IRA bombs kill nine in two London parks

LONDON (AP) — The IRA brought its bloody offensive back to the heart of London Thursday, killing nine people in Hyde Park and Regent's Park that killed nine people including a woman, band, wounded 47 and sent six-inch nails flying through the heart of the queen's ceremonial guard and their horses.

One bomb went off without warning at 10:45 a.m., 4:45 a.m. CDT, in a car parked near the famous bridge path around Hyde Park. A 52-year-old was on the fashionable Knightsbridge Road side of the park, half a mile from Buckingham Palace. Police said it killed three of the queen's Household Cavalry and three horses.

Two hours later, another bomb exploded under a bandstand and near a zoo and one half mile from Hyde Park, killing two people, including members of the Royal Green Jackets regiment band as it arrived selected from "Oliver" for an audience that included many children and elderly people.

Responsibility for both bombings was claimed by the Irish Republican Army, which has been fighting for 13 years to remain a part of Northern Ireland.

After the loss of a tough 10-year war, the IRA war is just beginning. This time, though, the strategy will be different. That's the message from the National Organization for Women.

The almost 300,000 members of NOW, despite their defeat on ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, will be using their political might in the statehouses to change the traditional makeup of legislatures across the country.

"Our bottom-line strategy is to increase the power of women by changing the composition of legislatures, by having more women and feminist men," said Liz Nicholson, treasurer of Illinois NOW.

Once this is achieved, passage of the ERA will be very simple, said Sal Stacey, head of the Shawnee chapter of Illinois NOW.

"Once we get everything in place, the ERA will pass just like that," she said. "People will see why we struggled with it."

The ERA has been re-introduced this year with over 75 co-sponsors. Nicholson said, but NOW will not aggressively pursue it until they improve their chances in all the states.

"Women have great voting power and this will be used to tell politicians what American women want. Proof of this strength is evident in NOW's net worth of $5 million," she said. "NOW nationwide is building at such a rate that we are now raising more funds per month than the Democratic party."

"And we have about 75 percent of the women in the legislatures for the ERA versus 25 percent of the men," Nicholson said. "But for the entire population that's not true. Equal numbers of men and women support the ERA."

NOW is currently concentrating on getting involved in the November elections, both locally and nationally. Although some NOW members may run for office, at this point the organization will be more concerned in supporting those candidates who support their views and vote against those who don't.

"We will be pursuing work in the elections this fall, supporting our friends and defeating our opponents," she said.

Locally, NOW will support State Sen. Kevin D'Smith, who is running against Rep. Wayne See NOW, Page 3
Report claims 'great progress' in cleaning up the environment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration issued its own assessment of a state of the environment Tuesday, taking sharp issue with conservationists who have been attacking the president's record.

In an eight-page report issued by the President's Council on Environmental Quality, the administration said the nation has made "great progress" since passage of federal clean air and clean war laws in the early 1970s.

The report, issued annually by the president's top environmental advisers, is the first by the Reagan administration. It normally is issued in January, but the council, with sharp budget and personnel cuts, had to take an extra six months to compile this one.

Rafe Pomerance, president of Friends of the Earth, said the report was "completely oblivious to everything the administration has been doing in the past year and a half."

"They are destroying the environmental institutions of government and they are ignoring the most important emerging problems," Pomerance said.

The report cited statistics showing that levels of most of the major air pollutants had shown sharp declines over the past decade.

It said the clean-up gains have not been as significant for water pollution. While further deterioration of streams and rivers was halted in the past decade, the council said "substantial improvement in water quality nationally is still a few years away."

President Reagan said the two major initiatives he wanted to address were making sure environmental regulations were cost-effective and bringing decisions "closer to the people most affected by them."

Joint PLO-Israel recognition may be near, PLO sources say

By The Associated Press

Israeli gunners and Palestinian guerrillas battled each other in long-distance duels across Lebanon near the airport in tense Beirut Tuesday.

Despite Tuesday's intermittent clashes, Beirut police said the nine-month Lebanon cease-fire continued to hold in general.

