Council fines local bar owner $1,500

Davis told to close bar to liquor sales for two-day period

By Dean Weaver
City Reporter

The Carbondale Liquor Control Commission, consisting of City Council members, voted 5-0 Tuesday to fine a local bar owner $1,500 and close his bar to liquor sales Feb. 25 and 26.

Roland Davis, owner of Beach Bumz, 611 S. Illinois Ave., entered an open plea of guilty Jan. 26 to hearing officer Sharon Hammer to six counts of city ordinance violations.

Three ordinance violations were for having persons under the age of 21 in his establishment, and three for serving alcohol to persons under 21.

Hammer's recommendations to the commission as hearing officer were a $250 fine for each count and a two day liquor-sale closure.

Web Smith, attorney representing the city, said Hammer's recommendations were legal but urged the commission to be creative and put Davis on probation.

"Since these violations were filed there have been nine more arrests in Davis' bar," Smith said. "Since the beginning of November, it seems this licensee has elected to ignore the law."

Janet Russell, counsel, for Davis, said, although her client entered a guilty plea to Hammer, she thought the hearing officer was biased.

Hammer also serves as city attorney, and was chosen as hearing officer by the commission.

Russell said she wanted the commission to compromise and fine Davis $1,500 and not close his business.

Davis said he would not submit to voluntary probation because he does not want his license revoked in the future for something he can prevent.

"I never claimed that I was superman and could stop underage drinking in my bar," Davis said.

The council voted 5-0 to give Davis 60 days to pay the fine with a 30 day extension if he shows good faith in attempting to pay.

The commission also granted an A-2 liquor license to Sam Mustafa and Hasan Afshari for Flickers Restaurant and Pub, 718 S. Illinois Ave.

The business is in the former Bleyer's Sport Mart building and opens today.

In other agenda items, the City Council voted Tuesday to award Glenn's Towing & Service with the city's three year vehicle towing contract and approved the labor contract with the Federal Order of Police.

Prayers for peace capture spirit of vigil

Bosnian hostilities unite 40 community members

By Jeff McIntire
International Reporter

Sarajevo, the once peaceful city that hosted the 1984 Olympic Winter Games and is now in ruins from fighting between Serbians and Bosnian Muslims, was remembered by concerned community members Tuesday night hoping for an end to the civil conflict.

About 40 people gathered at the Student Center circle drive to protest the fighting, the candles they held symbolizing hope for peace in the troubled former Yugoslavia.

The vigil was sponsored by several organizations, including the American Committee to Save Bosnia, the Hillel Foundation, University Christian Ministries and the Newman Center.

Although the North Atlantic Treaty Organization deadline for Bosnian Serb withdrawal from Sarajevo passed Monday, Russian president Boris Yeltsin warned NATO Tuesday that Russia would not tolerate military action against Serbs without Russian participation.

Russian ultranationalist Vladimir Zhirinovskiy said Russia will support fellow-Slavic Serbs if they come under attack by NATO forces.

Demonstrators at the vigil said they simply want the war to end.

Kelly Bower, a freshman in mathematics, from Carbondale, said she is tired of hearing reports about Bosnian bloodshed.

"I'm very concerned about what's

Kelly Bower, 18, a freshman in mathematics, and Elizabeth Patula, also 18 and a freshman in chemistry, participate in the Candlelight Vigil for Bosnia as part of the Day of Awareness happening to Bosnia and I thought getting together with other people in the area could show the community what happens there affects us even here," she said.

Elizabeth Patula, a freshman in chemistry from Carbondale, said the vigil showed that people are concerned about the situation for Bosnia, observed Feb. 15. The purpose of the vigil was to raise awareness for the plight of the Bosnians and to speed an end to the violence in the former Yugoslavian republic.

Bosnia and they are willing to show it. "When anyone suffers, it affects me, but when the suffering is to this degree, when people are being ruthlessly slaughtered every day, that really bothers me," she said.

Authority on black history talks to SIUC

Kyle J. Chapman

African-American author, professor and lecturer Haki R. Madhubuti said African-Americans have no choice but to acquire insight into their own existence to raise their living conditions in the United States.

In the Student Center auditorium Tuesday night, Madhubuti spoke before 85 students and faculty members addressing the issues facing Black America in honor of Black History Month.

Madhubuti, founder of the Third World Press, the Center For New Concepts — an elementary school, and the African-American Book Center, has published 18 books, the most famous being "Black Men: Obsolete, Single, Dangerous?"

Madhubuti spent 12 years compiling essays to complete "Black Men: Obsolete, Single, Dangerous?" which was the subject of his presentation. This collection of essays transforms the negative conditions of African-Americans into a positive vision for the future.

Cheaters use loopholes to survive academic life

By Emily Priddy
Administration Reporter

While some SIUC students may be academically dishonest, the number caught cheating is difficult to determine because most situations are resolved at the instructor-student level, a University official says.

James Evers, associate dean of the College of Engineering, said only three or four cases of academic dishonesty have been brought to his attention during the last year.

Evers said he thinks fewer than

NATO OFFICIALS CONCERNED WITH RADAR — Anti-aircraft radar systems based in Serbia have become a concern for NATO commanders planning air strikes against Bosnian Serb-controlled guns around Sarajevo, U.S. military planners say. These Soviet-made systems, or SAMs, could quickly widen the Balkan conflict if the Belgrade government decides to employ its air defense network in Serbia on behalf of Bosnian Serb forces in neighboring Bosnia. Standard tactics call for destroying such an air-defense system prior to launching air strikes against other military targets, as NATO has vowed to do if Bosnian Serbs refuse to give up their heavy weapons by Sunday.

PRIME MINISTER RETREATS TO SARAJEVO — Few people go to Sarajevo to get away from it, but Turkish Prime Minister Tansu Ciller's recent solidarity visit to the embattled Muslims of Bosnia-Herzegovina must have seemed almost a relief after a disastrous January that has almost derailed her 7-month-old premiership. Not even applause from her compatriots and the outside world for her brave defiance of Bosnian Serb gunners in the Sarajevo hills could quite put Turks back under the spell of 47-year-old Ciller and her ever-present television smile, foreign diplomats and Turkish commentators said.

NISSAN MINIVAN RECALL PROBLEMS CONTINUE — The fires of the Nissan C-22 minivan recall continue to smolder. Just days after Nissan North America announced it would buy back about 30,000 of the vans, which run the risk of engine fires, the agreement between the company and the auto industry's safety regulator, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, is the target of carping by safety consultants, some van owners, law enforcement officials and a congresswoman. The agency wasn't satisfied with the results of the third recall. Nissan promised an expensive fourth repair. Class action suits have been filed.

CHRYSLER'S WIRES CROSSED, CARS RECALL — There were tears and some curses at Chrysler Corp. when the automotive engineers responsible for developing the company's new LH and LHS cars uncovered a relatively minor goof. They realized that they had to correct the error before customers rebelled. That is why Chrysler decided this week to recall 110,000 of the 1994 mid-size and full-size cars, marking the fifth time in four weeks that the company has called back new vehicles to repair defects. The problem was a year of transmission wires in Chrysler's Concorde, Intrepid, Vision and New Yorker models made from late July through early December 1993. The wires are too close to a steering component that could rub away their insulation, leading to an electrical short that would cause the cars to stall.

AGENCIES FACING FURLOUGH OR FIRE — Many federal agencies are fast approaching or have already passed the point where they must decide whether to furlough or fire workers to begin the process of eliminating 252,000 civilian jobs and cutting costs. Although seniority and veterans' preferences give employees vital layoff protection, an employee's odds of staying on the payroll, getting a buyout (if Congress ever okays them) or being fired also depend on where and how an agency cuts. The reductions could be across-the-board percentage cuts, but more likely they will be made from "target groups" that include about one in every four white-collar employees. Target group functions are the place where most red tape, duplication, high-cost and slow-paced federal operations originate, according to administration studies.

BUDGET AMENDMENT RETURNS TO CONGRESS — This was to be the year that the balanced budget amendment — under active consideration since the early 1980s — would finally be approved by Congress. Given plenty of co-sponsors, a growing sense that Washington should balance its books, and a commitment from legislative leaders to let the issue come to the Senate floor next week, prospects for passage appeared good. A closer look at the agenda reveals that Tuesday's opening session and the two days of hearings that follow are devoted entirely to opponents. Only a couple hours Friday morning have been set aside as an afterthought for Illinois Democrat Paul Simon and other supporters of the book-balancing scheme Robert Byrd, R-West Virginia, finds so offensive.

