Picking 'Em Up

Puff, Puff, Puff, Puff, Puff, Puff, Puff, Puff

By Dean Rebuffoni

Okay, men, once more around the old track.

Let's go, fellas, pick 'em up and put 'em down, pick 'em up and put 'em down, pick 'em up and...Hey! Where's Leroy? Wasn't Leroy with us on that last lap? He was? Well, where is he now? Leroy! Oh, Leroy!

(And on the other side of the McAndrew Stadium track, down in the shade of the magnolia trees, sits Leroy--perspiring and retiring, a dropout from the game.)

The name of the game? Jogging--that old but new way to physical fitness, a rigor fast becoming a national pastime.

Our jogger Leroy is actually an imaginary character: SIU has other joggers who haven't taken to the shade. In fact, there is a small, devoted, determined group of individuals who make jogging part of their regular routine--and they're not Jim Ryun-type jocks either, but faculty and administration personnel in the 25-50 age range. Definitely not youngsters on a lark.

"These are highly-motivated individuals," Ronald G. Knowlton, assistant professor in the Department of Men's Physical Education, says. "They're jogging because they have developed the pastime into a daily routine. It's vital, important for them now--and they feel physically better, too."

Knowlton should know: the jogging group which regularly uses the McAndrew Stadium track--usually six to eight in number--is part of an "outgrowth" of the Department of Men's Physical Education's physical fitness program for faculty and staff.

The joggers (you might have seen them during the noon hour--making their circles of the track) aren't really masochists: like Knowlton says, they're enjoying what they're doing--and that first painful t-shoe blister is now a thing of the past. Some of the joggers, in fact, have been taking part in jogging for three years, since the beginnings of the physical fitness program at SIU.

And they're not all SIU personnel either: "We've had Carbondale businessmen and professional people in the program also," Knowlton says. "Some of the program's participants take part in the 'less-demanding' activities such as volleyball and basketball, but our really determined participants jog."

And jog, jog, jog. One of their often-taken routes is some four miles in length: out Route 51, down Reservoir Road, and farther on, on, on.

But what keeps them jogging besides the obvious physical rewards?

"For one thing, the camaraderie," Knowlton says. "It acts as a 'sugar-coated pill' and carries the group along. The rewards aren't all physical either--there is a real psychological benefit involved."

Knowlton doesn't think of jogging--or the SIU physical fitness program in particular--as a casual thing. He is a believer in the philosophy of "aerobic power": the physiological ability to absorb and utilize environmental oxygen during exertion. As such, he doesn't see jogging as the answer to everyone's physical fitness problems.

"A person desiring to take part in such a program should get medical clearance before starting," Knowlton says. "Then he should get into some existing physical fitness program. Supervision and encouragement are needed at the very beginning--and realistic goals."

Like Knowlton says, realistic goals are needed; it probably wouldn't be too wise to try the "round-the-campus-and-back" route on your first jog--it's a big campus and it's a long, hot summer.

If you do decide to start off with a long hot jog, you might end up like our imaginary friend Leroy: resting in the shade, listening to the camaraderie of the regular, experienced joggers echoing off the bleachers in McAndrew Stadium.

Hijacked Jet Returns Without 57 Passengers

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)--ADC8 jetliner forced to Cuba by a daring young hijacker with a grenade and a gun returned to Miami Wednesday afternoon but its 57 passengers were left behind in Havana. It was the second airliner this month forced to return to the United States with only its crew.

The four-engine National Airlines jet touched down at Miami International Airport at 5:11 p.m. EDT, completing a flight it began earlier Wednesday in Los Angeles.

FBI agents met the plane for a quick conference with the crew. The stewardesses, dressed in orange, lemon and lime colored uniforms, joked with the officers and smiled at bystanders as they were herded off to customs.

Officials at Havana's Jose Marti Airport, where seven hijacked commercial planes have landed this year, said they detained the Northwest passengers because the DC8 was too large to take off safely on the 10,000-foot runway.

