USG may not pay radio station's way

Official: WIDB could go off air next year if funding for equipment is not approved.

By Dave Katzman
DE Associate Editor

The Undergraduate Student Government's Finance Committee decided not to fund WIDB for next year until it can determine whether the station is important enough to keep, a finance committee member says.

Morgan Grammer, WIDB chief engineer, said the decision, reached at a meeting between the Finance Committee and WIDB officials

Saturday, will keep the station from buying the equipment it needs to get back on the air.

"We're at a stage where it's essentially useless for us to do anything with the equipment we have," he said. "The bulk of the equipment is too old — we're talking 20 to 25 years in some cases."

Grammer said broadcast equipment typically should be replaced every three to five years. He said some of the equipment used at WIDB is more than 25 years old.

WIDB has been off the air since Feb. 22 because of a broken distribution amplifier. The distribution amplifier breaks up an outgoing signal so it can be heard on multiple channels. In WIDB's case, the channels include cable carrier, FM and speakers in the Student Center.

Al Harper, WIDB general manager, said the station, which was allocated $6,750 by USG last year, asked for $62,663 this year. This would be added to $10,000 WIDB recently received from Student Affairs to keep the station going.

Of the total amount, $15,000 is targeted for WIDB's operating budget, with the remainder needed to get the station back on the air, Harper said.

David Vingren, USG Thompson Point senator and a member of the Finance Committee, said USG has to find out who else is willing to help WIDB financially before it can decide how much money to allocate the station.

"If nobody else is going to help them out, we can't afford to do it ourselves," he said. "If we did, every RSO (registered student organization) would have to take pretty significant cuts."

Vingren said the money requested by WIDB is 43 percent of the total allocated to priority two RSOs.

Eric Bottom, USG College of Business Administration senator and chairman of the Finance Committee, said he told WIDB to investigate alternative funding sources before meeting with the committee next week.

"We told them we want them to come back April 3 with a picture of what they need," he said.

Bottom said the Finance Committee asked WIDB to assemble a group of radio experts that could determine the importance of each piece of requested equipment.

Harper said the new equipment is needed to train students for what they will be working on in the professional world.

"We need the equipment to teach the students coming in, but no one wants to give us the money," he said. "It's kind of hard when you've got improperly working equipment. That tends to discourage our people."

No injuries, two arrests follow suspected arson

By Kendra Helmer
Daily Egyptian Reporter

An aggravated arson Thursday at Egyptian Apartments, 510 S. University Ave., resulted in no injuries and two arrests, Carbondale Police say.

At 5:15 a.m., the police and fire department responded to a fire alarm at the apartments.

Police said a hallway on the third floor was full of smoke, but the fire was found to have been extinguished.

"The damage to the building was very minimal," Lt. Bob Goro said.

Police said two men started the fire with cigarette lighters and paint thinner.

Officers arrested Thomas M. Wodarczyk, 24, a senior in art from Belleville, and Jason D. Tanner, 22, of Carbondale.

Wodarczyk allegedly fled from police on foot, but was later apprehended.

He was charged with aggravated arson and resisting/obstructing a peace officer.

Tanner was arrested at 6 p.m. and was charged with aggravated arson.

"They apparently set the fire for excitement," Goro said.

Bond has been set at $25,000 each for the suspects.

"The bond was set so high, because they set a fire in a building where people live," Goro said. "People could have died if it had been worse."

Wodarczyk posted $2,500 and was released on Friday.

Tanner, as of Sunday, was still in Jackson County Jail.

Carjacking foiled

Student resists alleged attempt to steal vehicle

By Kendra Helmer
Daily Egyptian Reporter

An SIUC student escaped without injury following an attempted carjacking March 21, Carbondale police say.

Anthony S. Giacchetti, 23, a senior in radio and television from Lemont, was approached by a man as he got into his car in the parking lot of the Eastgate Shopping Center in the 600 Block of East Walnut Street, police said.

The man allegedly asked Giacchetti for directions.

Police said the suspect then grabbed Giacchetti by the hand and threatened to kill him if he did not get out of the car.

"The suspect didn't have a weapon, but he was a very large individual," Lt. Bob Goro said.

Police said Giacchetti kicked the suspect, who then left and fled on foot.

The suspect is described as a black male, 30 years old, 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighing 300-325 pounds. He was wearing a dark-colored, waist-length coat.

Giacchetti could not be reached for comment.

Military actions at home cause concern for Taiwanese students

By Erik Bush
Daily Egyptian Reporter

As the first democratic elections in Taiwan were taking place Saturday, Jung-Pak Choi, a junior in art and design from Taiwan, said concern for his family overshadows the implications of this historic event.

"It is a great thing that the voters are doing back home," he said. "Democracy is something all Taiwanese believe in, but the threat to my family, the thoughts of war with China — these things concern me greatly."

In response to Taiwan's drive for democracy, China has been conducting military maneuvers off the coast of this union of 20 million people in an unsuccessful attempt to intimidate Taiwanese voters.

At a demonstration by the Taiwanese Student Association Friday, Hsiang-Ming Teng, a doctoral candidate in international studies from Taiwan, who attends the University of Denver, said China's military provocation is aimed at intimidating Taiwanese citizens.

Teng, who is visiting friends at SIUC, said he does not believe Taiwan's push for democracy should be blamed for provoking a war with China.

"I believe in a unified China, but not now," he said. "Taiwan does not want to live under a government that does not listen to its

CHEAP CHICKEN LEGS FLOOD RUSSIAN MARKET — MOSCOW—Russian officials have cried foul over the quality of American chickens flooding the market, threatening to ban their import and setting off a trade war that has ruffled feathers on both sides. The issue has risen to the highest levels in the past month, including Russian Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin and U.S. Vice President Al Gore, as he forms the stakes of $550 million of American poultry sales to Russia. Even former President Bush is involved, sort of. The chicken quarrels favored here — unlike the white meat preferred by Americans — are known as Bush's legs, named for the presidential administration during which they were first allowed into Russia. The cheap chicken legs originally stocked almost bare shelves, but now selling for less than a dollar a pound, they are still snapped up by ruble-pinchin Russian shoppers, who can't afford the more expensive meat that is now readily available.

