New defender says his job is 'frustrating'

By Diana Penner

Public defenders have no way of determining their caseloads. There is not every case that comes to the office, unlike private attorneys who can turn down cases if they don’t want to take it—or if they don’t think they can win.

Newly appointed Jackson County Public Defender Dennis Watts said his job often frustrated, but necessary.

Watts, who assumed his duties Friday, said the job is frustrating because there isn’t time to get to the root of the problems of many of the people who commit crimes, especially juveniles or repeat offenders.

"With juveniles, the question is not always 'Did the kid do it?,'” it’s more a question of 'Does the kid need help?,” Watts said.

Watts said the heavy caseload that the 18-month-old office has to handle makes it impossible to follow through in each case. Although it is not the social responsibility of the public defender to try to help a client with some of the personal problems, Watts said he feels a moral responsibility to help them with these problems.

"I’d like to help them out so that I don’t see them in the office again.” Watts said. "I’m with these people and support them as much as I can, and that will burn you, because you feel with these people."

The issue of inflation and unemployment are often directly related to offenders who come through his office, many of whom become "regulars.”

"If some of my clients had jobs, I wouldn’t see them in here a problem should be stopped at the beginning, not at the end,” Watts said.

"Our staff is very competent but with the heavy caseload, all we can do is defend them in court. We don’t have time to help alleviate the problems.

Watts, 30, received his law degree in 1971 from the University of Mississippi School of Law, and a master’s law degree, the equivalent of post-doctoral studies in law, in 1973 from the University of Missouri at Kansas City.

Originally from Decatur, Watts attended six universities, including SIU-C, for two quarters in 1968. Before he received a triple bachelor’s degree from the University of Wisconsin at Madison in political science, history and sociology.

Watts, who was first assistant public defender out of the two in Jackson County for 1 1/2 years, also teaches a criminal law course in the Center for the Study of Crime, Delinquency and Juvenile Court Services at Southern Illinois University.

Residents may unite to fight salary bid

The discrepancy between Gov. James Thompson's proposed 8 percent increase in higher education salaries and the 13.3 percent increase in the cost of living has prompted state faculty representatives to appeal at organization for "a stronger voice.”

According to Lawrence Dennis, president of the SIUC Faculty Senate, eight of the 13 representatives from the state's faculty organizations met in Normal over the weekend to discuss Thompson's proposed salary increase and the feasibility of forming a state-wide faculty organization.

"Our initial goal is to see what we can do to press for a 13 percent increase, even though that is slightly below the cost of living. We are also exploring the feasibility and desirability of forming some kind of state faculty organization to help us reach that goal,” Dennis said.

The weekend meeting marked the first time that faculties from Illinois universities have "communicated in a direct way,” Dennis said.

The weekend meeting consisted of faculty representatives from the University of Illinois, Northern Illinois University, Illinois State, Sangamon State, Governor's State, Northwestern Illinois, Chicago State and SIUC.

Dennis said before any major lobbying can take place, the faculty leaders will seek endorsement of the state organization from their constituency members. Dennis said endorsement will not be a problem, but it is necessary in order to pursue the lobbying efforts.

Dennis said the sentiment of the faculty leaders was "not optimistic, but not completely pessimistic. It certainly seems that there will be some support from legislators, but a lot of work will have to be done.”

The General Assembly is expected to receive Thompson's budget on March 3, but Dennis said it will be "weeks and even months before they (legislators) get through it.”

Thompson had recommended the 8 percent salary increase despite a proposal by the Illinois Board of Higher Education for a 9 percent increase and SIU Chancellor Kenneth Shaw's request for an 11 percent increase.

Dennis said the faculty representatives will meet again March 13 to discuss the results of lobbying and the constituency reactions to the state faculty organization.

Council to discuss revenue funds' use

City Council members and the public will be discussing Monday night ways Carbondale could spend the $506,806 in federal revenue sharing funds that will be available to the city by May 1.

Prior to the council's formal meeting, there will be public hearing at 2 p.m. in the Council Chambers, 616 College St., to discuss possible ways to use the city's portion of revenue sharing funds.

At the formal council meeting, members are expected to approve an ordinance revising the city code criteria for sidewalk construction, replacement and repair.

The city is projected to have $548,466 in revenue sharing funds available from May 1 to April 30, 1981, according to city reports. Although the city expects to receive $32,466 in revenue sharing funds, $243,700 of that amount is appropriated for the Northwest Wastewater Treatment Plant.

Federal revenue sharing is a method of returning some of the taxes the federal government collects to state and local authorities.

After the city staff prepares a final budget for fiscal year 1980-81, which runs from May 1 to April 30, 1981, a second public hearing will be held on April 14 to decide how to use the city's revenue sharing funds.

In fiscal year 1979-80 the city was expected to receive $996,950 in revenue sharing which was mainly spent on on-time only capital improvement projects, such as new streets, steam sewers and a water system.

In council action, members are expected to adopt an ordinance to prioritize sidewalk construction, replacement and repair, according to guidelines developed by city staff members.

In a report presented to the council Jan. 28, staff members suggested reviving the criterion for building, repairing or replacing sidewalks, taking into account the amount of automobile traffic, snow route classification, proximity to a school and the number of existing sidewalks on the street into consideration.

Council members are also scheduled to take action on:

A proposal to increase the child care budget by $29,986 to offset an equal amount of increased revenue from federal and state grants.