Two Doctoral Exams Moved

Doctoral Spanish and French examinations will be given in Lawson Hall instead of in Wheeler Hall as previously scheduled, according to Howard French, acting chairman of the Department of Foreign Languages.

Candidates planning to take the Spanish examination should meet in Lawson, Room 101, by 10 a.m. Saturday. Those taking the French examination should meet in Lawson, Rooms 121 and 131, at 10 a.m. Saturday.

Miss Grace E. Kite, SIU assistant professor of library humanities, has an unusual hobby—the collection of antique apostle spoons. Displayed are 11 of her 14-spoon collection showing the three-dimensional statues of the apostles on the end of the slender stems.

Apostle Spoons

Antique Spoon Hobby Appropriate For Research, Travel Combination

By Inez Rencher

Few people would think of paying $984 (410 pounds) for a spoon, but some spoons cost even more than this.

Miss Grace E. Kite, SIU assistant professor of library humanities, who recently returned from a European sabbatical leave, has studied apostle spoons valued at as much as $1,300.

Apostle spoons are rare, fourteenth century sterling silver spoons with small three-dimensional statues of Christ and the biblical apostles on the tip of the stem. An entire set consists of 13, Christ and the 12 original followers. Often, however, the apostle Judas, who betrayed Christ, is replaced in the set by one of the later apostles.

Miss Kite, who became interested in the apostle spoons two years ago, combined library research, her spoon hobby and travel during nine months abroad. Among the places she visited were England, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland, France, Austria and Italy.

At the British Museum, Miss Kite was permitted to examine an exclusive collection of apostle spoons in the museum's British Antiquity section. She also studied books on the subjects from the museum library.

Lecture Set for Friday

"Fluorescence and Electron Microscopy of Antigen-Antibody Reaction" is the title of a lecture to be given by Isaac Shechmeister of the SIU Department of Microbiology at 10:30 a.m. Friday in Lawson Hall, Room 101.

The Victoria and Albert Museum in London offered her a view through large glass cases of a broad collection of the spoons. She was able to get information from this museum library, which she regards as "one of the finest art libraries in the world."

Miss Kite briefly looked through books about apostle spoons in one of the small undergraduate college libraries at Cambridge. This library has two partial sets of the spoons.

"Most of us don't realize we didn't always have spoons," Miss Kite noted.

An enthusiast on the subject, she collects as much information as she can about the antique spoons. She talked with collectors abroad and had information copied from rare books while at the Victoria and Albert Museum.

Miss Kite had hoped to start a bibliography on apostle spoons, but she said the information sources are in Europe and would make the work of little value to most Americans.

During the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, apostle spoons were popular in America, she said. However, today Huntington Library in California has reunited the only original early European set.

Fourteen apostle spoons comprise Miss Kite's own modestly-valued collection. She has three from a set of small early English tea spoons; two from a set of large rococo English Victorian spoons, and two large spoons made in Chester, England, about 1905.

Most of the spoons have long slender stems and an ornate nubby or top on the head of the apostle figure. Excluding the very small tea spoons, the mouths of the spoons are large and fish-shaped (just the opposite of modern spoons).

"Believe me! I've tried it, and they're hard to eat with," Miss Kite said.

Senate Gives Okay To 'Stop and Frisk' Bill

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—The Illinois Senate Wednesday passed a compromise bill authorizing police to stop and frisk a person suspected of crime or criminal intent.

The vote, 52 to 2, was more than the two-thirds required to make the bill immediately effective if it has similar success in the House.

The compromise bill differed from one the Senate refused to adopt Monday in one major respect: instead of applying only to felonies, the measure also covers misdemeanors.

The Senate refused Monday to override a vote by former Gov. Otto Kerner of a bill which the Republican Senate majority had pushed through the 1967 General Assembly.

Alton Boy Drowned In Lake Murphysboro

A three-year-old Alton boy was drowned Tuesday evening while playing with his brother at Lake Murphysboro.