UNIFORMS A POSSIBILITY FOR JAPANESE TEACHERS — HABIKINO, Japan—The mayor of this small city has one-upped President Clinton, who favors uniforms for public school students: The mayor wants teachers to wear them, too. "I am trying to improve the educational environment in our public schools," said Mayor Gozo Fukutani. He said teachers are setting a bad example and losing respect by dressing sloppily. But, reflecting a growing individualism in Japanese society, angry teachers have marched against the proposal in the streets of this quiet suburb of Osaka in central Japan. "What we wear does not determine what we think," said Hiroyuki Nishimura, director of the teachers' union. "Teachers wearing uniforms would not improve the quality of education."

SEASONAL FLOOD RECREATED IN GRAND CANYON — Early Tuesday morning Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt plans to stand on a catwalk at Glen Canyon Dam, turn a valve, pull a lever and unleash a flood into the Grand Canyon. Tons of water will wash down the Colorado River, raising its level as much as 10 feet. Trees will be uprooted: Some creatures will be washed away. And if all goes as planned, the river and the canyon will be better off as a result. Below the dam, the Colorado is still a tumultuous river with its legendary rapids intact. However, the dam has transformed its warm, muddy flow into a cold, clear stream released from the depths of Lake Powell; upsetting the natural balance of the canyon. But as the cascading water surges downstream on Tuesday, the river will get some of its old life back, and the history of western river management will take a new turn.

NASA SAYS BUDGET CUTS HURT FLIGHT SAFETY — WASHINGTON—During launch, the space shuttle rides a pillar of flame 60 stories tall as it soars into orbit at more than 17,000 mph — making it inherently the most dangerous vehicle in America. NASA employs a work force the size of two army divisions to keep the system running as safely as possible. But with the space agency under unprecedented pressure to trim its staggering launch costs, fears that it is cutting into safety have driven several high-level managers out the door in recent years. "I was concerned about how fast we were reducing," said Jeremiah W. Pearson, former associate administrator for human space flight, who quit the National Aeronautics and Space Administration 16 months ago but has only now made his reasons public. "There is deep concern among astronauts," said one NASA official who asked not to be identified. "They talk about it all the time."

NO GRASS FOR PORTION OF PENNSYLVANIA AVE. — WASHINGTON—An interim plan to replace the closed part of Pennsylvania Avenue NW in front of the White House with strips of grass has been abandoned by federal officials. Leaving a stark, six-lane slab of asphalt for an indefinite period. The 40-foot-wide sections of grass proposed for the middle of the street were supposed to be sown by now and the unsightly concrete barriers at 15th and 17th streets NW replaced with softer-looking beige and gray planters containing flowers and trees.

Alumna's visual effects up for Oscar

By Jason Coyne
DE Arts/Entertainment Editor

An SIUC graduate in cinema and photography is representing the University at the Oscars tonight for her computer-produced visual effects in the movie "Babe."

Michael Covell, an assistant professor, said Elizabeth Ralston was a very astute student in the Cinema and Photography Department during the early '80s.

"Her production work was very competent," he said. "She is memorable for her enthusiasm in her work and influence on other students."

Lorne Cocking, also an assistant professor, said Ralston went directly to Hollywood upon graduation.

"Her first job was animating the snake-like railing in 'Beetlejuice,'" he said. "She also has been in charge of production for the Coca-Cola polar bear commercials.

Right now she works for Rhythm and Hues as a producer and project coordinator."

"Babe," a movie about a talking pig that performs the duties of a sheep dog, has been nominated for its visual effects as well as best picture. "Babe" will be facing tough opponents including "Apollo 13," "Braveheart" and "Sense and Sensibility."

Cocking said Ralston was in charge of making the animals look much like the original talking animal; Mr. Ed, but made them look even more realistic because of computer animation.

"They had people on location in Hollywood as well as in Australia," he said. "From her California office she would alter the shots (via computer) they did in Australia to make the talking animals look realistic."

Ralston has recently decided to repay the institution responsible for helping her forge her successful career, Cocking said.

"She is going to be giving a sizeable annual production grant on her behalf to a cinema and photography student," Cocking said. "Time after time she has mentioned how grateful she is for the education at SIUC. The first one is going to be given on Saturday night at the C&P banquet."

Ralston could not be reached for comment Sunday.

USG retention survey criticized by some senators

By Signe K. Skinton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

An enrollment survey being sent out to SIUC students is an ineffective way to obtain needed information on how to improve enrollment and retention, some Undergraduate Student Government members say.

Scott Pfeiffer, USG chief of staff, said the survey is being mailed April 1 to 1,500 students to get their opinion on why the University has a declining enrollment and a poor retention rate.

SIUC enrollment in fall 1992 was 21,857 students, but began falling after that year to 21,241 students in fall 1993, 20,662 students in fall 1994 and 20,018 students in fall 1995, showing a decline of 1,839 students in a four-year period.

David Vingren, Thompson Point senator, criticized the survey process saying that sending the enrollment surveys through the mail will result in a low return rate.

"One of the things I am constantly hearing is the student apathy on campus," he said. "If students are so apathetic, why are you sending them a survey through the mail when they probably won't do it?"

Vingren said the only way to get the information wanted by the senate is to personally go to the students.

Andrew Ensor, Southern Hills senator, said mail surveys never do very well for USG.

"Statistically, we only get back 11 percent of what we send out," he said.

