U.S.-Backed Student Loans Set Up

Film Planned At Workshop

"Mr. Speaker of Illinois," a film about state government, will be shown today to members of the Youth World workshop.

After the film, Nicholas Ciccio, administrative assistant to the secretary of state, will discuss procedure in passage of a bill.

Other events on today's schedule are a session on parliamentary procedure, the drafting and debate of resolutions in the mock United Nations, and an address on the role of law in society by George Lewis, an attorney from Quincy.

The workshop, being attended by 67 high school students who have finished their junior year, is designed to acquaint Illinois high school students with local, state and national government.

Thursday the workshopers will discuss local government with K. Neil Thurmond, post master and mayor of Johnston City, and see slides on Viet Nam and Africa.

The workshop will close Friday with consideration of the final draft of a U. N. resolution, and a banquet speech by Afak Haydar, assistant professor of government at Illinois State University.

After the banquet, a closing meeting of the workshop General Assembly will be held.

Drinan Attending National Meeting

Bob Drinan, student body president, today is attending preconference sessions of the annual National Student Association (NSA) Congress that will run through Sept. 2 at the University of Illinois.

NSA is the national union of students which represents one and a quarter million students from 350 schools.

The meetings that Drinan is attending are in preparation for regular workshop sessions of the conference that will begin Sunday.

Other SIU delegates are Fred Zimmerman, NSA coordinator for this campus, William D. Perardi and Raymond C. Lenzi. Bob Carter and Sam Baker will alternate as the fifth delegate.

Legislative sessions of the Congress will begin Aug. 28.

Buses to Edwardsville To End Temporarily

The shuttle bus service between the Carbondale and Edwardsville campuses of SIU will be suspended from Friday, Sept. 2 through Sunday, Sept. 18. The service will resume on Monday, Sept. 19.

The Greeks Knew It

Taking the Canine Sirius out of Dog Days Is Helped by a Cool Drink in the Shade

By Ed Rapetti

The weatherman doesn't recognize "dog days," but we certainly do. The appellation dog days goes back to the time of the ancients of Greece and Rome. They noted during the latter part of the summer that Sirius, the brilliant star marking the constellation Canis Major, rose and wet with the sun. They thought, erroneously, that Sirius added its heat to that of the sun. Hence, the name dog days from Sirius the dog star, for the hot days of July and August.

According to the Greek myth, Phaeton once borrowed his father Helios's sun chariot and drove around the heavens so fast and furiously that he nearly burned up the earth. Phaeton in the 20th century borrows the old man's souped-up Ferrari and drives around during the summer months when he's out of school, causing this excessive heat.

But thanks to the modern miracle of air-conditioning, dog days are a bit easier to take. However, not every home or office or classroom is air-conditioned, and there are times when it is necessary to go out in the summertime oven that is southern Illinois.

Ah, southern Illinois. Where the late summer sun causes tons of water to evaporate into the air every second. You wake up in the morning and you pull on your clothing that is already soggy from the pervasive humidity. Stepping out into the glaring sunlight, intensified by the great volume of water suspended in the atmosphere, you wince and almost turn back wishing you could spend the day prostrated in some leafy glade with a loaf of bread, a jug of wine and . . .

Proceeding onward you sweat your way to campus for a morning class. The classroom isn't air-conditioned . . . unmerciful brutes. The clock crawls agonizingly slowly on its appointed rounds and the drone of the lecturer intensifies your discomfort as you shift reselessly waiting to get out of the now-stifling heat and humanity of the room. Doggedly determined to beat the dog days you drip through the day, with brief intervals when you get into an air-con-

Office on Campus Handles Requests

Illinois has been allotted $903,811 by the federal government to guarantee loans from private banks to college students.

SIU students can apply for the guaranteed loans through the Office of Financial Assistance, according to Fred Dakak, coordinator of student work and financial assistance.

The applications will then be forwarded to the Illinois State Scholarship Commission at Deerfield, where, Dakak said, they will be considered on a "first, come, first serve basis," among all Illinois institutions of higher education.

The federal funds are part of a $17,135,613 outlay divided among the 50 states by the Office of Education under the Higher Education Act of 1965.

They will be used as a guaranteed reserve of $1 for every $10 loaned to students. Thus Illinois will guarantee $9,038,110 in loans.

Maximum loan amounts are $1,000 for the freshman year, and $1,500 for sophomore year, junior year, senior year or first or second year graduate students. The minimum loan is $300.

