SIUC core classes upgraded

STUDENT-FRIENDLY:

Plan will be to make classes smaller for freshmen and sophomores.

TRAVIS DeNEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC is spending $212,000 on the University core curriculum program to improve freshman and sophomore education as part of a campus plan to offer more class sections to SIUC students.

CURRICULUM

•SIUC is spending $212,000 on the University core curriculum program to improve freshman and sophomore education.

"The idea is to make classes smaller and more student-friendly," said A. J. Morey, core curriculum program director. "Large lectures make people feel lost sometimes, so we want to add discussion sections to lecture classes."

•Reducing the size of classes and increasing the number of class sections is part of a plan to make students' scheduling conflicts minimal.

John Jackson, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, allocated the money to the College of Liberal Arts earlier this month to restructure classes and create more class sections. The changes will be in place by fall.

•The changes will be in place by fall.

The History Department provides one model of how the discussion sections can be used.

"The classes are three days a week, with two of the classes in lecture format, and then the third is a discussion section conducted by (graduate assistants)," Morey said.

Morey said large universities cannot entirely escape the lecture system because vast numbers of students need general classes, but if some classes are made smaller, students will benefit.

"We want students to be more in contact with faculty, and smaller classes will achieve that," she said.

Reducing the size of class sections and increasing the number of class sections is part of a plan to make students' scheduling conflicts minimal.

Each department is required to develop its own class schedule and assignment of teachers. The departmental class listings are then sent to Admissions and Records, which fine-

NAACP brings '60s activist

NOT GIVING UP:

Group's fund-raising efforts allow former Black Panther to speak on campus.

MIKAL J. HARRIS

DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Kwame Toure, formerly known as Stokely Carmichael and one of the most visible members of the Civil Rights Movement, finally is scheduled to speak on campus Thursday.

But there were times when Lekeiwa Rasberry, a senior in biological sciences and psychology from Chicago and president of the NAACP student chapter, thought efforts to raise money needed to bring the former Black Panther to campus were in vain.

"There were many times when I said, 'Just give up. Lekeiwa, this is not going to happen,'" she said. "I was really ready to give up, but his coming to speak shows that anything you put an effort into doing can be accomplished."

Toure is scheduled to speak at 5:30 p.m. Thursday in the Student Center Auditorium. Admission to the event is free, but the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is accepting donations from those wishing to help with Toure's medical expenses.

Toure, the creator of the '60s slogan, "Black Power," is battling prostate cancer.

Because the NAACP only raised $3,350 of the $5,000 Toure usually receives to speak, Rasberry is hoping donations will help pay for some of Toure's costs.

"Stokely Carmichael (Toure) needs extensive medical treatment, and he has to have a nurse with him to travel," Rasberry said.

"We hope the audience can donate anything they can to assist with his medical expenses."

Considering Toure's condition and the cost involved in bringing him to campus, the NAACP faced a huge challenge when they originally wanted to bring him to campus during the Black Affairs Council Leadership Conference in late February.

Rasberry said she contacted people on and off-campus for help in raising money for Toure. The goal of Toure speaking during the Conference fell short because of trouble getting assistance.

The NAACP found out in January that Toure, presently a leading Pan-Africanist who lives in Guinea, would be in the United States until April. Rasberry said she knew of Toure's whereabouts and medical condition from one of the organization's contacts in Chicago.

Calling them "scary" and "nitpicky," one SIUC administrator says immigration laws slated to go into effect Tuesday will have a negative impact on the international population at SIUC.

Carla Coppi, associate director of International Students and Scholars, said the new immigration laws that place a tighter leash on international students send mixed signals to applicants.

"I am most concerned with the message that is being sent out to the world by the United States about immigration," Coppi said. "They are proposing to track students in a more rigorous way. I don't even want to think about what the possible reasons for that rule could be."

Living the American dream

CULTURAL SHOCK:
International teens learn that America is not all "Beverly Hills 90210."

LA'KEISHA R. GRAY
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Philipp Menny, a 17-year-old from Freiburg, Germany, says when he met the Brown family in August, they embraced him and made him feel as if he had a second home in Marion.

"Before I came, I was wondering, 'Are they nice?' and 'Will I be accepted?'" he said. "But they turned out to be very nice. They have treated me like a third son, so I just added and made a larger family."

Culture is a gift to be exchanged, and Kathleen Carroll is proud to be a part of a program that links people of different cultural backgrounds together.

Carroll, a graduate student in history from Carbondale, said her job as the American Scandinavian Student Exchange's local contact for the Southern Illinois area gives her the opportunity to help Americans share their world with others.

