Polish workers strike; officials caution West

By The Associated Press

Thousands of defiant workers were reported striking in Poland Tuesday and appealing for worldwide support to keep the martial law regime from strangling "a budding democracy in the heart of Europe."

But Communist authorities told the West not to interfere, claimed the situation was near normal and said Solidarity leader Lech Walesa was trying to ease the crisis.

There were reports, however, that Walesa was under house arrest, apparently for resisting pressure from Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's ruling military council to tell the 9.5 million members of the Soviet bloc's only independent union not to launch strikes.

Other unconfirmed reports, from Olof Tandberg, foreign secretary of the Swedish Academy of Sciences, said shots were fired in Warsaw and Poland's southeastern mining region, apparently by soldiers. Tandberg said the reports came from members of the Polish academy who phoned colleagues in East Bloc capitals, who in turn phoned him in Stockholm. He had no further details.

An appeal from a Solidarity chapter in the Baltic port of Szczecin smuggled to Sweden aboard a ferry urged people around the world to "be with us in our hour of darkness. Solidarity with Solidarity..."

Due to lack of normal communications with Warsaw, it was impossible to gauge the extent of the strikes or their effectiveness.

Danish military sources in Copenhagen said the Polish navy stepped up its offshore patrols in the Baltic, apparently to prevent Poles from fleeing to Denmark or Sweden. But they said there was no evidence of increased activity by Soviet or other Warsaw Pact military forces. Poland's airports and borders remained officially sealed.

The Pentagon reported "absolutely no military activity" by the Soviet Union in connection with the new crisis in Poland. "There has been nothing in the way of unusual (Soviet) troop movement that we know of," Pentagon spokesman Henry Catto told reporters in Washington.

President Reagan was briefed on the situation in Poland and told normal communications were disrupted but that the United States still had contact with its embassy in Warsaw. White House spokesman Larry Speakes said in Washington.

"Warsaw is generally calm," Speakes said. "There is a heavy military and police presence in the streets."

Empty bookshelves aren't sign of failure, co-op head says

By Andrew Straag
Staff Writer

The Undergraduate Student Organization book cooperative Tuesday afternoon resembled an empty library waiting to be filled.

At the co-op's collection table on the third floor of the Student Center, one heard more discussion from workers about the amount of money spent on Christmas presents than about the co-op.

The four Sigma Kappa sorority women collecting books for the co-op didn't have much else to talk about since only about 150 books had been collected since Monday.

However, the empty bookshelves aren't a reflection of the success or failure of the project, Dave McAnally, director of the co-op, said.

"A lot of people I know are waiting until Wednesday or Thursday" to leave books with the co-op, McAnally said.

Experiences at a similar book co-op at Illinois State University support McAnally's prediction that student use of the project will increase before the week's end.

A spokeswoman for the ISU Student Association, the operators of the ISU co-op, said it usually doesn't collect many books until the end of final exam week. She said students tend to wait until all their classes are finished before getting rid of the semester's books, instead of selling them individually after each final exam.

The USO will be collecting books from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday, and also on Jan. 18 and 19, the first two days of the spring semester. According to Eugene Grandderry, one of the directors of the ISU co-op, a lot of books will probably be brought in during the first days of the spring semester.

Grandderry said about $12,000 was exchanged by almost half of ISU's 22,000 students at the most recent co-op.

McAnally, who said he is "pleased" with the co-op after its first two days in existence, judged the success of the project on its operating success rather than the number of books that it handles.

He compared the project to a recently organized football team.

"You can't build up a new team and expect to win every game the first year," he said.

Several students interviewed Tuesday supported the idea of the co-op, but said they refrained from using it because they needed the money from selling their books before Christmas break.

In addition to needing money for Christmas presents, Lisa Barber, senior in correctional counseling, said she was afraid to use the co-op because she doesn't know how students will respond when the books are offered for sale.

"There's a chance your books won't get sold," she said.

Not all students dislike waiting for their money. Ralf Ingwersen, freshman in radio and television, said he wanted didn't want his money until January, "so I don't spend it over Christmas."

Council eliminates amusement tax plan

By Bob Bondurant
Staff Writer

After considering several alternate proposals, the Carbonale City Council has devised its own formula for funding the debt service of the proposed downtown parking garage.

Rejecting two new proposals from the Undergraduate Student Organization, among others, the council decided Monday to eliminate the amusement tax portion of the city administration's plan.

The plan as approved increases the tax on motel and hotel rental income from 2 to 4 percent, while the tax on eating and drinking would remain at 1 percent.

The portion of the tax eliminated by the council would have been levied on income from movies, arcades and other recreational activities.

The tax would go into effect 90 days from the time that the Department of Housing and Urban Development releases a $2 million Urban Development Action Grant to the city for buying and clearing the land of the parking garage and convention center project. The grant is expected to be released in early January.

According to administration projections, the 1 percent tax should bring in $234,000 in revenues, and the 4 percent hotel and motel tax should bring in $189,000 in 1983. The 2 percent amusement tax would have brought in $42,700.

Council Member Helen Westberg, who first proposed elimination of the amusement tax, said "Of all the proposals, I like the idea of eliminating the amusement tax compared to the others."

Fischer agreed with the city's Director of Economic Development Frank Moreno, who said that the collection of the amusement tax would cause the administration more problems than it would be worth.

Jeff Olsson, an employee of Kerasotes Theaters, said the administration's amusement tax would drive prices up further than the 6 cents it would add to a $3 ticket. Movie ticket

Daily Egyptian sets break hours

Publication will resume with the issue of Jan. 16, first day of spring term.

The newspaper's business office will be open during the break, except on University-designated holidays.

Israel prepares for possible battle

MAJDAL SHAMS, Golan Heights (AP) — Israeli army convoys headed north and Jewish settlers cleaned out bomb shelters Tuesday in a show of readiness for possible Syrian retaliation over annexation of the Golan Heights.

Defense Minister Ariel Sharon toured military bases on the Golan. His office announced that "all necessary steps" were being taken to deal with any flareup over Monday's abrupt legal takeover of territory captured from Syria in the 1967 Middle East war.

Sharon called Egyptian

President Hosni Mubarak and assured him Israel planned no military action on the Syrian front or in southern Lebanon, Israeli TV reported.

Golan Druse Arabs declared a three-day protest strike starting Wednesday, and religious leaders threatened to blacklist any members of the sect who did not participate.

The military chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan, broke off a visit to Cairo and flew home.

There was no sign that Syria was preparing to use force to counter the annexation of the 458-square-mile plateau, despite talk of war in the government-controlled Syrian press and some official statements.

Acting without any warning, Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government rammed a law through Parliament at almost record speed Monday night and extended Israeli law to the Golan after almost 15 years of military occupation.

Shimon Peres, the opposition Labor Party chief who was out of the country when Parliament acted, said he was "really shocked and sad" at the way the bill was passed.

Man convicted of manslaughter in Quincy child beating case

CHICAGO (AP)—A jury on Tuesday found James Crain guilty of involuntary manslaughter in the beating death of 5-year-old Alan Madden of Quincy.

The jury of four women and eight men deliberated about 4½ hours before bringing in the verdict shortly after 5 p.m.

Crain, 27, had been charged with two counts of murder in the Jan. 11 death of the child, the son of his former girlfriend, Pamela Sue Berg, of Quincy. Ms. Berg also was convicted of involuntary manslaughter in the boy's death earlier this year and was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Crain, a martial arts buff, was accused of using a "knee drop," his hands, elbows, and feet to beat the child, whose body had more than 100 bruises, according to an autopsy report. Every major organ in the child's body was ruptured, the report said.

The trial, which was moved to Cook County on a change of venue from Adams County, where Quincy is located, began Dec. 7 before Adams County Judge Edward Dittmeyer.

Crain testified in his defense that Ms. Berg had unmercifully beaten Alan with her hands, a telephone and a stick because she believed the boy was not telling her the truth about an earlier incident. He said she beat Alan repeatedly for two days before he died and refused to give the child food.

But Ms. Berg testified that Crain administered the boy's fatal injuries by using the "knee drop," in which he raised the child above his head and dropped him face down onto his upraised knee.

Crain, a computer programmer, admitted that he had hit the child but denied on the witness stand that he had struck Alan hard enough to seriously hurt him.