Pfeiffer said the surveys should be able to give USG an idea of what students see as the

Three SIU graduate programs ranked nationally

Law School, Medical School and Radio/TV Department gain recognition, good publicity

By Lori D. Clark
DE Assistant Politics Editor

Officials of two SIU graduate schools that ranked in U.S. News and World Report Best Graduate Schools issue, say the programs will probably not experience an enrollment increase, despite the positive publicity.

But an official from a third school that was ranked by the publication says he is hopeful the publicity may bring more students to his program.

SIU's Law School, Medical School and the Radio/TV graduate school all received rankings in the March 18 issue of U.S. News and World Report Best Graduate Schools issue. The SIU Medical School was ranked 7th out of 15 primary-care schools.

The Radio/TV graduate school ranked 13th of 15, and the SIU Law School received ranking in the fourth tier.

Carl Getto, dean of the SIU School of Medicine, said the school was not having any difficulty with enrollment.

"Right now we have over 2,000 applicants for 72 places," Getto said. "I would like to think the ranking would make people more interested in us. It won't have any practical effect on enrollment."

Getto said he was pleased the school received ranking and hopes the program will continue to improve.

"We are continuing to hold to the primary-care model and encourage students to go into primary care," he said. "We hope the program continues to attract this level of attention while we are continuing to improve next year."

Getto said primary care refers to ongoing care of patients of all ages and includes physicians who practice internal medicine, pediatrics, obstetrics/gynecology and family medicine.

Tom Britton, acting dean of the SIU School of Law, said the school was not facing any problems with enrollment and that the rankings would not help the school gain enrollment.

Britton said although the rankings were an accomplishment to be proud of, they did not show the actual quality of the school.

"We're very pleased we did well among small law schools," Britton said. "We're also pleased the data reported was accurate. However, these kinds of rankings tend to be over estimated in terms of importance. We're proud of what the school does, and that is not reflected in the rankings. I think the rankings cause a lot more questions than answers."

"We don't do things just to improve the rankings. We continue to be as good as we can be and offer a quality education to students."

Ken Keller, associate chair of the Radio/TV Department, said he thought the rankings could help the program's enrollment.

"We are seeing an increase in the undergraduate and graduate enrollment already," Keller said. "I think the national publicity can only help. The article particularly pertained to the graduate program, but I think being listed is going to help us overall."

I think if we keep the national program qualities and keep up with technology improvements, we're going to continue to prosper—or at least I hope."

John Haller, vice president for Academic Affairs, said the administration was happy with the three schools' rankings.

"We are delighted with the recognition," Haller said. "It puts us with the leading institutions in the country."

If cuts not carefully planned, University's future may suffer

ONCE AGAIN, SIUC IS FACING BUDGET CUTS. Faculty positions not being filled, reduced class availability and reduced graduate assistance money are some of the gifts the student population can look forward to because of those cuts.

The SIUC administration is using the carrot and the stick method to describe the problem. Just a couple of years and all will be better is the carrot being dangled in front of the students and faculty. But administration explanations of how those better days are going to be attained still require explanation with the cuts that are required.

Unfortunately it is hard to focus on the carrot when you are being hit with a $4.5 million budget-reduction stick. It's even harder to focus when you have just finished being hit with budget shortfalls from last fiscal year.

A reduced student enrollment estimate is resulting in the Illinois Board of Higher Education revising the amount of money the University will receive from the state, leaving the University with less state and tuition money.

THE UNIVERSITY ALSO IS FACING PENALTIES for having more tuition waivers than allowed by new IBHE guidelines. The University waiver's are above 4 percent, while the IBHE limit is 3 percent.

So when are these sticks going to be put away? When will the carrot be within reach? According to the administration, it will happen when enrollment ceases its downward trend and when the University economic outlook improves.

The University is looking to accomplish these milestones using the newly instituted budget guidelines adopted by the Board of Trustees and by utilizing a new recruiting strategy being built by the University's Enrollment Management Task Force.

But that is the future and it is in the next few years that SIUC students will be crippled by the budget cuts.

Department heads and college deans have said that in order to cut the money from their budgets, they will have to hold off replacing faculty that retires or leaves the University.

CLASSES WILL BE CONSOLIDATED, WHICH means students lose some flexibility in their scheduling options with the possibility of classes not being available or times in conflict with student's schedules.

Some of the deans also mentioned the loss of money for graduate assistants, a blow for the graduate programs and the faculty who rely upon them for help in teaching the larger classes, not to mention the undergraduate students who might rely on the graduate student for assistance when the professor is unavailable.

The University administration sounds upbeat that it can weather the cuts in the budget without gutting University morale, while at the same time increasing enrollment at an institution that is cutting services and options in its faculty and classes.

These two seem to contradict themselves, and the administration is going to have to do a better job of selling where the cuts are going or must look at different ways of instituting the cuts.

Posing nude does not end opportunities

This response will serve Marie Sweeney and all interested. Marie dear, you seem to be enjoying the fruits of a world where doors only swing open one way. "Keeping your doors open," as you refer to it, implies that one should sit in their apartment with one hand on their pants and the other in a bowl. Cap'n Crunch.

These metaphorical doors you speak of are constantly opening and closing for those of us who choose to actually live. The only way to prevent the closing of doors is to remain static. Let this be an example. One day soon you will be seeking employment with my multi-national baby-seal-killing corporation (we will need a shrink abroad to wash the blood from our consciences). Well, the nature of your narrow-minded, holier-than-thou letter has effectively excluded you as a prospective employee. Sorry, door closed.

We all make decisions that, by their very nature, exclude alternate options. If Kyra has chosen to appear in "Playboy," then perhaps she also has chosen not to partake in the greedhead, power-mongering world of politics or high-profile business (the lost opportunity you speak of).

And as for the Miss America Pageant seems nothing more than "Playboy" for those with repressed, yet salivating visual imaginations. To dangle such a pageant crown in hopes of thwarting future "Playboy" models can only serve to find you waking, helly-deep, in the quicksand of your own perceived moral high ground.

