More college students are abstaining from sex until they are married, a new study by the University of Chicago recently reported.

Amid National Chastity Week, the convictions of virgin SIUC students remain strong, as the number of college students abstaining rises

RHONDA SCIARRA
STUDENT AFFAIRS EDITOR

College campuses are finding an increasing number of students refraining from sexual intercourse before marriage, and SIUC students choosing abstinence say they are content waiting for that one special person.

"When I was younger, it was something my parents told me all of the time," said Dominika Smereczynski, a senior in journalism from Park Ridge who grew up in a Catholic family.

"My religion is my most important thing to me, but you don't just follow something blindly without reasoning something out — I have reasoned this out."

A 1998 Playboy survey found that 15 percent of 2,000 college students, from both large and small campuses, were virgins. A recent University of Chicago survey indicated an increase in the number of 18 to 24-year-olds believing that premarital sex is wrong or almost wrong. In the survey, 25 percent of men and 30 percent of women agreed, up from numbers of 16 and 30 percent, respectively, in the early 1970s.

The week of Feb. 13 has been deemed the third annual National Chastity Week by more than 100 supporting organizations such as the American Life League, Illinois Citizens for Life, Teen Aid and the Challenge Task Force on Chastity.

Abstinence is just one aspect of chastity, said Steve Sanborn, director of public relations for the American Life League. He defines living a chaste life as avoiding sexual intercourse before marriage, as well as maintaining fidelity within a marriage.

"Chastity is the only way to live ones life that is both pleasing to God and the only way to keep healthy," Sanborn said. "These are tremendous reasons, but primarily it is to promote the dignity of human beings."

Matt Gray, a 21-year-old senior in aviation management from Champaign, has also grown up with the belief that sex before marriage is wrong.

"It has just never been an option in my mind," Gray said. "It is something I've known as just plain wrong — I won't go there."

Biblically speaking, Gray said, abstinence refers to the refraining from exploring the nakedness of another human being until marriage.

In his previous three-year relationship, Gray said, resisting the temptation to cross the line was difficult.

"Complete abstinence, that is a very tough one," he said. "It is something I am striving for and something I abide by."

Data published in January in the Journal of the American Medical Association suggests that sex is not so easily defined.

Bardo advances into 'semi-final' round

Athletic Director search includes Bardo, 10 others

ANDY EGENSEN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The field of candidates for the permanent athletic director position has been narrowed to 11 finalists, including interim Athletic Director Harold Bardo.

Interim Chancellor John Jackson plans to meet with the remaining candidates in late March and early April. The committee to find a permanent director will meet again Monday to examine the remaining candidates' backgrounds.

Jackson said the committee has not set a clear timetable on narrowing the field again.

Bardo said he is excited about making the cut into the semi-final round and will be ready for the next interview.

"I feel good about my chances," Bardo said. "I think I know what needs to be done, and I have an advantage knowing what is needed to be done and hit the ground running."

Jackson confirmed the fact that Bardo is still a candidate but could not release the identities for the rest of the field.

The search committee cannot comment on personnel decisions because the meetings are in closed sessions. Also, the committee recently dropped a candidate and added another to the list in the last week.

Bardo, former director of SIU's MedPrep Program and professor in the School of Medicine, said he applied for the position to contribute back to the Athletic Department.

"Once I had the education, the University gave me the opportunity to come back to get a master's and a Ph.D. and to work in athletics," Bardo said. "Athletics has been a big part of my life, all of my life."

Bardo's personal history has been a major influence on his professional life. As a native of near-by Sparta, he was raised by parents, who never surpassed an eighth-grade education, and came from a coal mining family.

"I think all of us are told as we are growing up that we need to give something back," Bardo said.

The new director will have a "laundry list" full of facility updates.

Renovations to SIU Arena and the softball facility are top priorities of the Athletic Department.

Bardo plans to visit the Illinois State University campus to gather ideas that could be incorporated at SIUC.

But having the permanent position would give himself more room to operate, Bardo said.

"I guess I haven't done anything to get my hand slapped about at this particular point," Bardo said. "But I would feel a little more comfortable making changes where I was the permanent A.D."

is published Monday through Friday, during the fall and spring semesters and four times a week during the summer semester except during vacation and exam weeks by the students of Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

Henry addressed claims at press conference

Undergraduate Student Government President Sean Henry had a press conference Tuesday to address the five allegations made against him calling for his review.

Robert Beverly, public relations for USG, read a press release to about 25 people addressing and denying all the claims made against Henry.

For each of the claims, Henry responded to the accusations justifying his actions as USG president.

A letter written by seven USG senators was submitted to the Internal Affairs Committee Feb. 8 requesting the investigation into the five allegations.

Allegations include extensive funding of a fraternity Henry now belongs to, not having a summer budget report to senators and not getting the budget to senators, missing expenditures, appointing executive members without senate consent, and employing a public relations director to work from home.

Senator Fitzgerald to meet with university officials

Illinois Sen. Peter Fitzgerald announced he will visit the SIUC campus today. He plans to meet with University officials and tour the Dunn-Richmond Economic Development Center and the Soybean Research Center.

Fitzgerald will speak at the Carbondale Holiday Inn at 12:15 p.m.

Online record company offers free music

Move over MP3.com and RealAudio. A new kid on the block wants to take the digital music industry to a new level by creating an online music label.

Bob Hendrickson is CEO of zerorpm.com, an online record company that offers free recording and studio services to up-and-coming artists. At 31, he is striving to make his mark in an arena filled with music companies that have already developed a loyal audience. Nevertheless, Hendrickson, a graduate of Columbia College in Chicago, is convinced his online gig is a go — and a project that will make household names of many who use it.

Indeed his site may excite many musicians still waiting to be discovered. Zerorpm.com will distribute their music at no charge. Hendrickson is hoping to drum up a loyal following of his own by having his site offer four primary services: free recording and studio production, downloadable tools to help with the content-creation process, a database housing extensive lists of musicians and songwriters to allow for professional networking and tools designed to help with the development of commercial music.

