France to put 2 warships in Persian Gulf

PARIS (UPI) — The French government, locked in a diplomatic war of nerves with Iran, said Tuesday it will deploy two warships armed with sea-skimming Exocet missiles in the Persian Gulf to protect French shipping.

France took the step, which coincided with the U.S. reflagging of Kuwaiti tankers, 10 days after Iran attacked a French container vessel in the gulf and as a diplomatic crisis between Paris and Tehran entered its fifth day with no apparent solution in sight.

France severed diplomatic ties with Iran last Friday in a dispute over a French demand to arrest and question Wahid Gordji, a translator at the Iranian mission in Paris, about a wave of terror bombings in Paris last year.

Both nations have refused to allow each other's diplomats to leave the country. French military forces around the globe have been placed on heightened alert because of threats of retaliation against France by pro-Iranian extremists.

The government said Tuesday that the two Navy frigates — the Victor Schoelcher and the Protet — would escort two French oil tankers scheduled to enter the waters of the gulf this week.

Each vessel is equipped with a helicopter, an array of anti-aircraft and surface guns and four Exocet missiles, the sea-skimming French missiles used by Iraq in its apparently accidental attack on the USS Stark in May that killed 37 American seamen.

"We are not in the business of discussing our deployment plans," a defense ministry spokesman told United Press International, "but it is no secret that our ships are equipped with Exocet missiles."

Ambroise Guellec, the French secretary of state for maritime affairs, said Tuesday France had a "dual objective of safeguarding our economic interests in this region and also ensuring security for our shipping and crews."

French merchant shipping had been advised to steer clear of the Persian Gulf, where merchant vessels and oil tankers have often been caught in the crossfire of the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

5 university towns favor change in drinking fine

By Karen Wells
Staff Writer

Five of seven Illinois university towns have responded favorably to an informal survey seeking legislation that would increase the minimum fine for underage drinking, City Clerk Janet Vaught said at Monday night's Carbondale Liquor Control Commission meeting.

Underage drinking fines, which are set at the discretion of the circuit court judge, range from $10 to $500, depending on the circumstances.

Underage drinking fines and other fines are established by the state government. Therefore, legislative action would be needed in order for a fine increase to occur.

Cities that support the proposal are Macomb, Charleston, DeKalb,

Poindexter ends testimony by restating defense of role

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Members of the Iran-Contra panel pointedly questioned John Poindexter about his skimpy memory of critical events in the scandal, but an administration loyalist said the witness's chief fault in the affair was that "you put yourself between Ronald Reagan and the American people."

The former national security adviser, 50, wound down his fifth and final day of public testimony before the select House-Senate committees by reiterating his defense of his actions in the worst scandal of the Reagan presidency.

The committees released a deposition from Lt. Col. Robert Earl, once a National Security Council aide to Lt. Col. Oliver North, who contradicted his former boss's testimony that North shredded documents while Justice Department officials were going through North's files Nov. 22.

Answering questions under limited immunity from prosecution, Poindexter, a rear admiral now working a Pentagon desk job, again insisted Tuesday he alone approved the diversion of excess profits from the 1986 U.S. arms sales to Iran to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels — and he never told Reagan about the scheme.

However, several lawmakers, including Rep. Michael DeWine, R-Ohio, criticized Poindexter for taking unto himself a president-sized decision.

DeWine noted that on Wednesday, his first day of testimony, Poindexter said, "The buck stops with me," but the Ohio Republican said, "In this country, the buck can only stop one place, and that's in the Oval Office, and that sign originally was in Harry Truman's Oval Office, not on his national security adviser's desk."

"You took the key player, the best player, out of the game," DeWine said.

Attard channels energy to University success

By Eric Oestmann
Staff Writer

While having lunch the other day, John Attard said "hi" to several people in the lunch room, smiled and called them by their first names with a pleasant, authoritative voice.

He stopped eating once to briefly chat with a waitress. While on the way to pay for his lunch, he stopped to glad-hand another acquaintance.

The USO president fumbled with the table's salt and pepper shakers for a moment and looked around the crowded Student Center lunch room several times.

"Earlier in my life I found I had this nervous energy and I decided to use it to get involved with organizations," Attard said.

Some organizations Attard had been involved with during the last three years are the Carbondale Big Brother Program, Phi Sigma Epsilon, the Obelisk II publishing board of directors, the General Studies Advisory Council, the General Academic Activity Panel and the Student Health Policy Board.

USO positions Attard has held are East Campus Judicial Board chairman, West Campus representative and vice president.

He uses a "common sense" approach to running the USO, Attard said. Board members are assigned a certain topic and USO becomes dependant on them for input.

Each board member tries to listen to other members' shared input with an open mind, getting all the board members involved, Attard said.

Iran expected to reject U.N. proposal to end war

By United Press International

Iran Tuesday branded as "unjust" a U.N. resolution demanding an immediate cease-fire in the nearly 7-year-old Persian Gulf war, while Iraq said its top leaders would meet to discuss the order. Iran, which refused to abide by past cease-fire resolutions, is expected to reject most demands by the U.N. Security Council, which unanimously warned the two nations to stop fighting or face the possibility of punitive measures. Rajaie Khorassani.

