Job market still needs graduates

By Melvin Berry
Student Writer

Despite increasing unemployment, the demand for college graduates is up, says Harvey S. Ideus, director of the Career Planning and Placement Center.

"Students are experiencing a very good year for employment," Ideus said in an interview.

Ideus said there is a 90 percent placement rate for some majors. The higher placement rates tend to be in the technical fields such as engineering, accounting, special education and computer science, he said.

Ideus said that technical majors also lead to starting salaries of about $20,000 per year. But job opportunities are not limited to technical fields, he said.

Students should be aware of what recruiters are looking for, said Ideus, who encourages students to register with the Career Planning and Placement Center.

For May seem to confirm Koch's predictions. The unemployment rate in Illinois rose to 7.3 percent and the national figure jumped to 7 percent.

Reports that the national rate rose from 7 percent in April to 7.8 percent in May are based on seasonally adjusted figures, Koch said. These rates take into account seasonal factors, such as agriculture and the release of students into the job market.

The seasonally adjusted rates for Illinois were 7.4 percent in April and 7.8 percent in May. Seasonally adjusted rates for Jackson County are not available.

Koch said Jackson County unemployment rates are based on the number of unem­ployment claims filed. National and state rates are generally based on telephone surveys, making those figures available sooner than local rate com­puted on actual unemployment claims.

The May unemployment rate for Jackson County should be available by early July, Koch said.

In the county, 58 percent of those who claimed unemploy­ment were males and 42 percent were females according to figures compiled by Koch. Seventeen percent of the applicants represented minorities.

Almost half of those claiming unemployment were under age 22. Forty-six percent were under age 22, 49 percent were in the 22- to 44-year-old age bracket, and 3 percent were 45 or older.

Unlike the rest of the nation, where job losses in con­struction-related areas con­tributed to a significant per­centage of the increase in the unemployment rate, con­struction in Jackson County was one area that saw an increase in jobs.

In the county, white collar and service jobs are the most readily available jobs for the unemployed, according to Bill Duggan, manager of Mur­physboro Job Service.

"The economy in Southern Illinois has changed," Duggan said. "White collar and service occupations have probably doubled in the last 10 years."

"I'd advise people to look into jobs that are non-traditional for their age and sex," Duggan said.
New chairman to take over microbiology

(Continued from Page 1) said Monday that he does not expect to be at the Carbondale until mid to late July. Lev is finishing research, Doorenbus said.

Interviewed by phone Monday in New York, Lev said that he decided to come to SIU-C because it offered him an excellent opportunity to concentrate in the field of microbiology. Lev said that a medical school like Einstein microbiology does not receive a major emphasis.

Lev, who is married and has two daughters, said that his major goal will be to inspire SIU-C students to go into the field of microbiology as a career.

According to Doorenbus, it was Lev's impressive teaching credentials and his concern for students that won him the job. "As part of the selection process," Doorenbus said, "I interviewed three faculty members at Einstein who worked with Lev. Naturally, these were not people cited by Lev as recommendations. Each one of them said, 'We're losing our best teacher.' As someone who has been involved in several personnel searches, believe me, that is striking.

"We got our first choice," Doorenbus continued. "In fact, our big concern was whether we could get him to come here.' Lev said that he intends to continue his personal research program, but that as chairman looking after the microbiology department will be his first priority.

Soviets withdraw one troop division

MOSCOW (AP) — A Radio Moscow report Monday said one Soviet troop division and 108 tanks were being withdrawn from Afghanistan, and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev indicated the Kremlin had no immediate plans to remove the rest.

At a news conference following the wind up of a two-day economic in Venice, Italy, President Carter responded by saying "a partial withdrawal of Soviet forces, of carefully selected units, would have very little significance" and that Western opposition to the Soviet intervention was "a moral and strategic imperative."

Vietnamese forces shell Thai border

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (AP) — Vietnamese troops backed by artillery and tanks struck inside this pro-Western nation Monday in an apparent effort to punish Thailand for allowing guerillas opposed to the Vietnamese-backed government in Cambodia to operate along the Thai-Cambodian border.

Thai military sources said 120 Thai soldiers were killed or wounded and an estimated 100,000 Cambodian refugees were sent fleeing from their camps.

