F-Senate plans bargaining survey

By Laura Coleman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Faculty Senate agreed Tuesday to survey all SIU faculty members on the issue of collective bargaining, but stipulated that some type of information providing activity must precede the survey.

Determination of how the faculty will be educated on the issue was referred to the committee, as was the actual wording of the survey questions.

The senate's action came after receiving a two-part proposal from the Faculty Status and Welfare Committee. The first part of the proposal suggested a symposium in which three representatives of varying viewpoints discuss the issue, or a speaker with a background in collective bargaining speaks to the faculty.

The other part of the proposal, which was adopted by the group, called for the survey to be held May 5-9.

Herbert Donow, senate secretary and president of the Carbondale Federation of University Teachers (CFUT), responded to the concern of other senate members for the need to educate the faculty on the issue. "I can't believe the faculty is so ill-informed that they can't be asked, 'What do you think (of collective bargaining)?'" Donow said.

The senate proposed that the symposium be funded by Vice President for Academic Affairs Keith Leasure's office.

Contacted Tuesday, Leasure said that as a "general observation," he doubts if his office can fund it this semester because the request would be too late in the year. "We've committed about everything. It's getting awfully late in the year to plan anything," he said.

Donow said earlier that the CFUT would conduct a poll if the senate decided not to. He told the senate Tuesday that the CFUT is presently surveying part of the faculty on other issues. Those surveys, he said, will eventually lead to one on collective bargaining.

Senate member Danilo Orescanin voted against passage of the resolution, saying that it is not clear how the question will be worded or what the senate will do with information it receives.

"I'm not even sure the faculty wants to know about it," he said, adding that he thinks members of his department (administrative science) are not concerned with the issue.

Tuesday's meeting was a continuation of the regular meeting held last week, which was adjourned after 3½ hours of discussion.

In other action, the senate:

—approved the formation of an interim advisory committee to study departmental overlapping of undergraduate courses not included in general studies. The committee would also help to resolve conflicts in teaching assignments for those courses.

—approved an ad hoc committee to discuss the formation of a permanent committee aimed at reviewing the quality of undergraduate courses other than general studies.

—agreed to have a general faculty meeting in April and to have President Warren W. Brandt speak to the group at the meeting.

Steve Millman, 6, goes through a few warm up exercises before attending the children's performance of the Royal Winnipeg Ballet Company. Steve's form may not be up to that of the professionals in the company, but it was good enough to attract giggles of appreciation from little girls in his YMCA Nursery School classes. And after all, that was the real purpose of the demonstration. The ballet company performed at Shryock Auditorium. (See review, page 7.) (Staff photo by Bob Ringham)

Editor's Note: This is the second in a three-part series of articles examining the possibility of oil drilling on the SIU campus.

By Ross Becker
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The possibility of SIU's leasing 900 acres of University land for oil drilling is considered important enough by the University administration to take the question before the Board of Trustees for approval.

Normally the president of SIU may sign a lease without the consent of the board.

To determine if SIU should be involved in oil exploration and drilling, the Campus Natural Areas Committee was reactivated by former President Hiram H. Lesar to consider the question and recommend a course of action to the president.

The committee, chaired by Gilbert H. Kroening, dean of the School of Agriculture, discussed a proposal to begin formal negotiations with APCO Petroleum Corp.; heard Charles Pardee, executive director of the Illinois Oil and Gas Association; discussed the need for oil drilling; and saw an oil industry film illustrating oil exploration techniques and the steps oil companies take to protect the environment.

Committee members also attended a meeting where oil drilling in Shawnee National Forest was discussed and polled campus constituencies to determine the mood of the campus community about oil drilling. None of the committee members found any major objections from the constituencies to SIU's entering lease negotiations and eventually drilling for oil.

At the fifth meeting of the committee, a vote was taken on a motion that President Warren W. Brandt begin negotiating with APCO. The 11-member committee passed the motion with an eight to two vote. One member was absent.

In the recommendation, the Campus Natural Areas Committee stressed the need to protect the University and asked President Brandt to insure that proper precautions are taken so University lands are not harmed.

Most of the 900-acre University site is used by the School of Agriculture beef and swine farms. Some of the land is used for research.

"No one in the school has really objected" to oil drilling on University property so long as SIU research projects are protected," Kroening said. The main concern of the School of Agriculture is that "we protect research loais, the beauty of the campus and don't do anything environmentally unsound," Kroening said.

One research plot located in the 900-acre area is a five-acre experimental walnut tree plantation. The plantation

Board to review land lease question

Council OKs improvements budget

By Mary Whittler
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council approved a $7.1 million capital improvements program budget after scratching only one of the proposed programs.

The council voted Monday night to scratch a $100,000 traffic signal installation program on Oakland Street at Mill Street and at Freeman Street.

The vote to approve the capital improvements budget was unanimous, with the exception of Councilwoman Helen Westberg's no vote on the approval of the new city municipal complex and parking lot and Councilman Hans Fischer's abstention on the new library proposal.

Westberg said she would not vote for the municipal building project or the parking lot because she has gone on record as opposing the building. Westberg said that she feels the city has higher priorities than a new municipal building.

She said that when she approves a capital improvements budget she is "saying yes" to the project.

Fischer disagreed, saying that approval of the budget does not give the go-ahead for a project and that each project must still receive individual approval by the council.

Mayor Neal Eckert said approval of the capital improvements budget is in "no way an obligation on the part of the council" to finance a project.

The spending program for the new municipal building calls for a total expenditure of $2.1 million with $1,193,915 budgeted for the 1975-76 fiscal year.

The proposed parking lot for the municipal building is budgeted at $500,000.

Other programs included in the capital improvements budget and their proposed funding are:

—Lenus Turley Park improvements in the area directly east of Murdale, $3,150, funded from service charges;

—Cedar Lake boat launch facilities, $110,000, funded from state aid;

—land acquisition for bike and hiking trails, $50,000, funded from state aid and community development block grant;

—two-level parking garage, $400,000, funded from general obligation bonds;

—sidewalk program, $101,360, funded from special assessment and the public benefit fund;

—storm sewage development plan and construction, $1,071,000, funded from revenue sharing; and —access road to Bicentennial Industrial Park, $71,292; funded from revenue sharing and community development block grant.

In other action, the council delayed a decision on a request by Pomona Township to install a boat ramp at Cedar Lake.

The request was first made last summer by the township but was not acted upon so that the planning commission could develop a plan for use of the lake. James Rayfield, director of planning, reported to the council that the program was not yet completed.

The council also recognized that it could not declare a moratorium on the enforcement of the city sign ordinance. Eckert, who proposed the moratorium a week ago, said the ordinance would continue to be enforced. However, the city will continue its efforts to rewrite the ordinance, he said.

Roy Locke, 320 Crestview Lane, was named to the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners. His term will expire April 30, 1977.

Judy Trager, 801 South Johnson, was named to the Human Relations Commission. Her term will expire in May, 1977.

The contract for the construction of a new fire station was awarded to Kiefler Brothers, Inc., of Perryville, Mo. for $165,480.

The council also authorized the mayor to send letters of invitation to the Secretary of Commerce requesting that the National Fire Academy be located at SIU.

News Roundup

Quick Sinai agreement unlikely, leaders say

JERUSALEM (AP) — President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and Israeli Defense Minister Shimon Peres both gave gloomy assessments Tuesday of the chances of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger working out a new Sinai agreement on his current Mideast swing.

"There is a possibility we may not reach an agreement," Sadat said after seeing Kissinger for 90 minutes at his upper Nile villa. "I have the impression it is a very hard, difficult, complex round." Peres, known as the hawk in the Israeli leadership, said the main obstacle was Egypt's failure so far to offer enough political concessions for an Israeli pullback in Sinai.

Sitting beside Sadat in Aswan, Kissinger himself told newsmen that "there are several substantial areas of disagreement" between the views of the two sides.

Peres, speaking a few hours before Kissinger flew to Israel, told the Hebrew University board of governors that Israel is willing to withdraw from part of Sinai but wants a positive change in Egyptian-Israeli relations in exchange.

Probe shows propane gas irregularities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigations of fuel prices have turned up indications that propane gas users in rural areas were overcharged at least $80 million during the last heating season, says a spokesman for the Federal Energy Administration.

The total overcharges may run to more than $200 million by the time the FEA probe is completed, the spokesman said Monday night.

Court ruling gives protection to stage shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stage production won substantially the same constitutional protection from prior censorship as books and movies, under a Supreme Court ruling Tuesday.

The court struck down a ban against performance of the rock musical "Hair" in a Chattanooga, Tenn., municipal theatre.

The court did not rule on whether "Hair" is obscene, but said the procedure by which it was banned fell short of constitutional standards.

The five justices who signed the majority opinion went on to lay down the same standard they have previously prescribed for films and print — essentially that a court must determine obscenity before a work can be suppressed.

The decision drew dissents from both wings of the court — liberal Justice William O. Douglas calling the prescribed standards "procedural band-aids" and conservative William H. Rehnquist denouncing them as "exaggerated and rigid." However, Douglas agreed with the majority's finding that banning the play was an unconstitutional prior restraint of free speech.

evidence the racial problems are the result of activities by both organized groups and individuals. He said he is attempting to identify prisoners who have "actively agitated" for transfer to other institutions.

An assistant warden, M.V. Fair, said the lockup was ordered to permit a cell-by-cell search of the Randolph County institution for contraband, to conduct an investigation of racial problems and to give the staff a chance to rest.

Menard quiet after weekend disturbance

CHESTER (AP) — Menard State Prison's 1,525 inmates sat quietly through the third day of confinement in their cells, an official said Tuesday.

Administrators ordered the lockup Sunday morning after quelling a racial disturbance in the prison dining room. It was the second consecutive weekend inmates engaged in racial rioting. Both incidents are described by officials as involving only a handful of prisoners.

Milk fund investigation being reopened

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is conducting a new grand jury investigation of Associated Milk Producers Inc., probing an alleged cover-up in an antitrust case.

The grand jury is looking into sworn testimony that officials of the giant dairy-farmer cooperative deliberately destroyed documents that could be used as evidence in the case.

AMPI is the biggest dairy-farmer cooperative in the nation and also runs a $1.8-million political trust. Last year the co-op and two of its former top officers pleaded guilty to making hundreds of thousands of dollars in illegal political gifts. Three additional trials now are scheduled on charges stemming from AMPI's political activities, including the alleged bribery of former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally.