Lawsuit filed against Bonnie Owen realty

By Tre Roberts
Police Reporter

The third lawsuit filed in relation to the 1992 Pyramids apartment fire seeks more than $30,000 in compensatory damages.

The suit, against Bonnie Owen Realty, Inc. and Pyramid and Egyptian of Carbondale, Inc., was filed by Ahmit Singh, a native of India who was a guest in a Pyramid apartment and was seriously injured by the fire.

In the lawsuit, Singh alleges the building's wiring was in disrepair and presented an unreasonable risk to its residents, and the fire was a direct result of the building manager's failure to keep the wiring in good repair.

Singh, who was on the third floor of the building at the time of the fire, suffered from smoke inhalation and burns and had to be treated at St. John's Mercy Hospital in St. Louis.

To date, only two other parties have brought negligence suits against Owen and the Pyramid and Egyptian apartments. The first suit was filed in 1992 by two survivors of the fire, Gergana Zlateva and Simona D. Dimitrova, who were seriously injured after they jumped from the building's third floor.

The second suit was filed last December by Masako Shin of Herrin, acting on behalf of the family of Kimiko Ajioka who died in the fire.

In addition to the negligence suits, a pending court case may leave Bonnie Owen Realty, Inc. without much of its original insurance coverage.

Cincinnati Insurance Corp., a company with which Bonnie Owen held two insurance policies, denies the policies' grant coverage in the suits brought against her by families of students who died or were injured in the fire.

No court date has been set for Singh's lawsuit.

Snip, cut, trim: Three master degrees chopped

By Katie Morrison
Administration Reporter

Low enrollment and degree obsolescence in the professional field are reasons the University is cutting three master-of-arts programs in its Rehabilitation Institute this fall.

The SIUC Board of Trustees voted Feb. 10 to cut master-of-arts degrees in rehabilitation administration and services, rehabilitation counseling and behavior analysis and therapy. Concentrations in rehabilitation adjustment and alcohol rehabilitation also were eliminated.

Tenured faculty members will not be fired as a result of the program eliminations and students currently enrolled in the programs will be allowed to complete their degrees, according to a board report.

SIUC's Graduate School Associate Dean Richard Falvo said the cuts are not part of the Illinois Board of Higher Education's Priorities, Quality and Productivity initiative.

The PQP initiative is the cause for many University program cuts, such as degrees in the College of Education or disbanding the College of Communications and Fine Arts, in an effort to streamline the curriculum and cut wasteful spending. The cuts are part of an effort at all state universities.

Rehabilitation Institute Director Gary F. Austin said the cuts reflect changes in the workplace.

"Our profession has evolved and changed since we established both master-of-arts and master-of-science degrees in these three areas some 30 years ago," Austin said. "In the years since, it has become evident that employers prefer the master of science."

Employers look favorably on master-of-science degrees because rehabilitation now is more sophisticated and skilled, Austin said.

Austin said rehabilitation students' education will not suffer because of the cuts.

"This (the cuts) just cleans things up," Austin said. "Students will still get a quality education."

Program cuts in the master-of-arts degrees essentially are duplicate programs found in master of science degrees, Austin said.

"I do want to emphasize that the course work itself will continue," he said. "The opportunity for the student to gain that knowledge still will be there."

"While students will graduate with a master of science, they will still have the option of writing a research paper or thesis, Austin said.

New act encourages participation in community service by students

By Chris Davies
General Assignment Reporter

Students who need more money for college are encouraged to attend a National Community Service Act Conference next week, hosted by the Lieutenant Governor's office.

The National and Community Service Trust Act, passed in September, is available for all students 16 and older.

The act allows students to earn up to $4,725 plus minimum wage for working 1,700 hours during a one year period at a community service institution, such as the American Red Cross or the United Way Foundation.

The national service initiative was launched in President Clinton's Inaugural Address when he challenged a new generation of young people to a season of service.

In March, on the anniversary of the founding of the Peace Corps, Clinton unveiled the plan and in May proposed the legislation to strengthen and expand service for education.

The new law focuses national service efforts on issues facing communities across the nation, such as education, public safety and environmental needs.

The act also creates a new administrative entity to coordinate AmeriCorps the coordinating body for the program as well as existing community service programs.

Kathy Lorentz, SIUC community service coordinator, said the Lieutenant Governor's office will distribute information about agencies hiring students for service at the conference Feb. 28.

"Organizations like American Red Cross first have to apply for a grant from the federal government before hiring," she said. Once hired students can either work full-time for $4,725, or part-time for $2,362.50 for college."

Environmentalists fight Refuge burner

By Stephanie Moletti
Environmental Reporter

The fight against the proposed toxic incinerator at Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge continues as an SIUC environmental group joins in with a petition for students and the community to sign.

The Student Environmental Center will host a table from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Friday in the Student Center Hall of Fame.

Center organizer Donna Braun said the group will focus on the Crab Orchard incinerator issue and a six-foot petition will be available for people to sign.

"We'll be handing out information we've collected on incineration and what's been published on how safe or unsafe the incinerators are," Braun said.

The proposed incinerators purpose is to heat poly-chlorinated biphenol contaminated soil to temperatures high enough to destroy the PCB, according to Illinois Environmental Protection Agency officials. Problems with the incinerator arise when toxins such as dioxin are released into the atmosphere.

Tom Hornshaw, senior public service administrator for the agency, said a risk assessment is made of the area to estimate the surrounding populations daily exposure to toxic emissions.

The incinerator is harmful when temperatures are not hot enough to break down the PCBs and a portion of the PCBs are allowed to pass through the incinerator, Hornshaw said.

Although oxygen and carbon-dioxide levels and temperature are

Body art, piercing raise funds for hospital

By John McCadd
Special Assignment Reporter

Many businesses have fund raisers, but Monday marked the first time local residents had arms, hips and belly buttons tattooed for charity.

Lady Hawke Ink, on South Giant City Road in Carbondale, had its first annual Tattoo America Day, in which all proceeds from tattooing, body piercing and fingernail etching were donated to St. Jude's Hospital in Chicago.

The event netted more than $400 for the hospital, which pleased employees, but at the same time left room for improvement, tattoo artist Sprite Kiger said.

"We got some nice size tattoos done (Monday), but this year was pretty small," Kiger said. "We hope to raise more money next year."

She said among the most memorable tattoos were a four-inch sun, drawn on a woman's belly button; a dolphin tattooed on another woman's hip and a metallic piece etched in a woman's shoulder blade.

Employees completed eight tattoos during the event, which earned about $300 for the hospital, she said.

In addition, three customers had various piercings, totalling about $100. Kiger said piercings included two eyebrows, a belly button and ear lobes.

Throughout the year, Lady Hawke Ink performs many piercings and tattooings, including a fingernail-etching process, in which a design of the customer's choice is drawn toward the top of a fingernail, she said.

This is a non-piercing procedure, in which the design is removed as the nail grows out, employees said.

This year's Tattoo America Day event happened to fall upon Valentine's Day, and ironically, Kiger did not tattoo any girlfriend's or boyfriend's names on customers' arms.

In fact, this is an act that Kiger refuses to perform.

"I don't do it because it's stupid," she said. "I'll do mothers or family members, but I don't do girlfriends or boyfriends. You have them one year, but years change."

Next year, Lady Hawke Ink employees plan to advertise the event more heavily, Kiger said. The event hopefully will become somewhat national, in that Chicago and New York tattoo parlors will be asked to join in the charitable effort.

During Halloween, the parlor will host a similar fund raiser, except the proceeds will go to the Make-a-Wish Foundation, a nationally renowned organization that provides "wishes," such as Disneyland visits, for terminally ill children.

Clinton budget plan may increase debts

PRESIDENT BILL CLINTON DISPELLED THE myth that his surprising victory over incumbent George Bush in the November 1992 election was not based on empty promises. Unfortunately, some of Clinton's campaign promises conflict. In order to remain consistent with his pledges to "reform" healthcare by providing universal coverage and to not raise taxes on the middle-class, Clinton must sacrifice a balanced budget and hence a reduced deficit.

Even the Congressional Budget Office's most optimistic estimate calls for an even larger deficit six years from now as opposed to the balanced budget Clinton promised within that period.