A proof-of-concept site is now up and running, allowing for up to 10,000 registered users. If you're interested in learning more about zerorpm.com, just log on to www.zerorpm.com for more information.

Excitement and surprise are not strong enough words to describe guitarist Andy Waldron's reaction to hearing his band's cover of Nirvana's "Something in the Way" on 105.7 The Pivot in St. Louis.

"I was going home at around 10 at night and when I heard our song on the radio, I flipped out," said Waldron, a senior music business major from Sparta. "Here was one of the top five most influential radio stations in the country playing our song."

Waldron is just one of the members of the local art rock/instrumental band called The Dead Musicians' Society performing at Shryock Auditorium tonight at 8.

The band's name comes from the 1989 Peter Weir film "Dead Poets Society" starring Robin Williams as a literature teacher who inspires his students to "seize the day." The film seemed to have a tremendous impact on the group's leader, producer and founder, Kevin Lucas. Not only did he name the band after the movie, he named

Judicial Affairs resolutions back to USG Senate

Senators should vote on available information

KAREN BLATTER
GOVERNMENT EDITOR

Five Student Judicial Affairs resolutions will go before Undergraduate Student Government for the third time tonight, after giving senators three months to acquire additional information.

The five resolutions were written last semester and each time they have been put before the senate, senators have postponed them indefinitely, saying they did not have enough information.

Sean Henry, USG president, said all the needed information has been available to senators in the USG office, and it has been their responsibility to obtain the information.

"If they are still unclear, then they need to ask questions and clear things up," he said. "The information is available and it is the senators' responsibilities to think about it and debate."

Along with information at the USG office, Student Judicial Affairs officials have been at USG meetings to answer senators questions.

The resolutions include allowing an adviser to actively defend students regarding all matters of

Weekend's fake alarms perpetuate slow reaction

University Housing officials searching for ways to help students take heed to alarms

DAVID FERRARA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Even after a fire scorched a room in Schneider Hall earlier this month, pranksters pulled at least three false alarms on campus this weekend, leaving housing officials bewildered about how to ensure students take all fire alarms seriously.

It is tough for SIUC students like Amanda Cortes to heed the alarms, considering the amount that turn out to be hoaxes.

"We just kind of roll out of bed slowly," said Cortes, a freshman from Chicago. "No one really cares anymore."

Steve Kirk, SIUC's assistant housing director, understands how students can be slow to react to an alarm. But, he says, they should take every alarm seriously.

Living on campus — especially the east side lately — has become synonymous with waking up in the middle of the night to the wailing of a fire alarm. Most times, there is no fire. In fact, at least 22 false alarms were deliberately pulled on campus last semester.

And the number of fals: alarms this semester are quickly rising. University Police and the

OUR WORD

University should be educators, not baby sitters

Put down the credit card application and walk away. Place the pamphlet on the table, take your eyes off the free shirt or soda and go to class.

During any given week, an individual can walk past Paner Hall or the Student Center and see students armed with free toys, gadgets, various edible treats, and clipboards upon clipboards of credit card applications. The practice, called "tabling," has come under fire in the last several years, drawing criticism that unsuspecting college students are being targeted only because they are likely to accumulate and spend a lifetime paying interest on debt.

Universities across the country are taking a stand against tabling. The DAILY EGYPTIAN reported Friday, the number of campuses banning the practice has rocketed from 92 in 1997 to 720 this year. Even the government is trying to step in with the proposed College Student Credit Card Protection Act. The federal resolution would limit full-time college students with no annual income to one credit card by forcing credit card companies to deny students within that profile. With so many guardians watching out for our interests at college, why bother leaving the nest?

Everyone knows that guy who maxed out his first card in a week and now struggles to pay the minimum amount due each month. Or even that girl who got so overwhelmed by credit card debt, she had to drop out of school and work full time. Are these stories enough to justify restrictive legislation and University intervention? If so, what steps should be taken to prevent the familiar scenario of a guy who dropped out because his girlfriend broke up with him, or because the professors "don't like him." The point is, there are dozens of reasons our lives are complicated or school is tough, but problems cannot always be solved by invoking more rules and restrictions.

When you sign up for a credit card, flip the application over and read the fine print. Know the annual percentage rate, annual fees, grace period, spending limit and penalties. The financial choices made as a college student will remain long after the clothes go out of style and computer hardware is obsolete. College isn't just about learning a trade or reading more books — it's also about taking responsibility and finding out that being treated like an adult means more consequences and less outside help. The lucky ones learn from their friends' mistakes, but the others cannot be protected from themselves or by their Universities.

The students peddling the credit cards are from Registered Student Organizations, trying make money for their activities and meetings. While we believe the RSOs should be able to profit from tabling, they should make the effort to ensure their members are educated before they try to convince a student to sign up for a card.

Not that the University can't help students make good choices. Most credit card companies have phone numbers consumers may call for credit counseling tips, but that seems a bit like asking a robber where to hide the VCR. If SIUC offered easily accessible credit counseling, students would have somewhere neutral to go and ask for help. Educating students suits the University more than limiting the choices available.

The 720 campuses that have banned tabling may have less students with credit problems than SIUC. But solving problems for young adults is not the business this University is in. We like to think SIUC is in the business of providing students with the tools necessary to deal with problems.

Rethinking convenience

The Way I See It...

JULIE HUGG
The Way I See It... appears Wednesdays. Julie is a sophomore in photojournalism. Her opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the DAILY EGYPTIAN.

I live in a small town in Southern Illinois. This week marks the closure of one of the three stores in our area to buy groceries. The only store in this community that was willing to buy local produce, they even purchased some of the flowers that my partner and I grow during the summer.

A couple of years ago, our community was graced with the presence of a Super Wal-Mart. It appears to me to be the most frequented place in town, but I wonder, at what cost?

In 10 or 20 years, other than in the cities, will we have something called "downtown," a place central to a community where people can walk or ride their bikes to? Somewhere to stop in a hardware store, cross the street to have a prescription filled, walk down to the market and pick up a loaf of bread? The character, history and integrity of our towns all across the country are being compromised by huge corporate conglomerates that family-owned businesses cannot compete with.

