Cook wins big in USO chief race

By Mike Anthony
Staff Writer

SIU-C students voted overwhelmingly to elect Jerry Cook of the Maverick Party president of the Undergraduate Student Organization.

Cook and his running mate, Fritz Levenhagen, received the largest number of votes in USO history, 2,219, in the election held Wednesday. But the total number of students who voted, 3,322, was less than last year's turnout of more than 4,200.

Second place in the presidential election went to Big O Party members Kurt Boyle and Sen. Marilyn Melvin, who received 352 votes.

Write-in candidates Glenn Stolar and Don Burk of the Sting Party garnered 751 votes, but only 249 were ruled valid. The remaining 502 votes were disqualified because of incorrect spellings of the candidates' names and failure of some voters to write both candidates' names on the ballot, according to USO Elections Commissioner Dave Williams.

Williams said the votes were disqualified because they did not meet the requirements of USO election bylaws. The bylaws must comply with state and federal election laws, which state that write-in candidates names must be spelled correctly.

Cook said, "I'm very, very pleased with the outcome of the election. I'm glad to see that students recognized that the Maverick Party is truly concerned with their needs."

Cook, whose term begins June 14, said he will continue to espouse his Maverickonomics policy, which is the opposite of Reaganomics, because "we have an idea here that is very positive and it's an idea for people to work behind and accomplish goals."

The number of students who believe that student government can be effective has increased, Cook said, and "they have more faith in the USO than they used to."

While Stolar said that the 2,219 votes Cook and Levenhagen received "showed that the Mavericks worked hard," he was disappointed in William's decision to disqualify a majority of the Sting Party's 751 votes.

But, he said, "We accept the election commissioner's ruling."

The smaller turnout this year was because "students were less interested in voting because of the lack of competition on the ballot," Stolar said. "I'm ashamed of the USO for not increasing turnout."

Boyle, however, took a different attitude than Stolar.

"Big O comes in second and my bets are paid off. The majority of students didn't vote — that's what the Big O represented. More people are still interested in having Big Os than student government."

Sen. Lamont Erik Brantley, Sting Party member, filed a formal complaint which stated that Maverick Party members should not have been allowed to wear T-shirts saying "Vote Maverick" around polling places, Williams said.

Brantley contended that the T-shirts slogan "could inspire some people to action," Williams said, and "therefore I should disqualify the results of the election."

Although Williams had not yet written a formal response to the complaint, he said he wasn't going to invalidate the election results.

One man's trash is another man's treasure, and garbage that ends up at the Jackson County Everett Allen believes there's "gold" in the landfill near De Soto, which he operates

Landfill owner is dreaming about the future of recycling

By John Schrag
Focus Editor

In a university community it is not uncommon to run into dreamers. The hallowed halls of higher education have traditionally been a haven for people with big plans and even bigger dreams.

Everett Allen is definitely a dreamer. But you won't find him on the college lecture circuit or in any campus lecture hall. You're more apt to find him at the Jackson County landfill near DeSoto, which he owns and operates.

Allen's life is a bit like a Hollywood rags-to-riches success story. When he first started his solid waste business in Carterville in 1969, he had no idea how far it would take him.

"I was working as a manager of a gas station trying to find a way to earn an extra $100 or $150 a month," he said, sitting at his dining room table in his home in Carterville. "You know, just enough to make car or trailer payments. Then I got this idea about buying some land and starting a small garbage dump."

One of the things you quickly learn about Allen is that once he gets an idea into his head there's not much that will stop him. This was no exception.

Allen borrowed $3,500 to buy an old dumptruck, and he soon had a "prosperous" business.

"That first year I only made $300 a month," Allen said, laughing at the thought. "But it was a start."

That start was all he needed. In addition to the 133-acre landfill he owns near DeSoto, Allen owns a 14-acre site in Carterville. He also runs Allen's Disposal Service, a commercial, industrial and residential collection service which operates throughout Southern Illinois. A fleet of about 15 garbage trucks have replaced his second-hand dumptruck, he owns a variety of earth-movers and bulldozers, and he now employs about 24 people. And the 46-year-old Allen makes a lot more than $300 a month, now — he said he grosses about $1.2 million a year.

"I won't lie to you," he said. "I've made a fortune off this business, and I'm proud of it."

Maverick candidates take Senate, 1 race tied

By Daily Egyptian Staff Writers

Maverick candidates for Student Senate seats swept the academic districts in Wednesday's Undergraduate Student Organization elections, according to Dave Williams, USO election commissioner.

Winners were Lisa Vermillion, agriculture; Lori Abney, communications; Sen. Mary G. Walsh, liberal arts; Roy James, School of Technical Careers; Richard Witt, business and administration; Lauren M. Boswell, education; Sen. John H. Dunning, human resources; Steve Brucki, science, and William B. Sanderson, engineering technology.

There was a tie in the general studies district. No major party candidates ran for the seat, but write-in candidates Dave Siegler and George Colby each received two votes.

Williams said that under USO bylaws, either a run-off election could be scheduled or a lottery could be held to decide the winner. Williams said the method must be agreed on by the two candidates.

The closest races in the senate election occurred in the education and agriculture districts.

Irvin leads trustee race

By Mike Anthony

The counting of ballots was not yet complete Thursday evening, but incumbent SIU-C Student Trustee Stan Irvin appeared to be leading Jeff Neigel by a 3-2 margin, according to Election Commissioner Dave Williams. "We know who won, but we don't know by how much," he said.

Irvin said of his apparently easy victory, "I take it as evidence of the students' support for our argument that access for all should be the number one pursuit of SIU."

Of Neigel, Irvin said, "Jeff ran a good campaign and he had a lot of good ideas which I hope to implement. I will invite him to work with us next year."

About 40 people worked "real hard to get out the voters and I'm very thankful for their efforts," Irvin said.

Now that he has become familiar with the personalities and procedures of the Board of Trustees, Irvin said he hopes to use the knowledge he has gained and the relationships he has developed this year to work further on the issue of access.

Irvin said he is looking forward to working with Paul Matalonis and Jerry Cook, newly elected Graduate Student Council and USO presidents, respectively.

"Next year will demand even more sound arguments, coupled with a wide range of student participation," Irvin said the USO, GSC and he "have got to hit the ground running in our efforts."

"If all people join together — faculty, staff, and students — we will speak with a strong voice to say to the chancellor, board and Illinois Legislature that access to education for all of the people will be the number one priority," Irvin stated.

At Irvin's victory celebration at a Carbondale residence, a poster on the wall proclaimed, "It will be a great day when our schools get all the money they need and the Air Force has to hold a bake sale to buy a bomber."

