Cheney: U.S. troops to leave Iraq in days

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Monday U.S. forces will be out of Iraq within a matter of days, although some will stay just inside Iraq near the border until U.N. observer troops are in place.

Cheney also said a few U.S. personnel will be included within the U.N. force that will patrol the Iraq-Kuwait border to act as a whistle-blower should Iraqi troops try to cross into Kuwait.

Speaking to reporters in the hallway of a House office building after testifying to a special commission examining a list of military installations he has recommended be closed, Cheney also said U.S. forces would protect a refugee camp on the Iraq-Saudi Arabian border until it is sure the camp is safe.

The troops, who took up positions covering about 15 percent of southern Iraq on Feb. 28 at the conclusion of fighting in the four-day ground war, will come out "in a few days," Cheney said.

"Of course they will still be in the southern part of Iraq where the buffer zone is ... and they will stay there until the U.N. forces are in place. ... I think we'll have everybody out within a few days," he said.

He said there would be "a few individuals with the U.N. peacekeeping forces, but they'll be under the auspices of the United Nations."

Asked about the Kurdish refugees along Iraq's northern border, in southern Turkey and Iran, Cheney said, "Right now our biggest problem with the Kurds is simply getting them the assistance, the supplies to avoid the loss of life. In the long term we would like to pass on that responsibility to international relief organizations. ... It's not our responsibility to take on (relief efforts) on a permanent basis."

He also said no final decision has been made about how much U.S. military equipment to base in the area in case unrest erupts again and U.S. troops must return. Published reports said about enough equipment to outfit a tank division would be kept at the King Khalid Military City, near the northern Saudi town of Hafr al-Batin.

"It's premature to say a decision has been made," said Cheney. "We are interested in working with our allies including the Saudis, the Kuwaitis, the gulf states, on post-war security arrangements. Some of that is likely to include prepositioning equipment but it would be premature at this point to say a decision has been made."

Two CCFA dean candidates invited for campus interview

By Natalie Boehme
Staff Writer

Two new candidates have been invited to SIUC to be interviewed for the College of Communication and Fine Arts dean position.

Greg A. Steinke and Gerald C. Stone were invited to the campus for interviews, said Benjamin A. Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs and research.

Steinke and Stone were the only two of four remaining candidates submitted by the CCFA Dean Search Committee who were asked to come to the campus.

"I have not made a decision to invite the other two individuals yet," Shepherd said.

The CCFA dean position remains open after Michael T. Marsden, associate dean for academic affairs for the College of Arts and Sciences at Bowling Green University, declined the job last week because of a disagreement in contract terms.

Marsden was the only one from the committee's top three choices to be offered the position.

Steinke, assistant director of the School of Music at the University of Arizona in Tucson, will be on campus April 17 to 20 to meet with Shepherd, the CCFA staff and other academic deans and students.

Besides serving as assistant director of the School of Music, Steinke has filled positions as a professor of music, director of summer workshops and programs, scholarship and recruitment committee and the honors program in his three years at UA.

Steinke also has taught music at

USG president finds job takes up time

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

She is referred to by a number of names — the Ghost President, the Invisible Lady, the Holder of the Lame Duck Term of Office.

She is Lissa Kuethe, senior in marketing and Undergraduate Student Government president, and her term is almost over.

The nicknames come from senators and office staff who have noted the number of hours she spends in the USG office from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. during the week.

Kuethe estimates she spends around 1 1/2 hours on Monday, Wednesday and Friday in the office during office hours and

Toxic gases present in manure pits claim 150 lives across United States

By Brandi Tipps
Staff Writer

Manure pits can become death pits in a matter of minutes.

About 150 people have died nationwide within the past year because of falling into the pits or entering them without a breathing apparatus, according to the National Safety Council.

A manure pit is a storage unit built below the ground and collects manure from livestock confined to pens, said Larry Williams, the district coordinator of community education for Country Companies, an insurance and investment group.

He said the cattle or pig manure is scraped or flushed through slats in the floor in the pen that contains the livestock.

The manure is later used for fertilizer for the farmer's crops, he said.

Williams said he knew a family in Iowa who had a pump pit, which transfers the manure from the pit to another area.

He said something went wrong with the pump and a farmer went down to fix it. The farmer was overcome by the toxic gases present in the pit and was unconscious within a few minutes.

Other members of his family witnessed him passing out and went down to help, Williams said. They were overcome by the gases, and within minutes, all three family members were dead, he said.

Williams said most farmers with

Dawgs hope to turn things around

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

If the SIUC baseball team could just play non-conference games, it probably would have one of the best records in the country.

The Salukis have lost 11 games in the Missouri Valley Conference, but hold a 13-9 record against non-conference opponents. The Salukis have been swept by Creighton and Bradley on two four-game series and were knocked off three times against MVC newcomer Southwest Missouri State.

SIUC baseball coach Sam Riggelman hopes to use non-conference games to prepare his team for some of the toughest competition in the country it faces in the Valley. So far, that hasn't happened, but Riggelman will continue to try.

He will try today in a single nine-inning game at 3 p.m. against Southern Illinois University at

Baseball team has more problems on road

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

After losing four games to Creighton this weekend, all the Saluki baseball team wanted to do was to get home. But even that was too much to ask for.

The team was traveling by bus from Omaha, Neb., when the bus broke down in St. Louis. The team spent much of the night sleeping in the St. Louis bus station before another bus came to pick them up.

Sophomore Bryan Oestreich said the underside of the bus caught on fire and the team was evacuated. The players sat on the side of the road for 30 minutes at 3:30 a.m. waiting for the fire department to arrive. The fire fighters sprayed down the bus while the players got out of the cold.

At about 6:30 a.m., 12 hours after the team left Omaha, another bus came to pick up the team. This bus made it to Murphysboro before running out of gas.

Another bus was dispatched to pick up the team and finally, at about 10 a.m. the players got home. After dropping four games during the weekend the team was back on Abe Martin Field at 4 p.m. Monday to practice for a match-up with SIUE at 3 p.m. today.

had trouble scoring runs. This weekend the Dawgs left 39 runners on base in the four-game series with Creighton. Riggelman said a clutch hit at the right time could have turned around several of the Salukis' 20 losses.

Freshman outfielder Dan Esplin continues to lead the offensive attack for SIUC with a .358 batting average.

The SIUC pitching staff showed some good signs this weekend as seniors Al Levine and Bob Finder and junior Ryan McWilliams had impressive outings against the best hitting team in the country.

The Salukis will face Arkansas State in a doubleheader beginning at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Edwardsville at Abe Martin Field.

The 14-20 Salukis will throw junior right-hander George Joseph (0-0) against the 22-7 Cougars. SIUE, a Division II baseball team is 5-1 against Division I teams and will try to improve that mark against a team that was supposed to be one of the top teams in the nation.

Joseph has worked six innings for SIUC, posting a 1.50 ERA.

SIUE should put the ball in play as it boasts a team batting average of .345. And once the Cougars are on base they are burning up the base paths with 74 stolen bases out of 85 attempts this season.

While the offense is bashing the ball around the diamond and the runners are swiping bases, the Cougars' pitching staff is mowing down the opposition. The team ERA is 3.10 and the Cougars are holding its opponents to a .222 batting average.

The Salukis on the other hand

Hussein, Panfil take first places in Marathon

BOSTON (UPI) — Kenya's Ibrahim Hussein, unwilling to challenge the dangerous rolling course, Monday won his second Boston Marathon with a conservative strategy and a 2:11:06 time.

The 1988 champion, who did not finish last year's race because of leg and foot injuries, took the lead for good in the 22nd mile and was never challenged.

"I ran a very smart race," he said. "I didn't want to run a crazy race like last year."

In that race the early leaders ruined their chances with a foolishly fast pace and Hussein was among those who had to drop out.

Ethiopia's Abebe Mekonnen, the 1989 champion, finished second, 16 seconds behind Hussein. Ireland's Andy Ronan, competing in just his third marathon, was third at 2:11:27.

In the women's race, Wanda Panfil of Poland triumphed with a time of 2:24:18, the second-fastest women's time in Boston Marathon history.

