Stamp costs could stick SIU-C

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

The increase in the cost of first-class mail could cost the University as much as $120,000, Harry D. Wirth, director of Service Enterprises, said.

However, he said that some departments in the University probably will decrease the amount of mail they send, which would make the increase less severe.

Wirth said he has not been officially notified of increases in other types of postage and could not release information about them. He said he should receive the information Friday.

The Postal Board of Governors on Tuesday approved a 14-percent increase — from 22 cents to 25 cents — in the cost of mailing a letter first class. After the first ounce, the cost of first-class mail will rise 16 percent, from 17 cents an ounce to 20 cents an ounce. The last time postal rates increased was in February 1985.

Wirth based the $120,000

figure on a 18-percent cost increase because "we get quite a substantial amount of mail that is over one ounce," he said.

Wirth said the University spends about $800,000 a year on first-class mail and about $1.1 million overall on mail. He said the biggest users of mail were the bursar's office, admissions and records, disbursements, housing and Morris Library.

Shirley Lillard-Maine, assistant director for management in admissions and records, has taken measures to decrease postage costs, such as mailing the spring class schedules with the fall report cards. She said this method did not work as well in spring because many students have not registered by the time report cards are issued.

"So many of our things we just can't do anything about," she said. "We'll be looking at anything the post office offers" to save money.

Wirth said postage falls

Rhoades may be coach

By Dana DeBeaumont
and Troy Taylor
Staff Writers

Troy State University football coach Rick Rhoades is the apparent choice to be SIU-C's new head football coach. The announcement is expected at a news conference at 2 p.m. today.

Rhoades could not be reached for comment at his home in Troy, Ala., but sources in the SIU-C athletics department confirmed the appointment Wednesday night.

None of the other five candidates is expected to attend the news conference today in the Student Center video lounge, fourth floor.

Dave Roberts, head football coach at the Western Kentucky University in Bowling Green, said he withdrew his candidacy Tuesday.

Roberts said Rhoades would be an excellent choice. Rhoades has a 28-7-1 record at Troy State in three years.

Larry McDaniel, SIU-C's interim head football coach, declined comment but said he would not be present at the news conference.

Del Miller, of the University of Iowa, confirmed he was not selected for the job.

A woman who answered the home phone of Bruce Craddock, head coach at Western Illinois University, said Craddock would be in his office in Macomb today.

Tom Lichtenberg, an assistant coach at Ohio State, could not be reached, but sources earlier had said he was not among the final three candidates.

Former SIU-C head coach Ray Dorr resigned Feb. 25 to accept an assistant coaching job at the University of Southern California.

Law students to aid Cubans

Refugees want freedom U.S. style

By Katherine M. Lober
Student Writer

Eight law students from the local chapter of the National Lawyers Guild will represent Cuban detainees at deportation hearings at the Marion Federal Penitentiary in April.

The students will represent 30 to 35 Cuban refugees being held at Marion, Katherine Black, student coordinator of the project, said.

The hearings are tentatively set to begin April 6, Black said. More students are expected to join the case after the group has a clearer picture of the inmates' needs, she said.

The Cubans were sent to Marion after rioting inmates destroyed the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, one of two detention centers for Cuban refugees, Black said.

The inmates rioted after they were threatened with deportation to Cuba. Many of the Cuban refugees have criminal records, and the Reagan administration contends they are not legitimate political refugees.

The hearings are part of a nationwide campaign known as Project Due Process.

House passes budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House, moving with unaccustomed cooperation, approved Wednesday a $1.1 trillion fiscal 1989 budget aimed at cutting the federal deficit and matching guidelines already negotiated with President Reagan.

The resolution, passed 319-102, is a House Budget Committee rewrite of Reagan's fiscal 1989 spending plan, submitted to Congress last month. Many basic items are the same in both proposals; differences occur primarily in the distribution of money for certain domestic accounts.

Supporters say both measures surpass requirements of the balanced-budget law, which calls for the federal deficit to be cut to $136 billion for the government's fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

The committee calculates that its plan would shrink the deficit to $134 billion; Reagan says his plan would place the deficit just below $130 billion. Opponents have questioned the legitimacy of both sets of calculations.

The House proposal — the first in the committee's 14-year history to be endorsed without objection — "shows the budget process can work," said Chairman William Gray, D-Pa.

Democrats and Republicans carried what the committee's ranking Republican, Delbert Latta of Ohio, called their "unprecedented bipartisan" to the House floor. On the final vote, 92 of the House's 177 Republicans and 227 of 256 Democrats joined in support of the plan.

Only a handful objected to the budget committee's package.

"I still think it is too much increased spending over the current fiscal year and I see no reason to allow that increase," said Rep. Denny Smith, R-Ore.

Rep. George Gekas, R-Pa., complained that the budget committee's package was developed using "false or hoped-for economic assumptions that may not be the case."

U.S., Iran condemn Iraq for alleged village attack

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — The United States, the Red Cross and Iran condemned Iraq Wednesday for allegedly carrying out a blistering poison gas attack last week on a Kurdish border village where Iran said as many as 5,000 people were killed. Iraq promptly denied it had launched the chemical warfare strike at its own village of Halabja, which had been occupied by Iranian troops, and accused Iran of carrying out the bombing.

Bank wants to relieve pressure on Noriega

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — The National Bank of Panama is negotiating with private foreign banks to provide $20 million in cash to relieve some of the U.S. and domestic pressure on Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega to resign, banking and diplomatic sources said Wednesday. If the foreign bank transfer is completed quickly, it would circumvent a U.S. freeze on Panamanian funds deposited in the American banks and possibly pacify some government workers who have joined a nationwide general strike this week.

Austria to pay reparations to Nazis' victims

VIENNA (UPI) — Austria agreed to pay reparations to victims of the Nazis for the first time Wednesday as Parliament voted to provide $6.5 million despite objections that the figure is too low and represents "an insult." The law approved by a vote of 176-7 provides for one-time payments of between $175 and $400 to more than 16,000 victims and the families of those who died as a result of persecution.

Israeli parliament legalizes homosexuality

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Homosexuality is now legal in the land of Sodom and Gomorrah. Israel's parliament, the Knesset, Tuesday repealed an Israeli law dating back to British Mandate-era Palestine that had declared as illegal sex between consenting adults of the same gender. The 120-member body legalized homosexuality in adopting a package of sex and sex-crime laws, which included harsher sentences for rapists, Knesset spokeswoman Sarah Yitzhaki said Wednesday.

Helms continues his objections of INF treaty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee soundly rejected four "killer amendments" to the INF treaty Wednesday and, after a brief stall by Sen. Jesse Helms, decided the historic pact will get a final committee vote March 29. None of the amendments drew more than three votes, all Republican, and although Helms opted to drop most of the 36 he had planned, he still intends to press many of his treaty objections on the floor.

U.S. and Soviets set next summit for Moscow

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. and Soviet negotiators achieved enough progress in talks this week to agree Wednesday on a Memorial Day summit in Moscow between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. With Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze at his side in the Rose Garden, Reagan announced plans to visit Moscow from May 29 to June 2 for his fourth conference with Gorbachev. Unlike their last meeting, Dec. 8-10 in Washington, the two leaders will not likely have an arms control agreement to sign.

