Tornado threat slows USG returns

WARNINGS: Blaring horns force ballot counters into Student Center basement.

> TRAVIS DENEAL AND KIRK MOTTRAM DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTERS

The Undergraduate Student Government election was undetermined as of press time after the threat of tomadoes prompted the abrupt suspension of ballot counting Wednesday night as warning sirens blared across Carbondale and ballot counters took shelter in the basement of the Student Center.

ters left their task behind as they descended into the basement and were locked there until the tornado warnings abated.

Up to that point, unofficial results had a tight three-way race between the Progress, Saluki and the Shakedown parties. Progress Party presidential and vice-presidential candidates Kristie Ayres and Jackie Smith led by about 105 votes with Shakedown duo Rob Taylor and Pat Kelly in second place and Saluki Party tandem Sean Henry and Greg Akers in third. Only votes cast at Trueblood Hall, the Recreation Center and one-half of the Student Center, totaling about two-thirds of the total vote, had been counted to this point.

Rough totals of these three polling sites had the Progress Party at about 484 votes, the Shakedown Party at about 389 and the Saluki Party at about 316.

The latest unofficial returns at 11:30 p.m. shortly after counting resumed showed the Progress Party candidates with a significant lead Official numbers were not available at press time. Progress Party and Saluki Party officials were on hand at the Student Center to witness the ballot counting and took cover underground during the warnings.

Ayres was huddled with fellow Progress mates Connie Howard, Joyce Newby and Smith, awaiting the resumption of the ballot count-ing. Shakedown candidates Taylor and Kelly stayed at the ballot count only through the Student Trustee election, and left to go home to await the outcome of their election. Taylor and Kelly had proxies on hand at the ballot count to make sure the counting process was fair.

Earlier in the day, all of the exec-utive candidates and other party affiliates had staked out positions in and around the four polling sites, distributing party literature and for-warding their messages.

The Progress Party exerted the largest presence on campus with two or more of its supporters outside every polling place urging stu-dents to support their candidates. Though official results were not available at press time, the voter turnout may have been the largest since 1994. The Student Center polling place experienced overcrowding, causing some voters to seek other locations to vote.

"It was really crowded over there," Brian Denesia, a sophomere in marketing from O'Fallon, said. "When I first went to the polling place [in the Student Center], there were about 30 people waiting in line. When I went back, there were still about 30 people still waiting."

USG senator wins trustee election

... Undergraduate Student Government Sen. Mike Ruta won the student trustee race Wednesday amid charges of elec-tion judge misconduct at the Trueblood Hall polling place.

Commission determined that Ruta bested rival Bob Hanfland by a wide, 500 vote margin of 1111 to 607. Ruta, a two-time senator from the College of Applied Sciences, garnered 65 percent of the vote. Hanfland, a virtual unknown in student government, received 35 percent.

Ballot courting began nearly an hour late because the USG and student trustee election commissions did not have a room reserved. Consequently, members of the commissions and proxies, sent by each candidate with the exception of Hanfland, carried ballot boxes from room to room and floor to floor of the Student Center until they landed in an extension of the dining area on the south end of the building.

Although Ruta has claimed victory in the relatively high-turnout student

Toys not as evil as popularly believed

SYMBOL: Sociologist disagrees toys carry negative messages.

> DANA DUBRIWNY DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Critics propose that Barbie Dolls and G.I. Joe action figures carry negative symbolic mes-sages to young children, but Sociology Department Chairman Joel Best disagrees.

Best spoke to about 20 students and faculty about the concern that parents and academics have regarding children's toys at a discussion Wednesday in the Mississippi Room of the Student Center titled, 'Too Much Fun: Toys as Social Problems."

"There has always been a sus-picion about leisure and recre-ation," he said. "Where there used to be a concern about the leisure and recreation time of adolescence we now we have a concern about children's toys."

Best explored the history of the Barbie doll and the changing critique since its birth in 1959.

"Barbie was subject to a hos-tile analysis from the begin-ning," he said. "The concern in the 1950s and 1960s was that she was too mature for young girls.

"In the 1970s, Barbie was condemned to the label of sex objects. Today, critics focus on the portrayal and importance of thinness that girls focus on because of Barbie."

However, Best wonders how these critics arrived at these assumptions.

