Landlord ordinances likely to fail

Gus Bode

TIM CHAMBERLAIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A six-point landlord/tenant ordinance submitted by the Graduate and Professional Student Council and designed to increase tenant rights is unlikely to receive the votes from the Carbondale City Council that are needed to pass.

The city staff, in advisement to the city council, said that it did not recommend the adoption of any of the proposed ordinance, which originated from a landlord/tenant agreement written by GPSC member Terry Dodds.

The original document encountered much opposition from landlords and little support from the City Council.

The staff has instead recommended that the issues should be dealt with by tenant education through the University and voluntary compliance of landlords.

Student's Legal Assistance and student government should educate incoming and current students on tenant/landlord issues, the city staff said. The staff also suggested that landlords address concerns directly through lease agreements.

The six points include requiring 24-hour notification by the landlord for entry, prohibiting demand or acceptance of checks post-dated by more than 30 days, identifying landlords and their agents for the purpose of serving legal papers, notifying

Landlords fire back

In an effort to counter a six-point proposal from the Graduate and Professional Student Council, several Carbondale landlords have submitted several ordinances to the Carbondale City Council.

The landlords have expressed their opposition to the GPSC ordinance, which originated from a survey of tenants in Carbondale last fall, arguing that there is no need for additional regulation.

Nine of the 10 landlords on the Landlord/Student Task Force recommended in a Jan. letter to Mayor Neil Dillard that the city reject each of the GPSC proposals, citing that "all points

Police officer remembered for diligent work ethic

DAVID FERRARA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

University Police Sgt. Frank Eovaldi died Saturday afternoon in a St. Louis hospital after being relieved from the department for nearly six months because of an illness.

Eovaldi, 46, was a day-shift commander at the department. He transferred to the SIU Police Department as a Murphysboro detective in 1985.

Eovaldi was an avid hunter and fisherman. He worked at the Murphysboro Police Department for nearly 11 years.

Although his colleagues acknowledged Eovaldi was stricken with an illness, it was unclear as to what caused his death.

SIU Police Chief Sam Jordan remembered calling Eovaldi, recently while he was being treated at Barnes Hospital, where he later died.

"I talked to him on the phone and let him know we were still thinking about him," Jordan said.

University Police Lt. Andrew

Smith, who was Eovaldi's divisions commander, has known Eovaldi since he began at the department in 1985. Smith recalled Eovaldi's diligent work ethic, and Eovaldi's colleagues agreed.

"He was a perfectionist," he said. "He kept records in great order. I'm going to really miss him."

University Police Lt. Todd Sigler recalled having fun with Eovaldi when the two discussed their backgrounds.

"We used to tease each other a lot about being from different parts of the state," he said.

Through his work as an officer in the area, Eovaldi maintained friendships with authorities he knew as a child.

Lt. Calvin Stearns, of the Carbondale Police Department, attended high school in Murphysboro with Eovaldi and played football with Eovaldi's brother, Mark.

"He's just a really good guy. He really was," Stearns said.

He is survived by two sons, Frank and T.C., a daughter, Marin, and his mother Alberta.

Memorials in Eovaldi's name can be made with TIP Home Health Services in Murphysboro. A ceremony will be held at 11 a.m. today in the First Christian Church in Murphysboro.

Smith said Eovaldi's death has strongly affected the department.

"We're going to feel a big loss," he said.

Jordan said those who worked with Eovaldi could easily relate to his dedication to as a sergeant.

"He was a police officer's police officer," Jordan said.

Union condemns new executive position

SARA BEAN
PCATICS EDITOR

A newly created position in the Office of the President is garnering some negative reactions from members of the SIUC faculty association who are concerned the position will affect the morale of the SIUC campuses.

"Because this is to be a No. 2 person in Sanders' office and is a system appointment, it enlarges the size of the system administration," said Walter Jaehning, media coordinator for the faculty association. "We believe it diminishes the influence of administrations of the Carbondale and Edwardsville campuses at the chancellor level."

Faculty association President Kay Carr read a statement to the SIUC Board of Trustees at the board meeting Thursday expressing the association's opposition to the creation of an executive vice president position.

"We are concerned it will encourage a loss of identity that our students, faculty and staff, and alumni neither desire nor advocate," Carr said in her statement.

Jack Dyer, media coordinator for SIUC President Ted Sanders, said the position was created to help the president with the day-to-day operations of SIUC.

"[The executive vice president] will free him up to spend more time in Springfield working with the legislature and in Washington, D. C., working with the federal government," Dyer said. "It will also give him time to do some major fundraising."

The position will be created by collapsing two positions into one, Dyer said. The responsibilities of executive assistant to the President, currently occupied by Nelson Ashline, and vice president for University Services and Board Treasurer, occupied by Don Wilson, are being combined for the executive vice president position.

Ashline is working part-time, Dyer said, and plans to retire July 1. Wilson is being reappointed as vice president for Risk Care Management and will oversee the insurance company maintained by the University.

No one has been chosen to fill the position. However, it was advertised in the Chronicle of Higher Education Jan. 15 and a search committee has been formed. Dyer said the committee includes constituency representation, among whom is the Faculty Senate president and the chancellors from each campus.

"It's not a big secret or anything," Dyer said in regards to the search.

Jaehning said the faculty association made the statement because the members did not believe there had been adequate public discussion of the issue, prior to the board's approval.

"We wanted to be on record with our stance," Jaehning said. "We feel this should have been discussed more within the campuses."

SIU professor awarded for Apollo work

FRANK KUMAS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Charles Rawlings is the man closest to home to really know the phrase "Houston, we have a problem."

The real heroes in the movie "Apollo 13" were not just the astronauts but the Apollo field engineers who struggled to help the astronauts save the crippled spacecraft.

Rawlings, a professor of electrical and biomedical engineering at the College of Engineering, worked in the Apollo program during the 1960s as a field engineer. This month, he received an honorary membership into the Omicron Delta Kappa Society, a national leadership honor society, for his work with the Apollo program.

Rawlings remembers some of the challenges of the Apollo program firsthand.

"You have to fit three people into the space of one-and-a-half telephone booths while showing a black-and-white picture of three cramped astronauts sitting side by side in their capsule," Rawlings said.

"There were all sorts of challenges." Despite the challenges, Rawlings thought his work with the space program was a patriotic duty.

"I'm too cranky to do something I don't like," the white-haired professor emeritus said.

Rawlings trained astronauts on how to use the guidance and environmental control systems aboard the Apollo capsules as a senior logistics field engineer with the Rockwell International Corp. from July 1965 to January 1966.

He said he is proud of the Omicron Delta Kappa honor not because it brings notoriety or professional advancement but because of the people who recognized his leadership in his field.

"It's nice because students did it," Rawlings said.

