Marion mayor defends Mall funding

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

Marion Mayor Robert L. Butler took the stand again Thursday to defend the $18.6 million in tax increment financing bonds that the city used to finance the proposed Illinois Centre Mall development.

"We are so convinced that this is the best thing to happen to the city of Marion that we will do whatever we can, properly and legally, to get it going," Butler said. Butler's testimony came on the third day of trial in a lawsuit filed by Marion businessman J.D. Castellano against Marion.

Castellano, operator of Marion's Westmore Plaza shopping center on Route 13, has accused the city of improperly using TIF subsidies for the project. He claims he was discriminated against when the plaza was denied TIF benefits last year.

Castellano and his co-plaintiff, Marion resident Ron Emery, contend that the Brookings property, which is on Route 13 west of Marion where the city proposes to build the mall, does not qualify for TIF because it is not a blighted area, it is not consistent with Marion's comprehensive city plan and it could be developed without public subsidies.

Castellano said the Illinois Centre TIF is in direct conflict with the city's comprehensive plan, which is to protect Marion's downtown plans on the square.

Under commission by plaintiff's attorney Terry Grimm, Butler countered Castellano's allegations and reiterated the arguments of Marion's legal counsel, stating that several geographic features of the property made it eligible for the blighted classification, including culverts and aquatic characteristics.

Land zoning experts testified earlier that the property in question would have been developed without public subsidy.

Hope lost of finding any more survivors

BAGUIO, Philippines (UPI) — Rescuers lost hope of finding survivors Thursday, three days after a massive earthquake in the northern Philippines left at least 429 people dead, officials said.

"We're not optimistic about anybody being alive," said Philippine Maj. Rache Logrono. He said the search was confined to retrieving bodies because "we owe them a decent burial."

Workers using explosives partially cleared landslides blocking the 120-mile road from Manila to the hard-hit city of Baguio, but officials said relief workers would not be able to pass until the road is opened further.

More than 384 aftershocks have rocked the area since Monday's earthquake measuring 7.7 on the Richter scale rumbled across the main Philippine island of Luzon, officials said.

The quake, centered in Cabanatuan, 60 miles north of Manila, was the deadliest to strike the Philippines since an earthquake and tidal wave killed more than 3,000 people on the southern island of Mindanao in August 1976.

The military civil defense said the latest quake killed 429 people and injured at least 706. The government ran television stations

Illinois, Kentucky enter nuclear waste study

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The commission overseeing the handling of low-level nuclear waste in Illinois and Kentucky Thursday agreed on a five-year study designed to ensure future treatment of the waste.

The Central Midwest Interstate Low-Level Radioactive Waste Commission will spend $70,000 in the next year to explore conceptual arrangements with other multi-state nuclear waste commissions. The agreement, the first of its kind in the nation, is important because all 50 states are preparing to meet a federal deadline to build low-level nuclear dumps and manage their own nuclear waste.

If regional compacts do not reach conceptual agreements by January, the commission said, it is a possibility multi-state alliances will not emerge from the agreement. Other regional compacts and many states would be forced to build expensive new facilities to store the low-level waste.

"Some of them (compacts) are going to be confined to not accept waste for treatment unless they have their own treatment system," said Thomas Mason, a Washington, D.C.-based waste consultant, who is working with Illinois and Kentucky on the issue.

Mason said by seeking the reciprocal agreements, the two states are "anticipating problems and that's the only good."

As part of federal low-level nuclear waste rules, Illinois and Kentucky and other regional compacts must manage their low-level waste preferably by building a repository by the end of 1992. The top current choice for the Illinois-Kentucky dump is in Clark County in southeastern Illinois near the town of Mazonville.

Mason said the three commissioners of the compact commissions — one from Illinois and one from Kentucky — that way

Quake may not affect area severely

Local residents can breathe a sigh of relief to know that the earthquake predicted for Dec. 2 or 3 will not affect the area too severely according to the associate director of an earthquake research center.

Jim Dorman, associate director of the Memphis State University Center for Earthquake Research and Information, said that Carbondale would not be in the area most affected if a quake occurred along the New Madrid Fault.

Dorman said that people living in the New Madrid Fault area can expect another earthquake within the next 50 years, and so. Occasionally, one could take place this year, as predicted by scientist Don Swenson, or many years after the turn of the century. The occurrence of earthquake cannot easily be predicted—experts can guide themselves only by theories, according to William Adkins, author of "The New Madrid Earthquake, A Survival Guide to the Midwest."

