King supporters form group to pursue dream

By Catherine Edman
Staff Writer

For about half of the 47 people who rode a bus from Carbondale to Atlanta last week to commemorate the first national holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr., King's dream of equality and justice for all races remains alive.

They have joined forces to form "People Living the Dream," a group whose ultimate goal is the end of the apartheid system of racial segregation in South Africa.

Although the group, which met for the first time Saturday, is composed mainly of those who went on the Atlanta trip, membership is open to anyone who is interested.

Some of its more immediate goals will be to educate people on the issues involved in apartheid and pressure companies to divest their holdings in South Africa.

Tim Larsen, vice-president of the group, said, "Most of us went to Atlanta to commemorate the birthday of Martin Luther King...to remember him...his struggle and to feel the spirit that was there. We all came back, I hope, with a new deter-

Officials deny break plan is set to end Halloween fest

By David Sheets
Staff Writer

If a proposed break during the ninth week of fall semester is just an excuse to reduce the impact of Carbondale's annual Halloween celebration, no SIU-C administrators are saying so.

The break "might have some kind of possibility" of toning down the annual Halloween celebration, said Vice President for Student Affairs Bruce Swinburne, "but that's not the real motivation for the break."

"I think President Somit is looking at it from a purely academic perspective," said John Guyon, vice president for Academic Affairs.

Somit said he "has heard both sides of the argument" on whether or not the break would curtail the Halloween festivities.

The most recent vacation proposal is Somit's idea. The president put forth the proposal in a memorandum to leaders of the major campus constituency groups in December.

Somit's proposal has two options. One is to close the school on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday the week prior to the last weekend in October, while reducing Thanksgiving break to just Thanksgiving Day and the Friday that follows.

The other option is to close the campus on Thursday and Friday the week prior to the last weekend in October, as well as the last three days of Thanksgiving week.

Somit said he favors neither option, but hopes they will encourage constituency leaders to present other ideas.

Lawrence Dennis, president of the Faculty Senate, said that "if there is a break in the ninth week, I don't see that it would hamper Halloween."

But Guyon said the administration "could move the holiday around" on the University calendar, and that such a move "would not occur soon but could happen in subsequent years."

As far as shifting the fall break to coincide with the Halloween celebration, which usually falls on the 11th week of the semester, Guyon said "anything is possible."

What representatives of the administration will say flat out, as Guyon did, is that the fall recess "is just an opportunity to get a break in when people need it the most."

Faculty Senate president testifies that group wants separate units

By Paula Buckner
Staff Writer

Testimony by an SIU-C faculty member made a strong case for separate campus units if collective bargaining comes to SIU, according to a bargaining group representative.

Lawrence Dennis, Faculty Senate president, told the Illinois Educational Labor Relations Board Thursday that if SIU were to bargain collectively, "the Faculty Senate would support separate campus units."

The board has been holding hearings since last semester on whether SIU employees should be allowed to bargain collectively with the University. The hearings are expected to end in February.

Last month, the senate unanimously gave Dennis permission to testify as its representative, Dennis said. "They gave me permission to take a view not supporting either side, but said that 'if SIU gets collective bargaining...'"

Charles Zucker, of the Illinois Education Association-National Education Association, said that Dennis' testimony was powerful enough to support separate units. "I don't think the labor board can reach any decision other than separate units" for SIU-C and SIU-E.

IEA-NEA and American Federation of Teachers have filed petitions with the IELRB in support of separate units for the two campuses. SIU Administration, however, has filed its petition for a system-wide unit for SIU-C and SIU-E.

Zucker said that Dennis' testimony was not countered by SIU attorneys. "They left it alone. One of the criterion for bargaining is that it is the desire of the employees," Zucker said. "It was difficult for the attorneys to counterattack Dennis' testimony in light of the Faculty Senate's wishes."

Dennis, who spoke also as a faculty member of the Educational Leadership Department, also testified on whether department chairs should be included in a bargaining group.

Zucker said the testimony showed that "chairs are really faculty members who represent the views of the department to other administrators in the University."

But Dennis said he simply answered the questions posed to him. "They asked questions such as, 'Who writes the operating paper in your department?' and 'Who makes decisions about tenure in your department?'" Dennis said.

"I answered them as matters of fact, not opinion, as far as I know them to be true for my department," he said in a telephone interview.

Other witnesses, who were called by the AFT, testified about the feasibility of a common unit for faculty and

Mechanical problems thwart shuttle launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Thwarted Monday by a balky hatch, a frozen nut, a dead battery and high winds, NASA took another gamble on the weather and prepared to launch shuttle Challenger's schoolhouse mission Tuesday morning.

Space agency officials aimed for a 9:38 a.m. EST blastoff of the flight that would make high school teacher Christa McAuliffe America's first private citizen in space and allow her to teach millions of school kids from her high-tech orbital classroom.

Officials gambled that an Arctic cold front barreling across central Florida would not disrupt launch plans despite temperatures expected to fall into the 20s at the spaceport early Tuesday. A year ago, a liftoff by Challenger was foiled by a freeze that iced launch pad equipment.

Launch crews devised ways to avoid the hatch problems that cropped up Monday and, compounded by a stripped nut on a hatch handle bolt and a dead battery in a drill needed to remove the nut, delayed the liftoff until after wind gusts had reached unacceptably high levels.

Technicians drained Challenger's fuel tanks of half a million gallons of supercold liquid hydrogen and oxygen, recycled the coolant down clock and began the nightlong process of counting down toward the Tuesday launch target.

Forecasters said the weather should be fine Tuesday except for the extreme cold.

Launch crews were ordered to keep a sharp eye for signs of freezing in water lines at the pad or icing of equipment in Challenger's nose, tail and engine compartments.

Soviet Union accuses U.S. of using 'unsavory' tactics

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union accused the United States Monday of using "unsavory" tactics to block a mutually acceptable nuclear arms agreement at the Geneva negotiations. The official news agency Tass singled out Secretary of State George Shultz as insisting that research and testing of the Strategic Defense Initiative, known as "Star Wars," be carried out. Tass dismissed Shultz's assertion that the United States was only conducting research into a space-based anti-ballistic shield.

Nixon admitted to hospital for flu, doctors say

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Richard Nixon was admitted to the Miami Heart Institute upon his return from a Bahamian golf holiday Monday but his doctor said the 73-year-old former president's ailment appeared to be "just the flu." The hospital listed the former president's condition as satisfactory. Nixon, the only president to resign from office, was being treated with antibiotics for the infection, an intravenous saline and glucose solution for the dehydration, and Tylenol for a mild fever.

Blowout Super Bowl scores super ratings

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Chicago Bears' blowout of the New England Patriots — a football game so one-sided it became a super bore not a Super Bowl — attracted one of the largest television audiences in history, NBC said Monday. Before the blowout, NBC estimated 116 million people would tune in. After the rout, the numbers held up.

United States neutral in Philippines election

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department, responding to a report that the administration wants President Ferdinand Marcos to leave office, said Monday the U.S. government is neutral in the Philippines presidential election. The New York Times, quoting anonymous White House, State Department, Pentagon and intelligence agency officials, reported Sunday that a consensus has developed in the administration that Marcos departure is critical to a non-Communist future for the Asian nation and for U.S. interests there.

Europe bans arms sales to terrorist nations

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — The European Community Monday pledged to ban arms sales to countries supporting terrorism but ignored President Reagan's appeal for an allied effort to economically isolate Libya. In a statement issued after a special meeting of the Common Market, foreign ministers from the 12 nations said they had "decided not to export arms or other military equipment to countries which are clearly implicated in supporting terrorism."

Reagan salutes the Globe-Democrat's rebirth

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — President Reagan paraphrased Mark Twain and said reports of the death of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, which resumed publishing Monday, "have been greatly exaggerated." Publication of the Globe was suspended Dec. 6 because of chronic money problems.