Wal-Mart, for example, who has built its empire on being small town friendly, is notorious for bullying its way into many of its small-town locations. If a town didn't want to add tens of thousands of vehicles to its roadways per year, or didn't want to pave its prairies or wetlands, unless that town had an equivalent number of corporate lawyers and economic muscle, they lost.

Comparatively speaking, Wal-Mart is cheap. I believe this is a company built on the premise of low quality/low price. For example, we have a neighbor whose VCR recently broke. Instead of paying to have it repaired, he plans to go to Wal-Mart and buy a brand new one — because they're cheap. But he got the broken one there LESS THAN TWO YEARS AGO!!! This pattern of disposable consumerism cannot be sustained. How many useless plastic toys/items do children and adults really need?

When shopping at a privately owned business, a consumer usually finds a shopkeeper with years of experience and knowledge about the products that he/she sells. At Wal-Mart, you're lucky if an "associate" can tell you where to even find what you're looking for.

Because columns are allotted a very limited amount of space, I will not go into detail about the extensive environmental damage that I believe comes from these types of stores.

As far as creating jobs in a community, I'm sure they employ a lot of people. But, can we be sure that there are many more jobs created by the corporations than by all the small, family owned stores that go out of business because of them, the local growers who would supply those small businesses, the truck drivers who would transport goods to those smaller businesses and the other suppliers of goods to the small businesses? It would be interesting to see how the numbers really add up.

Lack of hospitality at SIU should be nothing new

DEAR EDITOR:
This letter is in response to the column published in Tuesday's DAILY EGYPTIAN, "Be courteous and say hello to invisible man." As a black graduate social work student from Mississippi, I immediately noticed the lack of hospitality at SIUC. In Mississippi and probably other southern states, people make eye-contact followed by a warm, friendly hello. When I arrived at SIUC in June 1999, I felt ridiculous, smiling and greeting people without any response or acknowledgment from them. The lack of hospitality is nothing new to me.

DAILY EGYPTIAN mistreats the greeks

DEAR EDITOR:
We are writing in concern about the article that was published Feb. 14 pertaining to the greek system. We were not aware that the DAILY EGYPTIAN's job was to voice one-sided opinions. It was to our knowledge that the newspaper was to present facts.

"DAILY EGYPTIAN urges Greek Judicial board to set example" is nothing but slanderism (sic) toward the greek system as a whole. If this is the type of writing material that is being written by so-called "journalism" majors, then they better find jobs and so should the so-called "editor-in-chief," because I thought that it was his responsibility to correct them of their mistakes that they are indeed making. Fact: if reporters were to work at a large establishment and write material of this nature, not to mention question a 12-year-old about something that he/she knows nothing about, and print it... lawsuit action could be taken place.

In the last month, the majority of the articles concerning SIU's greek system have been nothing but bad press. It seems as if the DAILY EGYPTIAN has been against us. If it's examples that you want set, then how about we send an example to you?

Student speaks out on parking situation

DEAR EDITOR,
Have you ever heard a student complain about University Parking Division? The chances that you have are pretty good. As a person walks through the school grounds, he/she is likely to hear a conversation that involves someone describing the parking situation as "ridiculous and an inconvenience to students." Are the complaints of the students justified? In my opinion, students have reason to be upset about the parking lots and number of available spaces throughout campus.

If a person is a freshman or a sophomore and lives in Thompson Point, he has to park his car in the lot adjacent to the law school. Is it too much to ask for a parking lot closer to the dorms that accommodates freshman and sophomore students? The majority of the students that live in the dorms are underclassmen, so why not offer a lot that serves the needs of these students?

The parking division should try to improve on the current parking situation at Thompson Point and other areas around campus. Students would not violate the parking laws if there were enough spaces to accommodate the faculty and students that use the lots on a daily basis. The parking division should assist the students and provide adequate parking lots that meet the needs of the entire SIUC community.

'American Beauty' goes for the gold in eight categories

JOHN HARTL
KNIGHT-RIDDER TRIBUNE

"American Beauty," a soulful satire about suburbia, led the way when the 72nd annual Academy Award nominations were announced today in Los Angeles.

The DreamWorks production received eight nominations, including best picture, actor (Kevin Spacey), actress (Annette Bening), director (Sam Mendes), screenwriter (Alan Ball), cinematography (Conrad Hall), editing (Tariq Anwar) and score (Thomas Newman).

Also nominated for best picture were Lasse Hallstrom's adaptation of John Irving's novel, "The Cider House Rules"; Michael Mann's "The Insider," a fact-based drama about an expose of the tobacco industry; M. Night Shyamalan's "The Sixth Sense," a box-office blockbuster about a boy who sees dead people; and Frank Darabont's three-hour prison drama, "The Green Mile."

Hallstrom, Shyamalan and Mann were nominated for best director, but Darabont was replaced in that category by Spike Jonze, who made the surrealistic comedy, "Being John Malkovich."

In the best actor race, Spacey's discontented father-husband in "American Beauty" will be competing with Denzel Washington's incarnation of the wrongfully imprisoned Rubin "Hurricane" Carter in "The Hurricane"; Sean Penn as a jazz musician in Woody Allen's "Sweet and Lowdown"; Russell Crowe's portrayal of a tortured tobacco-industry executive in "The Insider"; and Richard Farnsworth's performance as an old man trying to make amends with his brother in "The Straight Story."

Bening, who plays Spacey's unhappy wife in "American Beauty," faces equally tough competition: Janet McTeer's spirited if immature mother in "Tumbleweeds"; Julianne Moore as a wartime adulteress with a spiritual side in "The End of the Affair"; Hilary Swank as the cross-dressing Teena Brandon in "Boys Don't Cry"; and Meryl Streep as a dedicated music teacher in "Music of the Heart."