According to Adkins, Memphis is on the border of the disaster zone, and is the biggest city close to the greatest fault in a seismic zone and the cities of Carbondale and St. Louis are considered to be in a disaster zone.

"Southern Illinois will feel the earthquake only if we (Memphis) get a really bad shake here," Dorman said.

"The effects of any given earthquake die away from the source, the most highly-developed area will suffer more so," Dorman said. The broadest of Missouri, western-most area of Tennessee, eastern-most area of Arkansas, southern tip of Illinois and the western tip of Kentucky are in the

McConnell Douglas, the biggest defense contractor in the country, said this week it will eliminate between 14,000 and 17,000 jobs by the end of the year, and the Lockheed Corp. recently announced it will lay off up to 4,000 workers as closing its

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Across the country, tens of thousands of defense industry workers are learning that they are no longer needed to help assemble, design, construct or maintain and run the machinery that helps military death.

Rose fined $50,000 and sent to jail

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Pete Rose, the baseball legend forced out of the game because of his gambling, was sentenced Thursday to five months in prison and fined $50,000 for tax evasion.

Rose, who was drummed out of his job as manager of the Cincinnati Reds last season, could have been sentenced to six years in prison and fined up to $500,000.

U.S. District Judge Arthur Spiegel ordered Rose to report to the minimum-security federal prison in Ashland, Ky., on Aug. 10, provided he has recovered from knee surgery scheduled for Friday.

Rose damaged knee ligaments while playing softball at a family gathering Sunday, but appeared in court without crutches. Spiegel offered to let him sit during the hearing, but Rose stood throughout.

After the five months in prison, Spiegel ordered Rose to be on probation for a year, starting with three months in a halfway house in Cincinnati, the city where Rose was born and first achieved stardom. He will then have to perform 1,000 hours of community service with the Cincinnati Public Schools.

Rose, who pleaded guilty in April to filing false federal income tax returns for 1985 and 1987, told Spiegel — in a voice choked with emotion — that he was sorry.

"I think I'm perceived as a very aggressive, arrogant type of individual," said Rose, who was known in his playing days as Charlie Hustle because of his fierce style. "I do want people to know I do have emotions — like everyone else.

"I really have no excuses because it's all my fault."

"I hope Mr. Rose understands that the sentence is fair and necessary," Spiegel said. "I hope Mr. Rose will make the most of the opportunities presented to him while confined so that he can regain confidence in himself, continue his rehabilitation, help others and return to society with a clean slate.

The sentencing was the latest episode that saw Rose fall from record-setting hero to baseball pariah. The late Commissioner Bart Giamatti banned him from the game for life last year after Rose was linked to gambling — a problem that he later admitted was an addiction that led to his tax problems.

The agreement between Rose and Giamatti said only that Rose was guilty of gambling, but at a news conference Giamatti said Rose had bet on baseball — including Reds' games.

Two of Rose's former associates, who had testified against him during the baseball investigation, were sentenced to prison terms last year on tax, narcotics and gambling charges.

In his tax case, Rose admitted concealing $300,000 in income in 1985 and 1987 and the government agreed not to file charges concerning two other years.

Spiegel said there were two different Pete Roses.

"We must recognize there are two people here: Pete Rose, the living legend, the all-time hit leader and the idol of millions, and Peter Rose, the individual who appears today convicted of two counts of cheating on his income tax," he said.

"Today, we are not dealing with the legend."

During his playing years with the Reds, Philadelphia Phillies and Montreal Expos, Rose was the most productive batter in the history of baseball, breaking the record of his hero, Ty Cobb, with 4,256 hits. But his career ended Aug. 24 when he was banished by Giamatti, who died of a heart attack soon afterward.

"One of the game's greatest players has engaged in a variety of acts which have stained the game, and he must live with the consequences of his acts," Giamatti said.

AERO gives equal chance for disabled

By Jeffrey Lashner
Staff Writer

The Access Equal Recreational Opportunity Program at the SRI-C Recreation Center allows disabled students to participate in sports which the general student population enjoys.

The number of impaired students at the University is estimated by Student Services to more than 2,000.

Jeff Shuck, graduate student in administration of justice, supervises the Access Equal Recreational Opportunity program.

Shuck is not just another typical sufferer at the Recreation Center. He is confined to a wheelchair, which allows him a more personal identification with the people he assists. As a high school senior, an automobile collision left his legs paralyzed and confined him unable to attend the Air Force Academy, thus putting a damper on his dream of becoming a pilot.

