Twelve Marines killed in heaviest land battle

United Press International

Iraqi armored forces charged out of occupied Kuwait and battled allied forces in Saudi Arabia throughout the day Wednesday, killing 12 U.S. Marines in the heaviest ground fighting of the Persian Gulf war. The Pentagon said the enemy was stopped and suffered heavy losses.

The fighting on the 14th day of the war erupted as the United States insisted that a U.S.-Soviet agreement to pursue a cease-fire in exchange for Iraq's "unequivocal commitment" to leave Kuwait was not a softening of Washington's position.

The White House said a joint U.S.-Soviet statement issued Tuesday night was misinterpreted as linking Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait with a resolution of the Arab-Israeli conflict. Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir was said to be upset at the statement, and the White House called the misinterpretation "regrettable."

On the battlefield, Iraqi tanks and other armored vehicles, which had been massing inside Kuwait near the Saudi border, rumbled over the frontier in four separate places about midnight 3 p.m., some heading to the Saudi oil town of Al Khafji, where they were met by allied ground forces, including U.S. Marines, according to staff officers

Germany to give $500 million, military equipment to Britain

BONN, Germany (UPI) — Germany will give new military aid worth half a billion dollars to Britain, in addition to the $5.5 billion pledged to the United States for Operation Desert Storm, Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said Wednesday. Speaking after consultations with his British counterpart, Douglas Hurd, Genscher said that in addition to $533 million, Germany will also give Britain some military equipment.

Hurd welcomed what he called the German government's "financial solidarity" and said of the 1st Marine Division.

The Pentagon estimated the size of the Iraqi force at about 1,000 soldiers; the number of allied soldiers involved in the battle was not disclosed.

The charge on Al Khafji, which was abandoned by its residents on the first day of Operation Desert Storm, was followed by hours of heavy ground and air fighting.

Twelve U.S. Marines were killed in the battle and two were injured, Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, the U.S. commander of the allied forces, said at a news briefing in Riyadh, the Saudi capital. A Saudi military spokesman said his nation's troops also suffered casualties but were "very limited."

The Pentagon said about one-third of the Iraqi force was injured or "otherwise incapacitated" and suffered heavy equipment losses.

There were conflicting accounts from the Pentagon on whether the Iraqi forces had been driven back. At first a Pentagon official said they were "repelled," but later he acknowledged that it was unclear whether Iraqi troops were still in Khafji.

In Riyadh, U.S. Central Command spokesman Lt. Col. Greg Pepin said the engagement in and around Al Khafji was an "ongoing operation," and Schwarzkopf said the battle continued to rage as late as 12 p.m. Wednesday.

Stealth fighter turns out top performance in war

By John Patterson
Staff Writer

In the high-tech war with Iraq, the United States has used top-of-the-line U.S. military components.

This includes the F-117A—better known as the Stealth fighter.

Although the public knew very little about the Lockheed F-117A before the Persian Gulf war, the plane has been flying since 1981 and was cleared for operation in 1983, said Jeffrey P. Rhodes, aeronautics editor for Air Force Magazine.

Rhodes said the Air Force has 56 F-117As in action in Operation Desert Storm.

"At first, during Operation Desert Shield, 40 of the 56 were involved," he said. "The other 16 were sent in last week."

The coalition forces in the Persian Gulf have declared air superiority in the gulf and the Stealth fighter is one reason why, Rhodes said.

"They have been extremely effective," he said. "Films of the bombings, like the one of the bomb going down the air shaft of an Iraqi building, are from F-117As."

Each of the planes costs an estimated $42.6 million, but they have easily proven their worth, Rhodes said.

"They are used for high priority targets," he said. "When we needed to go in and put a bomb in this window rather than that window, the Air Force sent in an F-117A."

Rhodes said the F-117A was the first manned aircraft to enter Iraqi air space when the fighting broke out.

"They went in with the cruise missiles," he said. "The F-117A went for the high value targets, such as the Iraqi communications center in Baghdad."

Tower wing set aside for sorority; Mae Smith residents stunned, mad

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

Twenty Mae Smith residents have been forced to select different rooms for the fall semester because an entire wing has been reserved for a sorority.

In a letter dated Jan. 24, Georgia Kelley, Supervisor of Contracts, informed residents of 11th floor C wing Mae Smith that "we have changed C wing... to housing for Sigma Sigma Sigma Sorority, beginning with the 1991 Fall Semester."

The letter told residents that they could choose a different room in Brush Towers from noon to 4 p.m. Jan. 28, when they would have priority housing selection.

Residents applying for rooms on the regular room selection days, Jan. 29 and Feb. 4 to 7, would not receive priority selection, the letter said.

Tom Kadela, sophomore in social work and Mae Smith Hall Council president, said he is upset the decision was made without consulting current Mae Smith residents or the hall council.

"We don't want it, and there's nothing we can do about it," he said.

Kadela said that allowing an organization to reserve an entire wing cuts out the diversity of life in a residence hall and approaches segregation.

Director of Housing Ed Jones made the decision to house the sorority in Mae Smith.

Jones denied that this was a case of segregation. He said if the sorority doesn't fill the entire wing by a certain time, those rooms will be filled by non-sorority members instead of being left vacant.

The sorority members agreed to fill a block of rooms in Mae Smith if it were reserved exclusively for them, Jones said. They told him the block of rooms also would help hold the sorority together, he said.

Jones said reserving the wing for the sorority makes part of 11th floor Mae Smith into a lifestyle floor. These floors house students with specific similarities, like Wright Hall, which is reserved for engineering students, he said.

Creation of lifestyle floors often creates displacement of students, Jones said.

Liquor licenses granted; city to appeal order

By Leslie Colp
Staff Writer

Two local businessmen will get their liquor licenses, but the Carbondale Liquor Control Commission will appeal the decision to grant them, City Attorney Michael Wepsiec said.

"The Carbondale Liquor Control Commission has requested that I pursue an appeal of (Circuit Court) Judge (J. Phil) Gilbert's Jan. 22 order," Wepsiec said.

"As to the licenses," he said, "they will be issued as ordered by the court."

"However, the Carbondale Liquor Commission desires it to be known that the licenses are being issued only because the commission is under a court order to do so."

Profanity not wanted at games

From the Press Box
Eric Bugger

The profanity once shouted by dozens of people at Saluki basketball games has all but ceased. Only a few fans still continue to shout vulgarities after an opposing team makes a free throw.