A resolution supporting the Shawnee Solar Project's plan to weatherize 2,000 homes in Jackson County.
Chicago fire settlement fails

CHICAGO AP - The city weathered its worst fire yet in a four-day struggle during which firefighters struck Sunday, while later in the day a last-minute try for a settlement failed.

For several hours Judge John H. Hechinger of Circuit Court kept negotiators in separate rooms in the courthouse and tried to break the impasse by shuffling back and forth.

Hechinger gave leaders of the Chicago Firefighters Union until 1 p.m. to show why they should not be held in contempt for refusing to obey an order to send striking firefighters back to work.

Many of the 4,350 firefighters picketed at stationhouses throughout the city again Sunday before the court session, union President Frank Muscare told a rally of about 30 strikers at the downtown Civic Center to stick with their strike.

"Nobody goes back until we get a written contract," Muscare said.

Mayor Jane Byrne has said she would fire strikers if they were found to be illegally off their job.

On Saturday night, Hechinger urged the strikers to return to work and ordered both sides to court Sunday morning. Union leaders said they had no possible contempt citation if they failed to order an end to the strike.

When negotiators showed up in court, the strike was still on but instead of going into a hearing, Hechinger sent union and city officials into separate rooms for another try at a settlement.

"I won't suggest we failed, only that we didn't succeed," Hechinger said after his try at shuttle-negotiations collapsed.

J. Dale Barry, a lawyer for the union, said there appeared to be no hope for further negotiations.

Several fires were reported overnight by the Chicago Fire Commissioner Richard G. Albrecht as 75 firefighters were at the scene but he knew of no strikers among them. But strikers Matt Herz and Jim McPhail was said and two others took a jumper from a nearby furnace and rushed to the scene. They said they put up a ladder and ran through the burning building to make sure no one had escaped.

The strike has left the 3.5 million residents of the nation's second-largest city dependent on makeshift protection.

8 Cubans granted U.S. asylum

MILAAP AP - For three days, the eight men sat quietly in a 40-foot strike cargo container,-substituting on 34 pint glasses of drinking water and their desire for freedom in the United States.

Sunday afternoon the container was hoisted from a quay in Havana harbor and lashed to the deck of a cargo ship Lissette, the men cut their way out and took over.

They then collapsed 12 hand-guns, fired shots into the air, clanged the ship's bell and latched the deck of the cargo ship Lissette, the men were not expelled. They were on board and the fires were not extinguished. They were not wanted, not wanted, or threatened.

The Liberian registered Lissette crew complied with the Cuban's demands, taking them to Key West, where U.N. officials welcomed the men and the Cubans were granted asylum.

They told the Marshal to blow them into thinking they were more than a day., said U.S. Immigration officers after the men were off board.

"They were more afraid than the Chinese," said the ship's crew.

Along with 92 others, the eight men were housed in Movement negotiations collapsed on the Lissette on Friday.

"We didn't know if we would be able to discharge the ship or if we were insured," said a member of the Council.

Schneider Hall holds northern Mardi Gras

Ah, Mardi Gras. The words often conjure up thoughts of lots of friendly people taking a break from the cold winter snow and ice and heading down to New Orleans to do some partying together.

And that's just what happened Saturday night, only Mardi Gras was taking place in Schneider Hall and the money raised went to the Council for Exceptional Children instead of entertainers and bar owners.

"I got the idea last semester, and I thought it would be a good way to get the residents involved in what's going on," said Joan Ruschower, assistant head resident of Schneider Hall. Each floor in the residence hall took a theme and the residents on that floor were responsible for the planning and execution of the theme. Ruschower said.

"There was something for everyone ranging from an ice cream parlor on the second floor to a Geisha garden massage parlor on the eight floor. On the 17th floor, movies such as the 'Exorcist,' and 'Saturday Night Fever' were often seen.

Funding for Mardi Gras came from the house officers, said Ruschower. "The house council is a body that plans cultural, educational and social activities for a particular housing group."

Events ranged in price from five cents to a quarter.

"originally, the idea began a fund-raiser for the building," she said. "But I don't think we'll break even because about half of the residents here tonight probably have a pass." Man arrested on assault charges

A Carbondale man was arrested on five charges Friday after he allegedly attacked the three police officers in his home where police were investigating a complaint.

Ronald Smith, 49, of 495 N. Washington St., was arrested on charges of aggravated battery, aggravated assault, intimidation, disorderly conduct and battery to an officer. Police officers Don Strom, Buddy Murphy and Leon Hamlin were treated and released at Carbondale Memorial Hospital. Murphy was not injured in the confrontation, Police Lt. Terry Murphy said.

Murphy said Smith, 27, refused to accompany police to the station after the officers were dispatched to the residence to investigate a "threatening and harassing" telephone call received at the Carbondale Police station that had been traced to Smith.

Once inside the residence, Murphy said Smith warned the officers that "he would fight." He reached into a kitchen drawer and pulled out a knife, according to Murphy. Police subdued him by spraying him in the chest with mace. The confrontation, which lasted for about five minutes, left the kitchen of the residence in ruins, Murphy said.

Murphy said Smith made the phone calls in an attempt to obtain $23 from Carbondale Police who were holding the money as evidence after Smith reported the money was stolen from a room at the King's Inn Motel, 825 E. Main St.

Smith was released at 6:33 p.m. Saturday and will appear in court on Tuesday.