Extremists clash with anti-apartheid students

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — A crowd of extremist whites, protesting the return of an Afrikans delegation that met with black South African rebels, clashed Tuesday with anti-apartheid students at Johannesburg's airport. Scores of police, some leading attack dogs, were deployed at Jan Smuts airport amid right-wing threats against some 50 academics and churchmen who defied the government and met with the outlawed African National Congress rebels in Dakar, Senegal.

Palestine, Shiite forces battle for 4th day

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Palestinian and Shiite Amal militias battled in southern Lebanon for a fourth day Tuesday, raising fears that a second "war of the camps" might erupt, police and security sources said. In northern Lebanon, one Syrian soldier was killed and three injured when gunmen in a speeding car fired two anti-tank rockets and opened fire with a machine gun at a Syrian checkpoint in the city of Tripoli, 42 miles north of Beirut, police said.

S. Korean papers test reforms; open bureaus

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — South Korean newspapers, seeking more freedom under democratic reforms promised by President Chun Doo Hwan, said Tuesday they will reopen bureaus across the country closed seven years ago under government pressure. The Culture-Information Ministry also was preparing to reorganize its structure and operation to end interference in news reporting, an opposition spokesman said.

White House: trade bill likely will be vetoed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate moved toward a final vote on the trade bill Tuesday but President Reagan threatened a veto and the White House stepped up pressure on Senate Republicans to reject the measure. After GOP congressional leaders met with Reagan, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater quoted the president as telling the group the trade bill probably would be vetoed.

Postal Service reaches union agreements

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Postal Service reached a tentative agreement Tuesday with its two biggest unions on a new 40-month labor contract that sets strict limits on the number of lower paid, temporary workers hired. Postmaster General Preston Tisch said the tentative agreement, which runs from July 21, 1987, to Nov. 20, 1990, was reached at 11:30 a.m. after a 23-hour marathon bargaining session. "I believe this new agreement is a collective achievement that demonstrates our concern for our employees and our customers," said Tisch.

Reagan coal plan evokes clean air argument

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A key administration official said Tuesday President Reagan's proposed $2.5 billion clean coal technology program may pave the way for sharply increased exports of U.S. coal. But a Republican congressman from New York accused the administration of engaging in "politics of evasion" in an effort to avoid controls on emissions that cause acid rain. The sharply differing views were expressed at House hearings on prospects for the export of coal and coal technologies.

Court: station must give politicians equal time

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A television station must give "equal time" to opposing candidates if one of its newscasters runs for office, a federal appeals court ruled Tuesday. The decision by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia came in the case of William Branch, a general assignment reporter for KOVR-TV in Sacramento, Calif. Branch, who dropped out of a race for town council because of the equal time rule, argued that his constitutional right to run for office had been violated.

Forbes writer refuses request to reveal names

NEW YORK (UPI) — A widely quoted researcher said Tuesday he was dropped as a columnist for Forbes magazine because he refused to divulge the names of the men and women he has interviewed for surveys regarding money and sex.

"I was not about to betray the confidence of the people I've interviewed over the years," said Srully Blotnick, 46, author of five books and a regular Forbes columnist since 1979.

The controversy over Blotnick's research started Sunday when an article in the New York Daily News said he "built his own career on sand." The article quoted several psychologists who questioned his research.

The article also reported that Blotnick's doctorate in psychology was received from Pacific Western University, a correspondence college not recognized by the American Psychological Association.

Three of Blotnick's books have sold more than 100,000 copies. Many of his surveys on sex have received national attention, including a 1986 poll that showed more than half of the single professional woman surveyed had affairs with co-workers, and another that showed three times more women on college campus want men to be virgins than they did a decade ago. He has appeared on national television talk shows and in the pages of The New York Times, Washington Post, Psychology Today and other publications.

While he was referred to as a "business psychologist" in the magazine, he is not licensed as a psychologist in New York state and is not a member of the local or national psychological associations.

Blotnick said his research was based on interviews with 5,600 men and 3,200 women going back 20 years.

"If somebody thinks I made up all this stuff, I'm flattered. I've spent my whole life doing these interviews," he said.

Blotnick challenged other polls, saying all of them "have some degree of subjectivity. To get a really objective poll you'd have to have a lie detector strapped on the people interviewed."

It was not immediately known whether any legal action would be taken against Blotnick, but an official at the State Board for Psychologists said it is illegal to use the title "psychologist" without the proper credentials.

"He could be investigated and asked to drop the use of the title. If he does not comply, then he could be charged with a felony," said Judy Hall, executive secretary of the board.

Department head to coordinate city emergency, disaster agency

By Karen Wells
Staff Writer

The City of Carbondale has appointed a new coordinator of the Emergency Services and Disaster Agency.

Tom Harris, director of the city's Lake and Forestry Department, was named coordinator Tuesday by City Manager Bill Dixon during a news conference at city hall.

Harris, 46, will keep his present position.

Combining both positions is a logical arrangement, Dixon said. The merging of the two positions is an effort to reduce staffing while not affecting city services, he added.