Pryor undergoes upper body surgery

SHERMAN OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Comedian Richard Pryor underwent surgery on Monday to graft healthy skin over the critically burned upper half of his body, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Dr. Richard Greenman, executive director of the Sherman Oaks Community Hospital Burn Center, conducted the operation along with a pulmonary specialist, Dr. Albert Young. Young was on hand to help clear fluid from the comedian's pneumonia-clogged lungs.

Ghandi's son killed in plane accident

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The death of Sanjay Gandhi, son of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, in a plane crash Monday plunged India into political uncertainty.

Gandhi, 33, the controversial heir to his mother's political power, was killed when a Sudanese plane, a flying instructor, after their two-seat, high performance plane went into a spin and hit some trees near Gandhi's home minutes after takeoff.

Senior politicians had come to accept the likelihood that Sanjay would succeed his mother and a period of stable but tough central government was ahead. With Sanjay gone, analysis predicted a swift return to factionalism and jockeying for influence.

IAC made appropriate decision

When the Intercollegiate Athletics Committee recently recommended that no more funds be allocated to the Saluki Flying Team, they did so not only appropriately, but also responsibly. The IAC is to be commended for the response they gave to this pointed expenditure of questionable nature. To be sure, the committee will not win friends among those who support the team; that is, not, however, the IAC’s concern.

According to the operating papers of the IAC, their responsibility is to “Advise and recommend to the Vice President for University Relations on substantive policies and programs; advise and recommend on intercollegiate sports in which the University participates; review and make recommendations regarding athletics budgets, ticket prices, and such other fiscal matters; and concern itself with such matters as may be appropriate in the development of all intercollegiate athletics programs.”

That is why it becomes extremely difficult to accept the coach of the Flying Salukis’ response of surprise to the IAC’s action to remove his group from the intercollegiate athletics budget. Without equivocation, Mr. Young’s group of competitors is not only outstanding, but also is highly lauded for its achievements on behalf of the University. However, the Team’s fine accomplishments do not make it an NCAA intercollegiate sport and the NCAA and AIWA sponsor the only sports programs for which the IAC is responsible.

Unfortunately, in his letter of June 20, Mr. Young, who seems to go out of his way to present the “facts,” somehow forgets to mention some minor details. He not only is the coach of the Flying Salukis, he is also an employee of Area Services. Area Services reports directly to the Vice President for University Relations. It was the Office of University Relations which made the arbitrary allocation for the Saluki Flying Team.

Regardless of the outcome, Mr. Haims is to be congratulated on his recommendation to the Vice President for University Relations, and Mr. Young’s group will not go out of his way to accept the NCAA’s concern.

Benefits to servicemen must be increased

WASHINGTON—As every working editor knows, “crisis” is one of those garish words, to be used with great restraint in general, but also occasionally in the interest of society. Our armed forces, on whom the very survival of this nation depends, are caught in a crisis. Congress must not fail to resolve it.

The problem can be summed up in two words that are locked together—money. Federal employees are losing their most valuable people for one reason that towers above all others: They are sick, they have no business to stay in. They are quitting at a rate that cannot be termed a drain or a slippage, but a massive exodus.

By any yardstick that might be applied, the situation is indefensible.

What do we ask of a sailor or a soldier? Only this: That he serve for a fixed term of two or three years, during which time he is called to his full duty, job, join a union, go on strike or picket in support of oo-the-job complaints, only that he be separated from his family for months or years. On only that he be on call far beyond the 40 hour week of civilian life. Only that he accept the responsibility for maintaining submarines and weapon systems. Only that, finally, he may give up his life for his country.

And what is his compensation? The entering recruit would be financially better off if he went to work slinging hash in a fast food restaurant. The experienced petty officer in the Navy would be better off if he abandoned his career and took his skills into the private sector. The Air Force captain, whose training represents a $4,000,000 investment, can command half again as much income by flying a commercial airliner.

Some specific recent examples: After eight years in the Navy, an electronics technician (GS-9), was earning $11,750. A senior civilian with 14 years experience, who may earn $11,750 as a petty officer in the Navy; in private industry, he could earn $14,000. A George Armstrong Custer trained to operate a nuclear reactor earned $7,800 last year; a former shipmate, working for a California nuclear power company, $14,000.

Other reasons, of course, contribute to the appalling state of affairs. A bill recently passed by Congress, which makes the Navy, men often be separated from their families for long tours of duty at sea. Officers and non-coms weary of teaching ill-educated recruits who can read, write, and rarely, if ever, reach a fifth-grade level. Under today’s circumstances, it is hard for a man to maintain the old tight ship order that once bound men together in a fraternity of arms.