In Washington, President Reagan met with two Arab envoys, and U.S. officials reported "reasonable movement" toward solving the Lebanon crisis.

One possible hint of a breakthrough came from Beirut, where sources close to the Palestine Liberation Organization said the PLO was willing to accept U.N. Security Council Resolution 242, in effect granting the recognition Israel has long demanded — in return for U.S. and Israeli recognition of the PLO.

As diplomatic efforts dragged on, Israeli Brig. Gen. Benjamin Ben-Kliar, a former commander of Israel's northern front, told reporters during a visit to Denmark that he expects a final Israeli assault within two weeks to drive the guerrillas from besieged Beirut, "although we know there will be a high price to pay."

The truce was arranged by U.S. mediator Philip C. Habib to give diplomats a chance to end the six-week-old war by arranging for the peaceful evacuation of the estimated 8,000 Palestinian guerrillas from Lebanon to another Arab state.

Israel has up to 40,000 troops and 300 tanks ringing the PLO's west Beirut redoubt, while Israeli gunboats seal off all sea escape routes.

Mitsui indicted for 'steel dumping'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal grand jury Tuesday indicted Japan's largest steelmaker and three employees for alleged conspiracy, price fixing and making false statements in connection with the importation of steel products into the United States.

In a major crackdown on alleged Japanese steel-dumping, Mitsui and Co. USA Inc. and Katsumi Arai, Tsunoe Nakayi and Takeo Terahara were charged with 20 counts of making false statements in documents to U.S. Customs.

Mitsui was the source of steel involved in two earlier federal steel-dumping allegations, a June 1981 indictment against Pacific Steel and Supply Co. and a January federal complaint against VSL Corp. of Los Gatos.

Steel dumping is the sale of foreign steel in the United States at unfairly low prices.

The grand jury's Mitsui probe was rooted in simultaneous raids in December 1980 by dozens of customs agents in New York City and San Francisco — France.

The search warrants were obtained on a Customs Service affidavit accusing Mitsui and others of trying to disguise actual pricing.

Cuts pare defense budget $3 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House prepared Tuesday to consider retiring some ships and cutting a new weapons system as it began detailed consideration of President Reagan's defense authorization request for the current fiscal year.

The first order of business in considering the bill, which is expected to consume the rest of the House's week, were amendments by the Armed Services Committee. They would pare the measure by $27.1 billion — to $177.9 billion — compared to the president's revised request in line with Congress' budget blueprint. The measure would provide a one-third increase in budget authority to build weapons and keep them operating.

Mundo's to receive warning for late liquor license renewal

By Andrew Zimmer
Staff Writer

The Carbondale Liquor Control Commission on Monday agreed to send a warning letter to Mundo's, owner of mundo's 101 W. College. The warning will be issued because Mundo submitted its application for a 1982-83 Class A liquor license renewal after the city's deadline, said Mayor Hal Fischer, chairman of the commission. The commission renewed $5 licenses at its regular meeting of June 22, but postponed action on Mundo's request until Monday night. Fischer said Mundo simply "made one phone call" to the state Liquor Commission in Springfield to stay open pending license renewal. Licenses expired June 30.

The commission agreed to renew Mundo's license, but also agreed that a warning was necessary. The warning, which City Attorney George Kirakos said could be issued without a public hearing, "is an acknowledgement on record of non-compliance of our rules," Fischer said. "We're telling bar owners that they should apply on time according to city policy." The liquor commissioner was the only commissioner to vote to deny Mundo's renewal request. He said Mundo was "not capable of maintaining the professional standards that we (the commission) want."

"I wish I had the legal standing to deny this license," Fischer said.

Alstat, R-58th District, Stacey said.

Another Southern Illinois chapter of NOW, Equality NOW, has decided to run a candidate against State Sen. Gene Johns, D-59th District, who NOW feels was not supportive of ERA at the most crucial time.

"At one point, Gene Johns voted for the ERA, but he knew it was too late to pass it," Stacey said. "That was just a political trick."

In the race for governor, NOW will oppose both Gov. James R. Thompson and his running mate, George Ryan, speaker of the state House of Representatives.