"Barbie is hardly the only aspect that promotes thinness," he said. "Most girls watch TV and see the fashion photography that illustrate slenderness. These critiques don't involve the observation of girls and there is no attempt to interview girls." According to Best, there are four reasons why the nature of critiques suggest troubling indications about toys. The first rea-son is that small children are no longer nestled in the confines of the family, but spend more time with non-family members.

Women are now in the work force, so children are attending day cares. Parents think that learning music and sport are important and the amount of television that children are exposed to has increased," he

Children today also have more toys, Best said. Because of the general affluence of today's society, families can provide their children with more play items than prior times.

The third reason for concern is that toys are marketed in a fun-damentally different way than they used to.
"Look at the G.I. Joe cartoon series on television," he said. "In effect it is a half-hour commercial. Toys are manufactured to make connections with children's programs.

Referring to a miniature plas-tic Oscar Meyer Wiener that Best brought with him, he said the final reason of the concern was because of the growing social movements that concern culture and values.

"Many vegetarians believe that a toy like this would turn innocents into carnivores," he

Best also discussed the con-cern of video games promoting violence. Rather than negative influences, Best believes this type of activity teaches children to master complex sequences of

Alex Ander, secretary of the American Studies Forum. attended the discussion because of his own experience with pur-chasing toys for his children.

"I have two children and as a Quaker family, we are con-cerned with violence," he said.
"But we let our children make their own decisions and we talk about it.

"One thing that bothers me to an extent is the colored aisles of the toy stores. If you look, the preschool aisle is red, blue and yellow, the girl aisle is pink and the aisle for boys is dark."

Best agreed that certain colors are geared toward the gender of the child, but said that the colors are actually chosen by the children.

"Girls want things to be pinked up," he said. "The more ruffles on an outfit, the better they think it is."

In his research of symbolic interaction, Best concluded that the message is not in the object but the meaning assigned to the object by the person playing with the object.

"Oftentimes when we func-tion as academics we make claims we can't really substanti-ate," he said. "We have too much analytical fun, and I think that we would be well advised to take a different approach."

Restructuring math course beneficial, but the idea should not become a trend

If there is one part of SIUC's curriculum that is notorious for being a pain in the you-know-what, it is math and science courses. Students in the Center for Basic Skills are actually advised to take math classes at John A. Logan if they are able. Well, the mathematics department is taking steps to end this notoriety and make one of their classes, Math 108, a little more passable. With the new for-mat, which takes effect Fall semester, students will be able to work more at their skill level by breaking up into either an A, B, or C category

This format helps ensure students have internalized the concepts they will apply to more difficult tasks later in the course. The mathematics department should be congratulated for doing this small, yet significant move.

Math 108 fills the math requirement for many undergraduate students, but it is even more important to freshmen science and engineering students. It provides concepts that will be used throughout their college and professional careers. Unfortunately, more than half of Math 108 students fail — a waste of time and tuition.

Not all students are proficient in math and science, just as not all students are effective in liberal arts classes. It falls some on a lack of interest, but mostly it is a failure to understand those concepts. Although a university needs to apply a level of difficulty to its students, it also needs to realize that not everyone speaks the same neurological language. Does this mean those students with difficulty in these areas can never learn these concepts? Absolutely not. Does it mean that students who have problems in these classes need to stop apply-ing themselves to the fullest? Of course not. What needs to exist is a breakdown of skill levels as proposed by the math department.

This idea, based on the same concept as dis-played by Accounting 220, can be applied to many other areas of campus. It can be applied to other core curriculum classes, since those will be the ones with the most enrollment. After the requirement is met there should be no other exemptions made if a student wishes to take another similar course. It also should not apply to students who plan to major in that field after they take their core class.

This is not an attempt to make SIUC a failproof school. The academic pressures of most class es should still exist, but when there is a trend of difficulty, perhaps a restructuring of the program should be considered.

A University education is not supposed to be an easy road. Students here and at all universities are being given an opportunity that many are not -- to get an education and make a better life for themselves. Universities know what a students strengths and weaknesses are so they should be more willing to work with students to make their stay a success-

Al Capone would love tax proposal

Congress recently proposed a $1.10 per pack tax hike on eigarettes. The proposal has strong support and President Bill Clinton responded by urging an even larger increase — $1.50 per pack — and 26 states are considering additional eigarette tax hikes of their own.

