AAUP salary bill won't reappear in state assembly

By Ed Lempinen
Staff Writer

A bill which would deny salary increases to members of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) will not be reintroduced in the General Assembly, according to Rep. Gilbert Deavers, R-44th District.

Deavers said the bill, which would have amended the appropriation bills for all state university systems, was a "knee-jerk reaction" to a letter from Scott Eatherly, a member of the Normal chapter of the AAUP.

The letter stated that because Illinois has failed to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment, Eatherly and other members of the AAUP would hold their annual meeting outside of Illinois next year.

Deavers, also a resident of Normal, said he knew the amendment would not be passed.

But, he said, "we wanted to indicate to them that if they could use their group to pressure us, we could use our group to pressure them. We wanted to draw attention to the problem."

Marvin Kleiman, ex-president of the Carbondale chapter of the AAUP, said he was "absolutely shocked" that a legislator would attempt to retaliate at the expression of a political belief.

Eatherly is one of a dozen AAUP members from ten Midwestern states who meet annually to discuss the organization's growth and future plans. However, said Kleiman, the letter was not authorized by the AAUP.

In a statement issued last week, AAUP President Martha Friedman said the lack of formal authorization is "beside the point."

"What is important is that it doesn't matter if he was multiplied by ten, or one hundred, or by one thousand, or by any other number, his speech and writing are protected," Friedman said.

According to Kleiman, the AAUP is not planning any action to protest Deaver's amendment.

The Carbondale chapter of AAUP has about 150 dues-paying members, Kleiman said.

The SIU appropriations bill was passed by the House last Tuesday, and must now be reviewed by Gov. Thompson.

Vendor licensing to begin in fall 1979

By Nick Bortol
Staff Writer

Any off-campus group planning to sell its materials on-campus will need to buy a license from SIU by fall, 1979, Tom Busch, assistant to the vice president for student affairs, said.

The policy will not affect student clubs and fraternities, but only "all commercial ventures," Busch said.

"We needed to find a way to protect the students from businesses that come on campus, so we decided to let the vendors bid on providing certain services," Busch said. "The details of the policy aren't completely worked out, but we all agree on the basic idea."

"The key issue in this thing is determining if there is a need for a particular service. If it's something we can't provide, then we'll seek outside help," Busch said.

Once need is determined, prospective businesses will bid for the chance to operate on campus. The University will take the highest bidder, after taking into account the differences in services offered.

"But if the service conflicts with one we already provide, we'll not allow it on campus," Busch said. "That's because we have a legal obligation not to compete with other business at the University."

Different people will have the authority to determine if an outside business is needed, Busch said. Student Center Director John Corlier will decide matters involving food sales on campus; Soa Rinella, housing director, is in charge of sales at the dorms and Clarence Dougherty, vice president for campus services, will handle all other operations.

The Mr. Sandwich trucks, which service east campus, may also be offered a chance for license renewal because they duplicate services already provided by the University, Rinella said.

Grinnell Hall closes each night by 10:30 p.m. Mr. Sandwich trucks are open almost every night until 2 a.m.

Barrett Rockman, owner of the Mr. Sandwich trucks, said "The University has been more than fair with me, whether I come back here or not." Rockman has operated his trucks on campus for 14 years. For the past two years, he has been given license extensions through fall, 1979.

March may be rescheduled

Park district tries to block Nazi rally

CHICAGO (AP)—The Chicago Park District moved Monday to prevent a group of Nazis from marching in Marquette Park—a action, which, if successful, could result in the Nazis rescheduling a proposed rally in suburban Skokie.

Edmund Kelly, park district superintendent, said the district will appeal a federal court order which would allow the National Socialist Party of America to demonstrate in Marquette Park on July 9 without posting a $60,000 insurance bond.

After Judge George L. Leighton of U.S. District Court signed the order last Thursday, Nazi leader Frank Collin postponed a widely publicized planned demonstration in heavily Jewish Skokie and instead held a rally in downtown Chicago.

"We think our insurance requirement is a legal and fair requirement and we do not believe that an exception should be made for the Nazis," Kelly said at a news conference.

"We have a definite legal and moral obligation to preserve and protect the property and the lives which are entrusted to us," Kelly said. "If our property, which after all is the property of the taxpayers of Chicago, is damaged, who will pay for it?"

Kelly said he has asked attorneys to file the appeal, requesting a stay of Leighton's order, on Tuesday. He said the district expects the request for a stay to be heard Wednesday.

"It could not be reached for comment," but James Karl, a spokesman for the Nazis, said the group would reschedule the Skokie rally if it loses the right to demonstrate in Chicago parks.

"I seriously doubt if they can do anything so rash as to take away our First Amendment rights again," said Karl. "But if they do abridge our rights, then we'll go right back to Skokie."

