Federal Reserve chief search continues

By Frank Cornish
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The dollar under fresh pressure abroad, President Carter and his staff continued a top-priority search Monday for a new Federal Reserve Board chief.

During last week's Cabinet upheaval, Carter tagged Federal Reserve chairman G. William Miller to be his new treasury secretary. White House press secretary Jody Powell told a group of broadcast reporters Monday: "That (Miller's) replacement will have our top priority and will be the decision, the replacement, that is probably named first."

Powell reported that White House meetings on finding a new chief central banker were held Sunday and Monday. Global uncertainty about the significance of Carter's dramatic moves to revive his presidency put new pressure on the dollar in world money markets Monday as the price of gold bounded back over $300 an ounce.

Powell acknowledged that the changes ordained by Carter were bound to spark "some degree of disturbance" and said that is why the president acted swiftly to accept five Cabinet resignations, including that of Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal.

The White House spokesman reported he and his associates were encouraged by results of a new Gallup poll that indicated 36 percent of 539 Americans who were questioned believe Carter's Cabinet and staff changes will help the economy.

Of those surveyed, 12 percent thought the shakeup would make matters worse, 42 percent thought it might make no difference and 10 percent were not sure.

Citing the figures, Powell said: "There has been a great deal of semi-hysteria here in Washington, which I think, based on this most recent Gallup poll, has been confined to this side of the Potomac."

Powell also reported Carter will be giving fresh attention this week to the drive for congressional approval of the $142 billion energy program he outlined last week before the administration facelifted its center stage.

The press secretary echoed remarks he made Sunday that "there will be additional focusing of the president's attention on the Energy Mobilization Board and the Energy Security Corp." These are key elements in his policy blueprint.

Kennedy presents own energy plan

By James Litke
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., called for a "new energy crunch" Monday, asking for a nationwide" "raiders of the OPEC nations."

— mobilize the "free enterprise" system to develop alternative energy sources, such as synthetic fuels, solar power and "other products of American ingenuity."

— and provide protection for poor people and small businesses that are hardest by skyrocketing energy costs.

The senator said the plan will put funding into areas where the energy crisis has been most severe and will create 400,000 new jobs, many of them in inner cities. Kennedy said Americans are in a "state of crisis" and that they can do better than that.

"Senator Kennedy said his program would — expand national energy conservation efforts — provide incentives for increased oil exploration outside the OPEC nations.

"Let us not delude ourselves that the ultimate cold war in Washington allows us to see accurately into the future and decide which of today's possible technologies will provide us the wiser answers for tomorrow's energy needs," he said.

"But America is to retain its position of world leadership," he added. "We cannot afford to play OPEC roulette with our energy future."

Concerning nuclear power, Kennedy said that after three decades and tens of billions of dollars of development spending, "America's marriage to the atom is over.

"We can build our nuclear plants safely, unless complex technology of their waste handling is effectively, we should not build them at all," he said.

Kennedy, the chairman of the Senate health and energy subcommittee, said another issue challenging the nation as it looks ahead for the decade is national health insurance.

"We can pass national health insurance, and make health care in this rich land available to all, but still not just an expensive privilege for the few," he said.

Ford berates energy department

By James Landers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford said Monday that the United States "must modify its energy regulations" to promote crude oil and coal production to lower domestic energy prices.

"We must stop the price gouging on the oil industry and begin domestic energy development," he said.

He said the department's policy of regulation "has caused more difficulty than solution of the energy problem...We are more dependent today on OPEC than five years ago."

Ford advocated reducing price controls on the oil industry to help stimulate domestic oil development. "The Senate is divided on the issue," he said, "but the administration's view is that for business and industry and conseved environmental restrictions, should help alleviate the supply problem. Ford said wage and price controls are not workable and would be "disastrous."

Despite his emphasis on the immediate need for tax breaks for energy production and for easing environmental restrictions, Ford said he was optimistic about the strength of the economy and government.

Efforts to aid ‘boat people’ increased

By S.V. Suppiah

Associated Press Writer

SINGAPORE (AP) - An indirect German government pledge took effect Monday for a mission into the South China Sea in search of Vietnamese “boat people,” part of a growing sea-rescue operation by American and other ships.