But the primary cause for this crucial remnant: Money. It is basic, it is a question of morale. It is so miserably that several hundred thousand service families have been forced to separate.

The disparities in income and fringe benefits are not confined to comparisons of public and private employment. A move to a new area, often miles to a new assignment, gets a $900 reimbursement. A sailor has no such allowances. A new assignment, making the identical move, qualifies for a reimbursement up to $12,300.

This is the Senate Veterans Committee will hold hearings on a bill sponsored by Sen. Bill Armstrong of Colorado to restore one incentive that used to mean much to G.I. educational benefits. Armstrong also is fighting for a truly significant increase in base pay across the board. Other senators recognize the desperate need. Sam Nunn of Georgia and John Warner of Virginia have co-sponsored a bill to make retroactive increases in the compensation of all personnel with particular skills. Every one of these measures should be passed.

Yes, the bills would cost several billion dollars over the next few years. It is money we cannot afford not to spend. All the more reason to vote for these bills. The money would go to provide new ships and high-powered tanks will avail us nothing without the manpower to maintain them. So long as we adhere to the policy of subservient soldiers, we will never command the respect and attract and hold desirable personnel but adequate pay and benefits. If this is the price of reasonable demand, but one recourse will remain: The draft.

R-T teacher’s attitude shocking

In a recent newspaper article on the departure of John Kurtz from the Radio-TV Department, Mr. Kurtz described himself as a "petty radio announcer" whose "career," was "putting out base with respect to the IAC—the Flying Salukis have no business receiving student fees which were specifically levied and allocated by the Board of Trustees for NCAA-sponsored programs and activities, and AIWA activities designated by the Women’s Intercollegiate Athletics Department.

It is to the best interest of the University to expeditiously resolve this matter. The IAC’s action is consistent with the special appropriation which presents even the slightest consideration of questionable fundings for athletics. Its operating papers dictate such.—Lloyd M. Haims, Alumna, Carbondale.

Editor’s note: Mr. Haims is a former member of the IAC.

‘Bronco Billy’ just plain fun; western offers ticket to past

A Film Review

By Ken Mac Garrigle
News Editor

The West is the best.
But the old West is dead and all that is left is the Hollywood’s idea of a time and place that probably never was. Honky tonks, barroom fights, cowboys and Indians, freedom and wide open spaces. When we sometimes long for these days, or what we’d like to believe were these days, we go to the Western to vicariously relive them.

The Western, then, is our ticket to the past.

In “Bronco Billy,” Clint Eastwood’s latest film, we get a look at ourselves and our fascination with the West. Clint Eastwood is Bronco Billy McCoy, who owns, operates and is star performer in a small time wild west show that travels through the Western states.

Eastwood, who plays a modern-day cowboy, gives a sterling performance as a man who’s out to prove that in America you can be anyone you want to be—if you really want it.

But something is wrong here. Bronco and his troupe of assistants try to rob a train, but it speeds off without them. Billy foils a bank robbery, so he uses the opportunity to plug his wild west show.

The characters in the Bronco Billy Wild West show are ex-convicts and the show represents their last chance. It offers them an escape from their past by allowing them to escape into the past of the wild west.

On a basic level, “Bronco Billy” is just plain fun. Warm humor is found here, not the insult-for-insult TV sitcom variety. Compassionate characters speak believable lines that fit their parts. At

U.S. men seek British wives

MIAMI (AP) - Twelve Miami men, apparently convinced that American women are too "demanding," have hired a London marriage bureau to find them British wives.

The men — who live in a city where single women outnumber bachelors by an estimated 3-1 — include an attorney, a company director, an accountant, an air traffic controller, an engineer and an Air Force officer.

"American men prefer Englishwomen because they are easier to get along with. They are less demanding than American women, and they don't have such liberated ideas," says Rita Barker, head of The Ivy Gibson Bureau in London, one of the world's largest marriage bureaus.

The men, who plunked down $200 for one year of matchmaking services, don't want their identities revealed. "They want to remain anonymous because they just don't want their names flashed around Miami," said Barker, who stopped in town recently to chat with the eager dozen.

Barker said English-women are no less avid in their desire to marry American men than American bachelors are to marry English-women.