Reagan revokes trade privileges for Panama

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan formally revoked an estimated $2 million a year in trade privileges for Panama Wednesday as part of the economic pressure the United States is exerting on Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega. Reagan signed an executive order denying Panama reduced tariffs and other benefits that had been available under the General System of Preferences and the Caribbean Basin Initiative.

Doror gives students chance to attend college

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Thirty-seven fifth graders and their parents learned Wednesday an anonymous donor to the "I Have a Dream" Foundation is making it possible for them to attend college if they graduate from high school. The surprise announcement came during a meeting with students, parents and foundation officials at Clay Elementary School, a racially mixed school on the city's north side. Most of the children did not appear to understand when it was announced the fifth graders had been selected for the program, but their parents gasped and applauded, and several brushed away tears.

Group: High schoolers will not miss out on Halloween

By Dana DeBeaumont
Staff Writer

The Halloween Core Committee's plan to stop high school students from celebrating Halloween in Carbondale by sending speakers to the schools won't work, members of the committee's safety subcommittee said Wednesday.

Representatives of the Public Relations Student Society of America, which is the group coordinating the safety drive, said they distributed questionnaires and interviewed 51 seniors at Anna-Jonesboro High School on whether speakers would influence them to stay out of Carbondale during Halloween weekend.

Sending speakers to schools would be useless because Halloween in Carbondale is high school students' version of Spring Break, Ed Buerger, safety drive chairman, said.

The Halloween Core Committee met at El Greco Restaurant Wednesday morning.

Ed Kipp, a coordinator of the safety effort for PRSSA, said

Many high school students have celebrated Halloween in Carbondale in the past and will continue to no matter what people tell them.

many high school students have celebrated Halloween in Carbondale in the past and will continue to no matter what people tell them.

"More than half of high school seniors have been to Halloween (in Carbondale) at least once," Kipp said. "They say, 'We know we're underage, but we're very careful. We get alcohol elsewhere and bring it in.' Some drink it (the alcohol) before they get here."

Kathy Lober, a PRSSA safety drive coordinator, said all 51 students surveyed told them not to waste time sending speakers because spending "Halloween (in Carbondale) was the thing to do."

Students, however, did say they think twice about coming to Carbondale when they see a roadblock, Lober said.

Trish Richey, safety campaign chairwoman, suggested films on safety and drunk driving be shown at the schools without mentioning Halloween. The committee doesn't want to promote the celebration, she said.

Committee members agreed that high school principals and chapters of Students Against Drunk Driving and Mothers Against Drunk Driving probably will be contacted for help on the campaign.

A Carbondale city attorney's report of underage drinking violations during Halloween weekend was presented, but Police Chief Ed Hogan said the report wasn't an accurate reflection of violations.

Approximately 12 people who were under 17 years old were referred to their parents instead of being sent to court, Hogan said.

The report indicated that most towns, with the exception of Carbondale and Skokie, were represented with only one underage drinking violation each.

Association report echoes American thinking

By Dana DeBeaumont
Staff Writer

Southern Illinoisans can be part of a project that may influence the American agenda for the United Nations, Thomas Saville, president of the Southern Illinois Chapter of the United Nations Association of the USA, said.

Saville, conference coordinator for international programs and services, said UN Association chapters across the country will examine American foreign policy, make suggestions on the policy and present recommendations to the new administration and to Congress.

"The report says this is what people in America are saying," Saville said. "It's not just what people in a think tank in California think, but what the people in Carbondale, the people across the country think."

The reports of study panels across the country will be evaluated and summarized by the UN Associations national organization and then they will be published, Saville said. The findings of each study panel also will be published in an abstract and distributed to the other panels, he said.

The study, entitled "A Stronger Hand: Shaping an American Agenda for a more Effective United Nations," will examine arms control and disarmament, human rights, health, the environment, drug abuse, labor and trade, the World Court, conflict resolution and UN management and decision-making.

Saville said he wants to organize a panel by mid-April. He said April and May will be the main months for research because many students and faculty will be gone for the summer.

Anyone who can devote 30 to 40 hours to research and discuss foreign relations is welcome to participate in the study, Hiram Lesar, chairman of the study said.

"It takes time to get a grasp on the subject," Lesar said.

The UN Association is closely related to the University, but open to the community, Saville said.

The UN Association, in the past, has influenced decisions in government, Lesar said. When funds to the United Nations were cut, the UN Association released a statement protesting the cuts and funds were restored, Lesar said.

SHARED GOVERNANCE AND COLLECTIVE BARGAINING A RESPONSE TO THE HINDERSMAN MEMO

In a memo to all faculty and AP staff, Charles Hindersman, Vice President for Financial Affairs, speaking for the SIU Administration, argues that we (faculty and staff) must choose between collective bargaining and the traditions of shared governance.

Can it be that the administration really does not perceive the irony in such an argument?

1. Shared governance is a process by which faculty and administration participate as equals in a joint decision-making process. It is not occasional consultation, often after-the-fact, followed by unilateral decision-making by the Administration. Above all, it means shared authority. Ask yourself: Does this kind of genuine shared governance actually exist at SIUC today? If we don't have real shared governance (and we don't) why shouldn't we have collective bargaining?
2. But the fact is that collective bargaining is shared governance. It is clearly a more effective form of shared governance than the model that currently exists at SIUC. Collective bargaining really is a procedure by which faculty and administration participate as equals in a joint decision-making process, and in which authority actually is shared.
3. What's more, all of the current research shows that collective bargaining strengthens the traditional institutions of shared governance (i.e., Senates, Councils, Committees, etc.) This is one of the most important consequences of collective bargaining, according to Barbara Lee and other recognized specialists in the field. Nevertheless, the Administration chooses to ignore all of this research in order to pretend that collective bargaining is incompatible with shared governance and that we, as faculty, must choose one or the other. The reality is that collective bargaining is the only means by which faculty and staff can achieve genuine shared governance under the conditions that prevail in academe today.
4. Whenever the Administration sets forth its view on collective bargaining it consistently refers to itself as "the University" (i.e., "The University also takes the position that collective bargaining for the SIUC faculty and AP staff is not inevitable.") Should we not ask this question: Who exactly is "the University"? Is it the Administration and the Board of Trustees as the Hindersman memo implies? Are the faculty and AP staff not an integral part of the University community? When did the University community adopt the position espoused by the Administration? Perhaps when administrative spokespersons set forth their opinions they should refrain from referring to themselves as "the University."
5. It goes without saying that the Administration believes that collective bargaining is "neither desirable nor inevitable." Of course they do not desire it. After all, it might lead to genuine shared governance between the Administration and the rest of the University community (i.e., the faculty and professional staff.)

Relegate football to lower division

AS IT SEARCHES for a new head football coach, the University should re-evaluate the direction of Saluki sports and stop putting so much emphasis on football.

Football has hurt the quality of SIU-C's so-called minor sports by forcing drastic budget cuts over the past decade.

In addition, the University spends altogether too much money on things other than academics. SIU-C must return to educating students.

The football team does nothing but cost the University money. The team should be dropped from NCAA Division I-AA to Division III, where football costs a lot less. In Division III, no athletic scholarships are allowed and most schools have no more than three or four coaches.

