Subcommittee OK s aid-draft law delay

By Vicki Olgeaty Staff Writer

A bill that would delay implementation of a law tying draft registration to financial aid was approved by the House Subcommittee on Postsecondary Education Wednesday.

The bill, introduced by U.S. Rep. Paul Simon. D-22nd District, will be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor, according to David Carle, Simon's press aide.

The bill would postpone implementation of the so-called Solomon Amendment until Feb.

The Solomon Amendment. which bars draft-age men from receiving federal student aid if they have not registered with the Selective Service, is scheduled to take effect July 1.

The bill, which would also require the General Accounting Office to audit the program for 14 months, will not be considered by the education and labor committee until April 16 at the earliest, Carle said.

The bill would also have to be approved by the House Com-mittee on Armed Services before the full House could consider it Carle said.

The postsecondary education the possecondary education subcommittee did not approve a bill, sponsored by Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., that would have delayed implementation of the law for 12 months. Another bill. introduced by Rep. Bob Edgar, D-Pa., that would have repealed the Solomon Amend-ment, was also rejected by the subcommittee, Carle said.

Simon introduced his bill after the subcommittee, which he chairs, conducted two days of hearings. Representatives of higher education testified that the proposed implementation regulations, as published in the Federal Register Jan. 27, would be an administrative burden to

In another subcommittee hearing Wednesday. Un-dersecretary of Education Gary Jones indicated that the Department of Education pepartment of Education planned to publish a revised set of procedures 30 days from now, Carle said.

English requirement change for foreign students supported

By James Derk Staff Writer

The Minority Affairs Commission of the Undergraduate Student Organization issued a report Wednesday in favor of the English Department's decision to change the English requirement for international requirement for international students.

The decision to require international students to take English 290 instead of Linguistics 290 had raised some complaints concerning the possibility that the new course may be too difficult.

After contacting the English Department and reviewing the problem, the Minority Affairs Commission decided to support the English Department.

The USO Academic Affairs Commission has been working with University officials on the proposal and has recommended that the cabinet table the idea.

The commission issued a report March 15 stating that adding the grades at this time would be a disservice to the students, since it would delay the arrival of the grade report.

Some students need the grade report for employment purort for employment pur-es and the additional delay commission said

The change would also be prohibitively expensive at this time, according to the report because more workers would have to spend additional hours manually entering the final exam grades. The existing computer program would have to be modified to accept the new entry

Director of Admissions and Records Kirby Browning said the extra time and money necessary to implement the change would be inappropriate in light of recent budget cuts.

Feds playing games with default figures

IF YOU LISTENED TO the government reports concerning student loans, particularly those figures cited by Education Secretary Terrence H. Bell, you might well believe that college students are a group of "deadbeats" when it comes to repaying

For example, according to the federal government, the national 1981 default rate on Guaranteed Student Loans (the most popular form of student loans) was 12.3 percent. It's an embarrassing figure, to be sure, and it is a figure that the Reagan administration es to rationalize cutbacks in loan programs

BUT THIS FIGURE ISN'T exactly true says Arthur M. Hauptman, a Washington, D.C. financial aid consultant.

Hauptman recently penned an article for the American Council on Education which states that the rate of default is really 3.8 percent And he explains why there is a difference between the federal government's contentions and what he says is a more accurate picture of the default situation.

The government uses a cumulative figure when figuring out — The government uses a cumulative figure when figuring out defaultment rates which means that the 1981 percentage cited—12.3 percent—is not reflective of, say, 1980-81. In reality, the 12.3 percent is the percentage of defaults from 1965 (when the Guaranteed Student Loan program was established) through 1981. The federal government does not tabulate annual figures. "The government had a lot of bad seasons" when the program began, according to Elaine El-Kahawaj, one of the researchers who worked with Hauptman. "For years the government just did not try to collect on the (defaulted) loans." Hauptman cites in his paper that many of the students who took out loans at the start of the program thought that they were grants, not loans. Some colleges deceived students into taking out loans to maintain enrollment. Before active government intervention, the figure for GSL default rate from 1965 through 1981 is 12.3 percent. After persuing those rate from 1965 through 1981 is 12.3 percent. After persuing those "deadbeats" the figure drops to 3.8 percent.

— The 12.3 percent figure, Hauptman cites, is also deceiving in that the figure reflects loan defaults before any attempt is made to collect on them. And loan defaults are made readily by both the government and the lending institutions.

Lending institutions, which provide the actual loan money, are quick to declare default on a student loan — that is after a payment is missed by the student for 120 days — because they will be promptly reimbursed by the federal government which guaranteed the loan in the first place. an in the first place.

The government, too, is eager to declare default on student loans. While the money is in the enrolled student's hands, the government pays the interest on the loan. By declaring default, the government can stop making the interest payments to the banks.