At first it brought a laugh from some people, but that was two years ago. It is kind of like Cabbage Patch dolls. They were cute once, but now sit in the closet with the Hula-Hoop. It's time to take the hint and put the profanity in the closet also.

It doesn't help the Salukis and if anything, it stirs the emotions of the opponents and gives them an edge knowing they've accomplished something.

Saluki senior forward Rick Shipley said he hears people screaming profanities at him all the time on the road, but it pumps him up. He knows that he must be doing

Dawgs hunt for win on road

In his six years at SIUC, Coach Rich Herrin has not won a game in Bradley's Carver Arena. If the 1990-91 Salukis are to end that streak tonight, they will have to put the past behind them.

The Salukis have lost eight games this season, all by six points or less. Probably their toughest defeat came Monday night against Creighton. SIUC controlled about 36 minutes of the game, but the last four minutes are what made the difference in the contest.

In the final two minutes, Creighton's Matt Petty nailed two 3-pointers and two free throws to put an end to what many expected to be SIUC's victory. Instead, SIUC lost the match-up 78-75.

"I think we're down a little bit," Herrin said. "Mentally, we're disappointed that we won in everything (statistics) but the score. We felt like we should've won, but it's a team effort and we didn't get the job done at crunch time."

The Salukis will have to get the job done at crunch time if they are to overcome Bradley's Curtis Stuckey, the Missouri Valley Conference leading scorer, and emerging inside threat Xanthus Houston, who scored 19 points in the Arena Jan. 24.

A tenacious Saluki defense held Stuckey to just one field goal in the first half of the game at home. He was able to notch 24 points by the end of the game, but it wasn't enough to lift the Braves over the Dawgs.

The Salukis dominated the first half taking a 42-32 lead into the locker room. A short 20-9 run by the Braves at the beginning of the second half got them back into the game, but SIUC was able to slam the door on them 79-69.

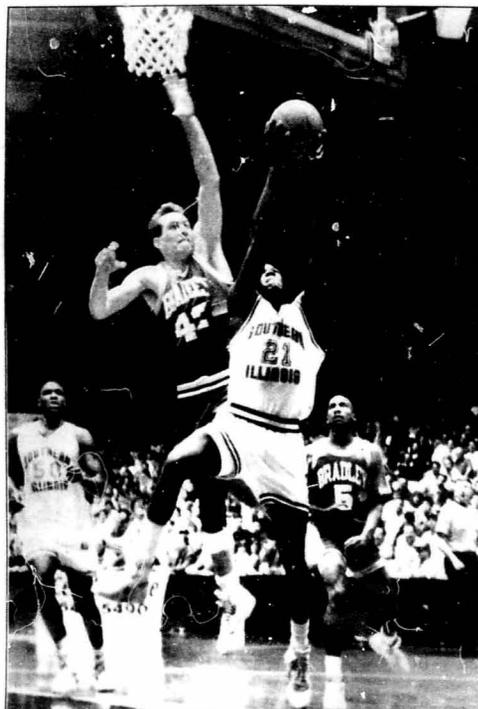

Sophomore center Ashraf Amaya and senior forward Rick Shipley were the catalysts for the Salukis. Amaya poured in 21 points and collected seven rebounds. Shipley dominated the boards, pulling down 10 rebounds while adding 19 points.

Regardless of what went on in the Arena last week, Herrin is expecting his ballclub to have its hands full, especially since it has not won a game on an opponent's floor this season.

"I think it will be as tough as tough can be," Herrin said. "I don't think there's any tougher contest. Bradley plays a little more explosive at home in front of their own crowd."

So explosive that SIUC hasn't won at Bradley since a 71-58

Women hold good odds for win at Rec Center

By Cyndi Oberle
Staff Writer

It is said the third time is a charm. After two weekends of spectacular performances, the SIUC women's track and field team is going into its meet Saturday with the odds in its favor.

The other teams competing in the meet at the Recreation Center are Western Illinois, who took third behind the Salukis in both the indoor and outdoor Gateway Conference Championships last year, Southwest Missouri State and Eastern Illinois.

"All three schools are Gateway Conference foes," women's track and field coach Don DeNoon said. "All three have some really top-notch athletes, too. I'll be expecting some solid competition throughout all the events, but I expect the most competition from Western."

Western Illinois' track and field coach Dave Miller said SIUC is the team to beat in the meet.

"The Salukis' have a lot more depth than the rest of us," Miller said. "My team is strong in the sprints and we have some good distance runners, but I know what SIUC has and I doubt that in this kind of meet we have the chance to overcome them."

Even though DeNoon is expecting some tough competition, he has confidence in his athletes. "The team has been putting together a string of strong performances," DeNoon said. "We won our invitational two weeks ago, and if the other two meets were scored, we would have taken first place also."

"I would be surprised if we didn't win. Basically we are a team that has more depth. We also have more events covered than the other schools."

Southwest Missouri's track and field coach Jeff Berryessa said he is looking forward to the meet because of the strong competition.

"It is a pleasure to come to SIUC," Berryessa said. "This will be a good and aggressive meet—everything a meet should be. SIUC has a fantastic facility and a strong team, what more could you want in a track meet?"

Berryessa said even though his team is struggling right now and he feels the team is a bit behind where it should be, there still is plenty of time until the conference championships.

"We're taking this as a developmental meet," Berryessa said. "We have some good sprinters and hurdlers, but more importantly we are just playing with different areas to see how we improve week to week."

DeNoon said he expects to see performances from sophomore Cheryl Evers in the shot put, sophomore Brandi Mock in the 400-meter and junior Michele Williams in the long and triple jump.

"The other teams are not too far behind us though," DeNoon said. "I just think our depth will carry us through this meet."

'Itch' back to be roasted at SIUC

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

When you've got an "Itch" coming to town for a few days, what do you do? You roast him.

That's exactly what former Saluki baseball coach Richard "Itchy" Jones will have done to him this weekend. "Itchy's" friends, former players and coaches will be taking a few shots and telling some old stories at the dinner Saturday at 6:30 p.m.

There will also be a reception for Jones, the 52-year-old Herrin native, at 5:30 p.m.

Jones left his post as skipper of the Salukis last August to take over the helm of the University of Illinois' baseball program. In his 21-year career at SIUC, Jones compiled a 738-345-5 record and sent more than a dozen players to the major leagues.