The latest grand jury probe is being conducted by Chicago-based lawyers for the antitrust division of the Justice Department. The federal grand jury is sitting in San Antonio, Tex., headquarters of the co-op.

Council's pot decision riles NORML leader

By Bruce Hackel
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The leader of the local campaign for a referendum on decriminalizing the city's law on marijuana possession turned his sights to Springfield for action Tuesday.

The Carbondale City Council turned down a request Monday night for a vote on the measure in next month's municipal elections after three out of five council members said they would not favor the action.

After hearing a legal opinion by City Attorney John Womick, which stated the issue could not be placed on the ballot because absentee ballots were already printed up, Buzz Talbot, regional coordinator of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML), approached the council.

"There is a gentleman here tonight who went to City Hall this afternoon and requested an absentee ballot, but none was available as of 3 p.m.," Talbot said.

City Clerk Elizabeth Leighty, who is in charge of having the election ballots printed up, said she had just ordered them Monday afternoon.

City Attorney John Womick, as well as the rest of the council, expressed surprise over this development.

"They should have been ready Monday," Womick said.

The mayor asked Womick if the referendum could be legally placed on the ballot since none had yet been printed.

Illinois Bell earnings under ICC investigation

CHICAGO (AP)—Representatives for Illinois Bell went before the Illinois Commerce Commission Tuesday defending its 1974 earnings which the ICC earlier had said are $15 million more than authorized.

An attorney for the telephone company told the commission the earnings actually were inadequate. On the other hand, a lawyer from the Cook County state's attorney's office, which is intervening in the case, called Bell's contention that it actually needed more money "a smokescreen."

Illinois Bell reported in January that operating revenues rose $157.6 million, Womick said he believed it could be done if the council were to amend its own election laws to eliminate the section that requires referendum issues be presented 78 days prior to the election.

"Then the council would have to adopt an ordinance placing the issue on the ballot," Womick explained.

Councilwoman Helen Westberg, who opposed placing the issue on the ballot, said she felt any legislation should come from the state level. Councilman Clark Vineyard, who favors decriminalization of marijuana, said he opposed passing two ordinances, neither of which the council was ready to act upon, in the same night. Councilman Archie Jones said he agreed with Vineyard.

Westberg said the council should consider a resolution favoring decriminalization of the laws for presentation to the state legislature.

"We'll be happy to take second best, and respectfully request the council to send a resolution to the state," Talbot said.

The Monday night action followed the presentation of a petition holding 1,306 signatures to the council a week ago.

The petition requested that the April 15 ballot ask, "Shall the City Council of Carbondale enact an ordinance to prohibit possession, control, use, transfer or sale of Cannabis Sativa L., (commonly referred to as marijuana) punishable by a fine of $25 for quantities not more than 30 grams (one ounce)."

up 11.6 per cent over 1973. After interest payments, Bell reported net income of $202.1 million, or 15 per cent over 1973.

In December 1973, the ICC authorized Bell a rate of return of up to 8.5 per cent. The ICC ordered the hearings to give Bell the opportunity to show why it should not return the estimated $15 million in excess profits to its customers.

After the ICC's order, Bell announced a proposal to seek a 14 per cent rate hike from the ICC and to change a variety of services including a boost for coin telephone calls to 20 cents and a reduction in directory assistance services.

Board to take part in land leasing decision was started from germinated walnuts five years ago, David T. Funk, plant geneticist at the U.S. Department of Agriculture North Central Forest Experiment Station, said. The plantation is run cooperatively with SIU, he said.

But a clause in the lease agreement between SIU and the forest station allows either the University or the station to cancel the agreement with 60 days notice. SIU could then allow APCO to drill for oil in that area.

The forest station, however, received an "informal assurance from the Campus Natural Areas Committee that the plot would be exempted from drilling," Funk said.

Another small portion of the proposed drilling site lies in the Carbondale reservoir watershed. The Carbondale City Council adopted an ordinance last spring prohibiting oil and gas drilling in the watershed. James Rayfield, city planning director, said State law allows the city to protect its watershed no matter how far from the city it is located, he said. "The city wants to protect its water supply," Rayfield commented.

Oil companies are concerned with protecting the environment, Clark Baker, APCO land manager, said. The days of gushers and disregard of the environment are a thing of the past, he said.

With proper safeguards there is no danger of oil spouting from the well, Russell Dutcher, chairman of the Department of Geology, said. Because of the weight of the drilling muds and the lack of substantial underground pressure, the possibility of a blowout is "nil," he said.

The oil companies are constantly monitoring the underground pressure so that, if the pressure level becomes dangerous, "they can close the well instantly," he said.

Even though the possibility of a blowout is minimal it is impossible to eliminate all environmental damage.

"Anytime you build a road there are bound to be side effects," Phillip Robertson, assistant professor in the Department of Botany, said. If proper precautions aren't taken there will be

Snow covered cornfields now lie dormant but possible land leasing of this University-owned property may result in oil drilling and exploration. (Photo by Chuck Fishman) erosion problems near the roads, he said.

Any oil and grease that spills onto the ground can sterilize the soil "for a couple of years," Robertson said. Any drilling in the wooded areas "would pretty well wreck the woods for research," he said.

The biggest problem from drilling would probably be the results of salt water runoff, Robertson said. Salt water, normally located beneath the oil in a well, would definitely harm the soil, Robertson commented.

Years ago oil companies would dump the salt water on the ground, Dutcher said. But now the standard practice is to inject the salt water into the well to prevent salt water runoff and keep the oil level from lowering, he said. When injected into the well, the salt water acts as a hydraulic pressure system and forces the oil upward, he said.

Complaints have been received, according to Gary Brashear, administrative assistant in the Illinois

Environmental Protection Agency Division of Land Pollution Control (EPA), of drilling waste overflows spoiling croplands. But since the EPA does not have jurisdiction to investigate complaints unless water pollution is involved there have been no investigations, he said. The EPA has not received any reports of water pollution from oil drilling, Brashear said. No complaints have been received about APCO, he said.

To insure that the well sites are returned to their natural state after drilling and pumping is completed, Illinois Department of Mines and Minerals Regulations require a $1,000 bond for each well, or a $10,000 for all wells.

Wells that are less than 4,000 feet deep must be separated by 10 acres, according to departmental guidelines. The location of the well must be at least 330 feet from the boundary of the drilling site.

Campus reactions to oil exploration and drilling on SIU property stretch from the view of T. Richard Mager "that it is an outstanding opportunity" to the firm "no" of Campus Natural Areas Committee student government representative Betty Anne Fitzmaurice. "I feel the major objection is that the University is supposed to be an academic community. The University is having a hard time keeping its head above water—getting involved with big corporations is dangerous," Fitzmaurice said.

Clark Ashby, botany professor, said "there is nothing special or super or sinister about oil drilling other than the obvious," damage caused by drilling, road construction and salt water runoff. "People in the oil business have told me that oil drilling is done the quickest way possible which is the dirtiest," he said.

Tomorrow—the article will examine the financial benefits SIU would receive should they decide to allow drilling on school owned property.

Indochina roundup

Saigon feels threat of Communist drive

Vietnam (AP)—President Nguyen Van Thieu ordered a paratrooper division from Da Nang back to Saigon on Tuesday to help cope with mounting Communist-led drives in surrounding provinces.

The Saigon command said North Vietnamese forces, in the second week of a broad offensive, were pressing against two district capitals within 50 miles of Saigon and had cut all major highways except Route 4 to the Mekong Delta.

In the central highlands, thousands of refugees fled to ward the coast in the wake of Thieu's decision to abandon three highland provinces without a fight.

In other Indochina developments, —Military aid for Cambodia appeared to be stuck on the question of a cutoff date, with President Ford refusing to agree to the cutoff and a House committee declining to approve aid without it.

Ford has not given up on his request for the aid, Senate Minority Leader Hugh Scott said Tuesday, even though "compassion has taken second place to expediency" in Congress.

Originally Ford asked for $222 million in additional assistance for Cambodia for the remainder of this fiscal year, but that has run into mounting congressional opposition.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee has been considering a compromise plan which would provide $82.5 million in aid, but would include a June 30 cutoff date for all military assistance to Cambodia.

Ford's advisers indicated Monday that they would agree to such a cutoff, but only for the purpose of getting the measure to the floor of the full House, where they could fight to get the cutoff deleted.

Rep. William S. Broomfield of Michigan, ranking Republican on the committee, said Tuesday that without Ford's agreement to the cutoff, the votes will not be there to get the aid out of the committee.

"I think it is doubtful" that either the committee or the full House will approve military aid for Cambodia, said Broomfield. He indicated doubts that the House will approve the aid even if Ford agrees to the cutoff.

"I told him (Ford) that in my judgment we are at an impasse unless he could agree to the provisions embodied in our compromise, including the cutoff of all U.S. military aid June 30. He told me he could not do that," Broomfield said after a congressional leadership meeting with the President.

—Cambodian troops continued a drive against the Communist-led insurgents "rocket belt" northwest of Phnom Penh and recaptured one position, military sources said. Fierce fighting was reported on the east bank of the Mekong River across from Phnom Penh where government gunboats duelled at point-black range with rebels dug in along the riverbank.

Jefferson Starship to land at SIU

By Deborah Singer

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A cooperative effort between Dean Justice, Arena manager, and Dennis Sullivan, Student Government president, has resulted in an entertainment booking designed to satisfy students who feel their musical needs have largely been ignored.

Jefferson Starship, along with Commander Cody and His Lost Planet Airmen, will give a concert at 8 p.m. April 23 in the SIU Arena.

According to Sullivan, whose campaign promises included bringing the Grateful Dead to SIU, Jefferson Starship is the band closest in style to the Dead that was available.

Sullivan, who initiated the activity involved in bringing the Starship, said the ultimate booking came about through Justice's expertise in concert scheduling.

"By bringing the Starship here," Sullivan said, "Dean Justice has shown that he can be responsive to students' entertainment needs."

If the Student Government can present a rational and responsible argument to Justice and George Mace, administration vice president, Sullivan claims that they may be agreeable to letting Student Government have a more active hand in booking future Arena concerts.

Jefferson Starship, formerly known as Jefferson Airplane, still has Grace Slick, Paul Kantner and Papa John Creach headlining the band. Their latest album released was "Dragon Fly."