Despite the fact that Thompson has publicly supported the ERA, NOW feels that he abandoned his previous support when he allowed Ryan to uphold the three-fifths super-majority rule for passage of the ERA in the House, which essentially prevented its passage.

A resolution recently passed by Illinois NOW declared that "it's vote for Thompson-Ryan is a vote against women," Stacey said.

NOW will also be taking more in-depth looks at politicians, rather than considering them merely in terms of how they view the ERA.

"We're not a single issue group at all," Stacey said. For the November election, the Shawnee group will interview candidates in the area and also check candidates' voting records and sources of campaign funding.

One of the major "reasons that the ERA did not pass, according to Stacey, was corporate pressure on some politicians. Therefore, it is important to find out exactly from where candidates receive their funding, she said.

"Corporate interests kept it from passing," Stacey said. "It's big business that doesn't want to pay women what they're worth. They want to have a secretary and give her the responsibilities of an administrative assistant, but they don't pay her enough."

Despite state laws prohibiting discrimination in hiring and pay, women are still paid 25 cents to every dollar paid to men, "across the board and in every different job," Nicholson said.

"At this point, a woman's college degree is worth what an eighth grade education is worth to a man," she said.

Iranian advance halted, Iraq battle report claims

By The Associated Press

Iraq and Iran fought fierce artillery and tank duels Tuesday near the oil port of Basra, and battle reports claimed Iraq launched repeated air and tank assaults against the Iranian invaders.

Although there were conflicting claims from both sides, it appeared that Iranian troops had succeeded in halting the Iranian advance into Iraq. But Iranian troops were reported entrenched about three miles inside Iraq, just north of Basra.

Iraq's latest war report, broadcast Tuesday by Tehran radio, said Iranian troops inside Iraq repulsed two enemy counterattacks. It claimed 200 Iraqis were killed or wounded and five tanks destroyed in the latest round of fighting.

The state-run radio said the communication was issued from the "Karbala" headquarters of the Iranian military command. It is named after the Iraqi city through which Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has said Iranian troops will march to capture Jerusalem from the Israelis.

Iran's invasion of Iraq opened the latest phase of the 13-month-old war between the two Persian Gulf oil giants.

The latest Iraqi communiqué, carried by the official news agency, IRNA, said Iraq's troops repelled two Iranian advances in the Basra sector, killing 349 enemy soldiers and destroying 11 tanks. It spoke of repeated attacks by helicopter gunships on Iranian troops that inflicted "many casualties."

The Iraqi report also claimed Iraqi forces hit what it vaguely referred to as "two large naval targets" at the northern tip of the Persian Gulf. It did not elaborate, and Iraq made no response to the claim.

An estimated 100,000 Iranian troops and revolutionary guards charged across the Iraqi border a week ago while Iranian tanks and artillery pounded Iraqi positions around Basra, six miles east of the disputed Shatt-al-Arab waterway.

must "spend money to get money."

The city will receive $240,000 from developer Stan Hoye and Associates for the 200 block of South Fifth St. Hoye, however, said even though the city will pay more than that for the land, "That's the only break the developer gets." Fry said. The city must incur the costs of buying the occupied land and then clearing it, he said, and Hoye must then buy the "raw land" from the city.

There would be no way that Hoye could afford to buy the land parcels and then clear them, Fry said. He likened the deal to an urban renewal project, where the government supports private investors to improve a deteriorating area.

Flat-rate income tax:
the latest way to go

IF ALL OUR welfare programs were scrapped and the money used to maintain the system was distributed to the poor, there would probably be no more poor left in America. The same kind of logic is behind the latest moves for the flat-rate income tax movement. Too much income from taxes goes just to maintain an overly complicated system.

That the Byzantine tax system is long overdue for an overhaul nobody denies, but for a long time nobody knew which way to go or proposed only cosmetic changes. The flat-tax movement presents chances for the first really radical changes.

MILTON FRIEDMAN, THE supply side economist, has been calling for this change for two decades. Congress has finally begun to take a look at it. However, none of the flat-tax bills now in Congress call for a flat tax rate per se. They all propose a flatter tax base of varying degrees, some of them as flat as Pik-A-Pock.