He was identified as Gregory Nolan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Nolan.

According to Sheriff's officers, the child had gone to the boatdock about 6 p.m. with an older brother, Lloyd, 9.

They said Lloyd evidently attempted to jump into a row-boat moored at the dock, but missed. In trying to get out of the water he pulled in the younger boy. A bystander, Clarence Drysdale, Belleville, rescued Lloyd.

Divers found the body in 15 feet of water. Fire department rescue units from Carbondale, Murphysboro, Chester and DuQuoin responded, along with individual divers.

Bruce Talley, Carterville, found the body about midnight.

Students Hear Sewing Talk With Fall Fashion Preview

SIU clothing and textiles students got a preview of fall fashions recently when Mrs. Diane Seckinger, educational representative for McCalls Patterns, gave an illustrated talk on home sewing.

Four of the new looks Mrs. Seckinger described for fall were: (1) The "Put Together" Look—separates; (2) The Leather Look—use of both real leather and a nylon fabric that looks like leather; (3) The Pretty Girl Look—long sleeves, ruffles, braid, soft feminine materials; (4) The Cowgirl Look—Annie Oakley-type fringed edges, a prevalence of vest.

"The very best" color for fall will be grey, in pin-stripes, Glenplaid, menswear grey, and plaids, Mrs. Seckinger said. Grey will also be used often with an accent color such as red.

Browns will also be good, accented by other tones. "Bonnie and Clyde" gangster stripes will still be seen as will "happy colors" and "back to school" colors.

The most popular fabrics will range from wide-wale and printed corduroy to crushed wrinkled velvets, wools and wool blends.

Mrs. Seckinger gave the students tips on sewing with leather (using rubber cement

German Enigma Won't Go Away

The "recognitionists" in West Germany continue to gain strength—and so add to the problems besetting the Kiesinger-Brandt coalition in Bonn. Heinrich Albertz is more exactly a West Berliner than a West German, but he is a member of the Socialist Party of Willy Brandt, whom he succeeded briefly in the mayoralty of West Berlin. He is an ordained minister of the Evangelical Church and is on the right rather than the left of his party. Consequently his call for full-scale recognition of East Germany by West Germany is bound to have political impact right across his divided homeland.

Ironically, both the growth of "recognitionist" sentiment and the reversion to cold-war toughness on the right in West Germany are the outgrowth of the Kiesinger-Brandt coalition's efforts to improve relations, or at least to reknit threads, between West and East Germany. Until the coalition took over, it was the East Germans who had been doing all the dovelike cooing across the Elbe. But as soon as the West Germans cooed back, the East Germans started snarling—and are still doing it. They bluntly say: Recognition or no game. Apparently they have calculated with some shrewdness that the German yearning for reunification will force the Bonn coalition's (or its successor's) hand into recognition, if they hold out long enough against the West German cooing which started 19 months ago.

All this could be dismissed as yet another step in a complicated minuet that has been going on for a long time, were it not for the fact that German dynamism can be neither bottled up nor disregarded forever. Sooner or later, the Germans are going to make even greater efforts than hitherto to be masters of their own future, if they come to feel that the commitments accepted by them since the end of World War II are hindering rather than helping reunification.

With Germans, the prospect of any end-of-century Yalta would produce a vigorous reaction. They abhor the thought of their future's being settled by a Soviet-United States concert above their heads. In extremis, they might try to head this off with another kind of concert—an end-of-century Rapallo between just the Russians and themselves. But that would be abhorrent to much of the rest of Europe, indeed to the rest of the Atlantic world.

What former Mayor Albertz has just done is hardly the precursor to either another Yalta or another Rapallo. But his initiative is a healthy reminder that the one way not to deal with the German problem is to do nothing and hope that it will go away. It won't.

A Poverty War Suggestion

Since the formation of the federal-sponsored Economic Opportunity Commission several years ago, San Luis Obispo county is now looking for a new president—the 13th since the inception of the program. Other areas in the nation have experienced a similar situation.