Should these proposals pass, eigarettes in America could cost more than $3.56 a pack, and why shouldn't they? After all, the more expensive cigarettes are, fewer teenagers will be able to buy them, cigarette tax supporters argue. Perhaps higher cigarette taxes could even add to the pre-dicted budget surplus and pay off some of the national debt.

The trouble with a steep cigarette tax is not so much its burden on smokers. I do not smoke, and normally, I would hardly care about the cost of a pack of cigarettes, except for the fact that excessive cigarette taxes have created a financial bonanza for organized crime in other nations, and there is no reason not to expect the same results

After Germany imposed a cigarettes tax raising the cost per pack to $3.60 in equivalent U.S. dollars, the Washington Times reported that "the smuggling of cigarettes [caused] a surge in gangland-style executions and turf wars which the control of the cost present was the part and time since World War II. Authorities fear that cigarette trafficking is leading to crime empires dealing in extortion, stolen cars, drugs and weapons." Detlef Schade, a Berlin detective, was quoted as saying that since the tax hike, "People are being executed in broad day-light on the streets, on subway platforms, in front of hundreds of Why all this over eigarettes? Higher costs raise the market for illegal sales, and a single truck loaded with 50,000 cartons can net a smuggler 5550,000 in profits.

Syndicated columnist Bruce Bartlett reported that a quarter of Syndicated columnist Bruce Bartlett reported that a quarter of the world's cigarettes are now smuggled across national borders to evade taxes and tariffs. As more people smuggle their way around higher taxes, governments lose $16 billion per year in tax revenues. On the other hand, organized crime in Italy is said to make $500 million a year smuggling cigarettes.

In 1991, Canada raised the cost of cigarettes by 75 cents a pack. Reason magazine reports that by 1993, nearly one-third of Canada's cigarettes were bought illegally. The cigarette racket became so lucrative that retailers bore the brunt of the crime wave, where thirses found it more profitable to ignore cash and clean where thieves found it more profitable to ignore cash and clean out the cigarettes.

Do higher cigarette taxes at least curb teenage smoking? No. In fact, they make it easier for minors to obtain cigarettes by increas-ing illicit sales. It is safe to say that thieves, smugglers and illegal cigarette dealers would hardly care how old their customers are. It is easy to think we are dealing a sharp blow to Big Tobacco with higher cigarette taxes, but the real victims are those caught in the crossfire of organized crime and gang wars. In the end, high cigarette taxes do for today's gangs what Prohibition did for Al

Students lost in contract negotiations

Dear Editor, As a local student attending SIU, I feel As a local student attending SIU, I feel there have been some aspects overlocked by the administration regarding the faculty strike. Living in Southern Illinois all my life. I am quite familiar with strike situations all my life, I am quite familiar with strike situations all my life, I as well as others from this area, have grown up enduring strikes and striving for the benefits and better working conditions of our families and for ourselves.

As a student, I realize the economic impact the strike may have on SIU. Enrollment of the college is currently faltering and with the South Asian economy in peril, why would these countries send their children and residents to a university with his much discord, expensive tuition, and this much discord, expensive tuition, and flailing university image?

Individuals that do have great means to attend a university of choice will be quite wary of attending a university with the unstable image that SIU is quickly obtaining. Also, the local communities and people of this area are going to be concerned about sending our community members to a university that doesn't embrace the standards that have made this area what it is today. Out-of-state students and international such confidence in the standards that have made this area what it is today. Out-of-state students and international such confidence in the standards where the providence is a little bit of nowhere — but we who have grown up here are quite proud of this area. Now there is a new mediator in the arena. I thought that was what the high-prieed Chicago law firm was what the high-priced Chicago law firm was hired for.

If the university has the money to spare for all these mediators, and the administration and the faculty are still worlds apart on agreement, maybe an arbitrator is a better aspenditure before the reputation of this credible university is severely scarred. Hopefully this will add a local-yokel perspective the administration is not considering in this strike situation.

MoJo Deans to give benefit concert

CLEAN: Band creating awareness, giving thanks to those for cleaning up community.

> KELLY E. HERTLEIN DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

While harvesting a worthy cause, local cow-funk band the MoJo Deans will play a noon con-cert Saturday at Turley Park to give thanks to those involved in preserving the environment and cleaning the Carbondale area.