However, police detectives testified that Crain told them he knew what he was doing could cause great bodily harm or death.

Adams County State's Attorney Anthony Cameron, in his closing arguments, argued that the jury should not find Crain guilty of a charge less than murder, such as involuntary manslaughter.

If the suggestion of a lesser charge should come up in jury deliberations, Cameron said. "At that point, please somebody speak up for Alan Madden. He sure can't speak up for himself. He wasn't just maimed and allowed to live. There was no compromise for Alan Madden."

Social Security benefits supported

WASHINGTON (AP)—In a change of heart long shared by President Reagan, the Senate on Tuesday took up a bill to preserve the $122 minimum Social Security benefit for three million current recipients, while barring most new additions to the rolls.

But while the Senate was virtually certain to approve the measure, reversing a budget cut signed by the president earlier in the year, a potential fight still loomed in the House.

14-year-old convicted of murder

JOLIET (AP)—A 14-year-old boy tried as an adult has been convicted of murder and could be sentenced to 40 years in prison, prosecutors said.

Timothy Buss was convicted Monday night of the May beating death of 5-year-old Tara Sue Huffman, a neighbor girl in Bradley, 70 miles south of Chicago. A six-man, six-woman jury returned the verdict after deliberating five hours.

The youth will be sentenced Jan. 22 in Kankakee by Circuit Court Judge Robert Dannehl.

Gannett to publish national paper

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Gannett Co. announced Tuesday it will begin publishing "this country's first general-interest, national daily newspaper" beginning in the fall of 1982 in 15 metropolitan areas.

The newspaper will be called "USA Today" and will be published mornings Monday through Friday. It will be sold for 25 cents per copy with home delivery planned for later.

Allen H. Neuharth, president of the company which publishes 85 daily newspapers among its communications properties, said the paper will go initially into 15 of the 20 top newspaper markets in the country.

Senate OKs trade embargo 'threat'

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate on Tuesday approved a bill that urges the Reagan administration to totally embargo trade with the Soviet Union should the Soviets send troops into Poland.

The amendment was attached to a $19.3 billion bill to administer export controls.

By 87-27, the Senate adopted a compromise measure worked out by a House-Senate conference committee. The bill was sent to the House for final congressional approval.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-

Wis., said the bill was intended to "send a signal to the Soviet Union to keep hands off Poland. I hope the Soviets will see this as a strong signal to stay out of Polish affairs."

The legislation expresses Senate support for a trade embargo with the USSR in the event of military intervention in Poland by the Soviet Union or its Warsaw Pact allies. But the measure does not mandate any action by the administration.

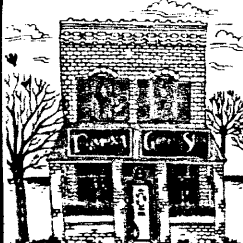

Sens. Charles H. Percy and Alan J. Dixon, both R-Ill., opposed the bill because the conference committee eliminated a provision aimed at restraining grain embargoes for national security purposes.

The provision said that the next administration, beginning on Jan. 21, 1985, should not impose any farm products embargo for national security reasons without congressional approval, unless it is part of a total trade embargo.

The proposal had been prompted by dissatisfaction with the grain embargo against the Soviet Union adopted by former President Carter.

City changes policy on hiring to help increase minority jobs

By Joan Schrag
Staff Writer

Minorities may soon find it easier to get jobs as Carbondale police officers and firefighters.

The City Council endorsed a proposal Monday to change the present city code on hiring police and fire personnel in an effort to employ more minorities.

City Manager Carroll Fry said the current hiring policy has failed to provide a fire or police force that reflects the number of women and racial minorities in the city's population.

Presently, police and fire department applicants are numerically ranked by performance on written and oral exams, with only the top three candidates considered for filling vacancies. Under the hiring plan endorsed by the council, exams would be given on a "pass-fail" basis, and all applicants who pass the exam would be considered by the city manager.

Fry said the change would allow him to consider a variety of factors, including minority status, when making the selection.

"Some people might say this is a quota system, but it's the only way I know of getting at the problem," Fry said. "And similar policies have been held up by the courts."

The council, which will vote on the changes next week, agreed with Fry's recommendation to give veterans special consideration when hiring.

"People feel very strongly about veterans' preference, and I feel very strongly about veterans' preference," Fry said. "I think that if there are eight veterans in the group of applicants, then those eight should be considered first."

The request for a change in the hiring code came from the Carbondale Board of Fire and Police Commissioners who adopted similar changes in their hiring policies last month.

Affirmative Action Officer Cleveland Matthews has been pushing for such changes for nearly a year. He said there are only three black police officers on Carbondale's 52-member force, and two firefighters.

ISU officials accused of sex discrimination

BLCOMINGTON, (AP)—The Illinois Human Rights Commission says Illinois State University twice engaged in sex discrimination by refusing to hire a woman professor.

The ruling Monday by Commissioner Linda MacLachlan directs ISU to provide salary and benefits to Ana Marie Parent for the 1978 and 1979 school years and restore her seniority.

The school was not ordered to rehire Mrs. Parent.

"When all legitimate reasons for rejecting an applicant have been eliminated as possible reasons for the employer's actions, it is more likely than not that the employer... based its decision on an impermissible consideration such as sex," the ruling said.

ISU also was ordered to pay

Mrs. Parent's legal and court costs, and to stop using hiring practices that do not apply equally to all applicants.

"Every reason or excuse the university gave for not hiring Ana Parent was found to be incorrect," said Robert Lenz, her attorney. "It's unusual that the court said every reason the university advanced was phony."

Mrs. Parent filed a complaint after ISU refused to hire her for Spanish teaching assignments in 1978 and 1979.

Joseph Goleash, attorney for ISU, said Mrs. Parent was not the most desirable candidate for two openings and was not qualified for a third position.

The ruling said that was not the case.

Council supports noise ordinance

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

It may be the last week of fall, but Carbondale officials are already preparing for spring.

The City Council, at a public hearing Monday night, gave support to a proposed ordinance aimed at restricting excessive noise levels at student parties and reducing trash and weed violations in the city's residential sector.

The ordinance, which the council is expected to vote on next month, prohibits the use of sound amplifying equipment which produces "loud and raucous" sounds audible 100 feet from the property line from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. and 50 feet from the property line from 10 p.m. to 7 a.m.

The proposal is a result of concern expressed by city residents about loud outdoor student parties that are held during the warm weather.

Carbondale doesn't have a residential sound ordinance, and city officials have said people who are disturbed by nearby parties are often reluctant to sign formal complaints, thus hampering police efforts to quiet parties.

Undergraduate Student Organization President Todd Rogers said he supported the proposed ordinance, but expressed concern with how it would be enforced.

"We certainly must be concerned about students who are a nuisance to their neighbors," he said. "And it's clear that there is a need to protect the rights of those neighbors."

"We are just concerned with how loud is loud, and how spirited the noise must get before it is raucous."

City Manager Carroll Fry agreed that further discussion was needed, and requested the council discuss the matter again on Jan. 11.

"I think Todd has a valid concern," he said. "How loud is loud is often in the eye, or in this prices would increase by 25 cents, Olsson said.

In deciding on which tax format to use, the majority of the council agreed that a higher hotel-motel levy was acceptable.

Mark Philbrick, the USO's liaison to the city, presented two new tax alternatives in an effort to reduce or eliminate the tax on eating and drinking.

"We tried to come up with some very viable, coherent proposals," Philbrick told the council.

Philbrick reiterated the USO's opposition to the eating and drinking tax, saying it would place a disproportionate burden on students, who would not be using the garage.

One USO proposal called for a one-eighth percent citywide sales tax, which would replace the entire administration proposal. Another would have cut the eating and drinking tax to one-half percent, with a 4 percent motel-hotel tax and a 3 percent amusement tax.

Philbrick said the USO proposals met the three criteria City Manager Carroll Fry had given for a tax to be workable. He said it would raise enough money to fund the debt service, it would not be regressive and collection of the tax would not be difficult.

Opinion & Commentary

Raise a holiday toast to Solidarity's brave fight

The grand experiment that began in August 1980 has ended. When the workers of Gdansk scaled the shipyard fences that summer and demanded not only an end to meat price increases but also a say in the future of Poland, they presented a monumental challenge to the established communist framework in Eastern Europe.