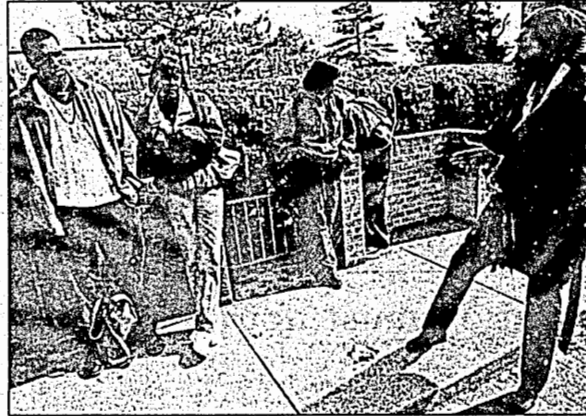

The nomination and recognition arrived from the society's chapter at Embury-Riddle Aeronautical University in Daytona Beach, Fla.

Rawlings, who is no longer paid to teach, has established a legacy of teaching on and off the campus. From astronauts to biomedical repair technicians to undergraduates, he admits he enjoys teaching because it is unpredictable.

"You never know what's going to happen next," Rawlings said. "You can't

African-American students call for end to sponsorship barriers

THORRIE T. RAINEY
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

About 20 members of greek and African-American organizations gathered outside the Student Center Monday to discuss the problems they have when trying to sponsor events on campus.

The rally, organized by Iota Phi Theta, was an opportunity for organizations to receive input from students and later take these issues to Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger.

Patrick Gant, a member of the Iota Phi Theta fraternity, said since there are a limited number of locations for African-American students to engage in social activities, events on campus are needed for many undergraduates. "A lot of events that occur on and off campus only cater to one culture," said Gant, a senior in elementary education from Chicago.

"We wanted the rally to be an opportunity for students and fraternities to talk about the problems that they have with organizing events on campus."

Student Development officials were unavailable for comment on the situation.

Harvey Welch, vice chancellor for Student Affairs, was unaware of the rally but is willing to discuss the issues with the greek organizations.

"I think that they ought to come forward with any problems," Welch said. "I will try to discharge my authorities the best way I can to help them."

Although Welch agrees with the lack of outlets that many African-American organizations have on campus, he said that there are problems that need to be discussed before coming to any solutions.

"I think that greek organizations working together is a great idea, but behavior is one of the main problems that we have," he said.

"Working together is a wonderful idea, but until I actually see what they are asking for I can't decide on it. We will be working with safety officials, Student Development and everyone to come to an agreement."

Ari Tukes, president of the Iota Phi Theta, said alcohol-free events are needed to accommodate underage students from participating in illegal activities.

"I think that freshmen come to SIUC and they want to have a sense of relief from the weekends," said Tukes, a senior in liberal arts from Chicago.

"We want to establish a location where they don't have to commute in order to get to a party. Since many freshmen do not have a place to go on the weekends, many of them are partaking in other extracurricular activities that they shouldn't be involved in."

Among the solutions that were discussed in the rally, the main focus was to establish a stronger bond of unity among African-Americans, greek organizations and other African-American organizations at SIUC.

Annette Danner, a member of Zeta Phi Beta sorority, noticed the decrease of locations that are available for African-American students and said it is time for a change.

"I think that it is great the fraternities and sororities can come together and discuss these issues," said Danner, a sophomore in sports medicine from Chicago. "Every time you look around things are being taken away from us, like the Sports Center. We never have anything."

SPC searches for Spring Thing funds

The Student Programming Council needs funding for its annual Spring Thing event, and Andrew Daly is setting out to get it.

Daly, the SPC executive director, is looking for sponsorship both on and off campus. He said he would welcome both monetary and product support.

"We would welcome interest from clubs or other campus groups as well as corporate sponsorship," he said.

He hopes to add activities across campus in addition to a large concert similar to last year's Ziggy Marley show. He hopes to provide the concert this year at little or no cost to the students.

Daly said SPC has yet to determine an act and location for the concert. McAndrew Stadium, the site of the Marley show last year, is unavailable because of a newly laid track that makes it inaccessible to the large vehicles needed to set up such an event.

Daly said it would be hard to book a band without having a firmly established sponsorship base. He hopes to gain enough sponsorship to attract a well-known group that students would enjoy seeing. He said additional activities might be added if funds allow.

Professor: Magazine stole 'Monica Lisa' idea

A professor at Penn State is accusing The New Yorker of ripping off its Feb. 8 cover from a portrait painted by one of his students.

Richard Alden, assistant professor of architecture, doubts it's a coincidence that a cover idea he presented to New Yorker editors in October was submitted by another artist for this month's magazine.

Alden insists the magazine got the idea from the "Monica Lisa" painting he showed off that was done by Alycia J.

DeAntonio, a sophomore who was in his visual-communications class last fall. DeAntonio's painting features a version of the "Mona Lisa" with Lewinsky's face.

After his visit, Alden said he never heard back from editors and was sickened when he saw the recent cover. "I felt like I had been mugged or robbed," he said.

A spokeswoman for The New Yorker said the magazine believes that the cover illustration, which was done by a freelance artist, is original work that was in no way inspired by DeAntonio's painting.

Pluto back in last place

Pluto has returned to its traditional spot as the planet farthest from our sun.

While normally the most distant planet, Pluto's odd orbit periodically brings it inside Neptune's orbit, making that planet the farthest from the sun. That last occurred on Feb. 7, 1979.

But Pluto crossed Neptune's orbit at 5:08 a.m. last Thursday to regain its distant position, according to NASA. Because it takes Pluto 248 years to circle the sun, it will remain the farthest planet for the next 228 years.

The Paris-based International Astronomical Union recently reaffirmed Pluto's standing as the smallest planet, despite suggestions that it should be reclassified because of its small size.

Administration must not pass on Recreation Center

After receiving approval from the Undergraduate Student Government Senate, a proposal to build a store within the Recreation Center and sell a limited number of passes to the community awaits the pen of the SIUC administration.

The DAILY EGYPTIAN believes this proposal is a beneficial endeavor and encourages the administration to make it a reality.

The obvious benefit to the proposal lies in the community passes. Under the direction of Student Recreation Center Director Bill McMinn, a limited number of community passes will be sold to local residents and provide them access to Recreation Center facilities.

The profits earned from the sale of these passes would be used to offset the $66 student recreation fee currently charged to a full-time SIUC student.

After the student opposition to the athletic fee last spring and the possibility of a technology fee, a proposal that would offset a fee would be beneficial in calming the masses and showing that the University isn't unjustifiably imposing fees on the students.

The other issue at hand is a matter of convenience. Having a store on-hand that sells refreshments and snacks would be a welcome alternative to a can of pop and a candy bar from the vending machines, especially to those trying to get in shape.

The store also would provide apparel, equipment and other sports accessories that could help the University turn a profit while saving someone who forgot their swimming trunks or sweat pants at home a little aggravation.

True, the addition of a self-contained store might upset local merchants, but it has been suggested that the store be run or supplied by a local business. Or perhaps this will be another bidding option for a preferred vendor.

Whether run by the University or not, the EGYPTIAN believes the store would be a welcome addition to the Recreation Center and our campus. Surveys have shown patrons of the Recreation Center also strongly support this proposal.

