Task force proposes SIUC image pampering

Marketing makeover just what the doctor ordered, group suggests

JENNIFER WIG
DAILY EGYPTIAN

In another effort to improve SIUC's image, a marketing and image task force has outlined 11 goals, including increasing tuition.

The task force presented its report Tuesday to the SIU Board of Trustees. During the meeting, interim Chancellor John Jackson proposed increasing tuition by 5 percent during the 2002-2003 school year.

The task force report states that SIUC's "tuition and fees" should be roughly equal to the University of Illinois-Chicago or second in the state, reflecting our academic and research status.

"Increasing tuition is one of 11 goals proposed by the task force, most of which focus on organizing a central advertising program at SIUC," Jackson said. "The task force, initiated in 1999 by Jackson, consists of 17 administrative and faculty members.

Jackson initiated the organization because he said he has been on this campus long enough to know the University has an image problem.

"I've been in various positions where I've thought and worried about SIUC's image," Jackson said. "When I became interim chancellor, I decided we needed to do something about it."

For the past 18 months, the group has been working on research and solutions to the image problem, meeting monthly to first identify specific issues and then to produce solutions.

The first goal is to establish a true integrated marketing program at SIUC, which means University officials plan to centralize recruitment efforts. Right now, the University's public affairs department does much of the advertising, but little is done to recruit students to SIUC.

Many of the goals follow this main objective, establishing a marketing campaign with a director, budget and an advertising agency. The campaign will incorporate electronic marketing such as the Internet and a positioning statement, or slogan, to centralize a campaign theme.

Recent SIUC chancellor search whittled to 3 prospects

Five finalists for the position of SIUC chancellor were selected by the Chancellor Search Advisory Committee and submitted to SIU President James Walker Tuesday.

From that list, Walker will choose three candidates, one of whom could be on campus as early as Friday. Walker will not release the names until he selects the finalists for the position.

Kaiser said the search committee spoke to Walker about early June. The search committee will have about four hours to determine the finalists. Kaiser said he hopes the committee will select the finalists by the end of the week.

Walker will then choose three candidates to present to the chancellor search committee, and the committee will select the chancellor.

The candidates were selected by the chancellor search committee from a pool of applicants.

The chancellor search committee was appointed by President James Walker and includes five members: faculty member Richard Brown, student representative Dokka Dejean, staff member Gary Schilimyo, Carbondale Representative William Delany and Carbondale Representative William Delany.

The chancellor search committee will interview the finalists and select the chancellor by the end of the week.

The prospective new owner and the current owner of Carboz vehemently deny a report that the purchase of Carboz has fallen through.

Current owner Edw*ard Willmerring, of St. Louis, said he is the full owner of the business and always has been, which contradicts what Connie Howard told the DAILY EGYPTIAN Monday.

"The deal is still on," Willmerring said.

Thomas Zitka, prospective purchaser of Carboz, said he is hopeful the financing will be completed by the end of the week. Zitka is co-owner of Panos Group Inc. which currently owns an establishment in Macomb.

Mo. commission proposes bar regulations

Joe Alovio
The Mankato (Minn.) Free Press

(U-WIRE) COLUMBIA, Mo. — The Columbia Substances Abuse Advisory Commission, an advisory group to the City Council, has drafted a proposed 148-word amendment aimed at curtailing binge drinking.

The proposal would prohibit Columbia businesses from offering free alcoholic beverages or free refills. A 1-ounce shot, 5 ounces of wine or 12 ounces of beer for less than $1.75 cents if purchased in bulk, such as pitchers, would also be prohibited. There would also be a complete banning of drinking games and alcoholic beverages sold in public areas, unless sold in the course of a meal. The full text of the amendment is included in the price of the soft drink.

The commission feels excessively underpriced drink specials such as penny pitches, quarter drafts and bottomless cups encourage binge drinking, said Commissioner Phil Steinhaus, who selects the members of the commission. "Right now, the proposal is submitted in response to the City Council. The council decides what to do with it now."

People who take advantage of such drink specials aren't necessarily binge drinkers, said Nick Dow, general manager of Big 12 Bar and Grill on Nifong Boulevard.

Fine Arts fee referendum up for vote

The Fine Arts fee student referendum will be up for vote today, asking students if they will support a $5.50-per-semester increase to the Student Activity fee.

The fee, supported by the colleges of Applied Sciences and Arts, Liberal Arts and Mass Communication and Media Arts, would be utilized to provide funding that would support enhanced cultural activities in the fine and performing arts.

The purpose of the fee would be to bring architects, actors, artists, designers, composers, critics, scholars, filmmakers, photographers, painters, writers and philosophers to the University.