For fiscal year 1989, $215,000 is budgeted for football scholarships alone. Combine that with the salaries of eight football coaches, which total about $200,000, and it becomes clear that well over $300,000 could be saved by dropping to Division III. Allowing for reduced ticket revenues and the loss of SIU-C's yearly "money game" against a bigger school, the net savings probably would be around $100,000.

DROPPING TO DIVISION III undoubtedly would cause quite a bit of protest among Saluki football fans. But the University must realize what its strengths are and nurture them. Football is not one of SIU-C's strengths.

Granted, SIU-C won the Division I-AA national championship in 1983. But since then the Salukis have been anything but a powerhouse. One year of glory does not justify the financial drain on the sports in which the University traditionally does well - namely, track and field, baseball, gymnastics, basketball and swimming. More recently, the entire women's sports program has thrived, but its future success depends on the elimination of the high cost of football.

It is typical of SIU-C to avoid making hard choices as to which things the University wants to do well, and which things must be eliminated to make this possible. In athletics as well as academics, SIU-C gradually has cut every program until the ones that once were great now are mediocre, as are the newer programs.

IT SEEMS RATHER silly for a university that is in such dire financial straits for its academic programs to be pouring so much money into something that has absolutely nothing to do with academics.

The primary mission of SIU-C is to educate and intercollegiate athletics can be an important part of a student's education. But collegiate sports have outgrown their role and now are viewed by many as being more important than academics. This is ridiculous.

In short, college sports have gone bad. But SIU-C has a chance to counteract the damage big-time sports do to the real function of the University. By dropping to Division III football, SIU-C would show its commitment to academics and, at the same time, would allow its minor sports to return to the top of the heap.

So, instead of hiring a new football coach at $50,000 a year or more, let's take that money and give it to Morris Library. Then let's give the rest of the coaches and the players the option to stay and compete at Division III or to seek their fortunes elsewhere. It wouldn't be easy to do, but if SIU-C is serious about its academic mission, it is necessary.

Motorist irked at foolish joggers recommends more common sense

As spring approaches and temperatures rise, so does the number of bicyclists and joggers on Chautauqua and west Pleasant Hill Roads.

These people obviously have been attracted to these roads by their challenging hills and long, steep grades. However, many of these athletic individuals apparently have forgotten the real purpose of the roads and believe they are bike and jogging paths.

I have traveled these roads daily for two years and have had countless near misses with joggers and bicyclists who were in the middle of the right lane. There also have been many irritating situations when I have been stuck behind a pack of joggers or bicyclists and, as traffic stacked up, the athletes refused to move into single file. In one such situation, a group learned this was not a fair fight as a pickup truck ahead of me shoved three of them into a ditch after following them for two slow miles.

While topping a hill recently, it was nearly impossible for me to stop or safely swerve to miss a jogger as a school bus approached. This jogger was running down the middle of my lane, and, only after I honked and locked my brakes, jumped into the ditch for safety. When I stopped to make sure he was not hurt, I was attacked with a shower of rocks and obscenities.

I am certain that even rabbits and opossums, with their limited intelligence, do not blame the driver when they find themselves in similar situations. They either learn they should not run down the middle of the highway or...well, we've all seen dead bunnies.

Many people driving on these and other roads are more fed up than myself and look at hitting careless joggers and bicyclists as a game. You know the one: depending on the mass, targets can be worth anywhere between 10 and 1000 points. This point system also is commonly used around campus, as pedestrians avoid crosswalks and jaywalk believing the approaching cars will stop.

I am not writing this to be a smart aleck or to infuriate people who are serious about maintaining good health. I am sure there are many joggers and bicyclists who follow safety rules only to be harassed by incompetent drivers. This letter is not to them.

I am seriously concerned that as long as a few joggers and bicyclists believe they should have control of the road, someone is going to be hurt and I don't want to be involved. I am not a sadist or a masochist, but if and when the time comes again that I have to choose between a head-on collision with a school bus or splatting some idiot running down the middle of my lane, I bet I get at least 750 points. — Melodye Jamison, senior, advanced technical studies and computer information processing

'Ironweed' review misses mark

Unselfishly, I stride forth to rescue those same people who might read Phyllis Coon's review of "Ironweed" and, as a result, miss a very good movie.

I fear for the innocent victim who, giving the review a cursory read, accidentally makes the following sentence mean something: "The movie and the novel are full of drunks and dirt, but the movie takes away from the reader's imagination." The movie taketh away the description, but it giveth back the image. So what?

Contrary to what Coon's wrote, "Ironweed" does not reveal the "hypocrisy" of those who would help bums; it illustrated the futility of such an endeavor even as it shows that some people neither practice nor share middle-class values. Is that so bad to know?

I'm not surprised that Coon thinks the "movie goes by too fast for true understanding," but I doubt if anyone else agrees. One need not be a college professor - and I'm not - to have a fair understanding of what is going on in "Ironweed."

One point remains incontrovertible: author William Kennedy and those who made the movie will be astounded and deeply disappointed to learn that their aim was to make Francis and Helen into "special bums." Moreover, they'll be damned glad they failed. — Dan Seifers, civil service

Rev. Jed Smock will be missed by those who appreciate diversity

By Toby Eckert
Staff Writer

As I was walking near the free forum area a few weeks ago, enjoying the first hints of spring, I wondered how long it would be before the Rev. Jed Smock would once again bring his hell-fire-and-brimstone ravings to campus. I recalled how strange it was my first year here to walk unsuspectingly across the overpass that connects the residence halls to campus and suddenly be accosted by a total stranger, admonishing me to watch my soul in this den of iniquity.

I also recalled the walk back to the dorms in the afternoon. By this time a group of students had gathered around the indefatigable preacher. The group sucked in an ever increasing number of passers-by — its pull was irresistible.

The air was thick with skepticism and more than a little fear and uncertainty. Students taunted Jed as he singled them out for a moral flailing. His body would gyrate, filled, I suppose, with whatever energy he derived from his beliefs. His accusatory finger would make a broad circle singling out the "unholy" among the crowd — a woman in a mini-skirt, a long-haired young man in a Van Halen T-shirt.

As it turns out, my musings that day were fortuitous. A letter from an alumnus awaited me in my mailbox at the news room. Tucked inside the letter was an article about Jed from the Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch. I gave the story to a reporter and told him to track down the evangelist.

Several days later, the news came — Jed had decided to trade preaching for teaching.

Although I was generally affronted by Jed's uncouth tactics and seeming intolerance, I also was a bit melancholy about the prospect of never hearing his ravings again. It seemed that yet another person who had helped to make SIU-C an interesting, offbeat place had faded into oblivion, opting for the quiet life.

Like so many things now gone from Carbondale, Jed was an anomaly. He came into the midst of what for him was the belly of the Beast and tried with all his might to sway a few souls to his brand of redemption — without a television camera, a choir or a million-dollar budget.

Jed brought out the best and the worst in the University community. In a few people he no doubt provoked thought and reflection, which are always good, no matter what stimulates them. He made some of us laugh, and provided more than a few stories on a slow news day.

But Jed had a way of bringing out the ugly side of us as well. Like other animals, human beings, when cornered, strike out in fear for their survival. Jed challenged our beliefs and we responded with sneers and showers of shaving cream. Our intolerance made a mockery of the free forum area.

Now that Jed is gone, spring once again will be tranquil. The quiet, well-mannered Menonites — if they show — present little challenge to the majority of us who are straightjacketed by our beliefs.