They represented a shining hope that man's urge for freedom could not be extinguished or ignored.

Sober reality has intruded into that brief dream of democratic progress in Poland. Solidarity has been banned. Martial law has been imposed. Lech Walesa has disappeared — presumably imprisoned.

Poland knew it was coming. The world knew it was coming. The increasing sense of irreconcilable confrontation between Solidarity and Poland's Communist Party admitted of no other solution, short of Soviet intervention.

But it is still a shock. And a reason for despair.

The martial law statement issued by Premier Jaruzelski only deepens the bitterness.

"The atmosphere of unending conflict," he said, "...damages the tradition of tolerance."

To that one can only reply that, prior to the establishment of an opposition movement, there was no tradition of tolerance. The whole concept of tolerance is irrelevant in a country ruled by a one-party dictatorship. It is intolerance that has dictated the present course of action, and thus the message for Poland and the world is that tolerance has become an undesirable commodity.

Jaruzelski also said that Poland "is strong and wise enough to develop a democratic system of socialist government."

No more unintentionally poignant statement could have been made. Poland's people proved themselves strong enough to demand democratic reforms and wise enough to know that reforms would inevitably threaten the communists' dominance in the government. And yet they pressed on, fully aware that they could not really push for the first without forcing the second. Thus the tragic nature of their efforts was clear from the beginning.

The season of hope was brief, but it was not in vain. The people of Poland will someday come back from this latest tragedy. That is the pattern of their history. The fire that was kindled in Poland will not soon die out.

For now, let us drink a toast during this holiday season, to the movement called Solidarity and the Greek tragedy they played out on the world stage. Man's most worthy battles have always been those fought against, or in spite of, the odds.

USO's tax alternatives served a useful function

The penultimate chapter on the proposed "amusement" tax has been written. The only step left is the final vote at next Monday's council meeting.

Both the City Council and the USO deserve credit for their efforts.

The council revised the city administration's original proposal, calling now for a 4 percent tax on hotels and motels and 1 percent on eating and drinking establishments. The plan eliminates the theaters and game rooms tax and shifts more of the burden onto the hotels and motels, as it should be.

The USO deserves credit for coming up with not one, but three separate alternatives to the city plan — a lot of work on the students' leaders' part.

Unfortunately, the city rejected all three. The USO's second proposal, involving a fractional across-the-board sales tax, seemed like a good idea. It would have dispersed the burden of paying for the parking garage bonds across the entire business spectrum of Carbondale. But the council rejected a fractional tax as being too much of a headache to administer.

So be it. If, by its persistence and pressure, the USO was instrumental in the city's decision to revise the original plan, it served a very important function. We have learned that such pressure is often necessary for the City Council to understand the students' feelings on any given subject.

SIU-C Symphony support

I would like to offer my support to the Southern Illinois Symphony Orchestra. After reading the article in the Daily Egyptian on Dec. 1, it is clear that members of the orchestra are somewhat discouraged because of an apparent lack of enthusiasm for what could be a great cultural asset to this community.

I don't know how others feel, but as a member of this community, I have a great appreciation for the arts and I would find it very worthwhile if the SIU-C Symphony were able to perform at least three times a semester. Please hang in there, you most admirable musicians, there are many of us out here who appreciate you and would feel a tremendous void without you. Perhaps with more performances more people will become enlightened by the beauty such music can provide. — Beth Ford, Secretary, Physical Education Dept.

Hooray for McCaughan!

The emergence of Charles McCaughan to the students of this University what the rise of Moses was to the slaves of Egypt.

This may seem to be overstating it a bit, but observe: McCaughan, the Carbondale fire chief, a man who to all intents and purposes could keep mum on the question of the Board of Trustees' spending and remain relatively unscathed, has chosen instead to come out against what he sees as injustices perpetrated by the board against the students. This gallant and intrepid gentleman has taken into his own hands what should properly be the concern of the students. The greatest insult we students could direct at McCaughan is to not give him our support in this matter. He has stood up for us. Now we must stand up for him.

Specifically, for those who did not read Mike Anthony's stirring articles in the Daily Egyptian, McCaughan circulated a petition protesting the $50,000 paid leave given by the board to George Mace, former SIU-C vice president. This absolute squandering we have been reading of should be a concern to all of us. I should think it would make students mad as hell. But the students have irresponsibly ignored it. No wonder, then, the board ignored McCaughan's petition. But McCaughan was not deterred. He rightly criticized the board for paying $34,000 to former basketball coach Gottfried, who resigned last year. McCaughan justifiably censured the board for their approval of a four-month paid leave to Vice Chancellor James Brown, and for the incorporation of a $12,000 housing allowance for Chancellor Kenneth Shaw. The board has all but shrugged McCaughan off.

These allotments by the board and their continuous squeezing of money out of students reveal their smug elitist attitude to those they supposedly serve. Students, we are being railroaded by a self-important aristocracy that is getting fat off of our money while we obediently pay their bogus fee increases. They are counting on student apathy to continue this charade. Don't support them by ignoring this issue.

McCaughan has gone to bat for us. His courage and integrity are inspiring. Don't let the board make a monkey out of him, and, once again, out of us. Let's show him our support. Bring those petitions back out again, McCaughan. We'll get a few thousand more signatures. You can start with me. I'll round up a few supporters. But help me out. Call Mr. McCaughan and give him your support. And don't forget about this over break. The board is counting on that too. Just ask yourself when you're putting in your eight hours a day: "What am I paying for? Better faculty? A winning football team? Reliable services? Or cushy vacations and big comfy homes for the Board of Trustees?" — Malcolm Logan, Graduate, English.

Still no proof of Libyan hit squad

The ordering home of some 1,500 Americans working in Libya and the invalidation of U.S. passports intended for use in that North African country were explained by the Reagan administration as precautionary measures taken to insure Americans' safety from what it calls an increasing danger from Libya's "lawlessness."

As our leaders spew out rhetoric depicting Libya's leader Moammar Khadafy as a satanic terrorist determined to undermine America and its people, no one has yet to expound what imminent danger citizens working in Libya are in.

Sen. Howard Baker (R-Tenn.) made a ludicrous statement that these steps are necessary to prevent another hostage takeover similar to what happened in Iran.

Baker's example becomes outrageous when one compares the unstable Iranian regime with Libya's unified leadership. The CIA's psychological analysis of Khadafy says that he is not the kind of man who'll resort to taking hostages.

While it would be justifiable for Americans to return if the burden of proof indicated they are in danger, what is more likely happening is that the Reagan administration has begun its anti-Khadafy campaign and has called upon the American public to keep it rolling.

NATO leaders have reserved public comment on the situation and also have yet to agree with Reagan's actions. A French official said privately that he thought the order was ridiculous.

As for the 1500 Americans forced to come home, many disagree with Reagan and feel they are in no danger.

It is unfortunate that American citizens are treated with blind ignorance by our leaders. As good citizens we should support the blessing of our president but as responsible citizens, we should know the reasons why. Until this is offered, we must speak loudly and not follow our leadership blindly. — Jeffrey Smyth, Flackneyville.

Dyslexic overcomes barriers

By Jennifer Polk
Staff Writer

Steve Bartholf, 22, is a junior in aviation technology. That's not an easy field of study, but it is especially difficult for him because Steve has dyslexia.

His problem isn't the most extreme — he doesn't see things backwards or upside down — but he does have a hard time motivating himself to study.

"I realize it will take me at least twice as long to study than it takes for other people so I have trouble making myself sit down and read," he said. "I have problems grasping the material. I have to read things two or three times just to get the basics."

Steve was diagnosed as dyslexic when he was in second grade. In that respect, he said he was very fortunate.

"My father found out he was dyslexic at the same time I was diagnosed," he said. "All his life he'd had problems with school and with his family because of his problems and he didn't know why. I was fortunate in that I got a lot of attention at an early age."

Steve attended public schools in Springfield until he was in fifth grade. The teachers there didn't understand his problem and he didn't like school because of the pressure he felt.

"They pressured me to learn," he said. "I can remember not going to school for a while when I was in fourth grade because I hated it so much."

Steve Bartholf

After fourth grade, he transferred to a school in Springfield for students with learning difficulties. More attention was given to his problem there.

