Students remember Turkish invasion

Somber remembrances of the past and hope for the future lay in the thoughts of international students Wednesday, as they commemorated in a silent protest the 20th anniversary of their homeland of Cyprus coming under Turkish rule.

Students carried picket signs that appealed to the United States to help end Turkish aggression in their homelands and sang songs in their native language to attract the attention of passers-by.

The island of Cyprus, located just off the coast of Turkey in the Mediterranean Sea, was invaded by Turkey on July 20, 1974, and has been occupied by the country ever since.

SIUC students who lived in Cyprus during the invasion, such as Nicholas Agrotis, a member of the SIUC Cyprus Association, said they have powerful memories of that day.

"I remember vividly many of the scenes that were part of the Turkish invasion of my country," Agrotis said. "I remember it was summertime, and the invasion started in coastal cities that had many tourists in them. I remember hearing planes bombing the island and seeing warships moving closer to the coast."

Agrotis said natives of Cyprus feel their culture is being threatened by the introduction of 65,000 Turkish Anatolian settlers by the occupying Turkish government.

According to a pamphlet printed by the Republic of Cyprus, 35,000 Turkish soldiers are stationed on the island to enforce Turkish rule.

Students at the protest said these troops prohibit natives of Cyprus from living and traveling to places in their homeland where they were once free to go.

Students who participated in the protest outside the Student Center between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. said they hoped the event would rally the interest of American students at the University.

Agrotis said he hopes the United States will take a more active role in ending Turkish occupation in his country.

"The conditions in Cyprus have been the same for the last 20 years," Agrotis said. "We all want to see the American public become more involved in bringing back peace in Cyprus and global peace in other places."

He said many natives of Cyprus

Chancellor search ongoing

Past officials say SIU position unnecessary expenditures

By Marc Chase
Administration Reporter

SIU Chancellor James Brown, who announced his plans for retirement at the Board of Trustees meeting on July 14, said he and the Board will begin an immediate search for his successor, but a former president from SIUC says the University having its own chancellor is not cost effective.

Albert Somit, SIUC president from 1980-1987, said keeping a chancellor at SIU is a small example of the wastefulness of higher education in the state of Illinois.

"It is no secret that both the system (of higher education) and the chancellor positions at SIU, as well as other state universities, involve massive and unnecessary expenditures," Somit, currently an emeritus professor at SIUC, said.

Somit said SIU has a budget of between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 each year, and a large portion of this amount funds the chancellor's office.

Brown

According to the SIU Systems Offices Personnel listing, the office of the chancellor at the University in fiscal year 1993-1994 had a total budget of $852,052.

Somit said he is in favor of eliminating the position of SIU chancellor and changing the entire chancellor system for all Illinois state universities.

He said if only one or two chancellors fulfilled duties for the office in all state colleges including SIUC and SIUE, Western Illinois University, Eastern Illinois University, University of Illinois and Illinois State University, it would be more cost effective for the entire state.

"I do not advocate cutting out the position of chancellor all together," Somit said. "I do, however, think money could be saved if we followed models such as the chancellor systems that exist in New York or California."

New York currently has one chancellor for all of its state universities and California has two chancellors, he said.

Ross Hodel, deputy director of the Illinois Board of Higher Education, said it is the position of IBHE that the current chancellor system in higher education should remain unchanged.

He said a report IBHE did in 1989 showed no inefficiency in the state's current chancellor system.

Clinton calls for compromise: Health care plan negotiated

By Angela Hyland
Politics Reporter

Clinton's announcement July 19 that he would be willing to compromise on his health care plan was hailed by some as a step toward reaching an agreement, but some local political analysts say this statement did not surprise them.

"The original plan by Clinton pretty much died — that's why Clinton's willing to negotiate on his plan," said Patrick Kelley, a professor at the SIU School of Law.

When Clinton initially proposed changing the health care system, he said his goal was to get a plan passed which would grant coverage for all U.S. citizens.

Several variations of his original plan now are being discussed in Congress and Clinton said he is willing to compromise in order to get legislation passed.

Rather than demanding 100 percent coverage, Clinton said he now is willing to settle for about 95 percent coverage.

Kelley said this is not the only issue which will require additional debate.

Disagreements also exist about what percentage of health insurance costs employers

As economy dips, single-parent families rise

By Tre' Roberts
Minorities Writer

Economic problems in the United States are a major cause of the increasing numbers of children living with a parent who is divorced or has never married, according to Mareena Wright, assistant professor in the department of sociology.

"A lot of this problem has to do with the economy — for example, if a social policy were implemented to create more jobs in U.S. inner-cities," she said. "Then more African American males would have jobs and thus there would be more prospects for African American women to marry. That would help reduce the large number of unmarried African American women with children."

But, Wright said such changes are unlikely.

"Unfortunately, I don't see anything happening in the government to fundamentally change the economic situation for the better."

The U.S. Department of Commerce reported Wednesday, in 1993 37 percent of all children were living in a divorced, one-parent family and 35 percent were living with a parent who had never been married.

Ten years ago, a child was almost twice as likely to live with a divorced parent than a never-married parent, according to the report.

Recent Illinois statistics on the number of children living in divorced, single-parent homes and never-married parent homes were unavailable.

Wright also attributed the department's statistics to changes in attitudes in the United States over the past 10 to 15 years.

"It is not really clear if the increase in the number of children living in single-parent families is due to more women having premarital pregnancies or if it is due to changes in what happens after a woman has a baby," said Wright. "In the past, women were more likely to give a child up for adoption or they just got married."

Wright said it is now more socially acceptable for women to raise a child without being married and support themselves by working.

The report indicated an overall increase in the number of children in single-parent families. In 1993, 27 percent of children under the age of 18 lived with one parent, up from 12 percent in 1970.

The report also showed a higher proportion of African American children, 57 percent, live with one parent than either Caucasians at 21 percent or Hispanics at 32 percent.

LEADER'S DEATH MOURNED; SON TAKES OVER—
SEOUL—South Korea— Hundreds of thousands of North Koreans assembled solemnly in Pyongyang Wednesday to pledge loyalty to Kim Jong Il, son of late North Korean dictator Kim Il Sung, a day after a tear-filled funeral for the only leader in the Stalinist state's 46-year history. Kim, true to his reputation, remained silent. And nothing in the telecast, which was broadcast overseas live by CNN, officially confirmed that the eldest son had assumed the three key posts of power that his father had held before he died July 8. In the only sign of future policy direction, Kim Kwang Jin, a deputy chief of the general staff of the army, condemned South Korea for declaring a military alert immediately after the announcement of Kim Il Sung's death and for suppressing students' desires to express condolences. Until the "Great Leader's" death, a first-ever meeting of presidents of the two governments on the peninsula had been scheduled and a mood of hope for reconciliation had emerged. Kim Jong Il, 52, took over command of the armed forces in December 1991, but his father retained the other key posts of chairman of the Korean Workers Party and its central military committee and chief of state, or president. The younger Kim is expected to assume all three posts, although no experts or analysts can say for sure what that will mean.