It's too bad. People like Jed fulfilled a function that colleges and universities abandoned long ago — challenging us to challenge our beliefs, to question the status quo.

No matter that Jed's message was Christian. It might just as well have been atheist. What's important is that his message was heard, so that it could stimulate more thought than the stale pabulum that so often is served to us dressed as a college education.

Pedestrians who block bikers' way may experience the taste of tire

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

Pedestrians beware. The rogue bicyclist has been stepping up his efforts to put bike tire tracks on the backs of pedestrians in the "bike only" zones.

Cycling life is bad enough with the Saluki Patrol making life miserable for campus bicyclists, but the pedestrians — with their omnipotent right of way — make things unbearable by hogging the sidewalks and bike paths.

Riding a bike is a great mode of transportation. It's quicker than walking, more aerobic and just as stress-relieving, plus you don't have to vulture for a space at the bike rack.

But these positive aspects are dashed by ignorant pedestrians who can't make up their minds about which way they are going.

Now, the overpasses get pretty crowded in between classes, so it's OK if a few pedestrians spill over into the bike lanes.

But when pedestrians think they must walk in the bike lanes, bicyclists must practice strategic cycling. Herds of pedestrians must be penetrated by rapidly locating successive holes and gaps.

Pedestrians don't trust the bicyclists, though. When they see a bicycle coming they freeze in their tracks, probably out of fear. By halting their progress, they have ruined carefully planned strategies, and they end up in the way. If they would keep moving, everything would be fine.

Even worse is the pedestrian who tries to guess the bicyclist's next move by sidestepping left and right.

If pedestrians would keep a straight and narrow path, there wouldn't be anyone getting hurt. Cyclists and pedestrians could travel in harmony, even in the Faner breezeway and the paths of Thompson Woods.

The Saluki Patrol should issue tickets to pedestrians for walking in the bike lanes on the overpass. That would be justice.

Idiots who blatantly walk in the bike lanes, even when the pedestrian path isn't crowded, stress me out. They are just asking to be introduced to the taste of bike tire.

If our cops-in-training won't enforce the law and bring justice to these rogue pedestrians, I may have to take the law into my own handlebars.

Smock may be on his way to the big time

Is it possible that we are seeing the evolution of Jed Smock from a two-bit evangelist to a television mega-minister? Smock has put in his public relations time, exalting condemnation of those he doesn't see fit. Maybe one day Smock will have his own television show with his own 800 number.

Evangelists are similar in that they each preach their own interpretation of the same book, each one has a ranking system for his or her concept of sin and each one believes that he is one step closer to enlightenment than the rest of us.

One could create a classic psychological profile that the majority of self-proclaimed evangelists neatly fit into. The profile would be similar to that of a megalomaniac. The sad thing is that many of these paraisical madmen are able to snake charm people who have feelings of guilt, insecurity and loneliness. The followers become close-minded and tend to see the world through the eyes of the evangelists' limited points of view. "Let them think you've grabbed them by the soul and their minds and pocketbooks will follow."

Never hesitate to see through people like Smock, and don't feel guilty about doing it. They gain power by suppressing the truth and misleading the innocent.

Evangelists such as Jed Smock offer humanity a heavy burden to carry instead of a guiding light. —James A. Wolf, junior, aviation management Committee reported that the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service is holding more than 3,800 Cuban refugees in detention. The detainees arrived with the 125,000 Cubans that entered the country during the 1980 boatlift.

The refugees were subjected to strict screening processes upon their arrival because of rumors that Fidel Castro had emptied his jails and mental hospitals prior to the boatlift. None of the refugees had proper entry papers and were classified as "excludable aliens."

"Many of these Cubans are being held for committing a relatively minor crime in Cuba and admitting it when they got to the United States, or committing some minor infraction in the states like a traffic violation," Black said.

The law students have not been guaranteed access to files or even a chance to speak with the detainees, Black said. A 15-minute interview with the detainees through an interpreter probably will be conducted before the hearings, she said.

There will be no opening statements or cross examinations, Black added, just closing statements from the Cubans' representatives.

A major problem, Black said, is that even if the board grants release, each detainee must have a sponsor that will help him or her find shelter, work and other necessities. Few citizens are sympathetic to aliens, she added.

Some refugee advocates have had an 80-percent success rate in getting release granted, said Black, but many Cubans are still being held until sponsors can be obtained.

The idea of participating in the project was brought to the chapter by Carbondale lawyer Donna H. Kolb, who also is a member of the National Lawyers Guild.

A group that has participated in the project in Atlanta will be training and keeping in touch with the law students, Black said.

under the contractual services part of the budget, which also includes repairs of office equipment, duplicating and other services. He said money within that budget area could be reallocated by each department if necessary.

Lilla'd-Maine said admissions and records has been using bulk rate mail more often to save money.

But she said it takes more of the workers' time to sort bulk rate mail, which offsets the savings in postage.

Wirth said a meeting between the post office and the University's biggest users of postage to discuss ways to work with the increase has been scheduled for March 31.

Police Blotter

A burglar stole property valued at $770 from the residence of a University student at 401 E. College St. during spring break, Carbondale police said.

A microwave oven, portable television, motorcycle helmet and clothes belonging to Lonnie Austin Jr., 18, were stolen. Police have no suspects.

A burglar stole a graphic equalizer and a case containing 50 cassette tapes from a University student's car between 10 p.m. Tuesday and 8 a.m. Wednesday, Carbondale police said. The stolen property, valued at $545, belonged to Donald Schoemaker, 24, of 319 N. Illinois Ave. The burglary occurred while the car was parked at his residence. Police have no suspects.

A Chicago man was charged with damage to state property and underage possession of alcohol after student resident advisers found him climbing through a window he had allegedly broken at Alien III Tuesday, University police said.

Thomas J. McInerney, 19, was arrested and taken to Jackson County Jail to await a court appearance, police said. McInerney allegedly was trying to enter a friend's room at the dormitory after finding the outer doors locked, police said. Police reports said the suspect had been drinking.

A DuQuoin man was arrested and charged with punching out a window at the Saluki Gifts and More store, 200 W. Freeman St., early Wednesday morning, Carbondale police said.

Charles A. Voile, 23, of DuQuoin, was treated and taken to Jackson County Jail, police said. Damage was estimated at over $300.

Telefund short of goal

The WSIU telefund fell $41,000 short of its goal, but raised $159,000 over 17 days.

"Our goal was half of our programming budget," Vicky Freund, acting development director, said. "It was a big try, but that is what we set it at."

With the money the telefund raised, Freund said, the station will be able to keep its present programming budget. "It was a very good telefund," she said. "We came very close to our goal. We got a lot of new members."

Although the telefund has ended, Freund said, "People are more than willing to donate any time of year."

Donations can be made by contacting the development office at 549-9748.

Clarification

It was incorrectly reported in Tuesday's edition of the Daily Egyptian that there would be no future funding for the Illinois Home Energy Assistance Program.

While funds for IHEAP have run out for this year, funds are likely to become available in November for next winter's program.

Correction

The DE incorrectly stated the location of the motorcycle riding courses in Tuesday's edition. The location for the first part of the course is at the Physical Plant Complex. The session times are from 5:30 to 8:30 Friday and from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. To register, call the Motorcycle Rider Program at 453-2877.