"This is part of overall effort to provide an acceptable level of service to the citizens while seeing if we can do it with fewer people," particularly fewer technical and managerial people," Dixon said.

Harris will be responsible for working with the news media in conveying information about emergencies to the public. He also will work with 12 to 22 volunteers during storms, tornadoes, earthquakes, train derailments and other disasters.

Ron Herter of the city's Street Division will be the deputy ESDA coordinator, a new position established in conjunction with Harris' appointment. Herter's duties include staffing the city's Emergency Operations Center during weather watches and warnings after normal business hours.

Former Coordinator Jim Churney resigned in May.

North isn't a hero, he's an ad gimmick

OLIVER NORTH is the new American hero. Right up there with John Wayne and Superman, he's fighting for truth, justice and the American Way. Or so some of the more easily swayed may think. Americans aren't exactly backing North 100 percent, but you couldn't tell by all the pro-North publicity. There are T-shirts emblazoned with North's likeness. There are boxer shorts embossed with "America is behind you, Ollie" on the rear.

There are Ollie North dolls, Ollie North songs and Ollie North haircuts. There's even a hero sandwich named after North. The entertainment industry can't be far behind. Soon, suggestions of a sitcom, "Ollie Meets the Huxtables," or a feature film, "Ollie Meets Rambo," may join the ranks of this madness.

WHO IS THIS Ollie North, and why is his name so frequently found in the hearts and minds of Americans?

Beats us. North is far from a hero. He's a yes man who did what he was told. And that involved lying to the government of that great nation North had sworn to protect, the United States of America.

North says he loves the USA. If that's true, why did he disregard the checks and balances that were built into the system. He and his cronies were bound by law to inform Congress of under-the-table dealings such as the Iran-Contra affair. They didn't. Instead they lied about what they were doing when Congress questioned them about it.

SURE IT'S IMPORTANT to keep covert operations secret, as North and his pals claim. But when a small group of Superpatriots go behind the back of the government, something's wrong. It may not be necessary or desirable for the American people to know about such covert actions, but the American government has to know what is going on in its name for the sake of liberty.

North claimed his actions were for the good of America. Maybe that's why some Americans like him; he's standing up for Mom, apple pie and the democratic ideal, by God.

But some in the small group that wasn't swayed by the emotional appeal of North's flag-waving testimonial sense that in some ways, the Iran-Contra affair is remarkably similar to the Watergate scandal. In both, supporters of the president and his administration broke the law and then tried to cover it up. In both, the news leaked out. And in both, those involved made a bigger name for themselves as law breakers than law abiders.

Like John Dean and G. Gordon Liddy, North's finding out that bad guys can finish first. And North didn't even have to write a book. The publishing houses, restaurants and toy manufacturers did it for him.

Life on campus in the year 2001: The forests are made of cement

The year is 2001. Life on earth is pretty much as usual. Southern Illinois University is a thriving, well oiled machine. Its job: fabricate people into cogs for a society ever-bent on toppling trees and replacing them with concrete monuments.

All landscaping has ceased to exist on campus; not a tree to be seen anywhere. Thompson lake was filled in back in '89. (AIDS-carrying mosquitoes and toxic waste posed a major health hazard.) The land has been covered with asphalt or concrete. A few token plants are sprinkled along astro-turfed walkways.

On a misty evening, the night air is transmitting an eerie pink glow generated by the gas vapor anti-rape lights. (Installed after all the trees were cut down to prevent would-be attackers from hiding behind them.)

I was going from the Student Center past the PCB transformer to the asbestos-filled Morris Library. While walking, my mind wandered to a planet in another galaxy. It was void of life and atmosphere; with my life-support pack on my back, I was off exploring for clues to any previous life forms.

Suddenly my dream state was interrupted by sparks flying, followed by a pop, arf and insidious howl. One of the few dogs left had just bitten the dust. Poor thing mistook an ESM (electronic surveillance monitor) for a tree.

As one of the persons who can remember when trees edged the lake and dogs ran free, I can honestly say, "I miss them." — Hank Davis, Makanda.

Asserting self doesn't mean being feminist

On July 17, Nicole Glasser wrote a letter in reference to Pat Sweet's comment, "I don't mean to sound like a feminist," in which she rightfully said women should not be afraid to "assert their rights."

However, I don't believe that when women like Sweet separate themselves from the feminist movement they are afraid to assert themselves.

The feminist movement, like most equal rights movements, started with some excellent ideas that even the most conservative people could agree with, such as equal pay for equal work. Unfortunately, they moved beyond their original ideas and some feminists made statements that made the movement as a whole look silly and fanatical.

As a result, that is how the movement is today regarded by the majority of people. Therefore, I feel Sweet's comment could be rephrased.

I don't mean to sound like a fanatic, but I do want to assert my human rights. — Edward James DeYoung, Radio and Television.

Rapist should not return to school

I want to take a minute and express my reactions to a recent news item. A rapist, committed indefinitely to a psychiatric center after admitting to raping college students, wants to be released and allowed to live here and attend SIU.