Kelly said the park district respects the First Amendment rights of the Nazis, but also feels the public is entitled to its rights.

"Our parks are designed for the benefit of all people of Chicago," said Kelly. "The general public has a right to use the parks for the purposes for which they were designed without fear of violence resulting from political demonstrations and counter-demonstrations."

"As long as I am superintendent, I will resist these groups who do not only represent a potential danger to the public because of the violence that could occur in the park, but who are also costing taxpayers money."

The news conference was attended by about 100 persons from the Southwest Parish and Neighborhood Federation, a community group based in the Marquette Park area. A spokesman said the group appeared "to show that responsible citizens of the community don't want the Nazis destroying our neighborhoods."

"We cannot stand by, we will not stand by and allow Marquette Park to be used as a battleground," Linda Villalobos, secretary for the group, said. "The stability and integrity of our community is at stake."

"You saw what happened at the federal building plaza," she said. "All the bricks, the bottles and the garbage being thrown. We don't want that in Marquette Park." About 30 uniformed Nazis demonstrated at a downtown Chicago federal building Saturday and were pelted with eggs, rocks, sticks and bottles thrown by thousands of counter-demonstrators.

Addressing the members of the southwest side neighborhood group, Kelly said, "I assure you, ladies and gentlemen, that we'll do everything we can" to stop the proposed Nazi rally in Marquette Park.

Kelly said if the appeal fails and the Nazis are allowed to hold the demonstration, any counter-demonstrators would also have to obtain a park district permit. "The rules are the same for everyone," he said.

Life Styling workshop: 'Heal thyself'

By Deb Browne
Staff Writer

It could be more than a workshop. It could change your life.

or your style of living, that is, if you're ready to make and keep agreements with yourself toward improving your health.

SIU's Life Styling program is conducting a workshop Thursday from 7 to 10 p.m. in the Mississippi Room at the Student Center that will help people realize and evaluate unhealthy activities and realistic commitments to changing them, according to Dave Miles, coordinator of Life Styling.

"The name of the game is the self," said Miles. "We want to help people learn how to guide it and improve themselves."

The Life Styling program, one offshoot of SIU's Prevention Programs, was instituted at SIU in '76. It was based on the idea of maintaining positive health by evaluating and reducing risk factors, after a year-long pilot project involving about 60 students was conducted. The object of "preventive health" is not only well-being, but decreasing doctor bills and visits to the Health Service.

However, a study by John McKillip, assistant professor in psychology, showed that the students involved in the project actually made more visits to the health service than the control group.

Miles, who holds a doctorate from SIU in educational psychology, came here in the fall to lead the program with what he calls a different approach.

"The important thing is maintenance, keeping at it, not just getting high at a workshop," he said. Miles advocates a systematic learning of self discipline, coupled with a gradual raising of health standards.

Workshop participants Thursday will be introduced to the philosophy of holistic lifestyles. They will grade themselves, from "A" to "E", on 21 factors including not only how good their eating and exercise habits are, but on how well they handle stress, social relations, job dissatisfaction and the ecology of their lifestyles.

"Being totally healthy in a world that is coming apart at the seams does no good," Miles said.

Miles will also direct participants toward clarifying beliefs of what will lead to the happiest lifestyle for individuals, and involving themselves in naturally reinforcing activities, one of which is dancing.

"Dancing is probably the most healthy, well-rounded activity. It's fun to do, self-reinforcing and before long you begin to care about what you look like," Miles said. More than a thousand people participated in six Life Styling dances last semester, he said.

Workshop participants will then keep track of their progress on a day to day basis, moving toward specific goals which may be to quit smoking, to lose weight or to get more physical activity. Dancing is not the only answer.

"Each person has a thing that feels right for him or her. It could be running with the Roadrunner's Club and for some, racquetball is the answer. The important thing is to find a regular activity that is pretty taxing," Miles said.

Miles said the main deterrent of maintaining positive health is the momentum of acquired habits reinforced by a commercial environment.

"We are, to a large extent, products of our environment, and we're in a commercial world. The media is into getting you to be a consumer," Miles said.

"In Carbondale you do what the natives do: smoke dope, drink, eat junk food," said Miles, who has lived in Carbondale for 18 years and attained bachelor's and master's degrees from SIU in visual design.

"If a person is ever going to get on top of himself he's got to control his input and be discriminating, as a consumer," Miles said.

Lobbying story upsets House GOPs

By Bob Springer

Associated Press Writer
SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Republican Gov. James R. Thompson was naive in allowing an Associated Press reporter to listen in last week while he lobbied unsuccessfully on the telephone for the proposed Equal Rights Amendment, the GOP leader of the Illinois House says.

And the two House GOP members whose ERA votes Thompson frantically sought said Monday they were outraged when they first read the story quoting Thompson's half of telephone conversations with them.