U.S. involvement in Honduras defended, soldiers to come home

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (UPI) — The Honduran government defended itself Wednesday against growing criticism it illegally invited U.S. troops into Honduras, and the Pentagon said U.S. soldiers would be withdrawn on schedule, starting Monday.

A U.S. defense official said the Pentagon would stick to its original plan and bring the U.S. troops home Monday from the Central American republic where they were sent by President Reagan who cited a call for help from Honduras because of an incursion of Nicaraguan soldiers.

The 3,200 soldiers, most of them in their seventh day in Honduras, conducted combat training exercises alongside Honduran troops in rugged terrain at four different locations in the southern part of the country.

In a speech before Congress, Foreign Minister Carlos Lopez Contreras defended the U.S. presence, saying the American soldiers "came here to protect us from a foreign invasion into national territory."

Reports of Sandinista soldiers crossing into Honduras in pursuit of U.S.-backed Contra rebels triggered Reagan's decision. Managua has since pulled its troops back.

In Congress Tuesday night, Liberal Party deputies and the small left-of-center Christian Democratic Party demanded the immediate withdrawal of all U.S. troops from Honduras, including the 3,500 stationed there before the airlift last week.

The conservative National Party, as well as much of the Honduran news media, criticized President Jose Azcona Hoyo for not notifying Congress last week before he requested U.S. military aid.

James Miller raised similar questions in a letter sent Tuesday to Gray, citing reports that the committee plan may exceed the previously negotiated levels for domestic spending.

Gray denied those reports and deferred the committee's calculations, saying they adhered to spending levels negotiated last year by the White House and congressional leaders and were developed using the most recent economic assumptions.

Under the committee plan, military spending authority would be set at $299.5 billion in fiscal 1989. Another $169.2 billion would be designated for domestic discretionary spending. Both figures were established in last fall's agreement with the White House, fashioned under the pressure of the Black Monday stock market collapse Oct. 17.

The measure includes no new taxes, aside from the $14 billion prescribed in the second-phase of the two-year tax package included in the White House-Congress agreement.

Other sections would grant increases large enough to compensate for inflation in programs to assist low-income families, hire more air traffic controllers and provide bigger increases for programs to aid education, the homeless and AIDS research and to fight drug abuse.

WIDB General Manager Joe Hood, left, and DJ Mark Jaroski at work in the broadcasting booth on the fourth floor of the Student Center Wednesday afternoon.

Commercial future unclear for WIDB

By Richard Nunez
Entertainment Editor

Expectations for the student run radio station WIDB to obtain a transmitter and go commercial will not be realized in the near future, Joe Hood, general manager of the station, said.

"We don't foresee it happening," Hood said. "There are too many things standing in the way."

The station recently bought a control board, which transmits the station's broadcasts, at a cost of more than $12,000, Hood said. The station obtained a three-to-four-month loan for the purchase and is having difficulties repaying it.

There are many other obstacles that would have to be overcome before the station could purchase a transmitter, Hood said.

"There are no available frequencies right now," Hood said. "We can't just grab one, unless one is donated or we have the money to buy one."

Even if the station were to obtain a frequency, it would need a broadcasting license from the Federal Communications Commission, Hood said. If the FCC did grant WIDB a license, several professional stations in the area would object because WIDB might infringe upon their business.

"Broadcasting is their livelihood," Hood said. "To us, it's only a learning experience."

Hood added that if the station were to go commercial, personnel from the radio and television department probably would intervene and take over some of the staff positions, such as the general manager and program director positions.

"We would have to follow rules that we don't have to follow now," Hood said. "The format would have to definitely change."

"We would be appealing to a larger audience," he said. "We'd still offer an alternative brand of music, because there is still WCIL, which is Top 40, the Eagle, which broadcasts classic rock, supposedly, and some country and western stations."

If the Federal Communications Commission did grant the station a license, several professional radio stations in the area would object because WIDB might infringe upon their business.

"We would be a more toned-down version of what we are now," he said.

Hood said the station bases its format on the guidelines of CMJ New Music Report, a rock music magazine designed for college radio stations.

The station's broadcast schedule includes three main formats of progressive rock, urban contemporary and jazz, as well as reggae and blues. The station also broadcasts news and sports information.

WIDB, formed in 1970, broadcasted from the basement of Wright I dormitory until it moved its facilities to the fourth floor of the Student Center in March 1987.

"Everyone is a little more proud," Hood said. "(The new location) gives everyone a more professional attitude. Wright I was a pit and a lot of people didn't take their jobs seriously."

WIDB is entirely staffed by students, who work on a voluntary basis and do not get paid for their work. "They (staffers) work here strictly for the learning experience," Hood said.

WIDB's income is supplied mainly through commercial advertising and outside promotions, such as the benefit the stations held at Hangar 9 a few weeks ago.

The benefit was held to obtain money toward repayment of the loan for the new control board, Hood said. The station received more than $200. It will hold another benefit March 31 - an easter egg hunt for children in Turley Park for which the station will receive donations from businesses and organizations.

Study: S. Illinois labor market could attract more businesses

By Steven Starke
Staff Writer

The high unemployment rate and low average wage scale in Southern Illinois could provide a basis for future economic growth, according to a labor market study conducted by the Program for Effective Participatory Systems.

The poor situation of the Southern Illinois labor market right now is both good and bad, Ronald M. Mason, director of the program and associate professor of political science, said Wednesday.

"If it is true that companies are moved by the availability of labor and the attractiveness of being able to hire employees at less wage than would probably be necessary in other areas, (this situation) could be seen as a positive thing," Mason said.

"But it is bad in the sense that it is a terrible time to be unemployed and trying to seek employment within Southern Illinois," he continued. "The prospects of getting a well-paying job are, I wouldn't say remote, but are not high."

Mason said, "If there was any message we'd like to get out to the nation, it is that we have people here available for employment at reasonable rates."

The report, which is based on Illinois Department of Employment Security data for July 1987, found 9,880 unemployed workers in the region who appeared on official Illinois unemployment records.

Although this number may be high, Mason said, it is likely that unemployment is under-reported because some unemployed people do not register for benefits, have already exhausted their benefits or are ineligible for benefits.

"The unemployment problem in Southern Illinois is likely to be worse than the numbers indicated," the report said.

The study also revealed that the average wage for positions filled through the employment security department was $3.92 per hour. Average pay for unfilled positions was $4.13 per hour. Both figures represent wages from 60 different occupations.

According to a summary of the study, however, the report is limited. First, it relies only on Illinois Department of Employment Security data. Second, only figures from one month are reported. Thus the notion of seasonal variations and trends cannot be examined, the report indicated.

Employment security department data for the entire state revealed that 10,000 unemployed workers were on official state unemployment rosters in July 1987.

Court team takes second

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

The law school's Illinois Moot Court team won second place in a statewide competition held March 11 and 12 in Springfield.

"It was a team effort," William Hardy, a team member, said. "We all did real well."

The first place team was John Marshall Law School of Chicago.

The Illinois Moot Court team has three members. They are John Kim, a third year law student and Kerry Trytek and Hardy, second-year law students.

Hardy explained that in Illinois the competition included eight law schools.

"In December we were given a case that we researched and wrote a brief for," Hardy said.