Through the AERO program, Shuck encourages students with special needs such as wheelchair confinement, hearing impairment or blindness to take part in activities requiring agility and physical conditioning.

"We have students who are involved in swimming, basketball, football, tennis, riding horses and just about anything else they desire to be in," Shuck said. "Our program allows the student access to the equipment and facilities necessary to get a workout or to compete if they wish. Competition is not stressed for students who wish to participate individually, but is available for fun and good exercise."

Shuck does not consider himself handicapped. Since the collision six years ago, his mobility has been slowed, but he insists to his class he should have to do all the activities he is involved in previously.

"I am limited in mobility, not ability," Shuck said.

"We all have limitations of one form or another," said Kathy Hillman, assistant director of recreational sports. "Some people have back problems, heart conditions, or problems related to stress. Jeff (Rose) has his limitations as any difference from anyone else."

"With him, it's more of an attitude," Hillman said. "He has a good perspective on life and has

The end of the 1990 Saluki baseball season marked a transition point for a few Salukis.

Former Dawg catcher Matt Geigling said his move up to the minor leagues with the Palm City Reds in Florida has been gratifying.

The Reds are 12-11 on the season despite a seven-game slump. He is unofficially hitting .300 (17 of 57).

Playing catcher or designated hitter, Geigling said he was playing time in four of every five games on the average.

"I'm glad I've had the opportunity to play with the Reds, but I miss Carbondale and my old teammates," Geigling said. "I really enjoy it here, but the game is boring. It doesn't excite, I'm not a fan of baseball."

Geigling hit .281 in his senior year at SRI-C.

Tim Davis, former Saluki second baseman, is now playing second base for the Elmira Pioneers, a Class A ballclub in New York.

Davis played in 21 of the pioneer's 29 games but is struggling behind the plate with a .211 average. He has 12 hits and two doubles in 57 at bats.

Davis was drafted in the third round by the Boston Red Sox. He is a two-year starter for the Salukis and hit .346 with five home runs and 64 RBI in his final season at SRI-C.

Dave Wrona was selected in the 14th round by the Milwaukee Brewers and now plays shortstop for the Class A Beakos Brewers.

Wrona owns a .300 average in 24 games with the Brewers.

As a Saluki shortstop, Wrona was a first-team all-conference selection and led the team in hitting — .396 with nine homers and 36 RBI.

Doug Shields, a former Saluki outfielder, was chosen in the 19th round following his senior season at SRI-C.

Shields plays centerfield for the Eugene Emeralds, a Class A ballclub in Oregon. He is averaging .204 in 107 at bats. He has 21 runs and an equal number of hits while playing 27 of the Emeralds' 30 games. The Emeralds overall record is 10-20.

In his senior season with the Dawgs, Shields hit .351 with nine home runs and 64 RBI. He was the Missouri Valley Conference Player of the Year and also an all-Midwest selection.

Cleveland State ousts Mackey

By Bob Kates
UPI Sports Writer

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Cleveland State basketball coach Kevin Mackey, who guided the Vikings to a surprising run to the regional semifinals of the 1989 NCAA tournament and then began the substance abuse that would eventually ruin his career, was fired Thursday by President John Florn.

Mackey, 43, had been at Cleveland State eight years and signed a two-year contract July 11, two days before he was arrested on a suspended drug issue in the city's 40th st.

"I just said that I fired Kevin Mackey," Florn said. "The reality is I fired himself. It has become clear over the past few days that Kevin Mackey has, by his own admission, habitually and repeatedly made a mockery of standards of moral and ethical behavior.

A preliminary revealed Mackey was legally intoxicated and had cocaine in his system, and he confessed at a news conference Tuesday he has been using cocaine for more than three years and has been unable to control his alcohol use for more than five years.

In addition, Mackey also has been known to disappear for three or four days at a time with women other than his wife.

Athletic Director John Conatser will take over the basketball program until a successor for Mackey can be found. Conatser said he would begin a search for a new coach immediately and he wants to see someone as soon as possible.

Assistant Coach Fred and Ed Lutz are still with the school but on sabbatical leave from the job.

Mackey, who did not attend the news conference, will fly to into the New Spain Clinic run by NBA player John Lucas. Although Mackey did not have a moral clause in his contract, his behavior violated a bond policy.