Three players charged with sexual assault

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Three members of the University of Minnesota basketball team were formally charged with sexual assault Monday in a scandal that has forced the university to re-examine its entire basketball program. University of Minnesota President Kenneth Keller scheduled a news conference Monday night in Minneapolis to announce whether the team would play the rest of the Big Ten season or forfeit the remaining 11 games. The scandal has already forced head coach Jim Dutcher to resign after heading the team for more than 10 years.

Halloween fines net city record $50,000

By Tricia Yocum
Staff Writer

Carbondale's annual Halloween party netted a record $50,000 in fines for the city this year, said Jim Kerley, Jackson County circuit clerk.

The fines are a product of about 300 tickets written for city ordinance violations, most of them for underage drinking and reckless conduct charges.

The reason for the revenue increase is twofold, Kerley said.

First, more tickets are being issued, and second, circuit judge Don Lowery, who is hearing most of the cases, has imposed higher fines than previous judges.

Lowery said that as a general rule, he usually fines people guilty of reckless conduct $400 and underage drinkers $300. The fines do not change for Halloween-related offenses, he said.

Reckless conduct charges were given to those throwing beer cans and those involved with destroying signs along the Strip.

City ordinance offenses warrant a maximum fine of $500.

Lowery said he doesn't "arbitrarily" choose the level of a fine. He said he bases fines on the "seriousness of the offense and the dangerousness of the situation."

Deterring future offenders also enters into his thinking, he said.

One reason the fines are so stiff is that about 90 people were treated for cuts and bruises at the hospitals and first aid stations during the Halloween weekend, he said. One girl was knocked unconscious after being hit by a six-pack, he said.

The Halloween street party is a "very dangerous situation," he said.

Previous judges have had the attitude that students can't afford large fines. Lowery said he "has compassion for students," but that he also took an oath to stop illegal conduct and "underage drinking is illegal."

"I don't base my sentencing on what others do," he said, nor does he levy fines to create revenue for the arresting agency.

The money generated from arrests by city officers goes into the city's general fund and is used to provide municipal services, such as fire and police protection and street maintenance, said Bill Dixon, Carbondale city manager.

However, the money is not listed on the city's report of expenses and revenues from the annual street party. The reason for this, Dixon said, is that the amount generated from fines varies from year to year and also, at the time the report was prepared, the city did not know the outcome of pending court cases.

The city report stated that Carbondale spent about $16,000 during the weekend for police and fire protection, as well as cleanup operations. The city recouped $1,900 of its cost from vending fees.

A one-time cost of $16,047 to install permanent electric lines along Grand Avenue was also incurred.

Kerley said he believes the result of Lowery's levying higher fines than previous judges will be fewer crimes because people will "think twice" if they know they are going to pay $300 to $400 fines.

"It stands to reason that people do things because they are afraid or not afraid. And today, money means a lot," he said.

Tax reform, deficit reduction slated for 'State' address

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan approved the final draft of his fifth State of the Union address Monday against a backdrop of unexpected infighting among his senior advisers over its content and ideological tone.

Reagan goes before a joint session of Congress Tuesday night to deliver a speech described as briefer and more thematic than usual — a broad vision of where America should be headed, rather than the usual litany of legislative requests.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan, who approved the final draft of the speech Monday, will highlight objectives such as tax reform and deficit reduction, but leave the specifics for a separate written message that will be sent to Congress the next day.

That wish list will be sent to Capitol Hill as Reagan plunges into a whirlwind series of appearances to sell Congress and the public on an agenda stopped by deficit reduction and tax reform.

In a bid to maintain the public relations momentum of the yearly presidential address, the White House announced Reagan will sign his written message to Congress in the presence of reporters Wednesday morning, then visit two Cabinet departments — Treasury and Health and Human Services.

Reagan will deliver a similar pep talk — one that could deal with an expected proposal for catastrophic health coverage for the poor — to his Cabinet-level Domestic Policy Council in a meeting at HHS headquarters.

Tutu backs anti-apartheid rebels, faces criticism upon Africa return

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Bishop Desmond Tutu returned home from the United States Monday, pledging support for the aims of anti-apartheid rebels and facing a storm of protest from whites enraged over his public criticism of the Pretoria government.

In another development, police said the bodies of six black men who had been burned to death were found on the coast south of Durban. A spokesman said the deaths appeared to be linked to fighting between Zulu and Pondo tribesmen that has claimed at least 120 lives since Christmas in a feud over land rights.

The spokesman said another body, that of a black woman, was found charred and buried in a shallow grave in Molteno, in the eastern Cape province. Her death was being investigated, police said.

Tutu, speaking during a news conference after arriving in Johannesburg, said, "I support the African National Congress in its objectives of working for a non-racial, democratic and just society," but added, "I do not support its method."

The African National Congress, led from a prison cell by black nationalist Nelson Mandela, has waged a 25-year guerrilla war against white rule.

The rebel movement has admitted responsibility for hundreds of bomb attacks.

Tutu's public backing of the objectives of the guerrilla organization and his statements of support of economic sanctions against the white-ruled government have angered whites in the country.

Tutu vowed to risk prosecution by publicly advocating the sanctions if no significant progress toward dismantling apartheid — South Africa's system of racial segregation — is made within two months.

"If at the end of March we do not recognize significant changes, we will call for punitive sanctions," he said.

A public appeal for an international boycott against South Africa is an offense carrying a five-year prison sentence.

"This will be symbolic on my part. I will be deliberately breaking an unjust law," the bishop said.

Tutu, winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize, returned from a three-week fundraising tour of the United States with more than $500,000 for his Anglican Church and for humanitarian assistance to "victims of apartheid."

Mid-term vacation needs another look

A RESTAURANT HAD A popular advertising jingle in the 1970s — "You deserve a break today." For students, faculty and staff, another phrase would also be appropriate: Give me a break.

President Somi has proposed splitting the fall break. Instead of taking a week off at Thanksgiving, he would close the University for a few days before or after the ninth week of the semester. Students would also have Thanksgiving Day and the day after off.

Having a mid-term break is a good idea, but it would be better if it were a week-long break, not just a long weekend. A week-long break could eliminate one of the University and city's annual headaches—the Halloween party on South Illinois Avenue.

IF THE UNIVERSITY WERE closed the last week of October, at least 4,700 students would have to go somewhere else — probably home — when the on-campus dormitories closed. Problems with underage drinking, vandalism, and public safety would decrease, for these students' siblings and friends would not have a place to stay, as they do now when they come to party.

Chances are most off-campus students would go home, too, at least for a few days, thus decreasing the number of people attending the dangerous street event.

Aside from the safety considerations, a week-long October break has other merits. The University staff could use a rest after the busy Parents' Day and Homecoming weekends. Students and faculty could use a breather after mid-term exams have been taken and projects handed in, just like they do in the spring.

AND TAKING A WHOLE week off would eliminate the problem of disrupting the class schedule. Class-time loss would be equally distributed between Monday-Wednesday-Friday classes and Tuesday-Thursday classes (Monday off for Labor Day, Thursday and Friday for Thanksgiving Holiday.)

Dormitories could remain open for the Thanksgiving Holiday, as they do for Labor Day, King Day and Presidents' Day holidays. And during the week-long holiday, the few on-campus students who do live too far away to travel home can stay in one dorm, as they do now.

If the University really wants to take a role in shutting down the dangerous Halloween celebration, complete with beer can wars, theft and vandalism, it should seriously consider revising its schedules to include a week-long break.

Tougher academic standards

Tougher academic standards? Finally the NCAA is attempting to do something about academics. It seems that sometimes the two worlds are so separate. In my book, SIU has a poor academic-athletic track record.

First, why didn't any of the basketball seniors from the men's team graduate last year? Considering that only 25 percent of the basketball scholarship award winners ever graduate from Southern, that answer comes rather easy. By the way, that is only 1 percent below the national average. It seems rather strange that the words "athletic" and "scholarship" should ever be mentioned in the same sentence, especially at SIU. We pay our graduate assistants a few hundred dollars per month, and last year it was revealed that one of the athletes at this university was being paid $900 per month. I realize this is an "isolated incident," but just where do our priorities lie?