Study: Soviet edge in Europe is smaller than Reagan claims

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The Soviet Union has a 4-to-1 advantage over the West in intermediate-range nuclear weapons in Europe but the gap is smaller than the Reagan administration claims, according to NATO sources.

Informed NATO sources said Thursday a nearly completed study scheduled for publication in the next few weeks says the Soviet Union has an estimated 3,080 intermediate range nuclear missiles and atomic bombers compared to about 800 comparable European-based weapons for NATO.

In recent months, the Reagan administration has asserted there is a 6-to-1 Soviet advantage — 3,825 weapons for the Soviet Union compared to 560 for NATO.

The administration figures do not include British aircraft on the NATO side and give higher figures than NATO for the number of Soviet aircraft available for nuclear missions against Western Europe.

The NATO-U.S. discrepancy is nowhere near as great as the one between both sets of figures and those given by the Soviet Union.

According to Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, who included French forces and discounted all but 461 Soviet bombers, the NATO-Soviet forces are roughly equal.

When released, the NATO study would be the first comprehensive attempt in the alliance's 33-year-history to declassify and publish a detailed comparison between Western forces and those of the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies. It took nine months to prepare.

One of the aims of the report would be to convince public opinion at a time of growing anti-nuclear sentiment that European governments — not just the Reagan administration — believe the Soviet military advantage is widening.

The report would become the official view of an alliance that includes the Socialist government of Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreu and administrations under strong anti-NATO pressure like the Netherlands, Denmark and West Germany.

Western governments are trying to convince their people they should stick to a 1979 NATO decision to deploy 572 new U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Italy, West Germany, Belgium, The Netherlands and Britain between 1983 and 1988.

The United States and the Soviet Union have been negotiating in Geneva to limit the numbers of intermediate range weapons in the so-called "European theater."

After four months of talks, both sides are far apart in their public positions.

Regan: Economy 'dead in the water'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan pronounced the economy "dead in the water" Thursday as the government released figures showing industrial production down for the seventh month in the past eight.

Regan, who is President Reagan's top economic spokesman, had predicted as recently as February that the economy would "come roaring back" by late spring. But he said Thursday that recovery now can be expected by summer — and then only if the administration and Congress can trim huge projected federal deficits.

High interest rates, caused at least in part by lenders' and investors' worries about deficits, "have brought this economy right to its knees," Regan said in an interview on ABC-TV.

Bridge collapse kills 15 workers

EAST CHICAGO, Ind. (AP) — An unfinished highway bridge collapsed Thursday as construction crews poured concrete, killing 15 workers, injuring at least 16 and pinning others under shattered blocks and twisted steel girders.

"All I remember was there was a loud noise and then it started coming down," said Robert Gilbert of Gary, who was working nearby when the accident occurred at about 10:30 a.m. "People started to holler and then I ran."

All available ambulances in the densely populated industrialized area southeast of Chicago were summoned to the scene.

Lake County Coroner Albert T. Willard said 15 men had died and "there may be others."

Robert Isbell dead; was SIU-C treasurer

Robert Dean Isbell, treasurer of the Board of Trustees and assistant capital affairs officer, died Thursday of a heart ailment at St. Mary's Hospital in Rochester, Minn. He was 61. Isbell came to SIU-C in 1960 as coordinator of systems and procedures. He was appointed board treasurer in 1974.

He received a bachelor of science degree in business administration in 1947 and a master of science degree in education in 1970, both from SIU-C.

He is survived by his wife, Neva Woolard, and four children, Mona Glenn, Gail, Dewey and Amy, all of Carbondale. Funeral arrangements are pending.

informed the board of the groundbreaking ceremony.

At the ceremony, the board will formally gain title to the property from the Carbondale elementary school district 95, exchanging a check for the land for the deed to the property.

Construction on the building, to cost $1.36 million, is expected to take one year.

The board also decided to reject all three bids submitted in March for furnishing the new building because none of the bids matched specifications. New specifications will be written, and the furnishings will be rebid.

In other action, the board approved an operating budget for 1982-83 of $237,792, a decrease of $7,000 from the present year's budget.

The board also decided to ask the Friends of the Library organization to investigate whether they can subsidize non-resident senior citizens who cannot afford the non-resident user fee of $35.

The board acted after rejecting motions to charge non-residents over age 65 a fee of $17.50, and to consult with the board's attorney about the feasibility of a financial "means test" as the basis for charging reduced non-resident fee.

Politics ruined election

THE MAVERICK PARTY must be taking lessons in politics from Chicago's ward heeler.

By using political maneuvering reminiscent, on a smaller scale, of former Mayor Richard Daley's political machine, and behaving generally like spoiled children, members of the Maverick Party destroyed any semblance of fairness or dignity in the recent Undergraduate Student Organization elections.

The election circus began when the Maverick-appointed election commission refused a request to extend the deadline for candidates to submit petitions to get on the official ballot. This favored Sting Party candidate Glenn Stolar the chance to get on the ballot, and forced him to run a write-in campaign.

SUCH BEHAVIOR is particularly disturbing in light of Stolar's charge that the deadline was extended last year to allow Todd Rogers, the Maverick who became president, to get on the ballot. Stolar is in a position to know the facts. He was the associate election commissioner last year.

Carrying the petty Maverick behavior further, Brian Netols, the Maverick campaign manager, filed a formal complaint to strip Stolar of his write-in votes. The complaint — a masterstroke of petty fussing — was that the election should comply with state election laws that require that write-in candidates' names be spelled correctly.

As a consequence, Stolar was stripped of about 500 votes. Ballots on which his name was written in clearly indicated the voters' preference but were disqualified because of incorrect spelling or because they did not also list the vice-presidential candidate's name. So, the wishes of hundreds of voters were ignored on the basis of a technicality.

THE DISQUALIFIED votes wouldn't have changed the outcome of the election. Stolar, with the disqualified ballots, received just over 700 votes. Jerry Cook, the Maverick candidate, received over 2,000.

But the Maverick maneuvering reduced the election to absurdity. It destroyed the credibility of the election, and with it the credibility of student government.

The Mavericks, in effect, converted the election into a plebiscite on Maverick policy and personnel. They made the Mavericks the only choice, in much the fashion that Adolf Hitler converted elections into one-choice referenda on his policies.

THE MAVERICKS seem to have conceived the notion that they are the USO, and not simply temporary occupants of student government positions. The day after the election, the USO offices in the Student Center were festooned with balloons and posters congratulating the Mavericks.

Unfortunately, this action typifies the attitude the Mavericks seem to have: "We own student government, and we will do anything to keep it."

The Mavericks may be happy with their victory, but it is a hollow one. It was won at the expense of credibility and fair play. That's a sad way to serve the students of SIU-C.