Joe Swank, lead vocalist and guitarist, said the opportunity to perform at the 1998 "Keep Carbondale Beautiful" event allows him to aid a worthy cause and showcase his band's talents in a new and refreshing atmosphere.

"There's enough hippie in us that we all are really cool with the clean-up-the-land thing." Swank said.
"We don't preach about it, but it is something we all believe in, and it gives us a good enough reason to go and play outside.
"We play from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. as a thank you to everyone for getting out and helping clean up." Peggy Melone, executive director of the not-for-profit event, said the program is designed to create awareness among the community that litter is a problem and a team effort is the only way to eliminate the litter pollution.

This is the 11th clean-up project for Carbondale. Melone said the past events have brought tremen-dous success and this year should be no different.

"Last year we collected over 11,000 pounds of garbage and 3,000 pounds were recyclable," she said. "A group effort does make a difference in repairing the visual quality of the community. We'd like to work ourselves out of this job."

Local merchants have made donations to the preservation cause and have provided prizes and donations for the most garbage collected. Extra points will be awarded to those citizens who separate the probabilities and points. garbage into recyclable and nonrecyclable components.

Plastic gloves and garbage bags will be provided for those who participate and Melone said transpo tion will not be a problem for those who are without.

important to those who can not make the distance without it."

Ratliff Dean Thiebaud, vocalist and guitarist from the MoJo Deans, said he would like to see numerous residents take part in the clean-up, and he admits the band will be playing strictly to give thanks to the community members involved.

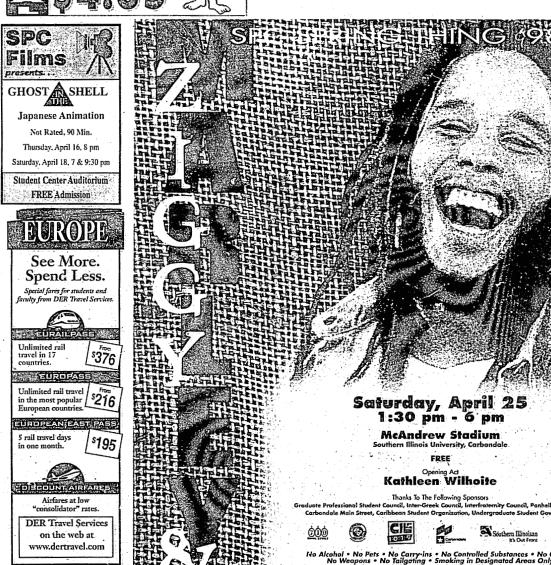

"We hope for people to want to show up, hear our music and clean up," he said. "We're doing this con-cert for free. There is no money in it for the band."

Many area artists have partici-ated in the event before and MoJo Deans jumped at the opportunity, not only for the chance to support Keep Carbondale Beautiful but because entertaining friends had given the event high reviews.

Fashion designers use their imagination, talent to create the next wave of fashion

(Above) Jercme Schram, a senior in fashion design from Woodridge, listens as Laura Kidd, an assistant professor of clothing and textiles, gives him some pointers on the art of stitching at Quigley Hall on Friday (Left) Sarah Stevens, a senior in fashion design from Salem, explains to Kidd the unique style of her dress designed for the spring fashion show, 'Undiscovered Treasures" Friday at Quigley Hall. DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

spacious room in Quigley Hall is unsurprisingly cluttered with miscellaneous fabrics and utensils. The materials surround dresses ranging from simple silk, beaded gowns to a man's dress.

This idea to design a man's dress could only be conjured up by a fashion designer — well in Jerome Schram's case — a future fashion designer.

"I like to make people think and see what they haven't seen before," said Schram, a senior in fashion design from Woodridge.

As he clears a nearby table of fabrics, needles and thread, Schram flips through his portfolio and shows some of his most innovative fashions. Among these fashions is a dress made of compact discs. Schram drilled holes in the CDs and strung beaded curtains through there to make the dress.

Schram is one of nine seniors in the clothing and textiles program who use their creative imaginations to design their own original items. These original designs will be showcased during the clothing and textiles spring fashion show, "Undiscovered Treasures," 7 p.m. April 23 in Student Center Ballrooms C and D.