Having once been an athletic scholarship recipient, I understand what that can mean to a person wanting a college education. My question is, "Where is the education?" I turned down two scholarships because I needed more time for study. I have never regretted that decision. I have the highest admiration for those students who can handle both academics and athletics. You are a rare breed. I have never received an athletic scholarship from SIU, but I did receive a tuition waiver for one semester. I still had to pay the fees, including the Athletic Fee. Some of that money should go toward academic assistance for athletes.

Second, SIU has even less respect for its outstanding academic students. In the College of Liberal Arts there are approximately eight tuition waivers available to outstanding students. At times, those awards have been divided in half to make half-tuition waivers. Considering how hard some students must work to maintain a high GPA, that works out to pennies per hour for a lot of hard work.

I have worked my way through school, sometimes holding three jobs. It is a very discouraging feeling to come home at eight o'clock in the evening from work only to have four hours of study ahead.

I have learned a great deal at SIU. I think the schools and faculty are some of the best around. Sometimes I get discouraged when I see people more interested in the score of a game instead of the score on an important test. Meanwhile, elsewhere on campus, a student with an A average contemplates leaving school for just a semester to earn a little money. In both cases the students are victims of a terrible injustice. We have a great school and our instructors, for the most part, care about what they teach. But, somewhere somebody is doing something wrong. There is trouble in the academic as well as the athletic arena.

For the athletes I have but one thing to say. Continue to work hard on the field and in the classroom. You will not regret either. Good luck to all of you and to all of the outstanding students as well. If you are at SIU, you are going to need it. — Chris Briddick, senior, Psychology.

Police use of phone tap questioned

On Monday evening around 7:55 p.m., I received a call from someone who identified himself as an officer of the Carbondale police force. He asked for my roommate, who was not home at the time. He proceeded to ask me if I knew that my roommate's car had been involved in a hit-and-run accident. I answered that I didn't know, as I had not heard about such an accident from my roommate. Then I noticed from the tone of the telephone that the conversation might be in the process of being taped.

I proceeded to ask the caller if the conversation was being taped. The answer was affirmative. I asked him why he didn't let me know that the conversation was being taped. I told him further that I don't mind answering questions but he should have let me know that he was taping the conversation in the first instance.

The caller did not provide an explanation nor provide an apology. He reprimanded me for asking him questions and rudely inquired who I was before concluding the call.

I felt I was being tricked and I was offended. As a law-abiding citizen, I am in every way willing to help the police in their investigations. However, I have heard from casual conversations that similar incidents had occurred to people during other investigations.

What I am concerned about is not the taping of the conversation, but the manner in which it was carried out. I question the validity of such tactics in police work. If we want to build up trust and good relations between the community and the law-enforcement officials, I wonder if such tactics should be allowed to continue as standard police procedure. — Mark Tang, graduate assistant, Cinema & Photography.

GPSC wants day care

The letter in Thursday's Daily Egyptian (Jan. 23) concerning the Graduate and Professional Student Council's position on the day-care issue was misprinted, causing the paragraph in which the misprint occurred to mean either nothing at all or just the opposite of what we intended. The affected paragraph concerned GPSC's treatment of the proposed $3.25 fee for various (but unspecified) projects and the construction of a day-care facility as separate issues.

Even if a day care center might be the first project funded with money from the Student Activity and Welfare fund created by this continuous fee (the fee would not end after the day care center was built), it's not the only possible means of financing a day care facility. We do recognize the need for a day care center. Therefore, after rejecting the continuous fee we considered other options for funding it and felt that state money for capital improvements was the most appropriate means of financing it. — Nell Holt and Darrell Johnson, GPSC Executive Board. Editor's note: A line was accidentally omitted from the third paragraph of "GPSC explains day care position." It should have read, "Considering the 'slush fund' and the day care center for what they are — separate projects — the GPSC rejected the proposal for a continuous 'slush fund,' based on the contention that separate projects should be proposed and funded on an as-needs basis."

Replace torch with missile?

One thing that has always puzzled me about the Russians is how they could parade their missiles through the streets of Moscow before a cheering crowd of spectators. What kind of nation could worship weapons of destruction? Certainly we are above such a thing. The peace-through-strengtheners used to say, even though I didn't agree with them, that all of our weapons were merely needed for peace, that they really despised missiles and guns. Even Reagan calls nuclear weapons horrible. With that in mind, I was certain that Americans would never parade their missiles around, cheering them on like those "evil" Russians do. Wrong.

At the women's basketball game Jan. 22 a group of grade school baton twirlers gave a very "patriotic" performance at half-time. Right before the conclusion of the show a little girl, who couldn't have been more than twelve years old, brought out the American flag and hung it on a six-foot-high model of a missile.

Halt production of the torch for the Statue of Liberty. Erase the Stars and Stripes off Old Glory. We have a new national symbol. It's a nuclear missile.

Why a nuclear missile, you ask? Tsk, tsk, tsk, my naive American friend. Don't you realize the nuke is perfect? Just look at its qualifications. Not only can it defend our peaceful nation from those missile-loving Russians, but it is also capable of annihilating millions of people, possibly an entire planet. Take the American flag and rip off those wimpy stars, get rid of those boring stripes. Put a big fat MX on the field of blue and dead commies on the field of red. Don't stick a dumb torch in the Statue of Liberty's hand, but put a good old ICBM there. That'll show Khadafy we mean business. Give 'em a show of strength, for gods' sake. Isn't it exciting?

No. It isn't exciting. It's horrifying. It scares me half to death every time I think about it. But I must think about it; we should all think about it. That's the problem with people these days — no one thinks about anything, except where their next daily dose of beer is going to come from.

Believe it or not, we are on a worship-the-bomb path. I'm sure it won't reach the point that I described, but it's already gotten close enough. That little incident at the basketball game proves that. Oh yes, getting back to halftime. Just whose mind was behind that stunt? What sort of twisted mentality could even think of doing such a thing? Missiles are for battlefields, not for display in the gymnasiums, and certainly not for having children display our national symbol on. Haven't you ever heard of a flagpole? They are pretty self-explanatory.

This action was, to say the least, degrading to the flag and the American people. It should be unlawful. In the 1960s, we were fining people for using the flag as bedspreads and welcome mats. But to the people responsible for the stunt at halftime, I hope an even worse punishment is bestowed upon you. — Kurt Stamp, vice president, Mid-America Peace Project.

UFA responds to editorial

On behalf of the UFA Organizing Committee, IEA-NEA, I want to respond to your recent editorial (Jan. 14) regarding the United Faculty Association-sponsored evaluation survey of President Albert Somit.

The original UFA press release, along with the complete results of our survey, made it clear that this was a non-scientific effort. The Southern Illinoisan, for one, correctly reported this aspect of our press statement.

According to your editorial, "... it is not unreasonable to assume that most of the surveys sent back were from ax grinders" and "the sample respondents in this case were in all probability a biased group and were certainly the most active group within the population polled." On what scientific basis does the DE editorial writer base such conclusions? Statements such as these are, in our opinion, completely nonscientific. They are based on no data in the possession of either the DE or the UFA. They are simply assumptions on the part of the editorial writer.

In our view, it would appear that the vagueness of the Board of Trustees job description for the president accounted for the low response to our informal survey. The UFA simply reprinted verbatim the presidential duties prescribed by the board, and asked faculty and staff to respond to each job function as defined by the board. Understandably, the overall response was limited. Many of those who did respond indicated that it was difficult to rate the president on the basis of his official job description. Somit himself joked that he wasn't sure what his duties entailed.

The UFA survey was conducted on the recommendation of leading members of the Faculty Senate. Findings of a similar survey conducted last year by the Faculty Senate to assist in the evaluation of Chancellor Shaw were summarily dismissed by the Board of Trustees.

Divine insight assumed

A question for Jon Hiller and Martin Anthony Call: did you miss the point of Mr. Cummings' letter concerning the Bible... or did I? My impression was that he was being deliberately satirical. That being my favorite way of expressing an idea, I thought he was doing a fine job of making his point. Unless I miss my guess (and I admit that it is quite possible), you've taken offense where none was meant.