The program, no matter how worthy, has not been able to bring about the results that the government had hoped, although there are bright spots such as the Head Start program, the Grass Roots program, and perhaps others. The claim that there is too much red tape and that the program is too heavy with salaries and other expenses before it is able to reach those for whom it was organized, the poor, is one that many agree with, or at least question.

A suggestion that might work, but probably will never be accepted is this. Why not have the churches of the nation administer it? Most churches are well organized, have dedicated people working in all communities, and perhaps ministers of these local churches know more about the poor than any other group in the country. As a matter of fact, the church has always been concerned with people and has been known to help those in need long before any thought was given to it by the bureaucrats in Washington.

Most all church denominations are organized on a national, state and local level. It would seem that they would be ideally set up to handle this program. In most cities and towns the churches are working together more and more, and Catholic and Protestant members are uniting on many problems for the betterment of their communities. We think a study should be made of the possibility of the churches being used officially in the war on poverty program. We think it could be mighty effective in reaching the goals, and at the same time less expensive to the nation's taxpayers.

What Kind of World?

Adversary Best Way to Deal With Crime?

By Robert M. Hutchins

Judge Warren E. Burger of the U.S. Court of Appeals raised with the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions the question of the administration of criminal justice.

The issue he wanted discussed was fundamental: Is the adversary system the best way of dealing with crime?

This system expects to get at the truth by putting the state and its lawyers against the accused and his lawyers, with a neutral judge presiding and 12 ordinary citizens deciding whether or not the prisoner committed the crime as charged.

Only Anglo-American jurisdictions follow this system. In most of Europe, for example, a criminal case can be called neither adversary nor accusatorial. It is an inquiry. It is an investigation conducted by or under the auspices of the judiciary.

At a meeting of judges and lawyers at the center, Judge Burger asked which system worked better. His studies suggested to him that the citizen of Holland or Denmark was at least as well protected as the American by the administration of criminal justice.

Since the Dutch and Danish judges are professionals with long training, they can and do proceed much more expeditiously than their American counterparts. There is no protracted trial with opposing lawyers trying to get the better of each other. Since there is usually no jury, there are no rules excluding evidence on the ground that it will prejudice the jury. Judge Burger felt that a man accused of crime in Holland or Denmark would have as good a chance of being fairly treated during and after the investigation as he would in the United States.

Criminal appeals in this country are seldom if ever directed to the guilt or innocence of the defendant. The appellate court reviews the conduct of the police, the prosecutor and the trial judge to see whether any of them infringed any of the prisoner's rights. The object of the court is to regulate the administration of justice, in future cases rather than to pass on the case before it. The guilt of the accused may be taken for granted. When it reverses a judgment, the court is saying that persons accused of crime, guilty or innocent, must not be treated the way this defendant was treated.

Some American rules have nothing to do with guilt or innocence. They are designed to control the officers of the law. For example, the United States, and the United States alone, forbids the introduction of evidence illegally obtained. This is a desperate remedy adopted because our courts have been able to think of no other way of enforcing the constitutional prohibition against unlawful searches and seizures.

The government is rich and powerful. The ordinary criminal defendant is poor and weak. An adversary system must, therefore, seek to equalize the combat in every way it can. It must provide the accused with counsel. It must protect him by every imaginable device from the ignorance, hostility or excessive zeal of policemen, prosecutors, judges and juries.

The Supreme Court under Chief Justice Earl Warren has taken these responsibilities very seriously. At the center meeting there was general agreement that the chances that an innocent man would be found guilty were now almost nil. But it was suggested that the same could be said of Holland and Denmark, and that in those countries the same or better results appeared to be obtained with only a fraction of the delay, expense and frustrations common in the American system.

We were told that in this country it now takes three and a half times as long to try a criminal case as it did 10 years ago.

Everybody at the meeting thought the British system worked better than the American and no worse than that of Holland or Denmark.