The team then turned the brief into the moot court and after four preliminary rounds was chosen to compete in the final round of arguments, Hardy said. The team's brief won second place for best brief.

"We argue for 30 minutes in each round," Hardy said. "How we split our time up depends on what side of the case we are arguing, the defense or prosecution."

The competition in Springfield was an appeal to the Supreme Court of a case that already had been through the appellate court system, Hardy said.

Including the Illinois team, the law school has four moot court teams—the National, the International and the American Bar Association.

After their first year in law school, students can try out to be selected for one of the teams, Hardy said.

"It's good experience for anyone who is interested in the debate," he said.

Illinois Supreme Court upholds portion of DUI suspension law

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — A portion of the state law allowing automatic suspension of drivers licenses for drunken driving arrests and the issuance of special driving permits by judges was upheld Wednesday by the Supreme Court.

In the Kane County case, the court rejected arguments by a motorist that the summary suspension of her driver's license was unfair because it does not apply to all drunken driving situations, such as an offense on private property, nor does it apply to driving under the influence of drugs. In addition, the motorist said the law does not provide for a hearing before driving privileges are suspended.

"We conclude that the summary suspension procedure ... materially advances the state's interest in public safety and imposes an insubstantial risk of erroneously depriving motorists of their privilege to drive," Justice Daniel Ward wrote for the court.

In the same ruling, the court upheld the section of the law that permits judges to grant special driving permits for motorists to drive to work and during medical emergencies, ruling it does not require the courts to perform duties of the executive branch of government.

"Once again the justices have upheld tough drunk driving laws enacted by the General Assembly and Governor Thompson as part of an intensive effort to make our highways safer," said Mike Lawrence, spokesman for Secretary of State Jim Edgar. "It takes tough laws, it takes good enforcement of those laws and it takes the backing of the courts. We are winning the war against drunk driving, although it will take even more effort."

In October the court struck down other challenges to the law which contended the statute limited what issues could be brought out a DUI hearing. At that time justices said a motorist charged with DUI is not limited to certain issues in his hearing and could challenge the validity of a DUI test.

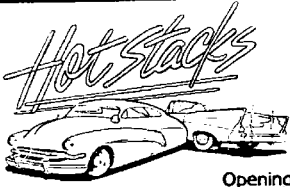

The law took effect Jan. 1, 1986, as part of a comprehensive drunken driving package. Under the law, a first-time DUI offender receives an automatic three-month suspension for registering a 0.10 or more on a blood-alcohol test. A driver who refuses to take the test receives an automatic six-month suspension.

In another DUI decision handed down Wednesday by the court, the justices ruled that written statements by police officers that a DUI arrest has been made can be verified at a summary suspension hearing held at a later date.

The ruling overturned circuit and appellate court rulings from Kankakee and Iroquois counties striking down the license suspensions of 14 motorists. The drivers had contended that the statements signed by the arresting officers attesting to a drunken driving violation were not sworn statements verified by a person licensed to administer oaths.

But the Supreme Court ruled the Law Enforcement Sworn Reports, which trigger the summary suspension of drivers licenses, could be amended in a hearing to verify their accuracy.

Official says FAA slow on safe rules

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In an unusual criticism, Transportation Secretary Jim Burnley told Congress Wednesday the Federal Aviation Administration has failed to quickly and aggressively promote aviation safety.

Appearing before a Senate aviation subcommittee, Burnley said it takes the FAA, whose job is to keep the skies safe and run the air traffic control system, more than a year and a half to push through safety regulations.

"Over the last five years the average time from the FAA's first notice to the final rule has been about 19 months, compared with an average of 32 months over the five-year period of 1978-1983," Burnley said. "I think we can further improve rulemaking procedures."

Burnley, whose department is in charge of the FAA, said the agency needs to undergo structural changes to keep up with the growing demands of the aviation system.

"The men and women of the FAA are highly competent and dedicated people, but it is not reasonable to ask them to be both helpmate and watchdog to the aviation industry," Burnley said.

"After 30 years of public and congressional frustration and concern, I believe it is time to recognize that the FAA as it was structured in 1958 is an experiment which has failed," he said.

Congress is considering legislation that would establish an independent FAA.

Video says understanding the Third World is important

By Edward Rahe
Staff Writer

Understanding why some Bolivian farmers grow coca plants to make cocaine instead of food crops may help combat the drug epidemic in this country.

That advice was part of "Bringing the Third World to Campus and Community," a videotape presentation stressing the importance of understanding the interdependence of the United States and lesser developed nations.

The presentation showed educators how to use international connections in their communities to learn how conditions in the Third World affect conditions in America.

About 20 College of Education faculty members attended the seminar sponsored by International Programs and Services. The videotape, produced by the Consortium for International Cooperation in Higher Education, illustrated how other colleges and universities have used international connections to develop new curriculum at the primary and secondary school levels.

The curriculum was based on a project by noted journalist John Hamilton, author of

The videotape illustrated how other colleges and universities have used international connections to develop new curriculum at the primary and secondary school level.

"Main Street America and the Third World."

Hamilton's book is a collection of articles that points out many hidden economic and political connections between small towns in America and the Third World.

One article dealt with a shoe plant in Blackstone, Va., that closed because of increased competition from Brazil. Several members of the community were quick to blame Brazil for the loss of jobs in Blackstone.

According to the article, Brazilian officials countered the blame by saying the only way Brazil can pay its $105-billion debt to the United States is by exporting shoes.

Maggie Flanagan of the SIUC Community Development Center said that in order to combat situations such as those in Blackstone, people must understand how international connections can affect their own community.

Flanagan, a member of the Society for International Development, often speaks to community groups about how connections with the Third World affect life in their communities.

Church groups become more interested in their foreign projects when they learn just what their money is being spent on, Flanagan said. They also find out how useful their project is, she said.

Flanagan added that as a result of getting involved in or learning about a Third World connection, an individual or group can learn to understand the underlying issues affecting international relations. Church project people learn more about the culture they are helping and then have a better understanding of how the culture works.

"It is important to get people to talk about the issues," Flanagan said.

World hunger comes to Bates College

LEWISTON, Maine (UPI)—Bates College students dining in the college cafeteria today will eat either roast beef, simple vegetables or rice and water to represent typical diets in the First, Second and Third Worlds, Bates officials said Wednesday.

About 900 students are expected to take part in the special meal, which was planned as part of Hunger Awareness Week at the college.

Before entering the cafeteria, the students are to draw lots. Officials said 15 percent of the students will get First World tickets, and will be served a roast beef dinner. Another 20 percent will get Second World tickets, and will be served a simple vegetarian meal. The remaining 65 percent are to be served plain rice and water.

"The 15 percent in the First World will get a fruit appetizer, roast beef and baked potato served by waiters in linen jackets," said Claire Lavallee, a spokesperson for the Bates chaplain's office. "The 20 percent in the Second World eat vegetable dishes, and the remaining 65 percent simply get rice and water."

Bates officials said the percentages mirror the world's populations in each of the three economic groups.

"We wanted to do something dramatic that would make people aware of what most of the world gets to eat," said Chip Purrington, a senior who is a member of the Bates Chapel Board, which is sponsoring the dinner.

The Bates students have been enthusiastic about the idea, Purrington said. He said 70 percent of the students who normally eat their meals at the Memorial Commons have signed up to participate in the meal.