"The focus of the program is to try to provide students with the opportunity to see and experience America up close," she said.

Carroll was instrumental in joining Philipp and the Brown family for the program.

The ASSE International Student Exchange Program, a non-profit organization, provides host families for international students from Europe and Asia. The students have to be 15 to 18 years of age and speak fluent English.

All of the students are required to attend a local high school for one school year and are encouraged to participate in school organizations and activities.

The program provides the students with knowledge about America, both academically and culturally. If students become actively involved in the American culture, Carroll said they receive more than a fictional insight into what American culture is about.

"They come and live like an all-American teenager," she said. "On the academic level we expect them to learn American history and politics. On the cultural level they learn that everything in America is not 'Beverly Hills 90210' or 'Melrose Place.'"

James Quisenberry, the immediate past director of International Programs and Services and a member of Rotary a substantial funding and support group of international exchange programs, agrees that an exchange program is essential.

"It's a good idea in order to promote world peace through understanding," he said. "It gives Americans contact with other cultural perspectives, because they don't understand the value of culture exchanging."

"It also gives people from other countries an in-depth view of America, and what better model than the Midwest opposed to the East and West coasts?"

Philipp's host "mom," Maxine Brown, said he has added a new dimension to her biological family and opened their eyes to certain things.

"He's added a new, humorous perspective to our family," she said. "We were already a fun family, but Philipp has added to that. Philipp asks a lot of questions, so through him we become more aware of aspects in our everyday culture."

Academy Awards dubbed year of independent films

"The English Patient," a sweeping World War II romance whose struggle to get made came to symbolize the hurdles independent filmmakers endure in Hollywood, swept through Monday night's Academy Awards in a celebration of films made outside the studio system.

The film won nine of the 12 categories it was nominated for in the 69th Annual Academy Awards at the Shrine Auditorium, including best picture and an Oscar for director for Anthony Minghella. Juliette Binoche, who plays the nurse who cares for the "English Patient," pulled off the night's biggest upset when she won the Oscar for best supporting actress.

Winning as best actress was Frances McDormand for her role in " Fargo " as Marge, the pregnant Minnesota sheriff out to solve a kidnapping that goes awry. Her husband, writer-director Joel Coen, and his brother, Ethan Coen, won the Oscar for best original screenplay. Billy Bob Thornton won for best adapted screenplay for "Sling Blade."

Also winning was another favorite, Australian stage actor Geoffrey Rush, for his role in "Shine" and Cuba Gooding Jr. won for best supporting actor for his role in "Jerry Maguire."

Saudi arrested in Canada denies involvement in blast

U.S. investigators believe that the arrest in Canada of an Iranian-educated Saudi may be a major break in the bombing case that killed 19 U.S. servicemen in Saudi Arabia last June. The suspect is believed to belong to the terrorist group thought responsible for the attack.

But in a telephone interview Monday evening from his Ottawa detention center, Sayegh vehemently denied any involvement in the explosion.

Tobacco companies fail to take blame for deaths

It looks like the tobacco companies will be sailing through some rough waters in the days ahead. When the Liggett Group, Inc. broke ranks with the rest of the industry and actually admitted to something that the sober population has known for years (that cigarettes are addictive and cause lung cancer), it looked as if the first domino in a long anti-tobacco chain effect had been toppled. Soon afterwards we hear from extremists on the far left mentioning the possibility that the legal age to purchase cigarettes should be 25.

Those tobacco companies that haven't admitted that nicotine might very well be more addictive than cocaine probably aren't happy.

It would be similar to one fast food burger chain coming out and saying: "You know that red meat you're eating? Well, guess what? If you continue to eat that, you dramatically increase your chances of getting heart disease and becoming overweight."

Needless to say, the other burger joints won't be pleased. So, it goes without saying that the other big tobacco companies are probably confused, right?

Well, maybe. If they're remarkably stupid.

See, the Liggett Group, Inc. didn't admit anything relevant. Anyone who has spent more than an hour conscious in the last 15 years knows cigarettes aren't good for your health. It's obvious. It's everywhere.

Furthermore, it's smoke. You're placing smoke, which comes from fire, which is known for burning things, into your lungs, which are known for sustaining life.

Perhaps by admitting that tobacco is bad, a tobacco company gives the impression it is doing something to stop the fact that tobacco is bad. The thing is, it won't. What makes tobacco inherently bad also is what makes it inherently profit conducive.

Those who have smoked for years don't purchase their packs of cigarettes because they still think it's "cool." They're buying the cigarettes because they are addicted to the nicotine within those cigarettes.