For best supporting actress, the nominees include Angelina Jolie, as a mentally disturbed girl in "Girl, Interrupted"; Toni Collette as the boy's mother in "The Sixth Sense"; and Samantha Morton as Sean Penn's girlfriend in "Sweet and Lowdown." Chloe Sevigny, who plays Swank's sexually confused lover in "Boys Don't Cry," is also nominated in this category, along with Catherine Keener, who plays a similarly mixed-up office worker in "Being John Malkovich."

Tom Cruise earned his third nomination, this time in the supporting category, for his work as a misogynistic motivational speaker in "Magnolia." His competition includes Michael Caine, as an abortionist in "The Cider House Rules"; Haley Joel Osment, as the perceptive child in "The Sixth Sense"; Michael Clarke Duncan as a death-row miracle worker in "The Green Mile"; and Jude Law as a hedonistic expatriate in "The Talented Mr. Ripley."

Alexander Payne and Jim Taylor were nominated for best adapted screenplay for their work on the high-school satire, "Election," based on Tom Perrotta's novel. Also in that category are Anthony Minghella, for his adaptation of Patricia Highsmith's "The Talented Mr. Ripley"; Michael Mann and Eric Roth for "The Insider," based on Marie Brenner's magazine article; John Irving, working from his own novel, "The Cider House Rules"; and Darabont for his adaptation of Stephen King's novel, "The Green Mile."

The race for best original screenplay appears to be a toss-up between Alaric Ball's script for "American Beauty" and Charlie Kaufman's "Being John Malkovich." Also in the running are Paul Thomas Anderson's "Magnolia," M. Night Shyamalan's "The Sixth Sense" and Mike Leigh's "Topsy-Turvy."

Spain's "All About My Mother," directed by Pedro Almodovar, was nominated for best foreign-language film, along with France's "East-West," Nepal's "Caravan," Sweden's "Under the Sun" and the United Kingdom's "Solomon and Gaenor." Among the qualified films that didn't make it: Belgium's "Rosetta," which won the top prize at last year's Cannes Film Festival; India's "Earth"; Bhutan's "The Cup"; Denmark's "Mifune"; and the Polish entry, Andrzej Wajda's "Pan Tadeusz."

However, Wajda will be honored with a career-achievement award at the Oscar ceremonies.

The past year's most popular non-fiction film, Wim Wenders' "The Buena Vista Social Club," was nominated for best documentary, but Errol Morris' "Mr. Death: The Rise and Fall of Fred A. Leuchter Jr." and Chris Smith's "American Movie" were shut out by "Genghis Blues," "On the Ropes," "One Day in September" and "Speaking in Strings." The rules were substantially changed this year, as a response to criticisms that such acclaimed filmmakers as Morris have been shut out in the past.

"Snow Falling on Cedars," based on David Guterson's book about the post-war Northwest, earned a nomination for Robert Richardson's cinematography. "Titus," which was produced by Paul Allen and Jody Patton, earned a nomination for best costume design. "The Matrix" and "Star Wars: Episode 1 — The Phantom Menace" will be competing for best visual effects, sound recording and sound effects editing. And the highly bleepable "Blame Canada," from "South Park Bigger, Longer and Uncut," was nominated for best song.

Major upsets and surprises: the poor showing of "Topsy-Turvy," which won both the National Society of Film Critics and the New York Film Critics' awards for best picture of the year; the previously unsuspected popularity of "Cider House Rules" and "Sweet and Lowdown" with the voters; and the fact that, for the first time, the acting nominations don't match up particularly well with the recent nominations made by the Screen Actors Guild (SAG). Farnsworth, Law, Penn, Collette and Morton were not nominated by SAG.

Billy Crystal will host this year's Academy Awards, which begin with a pre-show special at 8 p.m. ET March 26 in Los Angeles Shrine Auditorium. The first awards will be given around 8:30 p.m., and the show is scheduled to run for three hours. Last year, it ran overtime for a full hour.

Law students advise public

Law school's Self-Help Center commended by American Bar Association

ANTONIO YOUNG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Self-Help Legal Center of Illinois, a program run by the SIU Law School, was selected Jan. 28 as a recipient of meritorious recognition for the 2000 Louis M. Brown award for Legal Access.

Given annually by the American Bar Association, the award acknowledges programs that improve upon the delivery of affordable legal information and services to surrounding communities.

The center was presented the Brown award on Feb. 12 at the ABA Midyear Meeting in Dallas.

Michael Ruiz, coordinator of the program, said this past year, the ABA concentrated on the delivery of self-help information that could be used by the public to perform legal tasks without an attorney.

"We took a lot of time in looking at what other self-help centers throughout the country had done, as far as how they presented information to the public," Ruiz said. "We try to model ours more after do-it-yourself books... like the things you do, such as build your own deck, or fix your own faucet. We figured ours would be a lot easier to read and be a little more user-friendly."

Law students volunteer in the center, which started July 1998, and create self-help materials to assist the public with legal problems concerning car accidents and insurance, divorce, child support, housing and other everyday legal issues. The center, located in the Lesar Law Library, contains a large number of self-help law books. In addition, the library provides assistance via the Internet for greater accessibility to legal advice.

Ruiz said users do not disclose their situations by interacting with others.

"At three in the morning, if you want to get a packet on how to change your name, you can do that now because the Internet doesn't shut down," Ruiz said. "I think that just makes it a lot more accessible for some people that work during the day."

The public can obtain packets at circuit clerk offices and county court houses in Southern Illinois or can have copies mailed to them. The center's ability to provide many different ways for the public to get the same information enabled the center to receive the award, Ruiz said.

The center's services are available to all members of the public, regardless of their age, gender, income level or residency status.

"I think that is definitely something the community liked... anyone can call, come in and get this information, or dial-up on the Internet," Ruiz said. "A lot of times when people want to get this kind of stuff for free, they have to give somebody personal information."

"The center is not some multi-million dollar program that cannot be duplicated," Ruiz said.

The project is made possible by a grant from the Lawyers Trust Fund of Illinois, which also funds other numerous agencies across the state of Illinois that provide free or low cost legal assistance to its citizens.