Students, faculty, administrators and civil servants will trek to Springfield today to rally support from state legislators for the budget. Gov. George Ryan proposed the fee.

Approximately 80 students will travel by bus from SIUC to the state capital. The three-hour trip will bring students face-to-face with the lawmakers who will ultimately decide the fate of the University's funding.

Scott Kaiser, spokesman for the president, said legislation need to see faculty, staff and students face-to-face with the lawmakers who will ultimately decide the fate of the University's funding.

He said there will be approximately 100 to 120 participants from SIUC to gather at both the Illinois State Capitol and the Edwardsville campus.

The fine arts fee is intended to help fund the Office of Student Development.

"It helps to put a personal face on the University," Kaiser said.

Today's the day for USG election

Recruitment Center added as polling place at last minute, Freedom Party hopes to offer students alternatives in senate candidates

Students voting in today's Undergraduate Student Government election will be faced with a choice of four presidential candidates, 14 senatorial candidates and a referendum asking what grade point average is needed to be in student government.

The USG ballot will not be the only one students will have to decide on. A second ballot concerns the election of the student trustee and a third ballot is the referendum concerning the Fine Arts fee increase proposal.

Students may cast their votes at the Recruitment Center or the Student Center, as well as at least 18 polling places in the residence halls.

The presidential candidates are the Southern Party's USG Senator Bill Archer, the Renaissance Party's USG Senator Peter Normand and the Renewal Party's Michael Perry.

Normand wants to reorganize the USG funding allocation process by making each Registered Student Organization's approval necessary in addition to simply a majority of voting. He plans to include more transparency in handling of funds, as well as evaluations of well-organized use of allocated monies.

Normand supports the rights of the disabled student to assume hiring, providing better access to buildings and resources, as well as athletic programs.

Normand thinks a major problem with USG reside within the student government office. He supports the reorganization of the purpose of the office, eliminating waste and utilizing a more efficient office staff program.

"We are not backing any presidential candidate as a party," Climo said. "All of the party members have their own personal choice. This shows our diversity and unity.

"We also do not support write-in candidates," Kaiser said. "Our biggest thing is organization and the eliminating the past mistakes and the supposed corruption," Kaiser said. "We want integrity in the administration and the elimination of mistakes and the supposed corruption." Kaiser said.

USG elections crucial to undergraduates’ future

My Nammo

by Tommy Curry

syta_arwa@hotmail.com

Results from last year’s Undergraduate Student Government election were abysmally low, to say the least. Out of an undergraduate enrollment of about 18,000, only about 1,400 students voted. This translates to about an 8 percent voter turnout.

What makes the turnout even more disturbing is that USG is an organization that can have a tremendous impact on a student’s life, a potential fortune that has not been realized in the recent past.

Young people are constantly criticized for being politically apathetic; they rationalize the low turnout by saying national issues don’t affect them, or their vote doesn’t count. And while the Daily Egyptian has always strongly encouraged students to take part in national and state elections, and don’t think those excuses hold much water, they definitely don’t apply to the USG election today.

USG affects each and every one of us. It appoints representatives to campus-wide committees that do everything from name buildings on campus to help choose the new chancellor. They are the ones who, after all, have a voice which they feel truly represents the diverse and unique population on campus.

Moreover, with an effective and productive USG in place, students could have a representative body in place where they would go for redress of their problems, a student government that could initiate events and policies for campus.

Unfortunately for the students, USG has not made much headway to change the government organization.

We didn’t even know until last week who the legitimate candidates were. That’s a sad testament to the way USG runs its business. One week is not nearly enough time for the candidates to campaign, to let students know who they are and what they stand for.

But elections are typically a time when votes are at their peak, and in this new. This is the perfect time to let USG know that the status quo is not good enough, and we want representation that, at the very least, can run a decent, fair election.

We endorse Michael Perry in Tuesday’s editorial because we think he’s the right candidate to bring credibility and integrity back to USG. Reluctantly, incumbent Bill Archer and his candidates will have a large turnout count.

Most people on his ticket are Greek, and historically, Greeks turn out in large numbers for one of their own. Other groups on campus need to have a voice as well, to keep USG from being the clique-controlled organization for which it is so well-known. It is our responsibility to participate in the process and make the electoral decision a campus-wide one, and not just that of a select group.

Please go vote today. There are ample locations on campus to do so. All it takes is a simple swipe of your student ID and a couple minutes of your time to ensure that the students truly choose who represents them at SIUC.