VIOLENCE SURGES AS REFUGEE CAMPS CLOSE—
HONG KONG—After nearly 20 years of poignant drama on the high seas, the saga of Vietnam's "boat people" appeared to be heading for a neat, quiet solution. Departures from Vietnam, which reached tens of thousands a year in the 1980s, have been reduced to a trickle. Hong Kong recorded 20,179 arriving Vietnamese boat people in 1991, but only 94 last year. The governments of 30 nations met in Geneva in February to resolve the fate of the 58,000 Vietnamese still in refugee camps in Southeast Asia who are hoping to be sent to the United States, Canada or other countries of asylum. The Geneva conference decided all the camps would be closed in 17 months. All those people who are determined not to be refugees—the vast majority—would be sent back to Vietnam. The only difficulty with the neat end to the problem was the refugees themselves. In Geylang refugee camp in Indonesia, two men facing a return to Vietnam burned themselves to death, a traditional protest suicide in their country. Nearly all the violence in the camps has taken place since the Geneva conference announced the December 1995 deadline for shutting down the refugee effort. Officials privately fear the violence could escalate as a hard core determined not to return home eventually becomes a majority in the camps.

BLUE CROSS-BLUE SHIELD BEING INVESTIGATED—
RICHMOND—The state's largest health insurer is being investigated for widespread insurance violations, including kickbacks from hospitals, according to a report by Attorney General James S. Gilmore III. Blue Cross-Blue Shield of Virginia, the dominant health insurer in Virginia outside the Washington area, allegedly negotiated fees so low for some medical procedures and services that its policyholders not only paid the entire cost but enough extra that some hospitals awarded a credit to the company with the leftover money. Ordinarily, a policyholder is expected to pay about 20 percent of the cost of services. For an item listed on the hospital bill as $100, for example, a policyholder is expected to pay $20. But the report said investigators found that in some instances, Blue Cross bargained the fee down so low—say to $17 in that $100 example—that when the policyholder paid $20, the hospital kept its $17 and then passed on the remaining $3 to Blue Cross. Jim Goss, a spokesman for Blue Cross-Blue Shield of Virginia, said that his company has not been contacted by either the attorney general or Insurance Commissioner Steven T. Foster and that it would be "premature to respond."

ZuZu's Petals to perfume air with sounds

ZuZu's Petals

By Paul Eisenberg
Entertainment Reporter

ZuZu, Jimmy Stewart's daughter in the classic movie "It's A Wonderful Life," will not be present tonight on the steps of Shyock Auditorium.

As a consolation, ZuZu's Petals will be on hand to perform at 7 p.m. at the Sunset concert.

The Minneapolis-based band is currently on a nationwide tour where they have shared the stage with up-and-coming bands like Soul Asylum, and old rockers like Adam and the Ants. Linda Pitmon, drummer of the group, which also includes Coleen Elwood on bass and vocals and Laurie Lindeen on guitar and vocals, said the type of music the band plays is "Broadway trash."

"We're trying to start a new wave in music," Pitmon said. "The songs kind of form a musical or something like that."

Unlike a Broadway musical, however, Pitmon said the songs they play represent a variety of ideas and emotions, and affect different people in different ways.

"We're trying to move people, and at the same time entertain them," she said. "We're moved when we play them (the songs)."

She said the band plays mostly original songs, but they like to sneak a few covers in from time to time, including one by Frank Sinatra.

"We're not really a cover band, though," Pitmon said. "We write a lot of songs, although we're not the kind of band that will pump out an album every six months."

She said the original music the band plays varies between groove-oriented tunes to "narrative type of story songs."

"But the songs are all melodic," she said.

Pitmon joined the band shortly before they cut their first single with the help of Soul Asylum's Dave Pirner. That single was the catalyst for the band's first tour, on the East Coast.

"We just bolted on that single," she joked. "If we hadn't done that and stayed around Minneapolis, we probably would have been kicked out of town."

She said that tour acted like a springboard for the band, and they have been touring ever since, including trips to England and Holland.

"We got 25 bucks a show (on the East Coast), but we got a lot of good press," she said. "They were some of the best shows we did."

Fishing pros host seminars

by Sam House
Environmental Reporter.

This Saturday two boating and fishing pros will pass on their years of experience concerning boating safety and fishing techniques during two programs at the Rend Lake Visitors center.

Todd Gessner, president of the Southern Outdoor Recreation Service and Cyril Bowlin, a full time fishing and hunting guide, will instruct the two programs.

The two seminars are part of Rend Lake's Environmental Science Series, and offer a variety of workshops that inform the public of various environmental subjects, Michael Asa, Rend Lake park ranger, said.

Gessner's seminar, which begins at 11 a.m., will teach participants how to fish for crappie, bluegill, catfish, and white bass. A portion of the seminar will cover "Getting to Know Rend Lake," which will discuss boating safety. Jason Thrash, Rend Lake park ranger, said.

Gessner is a fishing guide on Rend Lake and is knowledgeable of the hazards to fisherman and boaters, Thrash said.

"He's willing to share all his tips so other people can be as successful as him," he said.

Gessner will use a map of Rend Lake and stay in the classroom since the lake is so large and there is no way to get all the students out in a boat, Thrash said.

Bowlin's seminar, which begins at 2 p.m., will focus on largemouth bass fishing. Jerry Sauerwein, Rend Lake park ranger, said.

Bowlin grew up on Rend Lake and is considered an expert on catching largemouth bass, Sauerwein said.

"He is the best, or one of the best, bass fishermen on the lake," he said. "His specialty is largemouth bass fishing."

The fishing seminar will last approximately an hour and activities will be based on how many people attend, Bowlin said.

Sawyer, Parsons to attend USSA

By Diane Dove
Special Assignment Reporter

SIUC students will have the chance to have their concerns heard by government officials when Undergraduate Student Government leaders represent the University at the United States Student Association's national conference next week.

USG President Edwin Sawyer and USG Chief of Staff Matt Parsons will attend USSA's 47th Annual National Student Congress, held at Northern Arizona University in Flagstaff, Ariz.

Sawyer and Parsons will leave Monday for the conference, which runs July 26 through Aug. 1.

Parsons said USSA is a student-run lobbyist group that brings student concerns to the attention of the government.

"They deal with academic policies, scholarships, grants, veterans programs — anything that concerns students and affects students on campus," he said.

"They are trying to make the voice of students heard by the representatives on Capitol Hill and the White House."

Parsons said other issues to be discussed include financial aid, affirmative action, the quality of higher education and the job market.

Sawyer said this is the first year USG will attend and vote at a USSA conference because USG had not purchased membership in the organization, which currently costs $1,100, until last year.

"We just became members of USSA last year; that's something student leaders wanted to do for a long time, and last year (former USG President) Mike Spiwak took the initiative and joined," he said.