Commander Cody and His Lost Planet Airmen are an eight-piece country rock band known for such hits as "Hot Rod Lincoln," and "Smoke, Smoke, Smoke (That Cigarette)."

Tickets will go on sale at 7:30 a.m. April 9, at the Student Center Central Ticket Office. Sullivan said two students, Sue Coonen, office manager, and Joe Kowalczyk, special representative, both from the Student Government office, will be running the ticket lines.

Printing names

Broadcast media and newspapers can no longer be prohibited from identifying female rape victims when that information is available from public records or court testimony.

That was the finding of the Supreme Court in a recent 8-1 decision that reversed a Georgia Supreme Court decision which upheld a state law making such identification illegal.

The precedent-setting case resulted from a suit against WSB-TV in Atlanta, Ga. by the father of a 17-year-old rape murder victim whose name was disclosed in a story about court proceedings for six high school boys charged with the crime.

In an opinion written by Justice Byron R. White, the court decided to direct its attention to the right of reporting that which is part of the public record rather than the invasion of privacy. Recognizing that the interests of privacy fade when the information involved already appears on the public record, the court said that the commission of a crime and the trial and prosecution which follow fall within the responsibility of the press to report the operations of government.

Recent efforts for equal rights for women and the movement toward a more accurate and credible press would seem to ask for such a finding—one that would make women, the alleged victims, stand under equal public scrutiny with men, their alleged rapists.

But as much as the press would like to cover every event in an equal manner, society does not take such an unpartisan view. The courts and the police do not treat rape in the same manner as other crimes. Unlike the robbed or assaulted, the rape victim is made to prove that she did not invite such a crime by provocative dress or behavior. Unlike the assaulted victim who has only to show a bullet or knife wound, the rape victim must submit to questions about her personal life and past experiences.

The nature of rape is one of violating a person's most intimate physical integrity. Thus, reporting such a crime makes the victim almost as guilty as the rapist, somehow defaced or marred in a way which, unlike a knife or bullet wound, does not necessarily heal with time.

Advocates of the new ruling might see it as a deterrent to false charges being made in an area where women risk less public defamation of character because their names do not appear in print.

The publication of a victim's name may be an end to the needless anxiety felt by those who read or hear about presently nameless victims whose circumstances fit the description of a close friend or relative.

However, the ratio of reported rapes to actual rapes is, unfortunately, low enough at present. The added burden of having one's name published as the victim and being even more subject to humiliation will undoubtedly prevent more than one woman from initiating the ordeal of reporting her rape.

In a family way

The Equal Rights Amendment and Women's Lib not withstanding—what would you do about a pregnant priest? Or to complicate matters—a pregnant UN-WED priest?

Sound a bit far fetched? Well, before the mind begins to boggle, relax...the priest is indeed female, alive, relatively well and living in Copenhagen. Copenhagen you'll recall is a city nestled comfortably within the confines of Denmark, where women have been active members of the clergy for 28 years. Still despite its liberal slant, Denmark's Lutheran Church is quite undecided on how to deal with Pastor Gitte Berg, the ecclesiastical mother-to-be in question.

Ms. Berg (a divorcee no less) announced her pregnancy openly and declared that she hasn't the slightest intention of getting married. "I could have had an abortion and that would have been that," Ms. Berg said in an interview with the London Observer, "but I feel that giving birth to my child could hardly be more shameful than the abortion."

Chances are, reports predict, Ms. Berg will be forced by the church to enter wedlock or resign from the priesthood completely.

Well, it seems that even in, as the song says, "wonderful, wonderful Copenhagen," where women are indeed "liberated," there are always those who would find some sort of loophole in their femininity to make them feel the pinch.

So (feminists and other concerned individuals take note), even if the Equal Rights Amendment does manage to sneak past the State Senate with the necessary three-fifths majority, and eventually makes its way to the federal constitution itself, lets not be too surprised or disappointed is some of OUR citizens—men and women alike—try to find their own loopholes.

After all, inner convictions and prejudices cannot be completely exorcised like demons by an act of Congress.

Who will retire the bonds after we all retire?

Through a complex series of requests, recommendations and bureaucratic dependence on red tape, money is circulated from the state budget to where it finally reaches the student body in its less than tangible form. New buildings, renovated facilities, increased services and other hard to pinpoint areas reflect much of this capital.

The fact that higher education is big business cannot be disputed. In Illinois, if Walker's proposed budget is approved, there will be $1.37 billion to play around with. Of that, SIU-C could get $68.3 million for fiscal 1976.

How did SIU-C and the state arrive at that figure and where will the money go once it is secured?

The campus provost sends notice to department heads to question what they might need for the upcoming fiscal year. The department head lists what new capital projects the department needs and the money needed to maintain currently operated programs.

This procedure is carried on simultaneously under all the vice-presidential areas—administration, academic affairs, development and services and student affairs.

After requests are sorted out at the vice-presidential levels, the campus budget picture goes to the President. This similar procedure is going on at SIU-E at the same time. The SIU-C President forwards the requests, after adjustments, to the Board of Trustees. It is there, in the office that has jurisdiction over the total SIU system, that the hard decisions are made. Along with representatives from the Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE), budget requests are scrutinized and trimmed, with the idea that any budget has to please the governor and the General Assembly, and yet sustain the system.

The IBHE makes its final recommendations and sends them, simultaneously, to the governor and legislature. The governor considers these requests in his overall budget picture and puts higher education requests from all state institutions into perspective, as did the IBHE before him when it asked for a specific figure to finance the state's higher education budget. When the governor releases his state budget, all this prior work is reflected in a few lines and figures that determine how much money each school is going to get. He presents the entire budget to the General Assembly, which haggles over it like a pack of hungry dogs fighting for a bone.

There is a lot of red tape that must be cut before the University is ready to go to the governor and say, "Okay, we're ready to build, give us the money you promised us."

The Board of Trustees, with assistance from the governor's Capital Development Board (CDB), chooses an architectural firm. Plans are drawn and the same process is carried out to find a firm that has experience doing the type of construction work needed.

Bonds are sold whenever a major construction project is undertaken, according to Dean Isbell, Board of Trustee treasurer. The board has statutory privilege to issue bonds on buildings such as the Student Center or housing facilities—operations that are designed to generate their own funds. But, as witnessed by the latest financial controversy on campus, problems are often incurred and students are sometimes asked to retire outstanding bonds. The proposed $5 increase in student fees to subsidize operations at the Student Center is a gross example of mismanagement on the part of that operation. So, as always, the students are asked to ease the financial burden. Though this proposal has met with sharp constituency disapproval, it probably will take effect next fall, as part of the overall proposed fee increases. The package, totalling $13.25, is scheduled to go before the board at its April meeting.

In effect, students are being asked to financially correct mistakes made by the Board and balance unforeseen fluctuations in the economic picture of the region. Because of inflation and other unpredictable variables, students, who are already paying to attend, are asked to bail out a faltering system's economy.

The CIA couldn't kill a bill and do it right

By Arthur Hoppe

Scurrilous charges that the CIA hired a Mafia hit man in an unsuccessful attempt to rub out Fidel Castro have created widespread outrage.

"These scurrilous charges have irreparably damaged the professional reputation of our dedicated organization," said an indignant Aloysius (Crunchy) Granola, one of the Mafia's ten top hit men.

In the interests of journalistic fair play here, then, is Granola's side of the story.

I get the word, (he begins), through the Daily Grapevine help-wanted column that the Government has a contract out on Fidel. Being between hit engagements, I ring up the CIA personnel director and tell him I'll take the job.

"Not so fast," he says. "This being a Government contract, kindly submit your sealed bid in triplicate, your experience record, six professional references (one of whom must be among the living), and a loyalty oath attesting you do not belong to any of 143 subversive organizations, including the East Afghanistan Whist Club."

Being a patriotic American, I do. Six months later, he calls me in. "Congratulations, Mr. Granola," he says. "You are the low bidder. And your record proves you are just the type of applicant the CIA is looking for—97 hits and one near miss."

"You cannot win them all," I say modestly.

"Please sign this contract in four places," he says, "and note it provides an automatic 90-day extension in the event of inclement weather. Under the Civil Service Code a hit man rates—let me see—a GS-14 classification. Now how do you plan to do the job?"

"The usual," says I. "Me and my trusty tommy-gun in the back of a speeding low-slung black sedan, a getaway driver at the wheel and..."

"Sorry," he says, shaking his head. "Only GS-18s and above are entitled to chauffeur-driven cars."

"Okay," says I. "So I wire a couple sticks of dynamite to his ignition. He steps on the starter and..."

...and first," he says, "you will have to file an

GODFATHER III

Environmental Impact Report."

"Well," says I, "how about if I slip a hemlock mickey in his beer?"

"Truth in labeling, Mr. Granola," he says, frowning. "You want the FDA on our necks?"

So in the end we compromise. I borrow a car from the Government pool, give Fidel an exploding cigar, put the snatch on his while he's dazed and hit him with an overdose of aspirin, it being non-prescription drug.

+ + +

All it gives me is a headache. Word gets around the Mafia cannot even rub out one lousy bearded Cuban. Business drops to zilch.

We are now in hock up to our eyeballs and our only hope is we get a Government subsidy like Penn Central. But personally I am against taking it.

"Do not get mixed up with the Government," I keep telling the Godfather. "It gives organized crime a bad name."

Springer's an ignoramus

To the Daily Egyptian:

Bob Springer's article on March 14 was garbage. For a college student, he is pretty ignorant on the problems in the Middle East. He needs a lesson in history.

The facts are as follows: In 1948 the United Nations divided Palestine into two equal but separate states. One was the Jewish State of Israel, and the other state was created for the Palestinians. After the U.N. mandate went into effect, the Arabs went to war with Israel. The Israelis successfully defended their state from the Arab aggressors who wanted to destroy Israel (like-wise in 1956, 1967, and 1973). Meanwhile, King Abdullah annexed the Palestinian state (West Bank of Jerusalem) as a part of Jordan. After the war the Egyptian and Syrian Governments told the Arabs to leave Israel and go into the government camps. They promised Israel would be destroyed within a couple of months. As you can see, the Palestinian problem was not caused by Israel but by the Arab countries.

Later in Springer's article, he writes about how Israel should recognize the PLO. I say "How can Israel recognize the PLO, when the PLO does not recognize Israel as a state, nor does any Arab state, and the PLO's goal is to drive the Israelis into the Sea?"