Many models featured in "Playboy" have used their "international exposure" as a means to open doors and achieve their own measure of success. So Kyra opened some doors (and received a check) and closed a few. We all do every time we step toward what we want.

Finally, to lance the boil of you, if you have a problem with the nude human, then please do not hide behind logical fallacies when expressing it. Hunter S. Thompson and I cringe at your niggardly use of honesty.

Capital gains is the best type of income

By Robert Reno
Newsday

It's his call, of course, and it would please a lot of his rich friends, but does Bob Dole really want to run for president of 1 percent of the country?

Because it is that percentage of the population with the highest gross adjusted incomes who typically earn more than half the capital gains reported to the Internal Revenue Service, and who would benefit most mightily from Dole's plan to cut the tax rate on those gains.

This is called "preferential treatment" of capital gains, but it would be more accurately called "even more preferential treatment." The best-kept secret in the nation is that capital gains are already the most preferred, pampered, fawned-on, catered-to, spoiled, slobbered-over, venerated and kowtowed-to form of income. Let me explain.

To begin with, ordinary workers pay Social Security taxes on all their wages under $63,000, which is, for most of them, everything. For many lower-income families, these taxes amount to more than their entire income tax liability. While wage-earners are sweating to pay Social Security taxes, people who wallow on the sofa realizing capital gains pay not a cent in Social Security taxes on these profits.

But, of course, they must pay income tax, and do they yell and mean when they have to. This year, they even got the Republican Congress to lower the top tax rate on long-term capital gains to 19.8 percent. The present tax rate on long-term capital gains is 28 percent, much lower than the top rate on earned income, which is 39.6 percent. President Clinton vetoed this tax cut, but it may yet see the light of law if he uses it as a bargaining chip.

Capital gains enjoy other advantages. When you earn wage income, the IRS grabs its share before you ever see it. A person who has capital gains gets to pick and choose when he pays. Because he isn't taxed annually, but only when he sells an asset, his tax liability is invariably less than for comparable incomes from other sources that are taxed as they are earned.

And if you die, the government generously forgives taxes on your capital gains. Every year, about $25 billion in capital gains completely escapes taxation this way.

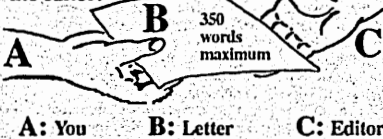

Don't get me wrong. There is nothing wrong with capital gains per se. They are an incentive to invest. True, some investments—like jewels, gold, art treasures and land speculation—may do little to create jobs. A glittering new shopping mall that blights the landscape and drives existing retailers out of business may do less for a community than a new, labor-intensive factory. Still, by and large, investment is something the economic system values. People who have capital gains also risk capital losses. But there is scant evidence that the rich are getting richer at a pace so slow that they need the incentive of a 19.8 percent capital-gains tax to get them off their duffs.

Robert Reno is a regular columnist for Newsday.

The Carbondale Park District is asking for the public's input on a three to five-year comprehensive plan so citizens can have a direct say in Park District policy decisions, plan developers say.

Sam Goldman, facilitator of the Carbondale Park District Comprehensive Plan, said a draft of the plan will be introduced at the Park District's meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chambers, 607 E. College St.

Goldman, an SIUC professor of educational administration and higher education, said citizens can shape the plan that would help guide board decisions for the next three to five years.

"A park helps improve the quality of life in a community," he said.

Goldman said he and members of a task force, some of which are

SIUC graduate students, invested more than 200 hours creating the plan.

Carbondale residents have an opportunity to voice their opinions and assist in the development of Park District policy Goldman said.

He said citizens can review the plan and offer more suggestions before it is submitted to the Board of Park Commissioners in April.

Laura Pate, a graduate student in recreation from Carbondale who worked on the plan, said Carbondale citizens need to show their support for the plan.

"The Park District is a public entity," Pate said. "It is there to serve the citizens of Carbondale."

The plan is a list of suggestions from Carbondale citizens concerning what they said they would like to see the Park District accomplish, Goldman said.

The task force interviewed citizens and citizen interest groups, such as the Eurma C. Hayes Community Center and the Rotary Club, for their opinions, he said.

Goldman said the Park District mailed out 400 to 500 copies of the draft to citizens and citizen interest groups and has placed copies throughout Carbondale, including the city hall and the library, for the public to review before tonight's meeting.

There are 36 suggestions in the plan, such as the development of a scholarship program for those who cannot afford to participate in park activities and an increase in the variety of programs to meet changes in the community.

The plan also suggests budget policies for the Park District and recommends working with SIUC to establish volunteer activities for internships or field experience for students.

George Whitehead, director of the Carbondale Park District, said the final comprehensive plan will be submitted to the Board of Park Commissioners at the board meeting April 29.

Tom Redmond, director of Carbondale's Development Services, said he gave a copy of the draft of the Carbondale Park District Comprehensive Plan to Camiros Ltd., the Chicago planning firm that is working on the 20-year development plan for Carbondale. He said Camiros will use the park plan with their development plan,

Environmentalists protest incinerator

By Lisa Pangburn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Area environmentalists said they were hopeful and determined to stop a hazardous waste incinerator from burning contaminated soil on Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge as they protested at the site Friday and Saturday.

The planned incinerator is to be used to rid Crab Orchard's soils of polychlorinated biphenyl (PCB), a hazardous chemical. The chemical was dumped into Crab Orchard Lake during a World War II bomb-making project.

Protesters said they are frightened of dioxin, a chemical that has been proven to cause cancer, when it is expelled from such incinerators.

Rose Rowell, who is involved with the Southern Coalition on Protecting the Environment, said she has done extensive research on dioxin.

"Of all the research I've done, I have not found anyone that says any level of dioxin is safe," she said.

A group of protesters was at a gate to the incineration site Friday morning to oppose the project.

Bob Czernik, an undecided junior from Carbondale, said he does not want to see Southern Illinois ruined by pollution.