In any event, it is certainly hasty for you to say "the only reason the Bible tells us these things (promiscuity, violence toward women and children, deviant sexual practices, cuckooing, and polygamy) is to let us know they are wrong." You overlook the value of the Bible as a historical document; in other words, the main reason for recording these activities may be to remind us that these characters were, after all, human beings with all of our faults and foibles. You do the Bible wrong by reducing it to sixty-six books of "thou-shalt-nots." I suggest you are also being slightly presumptuous in declaring the intentions of the Bible authors. One must assume you have some kind of divine insight.

As for that well-known lame duck, the "intent to arouse" definition of "pornography," there are sequences in Fritz Lang's "Metropolis" that I find very arousing, but I don't see anyone burning the negatives of that classic film. Try to remember what an arbitrary standard that definition really is. — Lee Shackelford, graduate student, Theater.

Porn sales moral issue

There have been several letters in the DE protesting the proposed removal of Playboy and Penthouse from University Bookstore shelves as "censorship." In my opinion, the retail sale of merchandise is a service provided to a community, and in this case is a service provided by SIUC to the campus community.

I see no reason why moral concerns should not influence decisions about what services are provided. To my mind, the sale of magazines of questionable moral value need not be condoned by the University. Anyone is free to purchase such material from other, private merchants, or to subscribe directly. — Maggie Childs, assistant professor, Japanese.

Court OKs funds for religious study

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court, in its first decision in a church-state dispute this term, ruled Monday a blind student cannot be denied government vocational training money just because he is studying for the ministry.

The court, in a 9-0 ruling by Justice Thurgood Marshall, said the Constitution does not prevent state financial aid to Larry Witters of Spokane, Wash., simply because his rehabilitation program was the study of religion.

The court rejected claims by the state of Washington, which had argued giving tax dollars to Witters would unconstitutionally promote religion.

The case was the first religion case to be decided by the justices this term. Major church-state cases awaiting rulings include a Williamsport, Pa., case involving students' meeting in public high schools for Bible study and one over whether the Air Force can prevent an Orthodox Jewish officer from wearing a traditional yarmulke while on duty.

In Monday's case, Marshall wrote the justices "reject the claim that ... extension of aid under Washington's vocational rehabilitation program to finance (Witters') training at a Christian college to become a pastor, missionary or youth director would advance religion in a manner inconsistent with the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment."

Witters, reached at his job washing laboratory dishes in a private laboratory in Spokane, said he was "thrilled but not surprised."

"(My attorney) was confident we'd get it and we were hoping and praying for a 9-0 ruling, too. I plan to go back to school soon as soon as I can."

Witters has worked washing dishes for some six years and was two years along in his education at Inland Empire School of the Bible in Spokane when he had to drop out. He said the court fight "was worth it. We didn't want the state to get away with it."

"I guess I'll have to take the rest of the day off," he said.

Witters, who suffers from a degenerative eye disease and is legally blind, was supported in his fight from a variety of religious groups, including the American Jewish Committee.

He also was backed by the Reagan administration, which said it feared the state court ruling could threaten the "GI Bill" and similar programs that help veterans or their children pay for the schooling of their choice.

Education Secretary William Bennett hailed the decision as a boost for "initiatives that are being launched all over the country to foster educational choice for parents and students," including the administration's proposal to give parents of needy students vouchers that can be used at public or private schools.

Philosophy Professor John Howie. Howie where he attended the International Peace recently returned from Warsaw, Poland, Conference.

Professor makes friends at Poland peace meetings

By Liz Cochran
Staff Writer

Making friendships abroad is a small step toward preventing wars, says John Howie, philosophy professor. "It's a heck of a lot easier to kill someone you don't know than to injure someone you do," he said.

Howie just returned from two peace conferences held in Poland and says that the most positive result of them was getting to know people on the other side of the world.

The two conferences were organized by Janusz Kuczynski of Poland, editor of Dialectics and Humanism. Kuczynski met Howie when he visited SIU-C last year.

The first conference, "The Philosophy of Peace I," was held in Jablona and ran Jan. 10 through 14. About 40 people from nine countries attended it. The second, titled "The World Congress of Intellectuals for the Future of a Peaceful World," attended by about 230 writers, lawyers, poets and other scholars from 65 countries, was held in Warsaw.

At the first conference, participants presented papers explaining their viewpoints about the problem of war.

Howie's was titled "Our War Problem." It covered preparation for war, conventional war, civil wars that lead to international wars, and the threat of nuclear strike either by design or accident.

He proposes that attitudes need to be changed and energies need to be directed to global problems of humankind such as nuclear waste disposal and the conservation of natural resources.

At the second conference, the discussions were broken down into several topic groups, including methods of overcoming threats of war, environment and health protection, world economy and international order, cultural values, education and actions in defense of peace.

Howie participated in a discussion titled "Cultural Values — the common heritage of mankind." It dealt with the role culture plays in the threat of war.

Howie said that the crucial point discussed was the freedom of speech and manner of expression versus artists' role in the society and their responsibility for shaping and permeating peaceful attitudes and ideas.

"It raises an important dilemma because all of us are concerned about peace," he said. He said he definitely opposes censorship but feels that "individuals should assume responsibility for the effect that their artwork will have."

However, he says that the responsibility is not only up to the artist. At the conference

Howie heard much criticism about the movies "Rambo" and "Rocky IV." People from other countries are concerned that these movies glorify violence and promote a war-oriented culture. Howie says that these types of movies don't directly relate to war, but "incontestably there's an influence on our way of thinking," he said.

It is the consumer's responsibility not to support these movies, so eventually they won't be created, he said.

The United States is not the only country with this problem. Ewa Charkiewicz, a Polish journalist Howie met at the first conference, wrote in a prepared statement about a James Bond-like personality in Poland called "Captain Kloss."

It is a television series that depicts war as a "nice and vivid adventure with Captain Kloss always surviving in the last moment," Charkiewicz said. A peace organization in Poland has asked for a boycott of the series.

Another cultural aspect in the goal of peace is the possibility of a culture being destroyed in battle.

He suggests that one reason that it's difficult for the U.S. to understand the ramifications of war is that one has never been fought on our soil, except the civil war.

Arlidge to quit sports, concentrate on news

NEW YORK (UPI) — ABC's Roone Arledge has been named group president of news and sports at the network and will concentrate on the news division, it was announced Monday.

Arlidge will continue as president of ABC News but give up his title of president of sports, which will be assumed by Dennis Swanson, the network announced. Arledge will remain ABC's executive producer for the 1988 Winter Olympics.

Arlidge said the merger of ABC Inc. and Capital Cities Communications Inc. was an "appropriate time" to shift responsibilities.

"It seemed to me that the appropriate time for change is now," Arledge said. ABC President John B. Sias said "At the time of the merger, Roone told us he wanted to concentrate on news and leave the day-to-day operation of sports to others."

"This new structure gives us the benefit of Roone's full attention in the news area," Sias said.

Killing continues in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Six months of emergency rule, during which an average of three people have been killed per day, has failed to restore peace in South Africa.

The blood-letting continues despite virtually unlimited police powers.

The independent Institute of Race Relations reports that deaths due to political violence increased from an average of 1.6 a day before emergency rule to 3.3 per day after July 21, 1985.

THE INSTITUTE says 334 people died in the 201 days leading up to the emergency and 575 have been killed since it went into effect 185 days ago. More than half have been killed by police.

David Webster of the anti-government Detainees Parents Support Committee said more than 7,200 people have been detained without trial under emergency rule, "an average of one every 25 minutes."

A FURTHER 3,600 were held under permanent security legislation, pushing the total of political detentions to over 10,000.

As the state of emergency enters its seventh month, the question is: What's gone wrong?

Nothing, says Law and Order Minister Louis le Grange, who counter-signed President Pieter Botha's executive order imposing the emergency.

"OVERALL, THOUGH sporadic incidents still take place from time-to-time, the unrest has abated to such an extent that it could very well be described as something of the past," Le Grange said in a written reply to United Press International questions.