Bookout balancing two sports at SIUC

By Wayne Frazer
Staff Writer

Junior John Bookout has got the drive to go the distance.

Bookout is a decathlete for the SIUC men's track team and a kicker for the Saluki football team. He began competing in the decathlon his sophomore year of high school.

He entered 10 decathlons and ended up placing third in the Junior Olympics after he moved to Illinois before his senior year of high school. Bookout was also an All-State placekicker in high school. He came to SIUC for the journalism department and the track and football programs. Bookout has since switched his major to administration of justice.

"I've got a couple of relatives in the (administration of justice) field in California," Bookout said. "There are a lot of opportunities. I'd like to work for U.S. Customs. Since I'm from California, I'd like to go back there to work."

A normal training day for a decathlete includes throwing the shot put and discus at 2 p.m. Bookout then goes to the track to work on two or three events for 1 1/2 hours. The workout ends with some sprinting and then a weightlifting session. That doesn't leave a lot of time for homework.

"Actually it's pretty tough," Bookout said. "When I got hurt last year in the spring season, I had my best academic performance, so definitely athletics takes away from my academics. Last week we missed school Thursday and Friday, so we have to get the work made up. It's something I have to get done."

Bookout's athletic schedule is just as hectic as his academics. The decathlon is a cumulative event made up of 10 separate events held on two consecutive days. The first day consists of the 100-meter dash, the long jump, the shot put, the high jump and the 400-meter dash. Second-day events are the 110-meter hurdles, the discus, the pole vault, the javelin and the 1,500-meter run. Bookout said the hardest aspect of the decathlon is the sheer length of the competition.

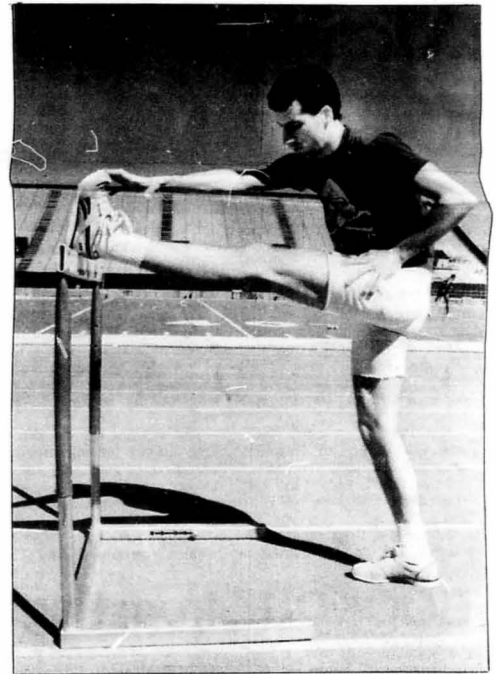

"I think it's the waiting," Bookout said. "In a big decathlon there is a lot of waiting around between events. It's real hard to get yourself psyched up for 10 different events."

"You get psyched up for the first event (the 100-meter dash), you get warmed up, you run the event and then you have to wait at least 30 minutes. During those 30 minutes, your muscles get cold and it's hard to get warmed up again. You have to do that five times two days in a row and by the last event, your mind and your body are both fried."

Bookout scored a personal-best 6,558 points in finishing second at the Florida Relays, but he believes he can go even higher than that.

"I hope to be around 6,800 or 6,900 points by conference," Bookout said. "Next year I think

Glover's career cut short by ligament damage

Freshman Laurie Wilson expected to take over catching duties for Salukis

By Cyndi Oberle
Staff Writer

Junior catcher Tara Glover's softball career came to an abrupt end April 9 when a play at home plate against SIU-Edwardsville caused her to injure her knee.

Glover, one of SIUC's two catchers, had previously injured her knee last year when she was playing at Wabash Valley. This resulted in reconstruction surgery in September and Glover missing the Saluki's fall exhibition season.

Glover, a junior college transfer from Carmi, this is her first season as a Saluki.

"I feel very bad for Tara," Coach Kay Bretchelsbauer said. "She worked so hard to get back into softball—and now, this happens. She was one of our top two catchers and we expected great things from her."

Bretchelsbauer said the injury resulted from a play a home plate and it was just unlucky that the batter hit her in the exact spot to re-injure her already weak knee.

SIUC's other catcher, freshman Laurie Wilson, will now be expected to do the bulk of catching, Bretchelsbauer said.

"We really have three catchers including Wilson," Bretchelsbauer said. "Colleen Holloway caught for us last year and Cheryl Venorsky caught this fall and if it is necessary we can put them in this season."

"It's not like we don't have anybody to fill the position, the only problem is we don't want to move anybody around. Colleen plays well in right field and Cheryl plays shortstop and we don't want them to change positions."

Bretchelsbauer said whether or not they play in a game depends on the situation and right now, they catch during practices and scrimmage games.

So far this season, Glover had started eight games, was batting .211 and had six RBI.

Glover went into surgery April 11 and was released from the St. Francis Hospital in Cape Girardeau, Mo., Monday. Her arthroscopic test revealed extensive ligament and bone damage, requiring reconstruction, SIUC's Assistant Trainer Jennie Hootman said.

Bretchelsbauer said even though she feels badly for Glover, she must consider the situation.

"Tara must think of the rest of her life," Bretchelsbauer said. "The doctor said her softball career is over forever and if she played she could possibly hurt herself again and putting the rest of her life in jeopardy just isn't worth it."

Kurds ask United Nations for protection from Saddam

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — Iraqi Kurdish opposition groups appealed Monday to the United Nations to apply the Genocide Convention to provide Kurdish refugees with a chance of survival, and Tehran Radio said 1 million Kurds fleeing Iraqi forces have entered Iran. Meanwhile, the Kurdistan Democratic Party, an Iraqi rebel group, said troops loyal to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein continued to shell the fleeing refugees in the mountains east of Sulaimaniya in northern Iraq.

Salvadorans vow to avenge death of leader

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Salvadoran rebels vowed Monday to avenge what they said was the execution-style slaying of a high-ranking rebel commander by government soldiers after he was wounded in an ambush. "We will give the indicated military response to this treacherous crime," the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN, said in a communique. Antonio Cardenal, a Nicaraguan known as Commander Jesus Rojas, was killed along with 13 other rebels.

Court to review desegregation in universities

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide how its landmark 1954 school desegregation case and its progeny apply to formerly segregated public colleges and universities. The court next term will rule whether higher education is subject to a looser desegregation standard or must meet virtually the same requirement placed on public schools to remove all "vestiges" of prior state-mandated segregation. The court agreed to review a decision made in Mississippi.

Nicaraguan president arrives in U.S. for visit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nicaraguan President Violeta Chamorro was greeted Monday by Secretary of State James Baker upon her arrival in the nation's capital for talks with administration officials, including President Bush, and international credit institutions. Financial concerns top Chamorro's three-day visit as her country is trying to deal with $11 billion in foreign debt and the impact of her economic recovery plan, unveiled just over a month ago, that sent the Nicaraguan cordoba into a tailspin.

Chemicals from toppled train transferred; town evacuated

EDGEWOOD (UPI) — The 500 residents of Edgewood left their homes Monday and stayed with friends or at temporary lodging while workers transferred a potentially harmful chemical from derailed train cars. Officials encouraged the evacuation of the Effingham County community in Southern Illinois, fearing that five toppled tank cars containing the flammable gas vinyl chloride might have ruptured. Six others contain the corrosive agent hydrochloric acid.

El Rukn gang trial to begin under tight security

CHICAGO (UPI) — Preparations were completed Monday for the trial of alleged members of the notorious El Rukn street gang, charged with using murder and intimidation to corner the drug trade on Chicago's South Side. Fourteen gang members will be tried under extremely heavy security in federal court. Opening arguments were scheduled to begin at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Carbondale public can voice concerns about city budget

By Leslie Colp
Staff Writer

Residents can voice concerns and ask questions about Carbondale's budget at the City Council meeting tonight at 7 p.m.

City Manager Steve Hoffner said the proposed budget for fiscal year 1992 of about $24 million is conservative but allows for some projects to improve Carbondale as a whole. The fiscal year begins May 1.

"The budget reflects the council's goals," he said.