"With older people," she said, "there are happy memories of the good relationships we had with Americans during World War II. And younger women think American gentlemen have this romantic aura."

Barker said that for their $200, the Miami bachelors "can have as many introductions to prospective partners during the year as they wish."

Kennedy backers seek first platform victory

WASHINGTON (AP) — Backers of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, seeking their first big victory in the Democratic Party's platform, are fighting to retain an anti-nuclear plank that won an unexpected approval on a preliminary vote.

In the first repudiation of one of President Carter's major policies, a platform committee task force voted 17-11 Sunday night to recommend a phaseout of nuclear power and a moratorium on licensing of new nuclear power plants. A second task force also made a similar recommendation. The White House has held on the platform proceedings by adopting a pro-abortion plank containing stronger language than the administration initially wanted.

Despite Kennedy's hopes of winning on these issues, the full committee continued to hand the Carter campaign a victory after victory today as it went through a section of the platform the administration and taxes.

The proposal rejected, 94 to 43, a Kennedy-backed proposal intended to keep Carter's proposed Energy Mobilization Board intact in the final stages of congressional approval, from being able to waive state environmental laws.

The committee also turned down, 90 to 44, a Kennedy proposal to repeal $5.5 million in various oil company tax advantages.

One Kennedy plank that Carter supporters willingly accepted called for curbs on "tax deductions like those for three-martini lunches, conventions, first-class travel and other expense-account deductions." Carter has long made elimination of such tax deductions one of his main tax-reform themes.

Carter aides expressed confidence that they could defeat the anti-nuclear proposal when it came before the full 15-member committee either Monday or Tuesday.

However, administration officials said Sunday night the governors had not yet decided how to respond to the highly charged tuition issue.

Sandra Locke, Eastwood's "Barroom in July," steals the show. Scatman Crothers is equally fine as the wild west show's ringmaster.

Clint Eastwood has been cast as a Western leading man type from a do-no-wrong, tall-in-the-saddle cowboy to more of an anti-hero drifter—the man with no name.

Today, Eastwood still makes Westerns. But again he's going against the Western grain. Eastwood shows movie viewers the charm and emotion of people that still exist in this modern day world—you and me.

"Bronco Billy" is a warm, funny, friendly movie. They do make 'em like they used to.

One line has always stuck from Clint Eastwood's films, a remark that seems to sum up Eastwood's 1-life-my-life-the-way-I-want-to-philosophy. The situation arises when Eastwood, as Dirty Harry in "Magnum Force," is being harassed by a fellow cop for some stunt he pulled.

"You always have to do things YOUR way," the cop complains.

"Do things other people's way and you take your life into your hands," Eastwood sneers.

If I can get the rest of the way, maybe I’ll add 10 more,” he said optimistically of traveling from New Jersey, said people and bicyclists, over the age of 55, in a cross section of the American nation. Several hopes to complete his trip to see America’s longest recreational trail in the country.

The group has been averaging 50 miles a day on this trip, but Hoffer has traveled 1,190 miles in one day on a trip in Michigan. Hoffer said he knows his limitations and paces himself accordingly. He generally embarks on the day’s journey about an hour before his comrades in order to arrive at about the same time they do, but he doesn’t cut any corners with his gear.

Hoffer is carrying 40 to 45 pounds in packs on his bike. Tom Landers, a 23-year-old millworker, says the group has been on a trip in Michigan, and through the Appalachian Mountains. And his traveling companion says he’s keeping up with them like a trooper. “When we get to a campground at night, we’re all bashed. But Hermon is walking around like a spring chicken,” said Steve Souter, the 35-year-old “old man” of the group.

Hoffer said that may be because the young people are over-ambitious sometimes and don’t pace themselves. “I don’t get any more tired than the young people. I think they try too hard,” Hoffer said.

Bikecentennial group pedals 4,250-mile route in 90 days

By Colleen Moore

Staff Writer

One of several cross-country bicyclists who left the East Coast to the West saw Carbondale last week as part of their scenic route.

The 4,250-mile route, sponsored by Bikecentennial, a nonprofit organization, is the longest recreational trail in the world.

The group began at Williamsburg, Va., and plans to make Astoria, Ore., their final destination. Several groups also began from the West and are traveling to the East Coast.

The idea of the trip is to see rural America before it changes too much, said Frank Bruno, one of the bicyclists. “You get the feeling of a pioneering movement.”