But the British have an adversary system. This seems to show that the essential difficulty in this country is not the system, but the way it is operated.

What the British have in common with the Danes and the Dutch is high professional standards for bench, bar and police.

It may be that the development of similar standards in this country is the solution of our problem of criminal justice.

The shinto wedding ceremony is the most popular in Japan. Here, a priest is reciting prayers during the ceremony. Seated on the left are the two "nakodos," one for the bride and one for the groom. This wedding was June 27 in Tokyo.

Wedding Aim Shinto-Style: No Seconds

By John
Durbin

John Durbin, a junior majoring in journalism, is working as a summer intern on the Pacific Stars and Stripes in Tokyo. He is also serving as a correspondent for the Daily Egyptian.

TOKYO--After a young Japanese man and woman who plan to marry have been formally introduced by their respective "nakodos," it is time to make wedding arrangements. Until this time each family may have formulated some tentative ideas, but it is not until after the formal meeting that the wheels really begin to turn.

The first order of business is the selection of a wedding date by both the couple and their respective parents. Contrary to the United States' traditional "June weddings," November, February and March are the marriage months in Japan.

The Japanese people consider November an extremely lucky month because it follows October which is looked upon as a "god-less" period. November is also a popular month for marriages because the fresh fall weather makes for a colorful and pleasant time of year.

It has been noted that sometimes in November religious priests may perform as many as 30 ceremonies in one day. Four types of wedding ceremonies exist in Japan-Shinto, Buddhist, Christian and civil. Shinto is by far the most common with more than 50 percent of Japanese weddings performed through this type of ceremony.

The bride's wedding apparel in the typical Shinto ceremony consists of three flower-decorated robes. The outer robe is made of pure white silk material while the two robes underneath are of varying colors.

Since the majority of Japanese girls have short hair, the young bride will purchase an expensive wig and fix it into a special type of hairdo for the wedding, called "Taka-Shimada." Around her head the bride wears a white band "Tsunokakushi" which signifies her pledge to be patient and obedient to her husband in marriage. The band also reminds the bride that she shall never become angry or jealous. Jealousy is a vice strongly looked down on by the Japanese people.

Because of the tremendous expense the bride's wedding garments incur, it is now common practice for most young women to rent their wedding clothes. In olden times the young woman's parents would purchase the expensive kimonos for the wedding and rarely would the young lady ever wear them again after the wedding ceremony.

The groom's traditional wedding attire consists of a silk shirt and a coat worn over a kimono. In most cases, however, the young man wears a tuxedo similar to those found in the United States.

The actual ceremony may last anywhere from 15 minutes to several hours depending upon the plans of the families involved. Expensive weddings with a number of hired musicians may last for hours.

Unlike in the United States where people flock to churches where a relative or friend may be getting married, in a Shinto ceremony only the parents, "nakodos," relatives and a few close friends of the families attend. For example, the wedding ceremony pictured above was attended by only 25 persons.

At the ceremony there is an altar where the gods of marriage are placed. The groom and his parents sit on one side of the altar and face the bride; her parents are on the other side. The "nakodos" sit facing the altar.

There are usually two, but sometimes three priests officiating at the ceremony. One serves as the high priest and recites all of the prayers. The "nakodos" also recite a number of prayers at the ceremony.

Following the recitation of prayers, two "Miko" maidens approach the altar and present cups of sake (Japanese rice wine) to both the bride and the groom. After two different cups of wine are given to both the bride and the groom, a much larger cup of sake is presented to both in succession to drink. This latter cup is to signify the union between the bride and the groom.

After the couple has finished the wine drinking ritual, small cups of sake are passed to all of the persons attending in congratulations to the now-married couple.

The wedding party moves to the reception hall which is normally located in the same building where the ceremony was held.

With the wedding ceremony out of the way, the couple has only begun the problems that married life brings.

Sign Language

Gary Ammon, SIU senior, looks at typical sign-language gesture as he sits with wife, Betty, in their home in University Trailer Courts on Carbondale Campus.