INCLUDED IN THE FISCAL 1995 BUDGET ARE funding increases for education, law enforcement, transportation and job training programs. Clinton fulfilled his pledge to not raise taxes on the middle-class to fund these increases as well as his new national healthcare plan, opting rather to cut existing programs, increase user fees at national parks, and increase the tax on cigarettes.

While taxing cigarette smokers to pay for an enhanced healthcare program provides an ironic twist, it does not provide enough revenue to keep the budget from swelling into the 21st Century.

On the losing end of the budget war were defense, space, agriculture and housing programs as well as some social welfare and health programs for low-income families.

AFTER BEING SWEEPED TO OFFICE AMID CRIES for change, it is becoming apparent that Clinton cannot fulfill all that he has promised. In raising the issue of universal healthcare he has addressed a pressing need. In refusing to find a way to fund healthcare reform, he has ensured that this country will face budget deficits for a period in excess of his first term in office, unless certain concessions are made.

CONCESSIONS WILL HAVE TO BE MADE. THE president will have to deal with Republicans who want deeper cuts in federal spending and who shudder at the thought of a new health program and its inherent bureaucracy. Clinton has shown that he can be flexible as evidenced by his handling of issues arising from gays in the military, the North American Free Trade Agreement and an economic stimulus package.

The fight for universal healthcare is a noble effort; however, lacking proper funds, it may be no more than a future goal. At a time when his attention is divided among a budget, healthcare reform, and international peace-keeping efforts, Clinton may have to settle for something less than universal coverage.

CLINTON'S BUDGET SURVIVED THE INITIAL round of political posturing its first week on Capitol Hill illustrating that his Office of Management and Budget have put together a $1.5 trillion package that lawmakers feel is a starting point, but no more than that.

Letters to the Editor

Support athletics fee increase

As an avid fan of Saluki athletics I am definitely in favor of an athletic fee increase.

Our fee is substantially lower than that of other Division I schools with the same reputation as SIU. I think as students of a Division I university we should expect that we have to pay an athletic fee. The threat of dropping out of Division I should be enough for students to vote for the increase.

However, in response to Karie Irvin's letter (Wednesday 02-09-94), we cannot expect the Athletic Department to cut down on so called "extra privileges". The treatment our athletes receive is minimal compared to other universities. The university of Kentucky has its own jet that flies its player to their games. This kind of treatment is expected by scholarship players. If they don't get it here, they will go some place where they will. Also our basketball team only flies if the drive is over six or seven hours.

I do agree with Ms. Irvin, however, when she said that paying the fee is a way to show the athletes that we appreciate the entertainment they give us. I think it would be a shame if athletics dropped out of Division I. This would take away the great rivalries that have been built up over the years.

I think the athletic department does have a responsibility if in fact the athletic fee is raised. That responsibility is to make the needed changes to schedule better talent, especially for the basketball team. If it takes playing the University of Illinois two years in Champaign in order for them to come here, then we should gladly accept their offer. Or try and schedule the University of Kentucky or other neighboring Top 25 schools besides Missouri. I think this is what is holding us back from becoming nationally known and a permanent fixture in the NCAA Tournament. This could also help in recruiting. If someone cannot play for UK then at least they can go to a school that plays against them.

Lastly, I think everyone should leave Rich Herrin alone. According to Inside Sports, SIU is seventh on the list of underrated programs. He has produced many winning teams over the past years. He has also done a great job recruiting the best talent available to SIU, especially in acquiring former Kentucky Wildcat Aminu Timberlake.

— Kevin Hegarty, sophomore, radio and television

USG needs strong leadership

I was pleased to read the letter to the editor written by Julie Meredith, about the progress (or lack of progress) that our student government has made this year.

I consider myself to be an average student; as I stay aware of what is happening around campus and follow the events which affect me as a student at SIUC. Along those lines, I can understand if our student leaders get focused on a narrow path, but I can't understand what seems to be blind leadership. I really haven't seen much that has been accomplished this year. Compared to last year, we seem to have taken a few steps backward.

I have been involved in different student groups on campus and know how important organization and leadership is to them. My guess is that our student government is lacking both of these components right now. I only hope that they will get their acts together so that the student body doesn't suffer. And one suggestion: maybe it would help if the USG President and Vice President were seen around campus a little more. Do they attend student meetings, sports events, or anything like that? Unfortunately, I don't think I would recognize them even if they did.

— Michael Luther, senior, health care management

Oppose increase: Books, not sports

The proposed athletic fee increase should not be passed. First let us all agree not to lynch the athletes. If given the same opportunity, few would pass on a partial or free ride for playing a sport they enjoy. But this is an academic institution and we are here to earn degrees. For the majority, summer-time tennis and winter ski-trips are not only popular activities but understandably come with a price. And we pay to play! But the SIUC athlete's "play time" bill is footed in part by the other students here. It's time to stop.

Being an athlete is not easy. And to the athletes I agree, your existence is much like a job. You're being paid to perform, in part by the athletic fund which is partially supported by my athletic fee. So be it a small roll, I am in part your employer. Which makes me ask: Do I really need you as much as I need qualified librarians, updated publications and maintained facilities? Damaged and lost library books go unrepaired and unplaced, but we have plenty of new baseballs. Library subscriptions go unrenewed, degrees and entire programs have been dissolved. It is apparent that this entire institution has been victimized by past budget cuts. Yet the athletics program has remained untouched. It is about time athletics felt the crunch too. Ask yourselves: Do we need books or baseballs? WE NEED to support the educational facets of SIUC which benefit the entire student body. We do not NEED to pay (or play time) for a minority. It's all a matter of priorities. We need to learn. Playing games is an option.

Fight crime by outlawing guns

The problems of violent crime and gun-control legislation need solutions. In the Feb. 2 issue of the D.E. Larry Morse suggested that we just prevent those with criminal records and histories of mental illness from purchasing guns. This does not seem to work as shootings are one of the leading causes of death in young age groups. I suggest thinking about stronger measures.

What if we restrict guns by applying the same methods of enforcement currently used for marijuana? First we would outlaw guns. A gun might be safe in the hands of a "good" person, but everyone who has murdered with a gun has, at one point, had no criminal record. Just because some people can handle the responsibility does not mean we should endanger the public with those few who might abuse a gun.

The next step is to sharply penalize anyone found in possession of a gun. If a person has more than one gun or five bullets, a reasonable amount for personal use, then they would be charged with felony dealing. To make people take these laws seriously, mandatory minimum prison sentences would be in order. We shouldn't rule out the rehabilitative possibilities either; Anti-violence boot camps would lighten the load on prison space.

The final aspect of making our country a safe place for family values to thrive would be a massive campaign to educate our young about the dangers of guns. Teachers would ask children if their parents owned anything that looked like toy models used in class discussions, and affirmative answers would be grounds for search warrants. In order to get the message across it would be emphasized that everyone with a gun is a gun abuser and thus a great threat to society.

We could finance these operations through forfeiture/seizure laws. Under these expanded laws homes, cars and bank accounts would be seized and sold by the state in instances of gun possession (of course people will have the right to prove themselves innocent). Partnership for a Gun Free America and Zero Tolerance will be the slogans of the New World Order.

Underage drinking needs attention

I am writing in reference to the recent fatality and injuries of three local high school students on Sunday morning, January 30th.

This sad event is an example of the problem of allowing persons under the age of 21 in local drinking establishments. Granted, there are not many alternatives for minors in Carbondale, but entertainment is simply not worth someone's life and the serious injury of others. In addition, the economic and emotional hardships these families will incur in the months ahead do not compare to providing minors an opportunity to drink illegally.

This is not a letter placing the blame on the local bars, but instead a call for aggressive, positive action on the part of the University, Student Government, the local communities, and local bars and restaurants to provide chemical-free social events and other alternatives for those under 21. It is time to look at reality. When persons under 21 are allowed in bars, someone will buy their alcohol or be sold drinks accidentally by the business.

Since I work as a registered nurse in the emergency Department at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale and am a student here at SIUC, I can see both sides of the controversy.

I see minors, both from the local high schools and from the University, being treated because of underage drinking in local bars. These actions are costly not only to the individual and the families, for both economic, physical and emotional reasons, but underage drinking costs the University large sums of money in insurance costs that transfers to all students.