Solid waste may bury us all

ALL OVER CARBONDALE people are talking trash. During the past few months the subject of garbage has been bantered around the corridors of City Hall and SIU-C, as local officials ponder the problem of unwanted waste.

The city recently implemented a recycling program requiring residents to separate newspaper from other refuse so that it can be collected once a month by a private recycling firm. The plan will allow the residents to voluntarily sort other recyclable materials — such as glass and aluminum — for collection by the firm.

The University, meanwhile, was considering a project to turn the thousands of pounds of solid waste it generates daily into fuel for its steam generators. Unfortunately, the project did not receive state funding, and although there is a possibility of securing funding at some future time, for now SIU-C is stuck with sending its solid waste to be buried at the Jackson County landfill.

THE CITY HAS also had to cope with financial constraints while dealing with the waste issue. In stipulating that the recycling firm turn over 5 percent of its profits from newspaper collection, the City Council ignored testimony insisting that recycling is a break-even venture in this area and the 5 percent rebate may jeopardize the project.

Solid waste disposal is not as big a problem in Southern Illinois as it is in other places. There are plenty of old strip mines to be filled, and the geological structure of the area is such that the landfills have little adverse effect on the environment.

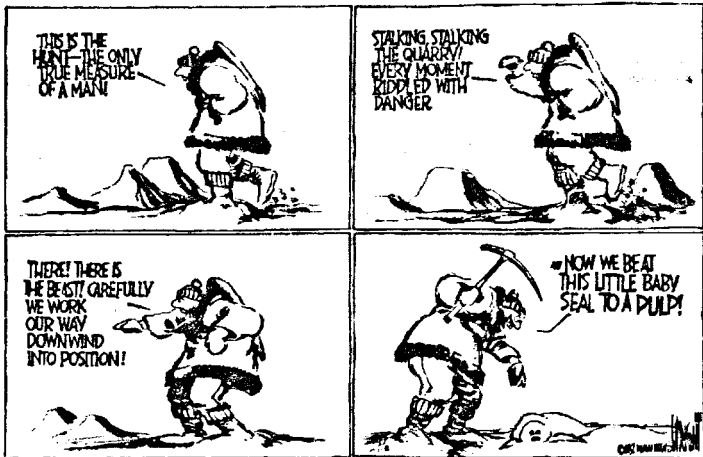

But the problem of solid waste does not relate only to what we put in the ground; it relates also to what we take out of it.

IT'S TIME AMERICANS realize that they live in a world of finite resources and that some of those resources must be reused. And it's time to think about our habits of consumption. The acres of trash that America generates are a sad symbol of a plasticized, throw-away society.

We can continue to walk past the various recycling bins on campus and in the city and continue to say, "I really should start saving all those aluminum cans," while knowing we never will.

Or, we can realize that we are contributing to a monumental national problem — a problem that threatens to eventually bury us under our own waste — along with valuable natural resources.

The choice is ours.

Write a letter, save a budget

WE WISH to notify students, faculty members and all readers of the Daily Egyptian of a major happening in 1982 and seek your utmost cooperation in this regard.

On April 28, the Graduate Student Council and the Undergraduate Student Organization will conduct a National Letter Writing Day. We hope you will share our enthusiasm about this day and that you will be willing to devote as much of your energies and resources as possible toward this event.

We have written letters to the leaders of about 125 student organizations, colleges and universities who will have read this same message.

The purpose of the National Letter Writing Day is simple: we are urging students, parents, community members, business persons, civil service workers and administrators to write their representatives on this day about the cutbacks being proposed on the federal level. In an effort to reinforce constituent desires with our congressional representatives, we seek your help in supporting the letter writing day.

THERE ARE several reasons for conducting the event: in April 28. With the present semester ending soon after that date, student awareness of the educational cutback issue may diminish over summer vacation. By conducting a major, national event near the conclusion of the school year, students' awareness of this issue may be sustained during the vacation period.

Another reason for choosing that date is that the budget resolutions will probably be before the full House, thus permitting us to have a direct effect on the decision-making process. In the event that the budget resolutions have already moved from the full House, we could still have an impact on the Appropriations Subcommittee.

A further reason for selecting April 28 is that it is early in the year. This early date allows us time to provide our legislators with an indication of how they could be affected in the elections this November.

Besides students, many different groups have stated their opposition to these resolutions and plan to actively campaign against the budget cuts. If the energies and resources of these groups can be consolidated for the National Letter Writing Day, we believe that we can be assured that Congress will be served notice.

WE HAVE, mailed letters to at least two key universities and colleges in each state and asked the student leaders of those schools to communicate with the other schools in their state about the National Letter Writing Day. We are hoping that this "chain-letter" approach will be effective.

The United States Student Association and the American Student Association, both of which are based in Washington, D.C., are supportive of this effort and urge all campuses to participate. By working together on a national level, students and others affected by the budget cuts will be able to influence the decisions being made in Washington, D.C. We hope you will take an active role to make the National Letter Writing Day a major happening in 1982. Carl Kosterowski, Coordinator, National Letter Writing Day; Deb Brown, President, GSC; and Todd Rogers, President, USO

Money spent abroad needed here

Student responses to WTOA's format change and other issues are encouraging. However, there is another changing format that deserves more serious attention. President Reagan was elected because he promised more leadership than Jimmy Carter had given during his term.

Rusagan may be a leader, but the direction he is taking causes me considerable anguish. The Reagan administration is spending hundreds of millions of dollars to support the ruling government in El Salvador. The El Salvadoran government is known for killing innocent women and children by the thousands in order to help quell a revolution.

At the same time that our government is spending megabucks to support a terrorist government, our own livelihoods as students are threatened by budget cutbacks. As Reagan speeds on toward military supremacy with all-time defense spending highs, students, the poor, the handicapped and many others are going to pay with limited versions of the American Dream.

My main point, though, is that our government is supporting another government that kills women, children and those that stand up for their rights while imposing economic hardship on segments of its own society. Since U.S. exploitation abroad has started to work against the United States (costs exceeding benefits), our leaders should end our involvement in El Salvador and spend the time and money at home. — Kurt Burrelman, Junior, Civil Engineering Technology.

Trash piling up in nation's backyard

By John Schrag
Focus Editor

Garbage. For most people it is merely something to be put on the curb once a week. A nuisance to be sure, but with the miracle of plastic trash bags, it's just as the commercials say: "No mess, no fuss, no bother."

But quick — and for the most part quietly — garbage has become more than a bother. It's become a monumental national problem. A $4 billion-a-year problem.