Bruno, a 24-year-old millwright from New Jersey, said he is taking the trip to see a cross section of the American people and the nation.

He said the group met two bicyclists, over the age of 55, in western Virginia who had traveled there from San Diego in 31 days.

The 12-member group, ranging from ages 19 to 35, hopes to complete the $1,100 trip, which covers meals and lodging, in 90 days.

The group averages 60 to 65 miles per day on the road, Bruno said. As areas become flatter, they increase in mileage.

He said 30 to 50 pounds of gear are carried by each bike. One bicyclist even brought a faucet extension as a substitute for a kitchen sink.

Good spokes and wheels are the most important parts of a bike, said Bruno, whose bike is custom-made.

The prices of their bikes range from $300 to $1,200 and from a five-speed to an 18-speed bike.

All night, the group usually stays at a camping site and leaves the next day about 6 a.m.

Bruno said they usually average one rest day for every 100 miles biking.

Their longest stopover so far has been four days in Carbondale due to bike repairs and a rest day.

Former Saluki wide receiver Kevin House isn’t running out to buy a fancy new car, an expensive wardrobe, or a full-length mink for his wife—but he could.

House became a wealthy man the day he signed a series of five one-year contracts with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, which could total $800,000 with incentive clauses.

House could, however, the money wasn’t going to change his lifestyle.

"Sure, I suppose there are somethings I’ll have to purchase, like a new home for my family, but I can’t see myself going overboard. I’ll be letting most of the money sit in the bank, gaining interest and working for me," House said.

House, who rewrote virtually every SIU receiving record, said he was pleased with the terms of his contract and bonus.

"The bonus is a six-figure one and it will be paid to me over eight years," he said. "The contract has a base of $85,000 for five years plus added money if he achieves certain standards. Such as Rookie-of-the-Year, where I place on the receiving list, something like that will add to the $500,000."

"The salary is excellent for the first round and probably a lot better than some of the first rounders,” House said. "I’m excited about the fact the Bucs thought enough of me to offer all the money they did. It will add to my motivation knowing the expecst good things from me."

The University City, Missouri, native said his family was relieved to hear the news, but his father was the most excited.

The elder House was a familiar sight at Saluki football and baseball games wearing his football jersey with R. House and No. 29 (Kevin’s number at SIU) sewn on the back.

"My dad probably had more SIU shirts and jackets than anyone," House said. "Now he may be the only person in Missouri with an all orange outfit."

Tampa Bay’s team color is orange. "He already has a hat and I’m sure I’ll be sending my dad everything else.

The Buccaneers open their training camp July 26, but House will arrive July 7 to get a head start in training and to look for a home for his wife and 17-month old son, Kevin Jr.

"House said, "He is a very nice guy and he told me that he’s planning on getting a home in Florida looking for a home now so he should have no problem finding the right place.

"Things with finding a place to live will be easy," House said. "Footloose things should go smoothly too."

"I’ll be talking about me gaining a little weight which I’ll do down there. I haven’t been concentrating on gaining weight now, just strength," House said.

"I’m stronger than I was before. You have to be. They hit you harder in the pros.

"I’m not worried about the difference in playing levels from college to professional football," he said. "A lot of the players in the big leagues have more experience, that’s all, and no experience will come with time."

House, who was also drafted by the Chicago White Sox baseball team, said he has no intention of seeking out a career in baseball.

"My heart is set on football right now, although it might not be long before I’m drafted in the 19th round."

House added that he is looking forward to his new career. "I’m really looking forward to being a football player. It’s a dream so many people never see come true. In that respect I’m a lucky person," he said. "All the talk I do on money doesn’t interest me, speed in 40-yards is all behind me. All I have to worry about now, for a while, is catching and returning a football."

Mauri replaced Hank Tauber as Alpine team director in the Spring of 1979.

"I think the problems came to the surface when Coach Mauri called a meeting of the men’s and team’s support groups," House said. "We were pleased, that nobody had tried to save money," he said. "I think the Hahnenkamm downhill run at Kitzbuehel, Austria, last January was a turning point in the program."

"What he doesn’t understand is that at Kitzbuehel, you put your life on the line everytime you run the downhill. If you don’t try, you don’t get down the mountain," Mauri said.

"It’s a dream so many people never see come true. In that respect I’m a lucky person," Mauri said. "He pushes you to do your best, that’s demoralizing, and the young kids nowadays won’t take that."