The fashion show is a final project for the seniors in the Workforce Education and Development 446 Professional Practices class. Responses from the show will give the studens an insight to their future career.

Although he has taken interest in fashion for three years, designing for the Theater Department's productions of "Long Voyage Home" and "Last of the Romantics," Schram said there may be some misconceptions about his idea of fashion.

Out of his 13 designs for the fashion show, Schram has also designed a line of colorful, synthetic furs. Like the man's dress, which is see-through, the fur coats possess fawning, but not feminine features.

"It doesn't have feminine quality to it at all," he said. It's flattering. It's kind of a long history actually. Society's view of men wearing dresses has always intrigued me. A dress is simply a piece of fabric that is just as beautiful on a woman

'Unfortunately, society has too many limitations when it comes to gender rules. It's sort of challenging, but I find that men think of fashion as a women's thing, and that whole thought inspires me a lot.

Also designing dresses — but for women — Marnie Merrell, a senior in apparel design from Danvers, strings the needle and thread through her light blue dress for the fashion show. She has already applied small, crystal-clear beads on the top of the dress. It looks complete, but Merrell still has a few hours to go. It takes her from 10 to 19 hours to complete

"It's really fun to make things," Merrell said. "I've always liked dressier clothes more than sporty. But, this is creative.

"I love to use silk painting. It's basically using dyes to create colors and designs of fabric. One time it took me 19 hours just to paint the fabric. You have to stretch the silk onto a wooden frame, draw the borders and then fill it in with the dye. We have to do all our fabric from scratch.

Laura Kidd, an assistant professor of clothing and textiles, said the work that designers perform to invent fashion has surprisingly gone unnoticed by outsiders. Many people think that fashion designing is a simple task.

"I always laugh because people think this is such an easy major," Kidd said. "This is tough. There is a lot of work involved. You have to be dedicated. If everybody thinks it's so easy, then more people would make their own clothes. It's just like architecture, except we're usin 3 fashion.

"[Students] have to come up with an idea, draw it down.

They have to know about budgeting. They have to actually fit it on somebody. And as they progress, they have to do all the finishings. They can't come up with an idea they can't

As Jean Horvath sketches a green oriental fabric design for her portfolio, she recalls her most adored designs. Her ideas range from a series of time eras.

"Well, I'm really into the 1850s and the turn of the century fashions." said Horvath, a senior in clothing and textiles from Racine, Wis. "Sometimes when I watch the Oscars or the MTV awards, I sit there and sketch some idea

Modeling the designs made by the students at the fashion show will be Vanity Fashion Fair models and other people

Anticipating the show, Merrell said she hopes her designs make a good i mpression on the attendees. She spends nearly 25 hours a week on her designs and wants to continue work-25 hours a week on her designs and wants to continue working as much as possible to eventually become a designer.

"I won't be out there to see it," Merrell said. "But. I hope (the audience) will appreciate the work I put into it. I just hope that it is thows. I sipoe that it is recognized."

Schram is quite confident about displaying his designs in the fashion show. He said his designs are different from the typical fashions of today. Department store clothing usually bores him.

"I look for great texture and great color," he said. "When I look in department stores I see things that are run in the mill, just boring.

"But, I expect a very good response. People have always been intrigued by my designs. It's going to be fun."

Massive Funk gets hyperactive

ENERGY: Band has played all over U.S., but loves its homeland, Southern Illinois.

The funky beats of Massive Funk are to college students what high-beam headlights are to hyper moths on warm summer nights. Contraception program fuels controversy

LOS ANGFLES TIMES

ANA IEIM, Calif. - On Feb. 24, 26-year-old Stacey Davis, broke and recovering from an addiction to speed, checked into a Long Beach hospital, where a doctor sterilized hospital, where a doctor sterilized her by tying her tubes. The next day, an Orange County organization mailed her a cleek for $200.

"I'm not going to lie," said Davis, a mother of three children in foster care. Although certain she didn't want any more children, she clee was attracted by the promise of also was attracted by the promise of a reward. "I mean, I need the money right now. I need to do something

Davis is one of eight women who have been sterilized and have taken part in a controversial cashfor-contraception program created by the Anaheim-based CRACK (Children Requiring a Caring Kommunity).