Parsons said USSA can be effective in bringing student issues to federal legislators because college students can be a strong political force.

"Obviously the college population, as we saw in the Fried chicken, potato salad and watermelon all make great treats for a picnic, but if the food spoils, it can sometimes lead to severe illness, according to the Jackson County Health Department.

Cherie DeWulf, assistant director of environmental health from the department, said it is important to use preventative measures when handling and transporting food.

"If you're doubting the condition of the food, throw it out," she said.

DeWulf said it is important to keep food at temperatures above 140 degrees or below 45 degrees.

"You have to maintain a temperature which discourages bacteria growth," she said.

DeWulf recommended keeping food in a cooler packed with ice or freezer packs until it is ready to be eaten. Keeping foods hot (above 140) is difficult to do in a picnic basket, she said.

Jim Bloom, director of environmental health from the department, said when transporting foods, it is important to keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold. He said people should not transport the cooler in the trunk because colder temperatures will not be maintained.

For many years, people assumed mayonnaise or other similar food was the culprit for bacteria-ridden food, but DeWulf said such foods are not the culprit, rather they provide a medium for bacteria to grow.

"Cook and prepare the food properly at home, then keep it cold," she said.

If food is not prepared properly or becomes bacteria-ridden because it is not kept cold, it could affect a number of people on the picnic, DeWulf said.

Bloom said people should serve the food on a clean surface and food should never be left out for more than one hour.

Dollar bill changes put crooks on alert

FOR THE FIRST TIME IN 65 YEARS, U. S. currency is going to get a major facelift. The changes are scheduled to take place in 1996 and will begin with $100 bills. Old bills will remain in circulation. Revamping plans include enlarging and moving off-center the portraits of presidents on all denominations. Other less obvious changes are embedded threads and watermarks that cannot be easily reproduced.

ALTHOUGH IT IS RUMORED THAT AMERICA has become a cash-less society, in an age of credit cards and electronic transfers, currency remains a popular item. More than $357 billion in U. S. money is in circulation right now, about two-thirds of which is outside of the country.

Counterfeit currency is also a popular item. More than $40 million in fake U. S. bills were seized last year, and $120 million in other countries. The treasury made small changes in 1990 to the $100 bill, counterfeit's biggest seller, to deter bogus buck production. Just last week, the Detroit Secret Service intercepted more than $9000 in counterfeit $100 bills, making a total since January of $60,000 in the Detroit area alone.

THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT IS MAKING currency changes to deter counterfeiters. It seems the bad guys have the same access to high-tech equipment as everybody else/ Color copiers apparently make it harder to tell the difference between and real dollar and a fake one.

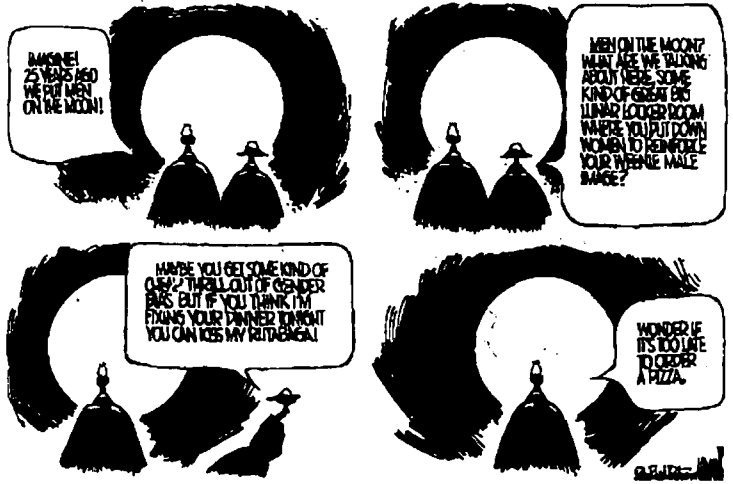

THERE IS A CONFUSING POINT ABOUT THIS entire issue. The treasury department has taken a great deal of time and money, taxpayer's money, to develop changes. Yet the exact changes were announced last week, thus giving counterfeiters two years to adapt to the changes. This is akin to a sting operation in which the cops call the criminals first and warn them they are coming. If the treasury is going to make changes they should not give the counterfeiters so much of a head start.

Full agenda awaits President Guyon

PRESIDENT GUYON RETURNED TO SIUC ON A limited schedule this week after recovering from triple-bypass surgery over a month ago. Guyon returns to his office with plenty to keep him busy. AMONG THE CAMPUS EVENTS THAT WERE developing before his surgery which still need his attention are the pending athletic fee increase, IBHE cuts and changes at the College of Technical Careers. Although the University was in good hands during his absence, Guyon's return is welcome. We wish him good health.

More to our history than Hendrix

Something special happened in 1969, and we took it for granted.

We celebrated the 25 year anniversary of the first moonwalk yesterday, but other monumental events also occurred during that year. Those of us who were born after that time — 87 million of us to be exact, may take the events for granted because we grew up in an advanced technological age.

Before we sent astronauts to the moon, Soviets sent satellites into space exploring the moon and soon after, Venus. We took it for granted. The Vietnam War affected us all and ongoing protests from people across the United States led President Richard Nixon to call for a partial withdrawal of troops. We took it for granted.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., was involved in an auto accident which killed his passenger. Newspapers reported that "the blonde secretary died."

With all the trouble surrounding his name now, it's safe to say, we took it for granted.

The first in vitro fertilization took place, propelling the obstetrics field into new advancements. We took it for granted.

The Gay Rights movement began, making homosexuality a prominent issue. We took it for granted.

Integration of all races in schools and other aspects of life began taking place as President Nixon called for an end to racism in the United States. We took it for granted.

On the SIUC campus, the Old Main building burned, and we lost a valuable piece of our history. We took it for granted. Women under 21 years old without parental consent had to be in the dorms by 11:30. We took it for granted.

Woodstock took place in August with more than 300,000 people attending the festival. We did not take it for granted, indeed we are celebrating it again.

As young citizens of the United States, perhaps our focus should lie more on how we got where we are — through the curiosity and ingenuity of our ancestors, not the guitar licks of Jimi Hendrix or the belting voice of Janis Joplin.

Something special happened in 1969 — I was born, and the world took it for granted.

People choose their own destiny

I support Prof. Garner's call for legislation making tobacco companies accountable for the resulting health care cost of smokers, however he doesn't go far enough. I propose holding alcohol companies responsible for ALL related problems, automotive manufacturers—car accidents, match makers—fires, firearm companies—gunshots, paper companies—paper cuts! Let's TAX and FINE these and all other industries right out of business! Then no one will have to die, ever!

