to class. She fled the campus—perhaps, in part, to avoid the publicity; perhaps, too, because she is afraid.

And she is not alone. There is an alarming frequency in the reports involving athletes and violence toward women. In addition to Phillips, two more college football players are under investigation this week.

Miami linebacker Ray Lewis has been accused of grabbing his ex-girlfriend's arm, shaking her and scratching her.

Tired legs contribute to Saluki losses over weekend

By Chad Anderson
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Tired legs and a lack of mental focus plagued SIUC's cross-country teams Saturday as both bowed to their opponents in two different states.

The men lost to the universities of Arizona and Illinois in Champaign, and the women placed ninth in the Midwest Collegiate meet in Parkside, Wis.

Junior Stelios Marmoros was the Salukis top performer finishing fourth, and freshmen Andrew Fooks and Jeremy Parks ran strong placing 10th and 13th.

SIUC men's coach Bill Cornell said his team had a case of tired legs from training hard during the week.

"We worked hard during the week, and I think some of the weight training tired some of the guys out," Cornell said. "Most of these guys are young and haven't done weight training before."

Freshman Joseph Parks, who finished 22nd, said the hard training was a factor in his running.

"I know my legs were tired at least," he said. "I ran a good first mile and then my calves started getting tight. I'm sure we'll get used to it (training) after a while, and I don't think we should change anything."

Cornell said his team did what he asked of it, and he wasn't disappointed in his squad.

"They started out together like I asked them to," he said. "They gave it their all, but they just didn't have it. I told them I wasn't disappointed, and that I understood the situation.

It just wasn't meant to be this weekend."

While the men licked their wounds in Champaign, the women were slightly intimidated by the size of the meet they ran in, according to junior co-captain Kim Koerner.

"I think we just need to get it together," she said. "With such a young team, I think we got a little psyched-out with the size of the meet."