To be eligible, a student must be a citizen of the United States, a bonafide resident of Illinois, a person of integrity, capable of recognizing and accepting the responsibility of paying back the loan, and a full-time student.

If the adjusted family income of a student is $15,000 or less, the federal government will pay three per cent of the interest on the loan and the student must pay the other three per cent.

If adjusted family income (gross income plus nontaxable income, minus number of claimed exemptions times $600, minus medical expenses deductible for income tax purposes) is more than $15,000, the student must pay all the interest himself.

Payments on the principal begin nine months after graduation or end of full-time study.

Annual Summer Talent Show Slated for 8 p.m. Saturday

Southern Follies, the annual summer talent show, will be held at 8 p.m. Saturday in McAndrew Stadium.

The Department of Outdoor Education and Recreation's show wagon will set the stage for the variety of talent that will be presented.

According to Janet Veach, graduate assistant at the Student Activities Office, the acts will include Judy March, ballet dancer; Les Lannon, folk singer; Carolyn Moll, modern jazz dancer; Jerry and the Jewels, pop-singing group; Cindi Nolan, baton-twirler; Sherry Wolfe, hula dancer; and Tom Ohler, guitar and banjo player.

James Sackett, continuity director at WSIU Radio, will be the master of ceremonies.

The Bushmen will play at a block dance after the show. The dance will be held on the grass area at the north end of the stadium.

Students will be admitted through the gates at the west side of the field. Admission is free.

U.S.-Backed Loans Are Available

The minimum monthly payment is $30.

The loans will be made by private banks within the state and payments on the interest and the principal are made to the bank making the loan, Dakak said.

On the basis of projected enrollments, the Office of Education calculated that by 1972 the government would be making interest payments on more than $9 billion in loans made to more than 5,300,000 student borrowers.

This is based on the assumption that 37 per cent of all students will be borrowing under the program by 1972.

The opening session will begin at 1:30 p.m. Friday in the University Center Ballroom. The meeting will be open to all DeMolays, master Masons and invited guests.

A public ceremony featuring the Black Knights Drum and Bugle Corps from Belleville will be held at 8 p.m. Friday in the SIU Arena. This nationally rated corps has won 14 first-place national honors as well as about 400 other awards, which include three commendations from the United States government. The corps has appeared all over the North American continent and has been invited to tour Europe. Several SIU students have been members of the corps and have returned to train others.

A memorial service will be held Friday in which the Legion of Honor investiture will be granted to 12 men from throughout the state.

New officers will be elected Saturday morning at a closed business session. A beach party at the Lake-on-the-Campus will be held Saturday afternoon for all Demolays.

A grand banquet will be held at 6 p.m. Saturday in the University Center Ballroom. The keynote speaker will be Ross Randolph, state director of public safety and former warden of Menard Penitentiary. A grand ball will follow.

On Sunday morning a breakfast will be held in the University Center Ballroom. Chapel service will be led by the Rev. Edward L. Hoffman of the First Methodist Church in Carbondale. After the service the sweetheart will be crowned, awards will be presented and the new officers will be installed.

Presidential Voting Patterns In the Old Confederacy

Five States for Goldwater, by Bernard Cosman. University, Ala.: University of Alabama Press, 1966. 146 pp. $3.95.

Reviewed by

RICHARD P. GOODRICK

One of the key questions in the upcoming Congressional elections is whether the seven Republican representatives who were elected in Barry Goldwater's sweep of the Deep South can retain their seats on Capitol Hill. The fall balloting will not only help determine the immediate future of the seven freshmen Congressmen, but it will also indicate what role the GOP will play in the political world of the Deep South, once a monopoly of the Democratic Party.

Helpful in assessing this situation is Bernard Cosman's brief book, Five States for Goldwater, which focuses on Presidential voting patterns in the old confederacy.

Cosman, a member of the political science faculty at the University of Alabama, has structured his book on empirical data gleaned from published studies. However, his presentation is obviously intended primarily for those having a professional or scholarly interest in Presidential politics because too often the layman is left to assume certain salient factors such as the business of the Negro voter, registration in the South. To be told that the predominately Negro areas in the Deep South were Goldwater strongholds seems contradictory to Goldwater's civil rights posture unless the reader realizes how few Negroes were among the voters—Negroes among the Deep South voters ranged from 5.2 percent in Mississippi to 17 percent in South Carolina. Inclusion of such information would have made the presentation of "Continuity and Change in Southern Presidential Voting Patterns," as the book is subtitled, more comprehensible.