Many opinions circulate now, but the most exciting developent en is the broad and varied base of support for the idea in general. Both Democrats and Republicans, supply side economists and non-supply side economists are coming out for the idea.

WITH MANY OPINIONS, naturally, comes much confusion. The source of confusion is the many different bills being proposed. Some would pinch the middle class, some would take a bite out of the upper class and some would come down heavily on the lower class.

A flat rate tax can save millions by simplifying the filing process. It can save the money that 40 percent of the taxpayers pay lawyers and tax experts to prepare the five or six pages of the small print and see that the income tax field has become for the rich.

BUT FRIEDMAN ESTIMATES chances are zero that the idea will ever bear fruit. For a slow moving bureaucracy like Congress, anything really radical is usually anathema. Only the most watered-down versions have any chance of being passed. The flat-rate income tax may just remain "an idea that sounds too good to ever come true."

University should not provide student lists to public officials

We strongly oppose the University proposal to provide lists of student names and addresses to public officials and political candidates. The availability of such lists is an invasion of the students' privacy. Further, we find the assurances of the University inadequate. The safeguards on the distribution and use of these lists are not sufficient to protect individual personal privacy.

Recently the University has shown that the release of even seemingly innocuous pieces of information can cause very serious problems. The University has assembled such pieces (for instance, its alumni records, magazine subscription lists) to construct personality profiles on individuals. These profiles are ostensibly used to provide targets for individualized computer mailings by political candidates and marketing firms. Not withstanding the assurance of these mailings into individual households, the existence of personality profiles may threaten personal freedoms.

We similarly oppose the proposal by the administration to require those not wishing the release of their names to file an opt-out procedure. Each name and address belongs to the individual, not the state. We are opposed to having the government force us to provide our names to the state. The state should be kept from this information.

THE ISRAELI INVASION of Lebanon was Act One. The Iranian invasion of Iraq, Act Two. Together these acts can mean curtains for the whole region.

The issue as a whole may be a matter of survival and for the aspect at least it is clear as day. Iran has been involved in the intifada it lacks the kind of political will to want peace. Ever since Iran has been bent on self-serving efforts to gain diplomatic or military superiority. Both Arab nations are busily arming each other in an effort to gain against Iran. Nobody seems to know what is really happening, what is going to happen or what can get to happen.

Beware: In a region full of oil, to play with fire is dangerous

IF YOU WANT to be nice, call it utter confusion. If you want to be cynical, call it lucrative. Whatever you call it, the Middle East is one set of individuals suffering and hate, threatening to spill over into catastrophic war.

The situation fits very well the description of being clear as mud, but if only it was as peaceful as mud. Unfortunately, at present, it is as volatile an nitrogenous. Nobody seems to know what is really happening, what is going to happen or what can get to happen.

Private school tax credits could hurt public schools

I would like to respond to your July 9 editorial entitled, "Tax Credit Proposal Could Be Beneficial to Private, Public Schools." There are many of us who believe that such tax credits would be deleterious to the future of public education. Allow me to review a few of our concerns.

The public schools of this nation were created after nearly 200 years of private school monopoly. During that time there were many education philosophies, from a group of loosely-knit colonies turned nation-state, and local debate, a have been predicated upon education in a variety of ways. The argument of Horace Mann, who developed the concept of public education, is that thousands of schools would be created after the success of public schooling. Allow me to review the future of public schooling.

The proposition that private school tax credits might be beneficial to the public education is not without debate. But the longer term prognosis is encouraging. What is beginning to become clear is that the public education system itself, what is being discovered is that the failures of public school have been predicated upon human shortcomings — the lack of a public education education, the lack of a public education. The public school system, and the lack of a public education.

The national interest requires a strong, broadly supported base of public commitment and support for our public schools.

Tax credits are a form of indirect subsidy. Is this the time to subsidize our public schools? — William Eason, Professor of Education.