College of Engineering ready to play Mind Games

To celebrate National Engineering Week, SIUC will let students get involved in Mind Games 2000

COBELL RODRIGUEZ
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Imagine a competition where the events include building bridges from straws, houses from cards and where eggs drop from the sky.

These and many other events will be available at the SIUC Engineering Mind Games 2000. The games, which will take place Feb. 24, will be in honor of National Engineering Week. The games will span from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., and students can compete in individual event competitions or a pentathlon competition for a $50 coupon at the University Bookstore.

George Swisher, dean of the College of Engineering, said the mind games will be useful in recruiting potential students.

"It's a great opportunity to preview the college," Swisher said.

Students wanting to participate can register between 8:45 a.m. and 1:45 p.m. at the main registration table at the main entrance of the Engineering Building.

The competition is not limited to engineering students. Linda Helstern, assistant to the dean for External Affairs, said the competition is open to everyone.

"We would like everyone on campus to drop by," Helstern said.

Mind Games 2000 will include plenty of hands-on events that will not only involve the participants in engineering but will also provide a fun and educational experience, Helstern said.

The individual events will have different starting times, and all but two will end at 2 p.m. Bridge Over No Man's Gorge will challenge the contestant to design and build a bridge using plastic straws. Participants will be provided with 30 plastic straws and a pair of scissors to build a bridge that spans a gorge of 20 inches.

Some events have competitors moving materials in a certain amount of time. Dig It has contestants using a remote control front-end wheel loader (similar to a bulldozer) to move a pile of material from one end of a small maze to another within four minutes.

Anyone who has ever wanted to drop an egg from the fourth floor of a building can participate in the Over Easy Egg Drop. This competition supplies the contestant with the egg, but all other materials must be brought in by the participant. The eggs will be dropped from the fourth floor south balcony in Engineering A.

Other events include Royal House Flush, Precision Pacing, Robotic Challenge and Paper Aircraft Design.

The Mind Games have taken place annually since 1981 and are very important to Helstern.

"It's the big focus event for the College of Engineering," Helstern said.

back in the spring of 1997.

"Our music is really an appreciation of life and how fragile and precious life is," Lucas said.

The musical style is a combination of many different genres: everything from jazz and funk to rock and reggae. It's no wonder considering the different musical backgrounds of all the members. Marimba player Lucas, guitarist Waldron, bassist Justin Wiley, saxophone player Shadi Frick, keyboardist Ellena Chen and drummer Patrick Faddler all bring their own musical influences to the table.

Waldron cites influences as diverse as George Harrison of the Beatles, Dave Matthews, The Police's Andy Summers and John Frusciante of the Red Hot Chili Peppers.

He said Shryock should be a perfect venue for the band's grand, epic style of music.

"This music style will be good in a college auditorium because there are so many different things going on in the music itself," Waldron said.

Lucas is also looking forward to experimenting with sounds in the auditorium. For this show, the band has a new, updated sound system that will enhance the sonic quality of Lucas' five octave electric marimba.

"I'm looking forward to it because Shryock is a real professional place to play," Lucas said. "We're really one of the few local bands they let play at Shryock."

Robert Weiss, director of the school of music, said the concert should be effective in exposing students to a wider variety of musical styles and textures.

"It's a different style of music, and it's valuable for our students to have a lot of different experiences," Weiss said.

As for the future, things are looking up for The Dead Musicians' Society. After a favorable review by Kevin Johnson of the St. Louis Post Dispatch and two albums released by Reception Records under its belt, the band's career is anything but dead.

"My ultimate dream is to tour with the band," Lucas said. "I love teaching and it's more financially secure to do that now, but I would love to make this band my full-time career."

ALARMS

Carbondale Fire Department responded to two false fire alarms in University Park and one at Mae Smith Hall early Saturday morning, bringing the number of criminal false alarms to seven for the semester. All of the criminal alarms were pulled on the east side of campus. Police have no suspects in the incidents.

There were also four fire alarm mechanical failures on campus this semester. Housing officials are working with police to try to apprehend the pranksters.

There is a $500 award for information that leads to the arrest of someone suspected of pulling a false alarm.

"We've got to get the people [who pull fake alarms deliberately] out of the buildings," said University Housing Director Ed Jones.

So many false alarms were deliberately pulled in Mae Smith Hall last semester that Cortes began to notice a pattern.

She said when alarms were pulled during the day, alarms were also pulled at night. Now, if she happens to hear an alarm during the day, she stays at a friend's place off campus for the night.

Cortes said she was concerned for her friends in Schneider Hall Feb. 6 because they did not take the alarm seriously.

"I heard there was a fire, and then I realized that they probably just reacted the same way I did," Cortes said.

Undergraduate Student Government President Sean Henry told the DAILY EGYPTIAN Monday he wanted to discuss policy issues with University leaders. He said he did not have the chance to meet with housing officials. But at a residence hall meeting Tuesday evening in Lentz Hall, no student government representative was present.

Meanwhile, University Housing officials are working with the SIU Department of Public Safety to catch the people who are pulling false alarms.

"My goodness, the people who are pulling [false alarms] are the people who bother me even more," Jones said. "We've got to work on both ends of it."

While University Housing officials ponder a solution, Kirk and Jones have talked with officials at other universities who are experiencing similar problems.

"This is not an easy problem to solve," Kirk said "It's a tough issue."

"If I could figure out a solution that would really, really work, I could quit and consult," he added jokingly.

FMA on the road again

Financial Management Association will leave for its semester corporate trip Thursday

ANDREA DONALDSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Network, network, network. This term, meaning to make connections, is stressed greatly in nearly every field of study. SIUC's College of Business and Administration is no exception.

The Financial Management Association is planning this semester's corporate trip, and it is a chance for students to do just that, network, said Elizabeth Hara, a senior in management information systems from Boulder, Colo. Hara was the president of FMA last year and is currently the corporate-trip officer.