Basically Cosman's thesis is that the anomaly produced by the vote in 1964 was not a party vote per se but a protest vote on the question of civil rights. According to the author, the civil rights issue generated a surge in voter registration on the part of both whites and Negroes. In the Deep South the increase in voter registration from the 1960 to the 1964 elections was 30.1 percent, and in the remaining Southern states 15.8 percent. Cosman maintains that beyond their immediate sentiment on civil rights nothing is really known about the true party affiliation of these voters.

How they voted is a matter of history. In the five states of the Deep South the white voters demonstrated a proclivity to vote not as their fathers voted but as their grandfathers shot—against infringement of the federal government on their way of life.

Our Reviewers

Richard P. Goodrick and Harrison Youngren are graduate students in the Department of Journalism.

The Negroes voted virtually as a bloc against the "Party of Lincoln," not only in the heart of the old Confederacy but throughout the South.

For his explanation of voting behavior Cosman divided the 11 states of the South into two regions. The Deep South is comprised of the five states that voted for Goldwater—Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina. The six remaining states which the author terms the non-Deep South are Arkansas, Florida, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

The two regions are further divided on the basis of aggregate data into four sectors: Traditional, Metropolitan, Black Belt and Non-Metropolitan.

The Traditional area encompassed the 141 counties in the South in which the Republican Presidential candidates received a minimum of 35 percent of the vote in three-quarters of the Presidential elections since the turn of the century. (The 1912 election was excluded.). The Metropolitan South comprised the 56 counties which contain cities of 50,000 or more population. This sector also included Virginia's eight independent cities. Comprising the Black Belt sector were 138 counties that had non-white majorities in 1960. (About three-quarters of these are located in the Deep South.) Counties not fitting any of the above requirements were called the Non-Metropolitan South.

Cosman shows that Goldwater not only did better than Eisenhower and Nixon in all of the sub-classifications in the Deep South, but that the 1964 Republican standard bearer's greatest support came from the Black Belt counties where he was considered the "candidate of the Southern white man." He received six out of ten Black Belt votes in Georgia, Louisiana and South Carolina. In Alabama it was 7 out of 10, and in Mississippi it was almost unanimous.

In declining order, the remainder of Goldwater's voter appeal was in the Non-Metropolitan area, the Metropolitan and the Traditional. This is exactly the reverse of Eisenhower's strength in 1956 and almost the reverse of Nixon's showing in the Deep South in 1960.

Although the question of civil rights has been documented by Cosman as being the only major factor in the election returns of the Deep South, there were apparently many factors that bore on the election in the other Southern states. Goldwater trailed Nixon in the Traditional Republican areas of the Non-Deep South, and with the exception of Arkansas, the Goldwater vote fell below Nixon's percentages in the Metropolitan counties. In the Non-Metropolitan counties Goldwater polled less than Nixon in four states. In Florida and North Carolina, Goldwater topped Nixon's showing by less than two percentage points. However, with the exception of Texas, Goldwater bettered Nixon's showing in the Black Belt.

While the white vote was apparently split on issues in the Non-Deep South, the Negro vote, according to Cosman, was credited with keeping the Non-Deep Southern states in the Democratic fold. Only in President Johnson's home state of Texas did the Democratic party clearly receive the majority of white votes.

Whether civil rights will continue to be a decisive factor in Southern elections is still an open question. Cosman, however, emphasizes that in the Deep South, as a result of the 1964 campaign, there are "a number of state and local Republican parties demonstrably stronger than at any time in the past, whether measured by votes, contests entered and won, organization, money, motivation, or even conversion of Democratic office holders to Republicanism." But components of political machinery do not guarantee the loyalty of voters. How those seven freshmen Congressmen from the Deep South fare in the November balloting will measure in part whether the 1964 election which raised the GOP banner in the heart of the confederacy was a momentary defection or a durable shift in party allegiance.

Thomas Merton

Reflections of a Monk

Raids on the Unspeakable, by Thomas Merton. New York, New Directions, 1966, 182 pp. $1.95.

Reviewed by

HARRISON YOUNGREN

Merton fans who were first hooked on the complete reprint found in The Seven Storey Mountain may find themselves puzzled and unsatisfied by the hors d'oeuvres presented in this paperback edition of essays. Other readers who peek behind the veil of disarmingly informal expression may discover that Merton's stiletto-like insights force one to view the intrinsic hypocrisy disguising human frailty. Many of these thirteen essays have already stimulated controversial discussion as they appeared in a variety of periodicals during the past six years.