Obviously I'm joking, but it isn't funny. With law professors like Garner, it's no wonder our justice system has become a ridiculous farce. Once again the liberal mentality has forgotten one of the supporting pillars of our justice system...personal responsibility. If you smoke and get cancer, it's your fault. If you drink and get cirrhosis, it's your fault. You've heard 'guns don't kill people, people kill people.' Matches don't light themselves, cars don't drive themselves. And until RJ Reynolds or Phillip Morris FORCE someone to smoke themselves to death, it's not their fault. It's the smokers. "What about second hand smoke, that's not my fault, I don't smoke." Take it up with the smokers, not the company.

When will lawmakers stop wasting their time on companies that lawfully produce and employ; and start pursuing the real criminals. People choose to smoke, they don't choose to get murdered, raped, robbed and mugged. WAKE UP!!

would like to see the United States take as active a role as they did in Kuwait when Iraq invaded the small nation in 1990.

Agrotis said Cyprus has a history of being occupied by more than seven different outside nations that dates back to biblical times.

"We (Cyprus) have constantly been under a conqueror," he said. "All we want is peace."

Agrotis said since the occupation of his country, drug trafficking has become a major problem and natives have lost many of the freedoms that they once enjoyed.

Irina Filippova, a graduate student in public administration, who passed the demonstration, said the protest gave a potent message to students that there are many problems in Cyprus that need to be solved.

"I think in a large country like the United States, it is easy to get lost to other things that are happening in the world," Filippova, a native Russian, said.

"Cyprus is a small country, but it still deserves attention and help from larger countries."

should be required to pay, whether individuals will be able to choose who will provide care and if the problem is one which should be solved with one bill, he said.

Clinton's willingness to compromise should be viewed as part of a broader strategy, Kelley said.

"The (president's) plan seems to be to get something, anything passed by the House and something, anything passed by Senate, then get it in a conference committee and beef it up," he said.

Once a proposal has been passed by both the House and Senate, the separate proposals will go to a joint conference committee. Members from each house of Congress will meet and write a compromise, which then will be sent back to each house to be voted on again.

If the health care bill can make it to the joint committee, Kelley said it could be easier to rewrite changes to closer fit Clinton's original plan.

"This is a long way from the end of the game," he said.

U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello, D-Belleville, said it is essential to reform the current health care system.

"The consensus in Congress is that this is a major problem with the American people and it needs to be addressed," he said.

Although most politicians agree a problem exists, they disagree about how to solve it, he said.

Currently, about 37 million Americans are without health care coverage, he said.

'Myst-ifying' game takes computer buffs on vacation

By Stephen Williams
Newsday

Get lost.

That's the gist of "Myst," this summer's most popular island destination—for armchair travelers.

"Myst" is more than a chunk of computer software sprung from the fertile minds of two brothers in Spokane, Wash. In less than a year, "Myst" has become one of the best-selling CD-ROM computer programs of all time—"all time" in this case defined as the past year or so—and a staple on most top 10 software lists. Strategies are discussed at cocktail parties; notes are compared up and down the Internet.

CD-ROMs (stands for compact disc-read only memory) have taken computer games to the next plateau because the discs can store massive amounts of data, information that blooms in the computer as fancy graphics, digital-quality sound and even animation. As the prices of CD-ROM drives have dropped in the past year to less than $200, the popularity of the software has soared.

"Myst" shares the CD-ROM entertainment whirl with "Return to Zork," "The 7th Guest" and the high-tech, hard-core "Virtual Valerie." But it is the game that has caught the mood and captured the buzz. With more than a quarter of a million silver discs shipped since September, "Myst" marks a new sensibility: a nonviolent, slightly surreal, graphically sophisticated, cunningly simple labyrinth. Or so it seems.

Like the best games, "Myst" is intuitive, a non-linear mythic journey through fantastic worlds and alternate realities. The explorations are accomplished just by clicking a mouse on an object on screen. Click it on a book, click it on a door, click it on a spigot, click it on a tree.

"It's what I like to call 'the easy chair' computer game," said Rand Miller, who designed the game with his brother, Robyn.

"Where you can sit back and read it like a good novel."

All the inhabitants of Myst Island, located in the middle of a forgotten sea, are missing.

There are no instructions, no dialogue boxes to help interpret the actions, no clicks to beat.

The story begins with a tattered book. Players "read" it with a mouse click, and suddenly there's Myst Island, the creation of Atrus, who has a knack for transporting his readers to fantastic realms.

The island is deserted, although there are objects: a spaceship, an ancient schooner, caves, mazes, craters.

Your job is deduction: Use the hints to find out what happened to the people.

Open the correct doors and new universes come to graphic life. The player is swept deeper and deeper into the thickening plot.

"This is a step closer to the kind of animation you'd see in a Disney movie," said Steven Levy, author of "Insanely Great," which traces the history of Apple's Macintosh, and curator of the Macintosh Game Hall of Fame for Macworld magazine.

"The creators have managed to bury the illusion that you're following some programmer's flow chart. At this point I'd say it's the nicest implementation of the CD-ROM medium."

last presidential election, can make a difference in who is elected in this country," he said.

Parsons said he and Sawyer hope to hear suggestions and concerns from students before leaving for the conference.

"New ideas, fresh ideas and insights are always welcome," he said. "People who are concerned about this University and this campus are people who have good ideas and great insights."

Parsons emphasized that students who think their ideas may be contradictory to the ideas of USG should also provide input.

"We listen to everybody who comes into this office," he said. "If a student came to us with a solution to a problem, as long as it's logical and reasonable and it's something that USSA can act on, there's no reason why we shouldn't."

Students wanting to express ideas or concerns on student-related issues should go to the USG office on the third floor of the Student Center, or phone 536-3381.

Father charged in murder of quadriplegic 8-year-old

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—The father of an 8-year-old quadriplegic boy who was suffocated in his Maryland home last year was arrested Tuesday in the death of the boy, the boy's mother and his nurse, officials said. A second man was also arrested in the three killings, they said.

Lawrence T. Horn, 54, of Los Angeles, was arrested there Tuesday in the killing of his son, Trevor, his former wife, Mildred, and the boy's overnight nurse, Janice Saunders.

James E. Perry 45, of Detroit, was arrested in that city in connection with the suffocation and the two fatal shootings, law enforcement sources said. Montgomery County (Md.) State's Attorney Andrew L. Sonner confirmed the arrests late Tuesday but provided few other details. He said he planned to hold a news conference with Montgomery Police Chief Clarence Edwards at 10 a.m. Wednesday.

The two men were named in warrants charging each of them with three counts of first-degree murder and one count of conspiracy, according to the sources. The arrests followed an intensive 16-month investigation of a crime that police found to be compelling in its brutality.

Trevor had suffered massive brain damage during a 1985 hospital accident and the money his parents received in settlement of a malpractice lawsuit became the focus of the police investigation of the killings.

Law enforcement sources said Horn had been the prime suspect in the case almost from the beginning and that his telephone lines in California had been tapped for months.

Investigators "used financial records, telephone records (and) wiretaps," said one law enforcement source familiar with the investigation. The source said the FBI played a major role in the investigation.