Tito's illness reported unimproved

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Yugoslav President Josip Broz Tito, gravely ill with heart and kidney problems, spent a restful night in the hospital and asked a visitor Sunday, "What's new in the world?" a source said.

Doctors said, however, there was no improvement in the 87-year-old Tito's condition. He is hospitalized in critical condition and his chances of recovery are regarded as slim.

Round-the-clock construction work continued at a location that well-informed Yugoslav sources said might be used as a temporary burial site.

U.S. OKs international council choices

UNITED NATIONS — U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim chose a five-member international commission Sunday to probe Iran's grievances against the deposed Shah, and the United States agreed to the selections. A U.N. official said.

The secretary-general has finalized the composition of the commission and has communicated it to the parties," a U.N. spokesman Rudolf Stajduhar said.

As far as I know the United States has communicated the answer. If positive. They agreed, the spokesman added.

The commission was designed as a step toward the release of about 60 American hostages held at the U.S. Embassy in Teheran.

State official says ex-aide took bribe

LAFAYETTE, La. — An unsuccessful 70% candidate for governor said Sunday that one of his campaign committee members who also administered the state employees group insurance program accepted $1,000 from FBI informant Joseph Hause.

The candidate, state Sen. Edgar Mouton, said Charles E. Roumer II told him he spent the money on Mouton's campaign, although it never appeared on spending reports required by state law.

Boycott would destroy dreams

How can America destroy the dreams of thousands of world-wide athletes today, and at the same time, dispose away the few tremors of cold inhumanity? The Olympics have been a chance for the world’s population to do something useful together, at last for a few days. In a threatening boycott this one entity of mankind is destroyed.

Four years ago, I remember watching an athlete from Africa taking a medal in the Olympics, and how for reporters while “his” race was being degraded, he himself was government thought it would be better for him also to follow athletes to watch the games due to tensions in South Africa. I thought it was a shame and horrible for politicians to destroy his dreams. Athletes devote their lives to becoming Olympic winners. They sacrifice hours, days and years to that goal and our government doesn’t even subsidize their training.

Will the boycott really change anything? Rundalls still be in Afghanistan. Instead of boycotting, we ought to back our athletes in hopes of kicking ass in every event, especially against Russia and in front of their own people too.

I just don’t think this thought of this summer and sitting down to see the picture of an empty starting line would be any better than we have the wonderful opportunity of watching the political primaries and conventions. I don’t watch the Soviet weight lifter throw around 500 pounds or a race run in 10 seconds than hear Herbert belching into a microphone and Carter exclaiming away what the didn’t do.

We do have a vote. Let the politicians know what we want to see—not them. Monte A. Hervis, Senior, Sociology

Census information fears not unfounded

In your Jan. 29, story, “City Aims For Minority Count,” you mention that some people have fears concerning the use of the figures given by the census questionnaires. Unfortunately, there seems that such information may be used against citizens seem to have a foundation in fact.

Use of the requirements of statistical grants is that they be used by citizens to benefit low and moderate-income families. The determination concerning the location of these families figures.

However, there is no guarantee that the city wants to sort out in fact. For example, should have chosen to reside in an older residential area with narrow streets and the city feels that this is not beneficial to you, you can be the target for “improvements.” The fact that such “improved streets” improves a residential area more long-term, than the city’s plans, and not necessarily for yours, is a matter that the city claims is not true. When census information is used to determine governmental programs to be against your best interests, you may do something as the census taker is too young to testify against you.

Praise Band sings of truth

In response to Donna Rabonwitz and Philip Schanell’s recent letters, Feb. 12 edition of the Egyptian, I protect the defense of the Praise Band and the importance of Jesus music in general.

The band, made up of several students, is being disregarded by rights in presenting their message, consider the Christians in the world who are assaulted with music whose lyrics exalt the glories of illicit sex, drinking, drug use and murder. Many people are feeling the Lord’s name in vain. Such lyrics deeply grave Christians; yet I recognize this as a means of escape.

Can it be that your main objection to the Praise Band is being confronted with the truth contained in their music? You use a false definition of “separation of church and state” in your argument: People today interpret this phrase as freedom from religion, whereas, in the context, this phrase means freedom of religion. In other words, Congress could ban church music.

The public presentation of the Praise Band or Message of Jesus Christ does not violate the concept of the correct definition of separation of church and state. The false definition has been used to justify pushing the Christian heritage out of the arts and mass media, politics, education and even the entire culture.

Next time you encounter Christian ideology in music or other ways, consider the right to free expression. — Nancy Neyers, Carbondale

Right to life reason enough

You say that there is no moral basis for resisting the draft registration. "The draft is the only moral basis: My right to my own life," you tell the newspaper. "I do not believe that it is the society the government has the right to take my life, without my consent, for whatever it deems necessary.

This country was founded on the principal that each one of us has the inalienable right to own our own life, our own liberty, and our own pursuit of happiness. Do you know what those words mean?" (1 DE)
Foggy script, characters render thriller ineffective, without depth

By Bill Crowe
Entertainment Editor

One of the surprise movie hits in recent years is "Halloween," a low-budget shocker that created terror in its audience through the use of effective cinema techniques by director John Carpenter. Rather than grossing theaters out with ponzo gore, Carpenter coupled a chilling performance by Donald Pleasance with effective use of night photography and its accompanying shadows in "Halloween," to unfold a relentless thriller that kept its audience on the edge of their seats until the film's poetic conclusion.