"Behavior that is immoral to the university and that is harmful to the discipline of the university, is grounds for dismissal," said senior vice president Joe Mackey. "A basketball coach is always in the limelight. They represent the university 23 months a year. This behavior must not only be free of any suspensions, they must be free of any suspensions of suspension."

The university was not the situation in Mackey's case.

Mackey's arrest Friday was filed by attorney assistant, and with him in the car that night was Allison Mackey, a woman with a history of prostitution who allegedly had been and drug paraphernalia in her purse and two unidentifiable women in child endangerment.

Aspiring playwrights get the chance to polish their papers and take their work to the stage during the Playwright's Workshop at SUUC.

The Playwright's Workshop opportunity provides students with the opportunity to produce their own work. This summer two full-length and two one-act plays will be produced in the Laboratory Theatre.

The first show is "Judgement of a Revolution" by Silvia Baeza, who just completed her doctorate at SUUC.

"The play is about the oppression of women, particularly the actor, the director and the playwright," Baeza said.

"It is the story of four actors raised in these conditions and motivated by the combative force of a director. He motivates actors to stand up for the rights of artists," she said. He forces them to change acting styles and the play becomes a subversive piece.

"It is called 'Rehearsal for a Revolution' because the eight weeks of play rehearsal is actually a rehearsal for standing up for rights," Baeza said.

Marion mayor defends Mall funding

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

Marion Mayor Robert L. Butler took the stand again Thursday to defend the $18.6 million in tax increment financing bonds that the city used to finance the proposed Illinois Centre Mall development.

"We are so convinced that this is the best thing to happen to the city of Marion that we will do whatever we can, properly and legally, to get it going," Butler said. Butler's testimony came on the third day of trial in a lawsuit filed by Marion businessman J.D. Castellano against Marion.

Castellano, operator of Marion's Westmore Plaza shopping center on Route 13, has accused the city of improperly using TIF subsidies for the project. He claims he was discriminated against when the plaza was denied TIF benefits last year.

Castellano and his co-plaintiff, Marion resident Ron Emery, contend that the Brooking property, which is on Route 13 west of Marion where the city proposes to build the mall, does not qualify for TIF because it is not a blighted area. It is not consistent with Marion's comprehensive city plan and it could be developed without public subsidies.

Castellano said the Illinois Centre TIF is in direct conflict with the city's comprehensive plan, which is to protect Marion's downtown plan on the square.

Under commission by plaintiff's attorney Terry Grimm, Butler countered Castellano's allegations and reiterated the arguments of Marion's legal counsel, stating that several geographic features of the property made it eligible for the blighted classification, including culverts and aquatic characteristics.

Land zoning experts testified earlier that the property in question would have been developed without public subsidy.

Hope lost of finding any more survivors

BAGUIO, Philippines (UPI) — Rescuers lost hope of finding survivors Thursday, three days after a massive earthquake in the northern Philippines left at least 429 people dead, officials said.

"We're not optimistic about anybody being alive," said Philippine Maj. Rache Logronan. He said the search was confined to retrieving bodies because "we owe them a decent burial."

Workers using explosives partially cleared landslides blocking the 120-mile road from Manila to the hard-hit city of Baguio, but officials said relief vehicles would not be able to pass until the route is opened further.

More than 384 aftershocks have rocked the area since Monday's earthquake measuring 7.7 on the Richter scale rumbled across the main Philippine island of Luzon, officials said.

The quake, centered in Cabanatuan, 60 miles north of Manila, was the deadliest to strike the Philippines since an earthquake and tidal wave killed more than 1,000 people on the southern island of Mindanao in August 1976.

The military civil defense said the latest quake killed 429 people and injured at least 706. The government-run television station

Illinois, Kentucky enter nuclear waste study

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The commission overseeing the handling of low-level nuclear waste in Illinois and Kentucky Thursday entered into a five-year study designed to ensure future treatment of the waste.

The Central Midwest Interstate Low-Level Radioactive Waste Commission will spend $70,000 in the next year to explore reciprocal arrangements with other states nuclear waste commission. The agreement, the first of its kind in the nation, is important because all 50 states are preparing to meet a federal deadline to build low-level nuclear dumps and manage their own nuclear waste.

If reciprocal agreements do not reach reciprocal agreements for treating the materials, there is a possibility multi-state alliances will not accept waste for treatment from other regional compacts and many states would be forced to build expensive new facilities to store the low-level waste.