"The least he could have done was let me know someone was in there. I think he should have told me," said Rep. Elmer W. Conti, R-Elmwood Park, one of the Republican House members called on the House floor by Thompson last Thursday when the ERA started with 105 favorable votes—two shy of passing.

"I think it hurt him with the legislators, I don't think it hurt him among the people who read the story," he said, adding that he didn't think the damage would be permanent.

Conti said he thinks members on both sides of the aisle are very unhappy and that from now on "as far as I'm concerned if he wants to talk to any of the members he'd better call them to his office."

Rep. William A. Margalus, R-Chicago, the other legislator who was called, said: "I was surprised because I didn't think anybody knew about the thing, that it was strictly between the governor and myself."

"But what I told the governor I don't care if the whole world knows, so I'm not so upset anymore," he said.

Rep. George H. Ryan, R-Kankakee,

House minority leader, said Thompson "absolutely goofed" in allowing the reporter in the office. "I think he was maybe a little naive," Ryan said.

Ryan said a number of GOP lawmakers complained to him about the governor's action after they read the story. "Their first reaction was: 'I don't know if I ever want to talk to the Thompson begged Margalus for a pro-ERA vote and told him it "is the end of me as leader of the party unless you go on (and vote for ERA)."

Margalus had voted June 7 in favor of the ERA, but said he switched after voters in his district flooded him with protests.

"I told the governor, I says, 'I kept my word with you governor the first time, and I hope you'll release me for this time because I made a commitment to my community after the terrible anti-ERA response I got,'" Margalus said.

STS grant applications due Friday

By Jill Michelich

Staff Writer
Lines weren't long Monday for the applications for the Student to Student (STS) Grants Program being offered this summer.

Students who applied for the grants must return the filled out application to the Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance before Friday to be eligible for the grant.

Students may receive up to $150 depending on their financial need after all applications have been reviewed.

Millie Wright, financial aid advisor, said that a new way of handling the applications is being put into effect this year. Last year applications were distributed 40 or more at a time, and the deadline dates differed. This year Wright said, all applications were distributed at one time and all will have to be back to the office on Friday.

The Student to Student Grant Program was first started at the University of Illinois by students who assessed themselves a voluntary fee for the purpose of assisting those in need of financial help. In 1974, the Student Senate at SIU included an STS referendum on their ballot. The senate recommended a refundable fee of $2.25 per semester. This fee was collected from SIU students beginning in the fall of 1975.

After the collection of the $2.25 fee, the Illinois State Scholarship Commission will match this fee. In the academic year 1976-1977 the STS budget was over $160,000.

To receive the grant Wright said students must itemize their living expenses, tuition, books, and other amounts they pay in a semester. The student must also disclose other financial assistance they are receiving such as SEOG, and other types of financial aid they receive in a semester.

If there is still money to spend after all the applications have been received, Wright said additional applications will be distributed.

Police look for clues in Versailles bombing

VERSAILLES, France (AP)—Police picked through the shreded remains of art-filled rooms at the Palace of Versailles Monday, searching for clues to the bombers who blasted a wing of the historic building in what one official called a "twisted" assault on France's national heritage.

Three underground organizations—two leftist and one Breton separatist—claimed responsibility for the early morning explosion in the Midi Wing of the massive 17th-century palace, the premier monument of France's Golden Age.

But authorities, discounting those claims, said they had no solid leads.

The powerful explosion wrecked three ground-floor "Empire Salon" rooms and damaged a half-dozen others, blasting a 10-by-12-foot hole through the floor of the Gallery of Battles above. One guard was cut on the hand.

The most famous attractions at the palace 11 miles southwest of Paris—the Hall of Mirrors, where the World War I peace treaty was signed, the royal apartments, the opera house and chapel—were not touched. Sixteen paintings and decorative wall panels were badly damaged, along with three plaster busts, a dozen antique chairs, and assorted candelabra, ornate curtains and sculpted woodwork.

U.S., Russia free prisoners in trade

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two Soviet officials facing spy charges in the United States are being released in the custody of the Soviet ambassador in a trade that will temporarily free U.S. businessman Francis J. Crawford from a Moscow prison, U.S. officials said Monday.

The two Russian nationals will still have to stand trial on spy charges and Crawford, held by Soviet authorities for alleged currency violations, will still have to stand trial in Moscow under the tradeoff agreement reached Monday, officials said.

Grad arrested; 72 books found after two years

By Joe Sobczyk

Staff Writer
A former SIU graduate student, Donald McQuarrie of Route 4 in Murphysboro, was arrested by Campus Police on June 20 in Morris Library and charged with failing to return over $1,000 worth of library books, according to University police.

A warrant was issued by Judge Bill Green of the Jackson County Court for McQuarrie's arrest. He is charged with two counts of conspiring to deprive the University of over $150 of materials, the State Attorney's office said.