Finally, after reading Springer's column, my guess is that his solution would be to silence the Jewish Defense League and the Israeli Consulate General of the United States' information bureau. He must be afraid of the truth.

During World War II six million Jews were murdered. Many were killed because the public and the Jews kept quiet and turned their backs on Hitler. Never again.

ERA and the mails

To the Daily Egyptian:

Although Mrs. Paul Simon's talk on "Womanpower and Politics," did say that Southern Illinois people seemed to be against the Equal Rights Amendment she might have added "judging by mail to legislators," though she did in fact add that she thought they had been misinformed and did not understand the amendment.

A 19-point spurious public opinion poll has been circulated by the opposition, in which 18 out of the 19 alleged facts are false or severely distorted. This has resulted in a flood of mail to our legislators expressing totally unreal fears that church pulpits will be taken over by women at government mandate, that we will all be using the same toilets, that rape laws will be inoperative, and a host of other unrelated horrors. It is very important that this mail be counteracted by informed mail — floods of it — so that our legislators will know they have support in their districts. May I suggest that residents of District 58 write Senator Kenneth Buzbee, Representatives Bruce Richmond, Ralph Dunn and Vicent Birchler, and that residents of District 59 send cards, letters, coupons or petitions to Senator Gene Johns, Representatives Clyde Choate, Richard Hart and Robert Winchester. All can be reached at the State Capitol, Springfield, 62706. For those who are genuinely confused please contact the Committee on ERA, 185 N. James St., Carbondale, or read one of the numerous Common Cause leaflets which are available on bulletin boards and at distribution centers both on campus and in the community.

Sorry, Huck

To the Daily Egyptian:

I thought I should tell you that you spelled the horse's name (the one that appeared in the ballroom) wrong in Thursday's (March 13) paper. While Mark Twain spelled his Huckleberry Finn this way, my Huckleberry Fin is spelled that way. I asked the horse and he said he didn't really care but then he uses newspapers for different things than I do. So just to set the record straight, his name is spelled wrong for Twain and the rest of the world but it is correct for him.

WIDB names new manager

Mike Hillstrom, WIDB radio's chief announcer, has been appointed acting general manager, Joel Preston, current general manager, said Monday.

Hillstrom, 20, a radio-television junior, will assume official duties if approved by the WIDB Board of Directors next month, Preston said. "WIDB faces some challenges," he said, "and I feel Mike will handle them as well as anybody could."

Hillstrom was one of five candidates for the job, Preston said. Hillstrom said that there would be no major policy changes at the station.

"Everything in our current system is working," he said. "It's a good system. We will continue to operate on the principle that our audience is number one in importance."

Hillstrom added that the station plans to research the possibility of cable operation in the dormitories. "With cable on campus," he said, "the students will be able to receive our signal in stereo, and will get better television, besides."

WIDB has been conducting stereo tests, and will soon begin 24-hour stereo operation.

"On campus, WIDB's signal is heard on AM radio," Hillstrom said, "so stereo reception would be impossible."

The University has never approved cable operation in the dorms. Preston said that this is probably due to "installation problems."

Preston took over the post last fall when the station's regular general manager withdrew from school. Preston had held the position previously.

The 23-year-old senior said that he will stay with WIDB in another capacity.

Preston said he considers his second term as general manager a success.

"The community knows about WIDB now, whereas before they couldn't have cared less who we were," he said.

Although Hillstrom must still be approved at a board meeting in April, Preston said he is serving in full capacity as general manager at this time.

Preston added that he expects no difficulty with Hillstrom's approval. Meanwhile, Hillstrom's duties as chief announcer are being carried out by Program Director Todd Cave. Hillstrom said that he will announce the new staff positions when they are final.

Gun class attracts community women

HAMDEN, Conn. (AP)—Women wanting to learn how to handle a pistol safely and shoot straight are turning out in large numbers for free training at a local shooting range.

Individual reasons for taking the course vary as widely as the participants' backgrounds, but most seem to be concerned with firearm safety, according to one of the organizers.

More than 100 women, most of them housewives ranging in age from 18 to 60, joined the one-a-week, four-week program, a project of the Hamden Fish and Game Protective Association and the local police department.

"I always wanted to do target shooting," said one woman as she completed her first shooting round at the association's outdoor range.

Another woman, whose husband is associated with the National Rifle Association, said she wanted to learn first hand about pistol handling because of controversy over availability of guns.

"I get sick and tired of listening to news commentators talking about things they don't understand," she said.

Others wanted to know how to use a gun for protection and some joined just because they were curious.

Robert Gerencser, the association's president, said there are probably many women who want to learn about firearms, but cannot because there are so few shooting ranges open to the general public. The association is private like most other shooting clubs but decided on the free program to reach those women who wanted instruction.

In true Annie Oakley fashion, a few women rank among the nation's top marksmen, but there would be more if women had more access to training, he said.

Visiting socialist group finds apathetic students

By Jim Wagner
Student Writer

Representatives from the Young Socialist Alliance (YSA) came to SIU trying to raise support but they found mostly apathy.

SIU students don't seem to care anymore, or at least they don't show it, according to YSA members.

Visiting SIU last week, team members of the YSA had a table set up in the student center with books and literature but "we didn't get many customers," said Craig Adams, one of the visitors. "Most students stop, look at the books, and walk away."

"Politically speaking, college students have been in hibernation since the late '60's," Adams said,

"but I think the economic squeeze and the CIA revelations are waking people up."

Gradually enough people in this country are going to become dissatisfied with the political and economic situation in this country and there will be a socialist revolution," Adams said.

When this country becomes socialist, the rest of the world will follow. "There won't be any significant opposition," Makler said.

The YSA is a group of about 2,000 college-age youths who are working for a socialist revolution. "It's the largest and most active leftist organization of its type in this country," Makler said.

One-man show to dance into Shryock

By Deborah Singer
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Daniel Nagrin has been influencing and defining the move's role in modern dance since he became a solo performer in 1948. He has compiled a retrospective of his solo dances from 1948-72 into a concert titled "Changes," which he will perform in a free convocation program at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Shryock Auditorium.

Although Nagrin has been around a long time, critics say that the qualities which set his dancing apart in the early '50s have not been greatly altered except by maturity, which in his later compositions reveals the personal as well as artistic changes responsible for Nagrin's one-man show.

Instead of rebelling against changes occurring in the dance world of the '60s, Nagrin assimilated many of the new trends into his own style. After teaching movement in director Joseph Chaikin's "Open Theatre" to actors like Dustin Hoffman, Robert Duval and Sally Kirkland, Nagrin became director of one of the country's first improvisational dance companies, "The Workgroup." He is currently an instructor at the City College of New York and chairman of that school's dance committee.

The program for "Changes" contains highlights from some of Nagrin's solos, many of which are now considered classics. Among them he will perform movements from "The Peloponnesian War," created in 1968 and regarded as Nagrin's best known work. Pieces from his early compositions such as "Spanish Dance" and "Strange Hero" will be included along with a new untitled work.

The Wednesday evening performance is only part of what Nagrin will be doing at SIU. He will also be teaching master dance classes that will be open only to members of the Southern Illinois Repertory Dance Theater and other students enrolled in the dance classes.

On Thursday Nagrin will teach a jazz dance workshop from 11 to 12:30 p.m. and an improvisation workshop from 1 to 2:30 p.m. in Furr Auditorium. For Friday there is an improvisation workshop scheduled from 11 to 12:30 p.m. and a movement for actors workshop from 1 to 2 p.m. which will also be held at Furr Auditorium.

A free backstage social hour, sponsored by Student Government, will follow the Convocations program and provide an opportunity those interested to meet Nagrin.

The concert and workshops are presented in collaboration by the SIU Dance Program, Academic Affairs, Illinois Arts Council and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Ballet at Shryock inconsistent in technique and performance

Editor's Note: Gordon is an assistant professor in the Department of Theater and artistic director of the Southern Illinois Repertory Dance Theater.

By Lonny Joseph Gordon
Guest Writer

The Royal Winnipeg Ballet performed Monday night at Shryock Auditorium. The evening presented a diversity of choreographic ideas with consistent stress upon the use of varied tempos, simple floor designs and spatial patterns offering monotonous dynamics.

Upon introduction the company showed the emphasis of artistic director Arnold Spohr, featuring the male dancers choreographically. However, their technical proficiency and body placement did not always meet the demands of the works. Some of the evident problems were hands insensitive to space—at times like mannequins with broken wrists—the flow of line was more often fractured than completed.

The women consistently used focus as a discovery and recovery attitude in performance. The use of leg extensions, footwork and eye costumes' flash of rhinestone and plunging décolletage.

While most duets are male and female, this couple was plowhorse and Palamino. Although William Starrett was not breaking earth, he was physically destroying space. Perhaps another year in the studio will prepare him to neither break stride nor fold in future performances.

Rodeo and The Green Table provided a fertile plain for the company's interpretation. Each ballet evolves from the spirit of struggle and life.

In Rodeo, Agnes deMille, using the original music of Aaron Copeland has created a contest of ropin', ridin', throwin' and brandin' in which the "Champeen Roper" gets the "Cowgirl." Love, and championship stock are the Americana that deMille presents in this folk ballet classic, with symbolic gesture and romantic humor.

One problem with this interpretation was its kinship to the French Canadian folk, as opposed to its wrangler-roper-rancher roots. Terry Thomas brought the few bravos of the evening with his maneuvering footwork as the Champeen Roper. With his open country smile, he is indeed one catch of a dancer.

The Green Table, a dance of death, was created in 1932 by Kurt Joos. It opens and closes with a brilliantly orchestrated conference of "The Gentlemen in Black," around a table where decisions that affect many are made by a few. Tango rhythms provide an acid base for these sections which give the work its parody and bite.

Most other sections of the work continued the use of simple, strong movement in passages of lengthy repetition that never create a razor's edge consistent with the stunning opening. The work, while timeless in its statement about the horror and foolishness of war, did look visually and perceptually dated with its heavy-handed gestures.

Eric Horenstein as The Profitier performed with a balanced center of gravity and wide-open leg work. For the most part, the company as an ensemble was not aware of gravity as having weight.