Among the persons that will be putting Jones over the fire will be onetime assistant Mark Newman, now with the New York Yankees organization, former SIUC players Steve Weber, coach of the University of Georgia's 1990 national championship baseball team; Jim Adduci, former Philadelphia Phillies player and Dan Radison, who is now in the Yankees' double-A farm club.

Other former players of Jones, who will not do any roasting, include Chicago White Sox minor league coach Dewey Robinson and St. Louis Cardinal minor leaguer Bill Lyons.

Current Saluki baseball coach Sam Riggelman is pleased to see Jones get his recognition dinner.

"With the timeliness that he left," Riggelman said, "SIUC wasn't able to respond and give him the recognition. This is a well conceived idea and it should be an enjoyable evening."

The host for the affair is the SIUC Alumni Association. Roger Newhouse, who organized the event, said tickets have sold very well and he expects to see a crowd of more than 200. He added the evening has some surprises in store.

"It should be fun with all the guys roasting him," Newhouse said. "There will also be a special presentation for 'Itchy'. He knows nothing about it. That's all I can say."

Sports show previews spring recreational fun

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

As the cold of winter is still kicking around Southern Illinois, local residents and students can look toward warmer times this weekend at the 1991 Spring Sports & Recreation Show.

The SIUC Arena will be the backdrop for 65,000 square feet of boats, RVs, any numerous hunting and fishing exhibits.

Show coordinator Mike Glisson is looking to top last year's crowd of just under 10,000 people.

"Last year was good," Glisson said. "We shoot for about 10,000 a year. We are expecting the same or even more this year."

Glisson has put together a variety of things for those 10,000 people to look at during the three-day show. Included in the exhibits will be a few old favorites such as Steve Wunderle and Fred and Donna Washburn.

Wunderle is the returning expert on the area's outdoor hunting and fishing hotspots. He will be giving the crowd tips and explaining new techniques on catching crappie and hunting deer.

The Washburns are the owners of Cottonmouth Lures in Carterville. They will be giving instructional information on bass fishing in local lakes.

One of the more interesting exhibits to watch will be the Southern Illinois Hunting Retriever Club. The club will not only

Soviet withdrawal of troops from Baltics signals talks

MOSCOW (UPI) — President Mikhail Gorbachev's press secretary said Wednesday that reinforcement troops are being pulled out of the Baltic republics, and a Lithuanian news agency reported dozens of military vehicles carrying soldiers from Vilnius. A Lithuanian draft dodger died of a head wound suffered after he was shot by a Soviet soldier, becoming the 20th fatality of the Kremlin's military crackdown in the Baltic region this month. Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis said the reduction of Soviet troops "can become a good signal for talks."

Citizens helping pay for war with donations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Dina Suttles, of New Prospect, S.C., doesn't want the federal government to raise taxes to pay for Operation Desert Storm, so she's decided to help foot the bill herself. By sending a $30 personal check to the Pentagon, Suttles joined a small but growing number of people willing to put their money where their mouths are when it comes to supporting allied forces in the war against Iraq. Although the bulk of money has come from foreign governments, the Pentagon has also received about $30,000 in donations from private citizens.

Prof: Employees resentful during recession

BOSTON (UPI) — An overwhelming number of Americans believe their employers are trying to take advantage of them, and their resentment is likely to increase if the recession and the Persian Gulf war drag on, a researcher said Wednesday. Most Americans have a cynical attitude toward their jobs, said Donald Kanter, a psychologist and professor of marketing at the Boston University School of Management. "Most people think they work pretty hard and it's harder and harder to get anywhere," Kanter said.

Unusual snow, ice on roads puts strain on IDOT budget

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — An unusually high number of heavy snow and ice storms has driven up the cost of clearing Illinois roads this winter and the state's transportation chief said Wednesday the agency's budget was not ready for the extra strain. Transportation Secretary Michael Lane said Illinois has more than doubled expenditures for snow and ice removal during the last three months. During that period, $25.1 million has been spent in labor, salt and fuel. That is 104 percent over the average amount spent during similar periods in past years. Lane said depleting road salt quantities has also become a problem.

Candidate wants NAACP to organize killings

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — A candidate for mayor of Springfield has asked the NAACP to form a militia group that could perform "surgical bombings and assassinations" to press for civil rights reform, a newspaper reported Wednesday. The Springfield State Journal-Register reported Maurice Horton claims to have a number of recruits for his group. "I would like to propose that the NAACP organize a military wing," Horton said in a letter to the organization. "Not the looting and the burning of the '60s but a serious campaign of surgical bombings and assassinations."

Vietnam activist uniting front to challenge war, fascism

Lecture compares 1960s movement to gulf war protests

By Tiffany Youther
Staff Writer

The Persian Gulf war is not another Vietnam, says Carl Davidson, a 1960s political activist.

Davidson's lecture Tuesday, titled "Anti-War Movements Then and Now," was heard by a Student Center Auditorium audience of about 60 people.

He covered topics ranging from the imbalance of wealth in the Middle East to media coverage of war demonstrations.

Davidson was heavily involved in Vietnam war demonstrations during the 1960s. He said the movement went from protest to active resistance of the war effort, which caused the development of more radical policies by many demonstrators.

"The more we studied the history of Vietnam and Indochina, the more we began to feel that this war (Vietnam) was an unjust war," Davidson said.

The just part of the war was on the other side, he said, because Vietnam was fighting for its own liberation.

Davidson said the Persian Gulf war is more like World War I, because a nation is attempting to bring about a redistribution of the world's resources.

"(Kuwait has) an enormous concentration of wealth, a government that is backward, and no military to defend it," he said. "It's almost an invitation."

Davidson said he is beginning a united front against war and fascism which targets both President Bush and Iraqi President Saddam.

Some of his favorite anti-war slogans are "No Blood for Oil" and "How Many Lives in the Gallon?"

He said U.S. citizens change their attitudes toward the war very easily.

The public shifts from cynical realist mode, believing the war is for cheap oil, to idealism, believing the United States always fights for justice.

He said Americans have started a "reason-a-week club" as to why the United States is involved in the Persian Gulf war and constantly are trying to justify the government's actions.

The United States cannot justify involvement in the Persian Gulf war as a fight against communism, Davidson said, because the communistic role is not there this time like it was in Vietnam.

Davidson served as national vice president and secretary of Students for a Democratic Society during the late 1960s.

He also worked with such groups as the National Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam and the National Peace Action Coalition.

He has done editorial work for many publications, such as 'Insight Features' and 'The Guardian,' and has been published widely in the liberal and alternative press in the United States and abroad for more than 20 years.