No guarantees can be made that he won't rape again, but his doctors feel that certain conditions to his release preclude much danger to the public's safety. Those precautions are requiring him to work or attend school and to avoid drugs and alcohol. That certainly makes me feel safe!

I realize that there is a possibility he won't rape again, but he wants to enter the same type of environment in which he raped or attempted to rape three women.

Considering this campus' record for rapes (at least reported Springfest weekend), I'm quite sure this man's addition to our campus would be unwelcome. If I, or my daughter, lived in the same dorm as this man, I would most certainly be worried.

I don't know whether a formal protest, e.g. petitions, would keep this man off our campus, but it couldn't hurt.

Several communities in California organized and kept a paroled rapist out of their towns. I would like to see some interest in getting a similar campaign going here. — Sharon Bowman, graduate student, psychology.

Lonetree court-martial to begin

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sgt. Clayton Lonetree, the only former Marine guard at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow facing espionage charges in the sex-for-secrets scandal, goes before a court-martial Wednesday, the corps said Tuesday.

The military trial at the Quantico, Va., Marine base will be open to the media, corps spokesman said.

Lonetree, 25, of Chicago, confined to the brig at the base, is to be tried on 18 charges including espionage, three counts of conspiracy to commit espionage and five counts of disclosing the identity of U.S. intelligence operatives to Soviet agents.

Conviction of all counts carries a maximum penalty of life in prison, dishonorable discharge, forfeiture of all pay and allowances and reduction in rank to the lowest nav grade, the Marines said.

Allegations that Lonetree and Cpl. Arnold Bracy, 21, of New York, escorted Soviet agents through the embassy building on numerous occasions and allowed them access to secret areas were dropped after corroborating evidence could not be obtained from Bracy.

All charges against Bracy, who also had been accused of espionage, subsequently were dismissed for lack of evidence.

Further charges that Lonetree had stolen classified documents also were withdrawn "because they were not considered substantial in light of the extremely serious nature of the other alleged offenses," the Marines said at the time.

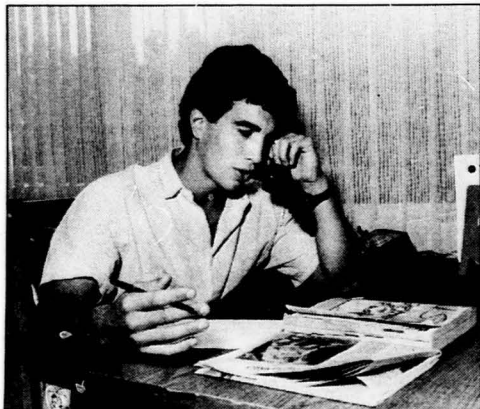

One of Lonetree's lawyers, William Kunstler of New York, has said dropping some of the charges against his client indicated there was little evidence to convict the Marine sergeant. He predicted eventual victory in the case.

Lt. Gen. Frank Petersen, the commander at Quantico, referred Lonetree's case to a general court-martial May 15 following a pre-trial grand jury style hearing that determined there was sufficient evidence to prosecute the Marine.

Several other Marines who served with Lonetree at the embassy have been charged with crimes other than espionage.

One of them, Staff Sgt. Robert Stufflebeam, 25, of Bloomington, Ill., faces a court-martial in September on allegations that he had an affair with one Soviet woman while serving at the embassy and then lied about it under oath. Stufflebeam was not confined to the Quantico brig.

"The USO tries to get involved with concerns before they become problems," he said.

"John is one of the most popular students on campus and has a knack for working

City approves liquor license for Egyptian Sports Center

By Karen Wells
Staff Writer

The Egyptian Sports Center's request for a liquor license Monday was given final approval by Carbondale's Liquor Control Commission.

The center, 1215 E. Walnut, has under construction what is thought to be the largest beer garden in Carbondale's history. The facility will include a deck, four volleyball courts, three softball fields and a hill from which the athletic events can be observed.

Greg Eversden, owner of the center, said these areas will be surrounded by a five- to 20-foot-high fence. He said liquor will not be allowed on the softball fields or volleyball courts.

To prevent underage drinking and ensure that no one carries liquor outside of the center or other areas designated for liquor, video cameras will be used to constantly monitor the areas, Eversden said.

measures to either guarantee the employment of merchant seamen if they are ordered out of the gulf or protect them in the dangerous waters.

The Defense Ministry, which declined to pinpoint the locations of two frigates, ordered the Victor Schoelcher into gulf waters last week following the Iranian naval attack on the container vessel Ville d'Anvers.

It said the frigate accompanied the damaged container ship from Bahrain, where it was repaired, to the Strait of Hormuz at the gateway to the Persian Gulf, where a U.S. fleet is preparing to enter.

A Defense Ministry source said other ships of the French Indian Ocean naval command could be called on if necessary. After the United States, France is the leading Western naval power in the world.

Shipping sources said France is dependent on the Persian Gulf for 20 percent of its oil requirements and that its shipping in the area is limited to about three oil tankers per week.

A French Foreign Ministry spokesman said Iranian revolutionary guards are still maintaining a blockade of the French Embassy in Tehran.