Police records show that McQuarrie had 72 library books in his possession. The books had been checked out over two years ago. McQuarrie was last registered as a graduate student in Economics. The book list, supplied by University police, indicated the subjects of most of the missing books were literature, music and poetry. Police said the missing books have been returned to the library.

Kenneth Peterson, dean of Morris Library, said the library was unable to get a response from McQuarrie after he had been sent several notices asking the return of the overdue books. The case was brought to the attention of University Legal Counsel Arthur Sussman, Peterson said, who then contacted state attorney Howard Hood.

Sidney Matthews, director of library services, said he did not believe McQuarrie was the first person to be arrested for failure to return overdue books but he did not know how many may have been arrested in the past.

McQuarrie was released on a $2,000 recognizance bond. He is scheduled to be arraigned on July 9 in the Jackson County Courthouse.

Student trustee will have to try harder

Kevin Wright was elected the student representative to the SUU Board of Trustees in April on a pledge of increased accessibility.

It has recently come to light that Wright may not be as accessible this summer as he had hoped to be. He is not enrolled in classes this semester, working on his family's farm in Bridgeport instead.

Wright could do a better job if he lived on campus this semester. He would have been able to get a head start on that accessibility pledge. He could have had at least some contact with the student body and, as a result, be better prepared for board meetings.

But just because Wright won't be on campus this summer doesn't mean he must be unprepared for board meetings. The board agenda is sent out about 10 days in advance of the meeting. He will have to work a little harder, in a shorter time, to be well-prepared, but he should be capable of the increased effort necessary.

Wright is still intelligent and articulate, whether he is attending classes or not. Provided he does put forth the extra effort, he can still be an effective student trustee.

He does have a good excuse for not being enrolled this summer. His parents needed some last-minute help on the family farm, which Wright describes as a "million-dollar operation." If he had known he was going to be gone during the summer, and hadn't mentioned that during the campaign, his campaign would have been deceiving. He didn't know of the summer that awaited him, however, so his absence is excusable.

His accessibility to students will suffer, of course. A mailbox or telephone can't replace one-to-one contact. For the student body's sake, it is hoped he can make up for that come fall.

What does count for the present is that he attends board meetings. Wright does seem a bit naive about the board's role during the summer. He said that since the board always seeks input from students on issues affecting them, nothing that wasn't presented for student reaction in the spring will come up this summer.

He said this is due to the fact that fewer students are enrolled for the summer semester. Nothing new can be brought up because effective student input is impossible with the smaller number of students on campus, according to Wright.

He claimed he will be familiar with all issues affecting students because he was involved in student government in the spring. He should be aware, though, that if the board tries to pass something during the summer just because there aren't many students around, it won't be the first time. Summer should be a time for students to be extra-cautious of board action.

Another consideration is that Wright has never been to a board meeting. He said he has been briefed on board procedure by immediate past student trustee Betsy Byrnes, and has also served on other boards. That is all fine and good, and should give Wright a general idea of how the board will operate.

The fact is, however, that Wright will be going into his first board meeting cold. Having a general idea of how something works, and taking an active role in it, can be two different things. That is another reason it is so important that Wright attend summer board meetings, so he can have sufficient knowledge to assume an active role by fall at the latest.

The July board meeting will be in Chicago and Wright should be making plans to attend. He can still be a good student trustee. His campaign promises are still within reach. If he sees he won't be able to fulfill them, however, he should promptly step down and allow someone else a chance at doing the job right.

With a little extra work by Wright, that won't have to come about.

Ballet appears as the latest 'spectator sport'

By Bob Greear

This makes four times I have tried, and I am giving up. I went to see a performance of the International Dance Festival of Stars, which is a ballet show. Halfway through the dancing, I walked out. I did not feel guilty. I have come to the firm conclusion that ballet offers absolutely nothing to the spectator.

That is probably not a popular thing to say these days. By all indications, ballet is becoming the new baseball. Some claim that it is the fastest-growing spectator activity in the United States. The old stigmas are gone.

A decade ago, when ballet was still playing to small crowds of aficionados, there would be no need for a non-aficionado to comment on it. But now, clearly, the leaders of the ballet world would have the rest of us include ballet on our entertainment menu along with the things we have been enjoying for years. Gone is the attitude that ballet is for the discerning few; even sports columnists are now writing articles saying that perhaps ballet dancers are the truest athletes of all.

Certainly the crowd at the opera house on the night I attended the ballet was an indication of its popularity; men and women were lined up 10 deep at the entrances, and there were even scalpers on the sidewalk. A ballet movie, "The Turning Point," was one of the big hits of the past year.

Well... as I said, I have gone to see the ballet four times now, and this is it. Never again. It may be sweeping the country, but it is not a legitimate art form.