Carpenter's follow-up, "The Fog," may disappoint the director's fans who expected a carbon copy of "Halloween." However, the film is actually a refinement of his style at the expense of a small percentage of shock scenes. Lushly photographed, "The Fog" is a thriller rendered ineffective by a skeletal plotline and no character development.

The film opens with an old fisherman (John Houseman) zealously scaring a bunch of kids with a ghost story on a California beach at the stroke of midnight. Houseman, a beautiful orator, tells the kids about a treasure ship, which wrecked 100 years earlier off the beach's coast after being deliberately missed into the rocks. An eerie fog enveloped the ship as it went down. Houseman said, and the sailors vowed to get even 100 years later.

It seems that the forefathers of the nearby town (Antonio Band) wrecked the ship on purpose to grab all the riches for themselves. The rest of the movie tells the tale of how the sailors follow through with their vow.

The film's premise sounds great, especially for Carpenter, who wrote the screenplay, the music and directed it. However, "The Fog" is bogged down by its characters. Even though the cast includes Houseman, Hal Holbrook, Janet Leigh, and Jamie Lee Curtis and Nancy Loomis, who both appeared in "Halloween," the characters aren't given the chance to develop.

Houseman only appears in the first five minutes of the film. This is a major mistake in "The Fog." His grizzled old sailor character could have served the same purpose as Pleasance's possessed psychiatrist did in "Halloween." Holbrook's alcoholic priest character is never given even room to breathe either.

The resulting work is a film with a promising plot that is never fully developed, interesting camera work (especially when concentrating on the fog or the ghostlike sailors) but no depth. A few things jump out at the audience. But they are too few and far between to breathe life into a movie with such a slim script.

By Charity Gould

Scott Magnuson, a senior in journalism, decided to emphasize form and shape when he shot his exhibit titled "Nudes." The exhibit is being displayed in the Student Center International Lounge starting Monday and continuing through Feb. 29.

"Nudes," a series of 19 black and white prints that Magnuson shot over a seven month period, will be shown in his subject's homes. Magnuson illuminated only the figures in the photograph. The backgrounds in the photos are mostly black. Magnuson said he shot the exhibit in black and white to emphasize "the beauties shown in the prints."

"It is easier to see a three dimensional effect with black and white than with color," Magnuson added. "I showed enough of the background to give a three dimensional quality." The Chicago native said Magnuson also included several black and white infrared prints to press another aspect of the nude.

"I realize that nudes are a class that have been done in the past, but this is the first time that I have worked with the subject," Magnuson said.

Sonny Fortune to appear

What if someone gave a poll, and nobody got to answer?

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — It was something like the party where nobody came.

A news release put out by U.S. Senate hopeful David C. O’Neal’s campaign office announced that O’Neal conducted a poll in Springfield Friday on the issue of government overregulation.

In fact, O’Neal canceled his Springfield street-polling appearance because of bad weather.

Bill Greener, O’Neal’s press spokesman, acknowledged the release was actually written Thursday, before O’Neal’s scheduled appearances to conduct the poll in Rockford and Springfield. O’Neal went to Rockford, but canceled the Springfield appearance.

The news release said: “The overwhelming majority polled felt the government did regulate too much.”

Greener said Springfield polling had in fact been conducted by O’Neal and his campaign workers by telephone on Thursday, and that 56 persons were called. The news release mentioned nothing about a telephone poll on Thursday.

“No attempt has been made on our part to deceive anyone,” said Greener.

O’Neal, the Illinois lieutenant governor, is seeking the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate in the March in Illinois primary.

The “O’Neal poll,” in which O’Neal appears on street corners to ask citizens their views on various issues, has become a fixture of his campaign. He had earlier announced the results of two other such “O’Neal polls.”

Greener said Friday’s release was not intended to be misleading regarding the poll, saying: “If you were going to be a sleeky fack, this is what we do for a living. I sure wouldn’t take the dive on this issue.”

The release, dated Friday, said: “Lt. Gov. Dave O’Neal, candidate for the Republican nomination for the United States Senate — today conducted an O’Neal Poll in Rockford and Springfield on the subject of government spending.”

“The poll question asked: ‘Do you think the federal government overregulates your life at your home and at your job?’ The overwhelming majority felt the government did regulate too much,” the release said.

Greener said voters in Rockford were also polled by telephone on Thursday, before O’Neal’s scheduled appearance Friday. Greener said overall poll results from the two cities showed 83 persons felt there was over regulation.

Wild dog packs pose problem in county area

By Dean Athans
Staff Writer

If you think packs of wild dogs don’t exist, try going to “certain places” throughout Jackson County.

Vicki Ashley, the county’s assistant animal control supervisor, said that people have fallen in “certain places” and have come very close to being eaten by wild dogs.

“If you fall and hurt yourself, you may be in trouble,” she said.

“They (the dogs) will go after anything that’s down. There are just places where people don’t want to be alone.”

Ashley said, “The problem is bigger than people realize. We had a case of some migrant workers in an orchard who were treed by wild dogs. And there’s a mine in De Soto where miners have come out and been circled by 30 to 35 dogs — huge ones, too.”

Farm animals have even more problems with the packs. At last week’s monthly Jackson County Board meeting, the Health and Safety Committee reimbursed farmers $62 for livestock that was killed by dogs.

“They are real mean animals. You can’t get near them.” Ashley said.