Money saved by serving the simple meal will be donated to hunger relief, Purrington said.

Besides the dinner, Hunger Awareness Week is being observed with a lecture by Bill McNamara of Bread For The World, a hunger organization; and a slide show entitled "Hunger."

Golden State coach resigns; executive VP offered job

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Golden State Coach George Karl, whose team fell to 32 games below .500 this season after advancing to the second round of the playoffs last year, resigned Wednesday.

Team President Dan Finanne said assistant coach Ed Gregory would take over as interim coach the remainder of the 1987-88 season for the 16-48 Warriors. He added that former Milwaukee Bucks Coach Don Nelson, currently Golden State's executive vice president, would be offered the permanent job starting next season.

"The pressures of losing, combined with personal frustrations, led to my decision," said Karl in a written statement.

Karl, who was in his second season as the Warriors coach, captured the fancy of Bay Area basketball fans last year when he directed Golden State to its first playoff berth in 10

The Warriors defeated Utah in the first round, but lost to the eventual NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers in the Western Conference semifinals.

Karl opened the 1987-88 season with great optimism, but that quickly dissipated under an avalanche of trades and injuries. Before the season started, leading scorer and team captain Purvis Short was traded to the Houston Rockets.

When losses continued to mount early in the season, Nelson decided on drastic action. First, starting guard Chris Mullin was convinced to undergo treatment for alcohol abuse and missed a month of the season.

One night later, center Joe Barry Carroll and point guard Sleepy Floyd were traded to Houston for center Ralph Sampson and guard Steve Harris.

Purdue coach relaxed about NCAA game

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI) — Purdue's Gene Keady demonstrates none of the nervous tension that seems to envelop college basketball coaches in the NCAA Tournament.

The Purdue head coach couldn't be more relaxed as his club prepares for its Friday night NCAA Midwest regional against Kansas State.

"I'm just being myself," Keady said. "Basically, if I'm not as uptight — and my wife would probably disagree with you about that — it's because of my players. It's just a joy being around them."

"This is probably the most aware team I've ever had. I've said many times they know more about what's going on in the outside world than any other team I've ever had. They might even know more than (ESPN announcer) Dick Vitale about it."

Purdue, top seed in the Midwest, is a veteran team led by seniors — guards Troy Lewis and Everette Stephens plus forward Todd Mitchell.

Junior center Melvin McCants has improved as the season progressed, junior forward Kip Jones is a well-rounded player and the Boilermakers' bench has performed superbly.

Purdue outclassed the Big Ten field and now has advanced to the NCAA Regionals for the first time under Keady, in his eighth year.

The Big Ten by and large hasn't fared well in the NCAA tournament during the decade, except for Indiana's titles. Michigan has come under much criticism over the years because it hasn't been able to win a subregional. Keady deals with the "choking" label deftly.

"Usually in golf, when I play, it's not choking," Keady said. "I'm not worth a dang. I don't think we choked — we got beat by better teams."

"We've had great success here as far as playing regular season teams. I don't know that we're over the hump — we're still climbing the mountain."

"If we get beat by one point by Kansas State on Friday night, you can call it choking. But I'd say we got beat by a better team."

Keady thinks the experiences his team has been through has toughened it. Purdue would have been sole Big Ten champions two years in a row except Michigan ripped it badly in the final game of the 1986-87 regular season.

Soldier Field's turf to be replaced with real grass

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago Bears fans will be able to buy a piece of history — the artificial turf that is being taken out of Soldier Field and replaced with real grass.

Chicago Park District officials, who decided to convert the field to natural turf on Tuesday, say they hope to raise at least $200,000 by selling chunks of the artificial covering to fans.

The board awarded a $101,000 contract to Fed and Son of Chicago to remove the turf, with a $5,000 bonus if the turf is not damaged.

They will begin taking up the turf next week, with the installation of the natural turf slated to begin on April 15. The installation of the real thing is expected to cost $547,000, but officials say they can defray some of the cost with the souvenir sales.

Turf Surfaces Co., of Michigan has been awarded the contract for the new field. The new field will be equipped with a special drainage system to keep levels of moisture on the field constant, officials said. They decided against heating the outdoor field, which would have raised the price by about $1 million.

Park district officials were scheduled to meet with an official of Sports Graphics next week to discuss a marketing plan for the old turf. Some ideas discussed Tuesday included manufacturing coasters and wall plaques one save and a 0.00 ERA in 3.1 innings thus far. Last season, the entire Saluki bullpen had only three saves.

By the end of the weekend, Jones hopes to have established lineups against lefties and righties.

Against right-handers, Hall moves to third, Locke goes to first and Matt Giegling catches.

Expect to see outfielders Jeff Nelson, Shaun Lewis and Dale Meyer in the lineup at times during the series until Jones settles on a lineup.

Despite the team's success in Florida, Jones, who has a career mark of 652-305, realizes there is a lot of room for improvement.

"Coaches always want a lot of things," he said. "We're probably the greediest people in the world. We want each kid to improve and play as close to his potential as he can. We have to keep getting better."

"If we don't get any better than we are right now, we're going to have a very mediocre year. If we continue to improve and pick up where we left off a few days ago in Miami, we can be a strong ballclub by the end of the season."

Intracor was prepared to use flood lights to spray the urethane Wednesday night if the wind died down.

When Intracor sprayed the urethane about two weeks ago, the wind blew the substance over the fence and the spray damaged about 20 cars, Hunt said. It cost the company $1,800 to have the cars returned to their original state, he said.

"It cost a lot of money," Hunt said. "We had to have (the urethane) buffed out."

Rain also has the potential to hold up the urethane and striping process. The striping process will take a day and a half to complete.

If the worst happens and the track is not finished, DeNoon said the visiting teams are ready to compete at either site.

"The teams that are coming down all secured lodging in Carbondale and Cape Girardeau," he said.

DeNoon said waiting for the track to be completed has had an effect on his athletes.

"If it's affecting me in such a negative way I have to feel my athletes are affected by me," he said.

Cornell doesn't think his runners are worried about the delays.

"I don't think it really bothers them at all," he said. "All they have to do is show up and run. The hardest part is getting everything organized."

Early in the week, the coaches were optimistic that the track would be finished in time.

"Two days ago I called all the coaches and told them we were having the meet here," Cornell said.

Evansville to defend title Friday at Saluki Invitational

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

Once softball coach Kay Brechtelsbauer makes final her list of umpire assignments today, everything will be ready for Friday's first round of the Saluki Invitational.

The nine-team field is balanced, Brechtelsbauer said.

"About the only thing you can say for sure about our tournament is that the unexpected always seems to happen," she said. "Everyone in the tournament is capable of winning it."

All games will be played at IAW Fields, on Grand Avenue across from the Recreation Center. The tournament opens at 9 a.m. with defending champ Evansville (6-5) taking on Northern Illinois (10-2) on the north field and Bradley (6-5) facing De Paul (1-1) on the south field.

SIU-C, 8-4 overall and coming off a fourth-place finish at the Seminole Invitational at Florida State last week, plays its first home game against Northern Illinois at noon.

The tournament concludes Saturday. The championship game will be at 3 p.m.