Bloomington and Campaign Urbana and Normal declined to support the proposed legislation. The proposal, initiated by Carbondale, also is supported by the city.

Urbana Mayor Jeffrey T. Markland said he does not think increasing the fines would stop underage drinking, Vaughn said. City officials from Normal did not provide any comments, she said.

Vaughn said she contacted the seven schools by letter May 12 to solicit support for the increase after the matter was discussed at a Carbondale City Council meeting May 11.

The idea to increase the fine resulted after the sanction that prevented the selling of beer in anything larger than 12 ounce containers — pitchers — was lifted May 11. The pitcher ban was intended to keep minors from obtaining beer from drinkers of legal age who purchased pitchers.

Hunting Sleeve packs bags for success search in East

By Winnie Stones
Staff Writer

It's time to move on to bigger and better things for the Makanda rock 'n' roll band Hunting Sleeve.

The band plans to travel to the East Coast in the fall. It will aim for Boston, a progressive music mecca. Martin Vaughan, guitarist and co-founder of the band, said he feels there is a bigger, more responsive market for Hunting Sleeve's highly original style of rock 'n' roll to be found on the East Coast.

"There is only so much success to be had in this town," Vaughan said. There isn't really a market for original music in Carbondale or the Midwest, Vaughan said.

BAR OWNERS won't hire original acts as much as the cover bands that play music their customers are more familiar with, Vaughan said. The bar owners are afraid to take risks, he said.

Carbondale gave Hunting Sleeve a good start though, Vaughn said. The band first played in Carbondale in May 1985 at the old progressive music bar Airwaves, now the site of the '50s and '60s music bar, T-Birds.

In fall 1984, Vaughan came to the University to study music business, bringing with him Hunting Sleeve's other founder, Terry Flechs. Flechs, who is the principal songwriter and bassist, majored in electrical management.

Hunting Sleeve was a hard-core power trio then, with Vaughan, Flechs, and any available drummer, pounding out primitive versions of their trademark originals such as

"7,000 Times," "Saratoga," and Art Clokey's "Gumby."

SINCE ITS trio days, the band has added saxophonist Brian Overall. Jeff Townsend has become the band's permanent drummer.

Its sound has an overall hardcore feel to it, but with three- and four-part harmonies, a saxophone and '60s style feedback guitar, they obtain a unique sound.

"We're not a timid band," Vaughan said, commenting on the band's tendency toward loud, aggressive music. Lyrically and in overall feeling, a song might be a ballad, but in the hands of Hunting Sleeve even ballads end up pounding the listener's ear drums.

As principal songwriter, Flechs has a lot of control over the band's sound. His songwriting reflects country and western, blues, soul, punk and new wave influences.

UNTIL THIS summer, Flechs basically relied on his natural ability when playing music. He had very little formal musical training except for four free bass lessons from a Fairfield music shop owner.

Things are changing for Flechs, who started taking music lessons from jazz bassist Harold Miller this summer. Miller, a lecturer in the School of Music's popular "Rock and Pop" music class and host of the WSIU jazz program "Miller Time," said, "He's really hungry to learn...has a lot of interesting ideas."

Flechs said he's "in limbo at the moment" as far as songwriting goes. He's worried more about his bass playing techniques than songwriting, he said, adding that he's confused about what to do

Oil tankers' protection formidable

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon activated the media pool for the first time in a real military operation Sunday for coverage of the U.S. escorts of Kuwaiti tankers as the first dispatches arrived from the Persian Gulf Tuesday.

Future dispatches will be censored to avoid the release of information that could endanger the escort mission, Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims said. The operation was expected to begin Tuesday night or this morning.

The 10-person pool was the seventh one activated in the aftermath of the 1983 Army and Marine Corps invasion of Grenada, during which the Pentagon barred the media from covering the operation during its first three days.

But it was the first pool assigned to a legitimate military operation, rather than a drill, and the first one to range so far from U.S. shores. In the only other overseas activation, a pool was shuttled to Honduras to watch U.S. troops engaging in training exercises.

The pool took off in a C-135 military jetliner from Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington for the gulf region at 1 a.m. Sunday.

"It was the first actual use of the media pool for a contingency operation, and we are pleased with the excellent cooperation we have received," Sims told reporters.

Pentagon activates media pool for Gulf

KUWAIT (UPI) — The United States has assembled a powerful array of warships and jets to protect reflagged Kuwaiti oil tankers traveling through the dangerous waters of the Persian Gulf.

U.S. military officials say the ships and planes have enough sophisticated electronic surveillance and jamming equipment to spot and baffle almost any attacker.

A destroyer, three cruisers and four frigates are protecting the tankers in the gulf with guided anti-ship and anti-missile missiles. The destroyer and cruisers have 5-inch guns that can hit a target more than 15 miles away.

The Gulf Task Force has high-technology, long-range radar that enables it to destroy an aircraft before it comes within range to launch a missile and to immediately detect an enemy's missile radar being locked onto it.

next. Learning to read music has made songwriting a whole new ballgame.