He also attended a special high school in Litchfield, Conn., that specialized in teaching dyslexic children. Its program consisted of finding the reading level of a student and then drilling the student on that level every day. Steve said it helped a great deal.

"That school built up a lot in me, especially dealing with people," he said. "I was self-conscious until I was around others who had the same problems."

When he came to SIU-C he enrolled in Project Achieve. He said it got to the point where he just had to face his problem and deal with it, like a person in a wheelchair must learn to face disability. He doesn't mind talking about his problems.

"I don't use the taped books anymore," he said. "I can't get taped books all my life. And if I don't sit down and read things over and over again, I just won't get anything out of it. Now, I can read anything you put in front of me. I just have to take longer to do it."

But Steve still has certain problems. The frustration that he felt in grade school when he had problems still lingers today when he has trouble with a reading assignment or with an essay test.

"I'm very good with my hands," he said. "I can apply myself to a machine that's broken and fix it. I'm better with the practical aspects of repairing than I am with reading about it. I have to go through step-by-step like you would put together a model. My spelling isn't very good, either. I spell things the way they sound to me."

Still, he said he goes into school situations with the attitude that he wants to learn and that he just needs a lot more time to do it. He said he wants to get out of school and be certified in aviation technology. His teachers are very understanding and eager to help, he said.

"Some dyslexics feel that they're losers," he said. "I'm fortunate I got diagnosed when I did. If I hadn't been diagnosed, I wouldn't be here at all and I wouldn't be as self-confident as I am. I think I would've quit school by now."

"I'd probably be in a low income job and drinking heavily."

Students with disability helped to survive in a 'reading world'

By Jennifer Polk
Staff Writer

Finals week is the time when students have to recall all they've heard and read during the semester and put it down in the last attempt to influence a grade. Most students have no problems studying for exams — once they begin to study.

But some students have dyslexia — a learning disability that makes it difficult to learn how to read. For these students, taking tests or even reading the material for classes requires more effort and is more frustrating than it is for other students.

"Dyslexia basically involves the symbol system that is superimposed on the oral language," said Barbara Cordoni, director of Project

Achieve, a special education program at SIU-C that helps college students with learning problems. "As a child, the dyslexic will understand what is said but when it's written down, they can't connect the symbols with the words."

Project Achieve is in its second year of federal funding, though SIU-C provided it with funds for two years before that. Cordoni said research and testing was done in those first two years so that when she went to the federal government for funding, she already had information about what dyslexic college students needed.

Between 8 million and 10 million Americans have some form of dyslexia. Cordoni said people used to think that the disorder was connected with brain damage, genetic or physiological disorders or cultural deprivation. Now, it is generally believed that dyslexia in all its forms is caused by a chemical imbalance in the brain.

Project Achieve addresses the dyslexic's primary problem of not being able to read. The common methods of teaching reading work well for most students in public schools.

A child with dyslexia, however, may need an alternative method to be able to learn — a method that may not be available in the public school. For the child who has dyslexia or a similar disorder, reading becomes a mysterious world of which they aren't a part.

Trail lets handicapped enjoy wildlife

By Cynthia Rector
Student Writer

People who enjoy a hike, a variety of landscapes and maybe a chance to fish off a bridge will find Giant City's Post Oak Trail the perfect place to spend some free time.

And for those who can't walk, it's just the spot, too. In fact, the trail is unique in that it is both accessible to the handicapped and yet is definitely not easy says James P. Weiser, the park's nature interpreter who designed the trail.

Post Oak Trail was developed from an existing trail in conjunction with the International Year of Disabled Persons. It opened last spring to people in wheelchairs and those with other unique recreational needs.

The trail is one of 96 such trails in the United States.

The newly expanded trail, which opened during Ability Awareness Week last May, is five feet wide, black-topped, flat and covers a third of a mile.

"This trail is not a handicapped persons' trail, per se, but instead is designed for special populations," Weiser explained.

Special populations include people physically, emotionally or mentally handicapped, senior citizens and children. These groups have unique recreational needs, Weiser said. "It's too expensive to design a trail for only one type of individual," said Weiser, who maintains that the redesigned trail serves a wide spectrum of the public.

The park received an Institute of Museum Service Grant of about $15,000. Weiser helped to write the grant, which stated that the funding would increase public accessibility to the park's nature center collection.

The trail is a "loop trail," which means that it starts and ends at the same spot.

"That way, if children run ahead they will end up at the parking lot rather than in some strange wooded area without their parents," Weiser explained.

Senior citizens need rest areas, an aspect not necessary for individuals confined to wheelchairs, but who need solid ground, on bridges, for example, so that wheels don't become lodged in cracks.

An international sign of accessibility is part of the Post Oak Trail sign and it has meaning for the trail travelers. The sign makes it clear to a handicapped person that "you'll make it through alive," in Weiser's words.

you have an obviously bright child who has difficulty with reading and there is a great discrepancy between what they can do and what they are achieving," said Cordoni.

"There may be a tendency to reverse words so that 'live' becomes 'evil', or they may only read the front part of the word. A dyslexic child may read very slowly or may have to sound out every single word. We live in a reading world. Not being able to read can cause some terrible problems."

Cordoni said the public schools and their special education programs are doing an increasingly better job of diagnosing dyslexics early in their school years. Even so, she said, special education programs at that level in public schools are limited in methods to teach the learning-disabled child.

The Project Achieve program at SIU concentrates on finding the method by which the learning-disabled college student will learn best. It may entail literally re-teaching a student how to read, using the method that best helps the student.

A student who applies to the program is given two days of diagnostic testing. If the student qualifies and exhibits enough ability and motivation, he or she can apply to the University and to Project Achieve, Cordoni said.

If it is felt that the student could benefit from a more intensive program, other universities and their programs are recommended. Other universities' programs charge a fee — some as much as $7,000 a year.

The program at SIU is free. Only 25 new students can be accepted into the program each year.

Once in the program, the student has access to textbooks on tape to use along with regular textbooks. Graduate students in special education serve as special tutors on a one-to-one basis for those who need them and the student has the option of taking exams orally. Teachers are notified of the student's learning problem only at the student's request.

The students who have been in the program are doing very well in their choices of study, said Cordoni. Those areas of study range from general studies to journalism, medicine and aviation technology. The freshman dropout rate for Project Achieve students stands at only 18 percent, while for the University as a whole, it is 25 percent.

"These students usually do so very well in other areas of study," Cordoni said. "They may not be able to read, but they may be brilliant in art or science or some other field. Winston Churchill was dyslexic. So was Albert Einstein."

Think of how many Einsteins or Churchills we may have lost because we didn't understand their problem."

'Freeze Frame' album good, not great

By Alan Sculley
Staff Writer

Review

If you're to believe the hype being given to the J. Geils Band's new album, "Freeze Frame," you'd think it was another "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band." But needless to say, Geils is not the Beatles and "Freeze Frame" is simply a good, but not great, album.

The band has gotten fantastic publicity through radio ads. And "Rolling Stone" magazine labeled "Freeze Frame" as the best-ever Geils album before it was even released (of course, this is understandable since the "Stone" has always viewed Geils as America's answer to the Rolling Stones).

But after stripping away the hype, what's left is an album that is disturbingly calculated to make Geils a super-group. Each song is slickly produced and is perfectly compatible with AM radio.

One of the best aspects of Geils' other albums, the band's raw, raunchy sound, is mostly non-existent on "Freeze Frame." The rough edges Freeze Frame, J. Geils Band.

Reviews' Rating: 3 stars (4 stars tops) have been smoothed out, and one ballad, "Do You Remember When?" even makes major use of stringed instruments.

Clearly the polished and controlled rock and roll of "Freeze Frame" is a far cry from the reckless abandon of Geils' early albums.

But if you don't mind a commercially oriented, slick-sounding Geils, the new album may be a favorite. It certainly is one of Geils' more consistent albums.

And the title cut is probably the catchiest tune Geils has ever recorded. Featuring a bouncy beat, snappy organ and a carefree attitude, "Freeze Frame" provides the best moment on the album.

Two songs, "Rage in the Cage" and "Insane, Insane Again," do feature Geils' trademark of a stomping beat and wailing harmonica. While no match for the last album's song "Love Stinks," these songs do show that the band still has its gutsy instincts.