Others disagree. "The state of emergency has done absolutely nothing to curb the unrest and, in many ways, it has exacerbated the situation," said veteran white opposition lawmaker Helen Suzman.

CHRISTIAN BEYERS Naude, leader of the anti-government South African Council of Churches, said emergency rule press curbs had left whites at home and abroad believing things had improved.

"The black community knows differently," Naude said.

Jaap Marais, white leader of the ultra-rightist Reformed National Party, said "the state of emergency should have been called much earlier and it should have been countrywide."

"WE HAVE to contend with the extension of the war against South Africa by the African National Congress — with aid and external support from Russia."

The outlawed ANC is a guerrilla movement opposed to white rule in South Africa. The organization has admitted responsibility for bomb and landmine attacks that have killed 14 since Nov. 26.

"In any war, the first step is to deal with the sympathizers and supporters of the enemy," said Marais.

THE REV. Nico Smith, a renegade white Afrikaner clergyman who has chosen to live among blacks in Pretoria's Mamelodi ghetto, said "dealing" with ANC sympathizers would be an impossible task.

He said that a government-sponsored study showed, "about 79.5 percent of blacks support the ANC and believe the ANC will fight for all people in South Africa."

"THERE IS a youth revolution going on. It is not going to stop. The revolution is a people's movement."

The issue now is how to end a bloody 16-month black uprising triggered by the exclusion of 24 million blacks from a new parliament that gave 2.5 million people of mixed race and 870,000 Asians seats alongside representatives of 4.5 million whites.

Underlining the magnitude of the uprising, Le Grange said that since rioting erupted Sept. 3, 1984: "Damage caused to property amounts to more than 100 million Rand ($43 million)."

"A TOTAL of 920 schools were either destroyed or extensively damaged as well as 33 churches, 17 clinics, 639 shops, 286 liquor stores, 2,528 private homes, 5,054 buses and 5,338 private vehicles.

"A total of 952 people have been killed. Of those who died, more than 300 people died as a result of black-on-black violence."

"What is so ironical is that the black people themselves are the real victims of the black-inspired violence."

BREAK PLAN, from Page 1

The idea of a mid-term rest in the fall has been discussed over conference tables and office desks at the University for "about six or seven years." Swinburne said, roughly coinciding with the campus switch from a quarterly to a semester school calendar.

Sam Rinella, University housing director, said the ninth week break would come "at a time when roommate problems and depression develop," while at the same time the faculty and staff "begin to burn out."

A ninth-week break would also help reduce the October work load for SIU-C Security, said Dan Lane, Security administrative assistant.

In October, "you're here the whole month," Lane said, "and it's not too cold or too warm to do something. More things are happening both indoors and outdoors."

Lane said that the month of October has the highest number of reported crimes in the fall.

Rinella said that 33 percent of the 1,413 disciplinary write-ups in campus housing between August and December 1985 occurred in October.

"The stress factor is as much of a cause of trouble as anything else," he said.

Somit said that creating a mid-term vacation without reducing the Thanksgiving break "would not be feasible because students would miss too much valuable time in class."

But another problem, Swinburne said, might be caused by faculty members and students "extending" their vacation time to include the full two weeks instead of just the days off given to them.

Swinburne said that the matter of reducing the existing week-long Thanksgiving vacation "has not been met with real enthusiasm" by the campus constituency groups, and is the reason why a mid-term break for fall semester has not yet been implemented.

The Civil Service Employees Council agreed upon a proposal at their meeting Jan. 8 that would eliminate the chance of splitting the Thanksgiving vacation by starting fall term classes in August one week later.

"Inside myself," Swinburne said, "I also enjoy the full week at Thanksgiving."

Rinella said that if the ninth week break goes into effect, "I would like to keep the dorms open during the Thanksgiving vacation, but close them during the mid-term vacation," to save on food service and utility costs.

For the same reasons, most of the administration supports closing the residence halls during the mid-term as well.

mination to deal with the issues that have festered so long because of far too much apathy.

"We learned that the only way to achieve successful change is through determined and consistent action. Problems don't go away because we want them to and they don't go away if we politely ask."

One of the group's first targets will be SIU-C.

According to Luke Tripp, coordinator of Black American Studies, SIU-C has divested from companies that have not signed the Sullivan Principles, but still has close to $500,000 invested in companies that have signed the principles but continue to do business in South Africa.

The principles were designed by Leon Sullivan, a Baptist minister in Philadelphia who is a board member at General Motors.

They are primarily affirmative-action principles designed to provide equal job opportunities and equal wages for black workers.

Tripp said this hasn't been effective in the United States—where the law is designed to enforce equality—and yet people expect it to be effective in South Africa, where the law is against equal pay for equal work on a racial basis.

One of the group's main concerns is that SIU-C divest its remaining holdings from the companies that do business in South Africa and have signed the Sullivan Principles because, as Tripp says, "less than one percent of the black work force works for those companies that have signed the principles anyway."

The name of the group was chosen from the theme of the weekend events in Atlanta that many of the members attended.

"Remember the speech in which he (King) said 'I Have a Dream,' one of the world's most quoted speeches. From that came the slogan for Atlanta, 'Living the Dream.' Not remembering the dream, not honoring the dream, not thinking about the dream but living the dream. The message from Atlanta is 'The time is now to live the dream.'"

The group's name is an extension of that message.

Larsen said that people can make a difference—and that's what the group is about and that's what Martin Luther King was about.

administrative-professional staffers — one of the AFT's positions.

John Pohlmann, president of UP-SIU, the AFT local, said the witnesses gave testimony that was "favorable toward the AFT's cause," including the cross-appointment of AP staffers and faculty.

He said the witnesses' testimony was a counterargument to the administration's argument that

AP staffers and faculty members hold "distinct employee positions."

"They testified about the interchangeability of the two positions," Pohlmann said. "It is not uncommon to see movement" among AP staffers and faculty. He also said that little distinction exists between AP staffers and faculty "in regard to the job done and the training involved" in either position.

New business organization offers international job aid

By Maureen Cavanagh
Staff Writer

"It's about time something like this happened," said Matt Larson about the founding of the International Business Association, of which he is president.

Larson said that the IBA, begun last spring by Shang Choe, former international business faculty adviser, is intended to serve global-minded students.

"SIU is ranked 10th in the country in terms of placement of graduates in international jobs," said Larson, senior in business administration.

IBA SPONSORS talks by speakers who address different aspects of international business. So far, IBA has sponsored talks by Ike Mathur, Department of Finance chairman, who spoke on the cultural aspects of doing business overseas; Jia Sheng, visiting professor in the Finance Department from the People's Republic of China, who spoke on the expansion of western business in China; and Coral Snodgrass of the Department of Management, who spoke about Japanese culture and its impact on management control.

IBA, the Department of Foreign Languages and the International Business Institute coordinate International Business Day. IBI is a committee of faculty and staff from the Business Department who are interested in promoting international business.

LARSON IS the IBA representative to the institute. The IBA also holds a seat on the College of Business Administration Council.

Sharon Peretti, IBA financial officer, says that contacts with firms — through field trips, guest speakers and participation in International Business Week — serve to involve members in activities that can help them gain experience and exposure.

"It will be an advantage in the search for an international job and a plus after a job is secured," she said.

Larson said that learning someone else's culture through interaction with other people is a prime benefit offered by IBA. He said there are presently five graduates and 14 undergraduate members, but the core group consists of only 10. He said the group has been getting the groundwork laid, and wants to expand.

CURRENTLY, MEMBERS are from America, Malaysia and Singapore and one member is from Iceland. Peretti said the group would like to have many more countries represented and that the group is open to all nationalities.

"Everybody has their say. We are open-minded to different perspectives," said Larson, who plans to teach English in Japan upon graduation.

Michael Lee, master's student in business, and vice president of IBA graduate affairs, is a native of Singapore. Lee said he plans to import goods from Europe and distribute them in Southeast Asia.

"The international market is very big," he said. "America has one-twentieth of the world's population. Most of the world is developing. There are demands for goods and trade."