Ballet, from the spectator's point of view, is essentially lifeless. It conveys no emotion, no exuberance, no vitality. For something that is supposed to be built on grace, it appears to be slow and clumsy. Even the major stars—Mikhail Baryshnikov was the big-name dancer on the night I most recently attended—plod. It is a puzzle to me why vast audiences are putting up with something so lacking in showmanship and style.

I have talked with a respected dance critic about this. She assures me that I must have seen the ballet on four bad nights, but I find this to be unlikely. If I were new to, say, reading books, and I read four books at random, and they turned out to be four bad books, I think I would still at least be bitten with the urge to read more. You can read a bad book and still understand that there is magic to the art of writing.

The ballet is different, though. To sit through an evening's performance is to be filled with dread that you might ever have to go again; it is deadly. The minutes drag. Perhaps one must be trained to appreciate ballet; if that is true, it is a real problem, because other forms of art or entertainment—literature, music, plays—require no prior study. A moving piece of music is moving, period. One does not have to be trained in what to listen for to understand its beauty. That is why it is art, and ballet isn't.

Some observers say that it is encouraging, the way folks all over the country are flocking to the ballet.

I disagree. I do not think it is encouraging that Americans will pack a ballet hall. I think it is to be expected. The people in the audience are following a fad, with very little care for what they are sitting through. Ballet is the most preening and self-congratulatory entertainment form I have ever seen; it seems that they dance for 12 minutes and then accept ovations and encores for eight minutes. Some say that it is good to see an audience kvetching such tributes upon the ballet, but I think it is probably mostly knee-jerk and without understanding. Of all the people I heard talking during the intermission of the International Dance Festival of Stars, the only one who talked with any real sense of conviction was a woman who said, "I don't understand the ballet. I just like to look at Baryshnikov's body."

It must be fairly exhilarating to be a ballet dancer; as a participatory exercise, I am sure it is gratifying. One of my four evenings at the ballet was spent backstage with the Joffrey company, and I sensed among the dancers a real feeling of joy in what they were doing. I can understand this: the joy, and the energy, that must come to one who is actually doing the dance.

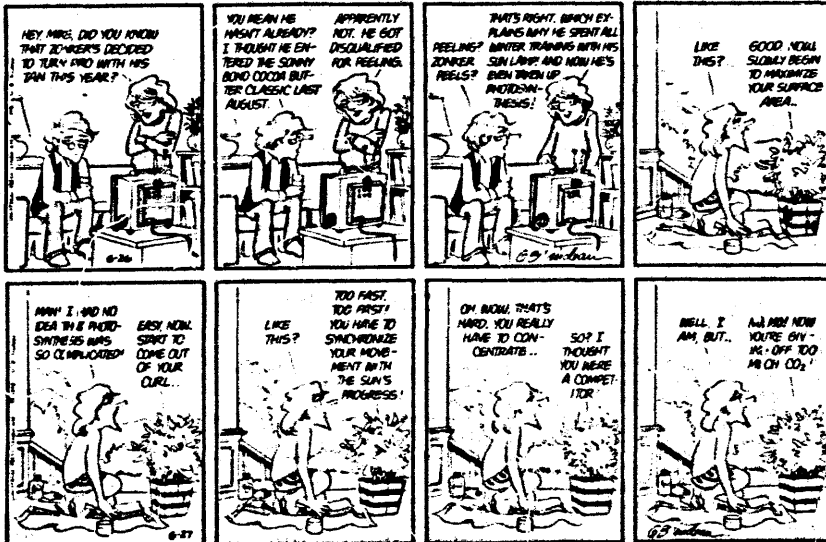

Unfortunately, it is precisely this feeling of joy and energy and exhilaration that is missing in ballet from a spectator's point of view. Even the most lively pieces seem to come off as little more than watching traffic. The only logical conclusion is that ballet really shouldn't be considered a spectator activity.

Maybe you have never been to the ballet. You are lucky. If someone offers you tickets, refuse. Ballet, having come out of that closet, ought to go back in.

Hospitals use trust funds as insurance

CHICAGO (AP)—Some 500 hospitals nationwide, finding they have to pay more in malpractice insurance premiums than their policies are worth, are turning to a new type of insurance.

Barnes Hospital in St. Louis, for example, found it would have to pay $3 million for $5 million in malpractice insurance coverage. Instead of footing the premium bill, the hospital set up a trust fund in which it invests some $2.2 million a year.

In effect, the hospital insures itself by paying all malpractice claims from the trust fund, managed by a bank.

The American Hospital Association, based here, estimates that 500 hospitals nationwide are following suit. Some experts say that all of the nation's 7,100 hospitals will insure themselves within a few years.

"We really didn't want to be in the insurance business, but we had little choice," said Richard Zieler, assistant administrator of Community Memorial Hospital in LaGrange. The hospital's insurance bill rose from $47,000 in 1974 to $700,000 in 1976, he said.