Three finalists for CCFA dean position selected

By Natalie Boehme

Three finalists were named for the new dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts, Benjamin A. Shepherd said Wednesday.

A search committee recommended Mark Hickson of Homewood, Ala., Michael Marsden of Bowling Green, Ohio and Judith Zivanovic of Manhattan, Kas.

"They all appear to be well qualified candidates," said Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs and research. "I don't think we will have any trouble selecting one of these individuals to lead the college into the 21st century."

Hickson, chairman of the Communications Studies department at the University of Alabama at Birmingham, received a doctorate in speech communications from SIUC in 1971 and both a master's degree in speech and a bachelor's degree in secondary education from Auburn University.

Hickson taught at Mississippi State University from 1974 to 1978 and the University of Alabama at Birmingham from 1987 to present.

Marsden, associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Bowling Green University, received a doctorate in English from Bowling Green University at Bowling Green, Ohio, a master's degree in English from Purdue University at Lafayette, Ind. and a bachelor of arts in English from DePaul University in Chicago.

Persian Gulf oil spill tragic military move

WHEN SADDAM HUSSEIN poured millions of gallons of oil into the Persian Gulf, Bush's line in the sand was extended to the water.

The Iraqi leader's latest act of indecency has polluted 20-by-60 miles of once clear tropical ocean water.

It has also cleared up some doubts about whether U.S. troops should be fighting in the desert.

MOST AMERICANS were surprised at Saddam's "environmental terrorism." They shouldn't have been.

A leader who murders his own aides is not going to think twice about killing sealife.

It is sickeningly clear that Saddam would negatively use the very issue of the war some Americans have very publically protested—oil.

Saddam is very aware that 20 percent of the American public split does not support U.S. involvement in this war. This dissension is something Saddam is hoping to capitalize on.

IT DOESN'T SEEM reasonable that a sane individual would purposefully and flagrantly cause what is believed speculated to be the largest oil spill in history.

And it seems unreasonable that a leader would directly cause the endangerment of his own people's drinking water.

But unthinkable acts, such as massive oil spills and murder of his own aides, demonstrate a leader who has been trained in a part of the world where these things are acceptable military strategies.

SADDAM IS NOT the picture of a madman. He is the epitome of a terrorist leader who will fight to the death, whether or not his forces have a realistic shot at coming out on top.

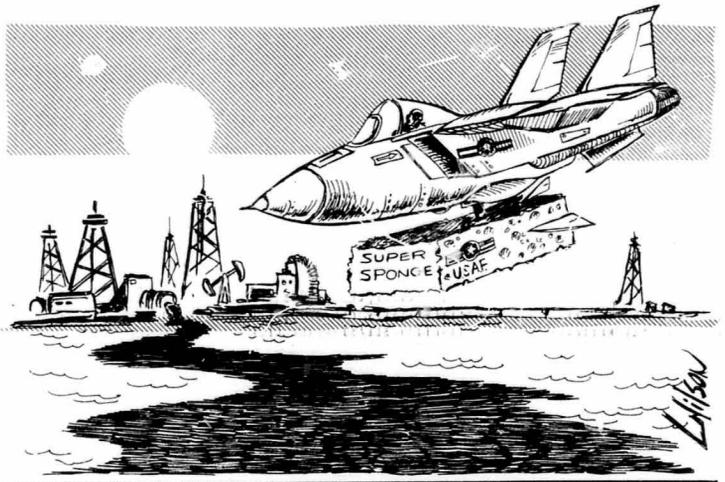

Quotable Quotes

"So that peace can prevail, we will prevail."—said President Bush at Tuesday night's State of the Union address, vowing to drive Iraq out of Kuwait.

"It offers the opportunity to take the final step to end a long and difficult journey."—Rep. G.V. Montgomery, D-Miss., said in reference to a proposed government study on the extent of health damage caused by Agent Orange.

"We start with perfection and work our way up from there."—University coordinator John Yack said about SIUC's graphic and design program.

"I'm not a prude, but I'm saddened by this. This is my university too."—said SIUC Athletic Director Jim Hart in reference to the crowd's vulgar language at games.

Letters

Force needed to stop Saddam

This is addressed to all the individuals who protest the war. No one wants war or likes it. I don't agree with war either, but in the case of Kuwait it was inevitable.

You say you support our soldiers but not the war. People do support the reason we had to go to war, and the price of oil is not this reason—Saddam Hussein is.

He had no right invading another independent country such as Kuwait. If we were to just sit back and let Saddam destroy Kuwait, which country would fall to his power next?

Saddam Hussein is a madman.

He would not stop at one country. When he had enough power, and maybe a nuclear bomb in his possession, who's to say that he wouldn't try to invade the good old United States.

Sure this thought seems inconceivable, but so did the thought of man's inhumanity to man when 600 million Jews were murdered by Hitler during the Holocaust. Saddam's evil actions have to be stopped now. Not only the United States believes this, the whole United Nations does. Why don't you?

A marine interviewed on CNN told reporters that he believes in America want all the benefits and security of living in America, but they're not willing to support it. When I see you, I believe this.

So next time you're standing at the corner of Grand Avenue and Illinois Street instead of holding a sign that says what everyone wants—"Peace"—hold one of the signs that says "Honk if you support our soldiers." It's the least you can do!—Ann Moriarty, sophomore, undecided.

Allied prejudice altered World War II

Mr. Wallace thinks Hitler's rise to power was because the Versailles Treaty gave Hitler an excuse and other European governments were pacifist.

The terms of surrender were tough, but treaty negotiations were ongoing when Germany scuttled its naval fleet rather than turn it over to the victors. The angered victors gave Germany an ultimatum: accept the terms as they are.

Germany complied, and Hitler, a veteran of the war, exploited that ultimatum so successfully that he was elected chancellor by a broad spectrum of the German population.

His rearmament of Germany was done by asking England if a fleet one-third the size of England's wouldn't be reasonable. England agreed, in part because England's monarch was openly sympathetic to Germany, given the German bloodlines in British royalty.

France sought alliance with Russia to use Poland and as buffer states to contain Germany.

Hitler played up this alliance to divide England from France, the hearts of most Germans: by invoking himself as the champion of civilization against the threat of Communists and/or Jews.

Anti-communist prejudice caused Europe and America to look the other way.

The League of Nations condemned Germany's move into the Rhineland, but British prejudice against the French caused them not to act, and the fact that the United States refused to join the League may have undercut the organization.