LEE SAID it is important to be aware of the opportunities the market offers as well as being prepared to adjust. He said the group provides an awareness about alternatives that might be considered by individuals planning to travel abroad. Lee stresses the need to "be prepared. The differences could be significant."

"All are welcome," he said. "No one has to be an expert in international business to come."

Peretti, master's student in international business specializing in Latin American Studies, plans to return to Brazil, where she lived for five years.

She said it is important to have an international organization on campus. "We have a large international population at SIU," she said.

IBA IS "oriented toward what we will get out of it," she said.

Most members are going to be in international business, either in importing or exporting, she said. "We are involved in areas which make an impact on everyone," she said.

Uranus proves full of surprises

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — In the latest batch of reports from Voyager's exploration of Uranus, surprised scientists reported Monday that the brightest of the planet's debris rings is made up of boulders the size of trash cans or bigger.

Other researchers reported puzzling 220 mph jet stream winds blowing in the same direction Uranus rotates, similar atmospheric temperatures at the equator and south pole, and a dark north pole that is warmer than the sun-lit south pole.

Andrew Ingersol of Cal Tech said the Uranian atmosphere is hot, but extremely thin at its uppermost levels. But the middle portion of the atmosphere is supercold — 350 degrees below zero. The "air" warms up with greater depth and the vast ocean of water believed to exist on the surface is believed to be hot.

An analysis of a single long-exposure photo revealed many additional "lanes" of fine dust enveloping the planet in addition to the 10 rings of larger particles and fragments of still more rings. "We're happily bewildered," said chief scientist Edward Stone. "We'd be disappointed if we weren't bewildered, actually, because we learn the most when we see things that we can't readily explain."

"The more bewildered we are, the more successful the encounter has been and the more we have to learn in the next months and years."

Parliament vote in favor of Thatcher

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher won a parliamentary vote of confidence Monday after battling to save her government from a Watergate-style scandal involving the financial bail-out of a helicopter company.

Thatcher's integrity had come into question over the deliberate leak of a memo supporting her stand in the dispute over whether an American- or European-based consortium should buy out part of the Westland Co., Britain's only maker of helicopters.

Thatcher said she did not learn that her office had approved the leak, engineered by the Ministry of Trade and Industry, until a few hours after it happened. Last week, she refused to say when she learned of her staff's role in the leak — a breach of Britain's Official Secrets Act.

Thatcher said its release stemmed from a "genuine difference of understanding" between her office and the trade ministry.

"I repeat that I deeply regret that this was done," she said.

'Runaway Train' loaded with drama, good acting

By Wm. Bryan DeVasher
Entertainment Editor

"Runaway Train," the latest celluloid venture by Jon Voight, is a pleasant surprise of a film. Instead of making a stock adventure film about two escaped convicts with little or no drama, Voight and crew have made a film that keeps the viewers on the edge of their seats from beginning to end.

The storyline of "Runaway Train" is very simple: two convicts, portrayed by Voight and Eric Roberts, escape from prison and jump on a train that turns into a runaway. Along the way they discover a female railroad employee, Rebecca DeMornay, who has fallen asleep on the doomed train, is the only person who can tell the convicts how to stop the four engines that are racing through the Alaskan wilderness, heading for the end of the line and certain oblivion.

The acting, rather than the action, is what makes this film suspenseful and successful. The tension between Voight and Roberts nearly explodes as the train races to the end of the line. Roberts is a young, idealistic criminal who vows to rob a bank and retire to Las Vegas if he emerges from the incident unscathed, while Voight is attuned to the rigors of the outside and deflates Roberts' dreams by telling him that he will accept any job he can get, even if it means scrubbing toilets for a living. Adding to the drama is the prison warden, who pledges to recapture Voight. Voight has embarrassed the warden, portrayed with great skill by John P. Ryan, too many times, and now Voight is going to pay for his sins, even if it means returning to prison via a body bag.

In "Runaway Train" Voight turns in one of his finest performances. It is hard to believe that the muscle-bound Voight is the same man who portrayed the disabled Vietnam veteran in "Coming Home," or the down-and-out prizefighter in "The Champ." As the convict in "Runaway Train," Voight has added yet another convincing character to his long list of screen portrayals.

Perhaps the most amazing thing about "Runaway Train" is that the story line is believable. Unlike most films of this type with a train careening out of control and a story following that is fractured and unbelievable, "Runaway Train" has a story that could become reality. There is only one scene that damages the movie's credibility. That is when the train, which consists of only four engines, smashes into the caboose of another train and stays on the tracks. Most trains, in a similar situation, would have derailed. The caboose scene does provide for some excellent special effects as the caboose is splintered into a tangle of wire and scrap metal.

The photography in the film is also praiseworthy. The scenes of the train careening through the Alaskan mountains are no less than spectacular, as day alternates with night as the four black engines barrel through tunnel after tunnel on their way to their final destination.

"Runaway Train" is one of the best action-adventure films to be released this year. For fans of this genre, "Runaway Train" is a well-directed, well-acted treat.

Program to aid crime victims

By William Walker
Staff Writer

More than $26,000 will be awarded to three Jackson County groups in a statewide program to help organizations provide services to victims of violent crimes.

The Jackson County State's Attorney's Office Victims-Witness Program in Murphysboro, and Synergy, Inc. and The Women's Center in Carbondale were among 85 public and private organizations that will receive more than $700,000 in the second round of the ongoing statewide program.

The Murphysboro group will receive $8,500; Synergy will receive $8,905; and $9,000 will go to the Women's Center, according to a press release from Attorney General Neil Hartigan's office.

Mary Sladek, director of the violent crimes victim's assistance program, said the program, which was authorized by the General Assembly in 1984, is funded through fines collected from convicted offenders of violent crimes.

The current award amounts are based on fines — which range from $3 to $25 — collected during a six-month period that ended in December, she said.

Groups interested in receiving funds through the program must apply after each six-month period, Sladek said, and they must indicate how they will use the money to aid victims of violent crimes. The awards are then made based on a merit selection.

Some specific uses for the money include expansion of services to child victims of sexual assault, improvement of services to rape victims, increased numbers of case workers and coordinators, and creation of toll-free hotline numbers for crisis intervention.

Sladek said that although groups must re-apply every six months, most will receive funding for at least a year, and some even longer depending on how many groups in a given area apply for the awards.

In the first round of awards, which were presented last June, more than $600,000 was given to 75 agencies throughout the state. The attorney general's office has attributed the increase in grants and the number of agencies participating in the program to a more efficient system of assessment and collection of fines and a greater public awareness of the program.

Court rejects Hauptmann exoneration

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Anna Hauptmann, the 87-year-old wife of the man executed for the 1932 kidnap-murder of the young son of Charles and Anne Morrow Lindbergh, lost a Supreme Court bid Monday to exonerate her husband.

The justices, without comment, refused to hear Hauptmann's appeal of a lower court decision dismissing her $100 million wrongful death suit against the state of New Jersey, the Hearst Corp. and a retired FBI agent. Her lawyer vowed to continue the effort to clear Bruno Richard Hauptmann despite the justice's action.

In one of the most notorious crimes of the century, Charles Lindbergh Jr. disappeared from his parents' Hopewell, N.J., home March 1, 1932, five years after his father's pioneering solo flight across the Atlantic.

The child's body was discovered the following May in a shallow grave five miles away, a month after a $50,000 ransom was paid. Hauptmann was arrested two years later, was tried in 1935 and executed April 3, 1936.

Mrs. Hauptmann's lawyer, Robert Byran of San Francisco, told the justices in legal briefs the suit should not have been barred because of the two-year statute of limitations for wrongful death claims.

"It was not until 1981 that she learned of the existence of over 34,000 pages of concealed FBI documents which proved her late husband was, in fact, innocent and a victim of a deliberate fraud," the appeal said, maintaining the statute of limitations clock did not begin running until then.

Older student enrollment to increase

John A. Logan College, Carterville, has begun preparing for the influx of senior citizens expected to attend institutions of higher education during the coming years.