With more attention placed upon the details of technique and performing artistry, the Winnipeg Ballet may one day become truly royal.

focus showed the strengths of the women to stage advantage. A problem common to all of the company and specifically the women was using the shoulder trapezius muscles to lift and hold the arms, not allowing the back and sides of the body to carry the weight. Repeatedly this placement problem interfered with the quality of transcending technique into the art of performing.

Rigodon, opening the evening, blended the Canadian folk heritage with classical ballet techniques. In six movements, the dance created an ever-changing pattern of circular and linear choreography.

Etude: Printemps, the second work, was supposedly conceived as the choreographer's tool for teaching the art of pas de deux. Pity the duo who learned this duet. The series of lifts and extensions, with no meaningful exploration of space, and forced phrasing were ineffectively presented through the

Youthful sheriff finds job to his liking

By Jennifer Kerr
Associated Press Writer

SPENCER, W. Va. (AP)—Robey Jack Knight was 25 and rearing from job to job when he nonchalantly allowed his name to be put on the Democratic ballot for sheriff "just to fill the ticket" in overwhelmingly Republican Roane County.

Now, little more than a year after he was elected, he has changed the three-person department's focus from tax collection to law enforcement and says he can't imagine not being a sheriff.

When he was a child, he never dreamed of police work, he said. "I wanted to be a coach."

A Roane County native, he did play football and baseball for Spencer High School, and joined the Army upon graduation. After he got out in 1969, he briefly tried college. He sold insurance in Oak Hill for four months, then moved back to Spencer to help his mother with her grocery store in nearby Left Hand until the May 1973 primary.

His father, the late Robey Chapman Knight, had been active in Democratic politics and had been business manager of Spencer State Hospital and a board of education member.

"The Democrats didn't have anybody filed," the 27-year-old sheriff recalled. "Very seldom do Democrats get elected in this county. I really just put my name on the ticket to fill the ticket."

"Then I kinda got working at it real hard. People talked to me. I almost went door-to-door. The more I did, the more enthusiastic I got about it."

When the returns came in, Knight was the only Democrat elected in the county.

"I was kinda surprised," he admitted. "I guess I just worked harder than the other guy."

Since he had no police training, he spent six weeks after the election in Fayette County, where his brother-in-law was sheriff. Since his department is not on civil service, he chose two new deputies, neither of whom had experience either.

"Before I took over, the sheriff's office had just been really a tax collection office," he explained. "I went more into the law enforcement aspect. We now have 24-hour service—before people had to call the state police at night. We now have a sheriff's car, marked with all the lights and everything."

His department averages 10 arrests a month, he said, mostly misdemeanors, peace warrants, traffic violations, intoxication.

"I like it very much. I hate to think of getting out of it," he said. His four-year term expires in 1976 and he said he plans to run again as a result of voter approval last year of a constitutional amendment allowing sheriffs to be elected to two consecutive terms.

"I really don't have any problems because of my youth, probably because of my family. I know almost everybody. I treat people the way they want to be treated," he said.

Bifocal or single vision contact lenses can be fitted now with the aid of a computer. Bifocal lens has no segment or line to distort the vision and looks like a single vision lens.

With the use of a PhotoElectric Keratometer called PEK Mark III a photograph of the eye is made. The photo, along with the prescription is sent to the Visual Data Center in Chicago where they are put into a computer. The computer calculates the structure, size, base curve and the RX required.

The advantage of the lens is usually more comfort and longer initial wearing time.

Complainant drops suit on corporal punishment

A court suit to require the Carbondale Elementary Board of Education to carry out a state school official's order limiting corporal punishment has been dismissed in the Jackson County Circuit Court. Rev. T. Larison Phillips brought the suit against the board after it failed to comply with his request that his daughter not be subject to corporal punishment.

He based his request on an order from former State School Supt. Michael Bakalis that school boards had to comply with requests by parents that their children not be punished in school.

"I had several reasons for dropping the suit," Phillips said. "As I found out more about the procedures involving the suit, I decided that the suit would be drawn out."

"The decision in my case would only apply in Jackson County. There are other ways to get the school district to comply," he said.

Six nominated to correctional services board

Three wardens, a judge, an educator and a work release official have been named to serve on the advisory committee for SIU's correctional service program.

Committee members appointed by Arden L. Pratt, dean of the School of Technical Careers, will serve through 1975.

The committee will advise instructors in correctional services of recent trends in corrections.

Those named to the correctional services advisory committee are: Warden Vernon Housewright, Vienna Correctional Center; Warden Tom Israel, Menard Correctional Center; Warden Ralph L. Aaron, U.S. Penitentiary, Marion; William Lewis, associate circuit judge, Jonesboro; Joseph Coughlin, Center for the Study of Crime, Delinquency and Corrections, SIU; and Champ Brahe, director of the Southern Illinois Work Release Center, Carbondale.

Association helping blacks in engineering

As many as 10 qualified black engineering students have been guaranteed financial assistance to attend SIU, according to an agreement between SIU and the National Consortium for Black Professional Development.

Keith Leasure, vice president for academic affairs and provost, said that the consortium, made up of 10 institutions across the country, is based on an effort by universities and industry to get qualified young blacks into professional areas which now employ few blacks.

Attempting to place qualified black students in the engineering profession is consortium's first major project, Leasure said. He said the plan described by the NCBPD Executive Director Hanford D. Stafford calls for the consortium to locate 100 qualified black students interested in studying engineering and place them at the 10 participating colleges and universities.

The universities would provide financial assistance, and 10 engineering firms have agreed to provide summer employment for the students while in school. A major philanthropic foundation might contribute funding on a matching basis, Leasure said.

Summer "help sessions" are planned at member institutions for those students who wish to brush up on calculus, physics or other necessary subjects prior to admission, Leasure said.

SIU is under no obligation to either the consortium or this project unless students actually enroll in SIU engineering courses, Leasure said. Each step is contingent on the next one.

"We have the aid if they have the need," he said. He said details of SIU financial aid have been worked out with Frank Adams, director of student work and financial assistance, and Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs.

Jackson County Board hires its first executive secretary

By Pat Corcoran
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A former county clerk's secretary began work Tuesday administering federal employment programs as the first executive secretary ever hired by the Jackson County Board of Supervisors.

In action taken by the legislative committee of the board Monday afternoon, Pruett Deitz was hired to

Symposium set on leadership for Thursday

A symposium on leadership theory and research will be held Thursday and Friday at the Student Center featuring some of the nation's recognized authorities on the subject.

The Third Leadership Symposium, co-sponsored by the SIU Department of Administrative Sciences and College of Business and Administration, will concentrate on the latest in theoretical and empirical research on leadership, according to William M. Vicars, assistant professor of administrative sciences. It is designed to provide a forum for well-known scholars and others who have made recent contributions to the field of leadership research.

The two-day program will include presentations by Victor Vroom, professor of administrative sciences and psychology at Yale University; David Bowers, program director of the Institute for Social Research at the University of Michigan; John B. Miner, professor of management at Georgia State University and Arthur G. Jago, of the School of Organization and Management, Yale University.

Papers presented at the symposium, which is partially supported by the Smithsonian Institution, Office of Naval Research and the SIU President's Academic Excellence Fund, will be published in the third volume of the biennial symposium series.

The symposium begins at 8 a.m. Thursday with registration at the Student Center. Registration fee is $40, but SIU faculty, staff and students may attend free of charge.

Coal manager to visit campus

The personnel manager for the Amax Coal Co., L. E. Harton and Harold Odle, supervisor of training for Amax and an SIU graduate, will be on campus Wednesday to give information about careers in mining and mining technology.

They will examine how SIU's existing mining technology program fits the needs of the coal mining industry and discuss the proposed master of science degree in mining engineering to be offered next year.

Harton and Odle will visit with S. Lee Wohlwend of the Career Planning and Placement Center to discuss arrangements for establishing work stations with coal mine employers through the Cooperative Education Program.

They will also discuss the Coal Research Center, recently established at SIU by Gov. Dan Walker, with Russell R. Dutcher, director of the unit.

Harton and Odle will give a slide and movie presentation at 7 p.m. in Technology Building D 131.

coordinate the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) program and to act as a liaison between the county board and county officers.

Until December 1974, Deitz worked in the county clerk's office and was the secretary assigned to county board meetings for more than eight years.

Charles Gray, legislative committee chairman, said Deitz was his first choice when the executive secretary position was approved by the county board last week. Starting salary for the secretary will be $600 per month.

Bill Kelley, Carbondale representative on the board, said Deitz will first start with administering the CETA program and the eight jobs it provides in Jackson County. Deitz was hired on CETA money. Four of the CETA jobs are allotted to Jackson County, two to the city of Carbondale and two to the city of Murphysboro. Deitz was the last county employee to be hired on the grant's funds which expire February 1976. The county also hired two microfilmers and a key punch operator on federal money.

Part of Deitz's duties will include the numbering and cataloging of county resolutions and ordinances, Kelley said.

"Pruett is especially qualified for this since part of her earlier work included the typing of these resolutions," Kelley said.

Deitz will also be expected to follow up on any action taken by the county board to make sure it is carried out, said Reginald Stearns, county board chairman.

Career information session to guide liberal arts majors

The Career Planning and Placement Center (CPPC) and the College of Liberal Arts will conduct a career information session for liberal arts students 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Wednesday in Paner.

The purpose of the session is to inform liberal arts majors of the opportunities and alternatives open to them and what to expect when they graduate.

Harvey Ideus, director of CPPC, will give 20-minute presentations at 11 a.m., noon, 2 and 3 p.m. on different approaches liberal arts graduates can use when looking for a job. Ideus' theme will center on jobs and careers after graduation and how a student's major in school does not necessarily dictate the job or career a person may have.

Ideus will also focus on career alternatives which liberal arts students may not be aware of, as well as the strengths and qualifications students have which can be utilized when looking for a job.

Michael Walsh, researcher for the College of Liberal Arts, will offer information from a graduate follow-up study he has recently completed. The study is concerned with the present job situations, income and career potential of 1972 graduates.

Walsh said most job information studies conducted on college graduates are inaccurate and misleading because the studies are taken only four months after their graduation.

Walsh feels his study is important because it was conducted two years after graduation, thus guarding against early job-finding and placement difficulties.

CPPC's "Lucy booth" will also be on hand to dispense information and literature about CPPC's services and resources which are available to students.

English clinic assists poor writers.

By Jerie Jayne
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A clinic sponsored by the Department of English is helping SIU students overcome writing deficiencies.