"I love Southern Illinois, and I don't want to see it ruined," he said. "I felt in my heart that this protest was something I had to do. I am angry that this incinerator could really begin, and I want people to know I am angry."

Czernik also said the protest was a positive moment for all of the demonstrators.

"It was a very beautiful and empowering moment for all of us," he said. "No one got hurt or arrested. We were just there to voice our opinions."

Approximately 45 protesters stood in the rain with signs and banners at the refuge Saturday.

Richard Whitney, of Carbondale, said he did not care what people said about him standing out in the rain because he was doing the right thing.

"This might be crazy, standing out here, but not as crazy as what the EPA wants to do to us," he said.

Rowell said she was pleased with the positive response, but she thought more people would have shown up for the protest.

"We had a lot of people who would drive by and honk or give us a cheer," she said. "However, this is the people's community. This incinerator is going to affect everyone in this area. I thought more people from the community would get involved."

Kristi Hanson, a member of the Regional Association for Concerned Environmentalists, said she thought the community did not come out to voice their opinion because they were scared.

"People are afraid to protest," she said. "The authorities are trying to intimidate us by taking down our license plate numbers when we have a legal right to be here."

Rowell said members of the community should realize that PCBs could be left alone. She said containing the PCBs would be better than using the incinerator.

"The PCBs have been there for 35 years, and they are not in public areas," she said. "If we could take the soil and contain it, that would be better than releasing dioxin into the air. The PCBs are contained now, but when incineration begins, chemicals will be released into the airflow."

Whitney said the fight is not finished for him or the EPA.

"After everything we've gone through, and all the time we've spent on trying to keep the incineration from happening, this is far from over," he said.

people. We do not want to provoke China — just peace."

Shin-chih Huang, a sophomore in speech communication from Taiwan, said the purpose of Friday's demonstration was to raise people's awareness on Taiwan's current situation.

"Some students wanted to demonstrate so people would know what was going on in Taiwan," he said.

"We want people to know that Taiwan is not trying to provoke anyone. Taiwan is a voice advocating democracy."

With the election of President Lee Teng-Hui, the first democratically elected head-of-state in Chinese history, Taiwan delivered a slap to the face of China's oppressive Communist power structure, Choi said.

While Taiwan has its own shipping, investors and trade, many countries, including the United States, do not recognize it as a sovereign country.

As a result of a political civil war in 1949, the Nationalist Party left China's Communist party, or People's Republic of China (PRC), for Taiwan to begin what is now the second largest foreign exchange market in the world. Fung-feh Chen, a sophomore in political science from Taiwan, said.

"We are proud of our democracy in Taiwan," he said. "It is time for the Beijing authority to follow the democratic example being set by Taiwan."

Choi said even though the situation in Taiwan looks threatening, its citizens believe in what they are accomplishing.

"I spoke with my father on Thursday," he said.

"There is a very strong commitment to democracy at home, and he said many people are willing to do whatever it takes. If that includes bloodshed, so be it."

Li Cheng, a senior in finance from China, said Taiwan's actions are internationally embarrassing and may drive a wedge between mainland Chinese and Taiwanese that will be hard to remove.

"We are all Chinese," he said. "What's going on over there is nothing more than idealists capitalizing on America's false premise of a people controlling a nation."

"My family is upset because the Taiwanese want to make China look bad. If they are not Chinese, they are nothing."

Chen said mainland people may not know the benefits of democracy, a point that keeps China from uniting all its people.

"Chinese people don't know what democracy is," he said. "The government uses the military to intimidate people, and that is unlawful. Taiwanese people are choosing which direction it will head."

"Hopefully China will follow this example."

WIDB

Grammer said if WIDB does not receive money soon, it may be off the air for a while.

"If we don't get any money, I assume we'll be requesting from alumni," Grammer said.

"We won't be back on the air for a long time until we have the money to do this right," he said.

Vingren said USG needs time to decide if WIDB is important enough to keep.

"If a resolution comes out and the senate believes that WIDB is worth the money it needs, then we'll make out a plan to dele out the money," he said.

Bottom, who said he supports the continued existence of WIDB, said USG will discuss the issue at its meeting Wednesday.

Lee Teng-hui wins Taiwan's presidency with 54 percent

The Baltimore Sun

TAIPEI, Taiwan—In an election that focused world attention on the future of Taiwan, President Lee Teng-hui won a clear-cut victory Saturday that broadcast a single message: There will be no quick reunification with China.

President Lee won 54 percent of the vote in a four-person race whose results were a rebuff to China's government, which conducted large-scale military exercises during the past two weeks as a warning to Taiwanese not to support Lee or candidates wanting the island to declare its independence.

Lee's share of the votes, added to the 21 percent won by pro-independence candidates, showed three-quarters of the island's voters favoring either outright independence or the president's ambiguous policy of acting independently but holding open the distant possibility of reunification.

For Lee, the key was to win more than 50 percent.

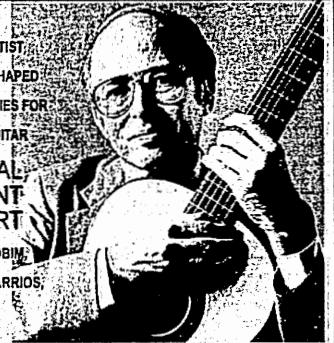

It was the figure China hoped he would fail to reach, because any lesser victory would show he didn't have a majority of the population behind him.

problems leading to the low enrollment numbers.

"Our best goal is to get one-half of the surveys back," he said.

"We are trying to make this as easy for the students — by sending self-addressed stamped envelopes with the surveys — so all the students have to do is fill out the survey and drop it back in the mail."

USG President Kim Clemens said the surveys will give students a voice to say what they see as problems at SIUC when it comes to enrollment and retention.

"The students know the true reasons why enrollment and retention is so low," she said. "Professors and administrators might have an idea about what's not working, but the students know why and how."