There was a pacifist movement back then; even A.A. Milne, creator of Winnie the Pooh, wrote a book called "Peace with Honour" that remains a classic of pacifism.

However, public opinion did not alter the course of European politics any more than it shortened the Vietnam War. We left Vietnam, not because Abbie Hoffman mobilized public opinion, but because our army was defeated.

We need to admit that. To do otherwise risks the prejudice that dissent equals treason—a very unconstitutional belief.—Patrick Drazen, graduate, undecided.

Turkish invasion eradicates freedom

The situation in Cyprus has been "deadly" misrepresented by C. Alacaci in his Dec. 3 letter to the DE. His is a typical example of the Turkish propaganda about their bloody invasion in Cyprus in 1974.

According to the Turkish propaganda, Turkey invaded Cyprus in order to save the "defenseless" Turkish-Cypriots. They're really as defenseless as the Turkish-Cypriot paper Ortam reports.

However, their threat isn't the Greek-Cypriots, but their own leaders who are led by the Turkish troops.

According to a report by Ortam, the leader of the opposition party accused their so-called "president" for outdated policies as isolating the Turkish-Cypriot community from the rest of the world.

The Turkish-Cypriot wing of the Contact Group for a Federal and Independent Cyprus also criticized the isolation caused by the current Turkish-Cypriot political leadership.

In a letter they asked their "president" to promote—not prevent—a free dialogue between Greek and Turkish Cypriots.

"If you are sincere in upholding European values, as a first step stop preventing Turkish-Cypriots from crossing into the area of Cyprus unoccupied by the Turkish invading troops, which would contribute to the creation of conditions for a free dialogue," the statement, published in the Turkish-Cypriot press on Nov. 26, said.

"If you refuse to do this," the Contact Group continued, "you will prove once again that you are the one who precludes the efforts for finding a peaceful solution to the Cyprus problem and that you are the one who insists on keeping the Turkish-Cypriots out of the European family."

Cyprus remains the only divided country in Europe, the only European country facing occupation by a foreign army, with its citizens (both Greek and Turkish-Cypriots) denied the exercise of their fundamental freedoms and rights, as well as altering its demographic structure through the massive implantation of illiterate and rude settlers from mainland Turkey.

The above suggest who is the cause of the Cyprus conflict.—Christiana Philippou, graduate, food and nutrition.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors. The letters space will be a forum for discussion of issues of public interest. Open civil dialogue is the aim. Letters may be edited for length and content. Letters of fewer than 20 words will be given preference for publication. Letters will be limited to 300 words. Unlike the editors deem objectionable because of potential libelous material or because extraordinary bad taste will not be published. Access to the letters space will be afforded to as many writers as possible to encourage diversity of points of view. Editors may impose, at their discretion, a limit on the frequency of publication of letters by an author. When a multitude of letters on the same subject are received, editors may select a few letters that are representative of those letters for publication.

Every letter must be signed by its author. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department, others by address and occupation or position appropriate to the nature of their letters. Letters for which authorship cannot be verified will not be published.

"This solved the problem for the (Sigma Sigma Sigma Sorority), but sometimes solving problems for one group creates problems for another group," he said.

Jones said the decision to reserve the wing was made almost two weeks ago, giving him little time to notify the current residents. These residents were given the first chance to reserve other rooms, he said.

Jennifer Webb, freshman in early childhood education who lives in the wing, said she will miss living with her residence assistant and friends on the floor.

"I don't understand why they would allow a sorority to take a whole wing," she said.

Michelle Krause, junior in advertising and Sigma Sigma Sigma president, said obtaining the floor was a very positive move and a step in the right direction. She said she hoped it established a precedent.

"White a Greek organization is growing, this is the best move to make. Then they can move on once they outgrow it," she said.

Krause said the sorority got its first house, 308 W. Cherry St., with a three-year lease that expires May 31. She said she looked into housing options with the help of sorority advisors and then reached an agreement where the 11th floor C wing of Mae Smith would be reserved for sorority members only.

The wing houses 20 people, and because 25 Sigma Sigma Sigma members plan on moving into Mae Smith, the additional people probably will move into another wing on the floor, Krause said.

Kristine Duckworth, freshman in elementary education who lives in the wing, said she was unhappy with the housing change. She said she likes the view from C wing and would have stayed on the 11th floor next year, but now is moving to another floor to be in a C wing.

Margie Gernady, freshman in marketing who lives in the C wing, said she was considering moving off campus and now feels she has no choice but to move.

Tywanda Jiles, a freshman in paralegal studies who lives in the A wing, said she plans to move to another floor next year because she doesn't want to share a floor with a sorority. As a floor representative for Mae Smith's hall council, Jiles said many residents on the floor are upset because they had no input in the decision.

Paula Grimes, freshman in art who lives in the A wing, said she was going to request the same room for next year, but now plans to move off campus and live with her friends.

Beth Scally, head resident of Mae Smith, said she had no input into the housing decision.

Jones said no concerns have been raised directly to him, and he doesn't feel his decision sets a precedent for giving special groups special sections of housing.

Wepsiec said.

John Ham, owner of Saluki Laundromat on U.S. Highway 51 south of Carbondale, and Dennis Immen, owner of Murphy's Bar and Grill on East Walnut Street, have battled the city for liquor licenses since last summer.

The businessmen said they want to open liquor stores on U.S. 51 south of Pleasant Hill Road.

Both men applied for and were refused licenses from the liquor commission last summer. The businessmen appealed to the Illinois State Liquor Commission, which reversed the city's decision.

The commission had 35 days to appeal the decision, but failed to do so in that time, said attorney Robert Schulhof, who represents both businessmen. Therefore, the state liquor commission's decision stands.

The city liquor commission refused to grant the licenses despite the state liquor commission's ruling and petitioned for a rehearing. The state denied the city's petition in September.

A lawsuit was then filed seeking administrative review of the state's decision, and Schulhof asked that an order be made to force issue of the licenses.

The City Council passed an ordinance Sept. 18 prohibiting the sale of alcohol in Carbondale south of Pleasant Hill Road because, according to the ordinance, Carbondale wants to preserve "the dignity and tranquility of certain areas."

The Carbondale Liquor Control Commission and the City Council are separate bodies, but are composed of the same people.

Gilbert ruled Jan. 22 the city had no reason to deny the licenses.