I hope student leaders will take the responsible role and work for the safety of minors from SIUC and the community. These opinions are my own and do not represent the views of Memorial Hospital of Carbondale.

Kind words mask horror

I would like to respond to the letter by Murray and Foerch (1-31-94) in which they stated: "we love animals and engage in ethical animal research."

Their letter gave no acknowledgement to the horrors that individual animals are subjected to by the animal research industry and instead utilized pleasant sounding words like "ethical" and "humane."

I wonder if the authors are willing to concede that their participation in animal research reveals that they have been desensitized to the cruelty which animals involved in research must suffer? I also wonder if animal experimenters would find it so "necessary" to sacrifice animals if monetary incentives, including research grants, were not at stake?

I am not misled by the argument that an anesthetic is (sometimes) given to the animals being experimented upon; if you drug someone before cutting them open or spraying poison into their eyes, you are no less guilty of having committed a crime.

The human animal has lived upon this Earth a very short time compared to the presence of Life itself, and we owe our existence to our kinship with our fellow life forms. The life in a spider, a blade of grass, or a dolphin is as marvellous as the life inside you or I.

Let us move beyond utopian fantasies about the potential of animal experimentation and deal with the atrocities which are being committed in the name of "science." The choice is between choosing to respect life and sacrifice marginal medical gains or to sacrifice our respect for life in favor of marginal medical gains.

Look up the facts about the quantities, conditions, and benefits of animal experiments. When one sees what the experimenters call "humane" and "ethical," it is not hard to oppose their "love" for animals.

Singles miss Valentines' treats

Once a year it comes and haunts the minds of single people. It falls in the middle of winter and it possesses every television and radio station in America to play Richard Marx songs and teach us about how to bake sugar cookies in the shapes of Cupids and Hearts.

Every single woman sits by the phone waiting to hear from the man of her dreams, knowing full well that he will never call, (mostly because he doesn't exist, or she runs back and forth to her mailbox looking for the valentine from the man she hopes is Mr. Right.

Men are just as bad. We just deal with it differently. Single men usually get bitter. While women are dropping invisible hints that they like us, we sit around and complain about how Valentines day can only be accurately compared to the Holocaust. Men have different degrees of bitterness. There are those that really do hate women because of past relationships, and there are the majority who choose sarcasm as a way of dealing with the fact that their suite-mates are dating the girl of their dreams.

But there is good news. Valentines day is only one day. Single people get 364 other days. The problem is all of us single people are missing each other. Perhaps my view of Valentines day is skewed, and I am also fully aware that my view might change if I wasn't single, but until that time I am going to celebrate my singleness. No more pouting. Anyone else care to celebrate?

All creatures have rights, not just man

In his February 9 letter concerning animal rights, Michael Caldwell stated that "Rights are either God-given or evolve from democratic processes."

He then concluded that because animals cannot make and keep a social contract, they have no rights.

I would like to address the first half of Mr. Caldwell's "either-or" statement, i.e. that rights may be "God-given."

If God exists and if He has verbally and trustworthily revealed Himself to mankind, animals do indeed have rights.

Specifically stated in the scripture, some of these are: 1) the right to work in equitable conditions, 2) the right to rest one day in seven, 3) the right to be provided with all things needed, 4) if injured, the right to be rescued and cared for, and 5) if a stray, the right to be fed and housed.

Humankind has the ability to think, reflect, and ponder. It is worth pondering that the social contract may not be the basis for the rights of living being. Furthermore, many, though accepting neither social contract nor Scripture, still approach non-human creatures with compassion that is worthy of reflection.

measured the dioxin levels are not. So, "the extent of the dioxins released into the environment is not known."

"Our problem with the incinerator is it has not been proven to be safe enough for the people or the wildlife in the area," Braun said.

The petition will be sent to Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Carterville, asking him to stop the incinerator from being built and operating at Crab Orchard and to investigate the validity of the agency's guidelines on incinerators.

"The incinerator in Jacksonville, Ark. has not lived up to what the agency predicted and it is endangering the community.

The agency keeps telling us the incinerators are safe, but past experiences with incinerators have not proven their safety," Braun said.

The center has worked with other area environmental groups in informing citizens about the hazards of the incinerator.

"We've walked out into the neighborhoods that will be most affected by the incinerator and informed the people of those neighborhoods on the proposed incinerator," Braun said.

During the tabling, background information on the fight against the incinerator will be available, along with past correspondence between Congress and various environmental groups concerning the incinerator, Braun said.

The center is located in the Interfaith Center. Students interested in joining the center are welcome to attend the meetings at 8 p.m. Thursdays. For more information call Donna Braun at 549-7387.

Navy leaves new center unused

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—First you do, and then you don't. Then you say you will, and then you won't. Then the government buys the Navy a fancy $27 million building in Virginia, and the Navy decamps to Rhode Island.

In the federal bureaucracy, where decision-making is often an adventure, the Navy deserves a medal for trying to have it both ways—and succeeding. Critics perceive a scandalous boondoggle; the Navy maintains it made the best possible deal for itself and the taxpayer.

In 1991, the Navy told the Base Realignment and Closure Commission that its Naval Undersea Warfare Center, a submarine support facility in Norfolk, Va., needed to upgrade and needed to remain in the Hampton Roads area—close to the boats.

There was no opposition from the commission and during the next two years, construction was completed on a 280,000-square-foot, $27 million, taxpayer-funded, special-use headquarters for the center in Suffolk, Va., near Norfolk.

In early 1993, the center's commander told employees the future was secure and they could move to Suffolk.

Five months later, the Navy suddenly changed its tune, saying it had to move the center to Newport, R.I., for cost-saving reasons, even though Newport had no boats. The commission agreed.

Two weeks after that, on July 12, 1993, the Navy actually held a ribbon-cutting ceremony for the spurned headquarters, and Rep. Norman Sisisky, D-Va., Suffolk's representative, actually spoke at it.

He was not pleased. "I feel like one of those Marx Brothers movies where Groucho danced into the room, singing, 'Hello, I must be going. I'm here to say I cannot stay.'"

Now it's February and the Suffolk Center is a white elephant in search of permanent tenants.

Accountants are still arguing over the cost of the move, admirals are still wondering what's going on and congressional investigators are trying to find out.

Karen Solomon, executive director of the Illinois Campus Compact for Community Service, said students should apply early because of the small number of positions offered to Illinois students.

"This year 20,000 students will be hired across the United States," she said.

"That may sound like a lot of students but Illinois is only guaranteed 170 full-time positions, which is not much considering how many college students Illinois has."

The Illinois Red Cross already has begun hiring students for a 13 month project sponsored by Carbondale Red Cross that beginning in March. Beth Parker, director of the Carbondale branch, said the agency is looking for two volunteers to help plan a 13 month disaster preparedness project in parts of Southern Illinois's river communities.

"The state will be hiring two students to work with the Carbondale Red Cross in an effort to give river community residents disaster training," she said.

"The volunteers will begin their training in the middle of March or the beginning of April."

Students wishing to participate should know that they must train in Springfield, Parker said.

He began his presentation discussing the primary problems facing the African-American community.

"We must know that we will face racism in America, and then go about our lives productively and intelligently, he said.

"We realize that racism is not

by a professor, the professor and the student have an opportunity to work out a solution to the problem," she said.

Cornett said sometimes the department chairperson also is involved with the situation before it reaches the dean's office.

She said she has not heard any cases of academic dishonesty during the last year.

Evers said he usually does not hear of cheating incidents unless students and instructors disagree on disciplinary action, such as failure of an assignment or class.

"Last year, I believe all the cases were handled at the instructor level," he said. "We didn't actually have to do a panel and have any action further than the student getting an 'F' in the class."

Representatives of five SIUC colleges said all their cheating problems were handled before the dean level last semester.

Les Yerson, associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said formal charges of cheating have been brought against two students in that college during the past year.

James McGuire, dean of the College of Agriculture, said only one student formally was charged with academic dishonesty in 1993, and that situation was worked out within the college.

McGuire said the college takes precautions to prevent cheating, including making special seating arrangements during tests and imposing sanctions against students who cheat.

"There's a strong program in this college to discourage cheating, and we hope these low figures indicate the success of that," McGuire said.

Administrators in two of the nine undergraduate colleges could not be reached for comment.

According to the SIUC 1994-95 Undergraduate Catalog, students guilty of academic dishonesty are subject to severe penalties.