Tuesday's arrests came after sealed indictments were handed up by a special grand jury in Montgomery County, a law enforcement source said.

Horn, who has been described as an independent recording engineer who helped Berry Gordy launch the Motown music label in Detroit in the 1960s, was arrested in Los Angeles at 6 p.m. Eastern Standard Time, a law enforcement source said. Perry was arrested in Detroit at 4:10 p.m., the source said.

Perry was being held without bond Tuesday night at the Wayne County jail in Detroit. It was not immediately clear where in Los Angeles Horn was being held.

"In terms of manpower and hours, this was a very intense, time-consuming case," said an investigator in the case. "To see a handicapped child murdered was completely unacceptable. This was a case that whatever we could legally do to solve it, we would."

Efforts to reach an attorney for Horn Tuesday night were unsuccessful. In the past he has denied any connection with the three deaths.

Montgomery County police have said the killings occurred between 2 a.m. and 7:30 a.m. on March 3, 1993 in a house in the Washington suburb of Silver Spring, Md.

"It depends on how many people show up if I give demonstrations," he said. "I'll even have my boat there if somebody would like to go out."

Baits for different seasons and some geography of the lake will also be included in the seminar, Bowlin said.

People are welcome to bring their fishing equipment and learn about rigging different fishing tackle, Thrush said.

"We're just trying to educate the public on things centered around nature," he said.

bacteria-ridden include vomiting, diarrhea, stomach cramps, headache and chills.

There are many different types of bacteria that can cause these symptoms, such as Salmonella which commonly occurs in chicken and eggs.

"We can't control how people fix their food or what they bring, but we recommend people wash their hands when handling food, not mix raw meat with cooked meat and keep food temperatures cold during transportation and before consumption," DeWulf said.

SIU Alumnus magazine seeks to hire new editor

Katarzyna T. Buksa
General Assignment Reporter

Those who depend on the Alumnus magazine for information about SIU alumni, fundraising efforts and other University activities may not see much of a change with the possible hiring of a new editor, according to the director of University News Service.

Sue Davis, director of the service, said a new editor will be hired, but it has not happened yet.

"It is too premature to say who will be hired," she said.

"The current editor, Laraine Wright, has been asked to do more fundraising publications because the University needs more private money."

Greg Scott, an assistant director for the Alumni Association, said planning is under way to hire a new editor for the magazine.

"Another editor will be chosen in the next couple of weeks and it probably will be an Alumni Services employee," he said. Edward Luenger, executive director of the Alumni Association and director of Alumni Services, said the interviewing process currently is underway.

"We are hoping to hire an editor soon," he said.

"We are looking for a qualified applicant, who can maintain the quality now present in the Alumnus magazine — there will be no blatant, sudden changes."

Jack Dyer, executive director of University Relations, said the responsibility of the magazine will be shifted from University Relations to the Alumni Association.

"It is not a matter of who will control the Alumnus, it is a matter of responsibility," Dyer said.

Davis said while Wright, also director of Print Communications, may step down as the editor only the responsibility of writing for the magazine will be altered.

"Ben Gelman and Jerry O'Malley, who work for Print

Communications and who are assistant editors for the magazine, will still have their duties," she said.

"They will not do the majority of the writing for the magazine, but all of the design and photograph duties will remain within University Relations."

Davis said the new editor may decide to do all of the writing for the magazine, but that will be decided during the hiring process.

Paul Conti, president of the SIU Foundation and former president of the SIU Alumni Association, said the decision to hire a new editor was not done alone.

"The decision to select a new editor was a joint decision made by University Relations, Alumni Association, and Robert Quatroche, vice president for institutional advancement," Conti said.

Conti said the shifting of the editor from someone employed by University Relations to an employee of Alumni Services was based on progress by the Alumni Association.

"University Relations has assisted the Alumni Association because it didn't have the capability to produce the magazine," Conti said.

"The Alumni Association has grown significantly and is now going to maintain the quality previously done by University Relations."

Conti said the magazine is responsible for a large amount of funds raised for the University.

"The alumni and friends are very integral because they raise about $9 million a year," Conti said.

"It's very high status. It maintains and increases the quality of education at the university."

Davis said the SIU Foundation contributes between $100,000 and $110,000 to the magazine and the Alumni Association about $70,000.

"University Relations donates the hours of work, so that is where the state money comes in," she said.

The magazine is produced four times a year, there were 42,436 copies of the winter issue released at a cost of about 70 cents a copy.

Wright said the magazine shows the contemporary University, life of people, some nostalgia and good things that are going on at the University.

"We want people to think well of the institution, to know its successes and some of its problems such as the threat of possible monies being taken from athletics," Wright said.

The first three issues go out to a total circulation of 40,000 people. Ten thousand are members and 30,000 are donors or prospective donors.

The fourth issue, that goes out in the fall goes out to all alumni, consisting of 70,000 people.

"Private money is becoming more and more important to public institutions," Davis said. "There is a need for a strong endowment."

Theater workshop offers learning opportunities

By Diane Dove
Special Assignment Reporter

The performance of four plays in the Communication Building's Laboratory Theater at the Playwrights' Workshop next week is giving SIUC's playwrights and theater directors the chance to learn and entertain at the same time.

Lighting designer David Schmidt said the purpose of the workshop is to help playwrights improve their work.

"It's basically a chance for them to put their work into production and see what works and what doesn't," he said.

"We hold discussions afterward and the playwright can then decide whether or not to make changes."

"Stages," written by Geryll Robinson and directed by Dan Michel, will be performed at 8 p.m. July 26.

Michel said Robinson's play, which has a cast of nine women playing both male and female roles, is about degradation of women and their roles in society.

Michel said he had a good working relationship with Robinson during the production.

"We have a good collaboration," he said.

"It's basically a chance for them to put their work into production and see what works and what doesn't."

—David Schmidt

"It's almost like we're one mind."

"A Leading Woman," written by Joanne Koch, will be performed at 8 p.m. July 25.

Directed by Shannon Weber, the play is a comedy based on the Actor's Equity Strike of 1919.

Julie Shoopman, the workshop's costume designer, said the play projects a feel for the era.

"It gave kind of a period feel because we really didn't have a budget to build anything and we just had to pool what we had," she said. "We had costumes that were probably early 20s and some costumes which were probably still earlier in the decade in this show."

Shoopman said "Woman" was the most difficult to design costumes for of all the plays in the workshop.

"1919 is a difficult period in fashion to pin down because it's a very transitional period," she said.

Gilson Sarmiento said his love for medieval theater and morality plays inspired him to write "Father Lawrence's Solution," which will be presented following "Stages" under the direction of Bill Kirksey.

"I don't like psychodramas on stage, so I chose a more theatrical presentation," he said. "It's presented in means that are only characteristic of theater."

Sarmiento said his play differs from psychological or social dramas in its relationship to the audience.