"Some of them (compacts) are going to be inclined to not accept waste for treatment unless they have their own national system," said William Blaine, a Washington, D.C.-based waste consultant who is working with Illinois and Kentucky on the issue.

Morris said by seeking the reciprocal agreements, the two states are "anticipating problems and that's the only good."

As part of federal low-level nuclear waste rules, Illinois and Kentucky and other regional compacts must manage their low-level waste preferably by building a repository by the end of 1992. The top candidate chosen for the Illinois-Kentucky dump is a Clark County site near Madisonville.

Morris said the three commissioners of the compact commission—one from Illinois and one from Kentucky—did very

Quake may not affect area severely

By Karen Rabinovitch
Staff Writer

Local residents can breathe a sigh of relief to know that the earthquake produced by Dec. 2 or 3 will not affect the area too severely according to the executive director of an earthquake research center.

Jim Thurman, executive director of the Memphis State University Center for Earthquake Research and Information, said that Carbondale would not be in the area most affected if a quake occurred along the New Madrid Fault.

Thurman said that people living in the New Madrid Fault area can expect another earthquake within the next 50 years, and so, theoretically, one could take place this year, as predicted by someone like Hershovitz, or many years after the last of the century.

The occurrence of earthquakes cannot easily be predicted—experts can gauge themselves only by theories, according to William Adkinson, author of "The Next New Madrid Earthquake, A Survival Guide to the Midwest."

According to Adkinson, Memphis is on the border of the disaster area, and is the biggest city close to the epicenter. Paducah is in a seismic zone and the cities of Carbondale and St. Louis are considered to be in a disaster-free zone.

"Southern Illinois will feel the earthquake only if we (Memphis) get a really bad shake here," Thurman said.

"The effects of any given earthquake die away from the source... the most highly-developed areas will suffer most," Thurman said. The heartland of Missouri, western-most area of Tennessee, eastern-most area of Arkansas and western tip of Illinois and the western tip of Kentucky are in the

Defense workers lost in budget shuffle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Across the country, tens of thousands of defense industry workers are learning that they are no longer needed to build together, defend themselves by other means, and run the machinery that keeps military ships.

To be roughly 20,000 workers out of an estimated 2.4 million civilian defense industry workers have been laid off and a much by the Defense Budget Project suggests the total could hit 250,000. Over the next five years as many as a half a million unskilled military personnel could be dumped into the labor market.

McConnell Douglas, the biggest defense contractor in the country, said this week it will eliminate between 24,000 and 17,000 jobs by the end of the year, and the Lockheed Corp. recently announced it will lay off up to 6,000 workers in closing its Burbank, Calif., operations and moving the work to Compton.

The House Armed Services Committee Thursday began taking a look at how those who had the defense buildup can help adjust to peace.

Some sources of assistance in these areas will be included in the defense bill by the House this week. A provision in the defense bill would order the $200 million of the Pentagon's budget in 1991 to an anti-peace program that would cushion the blow with added retraining and economic development programs.

A subcommittee of the House Banking Committee passed a measure Thursday that would require domestic production of parts of weapons systems if they are determined to be essential to national security, an approach that could open or create some defense jobs.

Grant will bring jobs, encourage business

THE ENCOURAGEMENT of entrepreneurship in Southeastern Illinois is the motive behind the latest $100,000 government grant given to a Harrisburg loan office for its continued financial assistance to area small businesses.

We have confidence that this grant will not only cultivate new business ventures and bring more jobs to Southern Illinois, but also will help stimulate the overall economic growth of our individual communities.

For the past six years, independent business owners have been seeking financial assistance at Harrisburg's Regional Planning and Development Commission and getting it.

The commission administers low interest, long term loans at fixed rates for local entrepreneurs who wish to start a business or expand an existing business. This revolving loan program puts money back into the fund for future business ventures once clients begin paying back their old loans on a monthly basis.

THE $100,000 GRANT from the Farmer's Home Administration will be used to assist two or three more businesses—in addition to the eight businesses that are already paying back a total of $666,000 in loans—said Kim Watson, economic development director for the commission.

Watson said the office sees 150 clients a year, so obviously, not everyone will receive a loan. When the commission can't approve a fledgling business for the entrepreneur loan, it often seeks out other loan programs for the client, either through the commission itself or through other lending agencies, she said.

This small business loan guarantees an entrepreneur $7,500 for each job he or she creates.