The West German Embassy in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, reported Monday that two West German patrol vessels would soon be in the area. They were allowed to leave MALAYSIA because the united German government has guaranteed it will accept them for resettlement, embassy officials said.

Malaysian Prime Minister Hussein Onn said Monday his government will not lift its anti-refugee naval blockade, despite progress made over the weekend on an international conference on the heinous refugee situation. At that conference, in Geneva, Switzerland, the United States and other participating nations made pledges to resettle a total of 260,000 of the estimated 1 million refugees now in Southeast Asian nations, to contribute $190 million to the relief program and to help establish new refugee transit centers in the region.

Hussein said he was awaiting a full report on the conference and that the blockade would not be lifted until Malaysia was satisfied that all 72,500 refugees on its soil will be taken away by third countries.

In reinforcing the blockade, Malaysian authorities on the west coast of Borneo, 10 miles off the coast of Sarawak, have begun checking boats under 80 feet, the last time Malaysia took in Vietnamese refugees. Those ejected from Malaysia in June were taken away from the region.

The Italian navy has rescued 16,000 Vietnamese in the past month and the Italian embassy in Kuala Lumpur said Monday that the Italian navy will continue its rescue efforts, coinciding with the West German pledge.

The average price of regular gas in the Carbondale area is 96.9 cents per gallon. The lowest price is 92.9 cents at Larry's Truck Plaza, on the outskirts of Murphysboro.

The Italian navy will continue its rescue efforts, coinciding with the West German pledge.

On Monday, Fina regular cost $1.50, and Martin regular cost $1.11. The Italian Navy force took out 10 to 15 cents higher than most of the other Carbondale stations because of the high price of gas on the open, or "spot," market. Martin stations do not buy much gas from the major oil companies.

"My wholesale price went up 10 cents a gallon," Roger Martin, manager of Westside Fina, said Monday. "I'm not making any more money. In fact, I'm making less, since I'm selling less gas."

Editorial on Union Hill sewage draws response from homeowners

You are right in emphasizing that "pollution is everybody's business" (D.E. 7-17). But contrary to your conclusion, the residents of the Union Hill Subdivision have made pollution control their business. In fact, we have been seriously concerned for many years. We drink the same water, carboardians do. Almost every contract to purchase a building led from the developer contain a clause stating that the buyer may tap into a sewage facility constructed by the developer for which a considerable fee is paid. The developer is legally obligated to provide non-polluting sewage facilities. He is also obligated by county ordinance and state law. A buyer may instead build his own facility. Rather, there, state and county agencies charged with the responsibility to approve the construction and maintenance of sewage facilities to assure that there is no pollution.

Of the 46 homes, 8 are connected to individual septic systems. Others, developer-owned lagoons that meet non-pollution requirements and are not in the Cedar Lake watershed. The remaining 14 homes are connected to the Lake Lila treatment plant which is new polluting Cedar Lake. For almost ten years the Union Hill Homeowners Association has attempted through board interpretation and negotiation with the developer and county to assure that the sewage facility meets all appropriate requirements. Several years ago, after being frustrated by our effort to achieve pollution control, the Home Owners Association appealed to the Environmental Protection Agency in Illinois, alerted them to the problem and asked the E.P.A. to act. One result of this was our involvement in a law suit which cost the Home Owners many thousands of dollars in legal and other costs. Although we won the suit, in the sense that the Association was held not liable, the pollution problem remained.

When first the State of Illinois and then the city of Carbondale entered into litigation against the developer, we felt that at long last the problem would be resolved. Nevertheless, the Home Owners' Association continued to negotiate with the developer to help assure that pollution control was effective. We even offered to invest several thousands of dollars to defray part of the cost of improvement construction, although we are under no legal obligation to do so. For a variety of reasons negotiations have broken down. We hope that the combined wisdom and power of City and State can bring about a solution that is legally and morally just.

Financial Aid rule change unfair

Like many students, I need money this summer. The most reasonable method to get this money was through employment. Being a law student I soon realized that the most convenient arrangement was to work on campus. The law school had scheduled its classes so that I had only 6 to 8 hours per week to work. To keep my job I was forced to pick up bowling for one hour per week and 10 hours of wasted time per week and $40 in informal activities.