Under a concept pioneered by Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Company of Chicago, the hospitals can either set up bank-managed trust funds or start their own insurance companies.

Community Memorial Hospital, for example, set up a trust fund into which it pays $35,000 a year, more than the total of its "few minor claims" annually, Zieler said.

"We figure we're saving our patients $4 a year over the cost of an insurance policy," he said.

The movement to self-insure got a boost early this year when Medicare began giving the same reimbursement to hospitals that put insurance money into trusts as to those that buy commercial insurance policies.

"People in cities generally are more likely to sue, and the rural hospitals don't see why they should share that risk," the executive said.

"This is a rapidly growing business," said Henry Tucker, a trust officer for Continental Bank.

"Hospitals are finding that the trusts are providing some benefits that they didn't originally expect."

One of those benefits can be more careful management by hospitals and more courtesy in patient relations—to try to avert malpractice suits at the source.

"If they treat people more pleasantly, they eliminate the source of irritation that makes people seek out lawyers in the first place," said Norman A. Jacobs, vice president for First National Bank of Chicago's hospital trust program

'Circus' entertains taxpayers

By Bob Springer
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Bearing down for a final four days of work before a midnight Friday deadline for action, the Illinois General Assembly will spend billions of your dollars this week in atmosphere described by some lawmakers as everything from a circus to a pre-school.

News Analysis

And one suggested that taxpayers "just want us to go home and save them some money."

Hundreds of measures await the Legislature's action by midnight Friday, the end of this fiscal year. Included is a pending $1.2 billion budget to pay the state's bills, employees' July paychecks and millions of dollars in unemployment and welfare benefits.

"You would be absolutely correct to report that the legislative process...is a circus," said one lawmaker.

Another confided: "There are too many of us. That's why it looks like a pre-school at recess." Pre-school, indeed.

The average Illinois citizen who has never seen the Legislature at work probably carries in his head an image drawn from civics textbooks when thinking about lawmakers and what they do.

"It doesn't make much difference if someone is awake or asleep," said Sen. John L. Kruppel, D-Virginia, after he complained last week about a news photographer catching him napping at his desk. "We don't accomplish much here anyway."

"We didn't pass a single bill just now," said Sen. John A. Graham, R-Barrington, a 20-year Senate veteran, after the Senate went down a long list of measures and defeated each one in turn.

But Illinois' Constitution requires the Legislature to meet—and spend taxpayers' money. The way it does that is something else again.

For example, last week it was announced that the proposed Equal Rights Amendment would not be voted on that day. Lawmakers cleared out like school children given a holiday. But other legislation continued to roll along, and lights continued to appear on the big electronic voting board as though the chamber was nearly filled.

Republicans smelled a rat and complained that bills were passing with at least 30 favorable votes and it didn't seem like there were even 30 lawmakers on the floor. An embarrassed Rep. Michael J. Madigan, D-Chicago, House majority leader, rose to explain to upset GOP members just why that was.

"It seems some of the members have fashioned a way to attach paper clips to their voting buttons," he said, so that they would be recorded as voting one way or the other on every measure.

When chaos on the House floor gets to be too much, Rep. Roscoe D. Cunningham, R-Lawrenceville, has a special way to cope. Instead of seeking attention by calling "Mr. Speaker, Mr. Speaker,"—as is normal, he repeatedly shouts: "Mr. Ringmaster, Mr. Ringmaster..."

Neil Simon play opens

By Marcia Heroux
Entertainment Editor

Almost synonymous with successful comedy is the name of Neil Simon. After Broadway successes such as "The Odd Couple," Simon's movie "The Goodbye Girl" won Academy awards last spring. He now has two more movies on the circuit: "The Cheap Detective" and "Chapter Two."

"Come Blow Your Horn," the first play Simon wrote, is being presented by SIU's Summer Theater at 8 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday in the University Theater, Communications Bldg.

Director of the comedy, John Cannon, said "Come Blow Your Horn" was "totally entertainment."

The story is of a Manhattan playboy who shows his younger brother the ropes of big-city life and receives a few lessons in return. Cannon said although "Come Blow Your Horn" is lighter than his recent comedies Simon has been writing more realistic comedies.

One of these comedies is "The Gingerbread Lady," a comedy about an alcoholic.

"Chapter Two" is also in a serious vein. "Simon's wife died of cancer. After she died, he married Marsha Mason (star of "The Goodbye Girl"). It's all about the courtship of her and his guilt about his wife dying of cancer."

Though "The Goodbye Girl" is a romantic comedy, Marsha Mason played a woman stuck in New York City with a precocious 13-year-old daughter, an apartment she couldn't pay for, and a dancing job she couldn't get.