Additional money to hire personnel for the Carbondale Police Department and the Public Works Department could not be budgeted, Hoffner said. He cited the nationwide recession as a reason.

The Public Works Department also was not able to budget for additional equipment such as new trucks and radio equipment, he said.

Several departments also requested computer equipment that could not be included in the budget, Hoffner said.

The budget for the general government, including the City Council, is almost $850,000. It is about $9,000 less than the council is expected to spend for fiscal year 1991. But it is about $132,000 more than was spent in fiscal year 1990.

Councilman Richard Morris said after reviewing the new budget he does not see any problems but said residents will probably have questions that could prompt lengthy explanations.

Copies of the budget are available for review at the Carbondale Public Library, the Finance Office across from City Hall and the City Clerk's Office.

The council also is expected to vote to accept or reject a bid for $402, 618 from J & L Robinson Development & Construction Co. of Carbondale for Town Square development.

The Town Square is bordered by Illinois Avenue, Monroe Street, Jackson Street and Washington Street.

Carbondale Downtown Coordinator Tom Redmond said the bid includes landscaping and upgrading parking lots but does not include work on the Illinois Central Freight Building.

The council also will consider nine names submitted by Mayor Neil Dillard for a committee to study financing opportunities for maintenance and operation of the Town Square Area.

Names submitted are Dr. Marsha Ryan, a surgeon; Melvin Lipe of Landmark Bank of Carbondale; Leah Bening of Leah B. Imprints; Marilyn Martin of Mary Lou's Grill; Gary Robinson of Tres Hombres Mexican Restaurant & Lounge; Gail White of White & Borgognoni Architects; Kim Suiter of Jeremiah's; Terry Haynes of The Door Christian Fellowship and Craig Hinde of The Stage Co.

Annuitants Association plays part in blood drive

By Todd Eschman
Staff Writer

Association President Robert Odaniell.

The American Red Cross says donating blood is "volunteer work you can do lying down," but a different group of volunteers will do their work at the University blood drive standing up.

The SIUC Annuitants Association, a group of retired faculty at the University, are donating their time to work at the drive today and Wednesday, said

The three-day drive began Monday at the Recreation Center and will continue in Ballroom D at the Student Center from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30. Blood drive coordinator Vivian Ugent says after one day of donations, the Red Cross has collected 261 pints of blood.

The Annuitants Association has been volunteering its time at blood drives since 1974, said Odaniell, adding it was the first Illinois chapter of the association to perform a service project.

"We see this as an opportunity to support an activity that does some good," he said. "We are pleased to be able to support the interests of the students and the Carbondale community. We are especially proud to have been working so closely with (the Red Cross) for this long."

Ugent said many members of the association have special interest in the blood drives.

"Many of them have needed blood themselves so they feel a special commitment towards helping with this program," she said.

"They particularly enjoy working along side the students," she added. "It's really nice to see the newest members of the SIUC family, the freshman, working with people who have been here 30 years."

The Red Cross wants to collect 1,050 pints of blood for this drive. Ugent said donors from the drive in February are eligible to donate again. Donors must be 17 years or older and weigh at least 110 pounds. Sixteen-year-olds can donate with parental consent, Ugent said.

Ugent said she hopes students can set an example for other potential donors.

"It really makes you feel good about young people when you come to a blood drive at SIUC and see the way the students participate," she said.

Community and SIU capable of teamwork

CITY OFFICIALS LAST WEEK closed down a proposal for a neighborhood block party the weekend of Springfest.

Although the city said no to the party, it is important to note that it was the location and not the event that caused the denial of the proposal.

City Manager Steve Hoffner even went as far as to say he hopes the students can find an alternative location for the event.

Hoffner said the block party proposal would have involved closing down Ash and College streets. Because there would not be adequate room for emergency vehicles or parking spaces and sufficient police support would not be available because of other Springfest activities, the block party presented too many safety problems.

Hoffner said the party petitioners would need to find a different location.

THE PETITIONERS WERE DISAPPOINTED with the decision, but said they understood why the block party was turned down.

This understanding is an apparent trend between the city and SIUC students. Earlier this fall, city officials and representatives from student government worked together to come to a joint agreement on the proposed keg registry.

Although these steps are small, they are important in showing how the city and University can work together to benefit both parties.

Undergraduate student government and students concerned with alcohol restriction are not alone in their interactions with the Carbondale Community.

THE SPECIAL OLYMPICS IS RUN by representatives of several campus groups each year. Several Greek organizations are responsible for turning blood drives into record-breaking donation drives.

Members of the ROTC program schedule regular visits to the veteran center in Marion. The American Advertising Federation runs an Adopt-A-Grandparent at local nursing homes.

What these groups are demonstrating is the healthy interaction of the University community and the Carbondale community.

Disputes and controversies about party rights at Halloween and the keg proposal make it seem as if the city and University are always at odds. It's encouraging to see that this is not always the case.

Quotable Quotes

"What has happened, has happened. Let us begin a new chapter."—Saddam Hussein encouraging Iraqi Kurds to forget the recent past and look forward to the future.

"She lost every job she ever had because she's treacherous."—Author George Carpozi in reference to Kitty Kelly.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors. The letters space will be a forum for discussion of issues of public interest. Open, civil dialogue is the aim. Letters may be edited for length and content. Letters of fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Letters will be limited to 300 words. Letter that the editors deem objectionable because of potentially libelous material or because of extraordinary bad taste will not be published. Access to the letters space will be afforded to as many writers as possible to encourage diversity of points of view. Editors may impose, at their discretion, a limit on the frequency of publication of letters by an author. When a multitude of letters on the same subject are received, editors may select a few letters that are representative of those letters for publication.

Every letter must be signed and submitted in person by its author or authors. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department, others by address and occupation or position appropriate to the nature of their letters. Letters for which authorship cannot be verified will not be published.

Research lost in letter on war

Mr. Bolger's letter of April 8 showed us that it doesn't take thousand-dollar words to confuse him.

Mr. Keck's letter was satire, not plagiarism. I suggest that Mr. Bolger buy a dictionary and be sure of what he is saying before he embarrasses himself again.

My letter, as Mr. Keck said, was a lamentation for the thousands of dead people, be they soldiers or civilians, left by our diabolical blitzkrieg.

Mr. Bolger should take the time to research sources beyond those which preempt his favorite TV shows, as his first letter was too devoid of substance to merit my response. He merely showed himself to be extremely glib.

If this nattering nabob of nonsense is typical of our aviation management, I may have to start taking the train.

Mr. Bolster, pray that the only blitzkrieg you will ever have to suffer is of the rhetorical sort.—Lawrence Lofgren, graduate, law.

Better future possible with less beef-eating

Eating beef may be doing you more harm than you realize.

Many people are aware that beef is a food high in fat. They also know that it causes a buildup of cholesterol in the arteries that leads to heart disease and other physical problems.

Yet, what many people may not realize is that eating beef can cause skin cancer. How, you ask?

A large portion of beef sold in the United States comes from cattle ranches in South America.

Because ranches in this area are destroyed rapidly, rain forests must be cut down to maintain cattle.

This causes an increase in CO2 in the atmosphere, leading to a depletion of the ozone layer which protects us from many of the sun's harmful rays. These rays now get through and cases of skin cancer are on the rise.

What can you do? Do two things in conjunction with each other. First, cut down on the amount of beef you eat.

And second, write your congressman and request a high import tax on beef brought into this country.

This tax would raise the cost of raising beef in South America for consumption in the United States.

This would ensure that U.S.-raised beef would be used-up first and could help American beef growers.

I'm not a health nut; I'm just concerned about the future.—David Gibson, sophomore, history education.

Students need to appreciate SIUC learning opportunities, experiences

With the coming of the end of yet another semester here at SIUC, many students will look back at the past few months with mixed emotions.

Some of them will be graduating and moving into the professional world; others may have just begun their formal education and aren't quite sure what the future holds for them.

I'm sure that all of us can look back upon this semester and feel both a sense of accomplishment, and that of failure.

"To err is human," and "no one is perfect"... cliches, yes, but oh so true. It is easy to examine oneself and say, "I should have worked harder, studied longer, put forth a greater effort."