Of course, government intervention is the last thing that effectively will stop smoking. Making it illegal for someone under the age of 25 to smoke won't stop a

23-year-old from smoking. It causes the 23-year-old to become a criminal, and it adds another hassle to the middle-man shopkeeper who is willing to sell to minors to turn a profit. Now, the small business owner and the 23-year-old are the criminals instead of the multi-million dollar cigarette companies who make cigarettes so appealing in the first place because of nicotine and an advertising campaign aimed at the youth market.

This is pure hypocrisy.

If tobacco companies are willing to admit their product is dangerous, then they also should be willing to take this one step further and offer help to those cigarette purchasers that want to stop smoking. It certainly wouldn't be profit conducive, but neither is admitting that the product they sell kills people.

This way, the government would no longer have any grounds for inquisition, any person who seriously wants to stop smoking no longer has an excuse, and the cigarette companies can continue to sell their products, trading less profit for a good conscience.

Healthy or not, tobacco has been around for centuries. It's a part of our culture that isn't about to vanish within our lifetime. As a drug, it needs to be dealt with as a drug, which doesn't mean we ban it, but instead educate the population about what it does. There always will be a market for tobacco, as there always will be a market for any drug, from aspirin to alcohol to amphetamines.

As long as there is a demand for a drug, there will always be a supply of that drug, tobacco included. No amount of government legislation will hinder this basic concept of human nature. We only fool ourselves if we think the government will solve so personal an issue. The decision to use tobacco is one made by the individual. If people want to stop smoking badly enough, they will carry out the proper procedure to lessen their desire for nicotine. If they want to smoke their entire lives, then that decision is theirs alone to make.

Part of being a mature, responsible adult is making decisions that only you can make. The government has no place in this intricate decision-making process.

Those tobacco companies that haven't admitted that nicotine might very well be more addictive than cocaine probably aren't happy.

SIUC losing international edge with decreasing enrollment

THERE WAS A TIME IN THE NOT-SO-DISTANT past when SIUC was famous for its high international population.

We were proud of our status — eighth in the nation in international enrollment in 1986, according to the Chronicle of Higher Education — and made a conscious effort to recruit students from outside the United States.

Now, thanks in large part to old-fashioned American values such as bureaucracy, paperwork and processing fees, SIUC's international population is declining.

We are no longer on the Chronicle's top 20 list for international enrollment. Since 1993, our international enrollment has sagged 30 percent, dropping from 2,193 to 1,520.

WHILE THIS SITUATION IS BAD ENOUGH IN and of itself, perhaps the saddest part of it is the set of factors causing the drop.

Although they are part of what gives this University its respectability, international students are not exempt from the "runaround" of which so many SIUC students complain every year. Most of us who have applied for financial aid, student loans, on-campus jobs or graduation are aware of the infamous "Woody shuffle" that takes place when we begin filing papers in Woody Hall, home to the bulk of SIUC's bureaucracy.

IT IS ANNOYING TO TRY TO GET ALL OF THE paperwork done at the beginning of a semester or during a break, when we are moving in or trying to get out of town for a vacation.

Imagine how nerve-wracking this confusion would be when coupled with the even more complex bureaucracy involved in obtaining clearance to live, study and possibly work in a foreign country, the stress of leaving family and friends on the opposite side of an ocean and the headache of learning new rules, new social conventions and new ways of thinking — all in an unfamiliar language.

WORSE YET, STUDENTS WHO ARE WILLING to deal with these obstacles must pay twice as much as Illinois students pay for the same classes. This situation is due, in part, to the fact that state and federal laws create additional expenses for schools admitting international students. If U.S. schools are to attract quality students from the global community, we must have laws that are more student-friendly.

This situation does not necessarily create a strong desire to attend SIUC, particularly when many other schools offer a comparable education for the same or less money.

IF THIS UNIVERSITY WISHES TO RECOVER its once prestigious position as a leader in international recruitment, it is time to wake up and smell the bureaucratic muck. Simplifying the application and enrollment processes and ending this policy of charging international students twice as much as their Illinois-native peers would go a long way toward restoring this institution's competitive edge.

We can't afford to lose the benefits of diversity to the almighty dollar.

IT IS TO OUR ADVANTAGE TO ENCOURAGE international students to attend SIUC. The prestige of global word-of-mouth recognition is beneficial. The educational opportunities these students provide through sharing of ethnic traditions and multicultural perspectives are priceless.

Dear Editor:
Kudos to the Daily Egyptian for giving front-page coverage to the volunteers who cleaned up the Campus Lake area a couple of weeks ago. And of course, kudos to the group of individuals who are showing the true Saluki Spirit by offering their services to help make the campus a community to be proud of.