Interpreting for Deaf Churchgoers Evolves from Youngster's Curiosity

An 11-year-old boy's curiosity during a 1957 church service blossomed into an interest that changed his hands into ears for hundreds of persons.

Gary Ammon, now an SIU senior, was the boy in a Baptist congregation at Ridgcrest, N.C., who wondered what was happening in an auditorium corner while the minister was preaching.

When the service was ended, young Gary raced down the aisle to learn that deaf persons had been receiving the pastor's message through an interpreter's sign language. Then and there Gary, who expects to finish his work here in December for a bachelor's degree in business management, determined he wanted to interpret sermons for the deaf.

During the next five years he learned the sign language from Mr. and Mrs. E.A. Oze in his home town of Harrisburg, Ill., and read what books he could find on the subject.

In 1962 Gary decided he was far enough along to put his knowledge to work. That year he began teaching a Sunday School class for the deaf and interpreting the morning worship sermons for them at the First Baptist Church in Harrisburg. He carried on Sunday after Sunday, until the summer of 1967, when his college work at Carbondale forced him to stop.

Gary, a husky six-foot blond who played prep football, completed two years at Southeastern Illinois College at Harrisburg and entered SIU a little more than a year ago. He left his Harrisburg interpreting job in the hands of Mrs. Wilbur Barger, a Sunday School teacher who had become interested in the sign language and learned it from Ammon and the Ozees.

Now Ammon, who once interpreted a sermon at Ridgcrest attended by 500 deaf persons and 2,500 hearing people including the noted Billy Graham, is planning to start his work in Carbondale. Cooperating with him are the University Baptist and Lantana Baptist churches in the city. Two Carbondale women will assist in the venture. He said a number of persons are expressing an eagerness to take part. Both those who are deaf and persons who can hear want to learn the sign language.

McCarthy Committee to Meet

The Southern Illinois McCarthy for President Committee will host an open house at 8 this evening at the home of Professor J. J. Leonard, 1701 Colonial Dr.

Persons representing an independent slate of electors favoring McCarthy will be present at the meeting to discuss various programs to support the Minnesota Senator.

Mrs. George McClure, a spokesman for the McCarthy for President Committee, said an attempt will be made to

His exact schedule has not been finalized, but the young interpreter plans to alternate monthly between the two churches. Ammon and his wife, Betty, who have a home in the University Trailer Court, hold their membership in the University Baptist Church.

The 22-year-old student, who does all his work without compensation, hopes to continue with it after graduation on a part-time basis. However, he confided, he would go full time "if I could get the opportunity to work with Billy Graham."

He said he can interpret as fast as a minister can preach. However, he explained, he interprets ideas instead of giving the exact wording.

"I take the minister's phrases, slice them, rearrange them, and paint a mental picture," he said.

Gary is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Ernest Ammon. He lived in Harrisburg most of his life, when his father pastored churches in the area and was for ten years the associational missionary for the Saline Baptist Association. The father now pastors the Raleigh Baptist Church near Harrisburg.

Gary's wife is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Williams of Harrisburg and is employed in the Illinois Division of Highways office in Carbondale. She completed a year of work at Southeastern Illinois and plans to return to college when her husband is graduated. Right now she hopes to go into special education to learn to work with the hard-of-hearing.

Former SIU Student Killed, Three Hurt in Auto Accident

Charles M. Green Jr., a 21-year-old former SIU student, was killed and three others were injured in a one-car accident early Wednesday morning on Route 13, two miles east of Carbondale.

Green, the driver of the car, was pronounced dead on arrival at Doctors Memorial Hospital. The other passengers, James L. Cooper, 20, and Gary Tyner, 19, both of Cambria, and Victor Waldron, 20, of Herrin, were listed Wednesday afternoon in satisfactory condition by hospital officials.

According to state police reports, Green's car left the road and struck a tree and a utility pole. Electric power in the east part of Carbondale was interrupted for about an hour when a power line was damaged in the accident.