In the span of a lifetime, the college years are a very small percentage.

So many of us are in such a hurry to get through it that we don't take the time to appreciate the experience.

Almost every day I hear someone say that they hate school, hate to study...hate to learn.

Do these people realize what life in the work-a-day world is really like?

For the next 20 to 30 years or longer, they will be going to the same job, day in, day out; and so many people stick themselves in professions that they really have no interest in, and derive very little, if any, enjoyment from them.

There are people all over the world that would love to have the opportunity to learn and experience the wisdom and knowledge that a college education can provide.

And yet, there are so many students who despise school and can't wait until it is over.

Hey students, wake up and smell the roses—they are all around you!—Neal Halstead, freshman, radiology.

groups takes more of her time than she had realized when she ran for the job, she said.

Kuethel said other factors compete for her time. She is taking 18 hours of classes in preparation of her May graduation. And she worked a second job for part of the semester.

USG officers are paid from student fees directly onto their Bursar bill. Last spring the presidential salary was cut from $4,000 a year to $2,700, which reduced the weekly salary from $111 to $75.

When she first took office, Kuethel said she had to keep her job at the SIU Arena Special Events Ticket Office to make ends meet. When the USG presidential salary was raised to $3,700, she quit her second job.

Suggestions about eliminating the presidential salary — or drastically reducing it, as when Graduate and Professional Student Council considered a proposal cutting the GPSC presidential salary from $8,448 to $1 — are made with good intent but aren't realistic and may exclude many possible candidates who want the position but also need money, Kuethel said.

The current senate works well together and all the officers are very capable, she said, and there is little need for her to be in her office constantly to act as a guide.

"I think, being a good leader, the organization should run itself and I'll step in if I'm needed," she said.

Denise Young, USG senator for the College of Liberal Arts, said the executive staff basically is inactive and that the chief-of-staff runs the office. She said the absence of officers particularly is a problem when senators have questions about legislation.

"You can talk to Brad (Cole, USG chief-of-staff), you can talk to the senator who wrote it, and you can talk to Jack (Sullivan, USG Finance Committee chairman), but they're not here," Young said.

Cole said Kuethel has shown the necessary guidance and leadership when needed.

But he said she delegated a good deal of her authority to others, which is her right.

Kuethel said the primary function of USG is to represent the feelings and concerns of the students of various areas even if they do not match the personal views of the senators.

She credited the current senate as being very diverse in its backgrounds and interests. No senate could represent perfectly its constituents, but having a wide variety of people is a good step.

A good proportion of the senators do an excellent job representing the students in their areas but some holes in the system still exist, she said. The senate lacks financial or academic incentives for membership, and sanctions are not effective in improving poor behavior.

Kuethel said about half the senators don't know parliamentary procedure, which is used to keep order in the meetings, and new senators receive only a copy of the USG Constitution, Robert's Rules of Order, and information about requirements for student organizations as orientation to learn how USG works and what the important issues are.

Many students have a negative view of USG or think it is powerless because they don't know what it is or how it works, she said. The negative image may prevent some students from joining student government.

"There are people who could do a better job (at running student government), but we can't get them in here," Kuethel said.

Also, 80 percent of the items discussed by the senate are requests to form or fund student organizations, Kuethel said. These bills often are passed unanimously, and the other bills are tabled for future meetings. Senators may feel there is not a need to prepare for meetings, she said.

Overall the senate does good work, Kuethel said, and she has never used her veto power even though she said her personal views sometimes differ from the senate's decisions.

She said her two biggest complaints are that lighting for Thompson Woods has not been improved, and that teacher evaluations have not been made available for students.

"Some of my party platforms may take two or three semesters to complete, and this has been a very short term," she said.

Kuethel was elected into office late in the fall semester, following a one-semester interim government caused by election violations from spring 1990. She said she enjoyed the presidency but has confidence in her successor.

these types of pits know the dangers of entering them without an oxygen tank.

Williams said no law requires the presence of an oxygen tank, and it would be very difficult to enforce if a law was passed.

Bacteria living on undigested food produce four dangerous gases in the manure pits, Williams said.

Methane, an odorless gas, is lighter than air and therefore found at the top of the pit, Williams said.

He said if the concentration of gas is high enough, the gas can replace the oxygen and cause death by suffocation.

Another gas, hydrogen sulfide, is found at the bottom of the pit because it is heavy, he said.

David Koster, professor of chemistry at SIUC, said hydrogen sulfide smells like rotten eggs and is easily identifiable. Koster said in large concentrations the smell is not present because it paralyzes a person's sense of smell.

Williams said the gas can cause irritation and tissue damage, and possibly could result in unconsciousness, respiratory failure, and death.

Carbon dioxide, also an odorless gas, is found at the bottom of the pit, Williams said.

Koster said carbon dioxide is not a toxic gas within itself. It only becomes toxic when it replaces the oxygen and a person has nothing else to breathe, he said.

Inhaling low doses carbon dioxide can result in labored breathing, drowsiness and headaches. In higher doses, death by suffocation can result, he said.

Another gas, ammonia smells similar to household ammonia, Williams said.

Koster said the gas could be fatal in high doses and could cause eye, nose and throat irritation in low doses.

Williams said problems occur when farmers store the manure throughout the winter because over time the gases build up higher concentrations over time.

He said the rate of gas production depends on temperature and moisture content.

"The warmer the weather, the more biological activity and gas production there is," he said.

Koster said all the reactions taking place in the pit are produced by bacteria present in the manure.

Williams said moisture content also plays an important role in the production of the gases because fluidity influences how much gas is trapped in the mixture.

"The liquid serves as a reservoir for the gases," Koster said.

When the gases reach a certain concentration, they are released, he said.

He said manure should not be spread as fertilizer when the ground is wet, snow-covered or frozen, because the runoff would pollute nearby streams and lakes.

Williams said farmers should follow some safety guidelines when entering a pit, including:

Never enter a pit without wearing a self-contained air supply. These can be obtained from local fire departments or emergency service groups;

- Installing explosion-proof ventilation equipment;
- Not entering a pit unless someone else is present;
- Wearing a safety belt or harness with a lifeline tied to mechanical lifting equipment;
- Posting hazard signs on or near all manure pits.

The administration has been

Skinner said last week that a two-week strike would result in more than 550,000 layoffs for workers who produce everything from automobiles to coal, plastics, chemicals and steel.

Employee of Year wins cash award

By Amy Cooper
Staff Writer

Work pays, but for SIUC's Student Employee of the Year, it pays $200 more.

Robert Evans, a student worker in personnel services, was awarded a congratulatory letter from SIUC President John C. Guyon, a plaque and a $200 scholarship for being s Student Employee of the Year.

The 2nd annual awards ceremony took place Friday afternoon as part of National Student Employment Week, April 7-13.

Evans, a junior in music education from Gorham, said he was surprised and thankful to be chosen.

"The other finalists are very good student workers," Evans said. "I was really shocked when I won."

Pamela Brandt, assistant director for Personnel Services, nominated Evans for the award because of his reliability, initiative, good judgement and his computer skills.

"The kinds of things Robert does on the job go well beyond what we normally expect of a student worker," Brandt said.

Brandt said Evans works with about twenty-five people at Personnel Services and is excellent at meeting demands.

Evans has worked in Personnel Services since January 1990 and earlier from August 1988 to December 1988, Brandt said.

Other finalists for the award were Catherine Fields from the Department of Physiology, Tammy Huelsmann Lackey from the College of Agriculture, Valerie Riggs from the Financial Aid Office and Timothy Vollmer from the Evaluation and Development Center.

Native Americans mount legislative effort to nullify law

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American Indian leaders said Monday they will try to get Congress to nullify two Supreme Court rulings leaving some reservation crimes unpunishable and allowing states to tax some goods sold on the trust lands.

Tribal chiefs gathered in Washington for a three-day legislative conference also offered plans to restructure the Bureau of Indian Affairs, to allow less to be spent on bureaucrats and more on tribes, and to give Indians more say over how the money is spent.

They also hope to get the federal government to take a stronger stand as trustee of their lands, by blocking states, ranchers and developers from destroying water, timber and other resources.