As a parent of a prospective college student, I have become acutely aware of how important the physical image of a university is in attracting students.

A well-kept physical environment with attractive grounds says "we care" to the parents and prospective students. A campus strewn with litter gives the impression that no one cares.

Let the actions of this group of Saluki volunteers be a challenge to everyone on campus. Help make this campus community one we can be proud of. Campus groups, organize your own campus clean-up. Individuals, don't litter and help pick up trash others have strewn around.

Let's start a real effort to create a Saluki pride in SIUC.

SIUC beautiful once, can be again

Dear Editor:

I'm pleased that attention is being paid to the litter problem at Campus Lake and that student volunteers are attempting to do something about it. In all honesty however, the problem is relatively no worse there than elsewhere on campus.

On any given day, most parking lots are littered with fast food containers, and the campus is strewn with paper — often the Daily Egyptian.

Even more disconcerting is the relatively permanent damage being done by those who refuse to use sidewalks.

Deep, bare paths now crisscross once grassy areas, and ruts are beginning to appear from off-road bicycles.

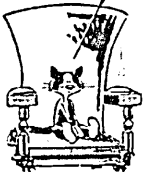

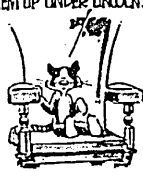

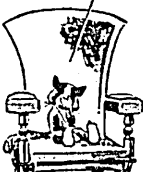

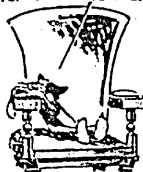

To those who seem oblivious to all this and continue to brag about what a beautiful campus we have, I can only question your standards.

The campus was beautiful once, and it can be again, but it will take a commitment from both students and University officials that obviously is lacking at present.

And while the Brown family and most Americans take advantage of things like apple pie, baseball games, getting a driver's license at the age of 16 and growing up with movies like "The Wizard of Oz," Philipp did not experience these things before joining his host family.

Another aspect of American culture that surprises him is the dating game.

"Having a girlfriend here is very expensive," he said. "In Germany, both people share paying for everything. But here, if you go out to eat, then it's the boy."

Because the exchange program has worked so well on a high school level, Carroll said it would be a good idea to expand the program with college level students. However, she has reservations about the success of such a step.

PHILIPP MENNY
EXCHANGE STUDENT FROM GERMANY

"I'd like it to expand, but I don't see it developing in the near future," she said. "It would be hard because that would involve four years out of a student's life, not to mention the financial burden."

Quisenberry said exchange programs are implemented on college campuses, even at SIUC.

"In some ways it's already in existence," he said. "There are fellowships for studies abroad programs that have been in existence for some years at SIUC. But, United States' students aren't really interested in going to other countries for whatever reasons."

What Philipp has gained from America, he will take home and share with his family. The host family he will leave behind will not be forgotten.

"It's going to be a lot of mixed feelings," he said. "I'll be able to see my family again, which is very good. But, of course I'll miss my second family a lot."

"We'll stay in life-long contact."

fine-tunes the complete University class listing.

Steve Foster, Admissions and Records director, said his office makes suggestions to departments when scheduling conflicts occur.

"We gently nudge — and sometimes not so gently nudge — departments when we think there is too much concentration of classes at one particular time," Foster said.

The Undergraduate Student Government adopted a resolution at its March 19 meeting that supports adding more class sections.

USG's bill states that students should not have to spend extra semesters taking required classes because of scheduling conflicts.

The bill also mentions that non-traditional students who work and take classes often have trouble juggling school with their schedules.

USG President Troy Alim said if the University offers more class sections, all students would benefit.

"We talked about the problems students can have getting certain classes, how students couldn't attend required classes," he said. "We want to ensure that students have the opportunity to receive timely degrees."

Robert Jensen, College of Liberal Arts dean, said the changes in the core curriculum will let students graduate faster.

"We are hoping the additional resources we have now will enhance the process by which students get their degrees," he said. "The changes have been made so no student will be slowed down."

Jensen said not all students will be able to take advantage of added class sections. Some new sections will be early-morning classes or late-evening classes.

"We need to use the classrooms around the clock," Jensen said. "We can't schedule all classes between 10 o'clock in the morning and 3 o'clock in the afternoon."

The process still can be tricky.

"It is a balancing act using the resources we have, the teachers available and the various courses required in the core curriculum," Jensen said.

"We try to get the most teaching horsepower for a given amount of money."

Ex-candidates support Briggs, Budstick

CRYING REVOLUTION:

Students unite behind candidates who they say will make changes.