If caught, students may receive a failing grade for the individual work of the class in which they were caught cheating. In more serious cases, students may be placed on academic probation or suspended from the University.

If an instructor files a formal complaint against a student, that person has an opportunity to challenge the allegation and appeal the University's disciplinary action.

After three hours of research, Zeligman located the plagiarized article in an issue of Time magazine from about 10 years earlier and photocopied it, he said.

When he returned papers the next day, Zeligman said he called the student aside and asked him several times if the paper was original work.

"He said 'Yes, it was,' so after class I called him up to my office and I asked him one last time — I then opened my desk drawer and pulled out a copy of the Time magazine article," he said. "I said, 'Do you still say you didn't copy it?'"

When the student insisted the paper was his own work, Zeligman read aloud from it then asked the student to read from the article.

"He read a couple of words and he then 'fessed up,'" Zeligman said.

Students who cheat often are under extreme pressure from parents, instructors or advisers and are afraid of getting bad grades. But that is no excuse, Zeligman said.

"People encounter all kinds of pressures — it's just how you choose to deal with that stress," he said.

"Everybody's under pressure — athletes, people who receive grade-based scholarships, people whose parents pay their way — they're all under the gun."

Cheating usually is futile because students who need an unfair advantage generally get caught, and those who are bright enough to avoid detection probably do not need the extra assistance anyway, Zeligman said.

SIUC political science professor David Derge said he does not have problems with students cheating because he makes dishonesty difficult or unnecessary.

Derge distributes different exam forms during multiple-choice tests so students sitting next to each other do not have the same questions in the same order.

Derge said he gives students a list of possible essay questions before tests in his more advanced classes so they have an opportunity to prepare ahead of time.

"There's no problem of a student coming in and seeing a question he's never seen before and then copying off of someone else out of desperation," he said.

Juniors and seniors probably are less inclined to cheat than underclassmen because they take classes in their areas of interest and therefore are more likely to prepare adequately, Derge said.

"I think that surely the interest level increases as (a student) gets more into his major," he said. "Probably the temptation to do those sorts of (dishonest) things would diminish as he gets into more specialized courses — but that's just speculation."

Like Zeligman, Derge said he thinks pressure is a factor in students' decision to cheat.

"If a student has failed to prepare, there must be that moment of panic when any solution is better than none," he said.

BOSNIA, from page 1

Officials who organized the protest said there are better alternatives than the threats NATO made against Bosnian Serbs.

SIUC history lecturer Richard Jensen said the United Nations arms embargo should be lifted so Bosnian Muslims can defend themselves.

Maqbool Ahmad, president of the Islamic Center of Carbondale, said he does not expect NATO to follow through with its threat to bomb Serbs.

He also said the best solution is for the United Nations to lift the embargo.

Jensen said the demonstration could be the beginning of a change in public opinion, and U.S. citizens may start pressuring the U.S. government to lift the embargo.

"My hope is that this is the beginning of a nationwide effort to bring the war in Bosnia to an end," he said.

Students study shrugging, sighing, stress's significance

By Aleksandra Macys
Health Reporter

When SIUC student Greg Szidik and his fiancée Jean leave for New York to plan their June wedding, they will take with them stress-management skills.

Szidik, a graduate student from Carbondale, said he needed to find methods to re-energize his body when he has no time to take a walk or exercise.

"I need to learn how to get more energy on days when I can't be outside," Szidik said.

His hectic schedule, coupled with his upcoming wedding plans, prompted him to take part in the Student Center presentation "Re-Energize and Re-New Just for You (101 Ways to Reduce Stress)."

In the Student Center Ohio Room, was presented by Annette Vaillancourt, assistant program coordinator for stress management at the Wellness Center.

Vaillancourt taught participants ways to reduce stress and energize their bodies. Stretching and energizing through different techniques was the focus of the presentation.

Participants were taught tension reducers through neck rolls and shoulder shrugs. Vaillancourt also addressed breathing exercises that can help ease tension.

"These are things people can do at work or during a study break to energize their bodies and get oxygen flowing to all areas," Vaillancourt said.

Vaillancourt also showed participants techniques like the "snap, crackle, pop," which involves gently patting down the body. This maximizes oxygen flow throughout the body, she said.

She also recommended participants jump up and down while shaking their limbs, which also helps maximize oxygen flow.

"The purpose of the presentation is to have fun and leave feeling energized," she said.

Vaillancourt also emphasized the importance of sighing and groaning while stretching. Laughter and a cheerful, optimistic attitude also are important ingredients in stress relief, Vaillancourt said.

The SIUC Counseling Center says physical ailments can accompany stress. Jeff Harris, a psychologist at the center, said stress can cause a weakened immune system making people sick more often. Harris said people should take time to reduce stress directly and indirectly.

"People need to directly reduce stress by reducing the load that is causing the stress. Indirectly, people need to first take care of themselves by eating and sleeping well and exercising moderately every day," Harris said.

Harris said people who experience high levels of long-term stress sometimes have problems associated with heart disease and high blood pressure.

Vaillancourt said people should learn relaxation and energizing techniques, such as the breathing and stretching skills, to cope with life's daily hassles, such as being late for work or missing an assignment. Skills can also be useful in coping with traumas, such as a death in the family.

Betty Kelley, SIUC assistant sport psychology consultant, said stress is caused by a mismatched perception between demands and the situation.

"Stress levels can vary day to day and are purely individual because people perceive situations differently," Kelley said.

Kelley said the single most effective technique for stress relief is deep breathing. Other techniques such as progressive muscle relaxation and visualization also are effective.

Kelley said people need to find a relaxation method that works best for their individual needs.

"It is important to remember that relaxation techniques are skills which need to be learned and continually practiced," Kelley said.

Researchers warn about lens removal

The Washington Post

Remove contact lenses before going to sleep. Doing so could cut the risk of corneal damage by up to 74 percent. Johns Hopkins University researchers reported this week.

Several studies have documented that wearing disposable contact lenses significantly increases the risk of damage to the cornea, the clear covering of the eye.

Known as ulcerative keratitis, the condition is caused by an infection with bacteria or other germs. It produces a destructive inflammation of the cornea.

Reporting in the February issue of the Archives of Ophthalmology, Johns Hopkins researcher Oliver Schein and a team of researchers from other institutions finger sleeping with contact lenses in the eye as the leading culprit for ulcerative keratitis.

The study examined 40 patients with ulcerative keratitis and compared them with 180 matched controls who also wore contacts.

Users of disposable soft contact lenses, which can be worn for up to two weeks without removal, were 15 times more likely to suffer ulcerative keratitis than those who removed their soft contacts regularly for cleaning, the study found.

But when researchers adjusted for overnight wear, the risk of developing ulcerative keratitis with disposables dropped to three times higher than other lenses.

New Orleans' band "Blue Dixie" brings 'melting pot' style to music

By Kyle J. Chapman
Entertainment Reporter

Free-style rock n' roll is what they call it. Blue Dixie band has invented a "melting pot" of music coming from New Orleans with an added twist of rock n' roll.

Blue Dixie played at Hangar 9 last weekend and brought to Carbondale a mix of music that is making them more and more popular throughout the Midwest.

The five band members are: Dave "Chopper" Campbell, rhythm and guitar-vocals; Brad Sarno, lead guitar-vocals; Andy Barnes, bass; Larry Lund, piano-vocals; Mike "Smitty" Smith, drums; and David Nichols, drums-vocals.

All band members are former students of the University of Missouri in Columbia. This is where their career and expansion as a band took place.

Barnes said the band got started by playing at parties in Columbia, to keep themselves from becoming bored with school.

"We just started playing at the bars in Columbia and at parties," Barnes said. "Since our start was there, we have played all over the Midwest in Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois and Indiana."

Barnes said making a name for themselves was one of the most difficult aspects of being involved in the music scene.

"Getting started was the hardest part. It was a gradual process that took us about five years," he said. "We played in St. Louis once a week and that's where our first big opportunities began."

Band members said their music is rock n' roll but they do not like to put labels on the music.

"We call our music free-style rock n' roll because it comes from Dixieland music which comes from Africa and that's what we try to play," Barnes said. "We play a lot of drums and jazz-like rhythm in our music and that gives us our style."

Band members said they have the name Blue Dixie because they derived their style from the music in New Orleans, a place they consider to be a melting pot of many different styles.