But top on the list are the Supreme Court decisions.

"We've seen an effort to erode tribal sovereignty," said John LaVelle, conference sponsor.

EC lifts apartheid sanctions

European countries agree to end ban on South Africa

LUXEMBOURG (UPI) — The 12 European Community foreign ministers agreed Monday to lift the ban on imports of iron, steel and Kruggerand gold coins from South Africa, leaving only U.N. and U.S. sanctions in place against the white minority-ruled nation.

The move followed a decision by European heads of state in December to lift the ban on new investments in South Africa in recognition of President Frederik de Klerk's initiatives to abolish the system of racial separation known as apartheid.

"There is a consensus that sanctions against South Africa on steel and iron and gold coins should be lifted," German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said.

The decision means that only United Nations sanctions prohibiting military cooperation, the import and export of weapons, and a ban on South African participation in international sports events such as the Olympics remains.

De Klerk called the news "positive and most encouraging. ... I appreciate the European governments' standing by their principles and commitments regarding this issue. It is another important step for South Africa and all its people towards improved economic conditions and normal international relations."

A spokesman for the African National Congress, the largest anti-apartheid organization in South Africa, called the decision "unfortunate."

"It is a setback for the struggle as a whole," spokesman Joel Netshitenzhe said in Johannesburg, South Africa. "It does not assist the struggle of our people. ... Although there have been many changes promised on the part of the government, not much concrete has been done to clear the obstacles to free political activity."

"The (apartheid) laws have not as yet been fully abolished," Netshitenzhe said.

A spokesman for the militantly Pan-Africanist Congress said it was "bitterly disappointed and outraged." The equally hard-line Azanian People's Organization issued a statement saying it was "aghast at this terrible decision."

In February de Klerk opened the annual session of Parliament with a speech in which he promised to cancel all the remaining apartheid laws, including the so-called Group Area Acts regulating where people can live.

Although that and other major laws have yet to be abolished, the government last year repealed laws segregating public facilities such as parks, beaches and swimming pools.

After de Klerk's speech, British Prime Minister John Major called for the immediate lifting of the remaining sanctions, and the South African president returned from a European tour confident that the remaining measures would soon be canceled.

African National Congress Deputy President Nelson Mandela has forcefully argued that all the sanctions must remain in place until the system of apartheid is completely dismantled.

Mandela warned at the time that blacks "would mount a fierce and spontaneous response" if the European Community lifted the sanctions without his group's agreement.

But the EC foreign ministers decided to act despite renewed violence in South African townships this weekend and a call from the European Parliament in Strasbourg, France, which voted only last February to retain the sanctions, to delay action until it could debate the issue.

Only Belgium and the Netherlands argued Monday that the Parliament should be consulted.

Students hunt scholarships, grants through listing service

By Omonpee O. Whitfield
Staff Writer

Two SIUC students are helping other students find opportunities for money and scholarships.

Reginald Townsend, senior in electronic management, and Darnell Wheeler, junior in exercise science, are partners in a local branch of DAR Associates, a national company that provides students with lists of scholarships and other sources of financial aid.

Townsend said he and Wheeler have offered the service since February for a $45 fee.

He said although the fee detours some students from purchasing the services, the listing is worth the money.

"A person normally receives up to 21 sources," Townsend said. "We guarantee that they'll receive at least seven sources or they'll receive their fee back in addition to the sources we find for them."

Townsend said the advanced technology of the national DAR database can be credited for the high quality of the scholarship-finding service.

He said for the last 10 years, DAR has compile a database of more than 200,000 sources of financial aid for students. Many of the sources are private sector sources — they are funded by individuals or corporations — with very few academic or financial requirements, he said.

Wheeler

In addition to obtaining a list of sources, Townsend said he and Wheeler also offer a letter-writing service to clients for a $3 fee. He said after clients receive a list of sources, they can request a letter of application for funding.

Although they hope to make a profit by offering their services as scholarship-hunters, Townsend and Wheeler also think of what they do as helping fellow students.

"I think of myself as a student helping my fellow students," Wheeler said.

Workshop to help trace, research family lines of African-Americans

By Omonpee O. Whitfield
Staff Writer

On Sunday, a group of African-Americans will have the opportunity to find long lost relatives from all around the world.

The Little Egypt Chapter of the Afro-American Historical and Genealogical Society, Inc. will sponsor a workshop at 1 p.m. at Bethel AME Church, 316 E. Jackson.

Little Egypt Chapter president, Rosetta O'Neal said the purpose of the workshop is to stimulate interest in African-American historical and genealogical research.

O'Neal said 1991 is the first time the workshop was sponsored as a community project, with members of the community invited to participate and observe. She said in addition to the speakers, literature, bibliographies and books on African-American genealogy will be available.

O'Neal said although there have been many recent breakthroughs in African-American genealogical research, tracing the family trees of many African-Americans is very difficult because of a lack of records or inadequate record-keeping, including inadequate record-keeping by the National Census Bureau.

"There's very little information that can be obtained about many black families from the census records," O'Neal said. "It was not until 1870 that blacks were recorded by the National Census."

O'Neal said by not charging any registration fees for the workshop, the group hopes to encourage as many people as possible to attend. She also said people need not have any experience in genealogy to participate in the workshop.

"If you don't know anything at all about genealogy, you're the kind of person we want," she said.

EVERYDAY, STUDENTS and Carbondale citizens wake up with the help of bathtub full of water from Cedar Lake.

The lake was created by damming up the 5.5 mile Cedar Creek. The project began in 1962 and took 12 years to complete.

Cedar Lake became the city's water source in 1974, and Colleen Ozment, water treatment laboratory superintendent, said the lake is the main reason Carbondale's water is clean and relatively easy to treat.

THE LAKE IS more than 40 feet deep in places, giving the city an advantage because it can extract water at several different levels, Ozment said.

Water consumption averages 4.5 million gallons a day but more could be drawn from the lake, she said.

If needed, up to 20 million gallons a day could be drawn from the lake for treatment, although it is unlikely demand would ever grow that large, Ozment.

"THERE'S LOTS of capacity out there," she said. "There is no risk for a water shortage as far as I can see."

Another benefit of Cedar Lake is there are no industries around it that might create pollution.

In 1977 a study was conducted by SIUC's Pollution Control Office to determine if there were unsafe mercury levels in the lake.

The study concluded that some largemouth bass and crappies contain more mercury than can be considered safe for human consumption.

THE STUDY BY Pollution Control Director John Meister and then-professor of chemistry, James Cox, showed that the water was not the source of the mercury and any traces must have been present in the valley which is now the lake bottom.

Meister said there were never any health risks associated with the water and the levels have dropped since the study was conducted 14 years ago.

OZMENT SAID More than 30,000 tests are run on water samples each year.

EVERY TWO HOURS, seven days a week, tests are run.

The samples tested come from all levels of the water treatment process.

Tests are conducted at Cedar Lake before entering the system, during treatment at the plant and from businesses and homes around town, she said.

ABOUT HALF of the test results are sent to the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency, while the other half are reviewed by water treatment plant officials.

The IEPA also conducts its own tests of Carbondale's water during different stages of the treatment process.

Metra doubts commuter rail will run in strike

CHICAGO (UPI) — Metra Chairman Jeffery Ladd held out little hope Monday that commuter rail service could be maintained in the Chicago area in the event of a strike late Tuesday by rail workers and Gov. Jim Edgar said the situation is out of his control.

In Washington, D.C., President Bush urged railroad industry negotiators to accept an emergency board report to avoid an economically crippling nationwide rail strike.

Project to help state's coal industry

By Natalie Boehme
Staff Writer

New research in coal-burning plants could have a positive effect on the Illinois coal industry.

The state awarded a $600,000 grant Thursday to Cartersville's Center for Research on Sulfur in Coal to research a $3.9 million coal-burning power plant, aiming at high efficiency with a low pollution index.

The Institute of Gas Technology in Chicago will be the prime contractor for the project.

Herman Feldmann, project engineer, said the plant is needed to keep coal competitive.

For the center to receive the grant, however, the U.S. Department of Energy must agree to fund the rest of the project, estimated at $3.3 million.