For its efforts in passing the Recreation Center proposal, the EGYPTIAN would like to salute USG and also commend all senators who voted against the proposed lowered GPA amendment. The quality of debate surrounding the GPA amendment was of exemplary standard.

Through these actions, you have shown you accept the responsibility of setting an example for academic achievement to the students you represent as well as being dedicated to improving the quality of campus life.

The EGYPTIAN looks forward to seeing more of the same in the future.

How to use your Valentine's blues

Target Practice

Daphne Retter

Target Practice appears Tuesdays. Daphne is a junior in English/creative writing. Her opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the DAILY EGYPTIAN.

dretter@msn.com

Another Valentine's Day has come and gone, and it occurs to me there may be a handful of folks out there left feeling less than fulfilled. Despite the fact that I spent my day clothed in rose petals and prancing about with champagne and oysters, I always can reach out to the less fortunate.

If you're wondering what that deeply painful void is, allow me to help you out. Don't let anyone feed you a bunch of crap about time healing or loving yourself or fuzzy little bunnies. That empty feeling isn't a lack of self-help books, and it's not a shortage of Oprah's mushy book club.

It comes down to this — unfulfilled bitterness.

Yeah, I know, you've likely heard the contrary.

Well really, haven't you tried their way long enough? All those people force-feeding you spoonfuls of sugar don't even want you to be cured.

Hell, they don't even want you to get off the couch. Now, this is free advice, so it must be good.

So what are you going to do with all that unfulfilled bitterness? Treat it like the gold that it is. As long as you're going to be bitter, you might as well do a damn good job.

I'm just going to provide some basic tools, but please, don't stop there. This is more than a couple of sentences — this is an ongoing opportunity. Now, I'm going to give you a few phrases to use, but remember — see, if I gave you fish, you could throw it at people that annoyed you. But if I taught you to fish, then you would have a bunch more fish. OK, that went nowhere. You have to pay attention.

I was in my car half-listening to the radio when a line, taken completely out of context, struck me as absolutely devastating. A lesser person might not have given it another thought, but I'm no slouch.

"I've lost faith in even you." Wow. Do you see the possibilities there? Somebody is babbling on about how they scratched a car in the parking lot with their car door and crooning about their guilt in not leaving a note. "So, what do you think?" they ask. You look into their eyes and say, "Bob, I've lost faith in even you." Crash.

This one is good for when someone is unloading their problems on you. But if I did that, you say, I would be a terrible person. You are just using your imagination. What you are really doing is redirecting this person. They seem to think that it is understanding that will bring them contentment, but as you and I know, it is the expression of bitterness they are truly lacking. And how will they feel after they stop crying? Hell hath no fury like a whiner rebuked. Seize the moment.

This is one of my personal favorites. It is very versatile and very effective. You can add the phrase, and that's not saying much, onto virtually any compliment and SHAZAM! It's a debilitating insult. It works best in comparison situations:

"Mary, you are the best friend I've got."

"Why thank you, and that's not saying much."

Ouchee.

Or:

"Mary, you have never looked so lovely, and that's not saying much."

You also can tack this baby onto somebody else's compliment. The beauty of this tool is it heightens the subject to ensure they have at least a little distance to fall. Let me take this opportunity to remind you again. You are redirecting them toward their true catharsis. That is so kind of you.

Hey, you don't even have to thank me. This knowledge was too valuable to keep to myself. So, be creative with your unfulfilled bitterness. Get crazy. You could even combine my two methods. Maybe if more people had been aware of my way, we would have less violence in the world and more clever insults.

I know that you will make me proud, and that's not saying much.

God is not the answer

I realize that the DAILY EGYPTIAN is hell-bent on becoming the most right-wing, pro-Christian college newspaper in existence, but enough is enough.

Day after day I turn to the editorial section hoping to read something insightful, and day after day I see more right-wing, Christian propaganda, and I'm sick of it. My thought-provoking letters are constantly being ignored in favor of ignorant trash like John B.

Scarano's letter titled "Skaggs needs help, and God is the best answer" (Feb. 10). For once I would like the EGYPTIAN to put their prejudices aside and print something with reason. I am writing this to let every reader know that God is not the best answer to anyone — he's the worst.

It should be so obvious that there is no such thing as God. Just because I might like a Stephen King book doesn't mean I'm going to think that it's real and fall to my knees and start worshipping characters right out of the book like people do with the Bible. The Bible's not even well-written, it's just old.

It was sloppily put together in the first place and has been revised so many times over the centuries by those who wanted to skew certain words in their favor that it has lost much of its original meaning. Plus, there is no physical evidence of God. There is no mental evidence either. Sure, select white trash go on Montel Williams' talk show and explain how they've spoken with angels, but they're getting paid to do so. People who think they're communing with God but are feeling a burning sensation in their heart or whatever are merely feeling a chemical reaction in their bodies. Those who claim to hear God speaking with them are mentally ill.

According to the Bible, God tried to deny Adam and Eve knowledge. Should we worship a God who tries to prevent us from learning? If so, why are we at an institution of learning? Modern day ministers and priests have banded together to warn people away from sex, certain literature, drugs, and other pleasures. Should we waste our time worshipping a God who wants to deny us pleasure?

Christianity is responsible for most of society's woes. It gives white trash a false sense that there is a better afterlife, so they sit on their redneck asses all day, vote Republican, contribute nothing to society and expect to go to heaven. The Republican Party, the Christian Coalition and the KKK are always citing the Bible for why women, racial minorities and homosexuals should be denied basic human freedoms. The recent murder of Matthew Shepard, beaten to death because he was gay, is just one example of the thousands of atrocities committed each day in the name of Christianity.

The organization that proudly calls itself The Army of God blows up abortion clinics, feeling they're engaging themselves in some sort of holy war to please God.

It sickens me when I hear about the depths Christians will sink to in order to induce more members into their fold. Scarano wants to invite Skaggs over to the Newman Center after greatly insulting her journalistic talent, as well as her intelligence; when he suggests people need God: He wants to fill her with propaganda so that she joins the ranks of the Republicans, Christian Coalition and the KKK. Some people are just too smart for that, however. Let me tell you about the morals of the Newman Center. They couldn't even wait 15 minutes to tow my car out of their parking lot, which I had to use during an emergency. It's people like that who need to be fed to the lions. The Romans had the right idea.

Dead student column poorly timed

I would like to thank all the persons who have kept me in their regard during these past few days since the passing of my roommate, Bryan A. Hopp. They have supported me through this difficult time, and I am grateful.

However, Jay Larson's column, "Dead Students Could Boost Enrollment" (Feb. 11) is offensive and should have not been printed so soon after the death of my roommate. Reading how wonderful it would be to have a dead roommate is a slap in the face to his memory.

The parallels between a dead student and a disabled student are unwarranted. He claims that "existence-challenged" students may receive special privileges for "staying upright or propping the window open." No less, he says that they will "do wonders for the grading curve."

Accommodations assist students to learn material and trades which their disability may preclude them otherwise. A disability does not equal a free ride in college. A disability does not equal stupidity. I realize right now I am hyper-sensitive to the subject matter of Mr. Larson's column.