"We are Blue Dixie because we think rock n' roll comes from Africa and went to New Orleans as a mass of different American styles of music," he said. "We improvised from it to develop our music."

Sarno said Blue Dixie definitely is on the rise.

"We've written new stuff and we have more gigs than ever," Sarno said. "It doesn't look like it's going to stop any time soon."

Sarno said he describes their music as improvised dance music that represents different forms of American music.

Hangar 9 owner Richard Simpson said the band is very popular in Carbondale and they come in every five weeks and bring in a pretty enthusiastic crowd.

"My function is to just get someone who I think can bring in clientele," Simpson said. "And they always do that."

"Being a musician and a booker for 14 years, I can say that this band can't be labeled by anyone. It's just very well done music," he said.

Recall of van asks who is responsible

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—The fires of the Nissan C-22 minivan recall continue to smolder.

Just days after Nissan North America announced it would buy back about 30,000 of the vans, which run the risk of engine fires, the agreement between the company and the auto industry's safety regulator, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, is the target of earping by safety consultants.

Who was in the driver's seat—Nissan or NHTSA?

Why were there four unsuccessful recalls of the vehicle? Will the buyback program have the intended effect of getting the problem vans off the road?

In the dance of regulations, and their enforcement, decisions are made that seem to be the best thing to do at the time, but that later leave room for criticism.

"I don't see anything that I am bothered by," said William Boehly, associate administrator for enforcement at NHTSA. "I might do things differently, but I don't know what."

Counseling supports, helps

By Jean Cunningham
Student Health Programs

To Your Health

"Why would anyone in their right mind see a counselor?" "How can a counselor help me any better than friends and family can?" "Does it mean I am mentally ill if I go see a counselor?" "How do I know that my concerns won't spread all over campus if I see a counselor?"

People have many worries and concerns about seeking professional counseling. It can be scary to say "I have a problem I am having trouble solving" and even scarier to go to a stranger for help. However, most college campuses provide counseling services for students because problems are a part of everyday living, and because talking with a professional counselor can be helpful in ways that talking with other people may not be.

One major advantage of talking with a professional counselor is that he or she is not part of the person's everyday life. This allows the counselor a more objective view of their situation, and may also mean that the counselor feels more comfortable giving them direct feedback than a friend might be. Some problems involve feelings that would be very embarrassing to admit to a friend of family member. A professional counselor can hear all of someone's feelings without judging their appropriateness of feeling hurt or upset.

Another advantage to talking with a professional counselor is that these services are confidential. Counseling agencies cannot give out any information about clients without their written permission. This means that no one else in the university, and no one in a student's family, can call up and find out whether or not they are seeing a counselor. The only exceptions to confidentiality have to do with immediate harmfulness to self or others, or knowledge of child abuse going on in the present.

Seeking counseling services does not mean that a person is mentally ill. One important purpose of counseling is the prevention of more serious problems in the future. Many people who seek counseling do so for help with the kinds of problems that everyone faces at one time or another: relationship break-ups, problems making decisions, needing to understand oneself better. Of course, a professional counselor is trained in evaluating more serious problems when they are present.

On the SIUC campus, counseling services for students are available free of charge at the Counseling Center in Woody Hall and the Clinical Center in the Wham Building. A call to either place will set up a first appointment to talk confidentially with a counselor.

Sports Illustrated, Adidas at odds over hypocrisy in swimsuit issue

Los Angeles Times

This year, in the Sports Illustrated swimsuit issue, the editors of the magazine reveal more than modesty.

They reveal a hypocrisy that outraged Canadians, prompted an athletic wear company to boycott their magazine and spawned charges of censorship, double-standards and misogyny.

This is the story of how Sports Illustrated—and its traditional defense of the annual swimsuit edition, released last week—lost all credibility.

Adidas Canada Ltd. was introducing a line of soccer wear and its advertising firm devised a catchy ad. It was scheduled to run last spring in Sports Illustrated's Canadian edition. But right before press time, a Sports Illustrated editor in New York decided that the ad would offend the delicate sensibilities of his readers.

So he killed the ad. And he killed the ad because too much skin was showing. Male skin.

There was nothing graphic or prurient in this advertisement. It was just a photograph of 11 members of a semi-pro Canadian soccer club posing in a traditional team picture. Yes, the players were nude, but trophies, soccer balls and hands covered strategic areas. Above the photo was the slogan: "Your Team Will Not Be Taken Seriously if It's Not Wearing Adidas."

You can see as much of the male anatomy any day at the beach as in the picture. And, of course, most of the swimsuit issue layouts are more revealing and more provocative. Even the ads in the swimsuit edition, are more revealing than the Adidas photo. In this year's issue is a full-page watch company ad featuring a close-up of a woman who wears either dental floss or a skimpy white thong.

Adidas was outraged by Sports Illustrated's double standard, said Steve Ralph, marketing services manager. The company, he said, is very conservative and showed the ad to employees, retailers and consumers before sending it to the magazine. No one, Ralph said, found it offensive. In fact, many of Adidas' female employees liked the ad so much they posted it on their office walls.

The female managing editor of Sports Illustrated Canada, Ralph said, "not only approved the ad, but she loved it." Then Adidas was told by an advertising executive that the managing editor of the U.S. edition, Mark Mulvoy, wanted the ad killed.

The problem, the executive told Ralph, was "the male nudity."

Adidas executives argued that there is much more nudity in the swimsuit edition. But Sports Illustrated would not budge. Appalled by the magazine's hypocrisy, Ralph said, Adidas declined to ever again advertise in it.

The magazine's decision so outraged Canada, residents that the incident became a cause celebre. Polls showed that Canadians overwhelmingly opposed the cancellation. Adidas and its ad agency, Young and Rubicam, were deluged with calls of support. And columnists and editorial writers across the country vilified Sports Illustrated.

"Cross-border censorship!" one columnist wrote.

"Beefcake 0, Cheesecake 1," wrote another.

A Toronto Star columnist wrote that the "annual swimsuit slobberfest" regularly features shots of: "Erect nipples straining through wet translucent tops, bare buttocks splayed over sand dunes and shorn pubic areas teasingly exposed by thongs that pass for water wear.... Female nudity is great for SI business, but male nudity is offensive to the tender predilections of the company's decision makers."

Sports Illustrated has managed to parlay jiggle journalism into big bucks. It aggressively markets the swimsuit models in cheesecake calendars and videos. It hypes the issue so extensively, and it has become so popular, that newsstand sales are usually up 100 percent, with ad rates jacked up.

When contacted last week about the double-standard charges, Sports Illustrated issued a tepid response.

Law careers to be explored

By Marc Chase
General Assignment Reporter

SIUC students will get a taste of life in the law business with guest speakers coming for the law school's career month.

Elizabeth Murphy, career services assistant for external affairs, said the school is offering eight different panel programs this month for students interested in a law-related profession.

Murphy said the panels show many different directions students can take in the law field.

"It gives them (students) a variety of different options that are open to them," Murphy said. "It also helps them select what they may want to do in the future."

Two panels are scheduled Feb. 23 and 24 at 6 p.m. at the law school and will discuss alternative law careers and judicial clerkships. Murphy said the speakers for the Feb. 23 panel will include publishers, a bank vice president, a financial consultant and a labor relations administrator

Speakers on the Feb. 24 panel will be Judge Philip Fraiser, U.S. magistrate for the Southern Illinois district, and a judicial law clerk, Murphy said.

Darlene Blackstone, career model coordinator, said the panels provide students with a more in depth idea of law professions that they do not receive in the classroom.

"In the classroom, all the students get is the academic side," said Blackstone.

"In the panels they get an opportunity to talk with professionals in many different law fields and hear what they do in their jobs every day."

Blackstone said the panels show students requirements of different jobs in the field of law and help them prepare for their future jobs.

SPC presents romantic film

'Like Water for Chocolate' blends dreams, love, reality

By Jamie Madigan
Entertainment Reporter

Trapped in a situation she is unable to escape, a young woman fantasizes about a better life and the man she loves in the romantic film "Like Water for Chocolate."

SPC Films chairperson Jim Lawrence said the 1992 Mexican film will be shown at 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. today and Thursday in the Student Center Auditorium.

The film is in Spanish, with English subtitles. Admission is $1.

Odilia McBride, associate professor of Spanish, said the film was based on a book by Laura Esquivel, "Como Agua Para Chocolate."