U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Makanda, estimates that for every job these small business loans create directly, two more jobs are created indirectly. It's true, new businesses supply an economic boost to the entire community, not just to the borrowers and their employees.

IT IS ENCOURAGING to see the federal government offering such financial incentives to small business owners.

Also encouraging is that nearly all the money loaned and borrowed stays in Southern Illinois. As the loans are paid back to the commission, the money goes directly to assist fellow business owners in Southeastern Illinois.

A spokesman for the FHA has said that the agency is seeking additional funds to increase the amount of the grant, and we eagerly await the results of this effort to accelerate Southern Illinois' economic development.

Furor over Fairview timber cut distorted, neglects true issues

I have been a frequent visitor to the Fairview section of the Shawnee National Forest mentioned in your editorial of July 18, and frankly, I can't understand the furor over cutting the 25.7 acres of forest RACE and Earth First' object to.

In the first place, I would like to say that I am a concerned environmentalist. The Fairview section has been one of my study areas for a number of years. In the second place, I would like to correct some truly blatant distortions in your editorial.

Clear-cutting in the Shawnee is not, never has, and never will destroy "many virgin timber stands" because there aren't any virgin timber stands left to cut. The Fairview section has been cut twice since the Europeans arrived—once in the 1800s and '90s, and again in the 1920s and '30s. Except for two small, protected parcels of land at remote sites, Southern Illinois has no virgin timber. Every acre of the Shawnee has been cut at least once, and many several times.

Bearing this fact in mind, "what effect will such cuts have on...the migratory song bird population...or on the diversity of other species in the stand?" Speaking as an ecologist, I can answer quite confidently that it will have no effect, at worst, and beneficial effects at best.

Despite currently received wisdom, selective cutting is neither the best way nor the most beneficial way to harvest or "replenish" the forest. Clear-cutting on the other hand, despite the demagoguery and hysterics of RACE and Earth First', when properly and rationally done, increases both species and habitat diversity of the forest. It is paradoxical that this is true, that cutting trees enhances forest diversity, but it is true nevertheless.

As for damaging "the delicate balance of a forest ecosystem" by cutting 25.7 acres of forest in a stand of several hundred acres, this is patently ludicrous from an ecological point of view. No ecosystem is ever in "balance" or is the Shawnee "delicate." The forest has coped in the past with destructive forces far vaster than any puny efforts of ours could hope to throw against it and survived. As far as surviving clear-cutting, just look at the forest today. Eighty years ago this was clear cut land.

There are compelling, rational reasons for opposing some Forest Service policies and there are vast improvements that could be made in others, but unfortunately your editorial missed them all.

I find it very discouraging to see RACE and Earth First' squandering their valuable time and human capital on ecologically insignificant non-events while all around them the forest really is being raped, looted and exploited in truly destructive and irreversible ways.

So long as groups, such as these, and your own editorial staff, are only the eyes instead of the forest, our biologically diverse heritage will continue to slip away into oblivion.—Jim Jung, Carbondale.

Ky., cited the recent boom in commercial development west of Marion along Route 13 as evidence that the project did not need federal help.

Newman noted that because the state road is situated with SHU-C to the west and Interstate 57 to the east, the property is prime development land.

However, Butler said the area met the TIF guidelines and Marion's economy would benefit tremendously from the development.

The defense for Marion has contended that the area is blighted because of flooding problems and the presence of deteriorating structures adjacent to the property, such as a motorcycle shop that was shut down by the Illinois Department of Transportation because of improper access roads; a dilapidated bridge that straddles the property; culverts; and a strip mine.

Karl L. Barteismeyer, IDOT district engineer of land acquisition, testified that Marion would have to provide an adequate service road to meet zoning specifications if it were to develop the land, and that an agreement already existed between IDOT and the city to provide for construction of such a road.

Butler said the city was committed to constructing and maintaining proper access roads and any other improvements necessary on the property.

Butler said the city issued $17 million in special service bonds to pay for the project and Antoxy Assessments, Ltd., the city's partner in the venture, initially purchased the bonds.

Butler testified that the city had not yet issued any TIF bonds to pay for the project, but countered himself after conferring with the city's attorneys.

The city had considered the Brooking property for economic development in 1985, Butler said, but the deal fell through after the developer could not come up with the funds to complete the project.

The current TIF classification came in 1987, when the city annexed the Brooking property and began to implement plans for the proposed mall development.