WSIU-TV, SIU-C's public television station, will be broadcasting with a new antenna later this year. The Board of Trustees has approved a $257,000 budget for the first phase of a planned two-step replacement of the 19-year-old transmitter and antenna near Tamaron. The cost of the project is $593,000.

The work will be done this summer and is expected to take two to three weeks, according to H. DuVig, director of broadcasting service. DuVig said he expects work to be completed by Aug. 15.

Sale by bartering, not by money, is goal of Pittsburgh trade group

PITTSBURGH (AP) -- Annie Green is the president of the Pittsburgh Trade Exchange, one of the largest of hundreds of trade organizations that are reintroducing the barter system to the economy.

The Pittsburgh exchange's 1,300 card-carrying members save cash by trading as many as 10,000 goods and services among themselves at cost, with the exchange acting as the broker.

"We've got businessmen, professionals, everything from a cloth company down to a sandwich maker with a squeegie and a pail of water," Green says. "You can get anything from paper clips to cars, trips on industrial equipment or cosmetic surgery. It's just cheaper to pay with your product than it is to write a check."

Every exchange member has his own account. When he sells something to another member, his account is credited by that amount. When he buys, his account is debited. With the exchange as broker, members reap the benefits of barter without having to look for someone who wants their products.

The concept is as simple as a swap, but it grows more complicated in the application. For starters, not anyone can become a member.

"An applicant has to have goods or services that other participants want," Green explains. "He has to be creditworthy. And there has to be demand for the system, for what he's offering. Supply and demand is what the system is all about."

The rules put the exchange out of reach of many individuals, those whose projects or service is not easily bartered or marketed but others, such as someone with used garden tools to trade or a secretary willing to do some spare-time typing.

Exchange president Vince Mammola notes it would be hard for such an individual consumer to trade for anything but the least expensive goods and services.

"What we tell individuals who approach us is that they ought to explore creation of a small exchange group in their own social club or friends," he says.

But if a prospective member meets the tests, the exchange staff evaluates him and sets a limit on his account, based on his credit standing and the demand for the product or service. The account can't exceed the limit on either the credit or debit side.

The member then pays a $200 entry fee plus $100 in annual dues and is issued a special blue exchange credit card.

When he decides to make a trade purchase, he consults his weekly exchange bulletin to see if the exchange has it

The liquor industry metric switch nears completion

Liquor industry metric switch nears completion

and industry metric
nears completion.

As of Jan 1, all imported and domestic distilled spirits must be in one of the metric sizes. Existing stock -- bottled before Jan. 1 -- can still be sold in non-metric containers, however.

Metric sizes for liquor bottles are similar to, but not exactly the same as, non-metrics. And price changes, combined with size changes, can make things confusing for buyers.

Here is a comparison of old and new sizes:

Old: Miniature -- 1.6 ounces. New: 50 milliliter -- 1.7 ounces.
Old: Quart -- 32 ounces. New: 1 liter -- 33.8 ounces.

Suppose you see a fifth and a quarter milliliter bottle priced $1.75. However, for buyers of the same, however, you're better off with the liter. It's almost two ounces bigger.

In Champaign, for example, one liquor store was selling Cutty Sark at $8.39 for a .754 milliliter bottle. Another Champaign store still had the larger fifth — also at $8.39.

In Pennsylvania, where liquor is sold in state-owned stores, unit prices per ounce generally stayed the same when metrics arrived. A quart of Heaven Hill Bourbon, for example, used to cost $5.99 or 18.7 cents per ounce. A liter now costs $8.25 or 18.8 cents an ounce.

Officer testifies Gacy read psalm during one killing

CHICAGO (AP) — In his murder confession, John W. Gacy Jr. told of sometimes strangling two youths in succession and of killing another with his “rope trick” while reading the 23rd Psalm, an investigator testified Friday.

Greg Bedoe, who was on a team of officers who took Gacy’s statement early the morning of Dec. 22, 1978, said Gacy related accounts of his sexual relationships and of his killings.

Gacy, 27, is accused of the sex-related murders of 32 young men and boys. He is charged with killing more people than anyone in this country’s history.

Many of the victims, Bedoe said, disposed of bodies in Circuit Court, and the former remodeling contractor one night brought two youths to his house.

“Gacy said he placed them in handcuffs ... took one into his bedroom, placed a rope around his neck, had oral sex and killed him,” Bedoe, a Cook County sheriff’s deputy, said.

“Then he went into another room, where the other youth waited and told him his friend was dead. He took him (the second boy), showed him the body lying on the floor and strangled him with a rope as he was looking at his friend.”

Black researchers told of need for understanding black culture

Steve Grant
Staff Writer

Robert Guthrie, psychologist for the Navy toexplain Black History Month and attempting to dispel the stereotypes of blacks in psychology.

"A psychologist is burdensome, because we are obligated to promote the values and ideals of our culture as well as perform the duties of traditional psychologists," Guthrie said.

Guthrie, of the San Diego research and development center spoke on the "Psychology of Afro-Americans" Tuesday in Lawson Hall, room 125. The talk was sponsored by the Psychology Department and the Graduate Student Council.

The environmental and cultural differences between the races pose the need for different criteria in measuring and assessing the morals and values of a particular group, a black perspective.

"Traditionally, the study of psychology has been dominated by white male individuals. However, adequate research by black psychologists concerning black individuals have existed for some time," Guthrie said.

Guthrie called upon the "Crisis Magazine," "The Messenger," and "The Journal of Negro History," that represented research performed by black psychologists.