A group of about 25 students will leave Thursday, driving to Atlanta. While in Atlanta, the group will visit the Federal Reserve Bank and have the chance to go to Lodgian Inc., a hotel chain, or Southern Company, an energy trade business.

"We try to incorporate both the corporate side and the banking side to all of our trips that we go on," Hara said.

Visits to these financial institutions have been set up through connections with Kenneth R. Posner, SIUC alumnus and CFO of Lodgian, and Peter Dadalt, FMA adviser and assistant professor in finance. Dadalt has contacts with people at both Southern Company and the Federal Reserve Bank.

Dadalt said these corporate visits are not only a great opportunity for the students, but also for himself.

"This allows me to see how things are done in the real world and bring it back to the classroom," Dadalt said.

Hara said to cover the expenses of the trip, FMA has done various fund-raisers, collected dues and has received Registered Student Organization funds. The group has also required a $30 fee.

One of the main fund-raisers that FMA does every semester is a calculator sell-back, Dadalt said. Students are required to purchase a financial calculator for one of the introductory financial classes. When the class is finished, FMA buys the calculators back and re-sells them.

"We help out the students and help out the chapter at the same time," Dadalt said.

With all of the preparation that has been done, Hara expects this trip to be just as beneficial as the previous trips to Memphis, Chicago and St. Louis.

"I think this is going to be a great opportunity for all of the members," Hara said.

The comments and action taken by USG are important because there is a Student Conduct Code Review committee that meets with Student Judicial Affairs to discuss student complaints and concerns.

Henry said he needs the feedback from students so the committee's recommendations will reflect the student population's viewpoint.

Another resolution is being presented to the senate that further promotes the use of the Student Conduct Review Committee to examine Student Judicial Affairs to its full ability.

Vice Chancellor of Administration Glenn Poshard will also address the senate to talk about University policies in regards to posting signs on campus.

ABSTINENCE

It took impeachment proceedings for Bill Clinton to admit that while he "did not have sexual relations with that woman," he did have oral sex. Along these same lines, the JAMA study of 599 college students discovered that 59 percent did not think that oral-genital contact was having "had sex."

For Devon Ligu, a sophomore in radio-television and cinema and photography from Roscoe, anything beyond kissing causes too great of a temptation.

"For me, if you push yourself a little when you are with him, then again you will push a little more until you cross the boundaries," Ligu said.

Smereczynski, who has had a boyfriend for the last three months, also believes anything past kissing is wrong before marriage.

She said her relationship with her boyfriend has deepened because they both share the same beliefs about sex.

"I want to find the right person, and I don't want my relationship to be based on sex," Smereczynski said. "I want it to be based on trust, honesty and a relationship where we can talk to each other."

For Gray, finding the right person is so important that he sees no reason in dating someone he will not possibly marry.

"I am not going to go to the bars and pick-up someone to date," Gray said. "There is just a plethora of women that are wearing too few clothes for the weather."

"What I am looking for is someone who is an extension of me, and I am an extension of her — someone who I can trust in every way."

Gray also said sex can interfere with relationships, complicating things for the worse.

"Men give love for sex, and women give sex for love," Gray said. "There is a lot of weight taken-on with that step."

Having these beliefs can be hard in college, but both Gray and Smereczynski say by having good support systems, they can stand by their beliefs.

"I get a lot of respect for it," Smereczynski said. "Most people who I have spoken to say they wish they would have waited for the right person."

Ultimately, the decision for Smereczynski to remain a virgin until marriage also provides her a sense of relief.

"There are so many other things on my mind right now — like finding a job and graduating," Smereczynski said. "I don't have to worry about pregnancy or whether I contract some disease or jealousy. I don't want to think about that stuff."

Gray said the end result of abstinence will make all the difference.

"If I wait until marriage to have sex, she will be the best I have ever had," Gray said. "And above all, it will be the best possible wedding present I can give her."

RESOLUTIONS

primary accuser, and allow all decisions of local, state and federal courts to be posted as evidence at University Judicial Hearings.

Henry said he is confident that senators will take a vote because information has been available, and the resolutions were moved to a higher position in the agenda.

Henry said changes have been made to the agenda so the resolutions should come up for discussion by 7:30 p.m.

Gus Says: Congratulations to the Daily Egyptian classified staff on their first place award for "Best Classified Section" in the ICPA competition!

On Campus: Men's Rugby

JAVIER SERNA
 DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

What SIU club sport contains elements of football, wrestling and soccer, and is one of the most physical contact sports around?

If you guessed rugby, then you're on the same page as SIU rugby team captain Billy Irvin.

"It even has elements of basketball, because you have to be able to jump," Irvin said.

The SIU men's rugby team is ready to start off the spring season, and had been conditioning since the start of the semester. After a 4-3 finish in the fall, the team is still looking for new players to add to their spring roster.

"We're always looking for good athletes who are willing to give the game a try," Irvin said. "Right now we're recruiting guys to fill in key positions that were lost to graduation last summer."

That team was one of SIU's best in recent years as it finished with only one loss at 8-1.

The team has 60 players divided into an A and B team. The game is played 15-on-15 and is one of the most physically demanding sports, as it lasts 80 minutes without any breaks.

Rugby is very much an endurance game. Players have to be able to hit, be hit, jump, push and pull.

"That's what makes the game so rough, because not only do you have to do all that, but you have to do it for 80 minutes straight," Irvin said.

Traditionally, the team uses the spring season to break in the rookies, as it is not governed by USA Rugby — rugby's version of the NCAA.

"We use the spring season to recruit and get the rookies in shape for the fall season, which is our time to shine," Irvin said.

Irvin said rugby is a lot of fun for players and spectators alike. He said some games have drawn large crowds, which usually leave quite entertained.

"It looks like mayhem, but it's actually very organized, and the more you understand the game, the [more fun] it is as a spectator sport," he said.

KLUEMPER

"He's on our level, he doesn't seem like an older guy or like he's above us," sophomore swimmer Courtney Corder said. "He talks to us like we're his friends or part of his family."