Besides polishing its act, the other new direction Geils takes with "Freeze Frame" is to try a couple of melodic ballads, "Do You Remember When?" and "Angel In Blue." Surprisingly, these songs, replete with rich instrumental, work pretty well.

However, an old nagging shortcoming of Geils reappears on "Freeze Frame" — recording a song that is purely a filler. "River Blindness" carries on the tradition of having at least one poor song on each of the band's albums.

So this is probably the album that will make instant superstars of the J. Geils Band. There is certainly enough good, although commercial, material on "Freeze Frame" to do it.

And it should be said that this band has paid its dues. After about 12 albums and years of touring, Geils deserves to reap some big money.

It's too bad that it had to happen on an album where Geils mostly abandons its trademark of raw, raunchy rock and roll, which it spent a decade establishing, in favor of a polished, top-40-oriented style.

Give the University a Christmas Present

While you're getting ready for the holidays, think about adding SIUC to your gift list. Give the University a present before you head home... a break on the campus utility bill.

It's a gift everybody and appreciate, and it won't cost you a cent.

It's easy. Just take a look around your room or office before you leave. Make sure windows are shut and lights and appliances are turned off. That's all.

In case you're wondering, it works. The meter-watches at the Physical Plant figure turning off lights and other things that use electricity saved about $18,000 over the Thanksgiving Break.

Thanks. And Merry Christmas.

Police investigating theft of $300 from desk safe

SIUC police are investigating the apparent theft of nearly $300 reported missing about 11:43 p.m. Monday from a safe behind the information desk of the Student Center.

Stuart G. Burchard, 25, night manager, reported the money stolen after he checked the safe Monday at 11:30 p.m. He said the money was probably stolen sometime between 7:40 p.m. and 11:30 p.m. Monday.

Burchard told police it had been common practice to leave the safe set on the last number of the combination so it could be opened and closed easily by employees.

Experts split on effectiveness of vitamin C with colds, cancer

By Steve Moore
Staff Writer

Scurvy, caused by vitamin C deficiency, was a scourge among sailors until the mid-1700s, when a Scottish physician, James Lind, discovered that eating citrus fruits prevented the disease.

More recently, some doctors and scientists have claimed that the vitamin is effective in treating illnesses as trivial as the common cold and as serious as cancer. But medical opinion is split on whether the vitamin is as effective as its supporters claim it to be.

According to Frank Konishi, professor of nutrition at SIU-C, vitamin C is being tested in a wide range of studies, but results have been inconclusive so far. "It's been said to be a cure for the common cold, certain types of cancer, and to speed the healing process, but I'm not sure how effective it is," he said.

A large segment of the medical research community also remains unconvinced of the efficacy of vitamin C.

The controversy began several years ago when Linus Pauling, who has won both a Nobel peace prize and a Nobel prize for biochemistry, published a book, "Vitamin C and the Common Cold." In the book Pauling claimed that vitamin C in doses of 10 to 12,000 milligrams daily could prevent the common cold. The U.S. recommended dietary allowance for vitamin C is 60 milligrams daily.

Pauling's book aroused a storm of debate among medical researchers. Studies disputing

Pauling's findings appeared in short order, many of them noting that megadoses of vitamin C are potentially harmful, causing the formation of kidney stones, diarrhea, and the breakdown of red blood cells.

Recently, medical researchers in Japan have said that large doses of the vitamin are capable of preventing intestinal cancer. These claims also produced heated debate and a number of studies with contradictory results.

Konishi said the cancer research stemmed from evidence that vitamin C may counter the effects of cancer-causing nitrites which are used as meat preservatives. "Unfortunately none of the claims have been proven yet," he said.

Despite the conflicting opinions, many people continue to take large doses of the vitamin, confident that it works. Konishi said this is generally a safe practice, except when done in conjunction with taking large amounts of aspirin. Vitamin C, ascorbic acid, and aspirin, salicylic acid, can damage the stomach lining when taken in combination, Konishi said.

Many people are unaware that there are ways to fulfill their daily need for vitamin C without drinking orange juice or popping vitamin pills. According to David Brussell, an ethnobotanist at SIU-C, there are literally dozens of easily obtainable wild plants that are rich in the vitamin.

An ethnobotanist is one who studies the ways people use plants as food, medicines, building materials and artwork, Brussell said. It is a blend of the disciplines of botany, anthropology, archaeology and medicine.

Brussell's Ph.D. dissertation was based on a survey of wild plants gathered and used by the people of Montserrat, an island in the Caribbean. His research began with studying the practices of the early Indians of Southern Illinois, who gathered foods containing vitamin C to prevent scurvy during the winter.

Plants that contain the vitamin and which can be found in the area include persimmons, wild grapes, crab apples, blackhaws, and greenbriar roots and leaves. In addition, vitamin C can be found in the buds and twigs of maple, birch, poplar and elm trees, Brussell said. These can be chewed to extract the vitamin C, he said.

Although these are all safe ways of obtaining the vitamin, Brussell said anyone foraging for wild plants should be careful and should be schooled in selecting those that are safe to eat, because a number of poisonous species grow in this area.

Service planned for student

A memorial service has been scheduled for Wednesday at the Newman Center for James P. Shem, 23, an SIU-C student who was killed in a fire in his home Sunday.

The service will be at 5:15 p.m. at the center, 715 S. Washington. It will be conducted by Father Eric Murray.

Shem, a native of Orland Park, died Sunday after he was unable to escape a fire that engulfed his home at Wides Village in Murphysboro.

A faulty gas furnace is being investigated by the state fire marshal as the possible cause of the fire.

Few GOP candidates file for board

By Liz Griffin
Staff Writer

The current lack of Republican candidates for seven county board district posts and one county office is not indicative of a nationwide trend, the Jackson County Republican chairman says.

Chairman Ray Doerr says it's not easy to find good candidates — and it never has been. But he says he's working on it.

The county clerk, treasurer, sheriff, and all 14 board seats — two in each district — are up for election.

With a sufficient number of write-in votes, candidates can still qualify for the November election. For county board Republicans, only five to 12 write-ins are needed. But only the top two votegetters for county board in each party will remain in the running after the primary.

For the treasurer's office, which no Republican filed for, $3 write-in votes are needed for the primary.

The Republicans running for office are A. R. Womick, for clerk; and George E. Taylor and William M. Maurizio for sheriff.

Republicans who have filed for the board are Freddie Bastien Jr. and incumbent Irvin Phoenix for District 1; William E. Golliber, V. R. "Spike" Erickson and incumbent Larry Lipe for District 2; appointee Robert E. Edwards for District 3; and Nelson R. Gilman and Harold Engelking for District 5.

Bastien says he is a farmer and a former member of the board of supervisors, the group which was predecessor to the county board.

Engelking is a former SIU-C faculty member in Continuing Education.

The Democrats running for office are Robert Harrell for clerk; Shirley Booker for treasurer; and Raymond L. Mileur, William Kilquist, and incumbent Don White for sheriff.

Democrats running for county board are brothers Tross Pierson and Randle Pierson for District 1; Robert L. Koehn, Kenneth D. Jarrett, and Laymond Haug for District 2; Harry Browdy and incumbent Eugene Chambers for District 3; Blaney Miller, Darnecea Moultrie, Ima Mae Valentine, and Clyde Elbert Jenkins for District 4; Kay Allen and appointee Donald Meltzer for District 5; incumbents Mae Nelson and Natalie Trimble for District 6; and Doris A. Weaver, Gregory V. Schaefer, Georgeann Hartzog and incumbent Gene Dybvig for District 7.

Randle Pierson owns and manages Pierson Custom Meat Processing and Slaughtering in Murphysboro.

Valentine was appointed to the county board in 1979 but lost her seat in 1980. Valentine is currently a receptionist at Aeon Alternatives Program in Carbondale.

Weaver is a former faculty member for the School of Technology at SIU-C and is currently an SIU-C doctoral student in psychology.

Schaefer, a former SIU-C student in electrical engineering is an employee at Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburgers in Carbondale.

Hartzog is night supervising nurse at St. Joseph Memorial Hospital in Murphysboro.

Could you be a nuclear expert?

(If so, you could earn more than $900 a month your Senior year.)

Even if you're a Junior engineering or physical science major, it's not too early to start thinking about your career. And if you think you've got what it takes to become an expert in nuclear power, the Navy has a special program you should look into right away.