Clinton is solidifying black vote

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—President Clinton's support in the African-American community has soared in the past year, and he enters his reelection campaign as popular among black voters as any president in modern history.

This assessment, based on polling data and interviews with black elected officials and researchers, is one indication of how well Clinton has shored up key elements of his core constituency in advance of the fall contest with Senate Majority Leader Robert J. Dole.

It also illustrates how Clinton is benefiting from heightened anxiety among blacks and other traditional Democratic voters, who view the Republican-controlled Congress as the evil empire and see Clinton as their only antidote.

In one striking example of Clinton's standing in the black community, a recent survey by the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies, a Washington-based think tank, showed that African Americans rated him more favorably than either two-time presidential contender Jesse L. Jackson or the Republicans' dream candidate for vice president, Colin L. Powell.

In fact, Clinton's 88-percent-favorable rating among blacks rivals that of President Lyndon Johnson in 1965 — the year he signed the Voting Rights Act.

But David Bogús, a political analyst at the center, said the finding must be put in context. "In the past year, Clinton has adopted a strategy of securing his base," he said.

"It was pretty easy to secure when the Republicans were out there in the Congress scaring the bejibbers out of everybody with their proposed policy changes."

'Five Guys Named Moe' receives rave review

By Travis Akin
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The music in "Five Guys Named Moe" went beyond the normal theatrical conventions and brought to the stage a production in which the songs could have been performed as a concert, instead of as a play.

Clarke Peters' musical, "Five Guys Named Moe," was presented Friday at Shryock Auditorium. The show told the story of Nomax (Raun Ruffin), a man dumped by his girlfriend after he forgot her birthday.

Much like George Bailey in "It's a Wonderful Life," Nomax is given help when he can no longer help himself. The only difference is Bailey gets help from an angel, and Nomax gets help from five guys named Moe.

When the curtain opened to reveal three 15-foot statues of Moes and several buildings slightly taller than the Moe statues, it was obvious something spectacular was going to happen.

The band was on stage ready to play, and Nomax sat by an old radio listening to the blues and feeling it as well.

Nomax was trying to decide if he should call his girlfriend or not. After the song, "Early in the Morning," the announcer warned everyone not to touch the dial. Nomax ignores the warning and touches the dial anyway.

The radio flickers, smoke comes out and five guys appear, telling Nomax they are there to help him get his life back on track.

Nomax is very resistant to the Moes at first, but he soon understands they are only trying to help him.

Despite all of the silly antics of the Moes, such as taking Nomax to the Funky Butt club, they are concerned about the well-being of Nomax.

The show had very little dialogue between the characters. The musical told the story.

When Big Moe (Michael Shepperd) sang, "What's the Use of Gettin' Sober," it was obvious he was advising Nomax to stop drinking to take away the blues.

While there was a little dialogue in the song, it was the music and the lyrics that set the mood and the tone of Big Moe's advice to Nomax.

It was a show that openly admitted what it was. The show was a musical, and instead of asking

Play Review

... Instead of asking the crowd to accept the fact that the characters break into song all of the time, (the show) made a point to poke fun at musicals.

ing the crowd to accept the fact that the characters break into song all of the time, it made a point to poke fun at musicals. The musical did not pretend that breaking out into a song was an everyday occurrence.

Several times during the show, the Moes asked the audience for help on the songs. They even brought some of the crowd on stage. At one point, three women were brought on stage to assist Four-Eyed Moe (Angelo Adkins) in singing "Lookout Sister," a song warning women about guys wanting the wrong things.

The Moes formed a conga line while the calypso beat was going, and people were dancing in the auditorium. The entire song lasted almost 30 minutes, but few noticed or cared.

The interactive nature of the show pulled the crowd out of the normal role of spectator and gave them a part in the show.

The performers enjoyed what they were doing, and even though the performance was the second-to-last show of their six-month tour in the United States, they still appeared enthusiastic.

The result was an audience that gave back to the cast the respect that was given to them.

It was not the sort of musical in which the next song was a nap-inducing experience.

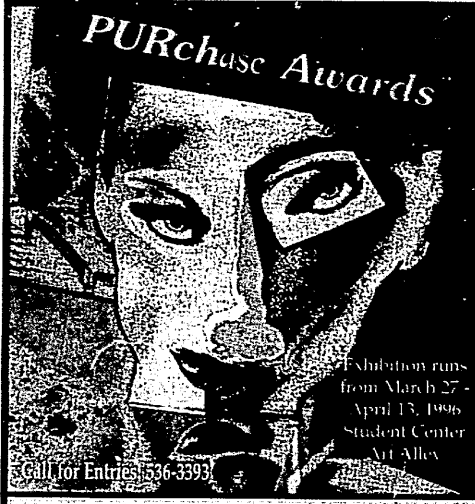

The songs provided the context for some of the more funny parts of the show. Each song made one wonder what sort of antics the Moes were going to do next.

The pinnacle was when Four-Eyed Moe came out dressed like a chicken and sang, "Ain't Nobody Here But Us Chickens."

"Five Guys Named Moe" takes Jordan's music and creates something new out of some very old songs.

The show educates some about an old artist and makes those familiar with Jordan's music appreciate it all the more.

The end of the show was much like a good concert in which fans beg the artist to keep on playing.

Women's track squad takes title at SIUC Invite

By Jared Driskill
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Some may now dub it a sprint instead of a run.

One hundredth of a second was the difference between first and second place in Saturday's 5,000-meter run — a run in which SIUC junior Stelios Mameros nudged out Illinois State's Chris Bailey.

Mameros crossed the finish line with a time of 14:43.42, after sprinting the last 150-meters with Bailey, who recorded a time of 14:43.42.

Mameros' performance happened to be the norm for Southern's men's track and field team at Saturday's SIUC Invitational, where SIUC garnered 51 points — enough to secure second place.