U. of Illinois mascot under fire again

U.S. Commission on Civil Rights calls for the end of Native American imagery in non-native college mascots

EMILY OSTERDORF, DAILY EDITION

Debate about the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign's mascot, Chief Illiniwek, has roused response in a U.S. Commission on Civil Rights event this Friday.

The statement calls for the end of the use of Native American imagery and nicknames as sports symbols by non-Native universities.

The document puts pressure on the University of Illinois, which has been caught up with controversy over the propriety of Chief Illiniwek for more than a decade.

Carol Spindel, professor of English at UIUC and author of the 2000 book, Dashing at Halftime: Sports and the Controversy Over American Indian Mascots, said on her campus, the mascot is "persistent and pervasive.

Critics of Illiniwek say the representation is disrespectful. The mascot is depicted by a student who dances during halftime of football and basketball games with a painted face and dressed in a costume and headdress of the Oglala Lakota Sioux tribe. Others insist that the 75-year-old mascot is an important element of UI's tradition.

The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights statement is the organization's first formal recognition on the use of Native American mascots, and although it is not a legal document, it has spurred attention from the U of I Board of Trustees, which has formed a committee to study the issue. A member of this committee will be announced at the board's May 23 meeting.

UI Board of Trustees Chair Molly D'Exposito said that it was inappropriate for the UI board to comment on what action the U of I board should take on this issue.

"They have a difficult decision to make," D'Exposito said. "It's a balancing act. They will make the best decision for their university.

"Part of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights statement reads, "Schools have the responsibility to educate their students; they should not use their influence to perpetuate misrepresentations of any race or people... The elimination of Native American nicknames and images as sports mascots will benefit not only Native Americans, but all Americans. The elimination of stereotypes will make room for education about real Indian people, current Native American issues and the rich variety of American Indians in our country."

Throughout the years, many universities and colleges across the nation have adopted new mascot names that would seem less offensive. The Dartmouth University "Indians" became the "Big Green," Oklahoma City University became the "Stars" after being the "Chiefs," and the St. John's University of New York adopted the name "Redmen" instead of "Redskins.

"Chief Illiniwek needs to choose a new team name and symbol to unify the campus," Spindel said. "Nothing is being gained by years of foot-dragging.

Study shows large vans more likely to roll during an accident

15-passenger vans involved in five fatal collegiate accidents since '99

ANDREA DONALDSON, DAILY EDITION

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration issued a study last week finding that having 10 or more people in a 15-passenger van—which are often used by Registered Student Organizations and sports teams—makes such vehicles nearly three times more likely to roll over.

The study, which was prompted by the number of fatal accidents involving college athletes in the past two years, found that five athletes have been killed in five separate accidents involving 15-passenger vans across the country.

The Traffic Safety report found that vans with less than five passengers have about a 12 percent chance of rolling during a crash, while a van with 10 to 15 passengers has about a 29 percent chance of flipping over.

Cathy Hager, associate director of finance, said SIUC has not experienced these types of accidents in the last 15 years, but Travel Services plans to meet with legal counsel and University Risk Management to see if any changes need to be made.

"Any kind of accidents, in the vans, were just events," she said.

During last fiscal year, 700 trips were taken in the SIUC fleet and outside vendors by RSOs, sports teams and other groups. Hager said when groups travel in the SIUC fleet, the driver must be 18 years old, have a valid driver's license and be a University employee on payroll. Outside vendors, which are often used by RSOs, have the same requirements with the exception that the driver must be 21 years old.

Though SIUC has been fortunate, the study found that the 15-passenger vans are a dangerous risk.

Former civil rights activist to speak on practical math instruction

MATT BRADSHAW, DAILY EDITION

Robert Moses worked in the Civil Rights movement in the 1960s with the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee. Thursday he will lecture at SIUC about a different organizing mission—teaching math to youth.

Moses, who will be giving his lecture at 7 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium, began his professional career with the SNCC. He spent four years in the south working on the Civil Rights movement, but now his focus is on today's youth.

"Back then, we were young and they were the adult population. Now it's reversed," he said. "As adults ourselves, we're trying to get the youth to demand their education." Moses insists the young people need to be able to understand computers, so students will be better suited to the future.

"The technology in the '90s was industrial technology, reading and writing," Moses said. "Since then, we've had a technological shift into information technology.

Through the 1970s and 1980s the Algebra Project emerged. This was a project that Moses developed the concept for when he discovered his daughter was being taught math inadequately for her time. The Algebra Project involves students using real life situations as a basis for understanding mathematics.

"As adults, we're trying to get the youth to understand their education," Moses said.