I know he was trying to make a joke similar to Al Franken's "Shoot the Elderly Into Space" routine. Yet, the timeliness of this column shows poor judgment.

I believe the paper should heed Larson's words not to be "insensitive."

Students should support Faculty Association

Dear Editor,
Although I could not attend the meeting, I was not particularly surprised to learn that our Board of Trustees summarily dismissed students' concerns about mandatory fees with legalistic mumbo-jumbo.

It was interesting to note that the board has no problem delegating administrative personnel decisions.

A new executive vice president position has been advertised for, and applications have been received before board approval.

Students, let's support the Faculty Association in the fight to ensure that tax and tuition dollars, which are intended to support higher education, are not blatantly squandered on cronyism, old-boy network consulting firms, and corporate technology giants.

Get on board the student-faculty battleship!

Souland Mardi Gras ranks second best to the real thing

CLOSE TO HOME: St. Louis neighborhood proves it knows how to party with the rest.

RHONDA SCIARRA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

ST. LOUIS — Six-year-old twins Ian and Alan McDermott had determined looks on their faces as they reached out for beads to add to the metallic gold, purple and green collections already around their necks during the 20th-annual Souland Mardi Gras Parade.

Kathy McDermott, a resident of Fairview Heights, has brought her family to the parade in St. Louis every year. She said the family viewing area along the parade route provided safe fun for her children, because it avoided the wild atmosphere down the street.

"It is a nice experience for them," she said. "They saw the floats and were able to catch beads in a calm, safe area."

Other areas of the historic French neighborhood were not so quiet Saturday, as more than 500,000 people packed the streets and reveled in traditional Mardi Gras spirit.

The neighborhood of Souland begins celebrating Mardi Gras 11 days before today, which is Fat Tuesday — the Tuesday before the Catholic season of Lent, which begins on Ash Wednesday.

The Souland festival is billed as the second largest Mardi Gras celebration in the United States, following festivities in New Orleans.

SIUC students Sara Samson, a sophomore in electrical engineering from Monticello, and Seth Unger, a sophomore in electrical engineering from Hoopston, drove to St. Louis Saturday to watch more than 150 floats and 6,000 participants in the parade.

Samson said watching the parade was worth the two-hour drive from school.

"It was fun to see everyone having fun and wearing interesting things," Samson said. "Anyone can yell, act crazy or make a fool of themselves, and no one cares."

By nightfall, the temperature dropped below the freezing mark, families disappeared and crowds, intoxicated from a day of drinking, packed the street.

Ben Bakke, a junior in speech communication from Colorado Springs, Colo., said traveling to Souland was a warm-up for his spring break in Florida.

"I thought the experience was awesome," Bakke said. "There was a lot of energy both from the parade during the day and from the crowds at night."

After going to a crowded New Orleans in 1996, the size of the crowd in Souland on Saturday night was perfect for Bakke.

"It wasn't too packed — it was just the right size," Bakke said. "Everyone was having a good time."

Russell Boulevard was a shoulder-to-shoulder crowd that would make any Halloween night on the Carbondale Strip seem insignificant.

Crowds chanting "show your tits" hoarded around women on shoulder-tops raising their shirts in their quest for beads, while sirens blared during an ambulance's attempt to get through the crowd to assist an injured person.

Bakke and his friends continued the party from the streets of Souland to Laclède's Landing, an area of nightlife along the river in downtown St. Louis.

They ventured into Morgan Street Brewery, a bar on the Landing, and mingled with the hundreds of people wearing beads from their Souland excursion.

Bakke said his night was highlighted by the fun times he had exchanging beads.

"Any other place and I would not have done half of the things I did there to earn beads," he said. "The crowd, the time and the place made it all worthwhile."

'Off The Wall Art Show' starts today

ONE THEME: Exhibit influenced by age-old celebration will be displayed until Feb. 28.

MERISHA NEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

It's Mardi Gras time and the Carbondale community does not have to travel far to celebrate.

The "Mardi Gras Off the Wall Art Show" begins today at 11 a.m. and lasts until 5 p.m. every weekday until Feb. 28 at the Associated Artist Gallery, 715 S. University Ave. The gift shop area also will be open for purchases.

The exhibit overflows with festive art forms of all sorts, guaranteed to get you in the party mood. To keep with the theme of Mardi Gras, the show will include colorful masks, beaded jewelry, and gourd drums.

The group consists of about 31 people from Carbondale and surrounding areas. Each member adds their own unique style to form interesting varieties of art work. All of the art work in the show is contributed by the members of the gallery.

Liz Harren, member of the gallery, said the show will include paintings, photographs, sculpture, pottery, stained glass, fabric art and handmade greeting cards.

Although Harren only has been a member for five years, she has been doing pottery for more than 20 years. She said being in the group gives her an opportunity to mingle with people with similar interests.

Taking the heat... To the extreme

BACKDRAFT: Three SIUC students conquer fires while keeping up with school work.

KENDRA THORSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Jed Livingston wakes up in the middle of the night to the sound of his persistent pager. Without thinking twice, Livingston jumps out of bed and suits up to fulfill his duties for the Williamson County Fire Protection District.

Livingston is one of three student volunteer firefighters living in the firehouse. The three full-time students share a single room with three beds, a television and armchair.

Livingston, a senior in administration of justice from Catlin, said there are many sacrifices student firefighters must make, but they are well worth it.

A difficult decision is whether to go out on the weekends.

"Some weekends we get to go out, but if the inapanover is low, we don't," Livingston said. "If you drink alcohol, you can't stay here — it is just a choice you have to make."

Livingston, who is on-call 24 hours a day, said at times firefighters can feel cramped.

"We lack space as far as clothes go," he said. "We have a locker for our clothes so I kind of live out of my car."

With the help of his brother's influence, Livingston became interested in the firefighting profession. He has been a volunteer firefighter for Williamson County since December 1997.

"I love it — I did it at home, too," Livingston said. "My brother did it before I did. I love everything about it."

Livingston said even though his job is demanding, he has never let his grades slip — for him, school comes first.

"My grades have not slipped," he said. "I am able to work everything into my schedule."

Livingston said he tells most of his professors he is a volunteer firefighter so most quizzes and assignments he misses are excused.

"I tell most of my professors I am a firefighter [but] they would just find out anyway because of my pager," he said. "I've always had understanding professors."

Lindell Coriasco, fire chief for the Williamson County fire station, said although the job is demanding, the fire department tries to emphasize the importance of education.

"We try to make our firefighters realize they need quiet to study," Coriasco said. "Sometimes this place gets a little hectic."

Prior to accepting students for the position, the department screens prospective employees to ensure they can handle the responsibilities.

"This gives students a chance to see what the job entails and a chance for us to see why they want the job," Coriasco said. "Students have to keep the station and equipment clean. They also have to be ready to go to fires at any given time."

The Williamson County Fire Protection District has a number of criteria, there: student firefighters must meet before and after they are hired.