"Judge Gilbert has been extremely fair and impartial in hearing the various matters before him," Wepsiec said. "However, my client and I believe there has been a misinterpretation of the law regarding the grant of mandamus in this case."

A grant of mandamus is an order from a superior court directed to a private or municipal corporation commanding the performance of a particular act.

"The Carbondale Liquor Control Commission does not believe that it is in the best interest of either neighborhood surrounding the two locations, or the city as a whole, for these licenses to be issued," he said.

up on the Iraqi targets and deliver its payload before any Iraqi defensive measures could be taken, Rhodes said.

"When things started exploding, they (Iraqis) probably figured out what was going on, but the F-117A pilots reported the lights of Baghdad were still up when they went in," he said. "They only shot back with anti-aircraft afterwards."

The F-117A carries only two one-ton laser-guided bombs and is considered a surgical bomber, Rhodes said.

"It's not like the B-52 bomber, which can drop a huge payload and cause massive destruction," he said. "The F-117 will hit one target and at most two. It's designed to hit high priority targets."

The F-117A earned the name Stealth fighter because of its ability to scatter or deflect radar beams instead of reflecting them to a source. This is accomplished two ways, Rhodes said.

The aircraft's surface structure has faceting which gives the fighter its unusual diamond shape, he said.

Rhodes said the panels making up the plane's exterior are set at unusual angles so radar hits them but deflects off. This process is different from the B-2 Stealth bomber, which uses a curved surface to skip the radar beams away from the plane.

The F-117A also is covered with radar-absorbent material that absorbs radar beams and allows only minimal reflection.

Other items that help the F-117A be radar invisible includes ducted engines and ducted exhaust. Air intakes cool the engines by sending it directly into the engine and also piping it around to cool the exhaust. The exhaust is directed upward so it can only be detected from above.

Unlike other planes, the F-117A has no on-board radar, Rhodes said.

"It uses infrared tracking and finds targets by what the pilot does rather than what the airplane does," he said.

"it is a substantial sum and, from our point of view, it is a satisfactory sum."

Hurd stressed that he had not come to Bonn to negotiate over Germany's military aid and that he "did not mention figures." He said Chancellor Helmut Kohl had informed him earlier in the day of the size of the German contribution.

The Bonn government had previously pledged $112 million toward British military operations in the Persian Gulf war.

Germany's total military commitment to Operation Desert Storm now amounts to $8.5 billion — some of it in the form of surplus military stocks from East Germany.

Earlier this week, the government announced it would give $5.5 billion in new military aid to the United States in addition to a previous pledge of $1.17 billion. Germany had committed $1 billion in aid to Turkey.

Government spokesman Dieter Vogel also said Wednesday that Germany will give Israel a Patriot firing unit with eight anti-aircraft missile launchers as well as chemical detection vehicles and medical supplies. Unlike the Patriot systems used by the United States, the batteries used by German forces are devised for anti-aircraft rather than anti-missile defense.

the candidates," said Marvin Kleinau, acting CCA dean. "I think we have three good ones."

The next step is to invite the candidates to the University and interview them, he said.

Shepherd, the committee and the college each will interview the candidates and then Shepherd, with input from campus groups, will name the new dean.

The interviewing process should be completed by mid-March, and the new dean will be identified by April, Shepherd said.

Candis Isberner, committee member representing the broadcasting service, said previously the committee only has had contact with the candidates on paper.

Kleinau will retire July 1, leaving his interim post. Kleinau took the position in June 1989, when Keith Sanders left the position to become chancellor at the University of Wisconsin at Stevens Point.

Clearing of Brazil rain forest demands attention—report

SAO PAULO, Brazil (UPI) — The booming population growth in Brazil's Amazon region is having a catastrophic effect on the huge Amazon rainforest, a new study indicates.

A report released this week by the Brazilian Institute of Geography and Statistics said ranchers, farmers, gold prospectors and others are rapidly damaging the environment. The over-crowding demands the immediate attention of the government, the report said.

The report estimated Brazil's population will reach 155.6 million people by July, and showed that many areas in the Amazon basin and other interior regions have doubled or tripled in population over the past 10 years.

The Amazon, nearly half of giant Brazil's continental U.S.-sized territory, is still only sparsely populated, its 10.9 million inhabitants representing only 7 percent of people in the past 10 years has brought widespread clearing and air and water pollution from burning and mining, posing a threat to the forest's delicate ecological balance.

Mauro Pereira de Mello, director of geoscience for the government institute, said in the report the over-crowding of the Amazon is having a catastrophic effect on the environment.

President Fernando Collor de Mello announced in December an ambitious program to develop the Amazon while conserving the environment, but scientists have warned that no matter how careful Brazil is in attempting to preserve the wide variety of plants and animals in the lush jungle, rapid development is going to have a negative effect.

Collor's plan includes pumping billions of dollars in foreign and domestic investment into the region over the next five years. It denies credits to settlers who plan to strip the land but makes it easy for investors with feasible plans to develop the land while still maintaining its environmental integrity.

"Development, but from an ecological point of view," is how the plan was described in a recent government report.

Throughout the 1950s, 60s and 70s, Brazil's former military government encouraged people to migrate to the interior, including the Amazon basin, to develop the area for agriculture. The Trans-Amazon Highway was built, and people were given cheap land in exchange for developing it.

The latest study, issued after three years of research, concludes that the migration policy was successful in increasing harvests and profits to the interior states. It also concludes, however, that the policy had a drastic effect on the environment and, because of over-crowding in interior cities such as Porto Velho in the Brazil far west, has lowered the living conditions of the migrants.

The study warns that all levels of government must take immediate action to stem the overcrowding and ease its effects on the environment. Although Collor has vowed to do so, the federal government has relatively little control over the activities of states and municipalities.

SIUC ensemble, select bands to play at state conference

By Tracy Sargeant
Entertainment Editor

SIUC's Wind Ensemble will perform three times this week in Central Illinois before giving a final performance Friday at the Illinois Music Educators Association.

The 45-piece ensemble, made up of select University band members, will be one of four bands to play at the annual IMEA conference in Peoria. The conference, which runs today through Saturday, draws music educators and students from around the state.

Michael Hanes, director of bands for the School of Music, said the concert is one of many activities scheduled throughout the conference.

"Each hour of the day there are different activities in different places," Hanes said. "We are very excited to represent the University."

The All-State bands are the highlight of the conference. High school students audition in their districts and the best perform at the All-State level.

Hanes said several All-State groups, including instrumental bands, jazz groups, orchestral bands and vocal choirs, will perform at the conference.