"Come Blow Your Horn" is also a romantic comedy but one that "is not to be thought about too much," Cannon said.

"It's doors opening and closing, people popping in and out."

"The actors are simpler characters," Cannon said. "But it's not easy. You look for someone to be quick and lively. It requires a certain ability. You have to coax it, and create it as a unity."

Cannon kept stressing the word "light." "It's like a soufflé, if it starts to sag, you're in trouble."

Actually the cast just got out of trouble. One of the cast members, Cheryl Poland, had to be hospitalized and Cannon has been holding his breath with the show opening only a week away. Poland is now back on the stage, however.

Alan Baker, the playboy in the show, is played by Steve Kosinski. John Seibert plays his younger brother, Buddy.

The set is being designed by Darwin Reid Payne, associate professor and department chairman.

Tickets are available for $4 for the public and $2 for students at the University Theater Box Office.

Steven Kosinski plays "Alan," a playboy.

Night animals topic of show

When references are made to the "strange creatures of the night," it's usually not with the Carbondale bar crowd in mind.

The National Geographic Special "Strange Creatures of the Night" presents bats, owls, hyenas and sightless cave-dwelling salamanders in a film made in part with sophisticated night-vision camera devices. The program will be broadcast at 7 p.m. Tuesday on Channels 8 and 18.

The film explores the behavior and environments of nocturnal animals, and illustrates the various ways in which they are adapted for life in the dark.

"Strange Creatures of the Night" received high public acclaim when it aired on commercial television. It was awarded the Atlanta Film Festival's Special Jury Gold Medal as well as a Chris Statuette from the Columbus Film Festival.

Lack of riders may kill women's transit service

By Nita Tassner
Student Writer

Women's Transit Authority ridership is down. The service may be unless more women use it, says Marie Kingsbury, WTA director.

The WTA is bus service for women. It functions to provide safe night time transportation for women who must travel alone or in pairs.

Operated by the Women's Center of Carbondale, the WTA is for the benefit of all women in the Carbondale area, not just for SIU students.

"To justify the expense of WTA we need to transport at least 15 women a night. Since warm weather fewer women have been riding with us. We average seven a night," Kingsbury said. "If more women don't start using WTA, it might die."

Women are encouraged to use WTA every night, Kingsbury said. Women who walk regularly are the most vulnerable to attack. According to the Women's Center Rape Action Committee a go-out team to assist rape victims; about two-thirds of sexual assaults occur while women are walking on city streets or entering their own home.

WTA evolved as the result of a need expressed by many women at two public forums on rape held in the fall of 1977.

Taxis are too expensive for many women and hitchhiking is too dangerous, said Kingsbury. WTA is an alternative.

The service became available to women on March 15, 1978. It operates five hours a night, seven nights a week. A regular route with ten designated stops is followed. Drivers are urged to offer any women seen walking a ride.

WTA will deviate from the route to assure that women get home safely. The route is mainly for pick-up. WTA travels outside the city limits but rides are limited to Carbondale and surrounding area.

WTA leases a van driven by two part-time employees. Women using the service are asked to make a 25 cent donation to help cover expenses, said Kingsbury.

Funds for operation of WTA come from SIU and the City of Carbondale on a matching basis.

Route schedules are available at the Women's Center.

Dollar hits new low in Japan

TOKYO (AP) The American dollar, which hit a record low Monday and has declined 25 percent in value against the Japanese yen in less than 10 months, is not worth enough to buy a glass of beer in Tokyo's fashionable Ginza shopping district. It won't even buy a cup of coffee, or a cheap souvenir.

The fall of the dollar and other foreign currencies in relation to the strong yen, however, has not helped Japanese consumers buy imported goods at lower prices, largely because distributors want to keep the prices high.

One importer of U.S. manufactured cosmetics has said he would like to bring down the price of his goods but his Japanese distributors will not let him.

"Our distributors fight any attempt at price erosion because they want to give large kickbacks to their retailers," said the American importer, who asked not to be named.

Kickbacks to retailers are traditional, and legal, in Japan. Consumer groups occasionally have protested that kickbacks make it unattractive for retailers to push lower priced items.

The dollar hit record lows on the Tokyo foreign exchange market

Monday, dropping to 204 50 yen and closing at 206 25. Traders and economists blame the slide on Japan's huge trade surpluses, burgeoning U.S. trade deficits and American inflation. Another factor is the expectation that the dollar surplus in Tokyo will increase toward the end of the month.

The higher value of the yen makes Japanese goods more expensive in the United States and other foreign markets, but as yet there has been no sign of a reduction in Japan's trade surplus.

Horticulture day shows hybrid plants

The first Southern Illinois showing of the 12 All-American plant selections for 1979 will be a major feature of the Plant and Soil Science Department's 10th annual Horticulture Field Day on July 9.