EVEN WITH Flech's confusion, the band believes in its music. They've had some good breaks in Carbondale, the most important being direct contact with Steve Lamberson, who at one time owned a recording studio in town. He is now production manager for the successful Nashville act Jason and the Scorchers.

Lamberson helped Hunting Sleeve produce a three-song single due for national release to college radio as soon as he gets off tour with Jason, which should be by the end of July or early August.

The single, which will be on the band's independent DIGGY-DAGGY label, will show a sample of the band's original material. It will include "7,000 Times," which sounds like it was made with college radio in mind, the funk-hardcore "Inside Joke" and the artful "Walking Monster."

HUNTING SLEEVE has amassed a catalog of more than 30 original songs. Their live sets consist of about 90 percent original material, with a few obscure covers, including The Commodores' "Brickhouse," Gun Club's "Sex Beat," Jimi Hendrix' "Fire" and Devo's "Mongoloid."

The band will perform its alternative style of rock 'n' roll at Hangar 9 tonight.

1987 SUMMER FINAL EXAM SCHEDULE

Because of the limited number of examination periods available, no departmental examination times are scheduled for the Summer. The following points are pertinent to the final examination schedule:

1. The class final exam period is scheduled based on the meeting time and days listed on the first line of the class entry in the Schedule of Classes book (which should be the same as the first printed line for the section on the registered student's schedule print-out). For example, a class section is listed in the Schedule book on two lines in the manner:

07:30 - 8:30 T TH
08:49 - 09:40 W F

The scheduled class time for the first line of the entry starts with "07" and the meeting days for that line are "T TH" only. Therefore the exam time is 8:00-9:50 a.m. Friday, August 7, as is indicated on the attached Summer Final Examination Schedule.

2. Classes should plan to hold their final examination in their regularly scheduled class rooms. The space scheduling section of the Office of Admissions and Records will forward to departments information relative to the location for examinations for those classes that cannot hold examinations in their regularly scheduled rooms because of a space conflict. This will be done sufficiently in advance of the final examination days to provide adequate notice for all.

3. Students who find they have more than three examinations on one day may petition, and students who have two examinations scheduled at one time should petition their academic dean for approval to take an examination during the make-up examination period on the last day. Provision for such a make-up examination period does not mean that students may decide to miss the scheduled examination time and expect to make it up during this make-up period. This period is to be used only for students whose petitions have been approved by their dean.

4. Students who must miss a final examination may not take an examination before the time scheduled for the class examination. Information relative to the proper grade to be given students who miss a final examination and are not involved in a situation covered in the preceding paragraph will be found in the mimeographed memorandum forwarded to members of the instructional staff at the time they receive the final grade listing for the recording of grades.

1. One credit-hour courses, and classes scheduled for meeting dates less than the full 8-week session have their examinations during the last regularly scheduled class period prior to the two formal exam days.

2. Other classes (those scheduled for the full 8-week session) should hold their final exams according to the following:

Sex, political intrigue add spice to 'Overbury'

By Winnie Stones
Staff Writer

Murder, intrigue, sex — all fine elements in a play — are present in "Overbury," a 1987 Playwrights' Workshop production by Charissa Menefee Cook.

Set during the reign of King James I in 1614 London, the play deals with political manipulation through sex.

Though it's titled "Overbury," most of the dialogue in the play is from the character of Robert Carr, one of King James' advisors. Treated dotingly by James, Carr, played by Sean Mitchell Clark, is the king's "favorite," with the pet name of "Robin."

CARR HAS fallen under the spell of Lady Frances Howard, who wants to secure a place on the king's court for her uncle by marrying the king's advisor. Sandra Cawley is particularly devious in this role.

Even though Carr already thinks Lady Howard is very beautiful, the lady thinks he'll need an extra push, in the form of a drug, so he won't see that she's trying to manipulate him. She employs the services of apothecary Sweet Anne Turner, another devious character, who is played by JoAnn M. Givens.

Sir Thomas Overbury, Carr's secretary and friend, sees what is happening with Lady Howard. Always watching his boss' best interests, Overbury bursts into the lady's bed chamber, interrupting her and Carr, to tell Carr that the king desires his presence. After Carr leaves the chamber, Overbury tells the lady that he knows what she's trying to do and threatens to expose the plot to the king.

BUDDY WHITE gave the character of Overbury a lot of spunk and resolution, but it's Overbury's talent for writing poetry, specifically a damaging poem about Lady Howard, that gets him locked in the castle tower.

After Overbury is imprisoned, Carr begins to mentally deteriorate. He is clearly under Lady Howard's spell now. Under pressure from her, he has locked his best friend in the tower and is constantly asking his king for favors such as helping to annul

Sir Thomas Overbury, played by Buddy White, pleads with the King, played by Charles Ramsey, not to have the guards, Michael

Lady Howard's previous marriage and getting jewels for her wedding gown.

Ramsey gave a strong performance in the role of the sometimes childish King James I.

Strain, the action of the play moved smoothly, with a series of 17 short scenes in two acts. At times the scenes would end too quickly, leaving the audience feeling shortchanged and wanting a little bit more.