Now the Financial Aid Department has reversed itself. In a letter dated May 23, 1979 the Financial Aid Department states that "graduate and professional students (must enroll) for at least six credits in order to qualify for a student work-study (Title IX) position. Thus, the student applies only to fall and spring semesters. Summer employment is required for summer appointments." Thus is a 150 degree turn in policy from the beginning of the problem when my supervisor called Dr. West to tell me that "students could earn money for the summer through employment. The student was applying only to fall and spring semesters. Summer employment is required for summer appointments." This was followed by "local government is grossly stupid in its operations or they figured scores of students would enroll in summer classes (which would cost them money and expensive) courses like I did. The truth is that a local government university and a crucial expense to the students. The person responsible should be fired and replaced with persons who are more competent.

Woman athletes need fair shake, not break—follow Title IX rules

Tim Bond's July 12th article entitled "Title IX Guidelines for Athletics in need of review. While timely, the article was one-sided, factually distorted, and poorly researched. Title IX is a much too complicated and too controversial an issue to be effectively treated in a single article.

The following points, which refer directly to statements made in the article, must be highlighted:

1) Hew has indeed provided specific guidelines for these universities seeking compliance with Title IX. The guidelines are extensive and have existed in existence since June of 1975. It is the interpretation of those guidelines that is now in question; as interpretations are being sought by many universities who have chosen to ignore the law on the basis of their own self-serving interests.

2) The "main conflict in allocating available funds" has very little to do with "defining participants." The crux of the matter is WHETHER A UNIVERSITY IS COMMITED TO EQUAL OPPORTUNITY. Actions speak louder than words. Too often in the realm of public debate the real issue is obscured by immutable concern. Title IX is a matter of principle; it is far too important to be jeopardized by procedural complications.

3) Title IX is not an "overnight" concern. Title IX of the Educational Amendments of 1972 was passed by Congress and signed by the President of the United States into law that very year. Regulations clarifying many means and procedures for compliance were published and distributed July 21, 1975. Subsequently, colleges and universities were given a three-year period of adjustment. Colleges were given time to bring into compliance reports in homes. In order. The period was designed to give the schools time to do a self-evaluation and to develop and implement a plan for compliance if discriminatory practices in athletics existed in their institutions. Where is SU's plan? Other points that demand clarification.

4) George Mace's article that demand clarification.

5) George Mace's article that demand clarification.

6) George Mace's article that demand clarification.

7) SU's women students pay the same $50 (student fee is as $1--"$1 for men and $1 for women. As for the distribution of those student fees--no one knows how this money goes to fund men's athletics while the percent funds the Saluki women's programs.

8) Finally, the claim that "people are concerned only with the male's program because of mass formation that one-half will go to women's programs and that half of women's programs is not true. Dr. West has contacted by phone. Dr. West told me that "women's programs have been involved in public relations community and fundraising and have encountered, financial or organizational difficulties. To the contrary, Dr. West said over $10,000 was contributed by local alumni and local townspeople who were supportive of women's athletics at SU. This year, several scholarships have been provided by local and area merchants for advertising "SU Women's Intraclub sports. The general feeling, Dr. West said, that the area's sports enthusiasts are satisfied with the results and express a desire to see the programs prosper. Perhaps some people have failed to contribute enough but would not go to the women.

The time has come for SU and every college to recognize the intellectual justifications for not giving females the same piece of cake (Not a break, a fair shake). The time has come for concerned student-townpeople, faculty, and administration to speak out on this issue, to insure that SU and every college must continue to bring prestige to this institution. And the time has come for the Daily Egyptian to press reporters to present analytical articles on issues of public importance that reflect intelligence rather than ignorance.

Tennis court work resumes

By Karen Goble
Staff Writer

The repaving of the tennis courts earlier in the week was supervised by Duane Schroeder, University Grounds Supervisor.

The courts were discovered when the weight of construction trucks broke through the pavement. "We had anticipated that the soil would be saturated," Schroeder said, "but the problem was more severe than we thought.

The ground on which the courts are located is one of the lowest areas on campus and attracts more moisture than other areas.

The drive between the tennis and handball courts may have compacted the already saturated clay underneath the courts and worsened the problem, Schroeder said.