After a bachelor's degree from New York University, and a master's from Harvard, Moses received his master's in philosophy from Harvard. He taught mathematics at Hunter College in New York City from 1958 to 1961.
Renn, an assistant professor in the Department of Education and Administration at SIUC, is interested in bias, stereotyping and the day-to-day operations of the college environment.

The feeling of belonging is important for retention and getting a good education. You don’t want to be at school for four years and then not feel like you belong,” Renn said.

At universities across the United States, students tend to be grouped by monochromatic groups.

“We look at people by how they look, but these people’s heritage is not exactly how they look,” Renn said. She is doing her research to find if there are appropriate programs and services for these students and if there are academic and social opportunities.

Renn began her research as a graduate student in 1996 at Brown University where she was working as a student assistant for a professor. She was involved with a group of students about interracial dating, and turned the discussion into a project. She interviewed students at three different universities in the Midwest, then decided to come to SIUC to study these matters in a rural, Midwest environment.

The research is still under way, and Renn is searching for willing participants to share their experiences. After her research is complete, Renn hopes to travel to the South and research students at a historically black university. Research has been done on this topic in the past, and in the Midwest, and Renn is happy that SIUC is supporting her.

She received a faculty grant from the Office of Research Development and Administration to get her in finding out more about the college experiences of biasional and multiracial students.

Upon completion of her research, Renn plans to compare the results from each of the countries, because racial dynamics are different in different parts of the country. She is publishing articles, and hopes to write a book about her findings within the next few years. She will not discuss some details about the research, because Renn does not want future participants to be influenced.

“Welcome students are at campuses seem to affect how students of multiracial students’ college experiences,” Renn said.

Moses then decided to direct the Mississippi project of SNCC. Between 1982 and 1987 Moses developed the concept for the Algebra Project while volunteering to teach math at the 25th Street King Elementary School in Cambridge.

At Greg Budzban, assistant professor in mathematics, who helped bring Moses to SIUC, said the school system should not eliminate the possibility of a career in science and math by teaching children because of teaching that excludes some students at the junior high and high school levels. He said Moses echoes this philosophy.

Moses was the winner of the 2000 Heinz Award, given by the Heinz family foundation, which honors individuals who have developed and implemented new programs improving human condition. This also caught Budzban’s eye as a reason to try to bring Moses to SIUC.

“Here’s someone from a Civil Rights background saying what we’ve been saying about the math and science community for a long time,” Budzban said. “The issue of math literacy in the population in general has to be considered one of the most important issues in education in the next 20 years.”

not too have any major incidents, the University of Tennessee at Martin has been faced with such a situation. On March 28, the baseball team was traveling back to Martin from a trip that included a game and a tractor trailer. Nine athletes, as well as coach Boa Carras, were injured in what is becoming a common trend.

Lee Wilmot, sports information director at the university, said the baseball team now travels by charter bus.

“The main thing that came out of this situation is that our baseball team doesn’t travel by van anymore,” said Renn. “I’m glad that it is easier to have professional bus drivers instead of students or coaches.

Many Jeffery, head coach of MSU men’s basketball team, said the family is thankful for the support of the van. She described a time when the team was traveling in Louisville, Ky., on snow, and ice and almost rear-ended a tractor trailer in the mud. “The van is kind of scary, I mean they are fairly dangerous to have around,” she said. “If the weather is bad, I feel safe in them.”

She said her team has never traveled with more than eight players at a time, but added that she would feel safer if they had a professional driver.

Inter-Greek Council presents Greek awards

STACEY ROBINSON

The Greek Millennium Initiative was designed to bring students closer together and to promote community involvement. This year, the Greek Awards were presented to recognize the hard work and dedication of SIU's Greek organizations. The awards were given to 11 Greek organizations for their contributions to the Greek community throughout the year. The awards include the Greek Spirit Award and the Greek Achievement Award. The Greek Spirit Award recognizes organizations that have been active in the community. The Greek Achievement Award recognizes the success and accomplishments of the Greek community. The awardees were selected by the Inter-Greek Council based on their contributions to the Greek community.

Activists say anti-abortion website encourages violence

Megan Cram
Independent Free Press

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (U-Wire) - The line between freedom of speech and public safety concern is an ongoing court battle on an anti-abortion website where some sites encourage violence against doctors who perform the medical procedure.

A group of Florida residents on March 14 declared a verdict that had awarded Planned Parenthood $950 million in a federal suit against a website, called the "Nuremberg Files," that lists the names and addresses of abortion providers.

"If those doctors are killed or wounded, a black face appears over their names on the site," the site also describes the personal stories of women who have died from abortion and also shows graphic pictures of aborted fetuses. Anti-abortion activists said in court they have the right to portray abortion doctors as "baby butchers" on their website. The court agreed, saying the site is protected by the First Amendment.