Why right away? Because if you're selected, we'll pay you more than $900 a month during your Senior year (if you are presently a Senior, you can still join the program).

What then? After graduation, you'll get nuclear training from the men who run more than 70% of the nuclear reactors in the country - Navy men. And an opportunity to apply that training in the Navy's nuclear powered fleet.

Only about 200 men will be chosen for this program this year. So, if you're interested call us.

Law library making its move

About a fourth of the 120,000 Law School library volumes have been settled in the new Law building and completion of the move is scheduled for Christmas break.

Estey Corp., the company that had the contract for library shelves, ran into financial problems and was unable to install the bookstacks by the start of fall classes. The company since reorganized, secured additional financing from its bonding company and finally installed the shelving units last month, according to Aileen Haake, supervising architect-engineer. The stacks were installed for the original $150,000 contract cost, Haake said.

Elizabeth Kelly, a law faculty member and director of the library, said in-depth reference will not be available during the break because of the move. The library will not shut down in order to complete the book transfer, but break hours will be shorter.

"Normally our hours during break are reduced anyway," Kelly said. The library will be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and weekend hours will be shortened.

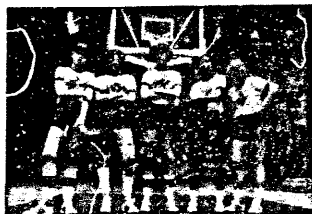

She said attorneys who plan to work in the library during break should call 536-7711 in advance to confirm hours and the availability of specific reference volumes.

New advertising methods wed rock 'n' roll, Madison Avenue

By Yardena Arar
Associated Press Writer

It would have been unthinkable a few years ago. To buy one of the two official posters for the Rolling Stones' North American tour, you have to purchase a bottle of Jovan perfume as well.

And if you wear the official Rod Stewart T-shirt being sold outside his current concerts, you'll be walking around with the Sony logo emblazoned on your back.

Signs of the times, and to paraphrase Bob Dylan, the times they are indeed a-changin' as far as relations go between Madison Avenue and rock 'n' roll. To Jay Coleman, whose 5-year-old New York marketing firm Rockhill played marriage broker to the Stones-Jovan and Stewart-Sony matches, the change is nothing short of revolutionary.

"When I started Rockhill," recalled the 31-year-old former pre-med student, "Madison Avenue and major corporations had no interest in tying themselves in with rock 'n' roll because there was still this image of rock 'n' roll being a counterculture movement. There's no question that going to Woodstock was as much for making a statement of your political feelings as for the entertainment."

But more than a decade has gone by. Music — with the possible exception of the anti-establishment output of some punk and new-wave bands — is back to being plain old entertainment, and the Woodstock generation has grown up.

"Someone who went to Woodstock today could be an advertising executive in his mid-30s making decisions on how to spend millions of dollars," Coleman said. "They understand that rock music is a very positive part of someone's lifestyle. It's a great way to communicate to teens, not something to be afraid of."

Teen-agers have also changed, Coleman added.

"Ten years ago a kid had an anti-business attitude. You go to college today, they're not picketing against big com-

Officer acquitted in beating

CHICAGO (AP) — A judge Tuesday acquitted one of three policemen on trial for murder in the beating death of a man arrested for smoking a cigarette on a Chicago Transit Authority train.

Ruling on a defense motion for directed acquittal, Circuit Court Judge Arthur Cieslik said the state "has not proved beyond a reasonable doubt" that Patrolman Fred W. Christiano, 35, an 11-year veteran of the force, took part in the fatal beating of Richard Ramey.

Cieslik turned down a request for a directed verdict of acquittal for the two remaining officers, Louis Klisz, 35, and Fred J. Earullo, 32, saying there was "sufficient evidence" to let the charges against them stand.

The three policemen, part of the department's plainclothes mass transit unit, were indicted following the July 6, 1960, incident.

Christiano wept as the judge called for a brief recess after announcing the verdict. His family jumped up from their seats as the other two defendants patted him on the back.

The Sierra Club and Audubon Society will hold a joint meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Carbondale Savings and Loan. A presentation, "Wildlife Management on the Shawnee National Forest," will be given by Mike Spanel, wildlife biologist for the U.S. Forest Service.

The WIDB Soul Entertainers will present "The True Meaning of Christmas" from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday at the Eurma C. Hayes Center, 441 E. Willow. The program will feature the "Gospel Force," Brenda McGruder and Friends.

The deadline to register for the Carbondale Park District adult basketball leagues has been extended to Jan. 15. Individuals and teams may register at the park district offices, 1115 W. Sycamore. The program is made up of four leagues: men's open; men's 6-foot and under; men's age 30 and over; and women's open. Participants must be at least 19 years of age. The cost is $10 for park district residents and $22.50 for non-residents. Games will start the week of Jan. 18 at the Lincoln Junior High gym.

Women's Studies is holding an open house and Christmas party Wednesday at its new quarters on 804 Chautauqua. Refreshments will be served from 1 to 4 p.m. Information is available from Jane Maxwell or Lynn Otterson at 453-5141.

case, the ear of the beholder," he said.

The proposed ordinance also specifies that landlords as well as renters are responsible for trash and weed violations. The city's present policy holds only renters responsible in certain cases.

Fry told Rogers that the proposed ordinance is not aimed strictly at students.

"We're not out to crucify anybody," he said. "We have a ragged town when it comes to taking care of yards. I don't think it's necessarily just the students."

Mayor Hans Fischer agreed that the changes aren't designed to harass students. He said that making landlords and tenants jointly responsible for trash and weed violations is "to the advantage of the students."

panies, they're trying to get a job."

Similarly, rock stars who once feared that "if the kids think they're too commercial, they may not be considered hip any more" have rethought their attitudes in light of skyrocketing tour costs, the soft music market of recent years and — for all but the biggest of superstars — the problem of maintaining public exposure.

"When an artist doesn't have a hit record out, they're generally not getting a lot of airplay," Coleman explained. "The primary reason the artists do it (make advertising deals) is not so much for the dollars but for the visibility."

So over the last few years, Earth Wind & Fire have become national spokesman for Panasonic's Platinum Series of portable radio cassette recorders; Charlie Daniels has endorsed Busch beer and Skoal tobacco; Eddie Rabbit is singing a Miller's beer ad; and the list goes on, with tie-ins between Ronrico rum and the Marshall Tucker Band, Camel cigarettes and the Ajman Brothers Band.

Because rock bands are so sensitive to their images, the deals are almost as varied as they are numerous. For example, in the free Rockbill concert poster for the Marshall Tucker Band, band members pose casually with a few bottles of Ronrico rum quite visible; but Camel was limited to an ad on the back of the Ajman Brothers poster.

In an unusual deal, a new band called Sneaker not only wears Jordache Athletic Wear attire in a poster but actually put the Jordache logo on the back cover of its debut album. The payoff, 1,000 pairs of Jordache sneakers worth an estimated $20,000, was used in radio station promotions for the band.

At the other end of the spectrum are the precedent-setting Stewart and Stones arrangements, in which neither act endorsed the sponsoring product.

In fact, when asked what the Stones contributed to the multi-million-dollar Jovan deal — described by all concerned as the most lucrative tie-in involving rock stars — band spokesman Paul Wasserman replied: "Nothing. They were just lending Jovan some sort of subliminal association in return for X amount of money."

In addition to the poster offer — buy $5 worth of Jovan products and you can purchase the poster for $1 — Jovan was allowed to put its name in other tour promotions but no advertising at the concerts themselves. A different poster was available outside the arena where the Stones performed and from Rolling Stone magazine.

Coleman said the Stones initially approached him to look into a sponsorship deal.

"Originally it was to just have a sort of nest egg for the tour," Wasserman says, indicating that even the Stones were a bit nervous about the sluggish state of the concert market. They needn't have worried. "The tour grew and grew like Topsy and will be the most lucrative there has ever been," Wasserman said.

He estimated the gross from ticket sales and merchandising alone at close to $50 million — and that's not counting revenue from the closed-circuit broadcast of a concert coming up in December.

Former SIU-C cage coach establishes winning career coach of each school.

In her four-year stint at UCLA, she has compiled a 98-32 record while finishing in the nation's top five twice.

Moore feels that her early experiences at SIU-C helped to make her the success she is today and gives credit to former coach, now women's athletic director, Charlotte West.