One authority estimates that 35 percent of those attending community colleges by 1990 will be age 35 or older.

Among the activities offered to older individuals at John A. Logan College are free tuition, proficiency exams yielding college credits and complimentary admission to athletic and cultural events.

People over the age of 60 can enjoy tuition-free instruction in all but a handful of courses. Many older individuals pay only a $6 registration fee required of all students each semester. Others may be required to pay a variable laboratory fee levied to cover personal expenses of certain courses.

Time will tell if the Bears of next year will be as dear

It was almost anti-climatic. After 16 weeks of regular season play, two playoff games and a two-week wait for the Big One, the Chicago Bears are now, finally and undeniably, the Super Bowl champions.

Scoring the most decisive victory in Super Bowl history, the Bears have managed to break the trend set by so many previous Chicago teams — making it so close, only to fall short at the last moment.

Since 1963, natives of the Windy City have waited in vain for a winner in a major sport. That was the year the Bears won the NFC championship, with names like O'Bradovich, Ditka, Butkus and Luckman leading the headlines.

Needless to say, it's been a long time since 1963 but Chicagoans couldn't be happier. The headlines are different (and a lot more numerous), with names like McMahon, Payton, Perry and Dent, but the results turned out the same.

But all those fans basking in the warmth of the Bears' 1985-86 successes should be wary. Remember how long it took to finally get this one?

Yes, they have proven their dominance, and yes, they have shown the nation just what an awesome defense can do. But let's not reserve a room at the Mount Olympus Hilton for the Bears just yet, for there will be another season.

Back-to-back Super Bowl winners are few and far between, and with a season like the Bears just had, a repeat of their 18-1 mark would have to be a goal for next season.

But remember how tough repeating things can be, Chicago fans?

The Cubs of 1984 looked like World Series material for sure until visiting Jack Murphy Stadium in San Diego. Their slide continued from October through the next summer, with a depleted pitching staff highlighting a dismal, floundering season.

Take some of the key elements away from the 1985 Chicago Bears, and they could be in the same boat.

What if Buddy Ryan, master of the awe-inspiring 46 defense, opus for a head coaching job? (and you can be sure he will soon be getting some offers) What if McMahon gets hurt early in the season? Or if Dent doesn't get enough money. Any number of things are possible.

Without the ingenuity of Ryan, the Bears' management would be hard-pressed to find a capable replacement. An over-achiever in every sense of the term, Ryan has spent eight long years working with and experimenting with the 46 defense. Add a creative offense-oriented assistant coach, and Ryan would be a formidable opponent as commanding general.

If Dent gets the money he deserves, it could be the beginning of the end. Comparing the paychecks of some of the Bears regulars to other players around the league, one discovers the Bears get their players cheap. What if everyone demands more money? Will the management fork over the big bucks to keep the team intact? Bears' history says no.

What if the apparently-fragile McMahon gets hurt early in the going next season? Will standbys Fuller or

From the Press Box Steve Merritt

Tomczac be able to lead the Bears with the same efficiency of McMahon?

And let's not forget — once you're No. 1, everyone's out to get you.

Despite all the things that might go wrong, the Bears, and their fans, do have reason to look forward to next season.

If Ryan and Dent stay, the defense at worst should be at least as good as this year's. If holdouts Al Harris (Pro Bowl linebacker) and Todd Bell (Pro Bowl safety) come back, the defense should be much improved.

Steve McMichael will be on healthy wheels at the start of next season.

Willie Gault will have another year of experience and could be looking forward to his best season ever.

Walter Payton will be looking for a good season to put him closer to his personal goal of 18,000 yards.

Jim McMahon will have months to think about what kind of headbands to wear next season.

William Perry will have a year of experience under his lengthy belt.

Tom Thayer will finally have a chance to rest.

The whole team will be wanting to work for another ring.

And besides, if the quality of teams in the NFC's central division is the same as this year, who'll be able to beat the Bears?

So take it easy this winter, Bears fans. Mellow out, enjoy some time away from the TV. Get out and do something on Sunday afternoons. Don't worry — football season, and the Bears, will be back next fall.

But don't rest too easy. Remember, they're all out to get you now.

Only time will tell how well the Bears do next year, and no matter how avid of a Bears' fan you are, nothing can be done to change that fact.

But if it's any consolation to the Chicago sports fan, it's only two months away from opening day.

Women's SID found niche at SIU after career change

By Steve Koulos
Staff Writer

Mitch Parkinson says he never planned on a career in sports information when he was an undergraduate at the University of Tennessee.

Entering his eighth year as the SIU women's sports information director, Parkinson said broadcasting was his first love in college.

"The first time I heard myself on tape, I nearly died," Parkinson recalled. "I figured if that's the best I can do on radio, I better get out of it."

Evidently, Parkinson, who is 36, made a wise career choice when he switched his major from broadcasting to journalism. In his second year at SIU-C in 1980, the College Sports Information Directors of America selected his all-sports brochure as the best in the nation.

SIU is recognized as having one of the top sports information departments in the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference.

"I definitely think the SIU sports information department is among the top three in the conference," says Jim Sheehan, information director of the Gateway Conference.

"Mitch puts out very good publications and they can be used as an important media and recruiting tool," Sheehan noted.

As sports information director, Parkinson's primary task is to promote and publicize the women's intercollegiate sports program and to serve as liaison with the area media.

His job responsibilities include writing weekly press releases, writing and compiling sports booklets or brochures for all 11 women's sports, and writing copy for game programs which are distributed at all home events.

Parkinson also attends most of the home events and keeps statistics, maintains complete statistical and photo files of all the women athletes and teams, sells advertising for the sports brochures in the summer, and updates the SIU Women's Sports Hotline, a daily 24-hour service in which area radio stations can telephone and get results and taped comments from Saluki coaches and athletes.

Parkinson is assisted by Hal Braswell, the women's assistant sports information director.

"Sports information is pretty much what it says. We're in a business of getting information out on our sports program," Parkinson said.

A native of Cleveland, Tenn., Parkinson said he first became interested in sports as a youngster by following Tennessee powerhouse Bradley High School in football and basketball. At that time, Bradley was the only high school in Cleveland.

"The thing to do in East Tennessee was to go to a Bradley High School football or basketball game," Parkinson said. "High school sports are a big thing in East Tennessee to most people and you get interested at an early age when you're living in a small town."

Bradley is the first and only high school in the United States ever to win state titles in football, boys' basketball and girls' basketball in the same school year - 1964-65.

"At an early age I was exposed to outstanding girls' sports and I enjoyed them as much as the boys' games," Parkinson explained.

One of Parkinson's favorite sports is golf. He graduated from Cleveland High School in 1968 and was a two-year performer on the varsity golf team.

Parkinson was also a two-year performer on the golf team at Cleveland State Community College, where he received an associate degree in 1970.

After receiving his bachelor's degree in journalism from the University of Tennessee in 1972, Parkinson said he had a difficult time finding a job in his field. He eventually took a job in the management trainee program at the Cleveland National Bank.

"After I left UT I had some personal problems," Parkinson said. "Both of my parents died six months apart and I went through some difficult times personally. After working at the bank for a while I decided this isn't what I wanted to do and I decided to go back to graduate school."

While he was completing his course work in December 1977, Parkinson said his journalism instructor at Tennessee, Kelly Leiter, told him about the women's sports information director opening at SIU. Parkinson applied for the position and was hired by SIU Women's Athletics Director Charlotte West.

"The sports information opening came at a time when I was seriously looking to leave Knoxville." Parkinson said. "I was burned out in graduate school, and like any student in graduate school you're looking for a career opportunity and I took advantage of it."

Since taking over as sports information director, Parkinson has worked at two NCAA Division I national championships hosted by SIUC, volleyball in 1979 and field hockey in 1980.

Last season, the 11 Saluki women's sports teams combined for a 103-66-3 record, a winning percentage of .75. While Parkinson said he has been pleased with the overall success of the women's athletics program, he can't figure out why the attendance at home events has been so sparse.