That ruling had no effect on the existence of the site, which lists the personal information of American abortion providers. But many anti-abortion groups declared the verdict had reversed the Nuremberg File's threat to the public safety and support for abortion providers.

"It generally would not go to an obstetrician who does abortions, because I want my doctor to care about the sanctity of life—especially at the life of my child," Bar said. "But if we could have the public supported in this area, I don't think the court would see a statistically significant increase in violence against abortion providers.

"I don't think there is one thing that is required to stop abortion," he said. "It's not just a one-two punch. It will happen after a, perhaps a little less violent, way to stop abortion."

The website is difficult to use because the ingredients of violence are constantly changing, said the court judge.

"I don't think we're going to an obstetrician who does abortions, because I want my doctor to care about the sanctity of life—especially at the life of my child," Bar said. "But if we could have the public supported in this area, I don't think the court would see a statistically significant increase in violence against abortion providers."

"We will be supportive in this area, I don't think the court would see a statistically significant increase in violence against abortion providers."

"This is a hard case, but we've had to consider the state without a public information that was already published."

Legislation tries to protect students from credit card debt

TODD PUPITTO
Chronicle Times

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (U-Wire) -- College students may soon have the U.S. government as their ally in the battle against credit card debt.

Congresswoman Louise Slaughter (D-N.Y.), whose constituents hail from Monroe County, introduced the bipartisan College Student Credit Card Protection Act (H.R.184) March 28.

The proposed bill would limit the available credit line from a credit card company and force students to sign up for a credit card with little or no income if the student does not have a co-signer for the card. It would also require parents who co-sign to sign in writing to any and all increases in the credit limit.

The bill is seen as a way for students to educate themselves on the current onslaught of credit card solicitations that have caused many to declare themselves bankrupt.

"What does it take for a college student to get a credit card? It turns out the credit card companies are practically giving them away - by the law of free T-shirts and mugs - with little anxiety of a student's ability to repay their debt," Slaughter said in an interview during a Senate hearing on the bill on the floor of the House of Representatives. "As a result, a lot of college students end up taking on a credit card debt inexperienced management."

American Express is one example of a credit card company that uses enticing features such as discounts on small items and offers to persuade college students to sign up for their card.

American Express spokeswoman Monica Bumgarner said in an article in the Democrat and Chronicle that the company does not market on campus, "but she added that the company does have a plan in place to help students use their cards responsibly."

Slaughter and Visa also follow similar strategies.

Slaughter told those in attendance during her introductory statement that close to one in 10 undergraduates owe more than $10,000 in credit card debt. "The number of bankruptcies among individuals under the age of 25 have nearly quadrupled in the last five years," Slaughter said.

A research study done by Harvard law professor and bankruptcy expert Elizabeth Warren in 1999 documented a 51 percent increase in the number of bankruptcies among individuals aged 18 to 24 for bankruptcy since 1991.

"Credit card debt is a terrible thing. We lose more students to credit card debt than to domestic violence," Slaughter said, quoting John Simpson, a Indiana University scholar.

"Following Slaughter's lead, New York State Senator George Maziarz (R-Corning Thomas) scheduled a public forum Tuesday at SUNY Brockport to discuss legislation to ban the marketing of credit cards on SUNY and CUNY campuses across the state.

"Currently, there is no statute prohibiting a state-financed institution from marketing credit cards," Maziarz said in a press release. "The purpose of this legislation is to mitigate the chance of students overwhelming their own resources and to remove SUNY and CUNY from participating in the dangerous precedent of teaching students how to spend money they do not have."

New York is among a handful of states considering legislation that would create rules governing credit card solicitation on campus.

Maziarz's bill would not affect private universities such as UR, because those universities have already used a voluntary attempt to regulate credit card solicitation in their own ways.

Task force reviews U.-Cal. system crime statistics

ROBERT SLOSONA
DAILY BRUIN

LOS ANGELES (U-Wire) -- A task force commissioned by the University of California at Los Angeles Friday that, though there is much room for improvement, past underreporting of violent crimes has improved and the task force recommended the UC record varying crime definitions.

Following its investigation of UC crimes statistics, the task force recommended the UC record varying crime definitions in the FBI's California Penal and Clery Act codes.

The task force also recommended that the UC develop a uniform format for reporting UC crimes statistics, and provide training to the police and schools on the reporting program and information exchange for all campuses.

Overall, the task force found well-intended efforts in reporting statistics.

"Clearly on campus intent was to misled parents and students about the safety of the campuses," said Michael Reese, assistant vice president of strategic communications for the UC Office of the President.