This country generates nearly 300 billion pounds of garbage a year — enough, it's been estimated, to fill the New Orleans Superdome twice a day, every day. And these figures of cost and volume, which do not include industrial waste, construction rubble, junked cars or sewage, rise each year.

Yet the subject of solid waste disposal rarely makes the front-page headlines or the six o'clock news. A hazardous waste spill from an overturned chemical truck draws a mob of reporters; a report of nuclear waste at a power plant brings citizen protests and legislative investigations. But a city's search for a new landfill goes virtually unnoticed.

"SOLID WASTE is not glamorous," says John Meister, director of SIU-C Pollution Control. "It's too close to home to get excited about. Solid waste is something you and I know, and we know it can't be dangerous."

Perhaps not dangerous, but as Meister and others know, it's a big headache for a lot of people.

For although solid waste disposal is a national problem, it is local officials who must deal with it. There are about 30,000 municipal disposal sites in the United States, less than a third of which meet environmental standards.

Marion is a classic case study of the perils of solid-waste management. During the last 10 years the city has used three different, city-owned landfills and has been found in violation of environmental laws on four separate occasions, racking up $8,750 in fines from the Illinois Pollution Control Board.

The IPCB is a five-member body, whose members are appointed by the governor, that establishes state environmental laws and levies fines for violations. Solid-waste sites in the state are monitored and inspected by the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency, which reports and makes recommendations to the IPCB and grants permits for landfill sites. The southern 41 counties in the state are under the eye of the Collinsville IEPA office, which has five field inspectors checking the area's landfills for compliance with the state laws.

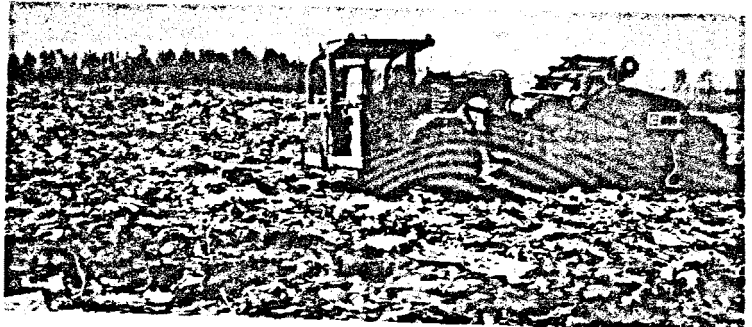

Marion's last fine, levied last fall, was for $5,500 — a result of nine violations found at the present landfill, located north of town. The violations included failure to obtain a permit, piling refuse in the wrong area, failure to cover the refuse with a six-inch layer of soil and dumping refuse in standing water.

Marion Mayor Robert Butler blasted the IEPA for inefficiencies that he said led to delays in the city's attempts to get a permit for the landfill. IEPA officials responded that if the city had waited until it received its permit before beginning dumping at the landfill, the problems leading to the fine could have been prevented.

MARION is still without a permit for its landfill, and as part of an effort to bring the site up to state requirements, the city is putting in clay liner around the landfill. The process has required digging up 4,000 cubic yards of decaying garbage, much to the dismay of nearby residents. The project also has cost about $30,000, much to the dismay of city officials.

And although it costs Marion nearly $160,000 a year to run its problem-plagued landfill, city officials want to maintain control over the disposal of residential solid waste. They say that if Marion were to use a private landfill, as Carbondale does, a number of its residents would be out of jobs, and the city could not control the price charged for dumping.

Carbondale has been spared landfill problems by using the privately owned Jackson County landfill located about one and a half miles northwest of De Soto. City garbage trucks make over 3,000 stops in Carbondale each week, providing curbside pickup service for city residents as well as public buildings and churches, and then haul the garbage to the landfill.

RESIDENTS ARE charged $3.50 per month for the pickup service. Businesses and industries must hire private haulers to collect their garbage.

Wayne Wheelers, superintendent of streets, said Carbondale spends $122,000 to $125,000 a year in dealing with the nearly 12,000 cubic yards the city collects each year. The bulk of that money goes to Everett Allen, owner of the Jackson County landfill, who receives $1.50 for each cubic yard of city dumps at his site.

The Jackson County landfill also is used by SIU-C. The University pays Allen about $40,000 a year to bury the trash produced on campus. In addition, there are more than 200 people paid to move their trash from the thousands of University wastebaskets and garbage cans to the outdoor dumpsters for pickup. Although it is impossible to determine the exact figure, it's likely that more than 500 cubic yards of campus-produced solid waste end up at the Jackson County landfill each day. Duane Schroeder, who is in charge of grounds maintenance on campus, estimated that 80 to 90 percent of SIU's solid waste is paper.

AND WHILE city and University officials may not have to deal with the IEPA and IPCB, Everett Allen does. Last month he was slapped with a $3,000 fine from IPCB for violations dating back two years at the DeSoto landfill. The major charge was for failing to put a six-inch cover of soil over about four acres of garbage at the 133-acre site.

Allen does not dispute the charges, nor does he claim he's been mistreated by the IEPA.

"The EPA was completely right," he said. "I knew about the problems with my site and I had plenty of time to take care of them. In all fairness I can't kick the EPA — they let me off easy."

Allen said that was a bit disturbed by an unexpected visit from IEPA representatives from Collinsville who came by the De Soto site Tuesday and threatened to close it.

"I GUESS they just stopped by to see how bad it is, and let's face it, it's pretty bad," he said. "When they started talkin'

But it's not the money that excites Allen the most, it's the future, full of big plans and high hopes.

One of those plans is a waste transfer station in Cartersville, where his landfill has reached its capacity. Allen wants to construct a huge concrete and steel bin below ground level where his dumptrucks can unload solid waste, which will be compacted into giant trailers to be hauled to the DeSoto site. He said he would like to see the cities of Marion and Herrin, which operate their own landfills, also use the transfer station. He expects it will be under construction sometime this year.

That project, however, will have to wait until he takes care of some big problems at the DeSoto site — problems that caught the attention of the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency and resulted in a $3,000 fine. Allen is in the process of covering about three acres of exposed garbage at the landfill. Exposed garbage is a big no-no with the EPA.

Yet, as with most things, Allen took the incident in stride and certainly doesn't sound like a man who has just shelled out three grand.

"I support the EPA 100 percent," he said. "I think they're doing a great job. Sure, they've got rules that are virtually impossible to follow, but they're ideal standards and the EPA knows they're ideal standards. Really, they give you a lot of leeway."

"I don't hold any grudges with the EPA," he said. "And I want to make that clear. I was wrong and I know it. We've got to have an EPA for ourselves and for future generations."

When Allen talks about the DeSoto site a frown crosses his deeply-lined, freckled face, momentarily replacing his ever-present smile.