Bands, choirs, colleges, universities, music publishers, instrument makers and other groups will set up booths to promote their various schools and products.

The SIUC School of Music also will have a booth to promote the school's music program, said Robert Weiss, associate professor of music.

Weiss said a majority of SIUC music students have attended or been involved in the All-State events. The booth promotes the school and provides information for people interested in SIUC's music program.

"We directly sign people up for scholarships and auditions, and pass on information (through the booth)," Weiss said. "Around 10 faculty members have signed up to (monitor) the booth."

The ensemble also will give concerts at Vandalia High School, in Vandalia; Port, High School, in Petersburg; and at Woodruff High School in Peoria. In addition, University students will give workshops for some of the bands at the schools.

The ensemble will play seven pieces. One will feature guest trombone soloist Gene Súman. The New American Woodwind Quintet, a group of SIUC faculty members, will be featured in another song.

Hanes said he didn't know the exact number of people who will attend the three-day conference, but he estimated a crowd of between 2,000 and 3,000, excluding band members.

Nuclear 'supermodel' lays waste to bad plot in 'Eve of Destruction'

Film Review

By Stephanie Steirer
Staff Writer

The only thing there is to like about the film "Eve of Destruction" is the Bugs Bunny cartoon that appears before it.

The plot of this film is so bad that it's hard to believe the film ever made it to the theater. It not only lacks substance — it lacks in coherence as well.

What's even worse is that tap dancing king Gregory Hines, whose credits include "White Nights" and "Running Scared," and Dutch actress Renee Soutendijk looked at the script and actually wanted to do the film.

To sum up the dreadful plot, Dr. Eve Simmons (played by Soutendijk) specializes in creating humanized robots, which can be programmed into "battlefield mode" and sent into enemy territory during a war to wreak havoc.

Eve VIII (also played by Soutendijk) is a special "top priority" android, which is Simmons' pride and joy. It was created in the image of Simmons, complete with her thoughts and feelings.

The robot is eventually let out into society under the watchful eye of a monitoring agent, who makes sure Eve VIII makes a smooth transition into the human world. Then, for some unknown reason, Eve VIII goes into a bank and — big surprise — there is an attempted bank robbery.

When Eve VIII's agent gets shot, she gets mad. When the bank robber shoots Eve VIII, she gets even madder and turns into a cross between Rambo, Robocop and a supermodel.

A gunshot to Eve VIII's stomach messes up her internal mechanisms and places her in "battlefield mode," which basically means that she's out for blood.

After making a quick stop to the local gun store and then the mall for some new duds, Eve VIII is ready for combat.

What is learned throughout the course of this horrid film is to never, ever call Eve VIII the infamous five-letter-word for a female dog. That word seems to really irritate her and she'll shoot the life out of any man that says it to her.

At this point, terrorist expert Jim McQuade (played by Hines) is called in by the government to rid the United States of this "top secret" experiment gone bad.

Because there is no simple way to turn the machine off, McQuade learns how to destroy the robot with help from Simmons.

But the worst part is yet to come. Eve VIII is nuclear. And, when set in the nuclear "activated mode," she can explode with enough force to wipe out 20 to 30 city blocks.

Surprise, surprise, Eve VIII goes nuclear and McQuade and Simmons have 24 hours to destroy her before she destroys New York.

Unfortunately, Hines doesn't tap dance at all in "Eve of Destruction." And that's too bad because a song and dance probably would have made the film a little more enjoyable.

In the "Eve of Destruction" press packet, Hines said his character "is forced to act much like a shrink to pull out the aspects of (Simmons) darker side."

But the only thing forced in the film is Hines' acting, and that goes double for Soutendijk.

Avoid "Eve of Destruction" at all costs.

Club sends soldiers signals faster, cheaper than letters

By Eric Reyes
Staff Writer

The SIUC Amateur Radio Club says it can get a message to Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, in two to three days for free.

Kelly Jones, a graduate student in telecommunications and club member, said health and welfare messages of 25 words or less from family and friends can be trafficked to the U.S. Embassy.

He said nobody has tried to send a message yet because most of the people outside of the club probably don't know about the service.

The club, a registered student organization that works out of the Engineering and Technology Building, types a message into the computer which is then transmitted to the computer in Riyadh, he said.

"It would be just like any other electronic mail except it's going out over the air instead of going on the telephone lines," he said. "It's absolutely free of charge. Anyone that is interested can do it."

Jones said the soldier's name, troop number, rank and branch of military are necessary to get the message to Riyadh.

He said the message travels through Makanda, Maryland, Israel and then to Saudi Arabia.

"As opposed to telephone lines, radio waves aren't hindered by things such as downed lines," Jones said. "We can be on the air in a matter of minutes."

A spokesman for the U.S. Postal Service said it can deliver mail to the troops in 12 days from the time the letter is postmarked, depending on the location of the soldier.

The spokesman also said the government will sometimes hold mail during certain operations.

A spokeswoman for the U.S. Department of Defense said once the message reaches the embassy in Riyadh, it is forwarded to the troops through their regular mail.

Jones explained that the message has to go to Israel first because the United States does not have a third-party traffic agreement with Saudi Arabia.

He said he has sent messages directly to Saudi Arabia to see if they actually make it there, but has not received a reply yet.

Jones said he will try to send a message to the club's vice president, Robin Hannas, who is a Marine reservist serving in Operation Desert Storm.

"They (the person sending a message) may or may not get a reply back," he said. "The chances of them getting a reply back through the club are slim. But they may eventually mail something back to them."

The club has helped traffic messages during the 1985 hurricane near Jamaica and the hurricane that hit the Carolinas in 1989, as well as passing traffic in 1985 when a major earthquake struck Mexico, Jones said.

Size of oil spill in Gulf exaggerated - bulletin

NEW YORK (UPI) — The amount of oil said to be contained in a slick of Kuwaiti crude released into the Persian Gulf by Iraq in recent days is "greatly exaggerated," a newsletter specializing in oil spills said Wednesday.

Oil Spill Intelligence Report of Arlington, Mass. estimated the slick contained from 24 million to 40 million gallons of crude based on the 350 square mile area covered by the floating oil, which would make it two to two and a half times the March 1989 Exxon Valdez spill in Alaska.

But initial estimates placed the amount of crude at 11 million barrels, or 462 million gallons — about 42 times the 11 million gallons dumped into Prince William Sound in the Alaska spill. A barrel equals 42 gallons.