"I worked in a lot of different areas under Charlotte," Moore said. "I didn't have one particular area of responsibility. The thing I remember most about Charlotte was that she was a very good teacher and she had a tremendous rapport with the team."

"She had a strong desire to win and a good sense of humor, but she was the right kind of disciplinarian," Moore said. "I admired her then and admire her now a great deal."

Two of UCLA's top players will also make a homecoming of sorts. Two seasons ago Jackie Joyner and Deborah Thurston led Lincoln High of East St. Louis to the Illinois league and state championships in basketball and track.

The two packed up and went to the West Coast where they helped the Bruins to a 29-7 record and a fifth place NCAA ranking. Joyner, known for being a clutch player, earned Freshman All-American honors and was third in team scoring averaging 9.2 points per game.

Joyner is also aiming for the 1984 Olympic team. She is currently second ranked pentathlete in the U.S.

Thurston was used as a spot starter, mainly a defensive player who was sent in to guard the opponent's top offensive threat.

The pair will be counted on to make up a void in offense since Denise Curry, last year's College Player of the Year graduated.

Two weeks ago, the Bruins were ranked No. 8 nationally, but lost to No. 6 Rutgers 91-89 and No. 14 Tennessee 71-66. UCLA's record has fallen to 3-2 and its ranking to 17th.

According to Scott, UCLA is the toughest competition on the Salukis' schedule and her team will have to play great to win, but she thinks they can.

"UCLA is the best team on our schedule," Scott said. "We will have to play a super ball game to beat them. The kids feel we can and I think we can too."

What can a team do to upset a team of UCLA's caliber?

"We will have to play tough defense and outbounce them," Scott said. "If we can't make free throws we might as well not even step on the floor with them."

Scott sees the two teams as being similar in that they're both young, they like to run the ball and of late have been turning the ball over a lot. Scott said the Salukis are the taller team but the Bruins make up for size in quickness.

By SIU-C Women's Sports Information

The women's basketball game against UCLA will be a 'homecoming' for Bruin Coach Billie Moore.

Moore began her career at SIU-C as a graduate assistant in the women's athletics program.

One person who has influenced her development as a coach is SIU-C Women's Athletics Director Charlotte West, who coached the Salukis when Moore was a grad assistant, Moore said.

"I worked in a lot of different areas under Charlotte," Moore said. "I didn't have one particular area of responsibility. The thing I remember most about Charlotte was that she was a very good teacher and she had a tremendous rapport with the team."

Moore left SIU-C in 1969 to become head coach at Cal State-Fullerton. The Titans won the national championship during Moore's rookie year. She had a record of 146-17 with the Titans.

Moore's first season at UCLA was 1977-78, and she proceeded to lead the Bruins to a 27-3 record and the national championship that year, thus becoming the only women's coach to capture national intercollegiate titles at different schools. She has a four-year record of 98-32 at UCLA and her teams twice have finished in the top five.

Moore has become known also in international basketball circles. She coached the U.S. Olympic team to a silver medal in the 1976 Games at Montreal. Prior to that, she coached in the 1973 and 1975 World University Games and in the 1975 Pan Am Games.

Moore said her early experiences at SIU had a direct bearing upon her initial coaching success.

"I probably would have never taken my first team at Fullerton to the national tournament had it not been for what I saw and learned in Carbondale," Moore said. "It was a tremendous experience for me to see the different levels of competition across the country. There wasn't a lot of real strong competition back then outside the state but, even so Charlotte put together an excellent schedule."

Not only did the Titans put in an appearance, they won. CSF downed Westchester State in the championship finals at Boston, while West and her Salukis prevailed in the consolation finals over East Stroudsburg State.

A teacher-pupil confrontation at the finals that year was narrowly averted.

"We were in the same bracket with SIU," Moore said. "Had both teams won their openers, we would have met in the second round. That would have been something."

West recalled the inadvertent role Moore played in SIU's opening-round loss.

"I'll never forget," West said. "We were up 11 points and had things well in hand. In walks Billie and she joins me on the bench. The kids really loved her and were so excited to see her, they went bananas. Finally, I told her to leave but it was too late, we lost. Tell me concentration is not important!"

Saturday's game will have special meaning but Moore is determined not to let her personal feelings intervene, nor put added pressure on her players:

"Anytime you return to a place where you have roots, it's important," Moore said. "I would get great satisfaction out of our playing well but I don't feel there will be any extra pressure to win. I believe the greatest pressure to win comes when you are playing on your own floor. I'll approach the SIU game no differently than I would any other game on the road."

Alumni to get free admission

For the first time in four years, admission to SIU-C's annual Alumni Recognition Basketball Game will be free, and tickets are now available, according to the SIU-C Alumni Association.

The seventh annual attraction will be the men Salukis Jan. 16 game against Indiana State, starting at 7:35 p.m. in the Arena. SIU-C alumni and their family members who send advance ticket orders before Jan. 8 will be granted free admission. No free tickets will be available at game time.

The recognition game is planned each year by the Alumni Association and SIU-C's men's athletic department to express appreciation to alumni and their families for their support of the University and its athletic programs, according to Jay King, assistant director of the Alumni Association.

For the past four years, admission to the game had been $1.

Tickets may be obtained by writing the SIU-C Alumni Office, Student Center, Carbondale, Ill., 62901, or may be picked up in person at the Alumni Office. For additional information, call (618) 453-2408. All mail orders must include a self-addressed, stamped return envelope.

During break...

The Salukis men's basketball team will play three games at the Arena before classes resume for spring semester: Saturday, Jan. 2 against Illinois State; Monday, Jan. 11 against Bradley; and Saturday, Jan. 16 against Indiana State. All three games will begin at 7:35 p.m. at the Arena.

to swim 12,000 yards a day. Swimming the 1,650-meter freestyle event entails swimming 66 lengths of the pool. Not exactly a piece of cake. As a result of all the hard work, both teams are among the best collegiate swimming squads in the country. Swim Coaches Tim Hill and Bob Steele and diving Coach Dennis Golden can be proud of their athletes and programs.

The gymnastics teams share the same success and the same obscurity. Men's gymnastics Coach Bill Weade has an office full of plaques and reminders of the All-Americans that he has produced. The same is true of women's gymnastics coach Herb Vogel. Vogel and his teams have been listed among the traditional gymnastics powers for years.

David Lee, one of SIU-C's former track All-Americans, once had the same problem here. Lee graduated last spring and ran in the University Games in Moscow over the summer. It was almost impossible to obtain information on how Lee had done in Moscow from the men's athletics department. It was if Lee had never gone to school at SIU-C and had never represented the Salukis. It's too bad Lee couldn't stuff a basketball, chances are he would be remembered for that.

Those of us who have seen a Roger VonJouanne train hard and then break the American record in the 200-yard butterfly feel a special sense of compassion for the athletes not in the limelight.

I feel lucky to have met and watched compete a person like Brian Babcock. He's one of the best all-around gymnasts in the country. He is a bonafide Olympic contender and gets a lot of attention from the gymnastics world. He doesn't shout this from the rooftops, he just works hard. He gets his reward in the form of a high score following a routine.

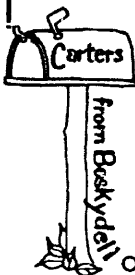

Those of us who have watched Sonya Locke play and who have met her, know how much the maroon and white uniform she wears means to her. She is one of the most talented and dynamic players to ever play volleyball at SIU-C. But individual attention is something she prefers to avoid. She is a total team player and she attributes her All-American honors to her teammates. She'll take the honor, but she'd probably prefer seeing a packed Arena throughout the volleyball season next year.

It is distressing to me to see how hard people like Sonya Locke and the volleyball team work or Brian Babcock and the gymnastics team work, only to have to compete in a near-empty Arena. Change the names and the faces around and the same problem plagues the field hockey team, the wrestling team and the water polo team. The golf, tennis, track and cross country teams are in a worse situation because they are not conducive to having spectators. These athletes are more than numbers on backs and interchangeable parts in a program. The athletes on the wrestling team and women's basketball team, and those playing golf, tennis, field hockey, volleyball, and water polo deserve more for their hard work than an introduction during the halftime ceremonies at a basketball game. They deserve support and recognition from the University and especially the student body.