ISU won the invite with 62 points and Southeast Missouri State took home third place with 45.5 points. Indiana state followed SEMO closely with 43.5 points to finish fourth.

Southern's men's track and field coach Bill Cornell was pleasantly surprised to see his team perform so well (placing second in the meet), taking into account the cold rain that fell during most of the meet.

"Considering the number of people we have with minor injuries right now, we're happy with the results of the day," Cornell said. "I would have bet going into the meet that we were going to be in fourth. But we had some incredible performances from some of the kids that surprised me a little bit."

SIUC produced four other first place finishers besides Mameros including: junior Jonathan Sweetin, who won the shot put with a launch of 46-05 1/2; sophomore Neophytos Kalogerou, who cleared 6-09 3/4 in the high jump; junior Patrick Harris, who sprinted in the 200-meter dash for a time of 22.10; and freshman Joseph Parks, who held off the field in the 3,000-meter run with a time of 9:41.66.

The SIUC women's track and field team has carried their winning ways from the indoor season to the outdoor season as they shut down the list of competitors in Saturday's meet, collecting 191 winning points — 50 points ahead of second place Illinois State.

Indiana State ran into third place with 125 points, and Southeast Missouri grabbed fourth place with 82 points.

Austin Peay and Southern Indiana held the remaining 11 points as they rounded out the competing field of teams.

Six top performances were turned in by members of the SIUC women's track and field team.

Junior Vena Clendenin gave Southern its first victory of the meet, winning the javelin throw with a toss of 129-09. Junior Sheila Hollins and senior Joy Williamson placed first (18-06 1/2) and second (18-05 1/4) respectively in the long jump.

Williamson continued her roll in the triple jump, winning with a leap of 37-07 1/4, as junior-Heather Greeing posted a second place mark of 37-01. Senior Elissa Pierce took first place in the 400-meter low hurdles with a time of 1:01.77, while the trio of freshman Natasha Robinson, Collette Courtney, and sophomore Traci Mitchell placed first, second, and third respectively in the 200-meter dash, recording times of 25.71, 26.05, and 26.42.

DeNoon said picking up points other than first place in some events, shows how depth plays an important role on a team such as his.

"Illinois State and Indiana State are still teams that we really have to reckon with when it comes to a conference setting, when it's all said and done," he said.

The SIUC men's track and field team travels to Hot Springs, Ark., March 30 to compete in the Hot Springs Invitational, while Southern's women's track and field team will have a week off to prepare for the Semotien Relays taking place April 5-6 at Southeast Missouri State in Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Rodman's acts ruining more than the game

By Alan Greenberg
The Hartford Courant

Some people laugh with Dennis Rodman.

Some people laugh at Dennis Rodman.

But there was nothing even remotely funny about Rodman's behavior at New Jersey March 16 when he head-butted referee Ted Bernatoni, resulting in a six-game suspension and $20,000 fine from the NBA.

Since he won't be paid for the six games, Rodman's outburst will cost him more than $200,000.

But money is the least of it, and so is the question whether Rodman's behavior, and the league's just penalty, jeopardizes the Bulls' chance to become the first NBA team to win 70 games in the regular season.

The larger issue is Rodman's bizarre behavior and pathetic attempts to gain attention far beyond the considerable amount he receives for his rebounding.

Rodman is a sideshow who draws fan and media attention with harmless antics such as dyeing his hair unusual colors and treating his body as if it were a giant pierced ear.

But even as the more tolerant among us smile at what could charitably be called eccentricities, there is no mistaking that Rodman's outbursts and erratic behavior paint a disturbing picture.

Part of the public fascination with Rodman is that he seems to be a human timebomb, and we want to see what happens when he explodes.

Any team that employs Rodman, 34, makes a Faustian bargain, and the Bulls certainly knew what they were getting into.

Fans wonder if Rodman can keep himself together well enough to help the Bulls win the championship, or will he become the destructive force he became with the Spurs?

But the larger issue is what will become of Rodman?

Will his demons subside after backstab, or will they destroy him? The frightening thing isn't what Rodman does to his team, it's what he is doing to himself.

Although Southern failed to walk away with the tournament title, which went home with the University of Northern Iowa following a 4-0 tournament record, Saturday's performance against Evansville gave Brechtelsbauer a good indication of how the team is improving.

With conference action about to begin, that's a good thing to know. "There's some good things that are happening, and we're headed in the right direction — there's no doubt in my mind," she said.

"We played very well all the way through in every phase of the game. "I think they (players) are still learning what it takes to win. If we can start putting these performances together back to back, maybe they will get a sense of what it takes every time out."

So far, it has been an up and down season for this year's young Saluki squad — both defensively

"Granted, we would feel better going 4-0 in the tournament, but it was a learning experience."

Saluki third baseman and offensively — and the tournament proved no different.

Southern opened the tournament Friday by beating the University of Loyola-Chicago 6-1, then fell to Northern Iowa 3-0 in its second game.

Southern batters collected 11 hits against Loyola, but gathered only four against the Panthers, while leaving six runners stranded.

However, Lis said Southern's slow beginning and sluggish style of play is a thing of the past.

"All of it's coming together," she said.

"We've had problems, now everybody is slowly getting their confidence, personal wise, and the team's coming together."

"Everybody is doing their job and we're starting to gel and come together. I have all the confidence in the world in our batting."

Lis said the team treated Friday's loss to Northern Iowa as a learning experience rather than a loss.

"Granted, we would feel better going 4-0 in the tournament, but it was a learning experience," Lis said.

"We knew what we didn't do against Northern Iowa, but we came back out and figured out what we needed to do."

Senior second baseman Jami Koss, who collected an inside the park home run against St. Louis, said Saturday's victories are just what the team needs to build its confidence level.

"This is exactly what we wanted out of this team," an elated Koss said.

"We did a really good job, and both games were great wins. We have a lot of things to work on still, but this is a good ending.