In a recent interview, Jewell Friend, director of undergraduate programs in the English Department, discussed some of the possible solutions to major problems plaguing students who aren't prepared to write on a college level. Friend said one way SIU is trying to help students with writing problems is with the writing clinic offered on a university-wide basis.

Diana Dodd, supervisor of the clinic, said it was started in 1966, "because the English Department felt a definite need to help students who were having trouble with freshman composition."

Dodd, an assistant professor in English, said students can make an appointment to go to the clinic on a weekly basis. Participants may choose the hour and day, but if the student misses two appointments he is dropped from the clinic and his teacher is notified he is not going.

"We don't write papers for students. It's not a place to come and get papers proofread either. We're here to teach people how to write," she said.

Dodd said students come in of their own will or on the recommendation of a teacher. Six teaching assistants work in the clinic. Each worker helps three students per class hour. Each participant brings a graded paper to the initial session.

"We look at the papers and determine if the students need help in mechanics, sentence structure, paragraph development or organization," she said.

Dodd said they help students plan topics and organize for their next theme. Workbooks are available for students needing help with mechanics.

"You can tell a lot about how well a student has mastered what they learn from the workbooks. We look to see if the student can carry over in his writing what he's learned in the workbook," she said.

Currently 125 students are receiving help at the writing clinic. During fall semester, 250 students used the facilities. Dodd said students are still enrolling for this semester.

Statistics from fall semester 1973 indicate how successful the clinic is in assisting students to learn how to write. Of 150 students who went to the clinic from GSD 101 classes, the beginning writing course, 72 per cent received a passing grade. Fifty-one per cent of this group received C's. The remaining received A's and B's.

Both percentages are better than they've been in the past two years, Dodd said. In fall semester 1972, 67 per cent passed and 48 per cent got C's.

Dodd said the clinic has a higher percentage of students in the C range than the English Department, which had 35 per cent of its students in the C range fall semester.

Visitors on campus can get three-day parking permits

SIU students may worry about getting parking tickets, but their visitors don't have to. Anyone visiting SIU can go to the Parking Office at Building D, Washington Square and obtain a visitor's parking permit, said Darcy Keller, student worker at the office. Visitors are required only to show a driver's license or some other form of identification so the office can be sure they are not students, Keller said. "The permits are good for three days. Visitors tell us where they will be most of the time and we make the permits good for lots close to that area." Keller added that a visitor could apply for additional parking lots close by, to assure himself of a parking place. "If by some mistake the visitor gets a ticket, he can bring it to the Parking Office and the ticket will be voided. She said this applies to all visitors, whether or not they have a visitor's permit. Keller said visitors could also send any tickets they receive back to the Parking Office from their home towns. They can be voided there or at the Security Office. A visitor's permit can be obtained at the Parking Office from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, or at the SIU Security Office any day of the week.

Past still haunts convicted murderer

CHICHESTER, N.H. (AP)—Convicted of New Hampshire's most sensational murder and saved from the gallows 13 times, Russell Nelson lives outside the prison now.

But he and his wife, a 34-year-old former Catholic nun, are not completely free—their lives are often haunted by the shadow of his past.

Still, Nelson says that theirs "is a success story, a love story."

They expect a child in June.

Sixteen years ago, when Nelson was 30, he and Frederick Martineau, then 33, were convicted in the murder-for-hire killing of Maurice Gagnon, a Lincoln, R.I., plastics manufacturer whose body was found in a Nashua parking lot.

They were sentenced to hang. Until they were paroled in 1973, they beat death 13 times with stays of execution.

When the U.S. Supreme Court overturned the death penalty, they were re-sentenced to life in prison and became eligible for parole.

They have steadfastly maintained their innocence.

Their release from the New Hampshire State Prison in Concord, where they were model inmates, was challenged by conservative Gov. Meldrim Thomson.

The release swirled in controversy that saw Martineau returned to prison for a time. Now, Martineau lives and works in Manchester.

The Nelsons now live in Chichester in a small, modestly furnished house, next to a service station.

Nelson is the head teacher of the Second Start adult education program in Concord.

Nelson married Patricia Knight in June, an event which had to be approved by the state parole board.

"Our paths were a million miles apart," Nelson said, "yet they crossed. Here I was a backstreet kid from Providence, son of a typical Irish cop, and she had been a nun."

They met in the prison's drama class when she was a volunteer teacher in an adult education program for inmates.

"Oddly enough," Mrs. Nelson noted with a laugh, "I spent about the same time in the convent as he did in prison."

But the former Sister Patricia of the Order of Sisters of Mercy is quick to add that "there was no connection" between their relationship and her dropping out of the order.

"I had given to religious life all I could give it and it gave me all it could give," she said. "Yet I don't regret for a single moment the time I spent in the convent or my decision to leave."

They try to live as ordinary people do, but they are not free. Nelson does not feel free to allow his wife to be photographed "because I don't want her picture in the paper. I don't care about mine."

And he can't see his parents, who are in their 70s and live in Providence. "They (the parole board members) told me the day before Thanksgiving I couldn't go. They did the same at Christmas," he said.

Nelson, a heavy-set man with short black hair just beginning to gray, looks like a slightly overweight ex-boxer. "I'm basically Russ Nelson. I was born and brought up in the city, I've changed, grown older," he said.

"When a person sees so much suffering of others, like in prison, and he can't do something about it, it makes him want to help change things," he added.

Since he has been out of prison, Nelson has been speaking to college and church groups about prisons and "what people can do about them."

Prisons, he believes, ought to be abolished.

Energy official says oil cost will fall

By John Hescheid
Student Writer

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) can not continue to keep oil prices high for much longer, said Lee Richardson, former director of the Federal Energy Administration's Office of Consumer Affairs.

Richardson, who spoke at Morris Library Auditorium Monday night, is now a professor of marketing at Louisiana State University.

In analyzing the OPEC situation, Richardson said he can't cite a world-wide cartel that has succeeded yet.

He also said an oil surplus has actually occurred. This "glut", as Richardson called it, has reached a 20 to 30 per cent excess. Richardson said consuming nations are doing things to fight it such as becoming more independent. He was quick to add that the United States is moving back to its usual pace of using oil.

Richardson also tried to dispel the myths he said he felt have built up about the energy crisis. He said it is easier for the public to believe these myths than to look at the real problems and situations.

The biggest myth, Richardson said, is the idea that there is a conspiracy among the oil companies to keep prices high. He said people feel that once this conspiracy is broken up everything will be all right.

Richardson said that the United States failure to establish priorities is tragic and people must recognize that energy is intertwined with other aspects of society. It is becoming more and more difficult for technology to solve our problems, he said.

While OPEC may control the price of oil, Richardson said the oil companies have a corner on the market for distribution. "We need to break up oil companies inter-locking relationships," he said.

In referring to oil cartel, Richardson said, "anything can survive if the public is ignorant." "We can't let things slide anymore, and need to question big name policymaking," he said.

Total. The lazy way to take care of your contact lenses.

You may not even be lazy. Just very busy. Who has time for a solution to wet contacts, another for soaking, still another to clean them and maybe one for cushioning? It gets pretty complicated to say nothing of the expense.

Now there's Total®. The all-in-one contact lens solution that does it all. Total® wets, soaks, cleans and cushions your contacts. And you only have to use a single solution.

Try Total®. See how much more comfortable your contact lenses can be. And cleaner. And a lot easier to use.

There are two good ways to buy Total®—the 2 oz. size and the 4 oz. size. Total® 2 oz. has a free, mirrored lens storage case, and the new economy 4 oz. size saves you 25%.

Total® is available at the campus bookstore or your local drugstore.

And we're so sure you'll like Total® that we'll give you your second bottle free. Just send a Total® boxtop with your name, address and college name to:

National News Council chief slated for journalism lecture

By Wes Smith

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The executive director of the National News Council will present the Howard R. Long Honor Lecture in Journalism at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Morris Library Auditorium.

William B. Arthur, former editor of Look magazine, will speak on "The State of the Press" from the standpoint of the Council's function as a forum for the airing of grievances against the national news media.

The New York-based National News Council, patterned after the 21-year-old British Press Council, was formed in 1973. The Council keeps watch on radio and television networks, news magazines, wire services and syndicates and the nationally circulated newspapers.

The council has 15 members, nine representing the public and six from the news media. No members are associated with the media under the council's scrutiny.

The council has been described as a "cop with neither pistol or nightstick" because it has no enforcement power other than the force of publicity in policing press performance.

In its one and a half years of existence, the council has reaped criticism both from inside and outside the news media. In its first year, the council received some 250 complaints, adjudicated 44 and upheld four.

Arthur, who has served as the council's director since its inception, defends the council and its mission to "serve the public interest in preserving freedom of communication and advancing fair and accurate reporting of news." He says the council is neither a "sneak attempt at press regulation," as the New York Daily News alleged, nor the handmaiden and apologist of a so-called liberal media establishment.

Arthur was associated with Look magazine for 26 years as writer, editor and corporate officer. He is a former president of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi, and a recipient of that group's Wells Key for distinguished service to journalism.

The lecture is sponsored by the SIU School of Journalism in honor of Howard Rusk Long, director of the school of 19 years. Long retired from the faculty last year.

The SIU chapter of The Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi, will serve refreshments after the lecture.

Three students to construct five county area land use map

Marilyn Minor, graduate student in the Community Development Department, is working with the Greater Egypt Regional Planning and Development Commission to construct land use maps of the five counties of the Greater Egypt area. The project is part of a work study program sponsored by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

"We are taking surveys of how the land is being used in the five counties of Jackson, Jefferson, Perry, Franklin, and Williamson,"

Minor said. "The land use maps will be available as a source and a service to the five counties."

"Anytime a county needs to check on a particular area, they can look on the land use maps to check on the development of that area," Minor said.

Minor is one of three SIU students performing the surveys which will be completed by June, 1976.

Stop that thief

DANBURY, Conn. (AP)—A case of mistaken paper bags netted a thief a hamburger instead of $379, police said here.

Officers said that a dress shop employe, carrying two paper bags—one containing shop receipts, the other the hamburger—was walking to a bank when a young man wrenched the bag with the hamburger from her hand and fled in a car.

Now that the basketball has gone its way for the year, pinball again reigns in Carbondale. (Staff photo by Jim Cook)

Pinball businesses booming with more machines, players

By Mitchell Hadler
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

"Spanish Eyes." "Wild Life." "Outer Space"—if you play the "silver ball," these names should ring a bell.