Israelis are not the only ones who want a home, sweet home

By David Murphy
Staff Writer

DESPITE the assertions that Israel Prime Minister Menachem Begin, Israel has done neither the world nor itself any favors in its invasion of Lebanon in pursuit of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

True, the Israelis, through the use of their vaunted, U.S.-supplied military machine, have bought themselves some temporary security. For now, and for the immediate future, Israel has emasculated the PLO, rendering it impotent in Middle Eastern affairs and powerless to hurt Israel. They have also exposed the mirage of Arab unity, showing that it extends no further than the shouted rhetoric of shallow lunatics like Libya's Muammar Khadafi.

In the long run, though, the Israelis have solved nothing. They probably created more problems, and at the cost of Israeli lives and/or the lives of Israeli soldiers killed and wounded.

In the first place, the Israeli invasion will not, by any stretch of the imagination, end the Palestinian dilemma. After the PLO is ousted from Lebanon, there will still be no Palestinian state. Palestinians scattered in and around Israel, people with national aspirations, some of whom feel that they are the people who may now have a chance, and that Arafat has been able to achieve more, and that for them, the Israeli leaders feel the need for a home.

A more radical and bloodthirsty PLO may also result from Israel's rape of Lebanon. Yasir Arafat has, with all the factions of the PLO together in Lebanon, been able to assert a degree of relatively moderate leadership over that polygamy of ideas that is the PLO. But the diaspora of the PLO may force Arafat to recognize that Arafat has been able to achieve more, and that for them, the Israeli leaders feel the need for a home.

The peaceful intentions the Israelis demonstrated in returning the Sinai to Egypt, and the sins in which the Israelis good will that action merited, have been negated by the Lebanon invasion. It will be difficult — impossible, perhaps — for any Arab state to maintain good relations with Israel and not see by other Arab states as a traitor to the Arab cause. And that is a line which none of the Arab leaders may be willing to go out on.

Finally, the invasion may serve to radicalize those Arab states, like Egypt and Saudi Arabia, that had tried to pursue a moderate course in their relationship with Israel.

The peaceful intentions the Israelis demonstrated in returning the Sinai to Egypt, and the sins in which the Israelis good will that action merited, have been negated by the Lebanon invasion. It will be difficult — impossible, perhaps — for any Arab state to maintain good relations with Israel and not see by other Arab states as a traitor to the Arab cause. And that is a line which none of the Arab leaders may be willing to go out on.

IT IS INORNIC, given their history, that the Israelis cannot see that the only lasting solution to the problem of Palestinian terrorism and discontent is a Palestinian homeland. Just as the Israelis have had legitimate national aspirations, which most of the world recognizes, with the establishment of the state of Israel, so do the Palestinians feel the need for a home.

They are a displaced people, dominated by a hostile nation. Their right to national freedom and autonomy is as great as the right of the Jewish people was. Recognition of that fact is, ultimately, the only solution to Israel's, and the Palestinians' woes.
Music Man opens Friday

Brass band musical slated

Carbondale may not be River City, Iowa, but "Trouble" is coming here just the same this week and next when Summer Playhouse '82 presents "The Music Man.

Written by Meredith Wilson, "The Music Man" is one of America's most famous and best-loved musicals, with a score that features such well-known tunes as "Trouble," "Till There Was You," "Wells Fargo Wagon" and "Gary, Indiana." "The Music Man" is the story of Hill (Daryl Vaughan of Carbondale), the world's most charming and gullible con man, who makes his living passing himself off as a handleader, and也是 most charming and gullible townsfolk.

In River City, a town full of stiff-necked Iowa Hawkeyes, Hill begins his pitch by warning the town of the dangers of having a pool table in the community. In "Trouble," one of the show's most famous numbers, Hill preaches with evangelical fervor that the town's youth will be ignoring their chores, smoking cigarettes and -- worst of all -- dancing to ragtime is not done.

The something to do, of course, is to keep the kids on the path of righteousness with the good, clean fun his band represents.

The town swallows Hill's story book, line and sinker. Dazzled by "Professor" Hill, the town lines up to pay for instruments, uniforms and instruction books.