If there is a favorite to win, Northern Illinois would be it. The Huskies lost 2-1 to No. 7 Florida State in the final of the Seminole Invitational on Sunday.

All-American Jill Justin is Northern Illinois' offensive threat. She led the nation with a .503 average last season. "She can hit the ball with anybody," Brechtelsbauer said. "She hits for power and average."

Western Illinois, ranked No. 13 in the preseason, returned from a spring trip in California with a 6-6 record. The Westwinds are defending Gateway champs, and return MVP Lisa DaRocha at catcher. Senior pitcher Brenda Heyl is 3-3, but has a 0.53 earned run average.

The Salukis play Ball State at 1:30 p.m. Friday. The Cardinals (5-7) are led by senior outfielder Denise Davies and junior outfielder Patty Haupt. Davis is hitting .371 and Haupt .364.

"They have a different style," Brechtelsbauer said. "Ball State will try to press us. They run a lot, good balance of speed and hitting."

SIU-C plays twice Saturday. The Salukis meet De Paul at 10:30 a.m. and Western

Time running out on track workers

By Stephanie Wood
Staff Writer

A meet without a track. That is the problem the men's and women's track teams are facing as their first home track meets of the season are only two days away.

The men are scheduled to compete against Ball State, Illinois State and Southeast Missouri State. The women will be host to Purdue, Illinois, Indiana State, Western Illinois and Southeast Missouri State. If the track is not completed, the meet will be moved to Southeast Missouri State's facilities in Cape Girardeau, Mo.

"We haven't officially announced it but it looks pretty impossible now," Charlotte West, interim athletics director, said Wednesday night. "We ought to (decide) as soon as it's light and we can see the weather." The forecaster for today is showers or thunderstorms with winds from the south at 15-30 mph.

The track needs to have another coat of moisture-cured urethane and have the lines painted.

If the urethane has not been sprayed by noon, the track won't be ready by Saturday, women's track coach Don DeNoon said. Urethane is used as a sealant to protect the track. The process will take three to four hours.

"If the track isn't sealed (today), we are going to have to move the meet to Cape Girardeau," DeNoon said.

Men's coach Bill Cornell said, "Obviously we'd like to have the meet here. I've got my fingers crossed that they'll finish it." Intracor, out of Portland, Oregon, is the company contracted to finish the track. Workers came to Carbondale Feb. 29 to finish the work, but the weather has not cooperated.

"We're at the mercy of the weather," Dan Hunt, Intracor's supervisor of the project, said Wednesday night. "We're just waiting for wind to stop."

Women's tennis, high winds whip Carleton College

By Jeff Grieser
Staff Writer

The weather was far from ideal for tennis Wednesday afternoon, but the women's team managed to overcome the conditions and whip Carleton College, 9-0 at the University Tennis Courts.

The dual match, scheduled for 3 p.m., didn't begin until after 4 p.m., as the Carleton team lost its way. The match was played in overcast skies and cold, gusting winds.

"The wind makes it really hard to play good tennis," Coach Judy Auld said. "You have to just try and use it to your advantage. We're lucky that we got this one in."

Carleton was simply not strong enough for the Salukis. SIU-C swept the singles matches, all but one in straight sets.

The players were moved up a notch because No. 2 Beth Boardman was out with a sore foot. Auld said the injury occurred from overuse on the spring trip and that Boardman would be ready for this weekend.

Maria Coch finished her No. 6 match in less than 45 minutes. She won easily, 6-0, 6-0. Ellen Moellering downed Sara Campbell, 6-1, in the first set, then struggled a bit in the second set but still won, 7-5.

No. 2 Dana Cherebetiu had more problems with the wind than Carleton's Leslie Gale, who she beat 6-3, 6-1. "The wind was just terrible," Cherebetiu said. "You can't evaluate your game when it is so windy. I think she (Gale) was good, but she was not consistent."

Missy Jeffrey and Carleton's Julie Bateman played the longest match of the afternoon, with Jeffrey finally pulling it out in three sets. Sue Steuby and Julie Burgess cruised to easy victories at the Nos. 4 and 5 positions.

"I thought we played well despite the conditions," Auld said. "I think it was good for us to play a match in the middle of the week."

The Salukis shook up the doubles lineup to get every one in, Auld said.

Cherebetiu and Jeffrey played a pro set because of the late start and won 10-3 at No. 1. Sue Steuby and Julie Burgess won their seventh in a row at No. 2, 6-3, 6-0. Michele Toye, a freshman, and Sherri Knight, a senior, were inserted in the No. 3 spot and won easily, 6-2, 6-2.

Auld said that an easier match may have been good for her team right now. SIU-C plays Principia College, Northern Illinois, and Eastern Kentucky this weekend at the University Courts.

Who was tracking the weather...

I'm tired of excuses about the completion of the new track at McAndrew Stadium.

Men's and women's track coaches Bill Cornell and Don DeNoon share my feelings.

The track was scheduled to be finished "Aug. 10 or 15," DeNoon said.

The actual work didn't even start until after the deadline.

The primary excuse in the whole project has been the weather. You can't tell me that there has not been at least four workable days since Feb. 29.

That was the date Intracor, the company from Portland, Oregon contracted to lay the track, arrived in Carbondale to finish the job. It is now March 24 and the track is still two days away from being completed. It is also two days until the track teams are scheduled to have invitations at McAndrew.

While excuses are piling up, athletes, coaches and administrators are getting impatient.

But then I hear the continued excuse for the whole project. We need a new track to get good runners to come to school here.

Good runners are good runners no matter what surface they are running on.

But since the track has promised to be superb, I am expecting to see that reflected in our athletes' performances.

Itchy excited about home opener

By Dave Miller
Staff Writer

It's opening day at Abe Martin Field.

After a 6-4 start in Florida, the Saluki baseball team begins a four-day, eight-game homestand with a doubleheader against St. Mary's at 1 p.m. today.

"It's always exciting to come back and play in front of your home crowd," Coach Itchy Jones said. "Hopefully we'll have a good crowd because our players have worked hard."

This year's edition of the Salukis is characterized by good speed and good defense. The Salukis stole 24 bases in 29 attempts on their spring trip. The team is especially strong

Students still get in free

For the first season, admission will be charged to watch Saluki baseball; however, SIU-C students can still see the game for free with a valid identification card.

Individual tickets are $3 for adults and $1 for high school students a day under.

"There's nothing wrong with it," Coach Itchy Jones said. "We're good entertainers. Our kids will put on a good show. I don't think the majority of the fans are going to complain about the price."

up the middle with Rick Gaebel at second base, Dave Wrona at shortstop and Doug Shields in center field.

Although the Salukis do not have a glaring weakness, Jones is concerned about the depth of the pitching staff.

"You always have to be worried about your pitching," Jones said. "(The homestand) will give us an opportunity to use all of our pitchers and find out what pitchers are going to help us during the season."

"We will be more patient with guys like Dale Kisten and the established pitchers. The younger pitchers we probably won't be as patient with because so many of them alike. We could probably just put one in and take one out if they have problems rather than letting one of them sit out there and struggle."

Either Kisten, Tim Hollmann or Chris Bend will be the starting pitcher for game one with Rick Shipley starting the second game. Kisten is 2-1 while the others have seen limited action and have not been involved in a decision.

Larry Beattie, the Salukis' ace reliever who sat out last season with a sore arm, has