The king, who plainly loves his "Robin," blindly complies to each request. Charles

Greenspan questioned by Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Banking Committee Tuesday quizzed economist Alan Greenspan, President Reagan's choice to head the Federal Reserve Board, challenging his ability to "say nix" to Reagan and congressional boosters of an easy money policy.

Committee Chairman William Proxmire, D-Wis., predicted Greenspan will win easy Senate approval to follow Paul Volcker as chairman of the central bank, but held out the possibility he might vote against the nomination.

"Are you the man who can say 'no' to the administration and the Congress?" Proxmire demanded, recalling Greenspan's role as a "get-along, go-along, comfortable and increasingly popular" chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Ford.

"You may have to reverse that congenial, cooperative spirit," Proxmire said. "You have to find it in you to deny the president the easy money policy he and his party want. You have to say nix to the Congress, too."

scrimmage and continues working in a muscular strength program for her knee, calf and ankle, which include activities such as swimming, running distance and sprinting. She also participates in jumping and rebounding drills and cutting and shooting exercises.

"It's pretty much what you would do at practice," Perkins said.

Bonds also avoids red meat and sweets to take off the weight she gained when inactive.

"When I was on crutches, I gained 15-20 lbs.," Bonds said.

"A lot of people gain weight when they're injured," Perkins said. "She thinks she's gained a little bit, but she doesn't look it."

Saying that Bonds has always been "very lean and muscular", Perkins said that increased activity level should take care of the extra pounds.

"I lose weight pretty fast during the season," Bonds added.

Bonds maintains an excellent outlook on her injury and rehabilitation process. Although she was "mad" about the injury at first, Bonds feels the rehab process has done nothing but improve her playing skills.

"I think it's really helping me — going back to the basics and doing it right this time," Bonds said.

Two other recruits signed this spring — Lamar Polo Powell and Troy Cook of Kirkwood, Mo. — were released from scholarships earlier this summer. Dorr said that both had requested to be released from their letters of intent if they were found to be academically ineligible after completing high school.

Swim club readies for weekend fest

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

The Central Master Swimmers 1987 Long Course Swimming Championships may be a lengthy title, but planners of the event hope it boils down to something shorter — good old-fashioned fun.

Saturday and Sunday at the Student Recreation Center pool, members of the Saluki Master Swim Club play host to their first-ever on-campus event as over 100 master swimmers from Illinois, Indiana and Missouri compete for glory—or just for the heck of it.

The Saluki Master Swim Club is a group of swimmers who practice and compete together. As part of a national organization, the club travels around the Midwest to various meets sanctioned by the national body.

This weekend's meet, however, is the first the Saluki club has ever held "at home."

Club member Bill McMinn, associate director of intramural facilities, said the club members are excited about hosting their first meet.

"We've been working and planning this thing for five months now," McMinn said. "We think it'll be a great success."

Clay Kolar, a former All-America swimmer at Eastern Illinois and coach of the Saluki Club, and club members Mary Pullman and Larry Goode were all instrumental in working out the necessary arrangements, McMinn said. "We've got about 100 people entered, with at least three national and world record holders who will be competing," McMinn said. "Overall, 14 teams will be competing."

McMinn said that he was certain more events would be held in Carbondale after participants saw first-hand the quality of SIU-C's swimming facilities.

"We have such a first-rate facility here that it'd be hard for people to not be impressed," McMinn said. "That's one reason we're so excited—we want to get these people on campus to show them what we've got to offer."

While competitive swimming may seem to be the focus at such sanctioned events, McMinn said it's easy for people to misinterpret the intent of Master Swim Clubs.

"To be in a Masters Swim Club, all you have to be is 19 or

With his players scheduled to arrive on campus on Aug. 9, SIU-C football coach Ray Dorr is figuring out who exactly who will be reporting.

After announcing Anthony Vaughn's ineligibility this spring and lineman J.P. Watters' ineligibility in late June, Dorr says he's put a lot of time into thinking about the football program's academics. "I wish grading football players was as easy as giving an A, B or C," Dorr said. "But there are so many things that must be considered."

Dorr says he's generally pleased with the football team's 2.34 overall grade point average and the 2.42 posted during the spring semester, but he added that "any failure is too much" and a decent GPA didn't make up for anything.

"If we lose even one of our 139 kids because of academic reasons, it's a terrible tragedy," Dorr said. "We have the mechanisms to help every student-athlete on the team."

Dorr said that when academic problems arise, the situation must be evaluated to determine if it's a problem of the individual or a problem caused by the system or coaching staff.

"Sometimes it's an individual thing and that's something we can help just so much until the individual makes some decisions," Dorr said. "We will help them if they want it. They have to accept it, along with their other responsibilities."

Vaughn, who's slashing running style as a red-shirt freshman impressed Saluki coaches and fans, was released before spring drills for a combination of bad grades and poor class attendance.

Watters, a 6-7, 280-pound offensive lineman, was declared ineligible after grades for the spring semester were released. Watters was listed No. 2 on the depth charts behind Pete Jansons.

Both have discussed with Dorr the possibility of returning to campus this fall in an attempt to work out their academic problems.