Hill is like a Pied Piper to the people of River City. He forms the School Board -- four men who have hasted each other for 15 years -- into a barbershop quartet. He reforms the town's worst teen-aged roughneck, He brings shy, quiet,lisping Winthrop Paroo (Mike Lynne of Murphyvilles) out of his shell. In short, he makes the summer of 1912 into something grand for River City.

Complications develop, however. Hill makes the acquaintance of Marion Paroo (Lynne DaFrees of Kansas City, Mo.), the local piano teacher and librarian.

They fall in love and, when Hill's brashness is exposed, she urges him to run. He can't, however, because he "got his foot caught in the door" -- salesman slang for falling in love.

"The Music Man" is a celebration of down-home Americans.

"The Music Man" will be presented July 23, 24, 25, 29, 30, 31 and Aug. 1 in the McLeod Theater in the Communications Building at 8 p.m.

‘Tron’ delves into video fantasy

By Miriam Adolphson

Imagine sitting in front of a computer, tinkering with commands you’ve learned in some computer class. Suddenly, a laser blows you into billions of molecules and you’re sent into the heart of the computer where energy lives and breathes, where laws of logic are defied and where the leader of an electronic civilization has sentenced you to die on the video game grid.

This is the fantasy world created by director Steven Lisberger in his debut movie, ‘Tron.’ Filmmakers have done outer space to death. They’ve taken us inside the human body and to the bottom of the sea. They’ve stretched the imagination from the planet Eryton to extraterrestrial beings.

ZAPPED INSIDE THE COMPUTER PROGRAMS BE WROTE WERE STOLEN BY A LASER RUN BY AN EVIL SITTING IN FRONT OF A REVIEWER -- BY DILLINGER (DAVID WARNER) WHO HAS BECOME SENIOR EXECUTIVE OF ENCOM.

Finally, writer-director Steven Lisberger has challenged them all in his creation of a video game fantasy that blows away the imagination. ‘Tron’ is a futuristic adventure set in a world never before seen on the motion picture screen.

The movie begins in the real world where a young computer genius named Flynn (Jeff Bridges) is trying to break into the computer system of ENCOM, a huge communications conglomerate. Flynn is searching for evidence that video game programs he wrote were stolen by Dillinger (David Warner) who has become senior executive of ENCOM.

Information service provides ideas for the leisurely inclined

By Michele Iman
Staff Writer

Do you want to camp or hike, but don't know where to go? Are you tired of doing the same activities over and over again? Are you just bored?

The Leisure Exploration Service may be what you are looking for.

The Leisure Exploration Service provides information about leisure opportunities available in Southern Europe. Barbara Gossett, graduate assistant in Higher Education and LES worker, said, "What we do is provide a free information service," she said. "We hand out brochures and maps, and give directions on how to get to places like Little Grand Canyon," Gossett said.

Files with locations of historical sites, museums, religious areas, antique shops, sports clubs and other craft workshops in the area are available at the LES office, Room 178, across from the weight room and next door to Base Camp at the Rec Center, Gossett said.

Information is also available on activities being held throughout the United States, Gossett said. "It's really happy about how our out-of-state files are going," Gossett said.

"I'm just starting an international file," she said, adding that Mexico, Canada and Europe will be included.

The service also provides Leisure Awareness Workshops. "What we do is explore the idea of leisure within a group context," Ron Strieker, student worker, said. Strieker, a doctoral student, said they provide "a general awareness of different activities that you may do within a leisure framework."

The workshops consist of evaluations clarification exercises, which "give a sense of understanding what leisure means to you," Strieker said. The exercises involve asking questions like, "Is leisure an active or passive concept to you?" and "Do you like leisure activities with people or alone?"

The workshops begin with a discussion of what leisure is, Strieker said, and continue with a series of structured activities exploring the idea of leisure. Exercises include time management, decision-making and assertiveness related to leisure, Gossett said.

The six workshops each summer, fall and spring, and they generally run weekly, Gossett said.

Ten to 15 people attend the workshops during the summer, Gossett said. "Workshops are important because leisure is important to everyone's life," Strieker said. "It offers a balance in one's lifestyle."