"I've got so many dreams and good ideas," he said, "but right now I've got this big cloud hanging over my head, and that's my landfill in Jackson County. Once I get that place straightened out I'll be ready for other things."

Allen's biggest dreams center around recycling. He said a major obstacle is that people his age have grown accustomed to throwing out all their garbage and are reluctant to separate recyclable materials. He hopes that younger people will be more willing to recycle.

"You're of the generation that's concerned about the environment," he said, momentarily putting down his

'When I walk around my landfill and see all this stuff that could have been recycled, it just makes me sick' cigarette — an almost permanent fixture in his weather-worn hands. "I believe that people your age would recycle if you could just be pushed to do so."

"We just need something to motivate people," he said. "I don't know what it is, but I sure wish to hell that I could be the one to come up with it. We need to get to the point where the subject is talked about in the filling stations and pool halls. I want to hear people saying, 'Hey, we've been living like a bunch of pigs in this country, this recycling thing is a good idea.'

"I've got so damned many positive plans for the future," he said, his green eyes sparkling with excitement. "I've got to get into recycling. I've just got to show people that it can be done, that it should be done. When I walk around my landfill and see all this stuff that could be recycled, it just makes me sick to think about how much of it has been buried."

Allen readily admits that his interest in recycling is not motivated purely by environmental concern. He is one of those who believes that there's gold in that garbage.

"Profit may be an ugly word to some people," he said with a wink, "but it's not to me. Let's face it, unless you're getting money from the government, recycling has got to be profitable."

He recently hired a man to separate some of the recyclable materials taken to the DeSoto landfill. He said he's losing money on it now, but he's learning how to make it profitable for the future.

Allen is always thinking about the future. He's convinced that recycling can be profitable and sees the day when people will routinely separate their garbage. He talks about one day operating a resource recovery plant run on refuse-derived fuel, complete with giant conveyor belts and huge electro-magnets for sorting the garbage.

There is also a bit of the philosopher in this dreamer who has made a prosperous living off of other people's garbage.

"Someday," he said, "the people of this country are going to realize that we can't continue taking all these resources out of the earth and only put a bunch of trash back in."

No one would know that better than Everett Allen.

about closing me down, I knew I had to do something desperate, so I told them I'd have all the garbage covered by noon on Friday. Of course they said it was impossible, but by God we're gonna get it done."

Allen said it was his understanding from the Springfield EPA office that he would have 30 days to cover the garbage, so he figures he won't be forced to shut down. But he's not taking any chances. On Tuesday he spent $40,000 for a used earthmover (he already owned two) and is paying $60 an hour for the use of a fourth machine to move literally millions of pounds of earth. He said he will be running the monstrous machines from sunrise to sunset until all the garbage is covered.

WSIU planning to air video tribute to Morris

A special tribute to Delyte W. Morris will be aired by WSIU-TV, channel 8, at 3:30 p.m. Sunday.

The half-hour program will feature vintage film and still photos of the man who was president of SIU for 22 years. Morris died Saturday.

To put the program together, producers Bob Henderson and Dave Campbell searched the Special Collections and Archives at the Morris Library and gathered four or five boxes of material.

production all week. Henderson said. The first three days were spent just sorting the wealth of Morris material. Thursday the program was being edited.

The program will feature a talk portion with Marvin Kleinau, president of the Faculty Senate, hosting a discussion with former Morris aides Paul Morrill and Roland Keene, and with Lois Nelson, Morris' secretary for 25 years.

The second portion of the program will feature the film footage and pictures, probably without much narration, but with original sound, Henderson said.

"It was amazing. There must be hundreds of hours of film. Morris seemed to use the media really well," Henderson said.

"One film shows him talking to voters about a bond issue. Also there's his inaugural speech from 1948."

Henderson described some of the film as "vintage" sound pictures from 1954, 1955 and 1957. The SIU Photo Service also provided still photos for the program.

GSC VP resigns; new election set

By Doug Hettinger
Staff Writer

Laura Nelson resigned as Graduate Student Council vice president Wednesday. She had been re-elected to the office at the March 31 meeting. Nelson, a graduate student in speech communications, said she resigned for personal reasons.

A new vice president will be elected at the April 28 meeting. Ann Greeley, a graduate student in psychology, was nominated for the office.

In other action, the GSC voted to have its executive committee investigate whether two unfilled administrative positions are needed. The move was prompted by a Faculty Senate refusal Tuesday to participate on search committees to fill the positions because it felt the positions were unnecessary.

The GSC recommended that the executive committee find out how many administrative positions have been added at the dean, director and vice presidential levels in the last two years, and why the two new positions are being filled. The GSC wants this information before deciding whether to appoint GSC members to the search committees.

The two positions, executive director of university relations and a special assistant to the vice president for university relations and development, were transferred to the Offices of Academic Affairs and Campus Services about 18 months ago, Terry Mathias said.

Mathias, graduate assistant to the president, said employees transferred to Academic Affairs and Campus Services will remain in those offices, and positions in the Office of University Relations will be created to replace the ones transferred to Academic Af-airs and Campus Services. According to a list of responsibilities released by Hinderaman, the executive director of University relations' duties would include directing various public relations functions and evaluating the effects public relations efforts have on the University's image.

Duties of the special assistant to the vice president for University relations and development would include representing the vice president at meetings and supervising the University Relations and Development Office's secretarial and clerical staff.

Crane says Congress might reject '83 budget.

By Jay Small
Staff Writer

There is a "better than even chance" that Congress will not pass the 1983 fiscal budget until after the November general election, said U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-12th District.

"Tip O'Neill may very well try to push for a continuing budget resolution until February," Crane said. O'Neill is hoping for a larger Democratic majority in the House of Representatives after the election, Crane added.

Crane was in Carbondale to speak on "The Role of Government — The Visible Hand in the Economy." The address, sponsored by the College Republicans, was preceded by an impromptu press conference in which Crane discussed Reagan administration proposals for the economy.

Crane said that Congress may not be able to balance the budget by 1985, but insisted that President Reagan should not back down on tax-cut legislation to reduce the budget deficit.

"I think it is absolutely essential that the President not yield any ground on the tax cut proposals," Crane said. "That would be a monumental mistake.

"All Americans want relief from the tax burden. The need for tax cuts is an indisputable question," he added.

Crane said in his address that cuts in the defense budget proposals for 1983 would do more harm than good. He said that Reagan's defense plan would establish parity with the Soviets in key defense areas by the 1990's.

"The percentage of the budget allocated for defense has deteriorated over the years until Carter's last year in office, when it hit 23 percent," Crane said. "The President is talking about bringing that figure back up to around 30 percent.