Green is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Green Sr. Green is a VTI assistant professor on special assignment to Afghanistan presently in the United States on leave.

Visitation for Green will be today at the Hoffman Funeral Home in Carbondale. The funeral service will be at 11 a.m. Friday at the Cambria Baptist Church in Cambria.

Follies Auditions Announced

The Activities Programming Board has announced auditions for the 5th annual Southern Follies will be held July 24 and 25 at 7:30 p.m. in Davis Auditorium of Wham Education Building.

The talent show is open to individuals and groups in all types of entertainment.

Students interested can register by identifying themselves or their group and the type of entertainment at the Activities Programming

Board Office, Room A, at University Center. Registration must be complete by 5 p.m. July 24.

Trophies will be awarded to the first, second and third place winners.

Positions for the Southern Follies steering committee are still open and information and applications available at the Activities Programming Board office or by calling 3-2772.

Footpaths Near Completion

Pedestrian students living east of Wall St. and south of Grand Ave. will find it a little easier to get to campus in the future.

According to Karl. Condiff of the Physical Plant, two bridges and two six-foot-wide paths should be finished within the next three weeks. These paths will connect Wall St. with the drive leading to the University Park facilities.

Paths will be blacktopped and lighted similar to those in Thompson Woods. They

Botanist Schmid Back From Research Confab

Walter E. Schmid, associate professor of botany, has just returned from the Gordon Research Conference at the Tilton Academy, Tilton, N.H.

Sponsored by industry, the summer-long series of sessions is designed to bring out results of information from industrial, government, and university laboratories before it is published in professional journals.

Schmid attended the session dealing with chemical substances and their effects when used for fungi, insect, or weed control.

African Reflects on SIU

Ebenezer E. Epie, SIU student from Africa, has found his foreign accent to be an invaluable asset in getting acquainted with Americans.

"When they realize I am a foreigner, by hearing my accent, they want to be very helpful," Epie said of his experience as a student in this country.

Epie is the son of an African village chief and formerly an education officer for the Ministry of Education in West Cameroon.

Kibler to Speak

Robert J. Kibler, associate director of the Communications Research Center at Purdue University, will speak on communications theory and its relationship to the teaching of reading and English at 1 p.m. Monday in Davis Auditorium of Wham Educational Building.

Kibler, who received his Ph.D. from Ohio State University in 1962, was head of the Educational Research Bureau at SIU in 1964-66. He has also headed an Air Force research project in psycholinguistics and readability and is the author of a textbook titled "Communications."

The program is part of a six-week NDEA Institute in Reading and English now being conducted by the SIU Reading Center under a $45,000 grant from the U.S. Office of Education.

A native of Ikilwindi-Kumba, Epie received his bachelor's degree in geology in 1964 from Aligarh Muslim University in Aligarh, India. He came to the United States in September, 1966, to attend SIU on a graduate fellowship from the African-American Institute.

After one and a half years of graduate study in geology, he was awarded a master of science degree at the University's June commencement. In recognition of achievement in geology, he has been invited to become a member of two professional societies, the American Association of Petroleum Geologists and the Geological Society of America.

Hoping to have experience in geological survey and to work with the Ministry of Mines in West Cameroon, he will spend six months practical training with the U.S. Geological Survey in Albany, N.Y.

While at SIU, Epie was active in international student activities. He was president of the African Student Association, in which 68 students from 22 African countries are enrolled.

In June he represented the University at the 12th annual Williamsburg International Assembly in Williamsburg, Va. In talking with students from 56 different countries, he said all seemed to have experienced the friendly help of Americans in one way or another.

Ebenezer E. Epie of Kumba, West Cameroon, left, seeks advice from an international student consultant at SIU, Frank Sehnert, before leaving for six months practical training with the U.S. Geological Survey. The son of the village chief of Ikilwindi-Kumba is a candidate for a master's degree in geology at Summer Commencement, August 30.