The task force, which includes UCLA's Chief of Police Clarence Chapman, was formed in response to articles published September 2000 by The New York Times.

The articles alleged the UC system underreported crime statistics, which violated the Clery Act, formerly known as the Campus Security Act.

Passed by Congress in 1990, the law was named in memory of Jeanne Clery, a Lehigh University student who was raped and murdered on her campus in 1986.

Amendments made to the act in 1998 expanded campus responsibilities for recording crime statistics, and increased the number of people whom colleges must collect statistics, and revised reporting methods and deadlines.

"These amendments also increased the scope of crimes included in the statistics, such as murder, rape, offenses and hate crimes," Nance Greenstein, director of police community services for UCPD, said UCLA has been in compliance with the act.

State task force fights Internet pedophiles successfully

ADAM JADHAV

DAILY ILLINI

(U-WIRE) CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Friday’s arrest of a Rantoul man was the latest move by the Illinois Internet Child Exploitation Task Force to fight Internet-related sex crimes.

Terry Lee Goeden, 32, was apprehended in the parking lot of an Urbana church where, officials believe, he intended to meet a 14-year-old girl for sex. Instead, Goeden found members of the task force and the Champaign County Sheriff’s Office.

The sheriff’s office has worked with the task force since its inception in 1997. Members of the task force monitor chatrooms on the Internet looking for people who show intentions of meeting children for sex. Officers then engage suspects in conversation, pretending to be minors.

"You have an officer that’s online posing as a child," said Keith Chaval, coordinator of the task force. "They’ll be just hanging out in chatrooms on the Internet. What they find happening is that pedophiles will start reaching out to them and asking kids to do stuff." Officers must be careful to avoid entrapment as they converse with a suspect. Doug Timmerman, a local criminal attorney, said filing charges of entrapment against law enforcement officers could be a legitimate defense, depending on the circumstances.

"If the cop originates the idea and induces someone into conduct that is criminal, then maybe you can call it entrapment," Timmerman said. Chaval said in all cases he’s handled, the suspects are very forthright about their intentions. He said that conversations are always initiated by the suspect.

"In those cases, the pedophiles are so aggressive," Chaval said. "There’s no question in whose mind the criminal intent forms." Chaval said the task force has made more than 75 arrests since 1997, each of which has been successful. He said only one case has gone to trial, and no one has ever used entrapment as a defense.
U. Idaho's Kappa Sigma fraternity forced to go dry after violation

From Staff Reports
Isar Aragonez

MOSCOW, Idaho (U-Wire) -- The Idaho Fraternity Council of the University of Idaho suspended the Kappa Sigma house to go dry until 2001 Fall semester after members were involved in a Vandal Friday Rush violation.

The suspension of the house took Vandal Friday guests to an off-campus event where alcohol was served.

According to IPC policy, every Rush event must be dry. "In accordance with the Idaho state law, alcoholic beverages may not be consumed or possessed by persons under the legal drinking age while on chapter property, in leased facilities or at any chapter sponsored event.

Forfeited house may be reundergo by active chapter members of legal drinking age in chapter properties or at any chapter sponsored event.

The sanctions require that Kappa Sigma go dry as of Friday night, according to IPC President Ivan Parker. The house will continue to be dry until the first of school fall semester of 2001.

After that, members will be allowed to purchase alcohol on property but may not sponsor or co-sponsor any activity involving alcohol. The Kappa Sigma house will be allowed to continue to participate in all other functions.

Mills sprinting ahead

Men's track sophomore provisionally qualified for nationals, with a school record in his sights and he's not even close to being done yet.

JOSEPH D. JOHNSON

One-tenth of a second can be an eternity in sprinting and it's all that stands between Kevin Mills and the SIU record in the 100-meter dash.

Mills recognizes the honor, but he's got his mind on other things. The sophomore sprinter from Bethel, Tobago, matched a NCAA provisional qualifying time of 10.34 seconds in the 100-meter dash earlier this week at SIU. It gives him hope.

"I feel like I'm on the verge," said Mills, a junior from Tobago. "I'm not even close to being done yet."

Mills can visualize the record close at hand, but only wants to improve himself in technique and then reap the rewards.

"I just want to practice prior to his big run," said Mills. "It's all about confidence."

Mills credited the running program set up by German and head coach Cameron Wright as an essential ingredient to his success.

"This program [nothing new]," said German. "It's just the implementation of technique, mechanics and power."

Mills is looking forward to the possibility of competing in the Trinidad and Tobago National Championships in early July. Mills homesteaded to Tobago in the southernmost Caribbean Island, right off the shores of Venezuela.