That's why for the swimmers, Klumper's departure comes as a traumatic divorce. Many of the Salukis cried when Klumper informed his swimmers at a meeting early in the season that this would be his final season.

Meckler said it was difficult to cope with the knowledge that the man who recruited her to SIU would not be around for her junior and senior years.

"I was pretty emotional, because I came here pretty much just because of Mark," Meckler said.

Klumper has twice been named MVC Coach of the Year. Prior to his arrival in Carbondale, he coached club swimming and was an associate coach at his alma mater, the University of Kentucky.

CUSICK

coach Kerri Blaylock, who is in her 10th season with SIU.

However, let's not dwell on the past, because there was something positive to be taken from the lackluster finish.

Every SIU team member learned from the experience.

They learned they needed to be tougher. Not the kind of toughness that involves a weight program or anything physically demanding, but mental toughness.

Welcome the 2000 Salukis, which includes a good portion of the '99 squad. Just a little tougher, Blaylock hopes.

Leading the barrage of talent is the Saluki pitching staff, which was tops in the league in E.R.A. (1.39) last season. Blaylock thinks her staff is the best in the league again.

And why not?

Leading the four-woman arsenal

Junior swimmer Daniela Muniz came all the way from Miami to be a part of Klumper's program. Klumper may not fit the stereotype of the brash, testosterone-laden coach, but Muniz said she will remember Klumper as being an inspiring motivator.

"He always tells us that we can do it no matter what — even if we're tired, there's still something in us," Muniz said. "If we really want it, we're going to go for it and get it."

Although Klumper has coached an Olympic qualifier and many swimmers who have garnered individual honors, he said the hardest part about leaving will be walking away from the togetherness that accompanies college sports.

"These guys are really behind each other and really support each other," Klumper said. "It really comes down to the team camaraderie and how the team functions together as a group."

Klumper said a new women's swimming and diving head coach should be named shortly after the season ends, and expects the Salukis to keep building on their winning tradition after he departs.

"This school has a great swimming tradition for years and years," he said. "I feel like I've contributed more to it in the last eight years, but I certainly am not a big enough piece to the puzzle that it's going to cause a big problem when I leave."

"In the end, I'm going to miss [the swimmers] a whole lot more than they're going to miss me, because I think another good coach is going to come in, pick up right where I left off and continue with the great Saluki tradition."

But with this being Klumper's swan song, you better believe the Salukis want to use the Valley Championships to send their coach out on top.

Senior swimmer Meghan Krauss will be reluctant to see Klumper leave the Saluki program, but is excited about what promises to be an emotional Valley Championships.

"He was able to motivate me to do things I didn't think I'd be able to do," Krauss said. "We want to [win the championship] for ourselves, but most of all, we want to do it for him."

is senior southpaw Carisa Winters, who was 18-11 last season. A powerful fastball and deceiving change-up led the first-team all-MVC performer to 270 strikeouts (tied for best in the MVC) last season.

Winters, SIU's all-time strikeout leader (629), will own the distinction of the Valley's most dominating pitcher after the departure of Southwest Missouri State University's Nora Cagwin, who was the Valley Pitcher of the Year last season.

Complementing Winters is Blaylock's model of consistency, junior Erin Stremsterfer, who was also the Salukis' best hitter last season. Stremsterfer hit .410 in MVC contests. On the mound, Stremsterfer paced the Salukis with a 15-9 mark and led the staff with seven shutouts in 30 appearances.

Rounding out the staff will be senior Tracy Remspecher and freshman Katie Kloess. Blaylock said Remspecher will take on a new role this season as a reliever, while Kloess, who finished 17-3 her senior year at Belleville Althoff High School, is also expected to contribute.

Stremsterfer will count on SIU's all-time home run leader Marta Viehhaus, a junior center fielder, to help carry the load offensively.

Blaylock is hopeful senior second baseman Lori Greiner and junior third baseman Julie Meier will also step up with the bat this season.

Like last season, the Valley is packed with parity at the top. There are four to five teams that should have a say in this year's outcome.

Last year's champ, Creighton University, will be a contender, along with Illinois State University, the University of Evansville and SIU. Southwest Missouri State is also a legitimate player, but may have trouble filling Cagwin's void.

The Valley is going to be a dogfight.

If so, then who better to strut away with the prized bone — an MVC Championship — than the Dawgs?

THE VALLEY Notebook:

MISSOURI VALLEY CONFERENCE

Stretch run to St. Louis underway

The homestretch has arrived in the Missouri Valley Conference, with most teams having only five games remaining on their regular-season schedule leading to the Valley tournament March 3-6 at the Kiel Center in St. Louis.

Indiana State University is a reasonable bet to win the Valley regular season championship, although SIU is not conceding the title without a fight. The Salukis, two games behind Indiana State in second place, have won three games in a row and will get a crack at the Sycamores Feb. 23 at the SIU Arena.

But Indiana State, picked to finish third in pre-season polls, remains in the driver's seat.

"Indiana State doesn't just overwhelm you, but they're getting it done," said Tom Richardson, Illinois State University head coach.

While the middle of the league remains fairly jumbled, the four teams likely to have to appear in the play-in games at the Valley tournament are the University of Northern Iowa, Drake University, Wichita State University and Illinois State. The other six teams will receive a bye until the quarterfinal round.

Richardson is not thrilled about the prospect of his team having to play in one of the two Friday play-in games March 3, but is using the parity in the MVC as an incentive to keep his players motivated for Arch Madness.

"The league's so balanced from top to bottom," Richardson said. "Maybe by that time we'll have more confidence and we can win a game or two."

News and Notes

Busy night around the Valley:

Eight of the MVC's 10 teams are in action tonight. Drake is at Bradley University, Indiana State is at the Creighton University, Southwest Missouri State University is at the University of Evansville and Illinois State plays at Wichita State. The only two squads not in action, SIU and Northern Iowa, will square off Thursday night at the SIU Arena.