In "Rain and the Rhinoceros" Merton distills to quintessence evil inherent in collectivity to permit consumption, if not digestion, at one gulp. "Collectivity needs not only to absorb everyone it can, but also implicitly to hate and destroy whatever cannot be absorbed." Not Mein Kampf nor The Organization Man, nor any of the vast library intervening between these disparate works, can state the case so succinctly against the potential danger lurking in organizations with a cause.

In his prologue Merton apostrophizes the book for its apparent sauciness and for its irrelevance toward convention. Here, amid passages that range from coy to cute, the author gives us a statement of purpose which demands serious attention: "The practical conclusion derived from this faith (eschatological Christianity) turns into an accusation of the age in which I live and into a command to be human in this most inhuman of ages, to guard the image of man for it is the image of God."

Of the several dishes offered in this intellectual buffet the reviewer found the greatest pleasure in "Answers on Art and Freedom." Probably the preference is due to the precision and power with which Merton crystallizes those amorphous prejudices on art and freedom which this writer has never succeeded in articulating. In response to the general question, "What degree of freedom should be allowed the artist?" Merton points out that when a totalitarian regime such as the Soviet Union liberalizes its controls over artists and poets the rest of the world applauds and thinks more kindly of Russia. As for the artists who insist on jousting against established custom he says, "whereas the poet who rebels completely against conventional Western Society (Rimbaud, Baudelaire, and the Beats) establishes that society all the more firmly in its complacent philistinism, he also strengthens its conviction that all artists are, by necessity, opium fiends and feeds his sense of magnanimity in tolerating such people."

Merton has provided a series of calligraphic abstractions he describes as "graffiti" as diversion to the reader leaping from one essay to the next. Readers will find in them the same provocative and inscrutable mixture as in the essays interlarding the calligraphs. Raids on the Unspeakable is, all in all, a delightful — though sometimes indigestible — collection of mental fare.

Though you might that a drink would make you feel warmer, quite the contrary; only drink usually has a rapid cooling effect. Don't ask me how, but that's what Dr. Morris Chafetz says in his book, "Alcohol, the Friend of Man."

Excessive imbibing, on the other hand, is not advisable since it causes the body to do a lot more "processing" work which will make you even warmer.

'Things Are Going Well'

Apollo Teams Awaiting Orbit; Feel Schedule Is Being Met

By Paul Corcoran
Copley News Service

DOWNEY, Calif. — The nation's Apollo 1 astronauts believe there is a good chance that they will orbit late this year, and that America is on schedule in its bid to put a man on the moon by 1970.

And when the first Americans arrive on the lunar surface, they don't expect to find a Russian cosmonaut waiting for them.

As for the first Apollo manned flight, the U.S. spacemen believe it will be to their "extreme advantage" to stay up as long as possible—14 days if all systems are operating.

That about sums up the attitudes of the three-man primary crew and three backup astronauts who recently interrupted weeks of rigorous training to discuss their objectives with the press.

"It would be silly to wait until the first of the year if we get it ready this year," Air Force Col. Virgil (Gus) Grissom, Apollo 1 command pilot, said.

The 40-year-old Grissom, who also was in command of the first manned Gemini flight and made a suborbital flight aboard Mercury's Liberty Bell capsule, is generally optimistic about beating the tentative launch target date of early 1967.

"Things have been going very well for us," he said.

On the first Apollo mission will be Air Force Lt. Col. Ed. White, the first American to take a walk in space, as senior pilot, and Navy Lt. Roger B. Chaffee, the "baby" of the three at 31, as the pilot.

Lt. Col. James A. McDivitt of the Air Force, second oldest man of the six at 37, is command pilot of the backup team. His partners are David Scott and Russel L. (Rusty) Schweickart.

Each man has a specific assignment for the mission over and above preparing for actual flight aboard the Apollo 1.

One of the more taxing jobs at this stage is that faced by White, in charge of training. Simulators have been under construction, but the astronauts had only the semicomplete Apollo 1 command capsule, sometimes on a 24-hour basis," white said.

"There's a lot of learning to be done."

The cone-shaped Apollo 1 was to be delivered by North American Aviation to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) sometime this month. Transported to Cape Kennedy, Fla., it would be mated with the service module housing the main propulsion engine, and a launch escape system by which the astronauts could eject before or during launch. The capsule is 12 feet, 10 inches in diameter at the base and 11 feet, 4 inches tall.