Four Baseball Salukis Join Summer League

Four members of SIU's second-place NCAA baseball finishers are playing in the Central Illinois Collegiate League this summer.

The CICL is made up of teams from Bloomington, Lincoln, Peoria, Springfield, and Galesburg. Galesburg is leading the league with a 10-4 record. Bloomington is in last place with a 4-8 mark and Lincoln has a 6-9 mark.

For third baseman Barry O'Sullivan, it's been a good summer playing for Bloomington. Presently, O'Sullivan is the only Saluki hitting anywhere near his season's average.

Bob Blakley, Skip Pitlock, and Bob Ash are also playing for the CICL this summer. O'Sullivan is hitting .286 with three doubles, a homer, and four RBI's for his first 12 games with the Bloomington Bobcats.

O'Sullivan, a junior third baseman from East St. Louis, turned down a pro offer from the Boston Red Sox to preserve his last year of eligibility. With the Salukis, O'Sullivan had a .296 average which included 16 extra base hits and 34 RBI's.

His fielding, a trouble spot this spring, at Bloomington is .910 for a team that is averaging .954.

Ash, a teammate of O'Sullivan's at Bloomington, has an 0-1 record, losing his only start 5-3 to Peoria. He gave up 13 hits.

As a relief pitcher for the Salukis, Ash earned a respectable 6-2 record for the season and boasted a 2.38 earned run average.

Blakley and Pitlock are teammates for the Lincoln College team and both are having a rough summer.

As an SIU freshman, Blakley, a first baseman, pounded out 19 of his 40 hits in a .265 season for two or more bases. At Lincoln, he is hitting a lowly .125 with all three of his hits in 24 times at bat being singles. He has only two RBI's.

Pitlock, the losing pitcher in the College World Series finale against Southern California, is 1-3 for the 6-9 Lincoln team. Last year the team won both halves of the CICL and Pitlock was the league's winningest pitcher.

This summer Pitlock has pitched 18 innings, surrendering 11 hits, 14 walks, and eight earned runs. He has struck out 21 batters.

As a sophomore with the Salukis, Pitlock was the most valuable pitcher with a 7-1 season and a 2.96 ERA. During the past year, he slumped to a 4-3 season and a 4.45 ERA. Coach Joe Lutz's newest Saluki, Steve Webber, a transfer from Muscatine, Ia., Junior College, will play for the 1969 team.

He has pitched eight innings, walked 10 and struck out six. His record is 1-1.

Lutz pins the low averages on the fact that it will take a while for the boys to adjust to their teammates and the caliber of competition.

Three Teams Tied For Class 'A' Lead In Intramural Softball

SIU's summer intramural softball program has jumped into full swing with 19 games in the first week of action.

In the 16-inch division, Class A play, My Wonder, The Life and Rathole Recluses are in a three-way tie for first place with 1-0 records. The Sixth Floor Raiders are 0-1 and the Guzzlers trail the league with an 0-2 record.

In the B division, the Real Leo's own a half game lead with a 1-0 record compared with 1-1 records held by Dennis Douglas Raiders and the Bluestone Rangers. RHO Club, Floor Four and Brand X have yet to play.

In the 12-inch league, Forest Hall has a comfortable hold on first place in the A division with a 3-0 record. CGA and The Abstractors are both 1-1. The Probables are 0-1 and Delta Chi is winless in two games.

The Sike and Microbiology teams are both 1-0 in the B division with the Aggies 1/2 games behind with a 1-1 mark. Storm Troopers and Psi Stars are both 0-1 with Tau Kappa Epsilon yet to play.

Kalines Corners and Politicos both have a hold on first place in the C division with 2-0 records. The Redbirds are close behind with a 1-0 slate. RU and The Mets are winless in two games.

The 16-inch division is the fast-pitch league and pitchers are not required to put an arch on the ball. The 12-inch is the slow-pitch league with hurlers required to arch the ball to the plate.