To become a volunteer firefighter for Williamson County, applicants must complete an in-house modular "Firefighter II" course and pass with an average of 70 percent or higher.

Firefighters must also be enrolled with a minimum of 12 credit hours and maintain passing grades in all of their classes.

Coriasco said he believes this is a positive program for the students as well as the community at large.

"We think this is a win-win situation," Coriasco said. "It is good for the fire district because we have the firefighters we need to fight fires. It is also good for students because it is a nice, clean place to stay, while going to school."

Chad Moore, a senior in sociology from Winchester, has been working for Williamson County since August 1998. For him, the satisfaction of the job is a result of the service he provides.

"The most rewarding feeling is when we save someone's house or when we help someone," Moore said.

Coriasco said it takes much work and determination to become and remain a firefighter.

"I think it is something in a person's blood and makeup that makes them want to be a fireman," Coriasco said. "It takes a special person to be a firefighter."

Ex-intern reflects on Lewinsky's role

MARY OWEN
THE STATE NEWS

WASHINGTON (U-WIRE) — Shannon Joyce will only be a footnote in American history.

The 23-year-old former White House intern was never subpoenaed and didn't make it into Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr's report on President Clinton's inappropriate relationship with Monica Lewinsky.

But Joyce, a native of Dayton, Ohio, did work with Lewinsky in the White House Office of Correspondence for then-Chief of Staff Leon Panetta during the momentous fall of 1995, when the relationship between Lewinsky and Clinton began.

"Thirteen months ago it was unfathomable," she said. "You were an intern and you got to shake his hands and that's it. Well, I was wrong."

Joyce and Lewinsky were among four unpaid interns in the office. Lewinsky was completing her summer internship when Joyce started work in September 1995.

Neither Joyce or Lewinsky had clearance into the White House executive wing, which houses the president's office, but their supervisor sometimes escorted them there.

Joyce didn't believe Lewinsky could have had a relationship with Clinton until the September 1998 release of the Starr report. The report named key players, such as Betty Currie, who would have made a relationship possible.

"If you went anywhere you shouldn't be, they stop you," she said.

"With that understanding, I was not convinced it could happen when she was an intern. When the Starr report came out, it filled in the holes for me."

Joyce, a George Washington University student when the story broke, remembers reading The Washington Post the morning of Jan. 21 and nearly choking on her Raisin Bran cereal. By the time she returned from class at noon, a Washington Post reporter was waiting at her home.

"It was very strange," she said. "I was stunned. It wasn't until I saw her picture on TV later that night did I actually realize that I really knew this person."

Joyce said Lewinsky was lively and talkative, but she didn't know her that well. She perceived the former intern as smart and ambitious and not the "crazy, obsessive, Washington wannabe" the media sometimes portrayed.

Lewinsky put in many hours, often coming in before Joyce and leaving work after Joyce. Many White House employees would use tactics such as delaying lunches to see the president whenever possible, Joyce said.

"Washington is full of ambitious, 20-somethings," she said. "It's not unusual, especially for those who work for the government, to put in a lot of hours, especially during the government shutdown. It was expected of you."

It was during the 1995 shutdown that the relationship between Lewinsky and Clinton began.

Joyce worked as a reporter in the Washington bureau of Cox Newspapers, which owns newspapers including The Atlanta Journal-Constitution and the Austin Statesman-American, during most of the scandal's unearthing.

Her journalism career made it difficult to stop giving media interviews when she just didn't have time.

"There were several that bordered on harassment, calling me several times a day and giving me a guilt trip," she said. "I felt like I had this moral obligation to do something that I ask people to do for me every day."

Joyce said since she left Washington in November, she has lost interest in the story that has been told too many times. She didn't watch the Senate vote because she was working, but listened to it intermittently on the radio.

Joyce is not convinced details of Monica-gate needed to be made public. But once details were released, they needed to be formally handled, she said.

"As long as the process has been followed, for the most part, justice has been served," she said. "The second that he possibly lied about it in court, then it's not private anymore."

The not-so-famous former White House intern said she doesn't believe she will be a part of history that anyone remembers, but the experience will make for good stories for her children.

Joyce has a scrapbook of stories she's quoted in, and she saved the Jan. 21, Washington Post article.

"I'm sure if I could have sounded a little better, if I would say I knew the woman who brought the president down," she said. "But I can rephrase it and say that I knew the woman who got the president impeached."

Scholars wage friendly battle over Jesus facts

WASHINGTON POST

Some of today's most vicious religious arguments center on the facts of the New Testament.

Did Jesus physically rise from the dead after crucifixion, or did He appear to His followers in mystical visions? Was He really born of a virgin? Did He actually turn water into wine, walk on water or feed a crowd of 5,000 with five loaves of bread and two fishes?

And to give the discussion a particularly modern flavor, what about the inner Jesus? Did He think He was the Messiah, a fulfillment of the Hebrew prophecy that God would take human form to save his people? Or was He a talented teacher, healer and visionary who had no idea His ministry would spawn the new religion of Christianity?

Such questions have long been the subject of academic and Sunday school discussions. But never before have they generated such widespread debate, both among New Testament scholars and members of the general public who buy their mainstream books.

It's all part of "a larger battle over the Bible, the conflict over the nature of Scripture" facing today's Christians, said Marcus J. Borg, a professor of religion at Oregon State University and a member of the controversial Jesus Seminar. Over the last decade, that California-based group of biblical scholars has challenged the authenticity of most of Jesus' sayings, miracles and actions, infuriating Christian conservatives. And one of its most vocal and respected critics is Anglican priest N.T. Wright — Borg's friend.

Borg and Wright studied at Oxford University under the same New Testament professor, the late George B. Caird, though at different times. They met 15 years ago after Wright read one of Borg's books, and they've been arguing about Jesus ever since.

Wright, who recently took a high-profile position in the Church of England, represents a more "traditionalist," or popular, approach. He takes the Gospel writers largely at their word, bolstering their accounts with historical and sociological evidence, from Greco-Roman times for a clearer context. For example, he interprets Jesus' prediction that people in the Earth's final days will see "the son of man coming on clouds" as a metaphor of exaltation, not a promise of the Second Coming.

Borg, a "revisionist" and a moderate among Jesus Seminar members, doubts the historical accuracy of the Gospels but says that issue is irrelevant anyway. How Jesus' followers reported and interpreted His life after the crucifixion is more crucial to understanding Christianity, he contends.

Borg and Wright, both of whom speak often to church groups, said many religious issues have moved beyond esoteric discourse and are very much on the minds of laypeople.

get bored for very long."

A member of Mensa, Rawlings was an industry pioneer in the field of biomedical technology. He wrote the textbook "Electrocardiography," which has been widely used by medical schools and has entered its second printing.

Rawlings said he wrote the book because he felt physicians and technicians needed to understand the technical elements of the electrocardiograph, which is a medical instrument that analyzes and records the heartbeat.

The Southern Illinois native started at SIUC in 1964 but left in 1965 to work for Rockwell on the Apollo program. He decided to return to SIUC while he was living in Los Angeles during the historic civil rights riots in the Los Angeles Watts district.