When an Apollo actually is launched toward the moon for its greatest test, a Lunar Excursion Module (LEM) will be sandwiched between the spacecraft and Saturn launch vehicle. A dummy—28 feet tall—will be used on the orbit-only Apollo 1 shot as well as any other pre-lunar landing flights that may be necessary.

White noted one major addition to the Apollo flight plan: The astronauts must know and study "the whole celestial spectrum" because the moon-bound Apollo will use stars for navigation.

The enormity of the Apollo astronauts' task is illustrated by the fact they will have 6,000 pieces of data to log.

Of eight basic experiments planned, five are medical, including careful analysis of the heart function and inner ear.

Hardly a fly-by-wire mission, Apollo 1 is still very much in the planning stage. No decisions had been made on food and fuel requirements, for example, and Schweickart was careful to note that a new set of rules was necessary for an entirely new spacecraft.

The Apollo 1, though, still constituted a luxury for the astronauts. It has hot and cold water, portable sanitation facilities and plenty of room to rest.

Committee Open Disputed Inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House Committee on Un-American Activities began probing anti-Viet Nam war activities Tuesday in hearings punctuated by heckling, shouting, and the physical ejection of some spectators.

Almost overshadowing the actual testimony was a budding row between Congress and the judiciary over attempts to prevent the committee from proceeding by court order.

At least 15 persons were ejected from the committee room and from the corridors outside. Some 300 persons jammed the caucus room and police estimated another 300 or so lined the corridors hoping to get a seat.

Only moments before Rep. Joe R. Pool, D-Tex., opened the hearings at 10 a.m., a panel of three federal judges dissolved a temporary restraining order against the session which was issued Monday night by U.S. Dist. Judge Howard F. Corcoran.

This prompted hot speeches on the House floor by some members protesting what they termed judicial interference with Congress.

Rep. L Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., called for the impeachment of Judge Corcoran.

The judicial picture was still cloudy as the three-judge panel ordered hearings Wednesday afternoon on the constitutionality of the suit attacking the committee's legal standing.

The appearance and testimony of Phillip A. Luce, a former member of the Progressive Labor party and May 2 Movement, sparked an outburst after the hearings finally began amid wrangling between attorneys and committee members.

"Let's stop this fink testimony," shouted Jeffrey Gordon, one of those subpoenaed to testify, "U.S. get out of Viet Nam!"

Police hustled him outside and Pool said anyone else creating a disturbance would be ejected.

More than 100 policemen were posted in and around the hearing room.

Luce told the committee the interruption by Gordon demonstrated what he called "a planned technique" by the Progressive Laborites to disrupt the hearings and castigate committee members.

Altogether, eight persons were taken to a police station downtown. Police said at least seven more were removed from the line of spectators during a noon recess and charged with disorderly conduct.

DEAR-DADDY: THINGS AIN'T BEEN THE SAME SINCE YOU WENT TO WAR...

Exempted at Present

Senate Asked to Pass Law Sending Reserves to War

WASHINGTON (AP)—A determined effort to put Army Reservists and National Guardsmen on active duty in Viet Nam got under way Tuesday in the Senate.

Up to now they have been exempted. Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., veteran chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, and Sen. Leverett Saltonstall, R-Mass., teamed up in the effort.

They offered a rider to the pending $588-billion defense money bill which would give the President authority to order these thousands of Reservists to active duty for not more than 18 months.

Johnson Names District Judges

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson announced that he will make these nominations for United States district judgeships: Eastern Illinois—Henry W. Wise of Danville, now a member of the Illinois Parole and Pardons Board, Northern Illinois—Alexander James Napoli of Chicago, now presiding judge of the criminal division of the Cook County Circuit Court.

ert S. McNamara has refused to call up any of the more than 600,000 Army Reservists and National Guardsmen.

Russell and Saltonstall proposed that President Johnson be given authority to order any Reservists—if they have had only training duty—to active service for not more than 18 months.

Russell and other senators protested it is unfair to send draftees and volunteers to do the front line fighting while thousands of youthful Reservists and Guardsmen escape by joining the Reserves.

Saltonstall, in a statement prepared for the Senate, said "after full discussion, senators felt strongly it was only fair that these Reservists be put on the same basis for service in Viet Nam as new enlistees and draftees."

It would not be necessary to call up organized units, Saltonstall said, because the young men could be called individually.

Existing law limits the service of a Reservist to one year of active duty unless the President or Congress formally declares a national emergency.

U.S. Jets Challenged By MIGs

SAIGON, South Viet Nam--(AP)—U.S. bombers, following up their near record of 133 missions Monday with fresh strikes at North Viet Nam, stirred inconclusive intervention Tuesday by two Communist MIG17s.