"If I'm running this way with no injuries and with the training program I'm on right now, I should have a pretty good chance," said Mills.

Mills transferred to SIU from Lindenwood University in Missouri, where he gained All-American status as a freshmen.

"Coach German is an excellent coach," said Mills. "I owe a lot to this training program."

Mills also spoke highly of the assistant coaches on the track staff from Lindenwood.

"I feel like SIU will be more improved with Mills as an integral part of the future for Saluki track and field," said Mills.

"He's a young kid and he's going to get a lot better," said Wright. "We'll recruit a lot of people around him.

"He's the kind of kid you want to build a program around."

Men's tennis looks for second conference win

Salukis battle Evansville today in Missouri Valley Conference action at University Courts

CLINT HAYING

The Saluki men's tennis team begins the first of four home matches of the season this weekend at the Missouri State University of Evansville at the University Courts.

The Salukis (2-11, 1-4) look to stay hot this Sunday, May 6th, when they face the Aces (1-4) for the first time in the Valley Division building momentum for the rest of this week's matches.

First-year head coach Mills Jeffery anticipates a tough meeting with the Aces, citing doubling play as being the key to which of these similar teams pull it out.

"We've struggled to win the double point all season," said Mills. "That's the double point can be the turn."

The Salukis and Aces both won one of their doubles matches against nationally ranked Illinois State University.

Jeffery believes confidence is one thing the Salukis lack, according to Mills.

"I said, 'Maybe it's the best for both people."

"Usually it takes a junior-college kid somewhere between two and three years to get his confidence and then they can adjust to the level. It seemed like Tashay could just do it. I'm disappointed because I wanted him to be successful. I think he has a lot of talent. At the same time, if he's demanding of himself and takes care of business, he can take care of business, so we have to move forward.

"Having him on the team first junior college to Division I basketball was difficult.

"At first, there was a lot of bad experiences. He's had a hard time to play a free-paced basketball. With the system we had here at Southern Illinois, it was more structured. I just didn't adjust to it as fast as I thought I would."

"I'm hoping we can find him a school back in Texas for him so he can continue to go to college and finish his degree and play basketball and then be closer to his family."

While USI's season was enough to put out a good season, Mills Jeffery is looking forward to the possibility of competing at SIU.

"I was doing for my brother and sister," said Mills Jeffery. "If I'm going to go to another school, I'm done."

While the decision was a tough one to put out a good reason, Mills Jeffery is looking to move forward. Mills Jeffery is looking to move forward with his team.

"It's pretty tough if you're the go up against nationally ranked teams," Jeffery said. "They should've played better, but a win against Evansville will really help in building confidence."

SALUKI SPORTS NOTES

Hiller named MVC Women's Golfer of the Week

Junior Alison Hiller has been named the Missouri Valley Conference Golfer of the Week for shooting a three-round score of 240 at the Indiana Invitational April 7-8 in Bloomington, Ind.

Poliquin and Belles named MVC Track Athletes of the Week

Senior Caryn Poliquin and freshman Nia Belles were named Missouri Valley Conference Track and Field Athletes of the Week by the Conference.

Poliquin, a runner, took "Field Athlete" honors for the third time in five meets while Belles, a distance runner, won the "Track Athlete" award for her first-place finish in the 800-meter run.

And down the home stretch they come.

With six sharp at-bats, the Salukis are one home run away from getting to within four games of the top-seeded team in the Valley in Jamie Davidson (.382 avg.) and Jessica Huff (.379 avg.), but that didn’t matter two and a half weeks ago when Saluki pitcher Erin Stremsterfer allowed just one ball to be hit out of the infield.

The Purple Aces have a pair of top-notch pitchers as well, though, Maggie Rose (0.96 ERA) and Lisa Conte (1.17 ERA) rank second and third in the league in ERA respectively, trailing only Stremsterfer.

SIU hit Crammond in the last matchup, and cued out hit 11 hit and hit a two on Monday, evincing the Salukis ca-chic, despite that theyrank last in the league in batting average.

"Hopefully, it will be us hitting and then not hitting, Erin shot them down last time," Rose said.

But the Salukis are still on the road (0-2) and getting not too high or too low for any opponent.

"Evansville’s an outstanding team, and what we’re going to have to do is we’re going to have to go over these and approach them knowing that they’re a good team," said Saluki head coach Kelly Beydler.

For fourteen days when SIU and Evansville met up for a single game, the Salukis escaped with a 2-1 eight inning victory, marking the first time since 1997 that SIU has won all four games in an eight-game series with in-state Division I competition.