SO WHAT IS THE STATUS of Guaranteed Student Loans? Well, Hauptman writes that "...the vast majority (of federally-funded lan programs) are being repaid on a prompt and regular basis."
From 1985 through the end of 1982, the GLS program has made over 20 million worth of loans worth $35 billion. The default rate for other federally funded loans "such as the Small Business Administration, appears to be no better and is sometimes worse than that for student loans," states Hauptman.

AT SIU-C. STUDENT LOANS are the most popular form of student aid. In the top three federally connected loan programs, some 8.400 students borrowed nearly $19 million in 1981. There are no default figures available, according to a spokeperson. With federally funded loans being critical to students and to the University, and tuition expected to skyrocket in the near future, this is no time for the federal government to play games with figures in an effort to reduce or eliminate the student loan program.

nourishment. Stokes suffers from Crohn's disease, a condition in which the wall of the intestine becomes sore, inflamed and swollen.

"The machine I use is giving my digestive track a complete rest." Stokes said. "I'm eating pretty good compared to others. I'm getting all the vitamins and phosphorous that my body

Stokes, who has gained 13 pounds since she began using the machine, explained that the method of infusing nutrients into the bloodstream is called parenteral nutrition.

Since the intestinal track cannot digest or absorb enough nutrients to meet a body's needs, the machine allows Stokes to receive the calories, proteins, water, vitamins, minerals and electrolytes her body needs.

The nutrients run through a catheter inserted in her chest. Stokes said she is not restricted by the catheter except that she cannot go swimming or lift weights.

"When I first began using the machine it was a little scary because the lights would go off. and I wouldn't know what to do. I got used to it and now it's easy to operate and understand." she Teresa Stokes has adjusted to the machine that supplies her with auxients via a catheter inserted in her chest. Stokes suffers from an intestinal disorder that is presently incurable. She is to stay on the machine awaiting either a cure or surgery.

Because of her illness, Stokes has discovered a new outlook on life.

"It's made my outlook on life different." she said. "I wake up every morning and thank God I'm here. I wish to God I didn't have the disease, but it has been a positive experience."
She said she has also gatned a new perspective on her family. "Crohn's disease has made me realize how much I care about my family and how much about my family and how much I love them. Anybody who drives back and forth to Chicago so that I can get check-ups every couple of weeks is fantastic. Stokes explained. Although she remains op-timistic. Stokes said Crohn's disease has restricted her

"I don't eat and that is a big restriction. I didn't realize how much eating is a social thing. I miss it a lot, but I can go back to eating after I stop using the machine in five weeks," Stokes

Stokes discovered she had Crohn's disease after suffering severe stomach pains her senior year of high school. She said it took a year to diagnose because it can look like so many other

"It can took tike so many both things."

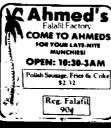

Surgery can be performed to remove the intestines, ac-cording to Stokes.

"I would be silly to get something like that done because I'm too young." she exclaimed. The doctors told me they might have a cure for Crohn's by 1984. This machine is saving me from surgery, so I'm going to wait before I jump into going to wait before I jump into

Stokes spent a week at the niversity of Chicago Billings University Hospital to learn how to prepare her daily nourishment, how to operate the machine she uses. and how to insert the tubing correctly

A manual explaining the process of feeding herself and operating the machine was specifically designed for Stokes by University of Chicago physicians

The other belongs to sophomore Lisa Coucci, also via Baylor, who is another converted field hockever. Sophomore left tielder Kathy Richert is the only other Saluki with a 300-plus average, currently batting at a 318 clip.

Rounding out the starting lineup are second baseman Susan Jones (.187), a Herrin treshman who was converted to treshman who was converted to the infield position after she earned the starting center field job in the fall. "We couldn't run well down there," Brechtelsbauer noted.

"They have a kind of red dirt that builds up. Sometimes our batters would be standing in a hole three or four inches deep at the plate. Conditions weren't as good as they usually are, and there was a lot of wind."

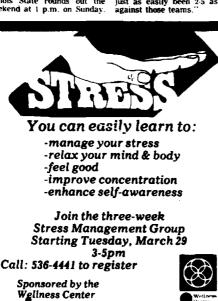

But Oklahoma isn't the only place where the wind comes place where the wind comes sweeping cross the plain. The recezes in Carbondale have been known to get pretty stiff, too. And that will probably be the condition the Salukis will have to deal with when they open their home season at 2 p.m. Thursday with a doubleheader against Eastern Michigan. Michigan

That twinbill will mark the Inat twinbill will mark the beginning of an eight-games-infour-days blitz for Brechtelsbauer's club. Following the EMU contests will be the SIU-C Invitational, an eight-team event beginning at 9 a.m. on Friday. A recently-scheduled doubleheader with Illinois State rounds out the weekend at 1 p.m. on Sunday.