"It is a fact of history that when you are the target of envy in an uncivilized world, to be weak is to invite aggression," he said.

68 percent of the proposed defense budget increases will go for higher personnel salaries, according to Crane. With increased pay for servicemen, the volunteer army will still be by here Friday afternoon and you'll see this place being run by the rules."

The environmental rules are a constant source of controversy — especially in Southern Illinois.

MEISTER SAID the need to implement uniform regulations statewide means that landfill owners in Southern Illinois may end up being fined for violations that have no detrimental effect on the area's environment.

He said that the geological structure of this area, especially around old strip mines, is more resistant to groundwater contamination than it is in other parts of the country.

"In certain parts of this area we could fill these strip mines for decades without doing a disservice to the environment," he said.

The negligible impact landfills have on the Southern Illinois environment and the seemingly endless number of old strip mines available for landfill sites may be reasons why little investigation into alternative methods of solid waste disposal has taken place in this area. However, in other parts of the country, especially in densely populated East Coast metropolitan areas, cities are literally being buried under their own garbage, and the search for alternatives to landfills has been fast and furious.

DURING THE 1960s and early 1970s, at the height of the environmental movement, millions of federal dollars were pumped into local communities working on solutions to the growing solid waste problem. Most activity centered around resource recovery — the process of separating solid waste for recycling or combustion as fuel.

To many people the worst aspect of solid waste is not its effect on the environment but the loss of recyclable materials. To them, the idea of turning trash into fuel seemed the perfect solution to the nation's garbage problem. It not only would limit the volume of garbage to be buried, but also would help reduce the nation's dependence on non-renewable energy sources.

With the help of federal money, experimental resource recovery centers were established throughout the country. Chicago, for example, set up a $23 million steam plant which burns 1,600 tons of garbage a day. Other plants experimented with producing refuse-derived fuel — sorted trash processed into pellets or powder form. The days of landfills seemed numbered.

BUT BY the mid-'70s the economic and technological realities set in, and many of the centers closed. A $30 million resource recovery plant in Baltimore closed, as did a $130 million plant in Hempstead, N.Y. A $53 million plant in Bridgeport, Conn., was open only 18 months before being shut down. One inspector reportedly said the plant's odor was "bad enough to gag a maggot."

Smaller plants, however, met with a bit more success: Ames, Iowa; Madison, Wis., and several small New England communities all have successful resource recovery plants.

In 1980, environmentalists were given a boost when

President Jimmy Carter, as part of his Energy Security Act, earmarked $200 million for the development of resource recovery.

But 1981 brought Ronald Reagan to the White House, and after the budget axe stopped swinging, there was no money in the EPA budget for solid waste programs.

MEISTER SAID the loss of money for projects is not as detrimental as the reduction of the leadership role of the federal government in solid waste alternatives.

"Resource recovery needs to be profitable to work," Meister said. "And the federal money was supporting a lot of big projects that weren't profitable."

Meister said he thinks the lack of federal money will prompt small-scale, profitable resource recovery centers.

On yet an even smaller scale, hundreds of communities, like Carbondale, have started citywide recycling programs. Starting the first full week in May, city residents will be required to separate their newspapers from the rest of their trash. Newspapers, along with any other recyclable materials that residents voluntarily separate, will be picked up once a week by a private recycling firm.

MAYOR HANS FISCHER said the feedback he's received so far on the recycling plan has been positive.

"Of course there will always be the argument about excessive government regulation," he said. "I'm sure there are people out there complaining that now they can't even throw their trash out without the government getting its hands into it, but in general I think people understand what we're trying to do."

Fischer said that even a small-scale "basically voluntary" recycling program such as this will serve to create public awareness about the need to recycle. He noted that during World War II, people were very supportive of the war-effort recycling program.

"It's a different type of war today," he said. "It's a war against running out of finite resources. But it will take time before a lot of people will realize that."

"PEOPLE DON'T believe that there's a problem," he said. "They see the price of gas going down and find it hard to believe there's an energy shortage. But ultimately there will be more of a realization that we have a planet Earth here with finite resources and that we have to recycle some of those resources in order to sustain mankind."

Meister agreed that the public needs to be made aware of this country's solid waste problem. He said that improvements in technology eventually will make resource recovery profitable, but public cooperation is necessary if the programs are to work.

"Solid waste is still considered garbage," he said. "And as long as it's considered garbage, people will be content to dump it in a hole."

Fahner promises SIEG funds, backs drug enforcement bills

By Mike Antos
Staff Writer

Attorney General Tyrone Fahner discussed drug trafficking and use during a public forum in Student Center Ballroom B.

Concerned that a tight budget may force the state to eliminate its regional drug enforcement network, more than 100 area residents, law enforcement and public officials were somewhat relieved Wednesday when Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner said that the programs would be funded "one way or another."

Fahner, along with Jackson County States Attorney John Clemons and Southern Illinois Enforcement Group Director Rick Pariser, were the speakers at a public forum on narcotics trafficking and drug use in the Student Center's Ballroom B. It was sponsored by the Murphysboro Junior Woman's Club.

Fahner was there to encourage residents to lobby Southern Illinois legislators to approve continued funding for the state's Metropolitan Enforcement Group program, of which SIEG is a part. No new funds have been appropriated for MEG and SIEG in next year's proposed state budget, but State Rep. Wayne Alstater, R-Vergennes, has co-sponsored a bill, now in a House Appropriations Committee, that would restore, and increase, funding for MEG at $1.56 million.

Fahner was also at SIU-C to push for public support of two bills that he said would "get to the root of the problem" in drug trafficking in Illinois.

The bills — one that would allow the convening of statewide grand juries to prosecute narcotics cases across county and district lines, and the other — a Narcotics Profit Forfeiture Act — would bring a statewide approach to prosecuting to work in tandem with MEG's statewide investigations, he said.

"The need for this type of legislation is clear," Fahner said. "The problem of drug trafficking is too large for any single county to handle. Clemons can only prosecute in his county and the U.S. attorney can only prosecute within his district. If criminals don't respect county lines, then why should law enforcement officials? Why should we have our hands tied by a jurisdictional rope? This type of statewide prosecution is intended to match our state wide investigation procedures."

The proposed forfeiture act, patterned after federal racketeering legislation, would allow prosecutors to freeze and then "go after" the huge profits that are made illegally from drug trafficking, Fahner said.

Major drug dealers can "rack up millions of dollars before going to prison for one or two years," he said. "Then they come out and they have this money waiting for them. If we take it away, then after they get out of prison, all they'll have to go back to is prison again."