They're people, your fellow students. They deserve just as much support as the basketball, football and baseball teams.

Aguirre has foot surgery

DALLAS (AP) — Rookie Mark Aguirre, the leading scorer for the Dallas Mavericks of the National Basketball Association, underwent surgery Tuesday to have a screw inserted into a broken bone in his foot.

Aguirre, the former DePaul star who was averaging 23 points per game before he broke a bone over his little toe on his right foot, was expected to be out at least two months for the 4-18 Mavericks.

The surgery was performed at Baylor Medical Center by Dr. Pat Evans.

Doctors said the screw was inserted to prevent re-injury once Aguirre returned to the lineup.

Cagers to host UCLA after Louisville loss

By Keith Mascitti
Staff Writer

The women's basketball team dropped its record to 4-2 Monday night by losing to Louisville, 77-67, at Louisville. The Salukis will prepare to play No. 17 ranked UCLA Saturday at the Arena.

Against Louisville, the Salukis had five players in double figures, but it wasn't enough to compensate for poor shooting from the floor and the free throw line.

For the game, SIU-C shot 41 percent from the field and 53 percent from the foul line.

Louisville didn't exactly burn the nets either. The Cardinals shot 47 percent from the floor but compensated by converting 87.5 percent of its free shots. Louisville hit six of eight attempts in the first half and 15 of 16 free tosses in the second half.

"If we made the free throws we could have won," said Saluki Coach Cindy Scott. "We're learning that you win and lose ball games from the 'line. Unfortunately, we're seeing this from the wrong end.

"We didn't play bad. Louisville is the best team we've played this year," she said. "The ball would fall. D.D. and Faber, who rely upon to score, shot only 30 percent."

For the first time this season the Salukis were outrebounded, 43 to 38. Louisville's Erica Washington grabbed 15 rebounds and tallied 14 points. Center Janet McNew also scored 14 to tie Washington for the team lead.

SIU-C was led in scoring by Sue Faber with 19, but Faber hit only six of 19 shots. She grabbed 10 rebounds, blocked a couple of shots, and stole the ball four times.

Char Warring pulled down 11 rebounds while scoring 10 points.

Even though the Salukis have lost two of their last three games Scott sees some good from this.

"It's encouraging to play good teams' like we have been and be as good or better than them," Scott said. "But it's discouraging to lose to them."

Saturday night's game against UCLA will mark the first return to Carbondale as a coach for Billie Moore. Moore began her coaching career as a graduate assistant for the Saluki women's athletic program, coached the junior varsity team in 1969, and now is a respected coach on the national and international scene.

Moore's first coaching assignment was at Cal State-Fullerton, where she won 146 games while losing just 17 in eight years. She coached the Titans to a national title in 1970.

Moore won her second title in 1978 with UCLA when the Bruins posted a 27-3 record. She is the only women coach to win national titles with two different schools, both in her first year as

There's more to Saluki sports than so-called 'major' teams

It's sort of a tradition that the outgoing sports editor of the Daily Egyptian expounds on the topic of his or her choice in his or her final issue of the DE.

Being basically an untraditional person, the idea of a "laal hurrah" seemed extremely distasteful to me at first. There were a lot of topics bouncing around in my brain—most of them a sure bet to irk a lot of people—but I'm in sort of a melancholy mood as my departure from this institution of higher education is only three days away.

I've always felt that Daily Egyptian reporters have a lot in common with SIU-C's athletes. Both have to endure life as a normal student and deal with homework, classes and such. Both have added dimensions of having either a job or practice commitments, which leaves precious little time to do much of anything else. I think that is why I feel a special "kinship" with these athletes—especially those athletes in the so-called "minor sports."

Saluki basketball fans received an extra treat during the halftime activities of Tuesday night's game between SIU-C and Indiana State-Evansville.

Members of the men's and women's swimming and diving teams, who had qualified for the NCAA national meet during a swim meet held at the Recreation Center Saturday, were introduced to the Arena crowd. Both swimming and diving team rosters are dotted with the names of All-Americans. Also introduced was Sonya Locke, SIU-C's first volleyball All-American.

A few people in the crowd were a tad surprised to find that SIU-C had produced so many outstanding athletes, and especially All-Americans.

Unfortunately, these athletes and a lot of others go virtually unnoticed by the University population. Most people thrive on the trials and tribulations of the football, baseball and basketball teams while those athletes participating in other sports suffer through anonymity.

Both swimming teams endure long morning and afternoon workouts. Some of the swimmers stayed in Carbondale to train this summer and it was not uncommon for some of them

Saluki center Char Warring, No. 22 in white, turned an offensive rebound into two points in Saturday's 63-58 loss to Northwesterners at the Arena. The Salukis outrebounded the Wildcats 48-29.

SIU cyclist Casebeer named to national team

Dan Casebeer, a senior recreation major, has been named to the U.S. Cycling Federation national team.

Casebeer said the position on the team was awarded to him because of his good placing in various races over the last two years. Selection to the team will allow him to train at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colo. He will pass that opportunity up until next year because he wants to finish school and complete an internship.

The team consists of the top 20 riders in the nation. Team members are eligible for cycling trips to foreign countries. Casebeer said he considers making the team one of the biggest honors he has received.

"It's an honor because I'm finally getting recognized for my accomplishments," Casebeer said. "I'm in with the big time now. Before I was kind of on the borderline and now I'm being recognized as a top contender, not as a fluke."

Casebeer participated in races at the National Sports Festival competition held this summer in Syracuse, N.Y.

Guidry to stay with Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Guidry, one of the most productive pitchers in baseball for the past five years who became a free agent after last season, signed a contract with the New York Yankees Tuesday, becoming the latest million-dollar player.

Guidry, selected by 17 other clubs in last month's free agent re-entry draft, decided to stay with New York after protracted negotiations between his attorney, John Schneider, and Yankees' owner George Steinbrenner. Schneider and Steinbrenner met for three hours last Thursday night and Friday morning, ironing out details of the contract which will pay Guidry $1 million per year for the next four years with a fifth year at the club's option.

Contract details were not announced, but the Miami Herald quoted a source familiar with the negotiations as saying it was "the second-best contract ever negotiated by a ballplayer."

Florida State added to grid slate

The Saluki football team will play the Florida State Seminoles in Tallahassee next Oct. 9, according to Fred Huff, SIU-C assistant men's athletics director.

SIU-C and Florida State officials signed a contract Tuesday morning in a deal which has only been in the making since last Thursday. Huff said it is the biggest name and strongest school the Salukis have ever scheduled. Florida State has guaranteed SIU-C $100,000 in the deal.

The Seminoles had a 6-5 record this season. They beat Ohio State 38-27 in Columbus, Ohio and the following weekend dumped Notre Dame 19-13 in South Bend. The Seminoles lost to Nebraska 34-14 in Lincoln and to Pittsburgh 45-14 in Pittsburgh.

Florida State played in the Orange Bowl in 1980 and 1981, and lost both games to the Oklahoma Sooners.

The schedule has been juggled to make room for the Seminoles. The Salukis, who finished with a 7-4 record this season, will now play the Tulsa Golden Hurricane in Tulsa on Oct. 16, instead of Oct. 9 as was scheduled originally. The Oct. 16 game against Wichita State has been canceled because Shocker officials elected to replace SIU-C with a "big name" football team, according to Huff.

Coach Ray Dempsey is elated about the prospect of playing such a football power.

"It is one of the greatest things to have happen to our program since I've come here," Dempsey said. "It will be an invaluable boost to our recruiting efforts and we will definitely be interested in making a good showing when we meet them next fall."

Vice President of Student Affairs Bruce Swinburne welcomed the Seminole challenge also.

"It's just absolutely magnificent and will be a real test for us and our team, but certainly one that we welcome," Swinburne said.

The Salukis' 1982 football schedule is as follows: Sept. 4 at Western Illinois; Sept. 11 at Illinois State; Sept. 18 home against Drake; Sept. 25 home against Arkansas State; Oct. 2 at Southwest Louisiana; Oct. 9 at Florida State; Oct. 16 at Tulsa; Oct. 23 home against Indiana State; Oct. 29 at Eastern Illinois; Nov. 16 is an open date; Nov. 13 home against Southwest Missouri; and Nov. 20 home against West Texas State.