Others who have received money from CRACK after having their tubes tied at area hospitals include a 28-year-old Los Angeles drug user with five children in fos-ter care, a 38-year-old Los Angeles recovering drug user who has given birth to 14 children, and a 32-yearold Anaheim methadone user with six children. Combined, the eight women have given birth to 51 chil-dren, 43 of them in foster care, according to CRACK founder

Barbara Harris, of Stanton, who has adopted four drug-exposed babies.

The small but growing private program concerns leaders from Planned Parenthood and the American Civil Liberties Union who worry that the cash offer will, in effect, coerce drug users who are poor into making an irreversible choice they may later regret.

'The issue is whether a woman who decides to undergo such a pro-cedure does so voluntarily and with full consent," said Rocio Cordoba, a staff attorney for the ACLU of Southern California, "If a woman is given financial incentives to do so. that raises questions. Two hundred dollars could mean a lot to somebody who has nothing."

Now opening its first office in Anaheim, the group has raised $35,000, including $25,000 from an out-of-state businessman who out-of-state businessman who insists on remaining anonymous. Radio personality Laura Schlessinger has contributed $5,000, and conservative talk-show host Rick Roberts has raised funds through his San Diego radio program. Board members include two social workers, and Los Angeles County Sheriff Sherman Block, chairman of the Inter-Agency Council on Child Abuse and Neglect, is an honorary member.

Advisory board member Carole Rowe said CRACK's program is and takes no position on abortion.

"We're committed to a voluntary program, which includes not coerc ing a woman into rehab if she's not ready," said Rowe, a Los Angeles

CRACK has enlisted seven more potential clients, Harris said, includ-ing another Los Angeles drug user, 23, who was planning to undergo sterilization this month after delivering her fourth child.

To find participants, the group sent fliers to hospitals, police departments, probation departments and jails in Los Angeles and Orange counties. One woman called after her social worker gave her a flier.

WASHINGTON — In the most sweeping initiative, toward Tehran by a U.S. official since Iran's 1979 revolution, a ranking congressional Democrat called Tuesday for the White House and Congress to take far reach-ing steps to end containment of Iran and open sday for the ay, to restoring diplomatic ties:

By proposing strong steps to hasten the thaw in relations, Rep. Lee H. Hamilton, D. Ind., former chairman, and now, senior Democrat, on, the House International Relations, Committee, issued a direct challenge to his peers in Congress, which has usurped control of U.S. Iran policy in recent years. His position may also give the White House more room to maneuver on the controversial issue

Confrontation has benefited neither country. Why continue to follow a policy that for 20 years hasn't worked? Hamilton aid in a speech to the Council on Foreign Relations Our policy is not isolating Iran.

It's isolating the United States."

Among his proposals, Hamilton urged a compromise on Iran's nuclear capability that would enable Tehran to develop reactors for civilian purposes — under international safe-guards and potentially with U.S. help much like the 1994 pact crafted with North Korea: He envisions U.S. Iran talks, held under auspices of the United Nations or the International Atomic Energy Agency, which -would help guard against Iran's developmentof nuclear weapons.

The White House also should signal to-

Iran that official talk on this and other issu would lead to easing of an executive order banning U.S. trade with Iran, Hamilton said, starting with licensing U.S. companies to talk to Tehran in preparation for the lifting of trustee election, allegations have been forwarded by a poll watcher and another witness that an election judge at Trueblood Hall improperly influenced voters in favor of Ruta.

USG Election Commissioner Mindy Scott said she found no evidence that any Trueblood Hall election judge had influenced voters in favor of Ruta. However, Carla Lunsford, wife of former USG senator and Students Organized Against the Athletic Fee Increase spokesman Chet Lunsford alleged that Trueblood Hall election judge Brian Spears was influencing voters to vote for.