"If technology like this isn't developed, Illinois coal will just stay in the ground and they will build more nuclear plants," Feldmann said.

Feldmann said he expects an answer from the DOE by the end of April.

"The project rests on the decision of the U.S. Department of Energy, right now," Feldmann said.

The $3.9 million will fund the first phase of the plant, which includes compiling engineering data, final analysis and exact cost of the project.

SIUC will contribute to the project by researching alternative heat exchanges, which allow heat to be transferred to fluid that generates energy.

If phase one is successful, funding for phases two and three, which would involve the building of a pilot plant and a small commercial plant, will need to be found, Feldmann said.

Locating funding for the last two phases will not be difficult if phase one is successful, he said.

Feldmann said the system is projected to convert 47 percent of coal's energy into electricity, a 12-percent higher efficiency rate than coal-burning boilers.

The plant is based on the idea that compressed air can be heated to a high enough temperature to turn two turbines in one cycle. The first turbine would be turned when the compressed air is heated initially. Steam, which would turn a second turbine, would be produced if the air remains hot enough after the first process.

Most coal-burning power plants only use steam to turn turbines.

"The program would be like placing one power cycle on top of another cycle, increasing the energy generated," Feldmann said.

Because the plant would generate more energy using the same amount of coal, the operating cost would be reduced and less sulfur dioxide, a major cause of acid rain, would be released, he said.

Feldmann said limestone also would be added to the cold coal to reduce the level of sulfur dioxide being released into the atmosphere. Sulfur dioxide is absorbed when combustion heat turns the limestone to lime.

The majority of Illinois coal has a high sulfur content.

People decide where taxes go in demonstration

By John Patterson
Staff Writer

Wouldn't it be nice to decide where tax dollars go?

Members of the Peace Coalition of Southern Illinois let interested people do just that in a demonstration Monday at the Carbondale Post Office.

The group gave each of 240 participants 10 pennies and let them decide where to put them.

By labeling different jars as government spending areas, the group was able to allow people to choose where they wanted to spend their money. The area included the military, human resources (health, housing, education and job training), physical resources, and general government activities such as the Peace Corps.

Of the 2,400 pennies given out, 30 percent had to go for interest on the national debt.

The results of the spending showed the military receiving nearly 7 percent, human resources 33.8 percent, physical resources 16.6 percent and the general government fund 5.9 percent.

Margie Parker, member of the Peace Coalition of Southern Illinois, said members of the group had been informing people of what their money was going into for the last four years, hoping to bring about a change.

As the results show, more people would rather support human resources than the military, Parker said.

STUDENT ELECTIONS

Polling places open 10 hours at 5 locations

Students can cast ballots Thursday for Undergraduate Student Government and student trustee elections at one of five places across campus.

Appointees of the Election Commission will monitor polling places from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Student Center, Lentz Hall on Thompson Point, Grinnell Hall at Brush Towers, Trueblood Hall at University Park, and Kesnar Hall on Greek Row.

Students must present a valid student ID card. The USG election is open to undergraduates, and the trustee election is open to all students.

Elections will include the student trustee position, senators and president and vice president positions.

The candidates for student trustee are Darnell Wheeler, Bill Hall and Richard Fasano.

PARTY PLATFORMS

United Party:
Derrick Faulkner, president, senior/advertising
Dwight Gunn, vice president, junior/finance
8 senators
- creating a newsletter about what goes on at USG meetings
- publishing information on University chain of command
- working with registered student organizations to fix funding problems
- improving lighting around campus

Reform Party:
Michael Parker, president, senior/political science
April Ronchetti, vice president, junior/economics
28 senators
- lobbying for more higher education funding
- setting new guidelines for registered student organization funding
- creating a shuttle bus service for students on weekend evenings
- revitalizing the USG commission system

Student Party:
Jack Sullivan, president, junior/political science
Tony Svach, vice president, sophomore/foreign language and international trade
29 senators
- creating a student advisory position on Carbondale City Council
- improving the campus-wide recycling programs
- making teacher evaluation available to students
- abolishing the fall break

Three running for USG president

Reform Party pushing for more state funding

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

The main plank on the Reform Party platform is getting more funds for SIUC students from the state and from student fees.

Michael Parker, USG west side senator and Reform Party presidential candidate, said he would work with University students, the Illinois Student Association and the United States Student Association to lobby legislators in Washington to reauthorize the Federal Higher Education Act.

Parker said the 1965 act, which expires Sept. 30, affects financial aid programs including Pell Grants, Stafford Loans and Perkins Loans.

He said he would send student representatives to Washington to push for reauthorization of the act at the same or a higher rate.

Also, with student organizations asking the Finance Committee for more funding than the budget will allow, Parker said he would award matching funds to organizations that raise money on their own.

Parker is a senior in political science. Besides serving as a USG senator, he is on the Judicial Board of Governance, which determines disciplinary cases and recommends sanctions to the dean, and is a member of the Committee to Review the Student Conduct Code.

Parker said he wants to revitalize the USG Commission system. He said Public Relations has been the most active of the seven USG commissions, and it has produced only one newsletter this year.

Parker wants to make commission chair positions into student work jobs so commissioners do not have to divide their time between jobs and student government work.

"This will make the commissioners more responsible in their jobs and will provide incentive for others to do good work and get a paid position," Parker said.

April Ronchetti, Reform Party candidate for USG vice president, said she wants to start a shuttle bus and an escort service for students on the weekends to improve safety and reduce drunken driving accidents.

"One person driving home while drunk is enough to be a problem," she said.

Ronchetti is a junior in economics. She currently is not serving on USG, but is the fundraising chairwoman for the Pan Hellenic Council and is on the executive council of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

Ronchetti said the Reform Party has the most diverse and experienced membership, and that many of the people running on the Reform ticket are senators or have served on other organizations.

"These people (on the Reform ticket) have done a good job with their organizations, and will do a good job representing students," she said.

Other planks on the Reform Party platform include:
- working with the Student Programming Council to establish a Fall Music Festival;
- implementing recycling programs for newspaper, aluminum cans and computer paper;
- allowing student evaluations of personnel other than instructors, such as housing and financial aid personnel.

United Party concerned with lack of information

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

Getting more information about the University out to students is the primary concern of the United Party.

Derrick Faulkner, United party candidate for Undergraduate Student Government president, said if elected, he would create a newsletter to let students know what happens at USG meetings.

Faulkner said he would like to print and make available in the Student Center and the residence hall 10 minutes of the bi-weekly meetings, as well as voting records to show what senators support specific issues.

"We want USG to be on everyone's mind all year, not just at election time," he said.

Faulkner is a senior in advertising. Although not currently a member of USG, he is president of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, president of the Pan-Hellenic Council and a member of the Sphinx Club.

Faulkner also wants to publish information for students on University structure. Faulkner said students need to know the chain of command for administrators.

Funding registered student organizations also will be a major concern for the future, Faulkner said.

Dwight Gunn, United Party candidate for USG vice president, said he supports re-working the RSO hierarchy so a clear difference between Priority One and Priority Two organizations exists.

Priority Ones are RSOs that receive first choice from the Student Center as to where they get to hold their meetings.

Defining Priority Three classification will allow for a better understanding of how funding works and will cause fewer funding problems, he said.

Gunn is a junior in finance. He was an east and west side USG senator and is the Black Togetherness Organization Communication Committee chairman.

The United Party also proposes to improve safety on campus.

Gunn said he supported increasing the lighting around campus and especially around University Park, which he said is particularly poorly lit.

"I'd like to see the Brightway Path be more of a bright way path," Gunn said.

Both candidates said they wanted a fair, clean election free of the political backstabbing and election rule violations that occurred last spring.

Faulkner said he hopes the United Party can create a new foundation of students working for students, not just for a particular political party. The United Party has eight senators running on its ticket.

Other planks on the United Party platform include:

- increasing Morris Library hours around midterms, final exams and other peak studying times;
- increasing professionalism in USG by having senators pay more attention to the speaker and maintain a more businesslike atmosphere;
- creating a SIUC towing system to lower the cost of towing and to internalize the money spent on towing fees for parking violations.

Student Party advocates City Council representation

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

The Student Party wants to look out for student interests, both at the University and in the city.