Pinball is a growing business in Carbondale. It is attracting more and more players to the flipper buttons, which when pressed, send the pinball rolling up the inclined playing board, crashing into targets and causing bells to ring and clackers to click.

Carbondale is also the home of the Pinball Wizards Tournament, sponsored by the Downstairs Arcade. The tournament has attracted entries from nine states, and has received major television network coverage, said T.C. Cottingham and Gary Jaquet, Downstairs Arcade employees.

One way to get an idea of how fast pinball is growing in Carbondale is to review the records of machine licenses. The machines are licensed according to city code, which classifies all coin-operated game machines as "Amusement Machines." A license costs $25 for each unit, said John Yow, director of Code Enforcement for Carbondale.

Yow said machines are licensed annually in January. In 1974, 201 machines were licensed. This year, Yow said at least 220 machines would be licensed. In 1971 only 113 game machines were licensed locally.

The city enacted the amusement game code for electrical safety reasons, Yow said this meant making sure enough electric sockets serve the machines.

Yow said that the license fees provide good revenue for the city because the code is easy to enforce and administrate. A Carbondale Police officer the code, and make sure all machines are licensed.

The city code prohibits persons under 18 from playing the machines, but Donald Zastrow, a detective working with the Police Community Service Center said that aspect of the code is nearly impossible to enforce.

Besides the pinball-type game, there are T.V. screen games, pay pool tables and target shooting games. These are classified as arcade machines.

The 200 plus machines licensed in Carbondale are owned primarily by Merri-Mac Vending. Merri-Mac owns about 180 of the machines, Buddy Buddy Enterprises owns about 20 machines and Aladdin's Castle, Inc. is a corporation which deals exclusively in mall-type stores, said Richard Stribling, manager of the Aladdin's Castle located in the University Mall. Stribling also said that the corporation presently owns 53 other stores and will open 15 more this year.

Three major firms manufacture pinball machines, Stribling said. They are Gottlieb; Williams and Bally. A pinball machine may cost from $1,200 to $1,500. Arcade machines can cost as much as $2,000.

Stribling said arcade machines are more expensive because they are harder to mass produce. Roy McClain, owner of Merri-Mac Vending said that Arcade machines break down faster, are harder to service, and are worth less on trade-ins than pinball machines.

Gus "The Greek" Pappelis, an SIU student winner of the 1973 Pinball Wizards Tournament said that "all pinball machines are different. Certain machines have more of an element of chance, but a machine which has predictability, really tests one skill." "The Greek" said there is a challenge in catching the ball with a flipper, aiming and shooting it at targets.

Here, he said "the skill involved is in how well you can manipulate the machine."

Many pinball machines are found in bars and restaurants on Illinois Avenue. Also, there are a growing number of game arcades which may have as many as 33 amusement machines.

Four major game arcades are operated in the Carbondale area. They are the Downstairs Arcade located at 6112 S. Illinois Ave., Crazy Horse Billiards located in the Campus Shopping Center, Aladdin's Castle located in the University Mall and Arcade, located in the Student Center.

Of the four, Downstairs arcade has the largest selection of machines with 20 pinball and 13 assorted arcade machines.

Aladdin's Castle is the newest and second largest arcade in Carbondale, with 12 pinball and 17 arcade machines. One thing that makes Aladdin's Castle stand out besides its being new is the prices of its games. Aladdin's Castle is the most expensive place to play pinball in Carbondale.

McClain, said that in 1966, a pinball game cost a nickel for a five-ball play. The price of pinball then increased to a dime for one five ball play or a quarter for three five ball plays. About two years ago, two five ball plays for a quarter was introduced.

At Aladdin's Castle, one will get two plays for a quarter, but the games have been shortened to three balls per play, or six balls for a quarter.

Stribling said that his machines are newer and therefore more expensive because of inflation and the services offered by the company.

Stribling said, "We pride our store on its cleanliness and upkeep." The pinball machines are rotated between other Aladdin's Castle stores. "We are trying to make the arcade more appealing to the family. We get a lot of young kids with their parents in here," Stribling said that his machines are cleaned and serviced continually.

However, McClain blamed vandalism for the increased cost.

McClain said that he installs a steel strap and lock across the front of his machines, a kickplate on the underside of the machine to protect the money box, and another steel strap and lock across the back of the upright part of the machine. McClain said he even puts a lock on the money box of some machines.

"A guy may get $10 or $15 dollars out of a machine and cause $100 dollars worth of damage."

McClain added that he had three full time mechanics fixing machines, and one other person, rebuilding machine cabinets destroyed by vandals.

McClain said that vandals break into the machines to rob the money box, or break into the upright cabinet to jimmy the machines and get free games.

In addition to this, some people might just be mad at a machine and kick it to pieces, he said.

People also use slugs or filed down pennies, pennies dipped in acid, or coins with strings attached to trick the machines, McClain said.

Food session set Thursday for managers

A workshop for food service managers employed by hospitals and nursing homes will be sponsored Thursday by the Division of Continuing Education.

The workshop will be held at the First Baptist church in Mt. Vernon from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The problems of supervising a food service, establishing grievance procedures and the impact of unionization will be discussed.

Consultants for the workshop are William Van Cleave, director of the Office of Personnel Management, American Hospital Association; and James Parker, assistant professor of the SIU Department of Educational Administration and Foundation. Registration fee for the workshop is $4.

Swimming trio keys for national titles

By Dave Wiczorek
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor
SDS—Students for a Democratic Society, right?

Well, yes, but that society hasn't been heard from lately and, in terms of SIU swimming, SDS really stands for the trio, Swenson, Delgado and Salerno. They plan to make a lot of noise at the NCAA championship in Cleveland, Ohio, April 27-28.

Sophomore Dave Swenson, junior Jorge Delgado and sophomore Mike Salerno, along with Steve Jack, Dave Boyd, Rick Fox, Dennis Roberts and Paul Schulz will be headed for Cleveland State over break, where they hope to finish in the top 10 teams.

The meet of the team is toughest where Swenson, Delgado and Salerno are concerned. Both Swenson and Salerno were at the NCAA last year as freshmen, and Delgado will be making his first trip, although he is a veteran of national competition.

All three agree that the meet will be tough, and Swenson says, "You never really know how you do until you get there, but I think I have a good chance."

"Swimming World" magazine has just released the best times from across the nation, and Swenson ranks fourth in the 1650-yard freestyle with a time of 15:42.7. That's 16 seconds behind the nation's leader, but times don't scare the native of Tacoma, Wash. "Those times just make you realize that you have to be at your peak going into the meet," Swenson said. "There'll be no second guessing. Every event will be real tight."

Swenson swam the same three events at last year's championship as he will this year—the 400 individual medley, 200-butterfly and 1650-freestyle. "It's important that I went and got the experience," Swenson says gratefully. "This is the best season I've had since I've been swimming, and a lot of it is a direct reflection on last. Gaining a lot of experience and swimming those events in the NCAA helped a lot." Swenson says "we was a bit nervous last year, being a freshman and all, but he hopes things will be different this time around."

"I'll probably be swimming in the final of the 1650, and that's at night and should be on television," he said. "But even with all the tough competition, that won't rattle me. I got the jitters in my stomach last year."

"I'm a little tired now, but I'm sure I'll be ready for the meet," Ecuadorian Delgado remarked confidently about his first trip to the college championships. "It's going to be real tough, though."

Delgado actually qualified for six individual events but, according to NCAA rules, can only compete in three, plus relays. He is probably most famous around the world for his fourth place finish behind Mark Spitz in the 200-butterfly at the '72 Olympics. This experience will not give him any advantage, Delgado claims.

"It probably will put more pressure on me," he anticipated. "Everyone will be expecting me to do good because of this experience. Every year, competition gets tougher. New swimmers keep coming—this meet will really be tough, but I think we're going to be tough, too."

Besides his three events—200-butterfly, 500-freestyle and 200-freestyle—Delgado also will anchor the 400- and 800-freestyle relays and race in a third, the 400-medley relay. To say the least, coach Bob Steele will be counting heavily on Delgado to score some points.

The Salukis faced one of their tougher schedules ever this past season, with Michigan, Wisconsin and Indiana on their slate, plus the Southern Collegiates and the National Independent Championships, and Salerno says it couldn't have been better.

"We had super competition all year, and those big meets really get you into the running of things because they're set up just like the NCAA championship," Salerno explained.

"I'm just going to swim and not feel the pressure," he said, hopefully. "I'm well rested and definitely ready."

Cycling starts

SIU's cyclists started the racing season Sunday with an impressive showing in Chattanooga, Tenn., by placing two riders in the top 10.

Racing in a driving rain on a course covered with two inches of water, SIU's Dave Casebeer finished eighth, a fraction behind the winning pack. Steve Loete was close behind in ninth. The winner was David Baird of the Nashville Bacing Club.

Bicycle handling was the critical factor, according to 11th place racer Ralph Campoverde. Maneuvering through nearly 50 cyclists on a tight course less than a mile long requires delicacy through the corners and power out of the corners.

To give an indication of the quality of the race, the Category I winner was U.S. Olympic Team racer Dave Chauner.

Beg pardon

The women's swimming nationals last weekend were held in Tempe, Ariz. Yesterday's story in the Daily Egyptian failed to mention the site.

Asked if he was satisfied with the team's showing, Casebeer replied that the race resulted in two finishes "in the money," plus valuable experience for the other SIU riders.

Besides Campoverde, Skip Ricketts finished 15th, with Frank Altschuler 15th in the junior category.

"The team should be strong for its next race April 6 in Chicago," Casebeer continued, adding that it is looking for a win at SIU's Campus Lake Criterium April 12.

Soccer starts

The SIU Soccer Club will begin its spring practice Wednesday with a 5:30 to 7 p.m. workout at McAndrew Stadium.

New coach for the club, Ibrahim Adel, will conduct practices four or five days a week.

Every day practice for 11 years pays

By Martha Sanford
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Four hours of hard practice seven days a week plus school and social life for 11 years is a lot of work. But that's what Sandi Gross has put into becoming a national champion in women's gymnastics.

The petite brunette is a member of SIU's elite class gymnasts and is the defending national champion in vaulting in collegiate competition. She presently is preparing for the regional qualifying meet for the nationals, where she will try to retain that title.