While evacuating his residence in north Long Beach, Calif., during the burning and looting of the riot, he took his mail and drove to the U.S. Marine base at El Toro, Calif. The petition to return to SIUC was in that mail.

"I decided to take the job,"

Rawlings said.

His colleagues at the College of Engineering admire Rawlings' leadership ability, too.

"He wants to lead by example," said Bruce DeVantier, an associate professor in environmental engineering. "The more of that we have, the better off our college is going to be."

Rawlings taught engineering classes while DeVantier was an undergraduate. He said Rawlings is a good communicator.

"He was always very distinguished, very calm," DeVantier said. "It's great he's getting some recognition."

tenants of code violations at the property in the last year, requiring all fees or service charges to be conspicuously displayed in the lease, and putting a cap of $6 per day on late fees.

Councilman John Budstlick motioned to form a landlord/student task force to discuss possible options following the introduction of the original landlord/tenant agreement at the Nov. 17 council meeting.

Nine of 10 landlords on the task force have countered the GPSC proposal with a 12-point ordinance proposal of their own, which is expected to be rejected by the council as well.

GPSC President Michael Speck called a special meeting of the council Monday night to discuss the new developments on the issue. He hoped to reach a compromise of some sort with the landlords.

USG President Jackie Smith said she is working in that direction as well.

"It's been so contentious that we're now head to head with the landlords," she said. "We need to find a compromise."

Smith agreed, saying that as the representative of undergraduates, "I have to think about what's best for the undergraduates, and I don't think the landlord proposals are the best" course of action.

Speck said he would consider removing some of the GPSC points that were most opposed by landlords if the landlords would agree to drop their proposal entirely.

He declined to specify which points would be included pending his meeting with the council.

The City Council may choose to adopt all, some or none of the proposed ordinances. Any ordinances that do pass will not be enforced by the city. Enforcement would come when a tenant or landlord seeks relief in court.

This is a break from the current policy on city ordinances, which are enforced by city staff.

LANDLORDS

of the proposed ordinance are covered in either current City of Carbondale Ordinances or Illinois State Statutes."

However, in the Background and Summary section of the city staff report to the city council, it is noted with five of the six points that there are currently neither city or state laws covering the matters.

Raul Ayala, owner of the Quads Apartments, 1207 S. Wall St., submitted the 12 proposals from the landlords. These proposals range from requiring tenants to buy a minimum of $300,000 worth of bodily injury and property damage insurance to prohibiting kegs and other large-volume alcohol containers without a liquor license.

The landlords — John Winn, Don Bryant, Shirley Meyers, Bonnie Owen, Jeff Pauline, Rolf Schilling, Michael Wadiak, Kevin Williams and Raul Ayala — met with GPSC members twice during January but failed to reach a consensus regarding GPSC's proposal.

Henry Fisher, owner of Home Rentals, 803 S. Illinois Ave., was also on the committee but did not sign the letter submitted to Dillard.

GPSC member Terry Dodds, who spearheaded the original survey and wrote the GPSC ordinance, was unhappy with the addition of the landlords' ordinance to the agenda.

"To add the landlords' proposal on the same night as the GPSC ordinance is a real insult," he said. "We have legitimate wants and needs, while the things the landlords want are ridiculous."

The city staff recommended against several of the points Ayala proposed, characterizing them as "unenforceable" and "highly difficult to regulate." The recommendation on seven of the points was to have them included in the lease agreement if the landlord wished to regulate the points themselves. Undergraduate Student Government was not represented at the meetings.

Ordinances Proposed by Landlords

1. Prohibit kegs without a legal City of Carbondale and State of Illinois liquor license.
2. Establish city prosecution of all bounced rental payment checks.
3. Impose a fine against all tenants possessing a pet in a rental dwelling without written permission.
4. City should not issue pet licenses to owners of pets in rental dwellings who do not have written permission from property owners.
5. Hold tenant fully responsible for the tenant's water and sewer bill and hold property owner harmless for the bill.
6. Allow property owners to withhold security deposits and/or any prepaid rents until tenant has provided proof of payment of all bills.
7. Prohibit drugs and under-age drinking and hold tenants liable.
8. Mandate that all rental units be maintained in a clean, habitable manner by tenants.
9. Prohibit the use of candles and smoking except with written permission.
10. Require each tenant to show proof of bodily injury property damage insurance with limits no less than $300,000 per occurrence.
11. Require that all SUU dorms and apartments in the City be covered under the same ordinances as the privately-owned rental units.
12. Allow any ordinance to be waived by mutual agreement between property owner and tenant.

Ordinances Proposed by GPSC

1. Landlords must give 24 hours notice before entering property for repairs, inspections or display purposes. Entry is only permitted during reasonable hours, which are presumed to be between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m.
2. Landlords cannot demand or accept checks post-dated by more than 30 days.
3. Landlords must disclose the name, address and phone number of the owner or manager of the property, and of any authorized agent.
4. Landlords must notify the tenant of any code violations of the property within the last 12 months, and tenants must be notified before the termination of a utility. Repairs of under $500 may be made by the tenant at the landlord's expense if the landlord is notified ahead of time.
5. All fees or service charges must be conspicuously displayed in the rental agreement.
6. Late fees on rental payments may not exceed $6 per day, and the amount must be conspicuously displayed in the rental agreement.

When you are in maroon and white it must be right

COLORS: Men's and women's track teams fare well in Recreation Center.

ROB ALLIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Saturday was a good day to be running the mile in maroon and white.

The SIUC men's and women's track teams saw a combined seven athletes achieve personal bests in the mile run in the Saluki/USA Invitational at the Recreation Center.

Three school records also were set or tied-in front of the home fans.

Saluki men's coach Bill Cornell likes his team's position as they head into the final week of the indoor track and field season.

The Missouri Valley Conference Championships take place this Friday and Saturday in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

"I think we did what we set out to do this weekend," Cornell said. "It really gave the kids some confidence going into the meet."

Four Saluki milers achieved personal bests in finishing second: through fifth in the mile run. Junior Matt McClelland (4 minutes, 1.08 seconds), seniors Joseph Parks (4:13.88) and Jeremy Parks (4:13.89) and sophomore Chris Owen (4:19.16) placed for SIUC.

Senior Orlando McKee bettered his school record, winning the 200-meter dash. His time of 21.38 seconds nipped his NCAA-qualifying previous best of 21.44.

Junior Brad Bowers captured a pair of first-place ribbons in the long jump and triple jump. He bested the competition by more than a foot in the long jump, while his leap of 48 feet, 8 inches gave him the edge in the Junior Leah Steele finished third at 5:07.77, followed by sophomore Becky Cox (5:09.77).

"The mile race was definitely a pleasant surprise for us," coach Don DeNoon said. "When you have personal bests and season bests, you have to be happy with that."

Not so surprisingly, Saturday also saw another brilliant performance by junior Felicia Hill, who broke her own school record in the triple jump.

Hill's leap of 40-10.25 topped her old standard by more than three feet. Hill placed second in the high jump as well.