"The characters are constantly reminding the audience that they're on stage, and the message is very obviously presented to the audience," he said.

Sarmiento said he chose Kirksey to direct his play because of his skill and experience.

"He happens to be one of the best directors in the theater department," he said. "He's also one of the most experienced."

Michael Licwinko, who wrote "Splitting Heirs," which will be performed at 8 p.m. July 27, said the play shows how wealth corrupts a family.

"It's a comedic look at money and how it affects people," he said. Shoopman said creating costumes for the many cartoonish characters in "Splitting Heirs" and "Stages," made costume designing for the workshop fun.

"Stages" is very stylized and so I've had a lot of fun with that," she said.

Shoopman said designing for the workshop has been stressful at times.

"Usually with the shows you would have a costume designer and a crew working on one show at a time and a normal sized budget," she said. "With this program there's only one designer, and no crew, for all the shows."

Tickets for the performances are $4.

Ted Turner sets his sights on CBS after failed merger

Los Angeles Times

In 1985, cable mogul Ted Turner mounted a hostile $5.4 billion bid for CBS Inc., only to be foiled after the network countered by putting a costly refinancing plan into effect.

Turner's appetite for a broadcast network has never abated since then.

He recently made an effort to buy NBC, but encountered opposition from some of his own board members, as well as NBC's owners, at General Electric.

Now, in the wake of the failed CBS-QVC merger, Turner is re-examining his options.

And in typical Turner style, he has done little to hide his ambitions.

During a retreat for top cable industry executives last week on Cape Cod, the Turner Broadcasting System chief kept excusing himself from meetings to dash into another room, where he could be overheard bellowing into the phone: "With (QVC Chairman) Barry (Diller) out, we've got to go in there ... I can hold the TV stations in my own name."

The startled cable executives quickly realized that Turner had his sights set again on CBS, and was rushing to get some answers from his advisers before leaving on a chartered jet for St. Petersburg, Russia, and the Turner-sponsored Goodwill Games.

Although CBS Chief Executive Laurence A. Tisch Tuesday told reporters during a news conference that his network is not for sale, that stance is viewed skeptically since he last month agreed to the QVC merger and new management.

In making a play for CBS, however, Turner could face even greater opposition from his two largest shareholders, Denver-based cable TV giant Tele-Communications Inc. and entertainment colossus Time Warner Inc.

As cable TV system operators, TCI and Time Warner would be forced to reduce their stake if Turner acquired a network of TV stations because federal rules severely restrict cross-ownership of cable and broadcast properties.

Analysts agree that neither Time Warner nor TCI would reduce its position in Turner—a vital programming supplier—without extracting big concessions.

Time Warner, for example, has indicated that it would give up its 19 percent stake in exchange for certain Turner programming assets.

Cash would not do, sources say, because Time Warner would have to pay onerous taxes on its original investment in Turner.

So far, Turner has not been willing to part with an asset,

Officials investigating robberies, auto burglaries

By Stephanie Moletti
Police Reporter

Auto burglaries in Carbondale have dramatically increased over the last year, but police may have slowed things down after interviewing four juveniles over the weekend who confessed to 15 burglaries, according to Carbondale Police Department officials.

Don Priddy, community resource officer for the Carbondale Police Department, said the juveniles were all between the ages of 13 and 15, and they may also be responsible for more burglaries than they have confessed.

Priddy said the information

retrieved from the juveniles will be turned over for the Illinois state's attorney to decide "what to do with them."

Police Department statistics show 166 auto burglaries to date, compared to 93 for the same time period in 1993.

Police say there is no apparent reason for the increase, but many of the burglaries could have been avoided.

In several cases, there was no sign of forced entry, indicating the vehicle's door may have been left unlocked. In other incidents, the victims had left valuables in plain view.

Priddy said the department encourages people to lock their doors and keep items of value, such as CD's, tapes, purses, radar detectors, clothing, jewelry, cash and wallets, out of sight.

"A lot of times the problem is around the bars," Priddy said. "People don't want to take in their coat or purse, so they leave them in the car — lock things up in the trunk."

Police said in some cases there were witnesses who saw persons walking past cars and checking the doors to see if they were unlocked.

Police urge people to take precautions to help prevent such events in the future.

Police Blotter

Reports from the Carbondale Police Department for July 20

Carbondale Police arrested Lance R. Tinsley, 23, of 417 South Graham Street, early Wednesday morning on a Jackson County warrant for aggravated robbery.

Tinsley was identified as the driver in the attempted armed robbery of the Clark Gas Station on East Walnut Street which occurred on July 18.

Tinsley was taken to the Jackson County Jail where he was held in lieu of $5,000 bond.

Carbondale Police are still seeking the gunman in this case, identified as a black male about 5-feet, 11-inches to 6-feet tall and 170 pounds, he was carrying a large hand gun.

Police also recovered the vehicle used in the Clark's armed robbery.

The vehicle was recovered abandoned on Carbondale's southeast side.

The car, a light gray (reported earlier as possibly a light blue) 1987 Oldsmobile, had been stolen from the Wal-Mart parking lot in Herrin on July 15.

The Carbondale Police are continuing the investigation in the Clark's robbery, as well as other recent unresolved robberies.

Anyone with any information should call 457-3200 or 549-COPS.

department of sociology, said there is less incentive now for men to marry than in the past.

"Before, many jobs were family wage jobs, jobs where a family could be supported by a working father, and which were held primarily by white males," said Ward. "Now there are more lower paying, individual wage jobs which won't support a family."

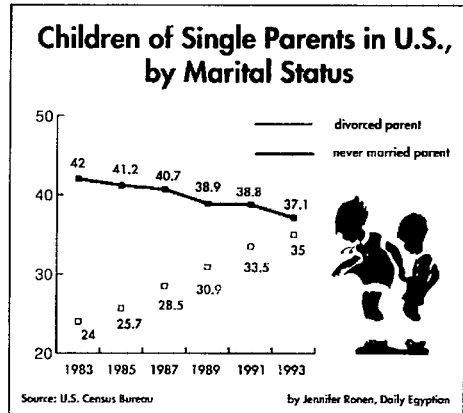

Ward said the change in the wage earning capability of men challenges their masculinity because of the notion that a man should support his family, thus reducing the likelihood of marriage because it is more difficult to get by if you are married.

Both Ward and Wright noted there is no evidence to support the notion that women on welfare have more children so they may receive more government money.

Ward and Wright also stated evidence shows the fastest growing group among unwed mothers is white women, contrary to the popularly held notion that African American women are the quickest growing group.

Wright said there are no easy answers.

"The situation is so complex," Wright said. "And the government's approach is backwards. The government is treating unwed mothers as the problem, and they are not, they are a symptom of the problem."

Wright said the new welfare reforms which mandate women must find a job two years after having a baby do not solve the problem.