Calling Jackson County the "drug capital of Southern Illinois," Clemons said the legislation proposed by Fahner would help local prosecutors and "all of these county offices that are overworked and more cost-efficient than a draft, he said.

Crane said that good news is on the horizon concerning the U.S. economy. He cited a reduction in inflation figures from 17 percent to 3 percent, and a 5 percent rollback in interest rates this year as signs of a healing economy.

"The interest rates are going down faster than in any other recovery from recession in the past 20 years," Crane said. "That's not to say that interest rates aren't still hurting businesses...in fact, interest rates are killing businesses."

Crane said that interest rates and the budget deficit have surpassed inflation as the foremost economic problems in the minds of Americans. He said people are feeling a "great sense of frustration" in dealing with the faltering economy. But he said that fears of economic collapse were far-fetched, and warned that Americans must avoid panic such as that which triggered the Great Depression. He blamed that ordeal on a total loss of confidence in the American economy, but said today's economic woes are not comparable to the problems faced in the 1930's.

overburdened" by the amount and complexity of cases involving drug trafficking.

Added Pariser. "Nobody gives drugs away for free. It's a profit motivated business... Illinois' drug trafficking cannot be totally exterminated. It has grown to more serious proportions. But we can deter its growth through education and regional drug enforcement groups... and by attacking the huge profits."

Fahner said he plans to meet with Gov. James R. Thompson within ten days to propose several alternative funding methods to keep MEG in business, not at the $1.56 million increased level proposed by Alstat, but at the agency's current $1.1 million budget.

A similar 11th-hour funding cut-off was averted in 1977, when federal money for the MEG program ran out. However, a permanent funding source must be met, he said, to act as a "vehicle to keep it running for years to come."

"That was working fine until this year," Fahner said of the 1977 funding provisions for MEG. "But we all know about the problems in the economy and the road problems and for the funding of education and mental health. So we have to be heard. With all of the interest groups competing for limited money, we have to stand together."

Fahner said he will ask that money confiscated by the state under the proposed forfeiture act be placed in a fund earmarked for state law enforcement agencies. Fahner said that 11 states currently have a statewide grand jury system, and that Arizona, using its own profits forfeiture act, has yielded $5 million to the state treasury in the last six months and that officials there estimate that the figure will quadruple by the end of the year.

Kemp keys win as Sox top Boston

BOSTON (AP) — Steve Kemp keyed a 15-hit attack with a two-run homer, and the unbeaten Chicago White Sox rolled to their fifth victory with an 8-4 win over the Boston Red Sox on Thursday.

Kemp, Harold Baines and Jim Morrison drove in two runs apiece and Tony Bernazard and Greg Luzinski had one RBI each as the White Sox completed a sweep of a three-game series. Every White Sox's batter hit safely in the game.

Chicago pounded Boston starter Bobby Ojeda, 0-2, for six hits and five runs in four innings. Reliever Bruce Hurst was tagged for eight hits, but only three runs in the next four innings.

Chicago right-hander Dennis Lamp, making his first start of the season, earned the victory although he surrendered nine hits and four runs, three on Dave Stapleton's first homer in the sixth inning, before he needed reliever help from Jerry Koonsman. Koonsman blanked the Red Sox the rest of the way for his first save.

Cards beat Cubs for 5th straight

CHICAGO (AP) — Lonnie Smith and George Hendrick hit solo home runs Thursday to back the four-hit pitching of Steve Mura and the St. Louis Cardinals romped to their fifth straight victory, 6-2 over the Chicago Cubs.

Smith hit his second homer in the fifth inning and Hendrick his third in an inning later after the Cardinals had grabbed an early 3-0 lead at the expense of Doug Bird, 1-2.

Mura, 1-0, was making his second start of the season after lasting only one and a third innings last week against Pittsburgh.

He yielded a two-out single to Bill Buckner in the first inning and didn't allow another hit until Steve Henderson doubled with two outs in the fifth.

Mura lost his bid for the shutout when Keith Moreland cracked a two-out homer in the ninth, his third of the season.

SIU-C sports round-up

By Staff Writers

WOMEN'S TRACK

Women's track Coach Claudia Blackman has juggled her lineup a bit for the five-team Midwest Invitational at Charleston Saturday.

Since the meet won't be scored on a team basis, Blackman is taking the opportunity to use some people in other than their usual events.

The Saluki coach said she's trying to find people who might be able to place in a second event at the AIAW State Championship, scheduled for May 7-8 in Charleston. The Midwest Invitational is the last meet before entries are due for the state meet, Blackman said.

Debra Davis, Sharon Leidy, Odette James and Rosa Mitchell will be among the Salukis taking a shot at a different event this weekend.

Another priority for the Salukis will be to try to qualify more people for the Becky Boone Relays in Richmond, Ky., next weekend. Blackman said the Salukis have qualified "about 18" people for the relays thus far.

SIU-C has yet to qualify anyone for the AIAW Outdoor Nationals, scheduled for May 27-29. Blackman hopes distance runner Patty Plymire-Houseworth will change that situation this weekend.

"With any halfway-decent weather, we're hoping Houseworth can qualify for AIAW," Blackman said.

WOMEN'S RUGBY

Although the women's rugby club has a "small team," it has

Departments team up for 'Vegas Night'

The men's and women's intercollegiate athletics departments will join the School of Music in sponsoring a "Vegas Night - Saluki Style" at Coocoo's in the Southern Illinois Bowl in Carversville from 7 to 11 p.m. Sunday.

The Vegas night will feature several casino games, with entertainment provided by the School of Music.

Tickets to the event cost $10 a good chance to do well in the first-ever Midwest Union College Tournament this weekend, said Shannon Maulding, club president.

Eight clubs will compete in the tourney on the rugby pitches behind Abe Martin Field.

"We have a small team this semester, but most of us are veterans who have played together three to four years," Maulding said. The ruggers are 3-2 this season.

SIU-C faces Indiana and Purdue meets Michigan State at 10 a.m. Saturday. At 11:30 a.m., Wisconsin-Madison meets Illinois State and Ohio State plays Illinois. At 1:30 p.m. the losers of the 10 a.m. games meet, as do the winners. The winners and losers of the 11:30 a.m. games meet at 3 p.m.

The outcomes Saturday will determine the opponents in the games on Sunday. Two games will be played at 10 a.m. and another at 11:30 a.m. The tournament champion will be decided in the final game at 1 p.m.

Club member Becky Larkin said the busy schedule should not hurt the players too much.

"We have played as many as three games in one day," Larkin said. "An injury would be the only thing that would hurt us. Sure, it's physically tiring, but our practices help. Endurance is a big part of the game."