Grimm repeatedly turned to the city's comprehensive city plan as evidence that the Illinois Centre project should not go through. He cited a part of the plan that called for an extensive shopping area in the downtown area to revitalize the economic growth of the current shopping district.

Butler returned to the stand later in the afternoon to state that no one could have envisioned such a huge mall when the plan was being formulated and that the shopping center for the downtown area would encompass the existing shops to retain the sections' unique characteristics.

Butler said the city had made concentrated efforts to rejuvenate the downtown area by expanding or improving existing structures in the district. He said Marion was growing in all directions, but that the city was making an effort to preserve the downtown's economy.

"We made an old theater into a civic center. We expanded the post office, rather than move it to the interstate area. We've maintained the court house downtown," Butler said.

few of the compacts will actually have dumps open at the end of 1997, but he expects states will by then have agreements on where to treat and dispose of their low-level nuclear waste.

The actual nuclear dump repositories will consist of concrete cells to store mildly contaminated clothing and tools from nuclear plants and hospitals. It will not house spent nuclear fuel rods or other high-level waste.

Even if Illinois and Kentucky reach agreement for waste treatment, the compact commission's Chairman Clark Bullard of Illinois said the dump will not dispose of low-level nuclear waste from any other states.

Bullard said he has turned down requests from Massachusetts and the District of Columbia, which both wanted Illinois to dispose of some of their radioactive materials.

put the death toll at more than 600, based on reports from the Red Cross and the Department of Social Welfare.

Reports from rescuers and newspapers said about 1,125 people were injured.

About 100 motorists and commuters were feared buried alive in landslides in the Santa Fe mountain trail northwest of the capital, according to the Philippine News Agency.

The news agency said 20 people were killed when a bus fell into a ravine during the tremor. Another 15 people were killed when a workers' bunkhouse collapsed at the Philes mining corporation in nearby Tabo town.

Rescuers said workers lifting slabs of concrete with jackhammers Tuesday ignited chemicals in a garments factory in Baguio's Export Processing Zone, triggering a deadly fire.

most danger from the next New Madrid earthquake.

Yet another consultation for Carbondale residents is that their city endures a strict seismic building code, unlike Memphis.

Nevertheless, there are precautions to take in preparation for the inevitable earthquake. According to both Ashmore and Dorman, sealing both windows and bookcases to walls in 2nd stories may prevent them from crashing down, putting loads on cabinets and other furniture does help to keep floors, etc. intact.

Dorman said everyone should know where to turn off gas valves and water in case pipes break, and because appliances also may slide across floors, securing them to the walls may prevent serious injuries.

Not only will an earthquake affect the area physically, but it will cause economic damage. Dorman said the earthquake will cause an economic setback for the whole region for many years.

"The rate of economic loss is lower here in United States earthquakes at $30 million to every mile lost," he said.

In 1811 and 1812, an earthquake along the New Madrid Fault hit the mid-western region of the United States. The epicenter was located in the Missouri Bootheel, near the towns of New Madrid and Little Prairie (now Carterville).

On December 16, 1811, between 2:00 and 3:00 p.m., over 27 shocks occurred during the Mississippi River to change course and form whirlpools and waterfalls.

Seismologists evaluate the shocks were strongly felt over a 30,000 square mile area. "The earthquakes of 1811 and 1812 were the worst natural disasters in the history of the United States," Dorman said.

Space experiment can be viewed from Earth

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — A scientific experiment to study the Earth's magnetic field will mimic the northern lights in a colorful nighttime display visible throughout North America, officials said Thursday.

The experiment is in the $189 million Combined Release and Radiation Effects Satellite, known as CRRES, which is set for launch Friday afternoon atop an Atlas-Centaur rocket at the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station.

The chemical releases, scheduled to begin in September and continue through next July, will enable scientists to study Earth's normally invisible magnetic field.

"That's really why we are doing this, so we can make space visible," said NASA project scientist David Reasner.

The bossy satellite also carries Defense Department experiments to study the effects of space radiation on microelectronics, research expected to help engineers design satellite equipment that is better able to withstand the rigors of space.

"The results of these investigations will greatly expand man's knowledge of the space environment and permit future government and commercial satellites to be more efficient, reliable and economical," Air Force Col. John Armstrong said during a news conference at the Kennedy Space Center.

Forecasters predicted a 90 percent chance of good weather at launch time. If all goes well, CRRES will be placed in a highly elliptical orbit with a low point of about 217 miles and a high point of 22,236 miles.