This weekend should also mark the return of Stengel, who was unable to make the spring trip do to a battle with mononucleosis. According to Brectelsbauer, the junior ace is rested and has been giving a release by the Health Center to compete.

It's a long road to the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Association's inaugural tour-nament in May, but that's what the Salukis' whole season will be geared toward. And if their early season record against fiercely competitive Southwest teams is any indication of the teams is any indication of the Salukis potential, it appears they'll have as good a shot as anyone come tourney time. Even Brechtelsbauer appeared

"I'm pleased with the way we've played. I think we're about where we should be. I do feel we should have won one more game (against Arizona) in Oklahoma, but we could have just as easily been 2-5 as 5-2 against those teams."

Orienteering Club finding way out of the woods at SIU-C

It is always fun to take an occasional walk through the forest, checking out the wildlife and enjoying the fresh air and enjoying the fresh filtered through the trees

The Orienteering Club at SIU-Chas known this since the early C has known this since teaching 1970s. Orienteering is, simply put, the sport of getting from one point to another in a wilderness area with only a compass and a base map in the

According to Ackerman, students in Sweden are taught foreigners enter the meets because the whole population of Sweden would enter if it could.

The orienteering club in the S. is called the United States Orienteering Federation. The USOF has clubs scattered throughout the U.S. with its biggest clubs in St. Louis, which has a little over 300 members. and in New England, which has between 200-300 members. between 200-300 members. These clubs hold meets throughout the year. The current U.S. men's orienteering champ is Eric Weiman and for the women is 40-year-old Sharon Crawford.

There are some preparations before a meet can be conducted. The clubs find an area where they would like to hold the meet. They send an airplane over the area to take photographs, which are sent to Sweden and are turned into 1:7500 scale base

"Sweden is the only country which makes these maps," Ackerman said, "It's time

It costs $4,000 for a map It costs $4,000 for a map. Sweden then sends back only one map for the clubs. The clubs make more copies and then check them for accuracy. The clubs send orienteers into the areas to add, delete and modify the details

"For our last meet." Ackerman said, "we hired a couple of Norwegian women to check them for accuracy. They came here from Norway for a vacation and they ended up making a little of money on the side. It took them five to six weeks to check the area.

Bellissimo has had two ex-cellent outings in a row, and the sophomore righthander is on the verge of becoming one of the staff's mainstays.

"If he has another good outing then you can pretty well consider that the young man is on his way," said Jones. Wednesday's game was the beginning of a 14-game, 12-day homestand.

Where does Jones want his team to be at the end of that? "We'd like to be in Florida, where it's warm." he said.

Pitchers pass the test in win over Greenville

By Dan Devine Associate Sports Editor

Saluki basebali coach Itchy Jones used Wednesday's game against Greenville as an ex-perimental lab for a struggling pitching staff. His hitters, a proven lot, he left alone.

Jones got five tough innings from a Rick Wysocki under orders not to rely on his curveball, two innings from junior Mike Blumhorst in his first mound appearance at SIII-C, the first inning of the year from Rich Koch, and an inning from a Tom Caulfield looking to regain Tom Caulfield looking to regain hurlers. The Panther weren't experimenting — by the game's end they were just trying to get the Salukis out so everybody could get out of the cold.

"This is the advantage of having games like this." said Jones, satisfied that his pitchers had shown some good signs. "We've had 15 games where we haven't had the opportunity to use some people."

Most impressive perhaps. was Wysocki's five imning stint. He had been rocked in Florida. and entered the game with a

So Wyscoki was under orders to throw only one curve ball per

"He'd lost confidence in his fastball," said Jones, "He has to throw the fastball. I gave him

With the fastball back in his reportoire, Wysocki allowed five hits and two runs in five innings, while striking out six and walking two. He raised his record to 2-2.

"I feel real good now," he aid, "It's about time."

"He's just a good athlete."

The Saluki coach said the same thing about Koch, who threw for the first time this spring. With a .327 average thus far. Jones had been happy to keep him at shortstop regularly If it wasn't for 12 errors. Koch would be having a perfect

The experimenting is over. The previously ever-changing outfield roster has been stabilized. The pitching rotation is set. And the only order of business remaining for the Saluki softballers to take care of is listed as top priority; win ball

And that's exactly what the disciples of Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer have been doing thus far. While many of their classmates were trashing hotels in Florida, SIU-C's diamond m riorida, SIU-C's diamond gang found consolation in trashing opposing teams in Norman, Okla. That binge added up to a sweet 5-2 record to kick off the season. More impressive than that, however, is the fact that the Saluki pitching staff, of which Doma Dapson, Sunny Clark, Meredith Stengel.