The gulf spill was estimated Wednesday to be around 7 million barrels, or 294 million gallons, by U.S. Coast Guard Capt. Donald Jensen, head of the six-member U.S. team sent to help combat the slick, and Dr. Nisar Tariq of Saudi Arabia's Meteorological and Environmental Protection Administration.

Jensen said, "The spill is rapidly becoming probably the largest in history."

But Oil Spill Intelligence Report said: "The reported estimates of the oil in the Persian Gulf that originated from the Sea Island terminal off the Kuwaiti coast we feel are greatly exaggerated."

Even though data on the Kuwaiti terminal's pumping rate are scarce, "our analysis, which has the support of many of our contacts in the field, tells us that the spill is more likely only two to three times the size of the Exxon Valdez spill," the newsletter said.

U.S.-led allied bombing of the terminal over the weekend is believed to have either stopped or slowed to a trickle the amount of oil still flowing into the gulf.

Lemieux back on ice for Penguins

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Pittsburgh Penguins center Mario Lemieux has a message for the rest of the National Hockey League — he's back.

Lemieux, a two-time scoring champion, has one goal and four assists in the two games he has played this season after almost 10 months off because of back surgery and a subsequent infection in a disc in his back.

"It feels good to be back," said Lemieux after he scored the tying goal and set up another in Pittsburgh's 3-2 overtime victory over the Washington Capitals Tuesday night that moved the Penguins into second place in the Patrick Division.

Lemieux received a standing ovation from the sellout crowd of 15,164 at the Civic Arena when he skated onto the ice before the game. The fans waved yellow cards sponsored by a local appliance store chain that proclaimed "Mario!".

well — back has healed. "I took a few shots out there but that was to be expected — a division game and Washington is pretty physical," said Lemieux. "I was prepared before the game for all the action."

Lemieux said he still is out of shape, and he realizes it will be awhile before he can regain the form that made him one of the top players in the NHL.

"Tonight I played a lot more, about 22 or 25 minutes," he said. "If I keep playing like that I'll get in shape. I still have a long way to go. It's only my second game in a while, and I'm not in very good shape yet. I feel like I'm probably 75-80 percent right now."

something right if he can create such a stir from the crowd.

Not only are these fans who scream, the foul language making the University look bad; but they are actually helping the other team.

"Saluki fan support is incredible. That's obvious by the Salukis' dominating 261-94 record in the Arena for the last 26 seasons. The students need to be commended for their support. Coach Herrin is repeatedly commenting on the sixth-man advantage his team has at home. But he said it's time for the vulgar language to stop.

"I appreciate the great support from the student body," Herrin said. "We need the fans' support. They can really motivate you out there on the floor, but I don't think there is a place for that in college basketball."

Tim Jackson, president of the Spirit Club, has tried his best to curtail the vulgarity by finding other things for fans to do to cheer the Salukis. He has made signs for fans to wave, bought pompons for people to wave and has taught many people the Saluki fight song and the cheers done by the Saluki cheerleaders.

Still he hasn't been able to curtail the profanity completely. His latest sign "GROW UP!" hopefully hit home Monday night at the game against Creighton.

"It's rude and it doesn't do anything for the University," Jackson said. "It's bad enough that we're known for our party image, but when the game is on television people think we're rude and don't know how to act at games."

SIUC Athletics Director Jim

Hart, who is also a graduate of SIUC, is frustrated by the problem. He's afraid if he tries to do something about the problem, it will get worse. But he doesn't want to keep his mouth shut about it.

"I'm embarrassed about it and if we're one fan and his family because of it, that's too many," Hart said. "I'm not a prude, but I'm saddened by this. This is my university too. I went here and when we were cheering in those years for Walt Frazier we never would have thought about doing something like that."

The solution is quite simple. Cheer, have fun, scream all you want, but keep it clean. The profanity isn't necessary and all anyone is doing is hurting themselves, the University and the Salukis.

overtime win during the 1983-84 season.

Despite the heartbreaking loss to Creighton, Herrin doesn't expect a let down during the Dawgs three-game road trip.

"We'll play with the same intensity level that we did against Creighton," he said. "Our intensity level is probably the key to our success. We've got nine ballgames left and if we can win these next three, we could be leading the Valley."

SIUC is in a three-way tie with Tulsa and Wichita State for third place in the MVC with a 4-3 mark. Southwest Missouri leads the conference at 7-2 and Creighton is a game behind at 6-3.

"A break here and there and I think we'll be back on top," junior forward Kelvan Lawrence said. "Plus, once we get back on top again, I don't think we'll give it up."

Following the Bradley game tonight, the Salukis stop in at Illinois State Saturday and travel to Southwest Missouri Wednesday.

Baltimore will scout Palmer soon

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Baltimore Orioles General Manager Roland Hemond said Wednesday he will have a scout observe Jim Palmer, the Hall of Fame pitcher who has been working out since mid-December in an attempt at an unprecedented comeback.

If the 45-year-old Palmer is successful, the three-time Cy Young Award winner would be the first Hall of Fame inductee to play again. Palmer's 19-season career, all with the Orioles, ended in May 1984.

"We're waiting for Jim Palmer to tell us when he'd like us to watch him throw," said Hemond, in Washington promoting two exhibition games April 6-7 at RFK Stadium vs. the Boston Red Sox. Hemond said the Orioles could scout Palmer as soon as next week.

Asked if there is room for Palmer on the club, Hemond said, "You're always looking to get better. Jim is a remarkable athlete who stays in the top physical shape."

Hemond said he saw Palmer early last week at Memorial Stadium where they discussed his comeback bid. "To me he looks about 32," the general manager said.

Palmer, currently one of the Orioles' television announcers and a favorite among fans, has been throwing under the supervision of University of Miami assistant coach Lazaro Collazo. He has a new windup, says his pitches have reached 86 mph and his curve is better than when he last pitched.

Should he return to the majors, Palmer has said he wants it to be with the Orioles, and Hemond echoed those sentiments.

demonstrate the dogs' skills at locating dummies, but will offer owners instructions on training their dogs.

Glisson said Bruce Ritter's black powder firearms instruction will be especially important due to the fact that Illinois has added a new deer season for this type of firearm.

While the majority of the crowd has been people from local towns and others traveling in from Kentucky and Missouri, Glisson hopes the show will attract more students this year.

The show runs from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $3.00, children 12 and under are free when accompanied by an adult.