"There's a tremendous amount of student apathy here that affects both the men's and women's programs," Parkinson said. "The eight years I've been here I've found that Saluki athletics is not that big a deal with the student population in particular and that's new to me because when I was at the University of Tennessee everything was a sell-out."

Parkinson said another factor for the low attendance figures is that SIU is located in a rural area and doesn't have a large population base to draw from, unlike Gateway Conference rivals Drake and Illinois State.

"I think the townspeople have been pretty good in supporting our women's basketball team in particular. Again, it just goes back to having a captive audience with 22,000 students," Parkinson said. "When you can't draw 1,000 students to your games, there is something wrong somewhere. We don't know what it is."

Parkinson, who works between 50 and 55 hours per week during the school year, admits he doesn't have as much time to spend with his wife, Linda, as he would like.

"This isn't the ideal job to have if you want to pursue a family life, but Linda is a pretty good sport about the whole business," Parkinson said. "There are times she gets frustrated and aggravated because it's not a regular 8-5 job."

"I'm fortunate that I have a boss like Dr. West who has been very supportive of our sports information operation and that makes a big difference," he said. "I'm not planning to leave because I really enjoy my work and I think I have a very good situation here."

Herrin happy with season and Arena crowds

By Ron Warnick
Staff Writer

Many people, including first-year coach Rich Herrin, were wondering at the beginning of the season if the Salukis would win a single game in 1985-86.

No one is wondering any more.

Those five wins in 18 games, including a road victory against St. Louis and a Missouri Valley Conference triumph over Indiana State, have exceeded many's predictions. But Herrin isn't about to sit back and relax.

"We have 10 games left to play, and we'll be an underdog in every single game," Herrin said. "But we're gonna win more games, no doubt about it. We're gonna continue to upset people."

"We're disappointed that we've won only five games, but I think we knew at the start of the year that we really had to work and scratch to win anything. I wasn't sure if we had enough physical talent to win a game," Herrin said.

"But we've gotten maximum performance and maximum effort out of our players, and I think that's the reason we have five victories. I'm not saying we've accomplished great things, but we've accomplished things that some people thought we couldn't do," he said.

"We're a better basketball team now, and we've shown a lot of improvement. All we lack is consistency," he said.

But Herrin saved most of his praise for the enthusiastic crowds in the Arena.

"I'm really happy and pleased with the support we've gotten from our student body, boosters and all the fans," he said.

"We've had a lot of crowd enthusiasm, probably because the way our young men conduct themselves on the floor. They play with effort and are an exciting bunch to watch. They have no fear of putting their body on the line," Herrin explained.

Three of 1984-85's benchwarmers are now the offensive cogs of this season's Saluki squad. Freewheeling guard Steve Middleton averages 14.8 points and 3.9 rebounds a game. Steady, nimble Brian Welch, the Saluki floor general, averages 6.6 ppg and 1.6 rpg. Hustling long-bomber Doug Novsek averages 13.5 ppg and 4.4 rpg.

"Novsek's really come from no place after the last three years of not playing. I've been very happy with the way he plays," Herrin said.

The fourth of last season's benchers, forward Dan Weiss, averages only seven minutes per game, but hit two crucial field goals in last week's triumph over Indiana State.

Herrin's two big junior college transfers have also been a great help in a rebuilding year. Guard Greg Matta, who hits 5.9 ppg and 3.4 rpg, has been a force to contend with since becoming eligible Dec. 13. Center Ken Dusharm, hot in his last two games, averages 7.9 ppg and 3.1 rpg.

"When Kenny decides to play, he's been a good offensive threat. We've got to get him to rebound more and play defense," Herrin said.

Unexpectedly, fine performances have also come from two freshmen. Forward Billy Ross remains the Salukis' top rebounder, averaging 4.8 rpg and 6.9 ppg. Forward Randy House, the Dogs' valuable sixth man, averages 7.5 ppg and 4.6 rpg.

"Randy's been a pleasant surprise this year. He really comes out to play. He's not afraid to take the ball hard inside," Herrin said.

"They've all been an enjoyable group to coach. This is a high-class group of young men. They're winners, and they want to win," he said.

Herrin also praised his squad for its academic performance, which averaged over a 2.6 GPA last semester.

"I'm very happy with the progress they've made and effort they've given," he said.

Saluki women swimmers dominate Hawkeyes

By Sandy Todd
Associate Sports Editor

The Saluki women's swim team sent the Hawkeyes back to Iowa City on Saturday as a wet, chlorine-laden and defeated team.

Taking the initiative at the outset of the meet, the Salukis dominated nine of 14 events for the 74-64 win, with the only losses in the 100-, 200-, 500-, and 1000-yard freestyles and a disqualification on the 200-freestyle relay.

In the 1000 free, Saluki senior Roxanne Carlton maintained a strong pace and a one-body-length lead over the Hawkeyes' Jane Keating until the 850 mark. Keating then tapped her power reserve and overtook Carlton, finishing almost a full six seconds ahead for the win with the time of 10:00.61. Carlton's 10:06.57 was a season-best swim.

Coach Bailey Weathers said that Carlton's performance was probably the most outstanding of the meet and that her time is pretty comparable to the NCAA qualifying standard for the 1650-yard freestyle.

SIU outclassed the Hawkeyes in all of the stroke events, collecting one-two finishes in the 100 breast-stroke, 200 butterfly and 400 individual medley and wins in the remaining events.

In the diving competition, Iowa was presented with a great advantage, as junior Saluki diver Suzi Straub did not compete because of an ear infection.

points on the one- and three-meter boards, with Kelly Johnson breaking former Saluki Wendy Lucero's three-meter pool record of 275.70 by chalking up 278.595 points of her own.

Following the 200-yard freestyle relay

When Wittry, sprinting the final leg, hit the wall it seemed that the day was topped off with success as the electronic timer flashed a quick compiled time of 1:35.13, six-tenths of a second faster than the cut. However, the celebration was short-lived, as Weathers decided that one of the swimmers false-started.

The upcoming meets against Auburn at 4 p.m. Friday, and Nebraska at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Recreation Center presents the team with another opportunity to qualify more swimmers for NCAA's.

Lutterman leads Saluki gymnasts to victory

By M.J. Starshak
Staff Writer

The SIU men's gymnastics team beat Northern Illinois and Western Michigan Universities Sunday by a substantial margin but the victory was not nearly as sweet as it might have been had the Salukis scored the 274 that Coach Bill Meade had hoped for.

The team was led by senior all-arounder David Lutterman who scored a 54.20, a bit below his top score of 55.00 which he hit against Ohio State last weekend.

Lutterman said he expects to score higher later in the season.

"I'm confident I'll get a 56 sometime this season," said the New Zealand native. He said that he'd be "really happy" if he could do it Friday against the University of Iowa at the Arena.

Second in all-around scoring was All-American vaulter Brendan Price who finished with a 54.05 and won the vault with a 9.50.

Junior Preston Knauf grabbed third for SIU with 53.05 overall and a 9.40 on the high bar; Mark Ulmer, junior, took first place in the high bar competition with a score of 9.45 and placed fourth overall (52.70); freshman standout Brent Reed took fifth overall (50.85) and was second behind Price on the vault (9.35).

Price's performance was a vast improvement over last week's overall score of 51.90 against Ohio State. Saluki assistant coach Brian Babcock said that he hopes all of the gymnasts have a good meet on Friday against University of Iowa.

"Preston didn't do as well as he did the weekend before. You have a trade-off," said Babcock. One gymnast will have a good meet one week and another will be good the next week."

Senior Vince Quevedo took first for the Salukis with a 9.45 on the floor exercise, an event that the team was not very consistent in, Babcock said.

Quevedo since has sprained his left ankle and may not compete this weekend, Babcock said.

David Bailey, who Babcock described as "a consistent performer" and "a team leader," took first place on the pommel horse (9.45) and third on the parallel bars (9.35).

The team will compete in its first home meet this Friday against University of Iowa at 7:30 in the Arena. Babcock called Iowa a "strong team," and said that this should be an exciting meet and the Salukis will probably have to score a 275 or better to beat them.