"It might be better in the long run for society if women can stay home and be with their children and help raise them to be thoughtful, well educated and caring individuals," she said. "At least someone needs to be there for the children. Women on welfare can't afford child care because it is so expensive."

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING POLICY

Please Be Sure To Check Your Classified Advertisement For Errors On The First Day Of Publication

The Daily Egyptian cannot be responsible for more than one day's incorrect insertion. Advertisers are responsible for checking their advertisements for errors on the first day they appear. Errors not the fault of the advertiser which lessen the value of the advertisement will be adjusted.

All classified advertising must be processed before 12:00 Noon to appear in the next day's publication. Anything processed after 12:00 Noon will go in the following day's publication. Classified advertising must be paid in advance except for those accounts with established credit. A 29c charge will be added to billed classified advertising. A 29c charge of $15.00 will be added to the advertiser's account for every check returned to the Daily Egyptian unpaid by the advertiser's bank. Early cancellation of a classified advertisement will be charged a $2.00 service fee. Any refund under $2.00 will be forfeited due to the cost of processing.

All advertising submitted to the Daily Egyptian is subject to approval and may be revised, rejected, or cancelled at any time.

The Daily Egyptian assumes no liability if for any reason it becomes necessary to omit an advertisement.

A sample of all mail-order items must be submitted and approved prior to deadline for publication.

No ads will be mis-classified.

season, and is batting .350, his use of a corked bat was a surprise. If anyone was suspected of using a corked bat on the Cleveland roster, members of the California Angels and Red Sox said, it was leadoff hitter Kenny Lofton. Lofton began the season with six home runs. This season, he has 10.

"To tell you the truth," said Angel hitting coach Rod Carew, "Belle is the last person I'd have suspected. He didn't need it, not with that power."

"Really, I'm surprised guys are still doing it. I've played with guys that did it, but I thought it was something that went out in the early '80s."

Said Angel second baseman Harold Reynolds: "You hear about some guys using steroids for some extra pop, but not cork."

Yet, it was no surprise to Herzog, who accused then-New York Met Howard Johnson of using a corked bat in 1987 and is convinced there is a widespread use of illegal bats today.

"We had an X-ray machine at (Busch Stadium)," Herzog said, "and one night when the Mets came into town, we decided to have all of their bats checked. Well, we found four of those SOB's using corked bats, including Howard Johnson, but (Darryl) Strawberry, (Gary) Carter and (Keith)

Hernandez were all clean.

"Johnson had gone from 10 homers to 36 in one year, so I know something's not right, anyway. So we marked his corked bat, and when he came to the plate, I got umpire Paul Runge to take it.

"The thing was, when the game was over, Runge gave the bat back. He didn't know the rule. He apologized, but as soon as he gave that bat back, it was long gone."

"I told him, 'Next time I come out here to check bats, I'm going to bring a chain saw to home plate with me.'"

Johnson Monday denied the allegations that he used a corked bat, just as he had in 1987.

doesn't, then we will enforce (the suit) and what we want is a temporary restraining order saying (Keenan) cannot work for St. Louis, and we want a judgment represented that this is not a material breach and he is still the coach of the New York Rangers."

Gutkowski is intent on fighting for the rights of the Garden. "My personal feeling is I'm extremely embarrassed for Mike Keenan and the way he's handled himself. I know all the particulars," he said.

"I know very deeply if there was a concern on Mr. (agent Rob) Campbell's part or Mr. Keenan's part about a problem they would have had they would have found it very easy to pick up the phone and call me during the season. Barbra Streisand tickets were one of them. But when it comes down to a large check, for some reason they just couldn't do the dialing."

The suit contends that Keenan's Rangers contract says the coach will devote all his time and energies to the Rangers, that he will have no involvement with any other professional or amateur hockey organization and that he will "make no statements or actions which may impair, impugn, denigrate, disparage or reflect negatively upon the name, reputation or business interests" of the Rangers or the Garden.

In return, Keenan was to be paid between $5.11 million and $8.15 million over the five-year term of the contract, depending on certain incentives and bonuses. Keenan also received a $975,000 loan from the Rangers at 5 percent interest on July 8, 1993, to help him purchase a $1.3-million home in Greenwich, Conn.

The principal of that loan was to be due in five years, but the Rangers want the remainder of the loan and the interest paid in full immediately if Keenan is ruled to have breached his contract.

Meola makes serious move from U.S. soccer to football

Newsday

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y.—Apparently, Tony Meola is serious about this American football stuff.

Consider that Tuesday, about one hour after he finished meeting the media at a news conference introducing him as the New York Jets' newest signing, Meola was out on the practice field at Hofstra.

And this was not just a photo opportunity. This was 30 minutes worth of real work, practicing kickoffs and field goals. And Meola continued to practice after the camera crews had left.

"This is not something that just came up two weeks ago," Meola said. "This is something I've wanted to do since I left football in the eighth grade."

Meola was a kicker for his Pop Warner football team in Kearny, N.J., in both seventh and eighth grade. But then he gave up the sport to concentrate on soccer.

It was a good choice, as he eventually became the starting goalkeeper for the U.S. National Team for the past two World Cups.

But Meola decided that once the World Cup was over, he wanted to leave soccer for at least a while and pursue his other dream.

His agent, Alan Herman, contacted several teams. In fact, Meola was scheduled to have a tryout with Kansas City, but the Chiefs backed out. Kansas City signed former New York Giants kicker David Treadwell on Monday.

Herman contacted Jets General Manager Dick Steinberg and arranged a Jets tryout for Meola last Thursday. Meola impressed Steinberg by making most of his field-goal attempts and placing all of his kickoffs inside the 5-yard line. The Jets then signed Meola Monday to a one-year contract at the NFL rookie minimum of $108,000, plus a $7,000 signing bonus.

The Jets are interested in Meola mainly as a kickoff specialist because they recently signed Nick Lowery, the NFL's all-time leader in field-goal accuracy.

Steinberg said that a big consideration in signing Meola was the new rule moving kickoffs from the 35 to the 30. "That rule scares a lot of us," he said.

"You could be sacrificing a lot of field position in the kickoff area" without a strong kickoff artist.

With a slight wind at his back, Meola was as impressive Tuesday on kickoffs as he was in his tryout.

He consistently put the kickoffs inside the 5-yard line, and put many into the end zone. On field goals, he was accurate up to the 40-yard line, where he made 3 of 4 attempts.

Beyond that, he was not as accurate, making 2 of 6 from 45 yards and 3 of 6 from 50 yards. Still, the leg strength is there, even if the accuracy and technique must be worked on—something Meola is prepared to do.

Smith leaves SIUC hoops for Alton

By Bill Kugelberg
Sports Reporter

After spending nine seasons on the court with the Saluki basketball team, assistant coach Ron Smith has announced he will be leaving the bench to become the Alton School District athletic director and head basketball coach at Alton High School.

Smith said he took the position in order to become involved with more students.