The Soviet-built fighters fired 37mm cannon at four U.S. Navy Skyhawks that were attacking a train 70 miles south of Hanoi. A spokesman said the heavily laden Skyhawks, slightly slower than the MIGs, took evasive action without firing back and escaped unharmed after damaging four boxcars of the train.

Three incidents of apparently mistaken strikes that have killed 31 Vietnamese villagers in the past week led Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the U.S. commander, to order steps to hold down civilian casualties of this frontless war.

As announced by a spokesman:

"Gen. Westmoreland today issued a directive to his subordinate commanders to review their procedures to minimize casualties to civilians to the maximum extent possible."

Gen. Suharto Casts Doubts On Agreement

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP)—Gen. Suharto, Indonesia's strong man, cast some uncertainty Tuesday on relations with Malaysia in a speech that brought up the future of the Borneo states of Sarawak and Sabah.

Suharto told Parliament that Indonesia was "not wholly satisfied" with the peace accord signed with Malaysia in Jakarta last week because of the question of the two states on the island of Borneo.

Some diplomatic sources, noting Suharto had said almost the opposite last week, discounted the speech as a face-saver for President Sukarno, now largely a figurehead.

Suharto called for a final settlement under terms of the Manila agreement of 1963. This provided for a third, impartial party, such as the United Nations, to learn the wishes of the two states on their future.

Later in 1963, a U.N. team found that Sabah and Sarawak chose to join Malaysia, but Indonesia never accepted the decision.

Suharto said Indonesia began its undeclared war on Malaysia because it felt the U.N. team did not make its decision in a democratic manner.

Foreign Minister Adam Malik said last week that peace would be made on the terms of the Bangkok accord initiated earlier this year.

Cardinals Coach Says:

'I'm Still Trying to Evaluate Hart'

By Mike Schwebel

Jim Hart has a lot to learn, Jim Battle has a lot of potential and Sam Silas has a lot going for him.

That, in a nutshell, is how St. Louis head football coach Charley Winner feels about three former Saluki stars now in the Lake Forest, Ill. training camp.

The first year coach, with exhibition wins over Atlanta and Detroit already under his belt, talked about the SIU competitors in Lake Forest.

Hart, the hard-throwing quarterback who signed this year as a free agent, "has an awful long way to go," according to Winner.

After the recent release of a six-year pro veteran Buddy Humphrey and the military induction of highly regarded rookie Gary Snook, there are three quarterbacks in the Big Red camp.

"Right now, I don't know if I will keep three quarterbacks or not," said Winner. "Unless all three show me that I will have to stay with them, I will hold only two quarterbacks."

"I'm still trying to evaluate Hart. We've seen a lot of him in practice, and like any rookie, there is so much he has to learn. If the opportunity presents itself, I'll play him in exhibition action, but if not, I'll have to base my decision on his showing in the workouts."

Battle, who has seen action with the Minnesota Vikings, is battling for an offensive line position.

"Jim has a lot of potential and is a real hard worker," says Winner.

Silas, even after a great season last year in which he earned All-Pro honors at defensive tackle, hasn't got his spot nailed down definitely.

"Sam is really a worker and one of the league's fine players," says Winner, "but there are a couple of young guys coming up that could give him trouble. The ball club definitely needs him, though, and it looks like he'll have another fine year."

Currently there are 56 players still with the cards, and that will have to be cut down to 40 before the season opens.

Winner isn't sure which positions the cuts will affect most.

"We're overstocked at nearly every position," he explained, "so right now it's hard to say who will go."

The short, muscular Winner took over the head coaching job from Wally Lemm, after serving as a defensive coach with the Baltimore Colts.

"When I came to St. Louis, I told everyone that I would never predict a title," he said. "I only promised that we would have a fighting ball club."

To Winner, Baltimore seems to be the strongest ball club in the league at this stage.

"The Colts aren't a team. They're a machine," commented the coach. "They look stronger than ever, and are one of the finest teams that I have ever seen."

Already there has been a lot of talk in football circles that several clubs, notably Chicago, Green Bay and the Colts, are already in near top shape both physically and mentally.

"I think there is a lot of truth in that," says Winner, who points out that the Cardinals aren't really in shape for the season yet.

"Clubs like Baltimore come into pre-season training already knowing who is going to fit in on both offense and defense. In our case, we have the transition of a new coach, and a change in some ideas. A lot of positions have to be filled yet, and this will take some time."