Most of the ruggers' opponents this season have been city clubs whose members are usually older and more experienced, said Maulding. The tournament this weekend is the first to feature only college teams, she said.

She hopes future tournaments will be held at SIU-C, saying other teams, such as the club at Western Illinois, have expressed interest in playing.

WOMEN'S GOLF

Women's golf Coach Mary Beth McGirr is hoping for decent weather this weekend. The past two weekends her golf team has been "weathered" out of playing its first tournament of the spring season.

This weekend the Salukis are scheduled to play in the Illini Invitational, a two-day, 54-hole tournament.

Traveling to Champaign to play on the Orange Course will be sophomores Barb Anderson, Sue Arbogast, Tracy Keller, Dania Meador and Lisa Roman-Bremner.

McGirr said the Orange Course is heavily trapped with some out-of-bounds hazards. "Wind is always a factor," she added.

She said the teams to watch for in the tournament are Michigan State, Missouri, Indiana State and, because of their home advantage, Illinois.

Versatile Welch signs with Salukis

By Bob Morand
Staff Writer

It came as no surprise when Brian Welch, basketball and baseball standout at Carbondale Community High School, signed a national letter-of-intent to attend SIU-C on a basketball scholarship next fall.

Welch, who made a verbal commitment to SIU-C two months ago, made it official when he inked the letter in Saluki basketball Coach Allen Van Winkle's office Wednesday night. Although he is on a basketball scholarship, Welch will play both sports.

"It's one of the best things that could happen for any athlete," Welch said of his dual-sports future as a Saluki. The 6-3, 190-pound, 18-year-old will join the basketball team as a guard. He will be put on a weight-training program, he said, to build strength in his arms and legs.

"Right now I'm a much better baseball player than basketball player," Welch said, as he sat in Van Winkle's office chair after the signing with a Saluki baseball cap perched on his head. "With the weight program, I'll be lifting for more strength and stamina."

Playing at just about every position for the basketball Terriers this season, Welch averaged 14 points, seven rebounds, four assists and three steals per game.

"Brian is a fine athlete," said Van Winkle in a long-distance phone interview. "What caught our eye is his good physical size. He's strong and can run well."

Van Winkle, who was out of town recruiting, would not disclose his whereabouts because he did not want to let out any information which may discourage possible recruits from signing. The first-year coach said the recruits he is looking at are still at an indecisive stage, choosing between two or three schools.

More impressive than Welch's basketball stats, however, are his baseball credentials. A right-handed fireballer, Welch's fastball has been clocked at 87 mph. The Terrier hurler, who threw a no-hitter against Benton last week, credits Saluki baseball Coach Itchy Jones as a major factor in his decision to attend SIU-C.

"Itchy Jones is the best in the country," Welch said. "Even if the baseball team loses a game, he makes sure they lose in style. The same goes for the basketball team this year. Whenever they lost, they did it with style."

Jones said he hopes Welch

"can step in as a freshman and pitch as a starter or as a reliever" next season.

Professional baseball scouts from Cincinnati and St. Louis have scouted Welch, the Saluki skipper said. Welch, son of Harvey Welch Jr., dean of student life, chose SIU-C over Northwestern, Bradley, Colorado State and Alabama-Birmingham.

Blundering Braves to play baseballers

By Steve Metsch
Sports Editor

It's been a long season for Bradley baseball Coach Dewey Kalmer. His Braves are 11-17 and, according to Kalmer, he's "suffered more with this team than any other."

Kalmer said the Braves have been in all but one of their losses, but poor defensive play has been their downfall.

"Our hitting is adequate, our pitching is pretty good, but our defense is horrendous," he said.

Kalmer said youth, or too much of it, is the main cause of the Braves' poor showing. Ten of his 19 players are freshmen and five to seven rookies start each game. He said the freshmen "have not learned to relax" in the field, and as a result make physical and mental errors which cost Bradley ball games.

The young, inconsistent Braves will put a modest three-game win streak on the line against the Salukis this weekend. The two intra-state foes meet in twinbills Saturday and Sunday at Abe Martin Field. Both double-headers begin at 1 p.m.

The games mark the start of Missouri Valley play for both squads. Neither Kalmer nor Saluki Coach Itchy Jones feel last season will have any bearing on the games this weekend. SIU-C finished one game ahead of the Braves to win the Valley's Eastern Division crown last year.

Kalmer said though he and his players expect to win, he "knows our work will be cut out for us." The two teams split six games last season.

The 17-11 Salukis, winners of four straight, may have "momentum," but need to get excited for the Bradley series, Jones said.

"We don't want to be too excited, though," he said. "We have to be loose and comfortable, and play the way we do in practice."

Jones will toss Rob Clark, 4-2, and Ken Klump, 2-4, against the Braves' Ben Phipps, 2-3, and Mike Dunne, 4-2, in Saturday's twinbill. Neither coach is certain which pitchers will get the call for Sunday's games.

Bradley and SIU-C have a history of close games, Jones said. The Salukis hold a 19-15 all-time advantage over the Braves.

Netters win despite rain

By Ken Perkins
Staff Writer

For some reason, Mother Nature and men's tennis Coach Dick LeFevre just don't get along.

As the case has often been in recent weeks, the netters were forced to lay down their rackets Thursday and head for shelter due to bad weather. Rain — and lots of it — washed away the completion of the SIU-C-St. Louis match at the University Tennis Courts. But why then, was LeFevre smiling?

His netters had already wrapped up the match 6-0 just before the rain began.

"They have a good, strong, aggressive team," said LeFevre of St. Louis. "I'm just happy we got in the singles."

Before the heavy rainfall started, the Salukis had dominated the singles field by winning all six spots. No. 1 seed Brian Stanley defeated his third consecutive opponent, knocking off Marco Molinari 6-3, 6-0. No. 2 seed Lito Ampon had no trouble with Lou Andrews, 6-1, 6-4. No. 3 seed Jean Greif took it to the wire against Scott Howell, 7-5, 2-6, 6-4, and David Desilets defeated Bill Horbarger 6-1, 6-0.

At the No. 5 and 6 seeds, David Filer and Gabriel Coch both posted wins, defeating Matt Stroble, 7-3, 6-4 and Frank Apodaca 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, respectively.

It was the third consecutive win by the Salukis, who will head into this weekend's two-match home stand with a 10-11 record. The up-and-down Salukis will have a chance to move ahead of .500, with home matches against Wichita State Saturday and Indiana State Sunday. Play begins at 2 p.m. each day.

Both Greif and Filer will bring winning records into the weekend competition. Greif at 11-8 and Filer at 10-9. Stanley will go into the weekend at 9-12, Ampon 9-11, Desilets 9-11 and Coch at 11-10.