He attributed the poor representation of blacks and other minorities in the realms of psychological study to "the fallacy of history.

The most popular psychology journals and publications over the years have tended to publish only material done by white psychologists in the interests of white Americans." Guthrie said. "This biased section gives only a partial representation of the history of Psychology.

Guthrie cited labeling and the use of numbers as an obscuration of society which gives rise to our being more concerned about techniques rather than the outcome of a project. In closing, Guthrie appealed to future psychologists by saying that the field of psychology is open, and that the key to seeking employment is going into areas in which they are needed.

Damage, theft tax library's funds

By Erick Howeswinit Staff Writer

W płyn's electronic scanners have kept many books from "walking out the door," but a shortage of library property is taxing the librarian's budget, added Matthew, director of the library, said in a recent interview.

Science librarian George Guthrie said that although electronic scanners, installed in 1973, have sharply reduced the number of books illegally carried out, one really knows if a book has been taken in the past year and a half.

Black said a shortage of student workers has hindered efforts to keep the library's inventory of books up to date. "We're very short of student help, and it takes too students on duty one hour to do an inventory," Black said. "They take up too much time to do an inventory.

Black had an undergraduate librarian, said that although the minimum inventory for the law has not been completed before, the library has stayed the same.

Matthew, said, "Inventory is a priority item."

"Before Tittle Tape," the book scanner was in, there was installed, an ad hoc library system counting, estimating yearly book losses to be as high as 1,500 volumes. Most of these were carried out the door. Matthews said, adding that some books undoubtedly went out the windows.

With the $6,000 scanner, a students attempt to steal be or magazines by carrying them out the door, said Leffier, a Vocational Library assistant who has been checking students leaving the library since 1973.

"Although the alarm goes off about a half dozen" times a day, Leffier said, usually it is because a reference book legally checked out, had not been desensitized at the main desk.

But about once a day, she said, someone purposefully attempts to beat the system.

John said, a graduate student in health education who makes a checking station once a day, he stopped a would-be thief only about once every couple of weeks. The rate of theft is high in the beginning of the semester, she said, and it goes up again around final exams.

Dan Land, administrative assistant for security, said that a fine ranging from $5 to $100 could be charged for the theft of a single book. But Egan said first-time offenders are usually not charged.

"It's often a simple mistake," Matthews said. "You're late for class, pick up your books, and accidentally get some library books with them.

Those caught "mutillating books," however, are dealt with more severely through the office of Vice President of Student Affairs Bruce Sornbrun.

Matthews said, "The mutilations are a hidden loss," Matthews said. "You can't easily survey the extent of the damage.

Ruth Bauner, education librarian, said the only way to know of mutilations is for students to report them when they see a book or article that has been cut. In 1978, she said, there were 96 mutilations reported on the fourth floor. Most of these were periodicals, she said.

CATERING AVAILABLE IN YOUR HOME OR AT OUR PRIVATE FACILITY
Dorm heating, air units closer to completion

By Cindy Humphreys
Staff Writer

Installation of new heating and air conditioning systems in the 11 Torrey Hall dormitories is about 20 percent complete, according to Director of Housing Affairs, Wilton H. Sculthorp.

Timelapse construction permits are issued by the City Planning Board. The dorms will be equipped with air conditioning units to aid in the cooling process. The dorm will also be enclosed with glass windows to help in the reduction of air conditioning costs.

The installation of the new systems will begin in the fall and is expected to be completed by the end of the year. The new units will provide better temperature control and reduced energy costs for the residents of the dorms.

English Channel beach is plagued by 'sniff of death'

LONDON (AP) — Every day for more than two months, bodies of a variety of species have been found washed ashore along the Isle of Wight. They are looking for a killer that kills the fish and shuts down the entire ecosystem. The cause of death is still unknown, and the investigation is ongoing.

A team of biologists and environmentalists has been working to determine the cause of the deaths. They have gathered samples of water, sediments, and debris from the beaches where the bodies were found.

The investigation has been hampered by the large number of dead fish, which have made it difficult to collect enough samples for analysis. However, the team is hopeful that they will be able to identify the cause of death soon.

Shell stations change to liter

By The Associated Press

Motors that gas up at Shell Oil Co. stations in Southern Illinois are soon to switch from gallon to liter billing, a "liter" different.

Shell spokesman Ed Garey said the company began selling gasoline by the liter "Friday, July 15," and that regulations require a half-gallon which has confused some motorists.

The conversion to liter sales means our customers who prefer to use the half-gallon will no longer face the aggravation of trying to remember the abbreviations. They believe to be $10 worth of gasoline into their tanks, they are actually spending $20, Garey said.

"Half-gallon pricing has not been a happy experience for our customers or our dealers. Litter pricing will help both avoid the confusion caused by the old system and understand the new system," Garey said.

For the mathematically inclined, there are 3.785 liters in a gallon, so a gallon of gas at 21.99 becomes a 75.7 liter tank and $21.99 sells for 31.7 cents a liter.

"We consider sale of gasoline by the liter to be the most obvious solution to the problem of half-gallon pricing which usually results in pumps not register unit prices of $1 or more," Garey said.
Cagers still in last after loss to Shockers

By Mark Pabich

Unlike most teams seeking a post-season playoff spot, the Saluki basketball squad is watching the loss column as closely as the win column. The number of losses on the Saluki's record sheet became even more critical after SIU lost to Wichita State 81-68 Saturday.