"We haven’t taken a very good series," said senior Amanda Reznick. "It doesn’t feel like we’re winning these series like we should."

But the series was just one of the many practices remaining in between the Salukis’ season opener today and the upcoming game against Illinois State on Wednesday.

"We’ve got to approach it like we would a weekend series," Rainey said. "Since I’ve been out so long, I goin’ to be able to walk off the field in one piece is probably going to be the better team in the end."

Nelson out at third

Baseball hits the road to Capeha in Cape Girardeau, Mo., at 3 p.m. today

SIU third baseman Luke Nelson is usually one to punish baseball at the plate.

In Sunday’s 8-6 win against Illinois State University, the cable was reversed, and Neil Johnson’s wild pitch brings Nelson’s last inning.

So Nelson, with a .336 batting average, will be missed in today’s 3 p.m. matchup against Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau, Mo.

“My back is pretty sore,” Nelson said. “I’m having trouble with my back. This is going to make me take 10-15 days, and hopefully I’ll be ready for the weekend.”

SIU head coach Dan Callahan is not certain on who he has to bring back or anything.

For fourteen days, when SIU and Evansville met up for a single game, the Salukis escaped with a 2-1 eight inning victory, marking the first time since 1997 that SIU has won all four games in an eight-game series with in-state Division I competition.

One and done: Harvey headed out

Toshay Harvey leaves men's basketball team in mutual decision with head coach Bruce Weber

JAVIER SERNA

He struggled on and off the court — likely in part the result of a difficult family situation hundreds of miles from Carbondale.

And so, Toshay Harvey's decision to leave the SIU men's basketball team to move closer to his family in Texas was officially announced Tuesday.

SIU head coach Bruce Weber said that Harvey had difficulties adjusting to the Division I level, but called the departure mutual.

"When you have a team and something has to be taken care of, everyone has to do it," Weber said. "And if they don't, they have to pay the consequences. I also think some of it comes down to the fact that he has a world of problems on his shoulders."

Harvey, a Houston native, is from a fatherless home and his mother died last year. Concerned an aunt of Harvey's is taking care of his siblings in Texas. "It's all based on my family," Harvey said. "I'm going back home to be with my family. Family comes before basketball or anything else."

In recent weeks, rumors surrounding Harvey's future at SIU had surfaced. Harvey, perhaps SIU's most athletic player, hadn't been scrimmageing with the team due to the recent hiring of Kill, he said he'll probably enjoy himself, and more importantly, stay injury-free.

Football inching toward Saturday scrimmage

Running back Tom Koustos sidelined with ankle injury

Jerry Kill won't have his traditional meal of beans to enjoy the losing squad, but nonetheless the first-year Saluki football head coach insists it won't spoil the festivities.

As spring football nears an end, Kill and the Salukis welcome any SIU students and faculty, as well as the rest of the community, to bring a lawn chair to McAndrew Stadium Saturday afternoon and watch a Saluki football scrimmage.

Free hot dogs, chips and pop will be served at 3:30 and the scrimmage begins at 4.

In past years, Koustos hadn't been scrimmageing the park and blues game, where the winning team enjoys the mouth-watering taste of pork, while the losers fumigate their ankles with beans.

"I know many people want to eat those beans, so they get petty complaints," said Kill of a tradition he is hopeful of starting up next season.

But due to the recent hiring of Kill, he said he'll probably be more low-key and not too physical on Saturday. He said he would like to run about 80-to-100 plays in the controlled scrimmage.

The most notable Saluki, however, will not be on either team this spring. Star running back Tom Koustos injured his ankle Monday evening and will not return to action this spring.

"He rolled 'er up pretty good," Kill said. "We're not playing until the fall, and it would be foolish for us to get somebody badly hurt trying to show something on Saturday," Kill said.

The first-year skipper is also continuing to bring in new blood. Kill was upset about senior wideout Billy Chase, who was among two transfers that signed from Washington State University.

"I think it was miscommunication between the two of them," Kill said. "They did a lot together and he was hurtful in the way that he handled it."

Chase, who was the No. 3 receiver for Washington State this past season, wanted more playing time and opted to transfer, as did fellow transfer Deshon Wessn, a junior linbacker.

"They had two other kids that were probably going to be NFL guys, and [Chase] wasn't ready to opportunity to play all the time," Kill said. "It's a good thing they made their decision now, so you've got a spring with them."

But as far as this weekend goes, Kill just wants his team to enjoy themselves, and more importantly, stay injury-free.

"It's a more a fun thing, we're going to try to have food out there and enjoy each other and finish up on spring ball on a positive note," Kill said.