"It appalls me," she said. "I think Trueblood should be disqualified. There were too many mistakes. It was run unprofes-sionally and I really don't Lunsford said she witnessed seven violations, including allegedly hearing election judge Brian Spears tell voters, both after being asked and voluntari-ly, that Mike Ruta was endorsed by the Progress Party. She also allegedly saw Spears forward various names to voters for write-in student trustee candi-

During the ballot count, one ballot contained one of those Lunsford also says she witnessed judges allow advertising at the tables while voters were casting their ballots. In addition the Shakedown Party poll-watcher saw one election judge tell a voter to "vote for the Party." Finally, Lunsford alleges that Spears and his partner were distributing Brush Towers ballots to Neely Hall residents. Lunsford said this continued until a voter told the election judge that Neely Hall is in fact part of University Park. Willis

Reynolds, Shakedown party candidate, was present during one hour of Lunsford's poll-watching and says he also witnessed Spears telling voters that Ruta was endorsed by the Progress Party. He also said that Brush Towers ballots were given to Neely Hall residents

Under election rules election judges cannot be affiliated with any party and cannot influence voters. Student trustee candidates cannot be on a party ticket. Spears says he did not try to influence voters for Ruta and was surprised and angered by the allegations.

"I never said to vote for him (Ruta)," he said, "In fact, I didn't vote for him. I never, whatsoever influenced voters, and I'm very upset about this whole

Spears said he was working as an election judge as part of a community service requirement as a Delta Sigma Phi piedge. He also said that he did answer a question from a student asking why no party affiliation was listed with trustee candidates on the He said he responded that the trustee candidates were not officially part of any party. In addition, Spears said, he was baited by three unidentified women who asked him "who they should vote for." Spears said he did not respond to the questions.

"I've got a lot of friends in Southern Illinois that are very supportive, and they believe in what I've done. We've graduated players. We've got players playing in the NBA. We've made money in the program."

Things quieted down until this past week, when various media reports had Herrin leaving the program April 6 or 7. The official announcement was expected to come April 8, but Saiuki fans were left in the dark again when the press conference was rescheduled one hour before it was set to begin.

The official resignation came Friday morning, and it was a fitting conclusion to a situation all would like to forget. Herrin was late for the press conference, and then when he did show up, he left without answer ing questions. Hart was left to pick up the pieces.

Hunt for new head coach underway

The quest for Rich Herrin's replacement began, fittingly enough, on Easter

SIUC Athletic Director Jim Hart has begun his first search for a men's basketball coach since taking over the position in 1988. And Hart's search will be much like children searching for the Easter egg filled with the ultimate prize on Easter

Herrin leaves the program in good shape compared to what it was when he came 13 years ago. The squad loses seniors Shane Hawkins and Rashad Tucker but returns a solid nucleus in senior Monte Jenkins and juniors Chris Thunell and Derrick Tilmon. SIUC struggled to a 14-16 record this season, but the Salukis have a good start to build on for Now Hart must get down to serious business and soon. Watching the head coach leave during the most important recruiting period of the year is bad enough without compounding the prob-lem by waiting until June to name a new coach.

First, let's get to the coaching possibilities. Many names have floated around since the time Herrin's future as coach was first called into question last July. Centralia's Rick Moss has already thrown his name into the hat. For critics who have grown weary of the talk of hir-ing another high school head coach, Moss is not the answer. But Moss, who helped lead Centralia to the Class AA state tournament in March, is not your ordinary high school coach after spending time under Dr. Tom Davis at the University of Iowa and coaching former Saluki and Hawkeye guard Paul Lusk in the early 1000-

Other names include two former Herrin assistants - Iowa State University assistant Sam Weaver and University of Illinois assistant Robert McCullum. Both would be good choices after proving themselves as quality Division I assis-tants, much like Illinois State's Kevin Stallings did under Roy Williams at

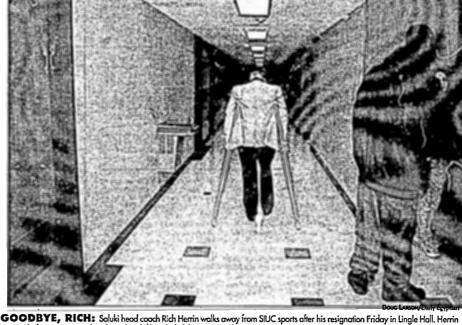

The biggest name floating around is former Michigan coach Steve Fisher. It might sound silly, but it is not totally out of the question. Fisher was raised in Herrin, and after being fired from Michigan before this season, he has reportedly moved back to the area. etroit Pistons assistant coach John Hammond, a graduate of nearby Greenville College in 1976, has been mentioned as well.

These are just a few of the names, but there are others who deserve a look. If -Stallings leaves Illinois State, former North Carolina star and Redbird assistant King Rice could be available. Like Stallings, Rice has learned under a suc-cessful system. He also has recruiting ties that could only benefit the program.