"We wanted to dominate today (Saturday) and come off the tournament with a good feeling."

Southern will host St. Louis again Wednesday in a double header at IAW Fields beginning at 3:00.

Brechtelsbauer said she hopes Southern will continue to attack opposing teams in the same manner it did Saturday, St. Louis being no exception.

"This has to be a regular kind of feeling when you go out there and just have that confidence and attack the ball," she said.

"It takes effort and it's a mental thing more than a physical thing."

"It's a feeling they have to learn."

ends of the double-header, 3-2 and 8-4, and received a solid start from sophomore Dave Piazza and junior Chris Schullian, who threw six shutout innings before surrendering four runs on three hits in the seventh inning of game two.

SIUC struck early in game one Sunday with back to back doubles by senior designated hitter Mike Russell and junior first baseman Aaron Jones in the first inning that scored two runs, and junior second baseman Jay Mansavage scored from third, after doubling, on a ground ball to shortstop by Kratochvil in the fourth inning to insure the win.

Four unearned runs in the sixth inning for Southern held up in game two, but the Salukis added two more tallies in the seventh to close the game.

Last season, Southern started the season with a mirror image of this weekend, taking three-of-four from BU, but then faltered from then on.

Salukis fall one short of sweeping Bradley

By Chad Anderson
DE Sports Editor

Ernie Banks was famous for saying, "let's play two," but maybe two was not the way to go for the SIUC baseball team this weekend as the players pulled double-duty as grounds keepers also.

Even though the Salukis (9-10, 3-1) took three of the four games from Bradley University (13-5, 1-3), a new order will have to be put in for Turface, a drying agent used to solidify the infield dirt.

"This is a side-note, but I thought our guys did a pretty good job as far as trying to get the field playable, and working with the tarp," SIUC coach Dan Callahan said. "That tarp can wear you out, and I thought our players did a pretty commendable job from that standpoint."

Through the weekend, it was tough to decide who the competition was, mother nature or Bradley.

Saturday's double-header was played through a series of downpours, and Sunday's games were postponed by the weather twice until game two was finally called off after junior shortstop Frankie Jaramillo's bat flew into the Saluki dugout while following through on a swing due to being wet.

"... I thought our guys did a pretty good job as far as trying to get the field playable, and working with that tarp."

Dan Callahan
Saluki baseball coach

Freshman center fielder Joe Schley said the conditions definitely were ideal for Baseball over the weekend.

"It's tough because your feet slide all over the place, and center field is the worst because there's mud and you can't get real good jumps (on the ball), so you've got to be spotted up in the right position," he said.

While the weather was the focus point of the weekend, Southern's improvement, both at the plate and on the mound, did not go unnoticed.

After dropping seven of nine games during the team's spring trip March 9-16, Southern came back to regroup in its opening weekend of the Missouri Valley Conference schedule.

The Salukis were embarrassed 14-1 in game one Saturday, but then battled back to win 6-5 in the bottom of the ninth in game two behind the bat of freshman third baseman Jerry Hairston, who delivered the game winning hit down the left field line to score junior catcher Bret Horace from second base.

The pitching of freshman Jason Frasor and senior Dave Farrow also contributed heavily to the victory.

Senior catcher Tim Kratochvil, who played left field in game two Saturday, made a game saving catch against the wall in the top of the ninth inning while battling the sun in its only appearance of the weekend.

"That was a tough play, and he took a very suspect route on it, but he hung with it," Callahan said. "In fact, if we had scored another run, he would not have even been out there."

Sunday, the Salukis took both

Softball pounds way to 2nd-place finish

By Michael DeFord
DE Assistant Sports Editor

Hitting, as the SIUC women's softball team demonstrated Saturday, wins ballgames.

Backed by solid hitting, SIUC rocked St. Louis University 13-3 and blanked the University of Evansville 8-0 Saturday, en route to a second place finish in the 16th annual Saluki Invitational at the IAW Fields.

The Salukis combined strong pitching with solid hitting in both games to improve its record to 6-7, as well as boost its confidence level a notch.

Southern's improved performance was especially appealing to Saluki coach Kay Brechtelsbauer, who collected her 500th career win against the University of Loyola-Chicago Friday.

Brechtelsbauer said the Salukis attacked the field in a confident matter Saturday — something the team has failed to do on a consistent basis thus far.

"If you hit enough balls hard, enough of them will drop in to win ballgames," Brechtelsbauer said. "We came out and attacked, and that's something we have to do every game."

"We showed some confidence and everybody got up there and swung the bats extremely well."

Cold temperatures failed to cool Southern's bats as players from the top of the lineup to the bottom contributed to SIUC's offensive attack.

Complementing a strong outing from Saluki pitcher Jamie Schuttek, Southern continuously pounded Evansville's pitchers from beginning to end. Schuttek, who collected her fourth win of the season, pitched five solid innings, allowing only one hit and three walks, while Southern batters collected 13 hits off of four Evansville hurlers, including a double and a triple from junior third baseman Becky Lis.

Between the Lines

The SIUC men's roller hockey team skated its way to a solid finish in Purdue University's spring roller hockey tournament Friday and Saturday.

Paced by Dan Dressel, SIUC finished the tournament as semifinalists with a 3-2-1 record. Dressel, a sophomore in criminal justice from Naperville, led all SIUC players with 9 goals in the tournament.

The team travels to Champaign Saturday to compete in the University of Illinois' roller hockey tournament. Making the trip to Champaign will be Purdue, Michigan State, Western Illinois and Missouri.

The NCAA Final Four agenda was set Sunday. Syracuse knocked off No. 2 seed Kansas yesterday to keep its national championship hopes alive while Mississippi State knocked off Cincinnati.

This year's Final Four will be a battle of No. 1 seeds as UMass, the No. 1 seed in the East, collides with Kentucky, the No. 1 seed in the Midwest.