At the workshops you are aware of the leisure activities you enjoy doing and have a sense of planning in relation to the work environment, it balances your lifestyle," Strieker said.

The LES is totally run by students, Gossett said. "We have volunteer students and field workers who get academic credits."

In the summer, there is one volunteer, Gossett said. During fall and spring semester, there are about six to 10 field workers and three to five volunteers.

Students who don't get academic credit volunteer because it helps enhance communication skills and group facilitating skills, Gossett said.

"It's personal growth for them," she said. "And they develop some practical skills."

Volunteers and field workers help with the Outreach Program, Gossett said. The program "basically lets people know we are a free service on campus that they can use," Gossett said.

From 1977 through 1980, LES was funded by Student Life, Gossett said, but is now funded by the Office of Intramural Recreation. LES has an activity board posted outside the office, which is available whenever the Rec Center is open, Gossett said.

"It's a place where you can find a partner to participate in an activity," Strieker said.

Carbondale is a happy change for this Falkland war veteran

By Charles Victor
Associate Editorial Page Editor

Who would think Carbondale would be a holiday resort for a Falkland war veteran? Yet that is exactly what it became to 21-year-old Andrew Michael Dennis.

Dennis flew into Carbondale via Chicago last week to spend part of his six-week holiday with his Malaysian girlfriend Azian Mohd. Although Dennis is taking in the sun in Carbondale, he earned his holiday on the cold shores of the Falkland Islands.

Dennis was a member of the initial task force of 150 marine commandos dispatched by Britain after Argentinians invaded the Falklands on April 2. Dennis' ship, the Stromness, an auxiliary support ship, was one of the few that made it unscathed through the war. "A shell landed near us but did no damage," he said.

British casualties were relatively light in the war, Dennis said, "but we all saw action."

Dennis said it was great when they were called up for duty. "At the back of your mind you always think nothing is going to happen. But when war actually broke out, I felt I just wanted to be done with it and go back home. The sinking of the Sheffield affected our morale badly," he said.

His girlfriend, Azian, said she felt "shattered" when Dennis went off to war. "I kept thinking the two of us were going to have a happy life," she said. Azian, who studies at Sheffield University, said of their relationship, "We all fired at the Argentine position. I'm sure the bullets could have killed them." Dennis spent most of his time in the commandos' hamburgers and playing soccer at McAndrew Stadium.

Law School art to be selected

Dan Hobson, dean of the SIU-C Law School, and John Whitlock, director of the SIU-C Museum, have been appointed to serve as local members on a six-person fine arts review committee to oversee the selection and purchases of artwork to be placed in the newly-constructed law school.

They were appointed by the Jackson County Board to join the other members, chosen by local and county governments, the building architect, the Illinois Arts Council, and the State Museum, according to the Illinois Capital Development board.

Malaysian fasters confront problems

by Charles Victor

If you want an easy reason in which to fast, do the month of Ramadan only once a year, during which the month of June is another easy time. But among the fasting Muslims in Malaysia, there are people who fast during the month of Ramadan in order to comply with the culture and society's traditions, even though the month is not considered an important spiritual event by the government or the Islamic authorities. Many Muslims fast during Ramadan to improve their health and to express their solidarity with other Muslims in other parts of the world. However, some Muslims fast for purely social reasons, such as to show their respect for their neighbors or to impress others. In short, fasting during Ramadan is a personal choice, but it is important to note that it should not be a source of conflict or division among Muslims who may have different beliefs about the practice.

Separating twins improving slowly

CHICAGO (AP) - A Siamese twin named Jennifer who was listed in critical condition after a surgery at a Chicago hospital in June is improving slowly, according to Dr. Joseph Lombardo, a hospital spokesman said Thursday.

Scott Mcclure was upgraded Tuesday to serious condition, and Jennifer, who had surgery to separate from her twin, was discharged, a hospital spokesman said Thursday.

Scott and his brother, Jeff, who had been separated by surgery, were separated Thursday during a nine-hour operation. Jeff has been improving steadily since then, though he was still in serious condition Thursday. Mr. Wood's wife, Ms. Wood, said Thursday that a heart attack had been the main reason for her son's poor condition.