Another solid field competitor, sophomore Caryn Poliquin, finally caught the SIUC shot put record she has been chasing all season. Her throw of 54-01 pulled her even with Amy Stearns' mark.

Poliquin won the event easily, with a seven-foot cushion between her throw and second place.

"If the meet had been scored, we would have won," DeNoon said. "We certainly had a few top-notch performances. I think the kids are starting to return to the shape they were in before the break."

As for the week ahead, DeNoon just hopes he has his team at full-strength for Normal.

"We just have to try to stay healthy," DeNoon said. "There's not too much else we can do at this stage."

triple jump.

The Saluki also found encouragement in the high jump event, where senior Neophytos Kalogerou and Ren Hunter finished third and fourth, respectively.

"I hope everyone is reaching their peak for the conference meet," Cornell said. "We've got just one day to work hard (Monday) and Wednesday and Thursday to prepare for the weekend."

"We just want to go out there and do the best we can."

A trio of women's runners set their personal marks Saturday. Junior Joy Cutrano won the mile event, clocking in at 5:03.67.

Lakers not ready for prime time

TITLE RUN? Even with recent additions Los Angeles team may not be ready to rumble.

J.A. ADADE
LOS ANGELES TIMES

If the Lakers can play "about as well as we can play," (in the words of their coach), finally get their fast-break on track, dominate the boards, get the ball in their new go-to guy's hands for a good look at a game-winning shot and still lose, it could be time to scale back those expectations a bit.

They might not be as mediocre as their 3-3 record, but right now they're just another good team and not one that should be mentioned in the same sentence as a championship.

They're 1-2 at home and 0-2 in these made-for-NBC Sunday show-downs after their 101-99 Valentine's Day loss to the Indiana Pacers. As television programming goes, "Frasier" has proven more worthy of replacing "Seinfeld" than the "Lake Show" has been at replacing the Chicago Bulls' "Dynasty."

Right now there's more drama and intrigue off the court. The buzz at the Great Western Forum was all about a guy who isn't even a member of the team (and if all were right with the world, wouldn't be). No, the eccentric rebounder didn't show up, not even to sit in the stands.

But another possible future Laker did appear. Guard B.J. Armstrong, whose Charlotte Hornets are in town early for their Tuesday game against the Lakers, came to the Forum and spent a lot of time hanging out by the locker rooms afterward. Armstrong is part of a proposed trade that would bring Homet shooting star Glen Rice to the Lakers in exchange for Eddie Jones and Elden Campbell.

Shaquille O'Neal even called Armstrong aside to ask, "What have you heard about the trade?"

If the man who stands in the middle of the Lakers in so many ways doesn't know what's going on with this team, how can we?

It's time to make decisions about this ball club, one way or another. If "Guys, just keep it alive. We keep it close, we'll win."

— REGGIE MILLER
INDIANA PACERS' GUARD

Jerry Buss insists on bringing Dennis Rodman aboard, set a deadline for him to sign a contract, get it done and let the sideshow begin. Otherwise move on with life, let everyone get back to business and save Jerry West the aggravation of hearing Rodman questions daily.

If they're going to trade Jones and Campbell, get it over with or else come out and say they're not going anywhere.

The constant speculation hasn't helped their production. Jones had 12 points on 4-of-12 shooting Sunday, and this was one of his better games of the season. Campbell had nine rebounds, but only three points.

Rice would provide the outside shooter the Lakers so desperately need, but they don't know how healthy his surgically repaired elbow is, when he'd be ready to play and if they can reach an agreement on a contract extension with him. Hardly a quick-fix solution.

If the Lakers would be willing to make such a major move, they might as well go through a complete overhaul. Declare Shaq and Kobe Bryant off-limits, then start putting together new pieces.

If not, then chill with the demands to bring home a title this year, keep this group intact and wait.

No, three years is not enough time to deem the experiment a failure and pull the plug. The Pacers have been standing on the threshold since 1994 and still haven't crossed, but you don't hear any cries to break them up. It's still Reggie Miller, Rik Smits, Mark Jackson and the Davises.

The Lakers have plenty of pieces. They just can't put them all together.

The Lakers threw just about everything they had at the Pacers. O'Neal contributed numbers above even his own stellar averages with 36 points and 17 rebounds. They made five of 16 three-pointers. They outrebounded Indiana, 48-33.

"I was telling (my teammates) when they made their run, with all that dunking and whooping and hollering, at the end of the quarter we were only down two points," said Miller, who broke all kinds of Laker hearts with 26 points. "Guys, just keep it alive. We keep it close, we'll win."

maybe, just maybe, in this crazy world of non-believers of Saluki athletics, there might be a rainbow directly over Southern Illinois University with a pot filled with all of the championships.

So, if you want a 'big name' school and do not feel we are one — leave. I'm personally quite impressed by our athletics, and I predict we will have a share of the spotlight in the upcoming years on either Fox Sports Midwest or ESPN.

Like my former editor used to say, "Either you are part of the solution or part of the problem." Me, I would like to say I'm part of the solution.

Sincerely,
Mike Bjorklund

Sad Mormons reflect on Olympic scandal

BILL BRUBAKER
WASHINGTON POST

SALT LAKE CITY — Nine days before the Olympic scandal broke late last year, officials of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints ended a long period of public ambivalence toward the 2002 Winter Olympics and offered their formal backing.

Church bishops read a letter from the First Presidency urging members to volunteer to make an event already nicknamed the "Mormon Olympics" a showcase for a city known for its squeaky-clean image.

Now, the global bribery scandal that has erupted around Salt Lake City's winning Olympic bid has brought angst and embarrassment to this mountain-rimmed community and the church that is its major ethical force. On radio talk shows and in newspaper columns, on city streets and from church pulpits, Mormons worry that the longstanding image of the LDS Church has been broadly tarnished by a scandal that thus far has implicated only a few of its members.

Last week, as an ethics panel detailed the lavish gifts and favors used to win Olympic site votes from members of the International Olympic Committee, Gov. Mike Leavitt, a LDS Church member, expressed hope that the process will have a cleansing effect. Now that the Olympic organizing committee has exposed its own improprieties and been reorganized, he said, perhaps it can set "a standard of forthrightness in the Olympic world."

"Mormon folks, they try real hard to be perfect and obey all the commandments," said

Elaine Englehardt, a Mormon philosophy professor who also teaches ethics at Utah Valley State College in Orem. "Mormons are very proud of their morality. So it's pretty startling for them to have something like this happen. This is a horrible embarrassment."

The irony of an international bribery scandal centered in a city so straitlaced that it requires liquor to be sold only in private clubs has not been lost on religious ethicists.

The Mormons have had a historic struggle for acceptance in the secular world. Founded in 1830, today they comprise the fifth-largest church in the United States, with 10 million members worldwide. In Utah, 70 percent of the state's 2 million residents are Mormons, and church members dominate state and local politics.

They also played a strong leadership role in the organizing committee that waged a years-long battle to win the Olympic Games. Salt Lake Organizing Committee chairman Robert Garff, who took the job in late 1997, is a church official who spent four years in England as a missionary. The governor's Olympic coordinator, John Fowler, is a former member of the church's Second Quorum of Seventy.