The primary goal of the flight is to improve knowledge of how Earth's magnetic field, the supersonic solar wind and the planet's atmosphere interact to extract energy from the sun.

When a cloud of energetic particles from a solar flare smashes into Earth's "magnetosphere," for example, a "geomagnetic storm" can occur, disrupting communications and causing problems for electrically sensitive satellites.

CRRES, built by Ball Aerospace Systems Group of Denver, is equipped with 24 canisters containing barium and lithium. For each experiment, one or two canisters will be ejected into space and detonated about 25 minutes later, after the satellite is a safe distance away.

High energy ultraviolet light from the sun then will ionize the released chemicals, changing the number of negatively charged electrons in a given atom to give the gas an electrical charge.

The clouds of electrically charged "plasma," initially 60 miles or so in diameter, then will stretch out along Earth's magnetic field lines much like iron filings will line up around a bar magnet to make its field lines visible.

In a sense, CRRES will "paint" Earth's magnetic field with bright clouds of chemicals, stimulating naturally occurring processes like those involving the solar wind.

Program manager Richard Howard said the display should be "very visible" to the naked eye, with the barium releases bearing "an uncanny resemblance" to the aurora borealis, or northern lights.

Drum and bugle corps show entertains McAndrew crowd

Corps from Indiana takes first place, features two local teens

By Rob Coné
Entertainment Editor

Six drum and bugle corps from around the Midwest brought their musical productions Wednesday evening to McAndrew Stadium to entertain the audience gathered for the first Southern Illinois Drum and Brass Spectacular.

A drum and bugle corps is like a Broadway show, Neil Schoeneberg, organizer for the event, said.

Schoeneberg said each 12 1/2-minute show combines brass, percussion and flags to create a show that is as visually stimulating as it is musically exciting.

To heighten the excitement, the corps compete for points in each of five categories judging the individual and overall musical performances of the brass and percussion, and the ensemble's visual effect.

Four of the six corps that performed were ranked in the top 25 of the more than 300 competitors participating in Drum Corps International, Schoeneberg said.

The Star of Indiana from Bloomington won first place honors for their interpretation of Sir William Walton's "Rahshazzar's Feast." The biblical account of a decadent feast in Babylon was detailed by a drum major and flag squad wearing crowns and costumes of red, gold and royal purple.

Two local teens, Travis Edgar from Ava and Matt Having from Murphysboro, perform with the Indiana drum corps.

Weaving a series of asymmetrical shapes set to a medley Duke Ellington tunes, the Bluecoats from Canton, Ohio, earned a second place finish.

The Colts from Dubuque, Iowa, the Railmen from Omaha, Neb., the Guardsmen from Schaumburg, Ill., and the M.F. Royal Airs from St. Louis, finished third through sixth, respectively.

Schoeneberg said most corps begin working on their shows in the fall with weekend rehearsals. By May, he said, the rehearsals expand to 12-hour days.

Students aged 12 to 21 pay from $250 to $500 to participate and receive no compensation for their efforts.

"They do it because they enjoy it...for the feeling of accomplishment, for the friends and for the travel," Schoeneberg said.

Eurma Hayes center to give food to needy

By Christina Hall
Staff Writer

Surplus food will be given away for Carbondale residents who qualify from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. on July 24 at the Eurma Hayes center.

To qualify for the free USDA surplus food that is given away every two months, individuals must make $654 a month or less, two family members must make $878 or less a month, and a family of three must make no more than $1,100 a month. For each additional family member $223 are added to the monthly income to determine eligibility, said Faye Joyner Keene, coordinator of the food distribution.

University students that fall within the monthly income guidelines also are eligible for the free food, Joyner Keene said.

Star Human Services, which is funded primarily through state funds, has been "networking and coordinating services to humanity," as their slogan says, since 1988, Joyner Keene said.

The service "was put together to help the lower income, unemployed, underemployed and disadvantaged people in Jackson County," she said.

Star Human Services helps people to interpret contracts, find a home and find food and clothing. The service also will refer people to other agencies if Star Human Services can not fill their need, Joyner Keene said.

The service has several other programs that supply food to disadvantaged people, she said.

The "come share" service, which is not a part of the bi-monthly food give away, sells 30 to 35 pound boxes of food for $13 and two hours of community service.

The community service "can be anything that they (the recipients) do not get paid for. It doesn't even have to be for us," Joyner Keene said.

The recipients will have to verify that they performed some kind of community service before they receive the food, she said.