The loss to the Shockers dropped SIU's Missouri Valley Conference record to 3-11. Tulsa lost 81-74 to Bradley Saturday.

Skater depressed after injury

By The Associated Press

Two days after withdrawing from the Olympic Games pairs figure skating competition because of a groin injury, Randy Gardner was "hernia-hugging badly" his mother said Sunday.

In addition, she said, he was beginning to be "more and more depressed" about the event which caused him and his partner Tai Babilonia to withdraw Friday. After the withdrawal, the United States lost the best shot it had ever had at winning a gold medal in the pairs competition.

Gardner, 21, of Los Angeles and Babilonia, 19, of Mission Hills, Calif., tearfully withdrew Friday night after Randy fell three times during a warm-up immediately preceding the short program, attempting routine jumps which his coach John Nicks said he "never wanted.

Randy said that right after the withdrawal he felt "nothing." I didn't realize I was crying or laugh it off, or feel sorry for myself or Tai. I just didn't know what was happening." And as the reality sunk in, and as the finals of pairs competition approached, Randy was "becoming more and more depressed" according to his mother, Jan Gardner.

Fifteen minutes before trying to perform Friday, Gardner was injected with a local anesthesia--approved by the IOC Medical Commission--because he said "I couldn't do two of the elements because of the pain." On Sunday, Randy's brother Gordon, said he being receiving treatment.

Badminton team outduels NIU to take 4th in state tournament

By Nick Klatt
Staff Writer

The Saluki badminton team knows exactly what it had to do this weekend. Entering the state tournament, the Salukis wanted to outduel upset rivals Northern Illinois University for their place.

They did just that. In head-to-head competition against the Huskies, the Salukis won more times than they lost, and outscored NIU, 16-6.

Eastern Illinois and Illinois State tied for the team championship with 47 points. EIU had the opportunity to be the lone champion because of a doubles combination of Lisa Young and Becky Starzuck lost to Illinois State's Terri Kieger and Bv Starzink, 12-13, 15-13, 15-6.

Pre-meet favorite Western Illinois University's "I have to be happy with the way our team played," Saluki Coach Paul Blair said. "It's a significant improvement over last year's nine-point total."

The Salukis started their win early, as Sandy Lemon and Cathy Skiera won their first round matches against NIU opponents. Lemon downed Jeni Gorman, 11-2, 8-11, 11-4, and Alice Kiefer, 11-0, 11-7, 11-8, were losers in their following winner's bracket matches.

In the consolation bracket for players who lost in their first-round matches, SIU's Dinah Bevers received a first-round bye and then faced NIU's Gorman. She downed Gorman, 11-1, 11-9, 11-5, but lost her next match to WIU's Judy Vilcheck, 11-4, 11-11.

Elisa Sartain, also competing in the consolation bracket, received a bye and then faced NIU's Nancy Dugas. Sartain won, 11-7, 12-12 in yet another of what Blair referred to as "have to" matches.

Penney Porter, the only Saluki not to win a match in singles, lost to Stuckwisch of EIU, 10-12, 11-9, 11-6. She was leading in the second game, 6-1, but failed to keep the lead.

"It was really important to keep Northern head on and the team did a real good job doing so," Blair said.

The singles champion was EIU's Young. She defeated Western's Monica Malewicz, 8-11, 11-5, 12-9.

In doubles, the team of Porter-Dugas first led the finals in the consolation bracket, but lost to EIU's State's Darlene Dingus-Lori Wunjeski, 13-10, 15-3.

"Everyone I talked to said it was the most exciting state tournament ever," Blair said. "It was the week because the top three could've won. I'm just happy we had the tournament to do it in."
Lady eagers to host Billikens
By Rick Seymour

Sighting a 12-14 record, the SIU women's basketball team will play at Quincy University Monday at 5 p.m. at the Arena. The contest will be the women's game against New Mexico State.

Coming off a nail-biting victory over Drake University Thursday night. 93-91, the Salukis will give the Billikens a tough game, according to Coach Cindy Scott.

"We'll be playing tough in this game," Scott said.

The Salukis will feature freshman Connie Erickson at the point guard, along with center Alonzo Rogers working in the middle. Erickson is the point guard that Coach Scott has been savoring for a good while. For Indiana University and Coach Doc Coleman, it was a dual hitter pill to swallow. Either Brantley injured his ankle on practice last week but could be back this week. Brantley will be out indefinitely. Bettis turned his ankle but could be back this week.

Buckeyes crunch gymnasts; injury sidelines Babcock

By Ed Dougherty

Coach Bill Meade may have thought his 8-man starting lineup was going to give him a surprise for his 50th birthday. But if he was expecting one, it wasn't one. A 262-6.17-7.5 loss to Ohio State Saturday at the Arena.

Although SIU led by 10 points, it wasn't because of a lack of effort. The Buckeyes were outscored 124-110. SIU had no replacement and had to come from behind. They couldn't bring in any substitutes and had to settle for the all-around with a 35.34 total. The Buckeyes were second to SIU and finished first on the floor exercise.

The SIU meet began on schedule and hopes of a victory were all but gone because Meade had no replacement for Frankl and would have to take zeros in his place.

The meet was worked in block style. SIU would work one event while OSU would work another. OSU began with the floor exercise while SIU worked the pommel horse. Ohio State totaled 133.65 in its first event and the Buckeyes weren't far behind with 131.55.