"Subsurface drainage between the upper and lower courts will stabilize the water content of the soil so that repaving may continue as scheduled," Schroeder said.

"A saturation under the upper courts is not as extensive as it is under the lower courts, but drains should stabilize soil conditions. We anticipate that the courts will be ready for use shortly after the fall semester begins - probably sometime in Sep-

Enrollment in graphic arts doubles

By University News Service

The number of college students taking courses in cinema, photography and graphic arts in the United States and Canada has more than doubled since 1974, according to a survey by an ASU photography professor.

The survey, covering nearly 80 institutions, indicated that the number of students taking courses in any of the three areas jumped from 82,700 in 1972-73 to more than 162,000 in 1976-77, a 94 percent increase. C. William Horrell, professor in cinema, photography and television, said.

More than 3,000 questionnaires were sent out for the sixth edition of the survey, published by Eastman Kodak Co. Horrell has done most of the studies since the survey series started in 1964.

Other survey highlights included:

- The number of colleges and universities offering courses in motion pictures, still photography or graphic arts has gone up by 21 percent since 1974.
- The number of students graduating with degrees in one of the three fields surveyed went from 5,111 to 6,481 between 1974 and 1977.
- 56 percent of the departments questioned reported they plan to expand their offerings in the future.

Outdoor awareness program announces workshop agenda

By Charity Gould
Staff Writer

Marching on dandelion greens, learning to make a solar cooker and exploring Panther Den, a wilderness area in Devil's Kitchen, are on the environmental education agenda, says Tom Meldau, program developer.

Sponsored by the Carbondale New School and the Carbondale Park District, the five-day outdoor program will run from July 20 to Aug. 3.

Environmental encounters is an outdoor awareness program developed for children 10 to 14 years old.

"That age group is too young to hold a job, but too old for a babysitter," Meldau, an environmental educator, said.

"There isn't anything for that age group to do," Meldau, who taught environmental workshops at Touch of Nature, said. He is assisted by Jennifer Kuhn, a graduate student in charge of the program, and Jim Jones, a SIU student.

Casting $5 per person, the workshop will center around outdoor events like plant identification, a pond study at Evergreen Park and many crafts. Meldau said.

The New School instructor said the workshop will be held from 8 a.m. to noon Monday through Thursday and all day on Friday.

"I'm hoping that we can let people know what's available to them," Meldau said.

Mikeva's confirmation opposed

By Mike Robinson
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservatives in the Senate and the National Rifle Association have stepped up their fight to continue the nomination of Rep. Abner J. Mikeva, D-Ill., for a federal judgeship, saying in a letter he might use the bench to further his views on abortion and gun control.

Mikeva, seeking confirmation to the U.S. Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia, repeated his testimony before a Senate Judiciary panel he would abide by views "at the courthouse door."

Conservative senators expressed skepticism, though, questioning him sharply about a bill he introduced to ban the sale of handguns. Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said he has heard of an increase in "people breaking into homes and robbing the payroll." "Don't you think it might be a good idea, if someone tried to burglarize your home, to have a handgun to protect yourself and your family?" Thurmond asked.

Mikeva said three Chicago police superintendents and the late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover all favored gun control. He added: "As someone who did a little shooting when I was in the Army, I would suggest there are better ways to defend yourself than a handgun. For home defense, a handgun leaves a lot to be desired."

Mikeva said assault guns, which would be prohibited under this bill, would be a better means of protection and would lead to better social integration in schools. Mikeva said with support that armed? bulled block of black youngsters in South Holland, Ill., schools.

Local woman wins title of Miss Illinois

Shanna Jean McNeill of Carterville has been named Miss Illinois. McNeill had won the title of Miss America Pageant of Columbia, Ill., Saturday and plans for the rest of the year. She won $12,000 in scholarships and a $4,000 school loan with the Miss Illinois title.

"You have problems in Chicago!" Thurmond said a grin spreading across his face. "I thought Chicago was altogether different. We desegregated in South Carolina. We didn't have any trouble, no roots. We abide by the order. You have trouble in Chicago!"

"Yes, and I think we have much we can learn from South Carolina," Mikeva answered. In recent days, members of the National Rifle Association have flooded Senate offices with anti-Mikeva mail. Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said: "I didn't know so many people knew you in Kansas."