Earlier this year, the SIU Horticulture Station was named an All-American Display Garden, and was allowed to display award-winning hybrid flower and vegetable varieties prior to public sale. The 12 All-American Award winners for 1979 consist of two varieties of squash, zinnias and peppers. Also developed were new varieties of cucumbers, kohlrabi, snap peas, pansies, nicotiana, and marigolds. These new varieties will be available for public purchase in October 1978. The open house will also include tours of turfgrass research plots, vegetable gardens and displays of All-American selections from previous years. This year's open house will begin at 1 p.m. and will last until 7:30 at the horticulture station, located one mile west of Carbondale on Chautauque Road.

Rehab experts to discuss new SIU program

Experts in the field of rehabilitation will discuss and give their opinions on the proposed curriculum of SIU's new masters' degree program on job development and placement in a two-day workshop.

The SIU Rehabilitation Institute will sponsor the National Workshop in Job Development on July 13 and 14 at the O'Hare Travel Lodge in Chicago.

The purpose of the workshop is to have national input from known experts in the field on the new program which will start this fall, said A. Andrew McDowd Sr., workshop coordinator and assistant professor in the Rehabilitation Institute.

The featured guest will be Hal Shay, director of the Division of Manpower Development, Office of Human Development, Rehabilitation Services Administration, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, McDonald said.

The 17 participants come from Kansas, Iowa, Washington D.C., Michigan, New York, Oregon, and Minnesota. They all have experience in the fields of counseling, rehabilitation and job placement.

Schleper wins IM tennis title

Roger Schleper came from behind to defeat James Budd 5-7, 6-1, 6-3 for the intramural men's tennis tournament advanced division singles title.

The senior in math from Alton tallied five wins in the tournament, including his final victory last Friday. "Thank God it wasn't as hot during the match as it has been the past few days or I never would have made it," said Schleper.

"Although you can't tell it by the score, the final match was very long," he said. "All the games were also very close. The difference was some key points I won in the third set."

Schleper said that his game consists mainly of trying to stay on the baseline and trying to keep the ball in play. "I try to make the other guy earn the point rather than forcing it myself. Luckily I didn't make any stupid errors."

On the whole Schleper rated the competition in the tournament as pretty good, especially after he got past the first couple of rounds.

In the novice division final of the men's tournament, Pete Welle beat Vito Giuseffi 6-1, 6-3 finale Thursday to take the crown. Welle, a junior from Collinsville, defeated four opponents en route to his championship.

Susan Eickhoff beat Kathy Boyd in the women's intramural singles tournament final Thursday. Eickhoff took the final 5-0, 6-0.

TENNIS NOTES

Sahki women's tennis coach Judy Auld and her partner Barbara Ames won the women's doubles division of the Member-Guest Tennis Tournament held June 17-18 at the Wimbledon Racquet Club in Memphis, Tenn. Winning the tournament for the second consecutive year, Auld and Ames took the final 7-4, 6-1.

Indians claim Paul Reuschel

CHICAGO (AP)—The Chicago Cubs announced Monday that the Cleveland Indians have claimed veteran right-hand pitcher Paul Reuschel on waivers.

Reuschel, a 6-foot-4, 210-pound righthander, appeared in 16 games for the Cubs, compiling a 2-0 record and a 5.14 earned run average. He allowed 29 hits in 201-3 innings, while striking 13 and issuing 13 walks.

Reuschel, 31, had been with the Chicago organization since he was signed by the Cubs in 1968. He is the older brother of the ace of the Cubs' pitching staff, Rick Reuschel.

Rick, who has been plagued by arm problems, lasted only two innings in the Cubs' 4-2 loss to the Philadelphia Phillies Sunday. The Cubs are now in second place as the Phils have built a two-game lead following a four-game sweep.

Japan v-ball team to play at Arena

SIU has been selected as one of three state sites to host a volleyball exhibition between the United States national team and the Japanese Olympic gold medal winning team.

The exhibition, sponsored nationally by the United States Volleyball Association (USVBA), will be held Oct. 15 at the Arena. The match-up will pit an American team dominated largely by former West Coast collegians against a Japanese squad that defeated the Russian team in the 1976 Olympics at Montreal to capture the gold medal.

The Carbondale appearance is one of 30 stops the two national women's teams will make across the country (including Alaska and Hawaii) in October. Debbie Hunter, Sahki women's basketball coach, was elated over SIU being chosen as a host site.

"It's especially fitting that the USVBA opted to hold one of the exhibitions in Carbondale, Illinois is one of the top women's collegiate volleyball states in the nation," Hunter said.

Our volleyball program at SIU is growing by leaps and bounds—and the exhibition should generate even more local interest," she added.

"Certainly area sports fans will have a golden opportunity to see women's volleyball play at its finest and witness firsthand why the sport has such great potential for spectator appeal."