Regardless of who gets the job, money will be an issue. In Fisher's case, it may be the biggest deciding factor. Rich Herrin made $102,000 this year, and while that is definitely not chicken scratch, Fisher made much more than that Money will even be an issue for the Division I assistants looking at SIUC. That puts the pressure on Hart, who has GOODBYE, RICH: Saluki head coach Rich Herrin walks away from SIUC sports after his resignation Friday in Lingle Hall. Herrin resigned after 13 years as head coach, which included three trips to the NCAA tournament.

RYAN KEITH

The dismissal of Rich Herrin as SIUC men's basketball coach has raised a few eye-brows and done nothing to promote the University.

In a process that started last June, both Herrin and SIUC Athletic Director Jim Hart managed to turn what was supposed to be Herrin's swan song into a circus, with Herrin balancing delicately on the tightrope.

Analysis

The 10-month debacle ended with Herrin's resignation, and even that was done in a way both sides would like to change. Herrin handed in his resignation Friday after being asked to do so by Hart earlier in the week.

"I have to tell you that it's not been an easy situation, talking about this with Rich through the months," Hart said. "And there's been no secret that we've been talking about this for a long time. We wanted the best possible sce-nario for Rich and to say thanks for many years of great service and a great basketball team through the years."

No, the situation that began July 22 was not anywhere close to being easy. After meeting with Chancellor Don Beggs, Hart announced Herrin's contract was being reworked from its original rollover status.
"While the University will have no obligation to reconsider this decision, should the men's basketball team have a winning season in the 1997-98 school year, I will reconsider this decision," Hart stated in a press release. "My agreement to reconsider should the men's basketball team have a winning season in no way guarantees what the outcome of such reconsideration might be."

The announcement came as a surprise to nearly everyone, including Herrin.

"I was really surprised, and I only found out when Chancellor Beggs told me," Herrin said. "Hart never even talked to me, and then

But instead of keeping the negotiation process in private, both Herrin and Hart went public with an announcement in November, that Herrin's contract was being restored to its original status with one wrinkle - it would still be evaluated after the season.

"It's evaluated at the end of the year just like everybody," Hart said in November. "It would be safe to say that it will probably be scrutinized a little bit more so than most because it's such a visible sport and it means so much for our program for it to be success-

Hard work pays off for SIUC tennis sensation

TOP MARK: Women's tennis star's only expectation was to play consistently; glad to be recognized with top players.

> PAUL WLEKLINSKI DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

When SIUC senior Sanem Berksoy came to the United States as an exchange student in 1993, she had no idea what the next five years had in store for her.

Berksoy came to the United States as an exchange student at East Moline United Township High School in East Moline from Istanbui, Turkey. In her senior year at East Moline, Berksoy placed seventh in the 1993 ranked No. 2 in the 18-and-under age group. The property of the party of th

After an easy transition from club tennis in Turkey to a more team-oriented style in the United States, Berksoy was given the oppor-tunity to further her education and continue playing tennis at SIUC.

"When I came to visit, I met the players and the coach. I liked the team," Berksoy said. "Plus they had the program [engineering] I wanted."

In almost four years at SIUC, Berksoy has raked in numerous academic and athletic raked in numerous academic and athietic awards. One of her greatest achievements on the court came Sunday against Wichita State University as she became the all-time winningest women's tennis player at SIUC, tying Maureen Harney with 119 career singles vic-

"I didn't have much expectations when I came here," Berksoy said. "This [tying the record] wasn't expected. I worked hard over the years, so it's an honor to be recognized with the top players ever to play here."

Berksoy's only expectations after her arrival at SIUC was to play consistently and continue improving throughout each match. She has done just that in becoming the only Saluki ever to post turee 30-win seasons.

Along with her all-time career victories record, Berksoy's career record of 119-39 places her third all-time career winning per-praces are time another exerce withing per-centage with a .752 mark.

Now that Berksoy has tied the record for most career victories, she will attempt to sur-pass Maureen Harney to become the sole record holder as the Salukis face the University of Evansville today in Evansville,

"Tennis has always been individual sport for me," Berksoy said. "I've learned that the team performance is more important, and I have to do what I can to help the team."

Topping her performance on the tennis courts, Berksoy has excelled even higher in