She said the novel, translated into English, has been on best-seller lists for a long time.

This week the novel is 14th on Waldenbooks' best-seller list, the ston's acting manager Christie Jo Kump said.

"The book is different from the movie," she said. "(Esquivel) started with recipes, and then went into the story. She mingled the sensuality of food with the sensuality of love."

McBride said the film deals with traditions and women's role in society.

"The film is very fine — a lovely love story," she said.

Lawrence said the story involves a woman who must take care of her mother, who treats her badly.

"She fantasizes about getting out of there," he said. "The film is about her fantasies."

Chicago resident Elaine Fluga, who has seen the film, said it is an ultimate tale of forbidden love.

"It's about a man passionately in love with a woman," she said.

"He wants to marry her, but her mother forbids it. Her fantasies are about being with the man."

McBride said the film was different from U.S. movies.

"It has many dream-like scenes — a mixture of magic and reality," she said.

"The pace is faster in American film."

Lawrence said the movie was very popular when it was released in 1992.

"It ran for about 45 weeks in Chicago — sell-out crowds," he said. "We were lucky we got it." Fluga said she saw the movie twice in Chicago.

"It was very studio here," she said.

"The consensus is that it is a very passionate, magical movie — but it's not aimed toward the popular movie-going audience."

Lawrence said he hopes attendance will be high.

"It's a really great film," he said. "We had a lot of people ask for it."

4 minute mile goal for runner at 40

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES—Jack Benny would be appalled. Here's a guy who can't wait to turn 40.

But Steve Scott still has a long way to go — he turns 38 in May.

Why the rush? He wants to be the first 40-year-old to run a 4-minute mile.

"Every so often, I compute how many months are left," he said between workouts for his record 15th appearance in Saturday's Sunbelt Invitational at the Sports Arena.

"It'll be a great challenge for me — as important to me as anything I've ever done."

Four-minute (or faster) mile feats with which Scott has familiarity. He has run 136 of them, believed to be a record.

Of course, sub-fours become a bit more difficult the closer one gets to 40. And Scott must first sweat out assaults on the first sub-four for a 40-year-old by athletes slightly older.

"My main competition right now is Eamonn Coghlan of Ireland," Scott said. "Eamonn is 41, and had a pretty good run at it last year."

American burners Holly Lyche from Indiana State and Shante Twigg from University of Northern Iowa.

Batson, who hails from Canada, attended Lorne Park Secondary School where she excelled in athletics.

Batson, who received numerous medals and individual titles in the sprinting events throughout her prep career, finished sixth at the 1993 Canadian Seniors Indoor Championships with a personal-best 7.58 in the 60-meter dash. In addition, Batson won the Canada National Indoor Invitation in the 50-meter, while placing seventh in the 1000-meter dash at the 1993 Outdoor Canadian Junior National Championships.

"I'm used to the level of competition for Division I because of the club running I did last year in Canada," Batson said.

DeNoon said Batson is a quiet athlete and goes out to just get the job done.

"She isn't putting any pressure on herself or her teammates to break records," he said. "She just does what she has to do. If records tumble, they tumble."

"My goals are time," Batson said. "And I'm just trying to set goals right now, there is plenty of time for me to be in the limelight."

Goals she has achieved this season include season-bests in the 55-meter (7.04), 200-meter (25.13), and in the 4 x 400 (4:01.32), with three years left to improve.

Because of the goals Batson and other athletes on the SIUC track and field team have accomplished, the team ranked No. 20 in the Women's Dual Ranking Poll, which is put out by the United States Track Coaches Association in the week of Feb. 7, 1993.

Look for the young wonder in Lesley Batson and the rest of the Saluki squad to compete in the Saluki/USA Track and Field Open

Freshman quarterback Jason Karnes was one of several freshmen named to the honor roll. Karnes said the coaches made academics a major part of collegiate football.

"Academics were a big part ever since I was recruited," Karnes said. "And there was never a day that went by where they didn't tell us that academics come first."

Although the end of the 1993 season had a sour note for Smith, his success in developing student-athletes is a standard that new head coach Shawn Watson will look to continue.

Aaron Baker, a freshman who red-shirted in 1992, said the nice thing about being recognized academically is that it is good for the program, and it shows that sports participation can make athletes better students.

With a change in coaching staff next season, Baker believes the entire team will continue to succeed outside of McAndrew Stadium.

"I'm not sure of how much of an influence the coaching had on us last year," Baker said. "But I think things will continue to get better with the new coaches."

this game begins the important final stretch.

"We've got four conference games left and they are all important," Herrin said. "The road games we have left are very tough, we have to go to Northern Iowa and Illinois State, and they are no patsies."

Tonight's action tips-off at 7:05.

Only the GE Classic MasterCard offers students this unequalled package of benefits.

9.9% APR The GE Classic MasterCard is the educated choice for students looking for smart ways to save. It offers one of the lowest APRs you'll find on campus — 9.9%* variable APR for the first year with a low 16.9%* variable APR thereafter. That means that even if you're only able to pay the minimum amount due, you'll pay just 9.9% on your outstanding balance.

This great offer could only come from a team like GE Card Services and MasterCard. GE Card Services is part of one of the leading financial services companies in the world. And MasterCard's the credit card more widely accepted than any other on the planet. Together, they provide you with unparalleled financial security.

NO ANNUAL FEE!

While other credit cards charge annual fees of $20 or more, the GE Classic MasterCard has no annual fee. Frankly, we don't see why you should pay just for putting our card in your wallet.

STUDENT DISCOUNTS.

As a GE Classic MasterCard member, you're also entitled to special discounts at many of your favorite stores. Through the COLLEGE MasterCardValues™ program, you'll enjoy savings of up to 40% on everything from CDs to travel.

The GE Classic MasterCard. An educated choice.

Look for an application on campus or in your mail. And get the financial aid every student needs.

*APR's shown as of 1/1/94. 9.9% variable APR applies for the first 12 billing cycles after that a variable APR, which as of 1/1/94 was 16.9%, will apply to all existing and new balances. At any time, your rate will increase to a variable APR, which as of 1/1/94 was 19.9%, based on your delinquency. A maximum finance charge of 20% will apply at all times. # Family crisis causes skaters to make ice comfort, escape

HAMAR, Norway — To Elizabeth Punsalan, the Olympic ice felt warm. It was comforting, reassuring, a place she could go to momentarily forget the past week and a half, a time of joyous anticipation turned in an instant into unspeakable horror.

Less than a week ago, Punsalan was burying her father, a prominent surgeon stabbed to death on Feb. 4 in his bed in suburban Cleveland. Punsalan's brother, on weekend release from a hospital where he was being treated for emotional problems, has been arrested and charged with aggravated murder. He has pleaded not guilty, and is being held without bail awaiting the results of a grand jury.

Monday, Elizabeth Punsalan and Jerod Swallow, her husband and ice-dancing partner, began practicing at the Winter Olympics for next week's competition. It always had been their dream to make it to the Games, and after rejection in 1992 by U.S. judges who thought them too avant-garde, they became the only U.S. ice-dancing team to qualify for these Olympics.

Now they are finally at the Games, but instead of preparing, they are simply trying to escape.

"On the plane over here, I told Jerod that I didn't know if I would be able to do it," Punsalan, who married Swallow last September, said. "I guess we're just taking it a day at a time and seeing how we feel. But being on the ice was very comforting, because it's such a habit, we do it every day, it's our lives."

Punsalan's father, Ernesto, 57, rarely had time to watch his daughter skate, but had renewed his passport to make the trip to Norway. He, his wife and Elizabeth's two brothers were at home in Sheffield Lake, Ohio, on Feb. 4. (Elizabeth and Jerod live and train in Detroit.) Ernesto Punsalan had gone to bed, leaving the other three up, watching television.

At 8:45 p.m., Ricardo Punsalan, 20, walked into the room where his mother and older brother were sitting and told them that he had just stabbed his father, according to police reports.

"He had just switched doctors, switched medications, and he was unpredictable to begin with," Elizabeth Punsalan, 23, told the Detroit Free Press.

After a few difficult days, she and Swallow, 27, made the decision to come to the Olympics and flew here Sunday.

"Jerod has had a tougher go of it than I have," Elizabeth said, "because he has had to be there to hold me up, hold up my family and hold up our skating."