Benton gives big boost:

Wichita State sophomore Terrell Benton has finally given the Shockers exactly what they need: someone to support All-MVC guard Jason Perez. Benton has averaged 18 points a game during the Shockers' last three outings, a big reason Wichita State, which lost its first nine league games, can climb ahead of Illinois State with a win over the Redbirds tonight.

Bears and Braves on ESPN:

Next Saturday's 1 p.m. battle between Southwest Missouri State and Bradley in Springfield, Mo., will be nationally televised on ESPN. Southwest Missouri State will try to continue riding the shooting touch of senior Eric Judd, who has knocked down 14 of his last 23 three-point attempts. The struggling Braves, meanwhile, will attempt to regain their reputation as the MVC's best defensive team.

Sycamore schedule difficult:

Although Indiana State has a two-game lead over SIU, don't chalk up the league title to the Sycamores just yet. Three of Indiana State's final five games are on the road against some of the Valley's better teams. Indiana State plays at Creighton tonight, and also has road games remaining at SIU Feb. 23 and at Evansville Feb. 26. Indiana State also has home games left against Northern Iowa and Bradley.

Bluejays always in range:

Creighton's opponents may be better off giving the Bluejays shots from close range than having them shoot three-pointers. In seven games this season, Creighton has shot a higher percentage from three-point land than inside the arc. The Jays have hit 206 threes this season, ranking among the nation's best three-point shooting teams.

Panthers on last legs?:

You had to wonder when a lack of depth would catch up with Northern Iowa. After losing its third straight game for the first time all season, now appears to be the time. The worst news for the Panthers is that beginning Thursday night in Carbondale, UNI has three straight road games. Northern Iowa has played its last two games with just seven players on hand, as freshman Derek Paben's disciplinary suspension detracted from an already scant Panther bench.

Missouri Valley Conference Standings
School	Conference	Overall
Indiana State	W-1	W-1
Southern Illinois	11-2	18-6
Creighton	9-4	15-9
Southwest Missouri	8-5	17-7
Evansville	8-5	15-9
Bradley	7-6	16-8
Northern Iowa	7-6	11-13
Drake	4-9	10-12
Wichita State	3-10	9-13
Illinois State	3-10	8-16

SPORTS BRIEFS

Weber to pick drawing winners

SIU men's basketball head coach Bruce Weber will select the two winning names of sets of tickets to the Missouri Valley Conference men's basketball tournament in St. Louis March 3-6 today at 9 a.m. in room 1032 of the Communications Building on the SIU campus.

WSIU-TV in Carbondale and WUSI-TV in Olney are sponsoring the drawing and Robert Gerig, general manager of WSIU/VUSI-TV, will assist Weber. The winners of the drawing will be notified by telephone.

Holloway out for the season

Injury has struck the SIU women's basketball team again, as sophomore guard Kim Holloway will miss the remainder of the season due to a fractured right wrist.

The 5-foot-6-inch starting-point guard drove down the lane for a layup in practice Saturday and fell on her right wrist.

Although Holloway was only averaging 3.1 points and 2.4 rebounds per game, she had stepped up her offensive efforts in her last three games, averaging 6.7 points per outing.

Freshman guard Lynn Morancie (1.0 points per game), the Salukis' only remaining true point guard, is expected to take Holloway's place.

KERRY MALONEY - DAILY EGYPTIAN

SIU women's swimming and diving head coach Mark Kluemper is finishing up his eighth and final year of coaching at SIU. Kluemper coached the Salukis to four MVC championships while at SIU and hopes to earn his fifth beginning Thursday at the Recreation Center.

Kluemper hoping for a fond farewell

Fifth MVC title would be fitting send-off for departing women's swim coach

SPORTS EDITOR

Most athletes brave enough to call their coach by his first name find themselves running extra laps at practice, on the bench, or subject to some other form of discipline.

That's not the case with members of the SIU women's swimming and diving team, who commonly refer to head coach Mark Kluemper as "Mark" and live to tell about it.

Kluemper, 40, will soon be leaving the Salukis after eight seasons as head coach, during which time he has led SIU to four Missouri Valley Conference championships. He plans to pursue a career in physical therapy and move closer to his extended family.

"I just kind of decided it's time to do something different, coaching is kind of a demanding job," Kluemper said. "The decision to move on has nothing to do with being tired of coaching, or being dissatisfied with SIU at all, it's just time to make a change in my life and go a different direction."

But Kluemper still has some unfinished business at SIU, as his team will shoot for its third consecutive MVC title at the Valley Championships beginning Thursday at the Recreation Center.

There's no doubt Kluemper's departure will make the event even more emotional for the Salukis. Jenna Meckler, a sophomore swimmer, has appreciated swimming for her easy-going coach.

"He makes you feel at ease," Meckler said. "He's not one of those coaches that makes you scared and nervous all the time. I guess he comes off in a different way than most coaches."

Kluemper said he tries to be genuine when relating to his team.

"I see a lot of coaches that are real successful being much more forceful," Kluemper said. "But I think if I tried to be that way, it wouldn't be being myself, it would be trying to act like somebody else."

Maybe it's his gentle touch that has allowed Kluemper to become so popular with his Salukis.

One run.

A mere run prevented the SIU softball team from a first place Missouri Valley Conference regular season finish last season.

It may have also set the stage for it's bad karma five days later at the MVC Championships.

A pesky Bradley University team, which finished under .500 for the season and in seventh place in the Valley, strolled into Carbondale and spoiled any regular season championship ambitions for SIU with a nail-biting 1-0 defeat of the Salukis.

Instead of the first-place finish and No. 1 seed in the MVC Championships, the Salukis finished 12-4 in the MVC — which was only good enough for third place and the No. 3 seed.

The offensive shortage against Bradley proved contagious as the Salukis could only muster one run and 10 hits in back-to-back losses to the University of Northern Iowa and Bradley in the opening rounds of the tournament, ending a promising season on a disappointing note.

The loss also marked an end to the career of legendary 32-year head coach Kay Brechtelsbauer.

"It was a total mental collapse," said first-year head