The twins were separated by surgery at the University of Illinois Medical Center in Chicago on June 12. Jennifer, who was separated from her twin, was discharged Tuesday, a hospital spokesman said Thursday.

Students who miss the final examination may face negative consequences in terms of their academic career. The final examination is an important component of the academic program and the courses taken during the semester. Failure to attend the final examination may result in a grade of 'F' being recorded for the course.

Crossbreeding white pines is the fruit of orchard's labor

By Dean Kirk
Staff Writer

Mention "orchard" to most people and they'll think of rows of trees producing apples, peaches or plums. But Bucklew said the planting is in a "randomized" fashion. This means planting even 30 feet apart, rows 15 feet apart. Also, he said, trees with a given set of parents are not planted within a four-tree radius of one another.

About 1,500 of these plantings are the orchard now, he said. He said that by spring 1983, 2,500 trees will have been planted in the orchard.

However, Bucklew said, the number of trees at the orchard will be reduced to 1,250 in 1986.

Professor helps NASA space mission

By the University News Service

Exploration of Jupiter, the largest planet in our solar system, and Titan, a satellite of Saturn, are both on the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's calendar of coming events.

And the work of John B. Phillips, an SIU-C chemist, could make a big difference in how much is learned about them.

Phillips, an assistant professor in the Department of Chemistry and Biochemistry, is developing instrumentation that could be included in NASA spacecraft scheduled to explore the atmospheres of Jupiter and Titan during the next decade.

He is researching gas chromatography procedures, which would help NASA scientists identify and measure the chemicals that exist in the atmospheres of both Jupiter and Titan.

Gas chromatography is a relatively simple process whereby a gas is used to pump atmospheric samples through a tube. Phillips said. Currently used technology allows for one sample to be processed every few minutes, he said.

His research, which is supported by a $10,000 grant from NASA's Ames Research Center at Moffett Field, Calif., is aimed at creating a currently used spacecraft instrumentation to reduce its size and increase its effectiveness, he said.

"Given the fact that it might only take a few minutes for a spacecraft to pass through a planet's atmosphere, there are obvious advantages to being able to process more samples in a shorter period of time," he said.

Puzzle answers are on Page 8.

Coaches see successful year in track and cross country

By Gene Stahlman
Staff Writer

Men's track and field Coach Lew Hargett is expecting outstanding seasons for his Salukis over the next few years. Hargett said the team lost very few lettermen through graduation. The most serious issues will be distance runner Karsten Schulz and middle distance ace Bill Morran.

"Bill and Karsten were leaders and will be missed, but we have an excellent group to take their places," said Hargett.

Hargett said distance runners Tom Brown and Mike Keune, and middle distance men Tom Ross and Gary Munson are likely candidates to pick up the slack. The addition of Munson, who was redshirted last season, will help a lot, said Hargett.

The Salukis also lost hurdles Brent Barth and sprinter Randy George by graduation.

The Salukis will miss Geary, but according to Coach Bill Cornell, the Salukis will be a triple and long jumper, according to Hargett.

"We have national qualifier Andy Geiger returning along with Darryl Robertson, who was second on the team two years ago as a freshman." Corned also returns.

Two new recruits from Belleville are expected to help the team, said Hargett.

Duan Van Dyke, who has "limited" and "good," who is a decathlete, will be a triple and long jumper, according to Hargett.

Van Dyke's teammate Mike Elliott, Illinois state champion in the 800-meter run last year, will also be coming to SIU-C.

"We are very excited about the team," said Hargett.

Another loss that could hurt is John Sayre. The coach said he has decided to rehitch the All-American decathlete. Hargett said thatSayre has an excellent chance to make the 1984 U.S. Olympic team. By doing this the Saluki coach feels Sayre will get the benefit of working with the team under his guidance, which will improve his chances of making the U.S. team.

Hargett said it may do the same with weightman John Smith, but will not make a final decision on it until fall.

Hargett said despite the loss of Sayre's points in the pole vault, the Salukis will still be strong in that event.