"It's hard to face something like this," Swallow said. "We're not babies, but in our marriage, we're very young. We didn't think we'd be facing a crisis so soon. It's tough for the two of us. When there's been a death in the family, our parents have always been there."

The pair skated beautifully in practice Monday evening, neither showing a trace of sadness as they waltzed around the ice.

"I wasn't sure how I would feel coming over here, but with the atmosphere, the team, the Olympics and everything going on, it has been very uplifting," Punsalan said.

"The competition is a breeze compared to what we've been through."

Skater faces past

Boitano skates against four champions

The Baltimore Sun

20 pages.

LILLEHAMMER, Norway— Brian Boitano has seen the bright lights of the ice show circuit from New York to Paris.

He has skated with Katarina Witt, performed in prime-time television specials, earned millions for turning triple jumps on a dime, night after night, year after year.

But on the whole, this is where he would rather be. In another Winter Olympics, testing his skills and his courage against another generation of would-be figure skating kings.

"I wouldn't be here if I didn't think I could win," Boitano said.

The men take the stage at the Olympic figure skating hall in Hamar on Thursday night beginning what is the greatest competition in the sport's history.

Forget for a moment the duel of the American women, which is as much about glitter as it is about talent.

This is the real thing — triples at

On the bill are four reigning champions, Kurt Browning (world), Elvis Stojko (Canada), Scott Davis (United States) and Viktor Petrenko (Olympics).

And then there is Boitano. He was the jumping machine who grew up to become the emotive star of men's skating. And one night in Calgary, Canada, he caught perfection for four minutes and 30 seconds, winning the 1988 Olympic gold with a performance that was so captivating that he said, "It was like the angels lifted me off the ice."

Now he is 30, with a bum right knee, a sore back, sore shoulders, and unsettled confidence that comes from going years between big-time competitive wins.

He has finished second twice this year, to Petrenko at Skate America and to Davis at the U.S. Championships.

"It's not as difficult to accept as I thought it would be," he said.

Player meets challenge as new leader

By Grant Deard
Sports Reporter

When Saluki women's basketball superstar Rockey Ransom went down with a knee injury on Jan. 27, someone was there to step up and fill her leadership roll.

That someone turned out to be junior forward Angenette Sumrall.

Since Ransom's injury five games ago, Sumrall has led the Salukis in scoring three times, averaging over 13 points per contest. In her most recent game against Drake, she posted a double-double by grabbing 13 rebounds and pouring in 13 points. Sumrall has turned in a season-high 17 points on two occasions and head coach Cindy Scott said she's thrilled with Sumrall's progress.

"Angenette is a very, very talented player, and I'm really pleased with what she's given us," she said. "Especially since Rockey got hurt."

Sumrall began the season in dramatic fashion, elevating herself to the Missouri Valley Conference top rebounder. However, Sumrall went into a tailspin and frequently got into foul trouble. Her point totals dropped, and she lost her spot on the top of the MVC's rebounding chart.

Her recent performances have proved that Sumrall is back on track, though, and Scott said she's glad to see it.

"She started out the season beautifully and then went into about a six game lull," Scott said.

"But in our last two games, she's really been outstanding, and we're very proud of what she's done for this team."

Sumrall began her collegiate career at national powerhouse Southwest Missouri State, where she made an immediate impact as a freshman. A native of East St. Louis, Sumrall averaged five points, four rebounds and was SMSU's top rebounder with 11 in the Midwest Regional and NCAA Semifinals. SMSU finished the season with a 31-3 record and Sumrall seemed to be a perfect fit for the future.

But Sumrall, opted to leave the Lady Bear program and transfer to nearby John A. Logan Junior College where she was an Honorable Mention All-American last year. While at Logan, she averaged 13 points and 12 rebounds and led her team to the JUCO Nationals with a 31-6 record.

"We tried to recruit her out of high school and then for some reason she left Southwest," Scott said. "We felt great when she decided to join our program."

Sumrall's new roll as the team leader, though, is something that Scott said she has tackled in her own subtle way.

"She's a leader, but a quiet leader

Victory ends streak of losses for Dawgs

The basketball Salukis made the most of the second-half of their "Tulsa Getaway," as they preyed on Oral Roberts University Monday night.

The 92-76 victory over the Golden Eagles was a complete turnaround from the 18-point loss to Tulsa on Saturday. Twice as many players (four) reached double figures in the victory than in the loss (two).

The non-conference victory does not do much for the Dawgs in the Missouri Valley race, but it did accomplish two important goals.

For one, the victory broke SIUC's three-game road losing streak. The Dawgs shot above 45 percent on the road for the first time since Jan. 10. They hit on 37 of 66 shots (56 percent) in beating ORU.

The win also moves the Salukis one step closer to the 20-win plateau, a mark they are trying to achieve for the fifth time in the last six seasons. SIUC's record currently stands at 16-6 with at least five games to play.

The Dawgs got off to a flying start against the Golden Eagles, jumping on the home team for a 31-18 lead. Mirko Pavlovic was the main man for the Salukis in the first half scoring 18 of his 22 points in the first stanza.

The strong play of Pavlovic, along with a tremendous effort on the boards by the Salukis, combined to give SIUC a 45-36 halftime lead. The Dawgs out rebounded ORU 45-23 for the game.

ORU rallied in the second half, pulling to within three. Fred Smith led the charge for the Golden Eagles lighting SIUC up for 28 points.

The score was still just 65-60 in favor of the Salukis with eight minutes to play, but the Eagles were thinking upset. That's when SIUC took charge, scoring on 14 straight possessions to put the game away.

Chris Carr scored 14 of his 20 points in the second half to help the Salukis pull away. Marcus Timmons and Paul Lusk each finished with 16 on the night.

The Dawgs had a short day of rest Tuesday to prepare for tonight's home clash with Southwest Missouri State (9-11, 4-8) The Bears handed the Salukis one of their most damaging conference losses of the season less than two weeks ago, winning a 66-64 decision in Springfield, Mo.

Southwest Missouri State limited SIUC to 34 percent shooting from the field on the home floor, and a late charge by the Dawgs fell short. SIUC head coach Rich Martin said

Runner beats record

Freshman breaks '86 time in 55 dash

Missouri Valley Conference athlete of the week and standout freshman speedster Lesley Batson broke the SIUC school record for the 55-meter dash last weekend, shattering an eight-year mark in the process.

The old record was set in 1986 by Saluki Hall of Famer Denise Blackman with a time of 7.05 seconds, which was bested by Batson's run of 7.04.

SIUC women's track coach Don DeNoon had the opportunity to coach both of these athletes, and said there is a difference in the style of running between the two sprinters.

"They both have a really long stride," he said. "Lesley is a more powerful runner than Denise was."

"Denise had the ability of a strong runner in the 55-meter to the 400-meter runs, where as at this point Lesley is very strong in the 55-meter to the 200-meter run, but will have the ability to be just as strong or stronger than Denise in time to come."

Although the record-breaking time was not good enough to match the national qualifying time of 6.96. Batson said she will try and improve this upcoming weekend.

"I wasn't aiming for the record," she said. "I was aiming to run under seven seconds, that's my main goal."

DeNoon said that Batson got a slow start off the blocks and was in last place after 35-meters but pulled through for a strong second-place finish.

"She is a lot faster than she ran in the 55-meter," he said. "I think she will be a national qualifier in the 100-meter dash. She ran against some top-notch talent."

Batson ranks third overall in the MVC this season behind All-

Staff emphasizes academics

Former SIUC football head coach Bob Smith left behind a 17-38 career record in his five seasons, but he laid the foundation for a student-athlete program that has continued to build its overall GPA.

The Gateway Football Conference recently announced its academic honor roll for the fall 1993 semester. Athletes needed to achieve a minimum 3.0 grade point average last semester to make the honor roll.

SIUC topped the Gateway's list with 34 athletes recognized on the honor roll, edging 1993 Gateway Conference Champions Northern Iowa by six.

Junior linebacker Steve Dahlkamp said being on the Gateway All-Academic Honor Roll is satisfying but more of a personal thing rather than a team goal.

"It shows that everyone is not out there to just play football," Dahlkamp said. "Not just disciplined on the field but in the classroom as well."

Freshman defensive lineman Calvin Brown said academics are something important to him and were stressed ever since he began at SIUC.

"To an extent they stressed them," Brown said. "They (the coaching staff) always wanted us to keep our GPA's competitive with the other sport's GPA's."