"Confidence is the biggest thing," said Sandi, in preparing for the upcoming meet, "and a smooth workout. If your workout goes well, then you build your confidence by knowing that you can perform the stunts."

"I guess that goes along with being prepared mentally, too, and getting enough sleep and eating right," she added.

Surprisingly, Coach Herb Vogel does not have the women on a set diet.

"Herb tells us when to lose or gain weight but not how," Sandi said. "He leaves that up to our better judgement."

"I presently weigh 103. I've found that that's the best weight for me." In 11 years, Sandi has had plenty of time to not only find her ideal weight, but also to build a respectable reputation in gymnastics circles.

Originally from Long Beach, Calif., she first got interested in gymnastics when she was eight years old. Her parents enrolled her in a nearby recreation program, and she soon became a member of the Scouts of Long Beach.

This same team also was the starting point for junior Stephanie Stromer and freshman Lynn Govin, who are also on the SIU team.

Sandi is ranked sixth all-around on the AAU team and went to Germany last fall with that squad. She also has been a member of the USGF team since she was 14 and participated in last year's elite national championships held at SIU.

"It's going to be a lot tougher to qualify this year, however, because a 9.0 average is required to qualify, over last year's 8.175," she said. "Also, the USGF requires four compulsory routines in addition to the four individual ones, which is double the work."

In her first year of collegiate competition, she was SIU's leading scorer and placed first in bars, vaulting and all-around at the regional qualifying meet.

"Coming to SIU was like a new start in gymnastics for me," said Sandi. "I had reached a kind of stagnant point, having worked so long with my old team and coach. Herb gives me much more self-confidence and has helped me to learn things that I never thought I could do. I'm performing better now than I ever have before."

"I have high team expectations, but, individually, the meet will be a lot tougher than last year," she said. "There are a lot of girls who have gotten better, and I just hope I can do as well."

Mini-soccer has variety

By Rick Korch
Student Writer

Sometimes as fast as hockey, other times as slow as baseball. Sometimes as hard-hitting as football, but not as high scoring as basketball.

That's what intramural mini-soccer is all about.

Now in its second year, 18 teams are playing mini-soccer, with five players on a squad. Of the 18 teams, five of them are comprised of mostly foreign players. Besides the three Arabian teams, the two others are Chinese and Latin.

Each team will play five games in Pulliam Hall Gym, and every team with a 500 or better record will be eligible for the playoffs during the first week of May. According to Dan Habel, graduate assistant in the Office of Recreation and Intramurals, no fewer than eight teams will make the playoffs.

"Mini-soccer is basically like soccer," Habel commented, "except that you can play the ball off the side walls."

The runnerup in last year's tournament, Latininos, one of the favorites in the league, went up against M.C. Escher in last Saturday's play. Dominating the game from the start, Latininos sprang out to an early lead and coasted to a 6-0 win. Another goal was called back because of an infraction on the play.

Unlike most of the other teams, Latininos had on-target passing, good ball handling and excellent roughing (really it's kicking).

Although roughing and checking is not supposed to be allowed, the players get away with as much as they can, which sometimes is quite a bit. Fights don't break out like they do in hockey, but, as in all sports, the players still get steamed up when the official seems to make a bad call.

About the only thing missing from mini-soccer is the lack of breakaways, with the forward going one-on-one against the goalie.

There's usually about one forfeit every week, but according to Habel, "That's because the players don't like to get up early on Saturday mornings."

Games start at 8:15 a.m. and run until about noon.

Looking to next year, Habel foresaw about five or 10 more teams participating in mini-soccer.

"With a little publicity, we could have had more than 18 teams this year," he commented.

Softball set

A meeting for all managers of men's intramural 16-inch softball teams has been set for Tuesday, April 1, at 4 p.m. in the Morris Library Auditorium.

League play will begin Saturday, April 5.

Roster blanks and additional information are available in the Office of Recreation and Intramurals, Room 128, SIU Arena, phone number 536-5521.

SIU baseball tilt postponed

The Saluki diamondmen again failed to get their season underway Tuesday, as rain postponed a scheduled contest at Murray, Ky.

The team will try again Wednesday at Murray State if the rain subsides early enough for the 3 p.m. game.

Pitt coach terms Joe 'outstanding'

By Ron Sutton
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

From now on, it will be just the pros judging Joe C. Meriweather.

Saturday, though, the 6-foot-11 senior Saluki center was playing on the collegiate level for the last time at Madison Square Garden in New York City.

That left room for one last observation by a collegiate coach—Pittsburgh's Charles "Buzz" Ridl.

"Meriweather's outstanding," the quiet, easy-mannered mentor remarked after the game. "He got hurt there, which probably handicapped him some. There's no doubt he'll go in the first round of the draft."

Meriweather was shaken up a little on a second half rebounding play, but came back to play some of his strongest ball of the year during that last 20 minutes of his collegiate career.

After scoring just eight points in the first half, he became unstoppable after intermission, pouring in 18 more in a valiant effort to pull the Salukis from behind. He finished with 12 of 20 fielders, but just two of six free throws, for a game high 26 points.

"We felt we had to front Meriweather—we couldn't double team him," Ridl said. "The people who have done that have really gotten burned. The other guys on this team can kill you if you do that."

"We did do the things we were hoping to against him," he said. "He still scored 26 points, but, without what we did, he could have had 40."

"He's among the best we've faced. Bo Ellis of Marquette is thinner and goes out from hoop and faces the basket more. Adrian Dantley of Notre Dame is a combination Meriweather-Ellis in that he has more range than Meriweather and muscles underneath like Ellis can't."

"Alex English of South Carolina has more finesse than Joe, but Joe positions well," he added. "When you're comparing him to those players, you're comparing him with the best."

Ridl's observations concerning Meriweather's positioning had to come from the second half, also. The leading rebounder in Saluki history was grabbing almost everything off the boards, finishing with almost one-fourth of the rebounds to be gotten in the contest.

Meriweather finished with 15 of SIU's 32 and of the 63 overall. Corky Abrams and Mel Hughlett were next for the Dogs with five apiece, while only Panther center Mel Bennett was higher.

The muscular 6-7 freshman nailed eight.

The Saluki center actually played some of his best ball over the final seven-and-a-half minutes with four fouls. He picked up a rather cheap offensive foul three minutes earlier, took a short rest, then came back in to battle the rest of the way.

"I told him and Corky (who also had four fouls), 'If you let up, you're over here with me on the bench,'" Saluki coach Paul Lambert explained. "Joe played a great second half."

He avoided mention of the first half, in which Meriweather missed a number of shots underneath, including one "Alley-Oop" set up by a perfect Perry Hines pass.

That one had the crowd aah-ing, then ooh-ing when he missed. After intermission, it was all "aah-ing."

His final bucket—an easy one underneath—with 36 seconds left boosted him past Seymour Bryson ('56-'59) into second place on the alltime SIU scoring list.

Charlie Vaughn ('59-'62), who, like Bryson, played four varsity seasons, had 2,088 career points. Meriweather had 1,536, and Bryson 1,535.

Ironically, Meriweather's final rebound in the closing seconds of the game gave him exactly 1,000 for his three-year career.

Saluki center Joe C. Meriweather looks for a pass from a teammate during Saturday's National Invitational Tournament in New York City. The 6-foot-11 senior scored 26 points and grabbed 15 rebounds against Pittsburgh's Mel Bennett, shown leaning on Meriweather here. Bennett countered with eight points and eight rebounds. Sutton Death

I'll always remember the 'lowlights'

By Ron Sutton
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

Why recall the highlights when the lowlights are more intriguing?

That's always been my philosophy. I saw Willie Mays one time in his career. What do I recall more clearly than his two home runs in that game? I recall that he didn't make one basket catch—and that he sprained an ankle tripping over first base in the seventh inning and had to leave the game!

Now, to me, that's much more intriguing.

Likewise, that's how I look back on the Salukis' NIT trip. The highlights, or "lowlights"?

First, there was the practice at Mount Vernon (Ind.) High School enroute to the airport at Evansville, where the team would fly to New York. Per chance, the city-wide grade school wrestling meet was being held there immediately after the Saluki workout, so dozens of pre-teens sat awe-struck on the sidelines as SIU practiced.

After about a half-hour, one youngster asked innocently, "Which one's Meriweather?" That's all right. In New York, the skyscrapers all looked the same to me, too.

Then there was the airplane flight. In the magazine at each seat was an article on the phenomenal fan interest in Midwest basketball at all levels. My apologies, but by the fourth paragraph or so, I was laughing too hard to go on.

The paragraph read something like, "At Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, where the Salukis think they may have the best center in the country in Joe C. Meriweather, there is not a seat to be found anywhere."

By a Chicago Tribune writer, no less! There goes my philosophy of "God, the country, then the Chicago Tribune."

Then there was New York, itself, and the City Squire Inn, on which Saluki enthusiast Al Green immediately began an interior decorating operation. Every elevator ride for the next three days was "baptified" with a "Saluki forecast: Meri-weather" sticker on the side panels.

After two days of eating hamburgers for the price of whole cows back home, it was on to Madison Square Garden. Trying to get the pre-game information booklet from the man "caring" for the press was as hopeless as trying to cross the New York streets on "Don't Walk."

If you lived west of New York City, you viewed the game from a press row in the general vicinity of the ceiling. If you lived west of the state of New York, you needed a passport.

Then there was the game, itself. Other than Joe C. Meriweather's brilliant second half to close out a likewise brilliant SIU career, it was Mike Glenn whom the fans took no time to identify with.

Similar to the Arena shouts of "Two! Two!" every time the sophomore perfectionist shot during home games were the Garden patrons' reactions of "Shoot! Shoot!" every time he got the ball in the second half. I don't think I have ever seen anything in sports (except the UCLA cheerleaders) more beautiful than a Mike Glenn shooting display.

And, finally, as the saying goes, into everyone's life a little rain must fall. In Tim Ricci's case, it was a downpour. Just picture the women swimmers who missed out on their lifelong goal of swimming in the nationals last weekend, and put Ricci in that situation—remembering he's a senior, and the women aren't.

Watching Ricci walk away after the traditional pre-game handshake between the captains at midcourt in his street clothes was depressing. As one cheerleader said tearfully after the game, "He had tears in his eyes when he was walking back to the bench."

I'm afraid it was the lowlight I'll remember most in a trip that had to be a career highlight for 10 other basketball players and most of the traveling party.