"Both will attend SIU-C this fall," Dorr said. "Both could practice, but we aren't going to let them. They'll be just students for a while and then maybe they can win back their scholarships."

Dorr said both players would lose a year of eligibility since both had already used a red-shirt year.

Three more Saluki gridders are attending classes this summer in an attempt to remain academically eligible, but Dorr declined to comment on exactly who the players were. All three are key players listed No. 1 or No. 2 on the preseason depth charts, Dorr said.

Two recruits signed to scholarships this spring also may be in some academic trouble.

Highly-touted running back Ken Parks of Joliet does not yet have the ACT test scores required by the NCAA's Proposition 48 for freshman competition.

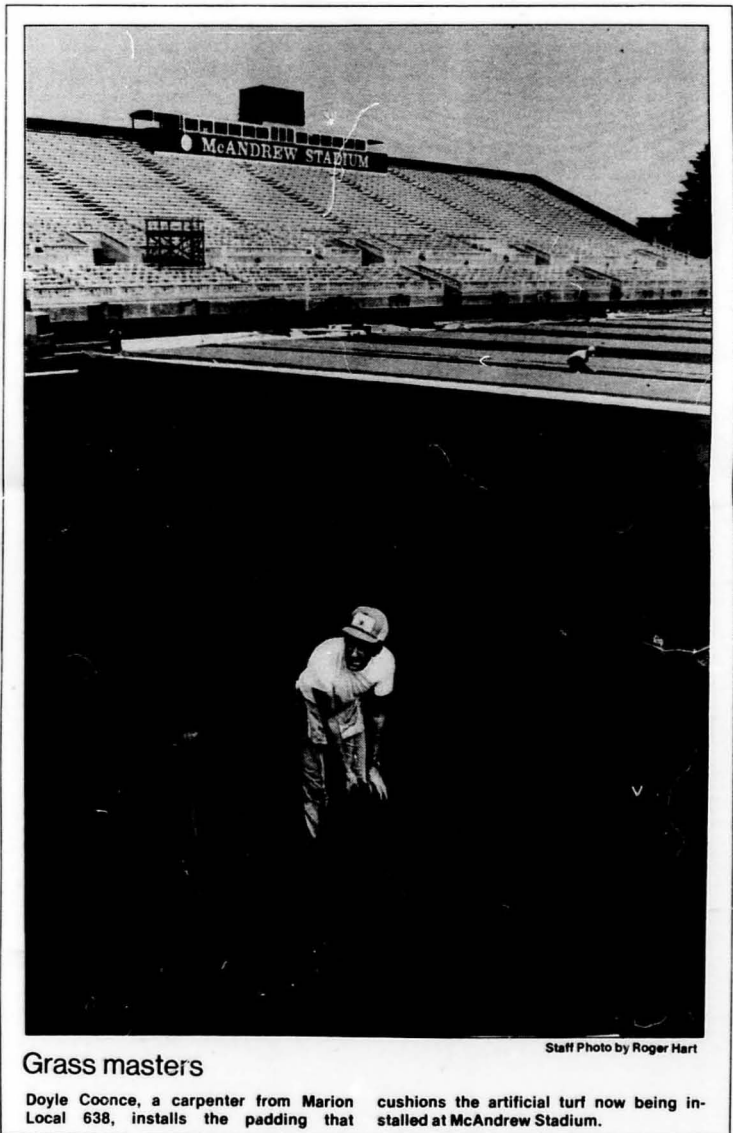

Dorr said Parks would definitely attend SIU-C this fall, regardless of eligibility, and speculated that Parks may yet meet the needed requirements.

"We told Kenny that we'd honor his scholarship even if he didn't make the test scores needed to play that first year," Dorr said. "We looked at his academics and we felt he was capable of doing college-level work."

Dorr said Parks could retake the test until the first day of classes.

Sidelined woman cager prepares for fall comeback

The forecast looks favorable for Saluki cager Bridgett Bonds' return to the court this fall after a knee injury last February put her out for the remainder of the 1986-1987 season.

"She's doing great," Saily Perkins, Bonds' trainer, said. "She's progressed faster than most people. We've held her back and been a little bit more conservative because there was no rush — we had the whole summer to rehabilitate."

Bonds, who attends school and works as a word processor on campus this summer, said she was "taking her time" with rehabilitation.

Bonds was injured in a Feb. 16 game when an Illinois State player fell and collided with her.

Dr. William Thorpe, Saluki orthopedist, performed surgery on the next day at St. Francis Medical Center in Cape Girardeau, Mo. Thorpe repaired the torn ligament and lining of the knee, called the capsule, by stitching the injury through an incision on the inside of the knee.

The injured athlete wore a full-leg cast until March 26, and finally began an exercise program April 6, a program which increased in difficulty as her condition progressed. She started running again May 27 and is now able to run without pain or favoring her leg, Perkins said.

"Everything with rehab is based on percentage of strength from leg to leg," Perkins said. When last tested, Bonds had 76 of her original "quad and ham strength", which means she could lift 126 pounds with her uninjured leg and only 96 pounds with her recovering right.

Bonds now concentrates on quad muscle development, the muscles she believes play a big factor in protecting the knee.