Dole said there were two schools of thought among conservatives concerning Mikeva who has barely survived three successive elections in his in 10th District House seat in Chicago's northern suburbs. "One of them says confirm him, we'll pick up the House seat," Dole said.

Texas state Rep. Clay Smothers, D-Dallas, told the Senate that Mikeva was too much of an activist to serve on the court. "Mr. Mikeva's stands on issues like abortion, defense, busing, gay rights, obesity and drug abuse and a host of other sensitive issues flow in the face of claims to judicial temperament and are an affront to the American people," Smothers said.

Despite the NRA crusade against him, Mikeva's aids expressed optimism about his prospects for confirmation to the post.

Appaloosa rocks Sunset

Appaloosa rocks Sunset

By Mark Pablick
Staff Writer
A little bit of drinking, dancing, partying and a whole lot of country rock music by Appaloosa highlighted the sixth Sunset Concert of the season at Sunset Park Thursday.

The Champaign-based band treated the crowd to a long list of country favorites along with some original numbers. Lead singer-bassist Mark Hamilton keeps the audience clapping their hands and singing along.

Appaloosa's lead singer, guitar player and vocal coach Mark Hamilton who joined the group on June 14th.

The fiddling prowess of Randy Bullock shined through on "Up Against the Wall You Redneck Mothers" and Appaloosa original "Becky Buck" whether playing his bow long and soft or short and fast was superb and delighted the crowd with a wide variety of solos.

Carbondale has a lot of people who really appreciate and enjoy country music,according to Bullock said. "The crowd tonight did everything from shout and clap, to dancing in front of us."

Steve Morrison rounded out the group on the drums. Morrison soloed on the drums, but his drum playing was evident throughout the performance. Morrison executed excellent cymbal work during Pure Prairie League's "Amy."

Overall, the group put on a good show, said an appreciative audience that brought Appaloosa back for an encore.

Appaloosa will be releasing an album sometime during the month of September for the many fans who have been waiting for the group's first recording.

Mysteries continue in grossly fashion, all following the rhyme. Implementation of destruction vary from axes to hoody-traps to hypodermic needles to guns and knives. Suspense mounts with each murder. By the end of the play, the suspense was so great that screams could be heard from the audience.

The acting in the play was excellent. Particularly notable were Cheryl Spran as Vera Claythorne, Richard Travis as Captain Lombard and Frankie Day as Emily Brent.

Spran portrayed a terrific secretary. Travis played an adventuress who took the whole situation very lightly and Day a cynical old spinster.

The ending of the play is such that it cannot be predicted. Agatha Christie's mysteries are always like that, it is almost impossible to guess the ending. Given this material, the playhouse people did a very good job.

New act at MRF

The Beach Boys, those stars of surf, appear in concert at the Mississippi River Festival on August 8 at 7:30 p.m. on the campus of SIU-Edwardsville. The Beach Boys represent the newest addition to the festi-val schedule.

The Beach Boys, who have countless hit albums and singles, performed in concert to an enthusiastic crowd at the JU Arena. They will play most of their hits at the festival.

The current schedule for the rest of the summer is: She Na Na on August 8, Joni Mitchell and the Persuasions August 9, the Preservation Hall Jazz Band on August 11, Charles Amour and Jane Oliver on August 13 and Chicago on September 1.

All concerts start at 7:30 p.m. advance tickets are $8.50 and $7. For further information call (618) 1-692-2190.

The new system will be able to accommodate both day-of-sales patrons, as well as advance-ticket patrons. Two separate lines will allow quicker passage through the gate.

The construction cost of the project is about $8,000. It will be provided by accumulated auditorium profits.

Shryock gets new box office

Persons who frequent Shryock Auditorium and are tired of waiting in slow-moving lines for tickets will have a welcome change to look forward to this fall.

A new two-window box office, more than twice the size of the current one, is expected to alleviate the waiting problem by cutting it in half.

Lee wins Lonnie Brown

By Mark Pobech
Sports Editor

Sophomore track sensation David Lee was named the winner of the 1979 Lonnie Brown Memorial Award by Saluki coach Lew Hartsog on July 20th. Lee, who competed in five events last year, won the award with a total of 207 1/2 points, beating out second place finisher Stan Podolski by 30 points.