Jack Sullivan, Undergraduate Student Government west side senator and Student Party USG presidential candidate, said if elected, he would push to get a student position on Carbondale City Council and to have teacher evaluations available for reference in Morris Library.

Sullivan said he would like to see a student, even one in an advisory position, serve on the city council as a constant voice for students. The student would be selected by USG and the Graduate and Professional Student Council and eventually would receive voting power, he said.

Students also fill out teacher evaluations at the end of the semester that go to the instructors and department heads. Sullivan said he would collect and bind these evaluations together as a reference book for students making their class schedules.

Using the existing evaluations would show students what previous classes thought of an instructor's teaching style, fairness and rapport with students. Students could use these evaluations to decide what instructors are best suited to their needs and choose classes appropriately, if possible.

"If it helps just one student get into a better class, that's great," Sullivan said.

Sullivan is a junior in political science. Besides serving as a USG senator, he is chairman of the USG Finance Committee and director of the Landlord Tenant Union, which directs students with landlord problems to help.

Sullivan said he wants to continue and expand the University's recycling programs. He said there is a lot of student interest in environmental concerns, but not many on-campus programs exist.

Sullivan said establishing an office in the Student Center for student groups that want office space, access to a computer and a place to store files is another plank on the Student Party platform.

Tony Svach, Student Party candidate for vice president, said he would work toward eliminating fall break from the 1992-93 SIUC calendar. He said the late-October break is a hassle for students who live in residence halls and have to find rides home. The extended weekend shortens Thanksgiving break, he said.

Svach is a sophomore in foreign language and international trade. He is a USG Brush Towers senator and a member of the Climate Control Commission for the study of campus violence.

Many people aren't aware of USG or what it does until after it reaches a decision, Svach said. He wants to get information about USG out to students by having senators go to their constituents more often.

Other planks on the Student Party platform include:

- Other planks on the Student Party platform include:
- finding a permanent location for Rainbow's End Preschool, which recently lost its lease;
- expanding the Landlord Tenant Union;
- improving the student phone directory's accuracy.

Foreman: from a laughingstock to contender

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — George Foreman became the big winner in his Friday night fight against Evander Holyfield when he signed the contract in November.

Even if Foreman fails to take Holyfield's heavyweight title, he is guaranteed $12.5 million and has earned a place in boxing history by going from laughingstock to serious contender.

Foreman has come a long way from the fat ex-champion who looked pitifully slow when he first came back four years ago for a $40,000 payday against punching bag Steve Zouski in Sacramento, Calif.

The 42-year-old reverend already has earned more than $3 million in his 24-bout comeback. There is no limit to how much he can make if he defeats Holyfield to become the oldest heavyweight champion.

"It's already been a success," Foreman says of his comeback. "All I needed was an opportunity to prove what I can do. Now I've got the opportunity."

"I didn't even shadow box for 10 years and now I've got Evander Holyfield training his guts out. That should show you something right there."

Holyfield, 28, claims Foreman's 24-0 comeback record and top 10 ranking makes him a credible foe, especially since he will bring the champion at least a $20 million purse.

"I don't think it's right to give a person the opportunity to come back and not give him a chance at the title if he fights his way into contention," Holyfield said.

By now, Foreman's comeback story is familiar. The bald-headed puncher will step into the ring

Friday night as if he walked out of a time capsule. The same man who idolized Sonny Liston, destroyed Joe Frazier and lost to Muhammad Ali now taunts Mike Tyson, mocks Buster Douglas and challenges Holyfield.

But Foreman is far from the same fighter who decked Frazier six times to become champion in 1973.

He has yet to be a serious contender. His campaign has been one of public relations, as he turned himself from a surly destroyer into a loveable preacher who has won the hearts of fans around the world. Foreman has done such a good selling job, Friday night's fight should be seen in at least one million U.S. homes on pay-per-view at $34.95. The live gate at the Convention Center should generate another $10 million or so. Foreman displayed enough of a punch against Gerry Cooney and Adilson Rodrigues to convince people he has a chance against Holyfield. The 7-2 odds against him are slightly higher than when he knocked out Frazier 18 years ago in Jamaica to win the crown.

"Maybe he can't beat Holyfield or Mike Tyson," says Foreman's promoter Bob Arum, "but you wouldn't bet your house against him."

Ali and Frazier celebrated the 20th anniversary of their first fight March 3, 1971 Sunday night at a dinner for charity. These two men who failed miserably in comeback tries at much younger ages than Foreman predicted their old adversary will beat Holyfield.

"George is the harder puncher," Ali said. "But he has to win within six, after six it's too late."

"The man hits too hard," Frazier said.

Listening to Ali and Frazier, it sounded as if they were talking about the Foreman of the early 1970s instead of the 1990s version. But less sentimental types also give him a shot. Larry Holmes' recent comeback is based on his belief Foreman will win and give him a shot.

Jim Brown, the former Cleveland Browns Hall of Fame running back who was among the few pro athletes to quit in his prime and never look back, gives Foreman the "puncher's chance." But Brown says he thinks Foreman's comeback is good for another reason.

"He's brought a lot of happiness, and people are going to enjoy this fight no matter what happens," he said.

NFL kicker acquitted of smuggling drugs

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — NFL kicker Donald Igwebuikwe was acquitted Monday of charges he masterminded a $1 million plot to import a half pound of heroin from his native Nigeria into the United States.

Igwebuikwe fell to his knees and wept when the verdict was read. The jury deliberated nearly seven hours over two days after two weeks of trial. A conviction could have brought up to 120 years in prison and a $6 million fine.

"I'm glad the truth finally came out," Igwebuikwe said. "I just want to go ahead with my life. When your life is in somebody's hands ... I went through hell. I'll probably go to Minnesota in the next few days and talk to my coach. I'm going to play this year."

Igwebuikwe, 32, was charged with two counts of conspiring to import and distribute heroin and one count of importing the drug.

Defense attorney Frank Winkles maintained Igwebuikwe was generous to a fault and his only crime was befriending two men who used him.

"You'll all be taking different pictures of him — kicking field goals — next time," he said after the verdict was announced. Prosecutors refused to comment.

Igwebuikwe played for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers from 1985 to 1989. He was picked up by the Minnesota Vikings in September 1990.

Igwebuikwe faced the charges alone after his two co-defendants, Maduwuba Ibekwe, a Hillsborough County substitute teacher, and Ibezim Ofeudu, a Bridgeport, Conn., security guard, entered into a plea bargain with the government.

Winkles contended Ofeudu, the prosecution's key witness, cut a deal with the government and implicated Igwebuikwe only in hopes of receiving a lenient sentence.

Player murdered, spectator charged in slaying during basketball game

Lloyd Newton, 19, of New York City, was playing in a YMCA game at the Niagara Falls Boys & Girls Club Sunday when he was slain with 50 seconds left in the game.

Brian Young, 16, of Niagara Falls, was arrested and charged with second-degree murder. He was to be arraigned later in Niagara Falls City Court.

"Over a basketball game, a real tragedy," said Lt. Frank Grant of the Niagara Falls police.

Grant said investigators were not sure if it was the game score, a problem with the clock or a personal feud that set off the brawl that involved about 40 people, including fans and players.

South Africa closes in on Olympics

BARCELONA, Spain (UPI) — South Africa is on target to compete at the 1992 Barcelona Games, 22 years after being expelled from the Olympics because of its apartheid laws.

Judge Keba Mbaye, an International Olympic Committee vice president, predicted Monday South Africa would meet the criteria for readmission in time to take part at the next Summer Games.

"I believe South Africa will meet the conditions laid down by the IOC before the date of the sending out of the invitations for Barcelona," he said.

The invitations will be dispatched July 25, one year before the start of the Games.

Mbaye, chairman of the commission and a member of the IOC executive board, stressed the invitation deadline was flexible and there had been precedents for late entries.

Mbaye spoke after the IOC executive board approved decisions taken by a delegation of the Apartheid and Olympism Commission, which visited South Africa March 22-28.

The delegation granted South Africa recognition providing it fulfilled five conditions within six months. The main prerequisite was the abolition of apartheid, a move that would pave the way for the unification of sports on a non-racial basis, another condition for acceptance.