Clearly, the scandal thus far has revolved around possible illegal acts by only a handful of people, several of whom happen to be Mormon. There is no suggestion that their actions were guided by the church.

But in its Olympic pitch, Salt Lake City portrayed itself as a center of clean living and fresh mountain air. Many church members had mixed feelings about a two-week party coming to the city, the citadel of Mormonism.

A message from a fan

MIKE BJORKLUND

SPORTS REPORTER

Dear Saluki fans,
A new breed of Saluki athletics is among us, and now is the time to get in on a piece of the action. The sun is finally peaking over the horizon. The cows are coming home. OK, you get the point.

Ladies and gentlemen, they're back! Saluki athletics like you never saw them before — hot, raw, adventurous and successful. If you don't believe me, let's look at the specifics:

• Men's basketball team — The bite is back, and it's stronger than it has been in the past three years. Even though the Salukis (14-9, 9-6 in the MVC) are still in fourth place with three games to go, an at-large bid for the NCAA Tournament or NIT spot should await — providing they do not fold in the next two weeks.

With a win over Evansville Saturday night and a No. 44 RPI rating as of the latest poll, Saluki fans — are you ready to nimbly?

• Swimming and Diving — Both men's and women's teams won the Missouri Valley Conference tournament last weekend for the fifth- and second-straight times, respectively. We have the men's Swimmer of the Year (Herman Louw), women's Diver of the Year (Kristin Kaylor) and the Coaches of the Year (Rick Walker and Mark Klumper). Can you say dominance?

• Softball — No. 35 in the country. That's right. The ladies have been placed among the elite in the country along with teams like the University of Pacific and the University of California-Berkeley. Their cast of sizzling pitchers and solid fitters give the Salukis a chance to crack the top 30 in the country if they impress this weekend in Monroe, La.

• Golf — OK, so you are saying it's just women's golf. You are wrong. I would like to see you drive the ball 220 yards and win the MVC crown. Didn't think so.

The women's golf team seeks to repeat their performance from last spring. To be honest, they may be one of the successful teams at the University.

Even though not all of our teams are having winning seasons, some have shown the heart and soul of champions in their efforts.

One of those teams is the baseball team. The Salukis are looking to turn the corner after last year's 19-35 record. A cast of healthy pitchers and average hitters can help the Salukis surprise the MVC if coach Dan Callahan has anything to say about it.

Track and field, volleyball and tennis are all right there. Even the women's basketball team led by first-year coach Julie Beck is primed for the conference tournament.

It's amazing how good our teams are right now. New athletic director Harold Bardo inherits this University on the cusp of greatness. We are not in the SIUC forward Tarica Hathaway attempts to avoid a strip during Monday night's game against Drake. First half turnovers and missed shots put the game out of reach in the Salukis' 54-44 loss.

TOO LATE: Women's basketball team comeback falls short in second half.

PAUL WLEKLINSKI
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

By the time the SIUC women's basketball team finally showed up for Monday's Missouri Valley Conference showdown with Drake, the game was already half over.

The closest the Salukis would get to having any control was just two minutes into the game with a 2-2 tie.

Drake 54
Salukis 44 The Bulldogs quickly put a 9-0 scoring run together, opening the game with a 17-6 lead.

The Bulldogs eventually opened a 32-14 halftime lead and never looked back, defeating the Salukis 54-44 in front of 350 people at the SIU Arena.

"Once again we don't play in the first half," SIUC coach Julie Beck said. "We don't come out ready to play. Drake was ready to play."

The Salukis shot a disheartening 22 percent from the field in the first half. Once again it was sophomore guard Terica Hathaway carrying the team on her shoulders, scoring eight of the Salukis' 14 first-half points.

But with the pressure from the Salukis to lead them offensively and fighting the flu bug, Hathaway would muster only 10 more points in the second half to lead all scorers with 18.

"She's still a bit under the weather, but I thought she got out and did some gutsy things," Beck said. "But I think she feels the pressure to try to score and had more shots than we would have liked for her to take."

The Salukis finally made their appearance with junior center Melaneece Bardley's layup 11 seconds into the second half.

The Salukis would go on a 14-7 run, but the Bulldogs would not be fazed, keeping the Salukis at about 12 points away for much of the game.

The Salukis would put together one more small surge late, but once again the Bulldogs would not allow it. SIUC shot 45 percent in the second half but turned the ball over a total of 24 times denying any chance at a late-game comeback.

"I thought we came back and gave them a hard fight," Beck said. "It's the same old swan song — (in the second half we got in and fought, and usually you can tell that by how you outbounced somebody (44-40))."

Bardley would only chip in eight points before fouling out with 3:29 left to play. Sophomore center Kristine Abramowski added six points and 12 rebounds. Maria Niebrugge, Courtney Smith and O'Desha Proctor all had four points each.

Tammi Blackstone led the Bulldogs with 13 points and eight rebounds. Haley Sames had 12 points and Stephanie Schmitz added 11 as the Bulldogs shot 38 percent for the game.

"I think it's very obvious that we have a big problem on offense," Beck said. "We've got a three-guard rotation going with one substitute. We've got one person who really is the only scorer. You can't do it with that."

Crowd inspires team in win over Evansville

Derrick Tilmon filled the stat sheet in Saturday night's victory over the University of Evansville at the SIU Arena.

The junior forward on the Saluki men's basketball team scored 10 points, snatched nine rebounds, handed out five assists and recorded three blocked shots in the Salukis' 80-65 victory over the Missouri Valley Conference leader.

Tilmon will not take all the credit for his solid performance, though — he had 6,222 fans energizing him. Playing in front of the largest crowd of the season, Tilmon and the Salukis (14-9, 9-6) trumped the Purple Aces with the help of the "sixth man" at their backs.

"We love it, we love it," Tilmon said about playing in front of the large crowd. "When you hear everybody yelling and screaming you're just getting excited. I know I'm an emotional person and an emotional player, so I just feed off it even more."

With the shot at a regular-season conference title lurking, attendance has been on a steady rise. The increase in interest is all part of the resurrection of Saluki basketball.

"It was the biggest crowd of the year, and the guys responded very well," Saluki coach Bruce Weber said. "I would hope (the crowd) would come back after this one."

Senior guard Monte Jenkins scored 24 points on 10-of-15 shooting. He said Saturday was the largest crowd he's seen at the SIU Arena since he became a Saluki.

"With all the fans and all the student body that came out tonight, it was real inspirational to look around and see that many people," Jenkins said.

And for the loyalty of the fans, Jenkins even granted one person in attendance a wish — Saturday night. He fulfilled a promise to a friend of a windmill dunk early in the first half.

"Every time I come to the game, he's like, 'Monte, wheel it,' Jenkins said. "He calls it the wheel because that's what it kind of looks like when you wheel it around. I told him if I get the ball on a break, I'll give him one tonight. I got one early in the game, so I think he was satisfied."