The two teams switched events. SIU performed the floor exercise and OSU worked the pommel horse. The Buckeyes held their own until Babcock who finished third on the pommel horse, hurt his ankle and couldn't continue.

If having to take one zero wasn't bad enough, the Buckeyes had to take two. There was no choice at a team win. But with Keith Kirsner still to go, Babcock and Randy Bettis to perform his floor exercise and vault, SIU still had a chance at other individual victories to go with Dave Scheible's first on the pommel horse.

The Buckeyes didn't give up. Bettis tried to pick up the slack. He finished in a tie for first place on the floor exercise with OSU's Randi Hartenstein.

After two events the Buckeyes were down 8-4-7.50. But individually had finished first and tied for first. The next two events were the still rings and vaulting.

In the still rings, SIU had first with 25.85 team points, but SIU finished first with a 9.35 and Dave Sagar tied for second with a 9.05. The Buckeyes finished first and tied for first. The next two events were the vault and floor exercise.

After that, it was all downhill for the Buckeyes. In the final two events, no one finished in the top three places and SIU had to take five zeros. SIU had just six scores of 9 or better and was forced to include 10 zeros in its final score.

More discouraging than SIU's record, 27, is the list of injuries.

Top New York cager to play at SIU

Job opening: Point guard for the nation's basketball team. Scoring, passing, leadership required. Must be able to fill position and start immediately. Excellent opportunity for quick advancement. Contact SIU Coach Joe Gottfried, SIU Arena.

Gottfried never placed an ad like this, but the second-year coach did find nee to fill the requirements.

Robert Kirsner, a 6-1 guard from Lafayette High School in Brooklyn, N.Y., has made a verbal commitment to sign a national letter-of-intent to attend SIU. Kirsner is average 14.1 and is good come and assist.

The first day a high school senior can sign a national letter-of-intent is April 11. "Robert is an excellent playmaker," Gottfried said. "He has acute court sense and can put the ball into the right hands at the right time."

Kirsner's high school coach agrees with Gottfried's assessment. Calhoun's head coach, is an excellent playmaker. "A solid team player who can control any game."

Kirsner's coach at Lafayette should know best. After all, the player Kirsner is coached by his father, Bernie Kirsner. And the elder Kirsner knows his son.

Kirsner has coached in New York City for more than 25 years, and is a coaching legend in that city. His list of former players includes NBA star Bill Cunningham and Doug Llale, coach of the NBA's San Antonio Spurs.

Kirsner, who had been away from the game for a number of years, decided to get back into the act when his son began playing in high school. Getting the father and son act together, however, wasn't easy.

The Kirsners live in New Jersey, but Robert wanted to play basketball in New York because the competition there is better. That meant commuting New York City daily, one hour each way. Besides the distance, the elder Kirsner had to apply for a new position in the New York City school system. This included an examination.

"We had to go through a lot to get Robert to play in New York," Kirsner said. "We pay out-of-state tuition for him, plus all the driving back and forth. It's worth it," the father continued. "Robert is getting to play against some of the best players in the whole country. It is tougher, not only to get basketball, but to college recruiters."

Robert said he and his son have seen and talked to more than 100 individuals concerning the 17-year-old's future. Among the schools seeking Kirsner's talents are St. John's University College, Georgia Tech, Connecticut, and Southern.

Harrington and Painton lead lady gymnasts' win

By Rick Klatt

The "name tag" was made a return Saturday night at the Arena. By placing one-two in the all-around in the lady gymnasts Pam Harrington and Val Painton led the Salukis to a combined 141-135.20 victory over Ohio State.

The win upset the Salukis' dual meet record to 3-4, the Buckeyes now are 8-2.

Harrington, a freshman from East Rutherford, N.Y., claimed top honors in the all-around with a 35.85 composite, including a meet-high 5.5 in balance beam. She also took a first place in the floor exercise, 9.65, and tied teammates Painton and Maureen Hennessey for first in the uneven bars, 8.65.

Painton, the lone Saluki to travel to last year's AIAW nationals, was second to Harrington in the all-around with a 35.34 total. The Webster, Ohio, native tied Painton for first place in the vaulting, 9.00.

The win was in doubt as the Salukas jumped out to a 25-6.17-7.5 lead after vaulting. The gap widened after the bars event to 71.19-46.40, as the Salukas compiled a season-high 35.65 team score in the event. SIU, minus bars specialist Pam Conkis, tallied three 8.8s, an 8.8 and an 8.00 in the bars to compile the total.

"It just proves what I said last week after Penn State," Saluki Coach Lou Vogel said. "That's an event we can score from. We have the people who are capable of 9.00s."

"Denise Didier had the 8.00 and she had two half-point misses," Vogel added.

"It was a good overall effort for the team, which was shaky but not bad. You don't want a bad event," Vogel added.

SIU did slip in the beam, but still outscored Ohio State, 34-9.30.60. The beam total was the Salukis' lowest team total in the meet.

SIU ended the evening with a 35.13 floor score in floor exercise, which included a second-place 9.00 score by freshman Lori Erickson.

"We weren't able to work in the Arena last week because of the basketball game on Thursday, and we had Monday off because of Sunday's meet," Vogel said. "So I'm not really happy with the floor."

The Buckeyes' routine on the balance beam during Saturday's SIU-Ohio State women's gymnastics meet at the Arena. Erickson took third in the all-around with a total score of 35.13, helping the Salukas to a 141.15-132.35 victory over the Buckeyes.