The Lonnie Brown Memorial Award is presented each year to the Saluki earning the most team points during the indoor and outdoor track season. The award is named in memory of Brown, a three-time All-American Saluki track star. Brown was killed in an automobile accident in 1978.

Lee competed in the hurdles, long and triple jump, sprints, and relays, and qualified for the NCAA championships in the intermediate hurdles. Lee team.

Card’s drill

By The Associated Press

The Cards are in mourning following the sudden death of tight end J.V. Cain. Cain, presumably a perfect physical specimen, Cain died of cardiac arrest suffered in practice.

Cain, a sixth-season National Football League veteran, collapsed July 11 while running a pass pattern drill at Lindenwood College, the team’s training camp site. He died after 90 minutes later despite cardiopulmonary resuscitation efforts.

Sunday was Cain’s 28th birthday.

“I am shocked beyond description,” said Cards owner Bill Bidwill, who was among a cluster of club officials who went to St. Joseph’s Hospital, where Cain was taken.

“He was a wonderful gentleman and a superb athlete. It’s a terrible tragedy,” said Bidwill. “He was a man we will all miss, more than anything as a person.”

Cain, who missed all of the 1978 NFL season, following surgery to repair a torn Achilles tendon suffered in training camp, reported early for this year’s drills and passed a physical examination with flying colors.

“His injury had come along just great,” said Steve Curran, the Cards’ general manager. “The doctors were really surprised at how well he’d come along. He was a physical fitness buff. He was in great shape.”

Curran said Cain collapsed at about 8:30 a.m. while the Cardinals were engaged in a no-contact drill watched by hundreds of spectators in the muggy 105-degree weather. The 6-foot-4, 225-pound Cain, St. Louis’ top draft choice in 1974, had just completed a pattern, he said. When he fell to the ground, Cain’s teammate Garfinkel of the team’s medical staff went to aid and began administering the cardiopulmonary procedure until joined by a life-support team.

Curran said the 75-member Cards squad was stunned by what happened.

“When they saw that CPR was started, it just got dead silent,” Curran said. “A lot of people on the sidelines bowed their heads in ceremony. At one point, Coach Bud Wilkerson had the players on a line in prayer, ‘Come on, J.V., come on J.V.’. There were tears, it was very emotional.

At one point Cain regained consciousness briefly, and teammate Charley Davis ran his fist in the air triumphantly.

Cain lost consciousness again a few minutes later.

Cain died of sudden cardiac death and was taken from the field in an ambulance.

Curran said the Cardinals chartered a jet aircraft to fly to Houston. Cain’s hometown to pick up his wife, Jeannie, and his father, to be the survivors.

Cain said before training camp began that he believed his comeback from a heel injury was steady by two factors: prayer and his recent marriage.

“I started getting into prayer and reading the Bible, I said then ‘I learned a whole lot about faith and belief,’ ” said Cain. “It was married last December.”

The former all-Big Eight star at Colorado had 76 career pass receptions for 1,014 yards and nine touchdowns.

His best year was 1976, when he started 26 for five touchdowns.
Basement holds diamond memories

The house is neat but non-descript.
A famous statue sits in the front yard. Perennials and other flowers accompanied by the back of the small lawn. White shutters cover the walk.
A stroller on the tree-lined residential street would have no trouble fixing on the George Brace door — unless he knew of the buried treasure behind it.
In secure file cabinets in the basement, Brace says he has about 1,125,000 photographic negatives of baseball players dating back to 1940 in a collection more appropriately housed in a safe.
He estimates its worth at $2 million to $3 million. He plans to keep it right where it is and, after he dies, turn it over to his granddaughter let his family decide what to do with it.
Once, baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, "concerned about what would happen if I got out of the wrong hands," sent his representative to chat with him. He was interested in possibly investing $2 million on the table, now.
Fred Fleig, then National League secretary-treasurer, went later to talk about concerns. "If I would have put a price on it, they might have bought it, but I know it wasn't for sale," Brace said.

Anti-bike theft program starts

By Andrew Zaiser
Staff Writer

A temporary program initiated by the Carbondale Police Department to combat "crimes usually committed by youths," such as bike theft and vandalism, was announced Monday.