"I got into education because I wanted to have an input on young people's lives," he said. "I will have an opportunity to effect 8,000 students and that is exciting."

The new position as Alton School District athletic director puts Smith in charge of district athletics from kindergarten through high school. Being able to work with so many students is important to Smith.

"I was a high school guidance counselor before I came here," Smith said. "I felt everyday that in some way I touched somebody's life and hopefully made it better."

Smith was SIUC Head Basketball Coach Rich Herrin's assistant at Benton High School before coming to Carbondale, helping to lead the team to three super sectional appearances and two Elite Eight trips. While serving as the school's junior varsity coach, he guided the team to an overall record of 43-6.

A good financial deal, more responsibility and the move to a beautiful area were the main reasons Smith said he took the new position.

"The Metro East area is a very attractive place to live," he said. "I will be close to St. Louis, but I won't be very far from here and I like that."

Smith wasn't planning on leaving SIUC, but after talking to Ed Hightower, an NCAA basketball referee and assistant superintendent at Alton, he was notified the job may be something he would be interested in.

"Ed is one of the top referees in the NCAA," Smith said. "I have known him a long time and he saw me about a week ago. He approached me about the job and we thought the timing and everything else involved was fantastic."

Smith

Despite being excited about moving on to the Alton job, he said he will miss SIUC.

"We have had some great teams here while I have been around," he said. "I will definitely miss being around all of these guys."

While Smith has been with the Saluki basketball team, SIUC has strung together six straight seasons featuring post-season competition and a total of 128 victories.

Smith said he will leave SIUC and take over the Alton position around the beginning of August.

Baseball coaches speak out on 'hot' issue of corking bats

Los Angeles Times

Whitey Herzog has been waiting for the day when somebody, anybody, would follow his lead and check for corked bats.

"I'm telling you right now," said Herzog, who managed 18 years in the major leagues, "if you checked everybody in baseball, you'd have a whole room full of corked bats.

"Believe me, with the way the ball's flying out this year, you'd be stupid not to check some of these guys.

"This has been going on for years, but everybody has been talking so much about the balls being juiced, they forget some of these bats are juiced too."

Gene Lamont of the Chicago White Sox became the first manager in baseball this season to check for a corked bat Friday when he requested that Cleveland outfielder Albert Belle's bat be examined.

Belle's bat was sawed in half Monday by the American League office and cork was discovered. He was suspended for 10 games, Belle appealed, and will have a July 29 hearing.

"It kills me how people now are saying that Lamont only did it because they're in a pennant race with Cleveland," Herzog said. "The guy was cheating, so what the hell difference does it make? Why are we sticking up for outlaws?"

The art of corking bats has been going on for decades, but only now, players say, has it been perfected to a science. There are woodsmen who drill holes at the end of bats, insert cork, plug the holes, sand and laminate, believing that no one will ever know.

"They had a private wood-working shop in Cleveland," said Boston Red Sox reliever Steve Farr, Belle's former teammate in Cleveland, "so what happened with him didn't surprise me at all. That stuff has been going on since I was there for the first time 10 years ago.

"But I know pitchers that cheat, and I know hitters that cheat. You could pick five, six, seven guys on every team that cheat, so it's no big deal unless you get caught.

"I mean, just a few weeks ago (while Farr was with Cleveland) a corked bat during batting practice, and when his bat broke, cork went everywhere.

"And this was right in front of the visiting manager."

The advantage of using corked bats, according to players and coaches, is that it gives the bat a lighter feel and enables hitters to generate greater bat speed. It provides a springboard effect, they say, with the ball jumping off the bat and carrying farther than normal.

SIUC grad to direct area Special Olympics

By Doug Durso
Sports Reporter

A former SIUC graduate who has translated her love of kids to a career in helping other people has been appointed area director for Area 15 Southern Special Olympics.

Vicky Sheehan, an Intensive Care Unit nurse at the Veteran's Administration Hospital in Marion, began her new position earlier this month.

Sheehan said she is grateful and is excited to handle the responsibility of the job.

"I consider it quite an honor and quite a challenge (to have been selected)," Sheehan said.

She said the Special Olympics is a important part of this area.

"Special Olympics has a long history with Southern Illinois and Southern Illinois University, and I'm proud to be a part of that," Sheehan said.

She will be the director over Area 15, which is in charge of 500 athletes in Perry, Jackson, Williamson, Union, Alexander, and Massac Counties.

Sheehan said she wants to increase the strength of the local area advisory committee, delegating responsibility for its various functions such as fundraising and games management to those committee members interested in a more active role in Illinois Special Olympics.

She said her long term goal is to get as many people involved especially in participation of the Special Olympics.

"Reaching as many athletes as possible is very important," Sheehan said.

To accomplish this, Sheehan said she would be working very close to local special education groups. She would work with group residency program in an effort to help generate interest in the athlete's participation in the games.

Doug Snyder, president and CEO of Illinois Special Olympics, said Sheehan brings intensity and interest to the position.

"We are pleased to welcome Vicky aboard her interest and enthusiasm for Illinois Special Olympics and its many programs

Parnevik could go down in history

By Phil Jackman
The Baltimore Sun

Reading Time: Two Minutes

Is Jesper Parnevik's name going down in sports history right next to Billy Joe Patton, Bobo Holloman, Ingemar Johansson, Dick Wakefield, Larue Martin and Clint Hartung, a one-shot wonder rarely to be heard from again.

By blowing the British Open to Nick Price Sunday, the Swedish golfer is well on his way as a result of his massive blunder of not bothering to check the scoreboard and know his situation at the end. ABC commentator Jack Nicklaus was as astonished as the millions of viewers who sat there with their mouths agape.

"I'm amazed his caddy didn't say something on the 18th tee," said Nicklaus. "You have to know where you stand over the last couple holes because it dictates how you play strategically."

Parnevik gave the impression he had just lost a $2 nassau, not a "major," which often sets up a player's career. "I thought I was behind all the way," he said with an accompanying smile.

Meanwhile, Price, in the next twosome, got a birdie at No. 16 and thought he was tied. He went out of his way to check out a scoreboard, which informed him of Parnevik's eagle at No. 17. "I had to get my heart slowed down for the last two holes," said the victor, who rammed in one of the great putts of all time, a 40-plus footer, for a matching eagle, then parred the home hole for the win.

Keenan being sued by Rangers

Newsday

NEW YORK—Just in case Mike Keenan doesn't get the message, he's being sued.

Calling Keenan "a faithless employee, one who has betrayed the New York Rangers hockey club," Madison Square Garden and the Rangers filed suit Tuesday in New York Federal Court as a safety net to give the Rangers recourse in case Keenan, the St. Louis Blues or Detroit Red Wings do not comply with any decision NHL Commissioner Gary Bettman may make as he resolves their dispute.

"We haven't asked for any action on this because we believe strongly the commissioner has jurisdiction over this," MSG President Bob Gutkowski said. "If for some reason it is represented: he