Mbaye said he raised the apartheid issue with President F.W. de Klerk during the South Africa visit.

"I asked him directly, 'Do you really want to do away with apartheid?' and he said, 'Before the end of June all these laws will be repealed.'"

Mbaye said the South African people showed a clear resolve in wanting to clear any obstacles that would prevent the country from making its first Olympic appearance since 1960.

It is questionable whether the legislation to end apartheid will pass before the IOC Session at Birmingham, England, in June.

However, Mbaye said the executive board had decided to invite the Interim National Olympic Committee of South Africa to the IOC's Swiss headquarters in July for a progress report.

The presidents of the Association of International Sports Federations, the African Sports Confederations and the Supreme Council for Sport in Africa had also been invited.

The IOC's 1989 moratorium banning sports competition with South Africa will remain in force for the six months' probation or until the IOC was satisfied the country had fulfilled the criteria, Mbaye said.

Chicago looks for answers

CHICAGO (UPI) — After an excellent season in which they posted the best record in the NHL, the Chicago Blackhawks now find themselves spectators for the rest of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Coach-General Manager Mike Keenan—fond of using the terms "respectful" and "prepared"—felt his team was neither of these heading into their Norris Division semifinal against the Minnesota North Stars, who finished the regular season 38 points below Chicago.

"It's difficult to understand why people reacted the way they did after a disciplined and hard-working season," said Keenan, who took some of the blame himself. "I think it's preparation, not prepared to react under pressure."

The Blackhawks were the most penalized team in the NHL this year, which Keenan during the season attributed to a strong work ethic. But that undisciplined style killed them in the playoffs, allowing Minnesota a record-tying 15 power-play goals in the six games.

In addition to the penalties, Chicago abandoned its successful dump-and-grind style. Its forechecking was nearly nonexistent.

"Our game is forechecking, hitting, hard work," Jeremy Roenick said. "You didn't see any of that."

North Stars Coach Bob Gainey attributed some of the turnaround to the tight officiating.

"Chicago is a team that has played on the borderline of the rule book," Gainey said after his team clinched the first round Sunday night with a 3-1 victory in Minnesota. "That's the way they're built. That has been an advantage for them often. Lately, it hasn't been." Whatever the reasons, the end has come as a shocker to those that predicted the Blackhawks to take it all this season. In Keenan's first two seasons, they were the only team in the league to advance to the Stanley Cup semifinals both times. Now they fall in line with the rest of the Blackhawk squads, who been unable to win a Stanley Cup since 1961 or advance to the finals since 1973.

They are the first team since the Boston Bruins of 1971 to finish first overall and then lose in the opening round.

"It's like a bad dream when you're hoping to wake up," defenseman Steve Konroyd said. "Unfortunately it's reality."

"This one's tougher than probably any other one that I've been associated with," said center Troy Murray, a Blackhawk since 1982.

Phelps resigns from Notre Dame

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Digger Phelps, one of the most prominent coaches in college basketball, retired Monday after 20 years at Notre Dame.

Phelps, 49, made the announcement at a campus news conference. His status had been the subject of rumors the last few weeks, stemming from a 12-20 season in which he was roundly booed by home fans.

The coach and Notre Dame officials denied for weeks that any change would occur in the leadership of the basketball program.

Phelps took Notre Dame to 14 NCAA Tournament appearances, including a Final Four showing in 1978. But this year, the Irish suffered their third losing season under Phelps, a year that began with strong expectations.

However, the Irish lost star forward LaPhonso Ellis for the last half of the season to academic trouble and guard Tim Singleton for several weeks because of injury.

Soon after the season ended, one rumor had Phelps going to work for the Bush Administration and other reports had Phelps being fired and being replaced by either Xavier Coach Pete Gillen or Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins. Gillen and Cremins say they plan to stay at their current jobs.

Phelps, who for years wore a carnation in his lapel, has said he always has been most proud of the progress his students made toward graduation. During his tenure, all 54 of the players on scholarship who completed four years of eligibility for the Irish received degrees.

Phelps' record at Notre Dame was 393-197. He was named UPI's national coach of the year in 1974, when he led the Irish to a 26-3 record.

MARATHON, from Page 16

She finished 39th overall. "I was very comfortable with the race — up to 25 kilometers," Panfil said through an interpreter. She said that after taking the lead for good, she realized: "I was beating them hands down."

Panfil, who won the 1990 New York City Marathon, took the lead for good in the 16th mile, moving ahead of former Boston and Olympic champion Joan Benoit Samuelson, who is trying a comeback after having two children.

Kim Jones of Spokane, Wash., and Uta Pippig of Germany overtook Samuelson in the last mile and finished second and third, respectively, with times of 2:26:40 and 2:26:52.

Samuelson, fourth at 2:26:54, said she was "really running on empty after the halfway mark. It didn't come as a total shock when Kim went smoking by me, but I was surprised by Uta." Her goal was to place in the top 10 and finish under 2:30:00.

"I cried tears of joy," Samuelson said.

Two-time winner Johnny Kelley, 83, finished his 60th Boston Marathon with a time of 5:42:54. The winner of the 1935 and 1945 races later said he was looking forward to next year.

The weather was perfect for long-distance running, providing cloud cover and temperatures hovering just above 50 degrees, sparing the runners the problems of dehydration.

The winners of the men's and women's competitions each received $55,000. Second-place in each division was worth $27,000 and third was $18,000. A world record would have been worth an additional $50,000 in either division, and a course record $25,000.

Last year's winners, Gelindo Bordin nor Rosa Mota, did not return to defend their titles. This year's favorites, Douglas Wakiihuri and Ingrid Kristiansen, were sixth-place finishers.

Mekonnen made the mistake of thinking Wakiihuri was the runner he should stay with.

"I didn't go in the first (lead) group because I thought Wakiihuri was in good shape and he was the favorite," Mekonnen said through an interpreter. "I decided to stay with him and it was too late when (after 25 kilometers) I saw Hussein was too far ahead."

I'll qualify (for the NCAA championships)." Bookout believes his attitude may be his best attribute in the decathlon.

"My mindset is good," he said. "I know what I have to do. Sometimes I may not want to do something, but I do it anyway. I'm pretty determined. I need to work on my strength." Bookout said. "(SIUC graduate assistants) Darren Barber and Mike Geisler are really strict on the weights. I think I need to gain about 15 or 20 pounds. That will increase my throws a lot."

Barber said Bookout has improved since arriving at SIUC.

"I think he has a lot more potential," Barber said. "He has been very solid so far this year. His training habits could have been better at the start but now he's beginning to get in the groove. He's starting to train on a consistent basis and it's showing in his performance. He has a potential of around 6,900 points, but sometimes decathletes just go nuts and beat all their old personal bests, so a score of 7,000 isn't out of the question."

Bookout also thinks he can excel in football after leading the team in scoring his freshman year. Last year he was redshirted, which means Bookout has three years of eligibility left at SIUC.

Bookout hit eight of 12 field goal attempts and was perfect in 23 point-after tries his freshman year. He hit two 47-yarders that year to tie him for fourth on the Salukis' longest field goal list. He has hit from 56 yards away in practice. The upcoming football season holds promise for him.

"I think I have a pretty good chance to start," Bookout said. "We have four kickers out (during spring practices) and I believe I have as much of a chance as anybody."

Playing two sports doesn't wear on Bookout. He said he wanted to try competing in both in college in addition to earning his degree.

"I wouldn't say I get bored playing football 12 months a year," Bookout said, "but I had a chance to do both sports so I took advantage of it. It keeps me in shape. When it's football season, I try to keep my mind on football and when it's track season, I think track."

After he is finished with school, there is a chance Bookout could get a shot kicking in the one of the professional football leagues. Bookout said he wouldn't turn his back if the NFL called.

"I think I'll try," he said. "I don't think the distance is as important as the accuracy in field goal kicking. If I have two more good years, I definitely think I'll have the opportunity to try it. I'm not going to count on it, though."

Despite all the hard work, Bookout said it is all worth it.

"It's about setting a goal and trying to reach it," Bookout said. "I have a lot of fun doing it."