One sergeant and three patrolmen have been assigned late last month to the "crime specific unit," in part to combat "growing number of bicycle thefts," according to Tom McNamara, assistant to the chief of police.

Between January and June 30, 1979, 88 bikes were reported stolen to Carbondale police. For the same period last year, 68 thefts were reported. In comparison, there were 19 in the same month last year.

Because of the growing number of thefts, "pressure had to be put on," McNamara said.

Lt. Terry Murphy said this pressure will include enforcing the city's bicycle registration ordinance. Non-registered bikes will be stopped, and serial numbers will be checked and called in to the police station to make sure the bike isn't stolen.

A non-registered bike can be fined anywhere from $10 to $50. The standard fine is $25, according to the city attorney's office. Registration costs $2, and a bike must display four reflectors, one each on the front and rear, and one each wheel. Bikes can be registered at the police station.

The results of the program have been "excellent," according to McNamara. A larger recovery rate of stolen bikes has occurred since the program's inception. In the January to June period last year, seven bikes were recovered, compared to a total of 19 this year for the same time.

The program has shown also its effect this month, as 15 stolen bikes worth over $2,000 have been recovered, according to reports. The arrest of six juveniles and adults also have been made.

By concentrating on a particular crime area, police hope to reduce the number of bike thefts, acts of vandalism, and petty thefts, as well as increase the rate of property recovery, the report said.

"According to Police Chief Ed Hogan, the program will go for 90 days and will then be evaluated to decide if it should be continued. "While the initial results look favorable, it will take some time before we can see any measurable effect," he explained.

Three bike thefts have been reported in SIU Security since last week. John Shiel, Route 3, Carbondale, reported his bike was stolen, stolen from near the Agriculture Building on campus.

Linda York, a student living at Arrowtown Apartments, reported her bike a stolen from near her residence. The bike was reported stolen on Friday, and was valued at $10.

A third bike theft was reported on Friday by Diane D. Stouffer, 203 S. Forest Ave. The bike was parked at the north bike rack of the Student Center. It was left there overnight and was valued at $10.

SALT treaty hearing underway

Brown said that with or without the treaty, the United States would have capability to launch a devastating retaliatory attack against the Soviet Union. With the treaty, he said, "we will be able to have it at a lower cost" and in a more stable and predictable system.

"My firm judgment is that this treaty will make the United States more secure and more militarily than we would be without it," Brown said.

He said that it would be impossible to produce a treaty that could be 'absolutely verifiable,' but said the United States would be able to detect any cheating that poses a significant risk.

"However, if a problem were not resolved or if we detected a threat imposed on our security, I would not hesitate to recommend to the president that we take whatever steps necessary to meet the threat - including, if need be, treaty abrogation," Brown said.

The Senate Armed Services Committee's hearings follow two weeks of examination of the treaty by the Foreign Relations Committee. The Senate Intelligence Committee is now reviewing the agreement.

The Senate Armed Services Committee will not vote as a body to approve or reject the treaty, but it will file a report later giving the views of individual members.

Hunt continues for Federal Reserve chief development of energy projects, and to create the energy corporation, which would finance energy development, were sent to Congress last week. The Senate Energy Committee tentatively agreed Saturday to support the mobilization board.

In addition to seeking a replacement for Miller, the president is looking for a new secretary of Housing and Urban Development, a new transportation secretary, and a new secretary of the Navy.

Powell said some changes in the White House staff, although unlikely to add any new faces to the inner circle of Carter advisors, may be revealed this week.

To the broadcasters, he said Carter will encourage debate among members of his new team but, once policy is determined, will expect them to "pull their weight." A new chief of staff, William Jordan, Carter's newly named chief of staff, said Monday the president is circling the circle of persons inside and outside government that will give him advice.

In an interview on NBC-TV's "Today" program, Jordan was questioned about the number of Georgians advising Carter.

"The shakeup is not over - - - ," Jordan replied "It is not an unusual thing for a president to have people in the White House around him from their home state."

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown, Jr. a potential Carter rival for the 1980 Democratic nomination, said he doubts the Cabinet shakeup will help the chief executive.