JENNIFER CAMDEN
DE POLITICS EDITOR

Donna Perkins stands outside Schneider Hall Monday night with an armful of orange fliers that support Carbondale City Council candidates John Budstick and Larry Briggs.

Budstick, Briggs and about 20 students calling themselves SUBBs — Students United for Briggs and Budstick — met there before leaving to canvass Thompson Point for student votes in Tuesday's council election.

"I believe in everything they're talking about," says Perkins, a sophomore in administration of justice from Tinley Park.

"Revolution!" cries James Saldana, who wrote and designed the fliers.

"Revolution!" cries more than half the crowd before heading to the residence halls.

A picture of Darth Vader adorns the front of one brochure, which states, "If we do not underestimate the power of the Dark Side before Tuesday, April 1, 1997, who will fight for your rights?"

City Council Elections

The brochure names "tyrannical towing companies," "shady slum lords," Halloween and the bar-entry age as reasons students should vote.

Saldana, a student at the College of DuPage, said he distributed 2,000 of the Darth Vader brochures to people who they entered the Student Center Tuesday.

He is a member of the Illinois Board of Higher Education's student advisory committee, as is Pat Kelly, a sophomore in philosophy from Naperville, who got 422 votes as a candidate who was defeated in February's council primary.

Kelly, along with losing candidates Mike Mandis, an SIUC graduate student who got 296 votes as a candidate in the primary, and Chris Medlin, who received 169 votes, are supporting Briggs and Budstick because they all agree on some student issues.

Saldana and Kelly say they are distributing about 40,000 fliers on campus and in student housing areas by Election Day. Some fliers openly support Briggs and Budstick, and others discuss issues without naming the candidates.

Kelly, who is coordinating the volunteers distributing fliers, said the record student turnout in the February primary should be topped by student turnout Tuesday.

"Even if they (Briggs and Budstick) don't win, it doesn't matter if we get the turnout," he said. "If students do their civic duty and vote, all of a sudden the dynamic of the community changes."

Briggs and Budstick do not mind being supported by such a group.

"Not that I concur with revolution," said Briggs, an SIUC associate professor of art and design. "I don't see it as a revolution. I see it as student excitement over something they have a chance to fix."

As he walks through Brown Hall greeting students, Budstick says the SUBBs fliers change the political rhetoric, not the message.

"We're trying to appeal to different segments of Carbondale, but with the same philosophy," he said.

Eighteen-year-old Brendan Mead, an undecided freshman from Naperville who lives at Brown Hall, plans to vote Tuesday because he wants the City Council to lower the bar-entry age.

"The ones going for 19 (as an entry age) have got my vote over someone who's totally against it," he said.

Kelly had planned to support Briggs and Budstick in the general election before the organization was formed.

He said students, community members and Briggs and Budstick supporters, as well as himself and Saldana, are contributing to the costs of printing and distributing materials. Kelly said he does not know the total cost of the materials.

Briggs, competing with Eden Thorne and incumbents Maggie Flanagan and Loyd Sumner for two four-year council seats, said his campaign is covering some of the group's expenses.

"But a lot of expenses don't get covered, including a lot of my expenses," he said.

Budstick, running against incumbent John Yow for the two-year council term, said no one in his campaign is working for SUBBs. He said Kelly, Mandis and Medlin offered to support him after the primary, and the SUBBs organization is not part of that endorsement.

Mandis and Medlin, who have loaned their names to Budstick endorsement ads published in the Daily Egyptian this week, both said they may canvass for Budstick and Briggs before the election.

Mandis, a second-year graduate student in workforce education and development from Murphysboro, said the two candidates, if elected, will address student issues.

"I think there's no other way these issues are going to get touched upon," he said.

Medlin, a 1995 graduate of SIUC from Carbondale, said though the election is Tuesday, there is time to mount a successful campaign with students.

"The whole reason we ran in the first place is because the city needs change, and these two candidates will move the city in the direction it needs to go more than any other candidates," he said.

Court upholds law restricting explicit programs to wee hours

PORN TELEVISION:

Playboy, Spice will only be allowed to broadcast late at night.

WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON—Sexually explicit TV channels such as the Playboy Television and Spice Entertainment will be blocked from broadcasting until after 10 p.m. on most cable systems, under a new federal law that was upheld by the Supreme Court on Monday.

In a one-line order, the justices said the law was constitutional and lifted an injunction that has kept it from being enforced.

The ruling should please parents and others who have complained that programs on these sexually oriented channels, though scrambled, can be seen and heard by their children on their TV sets.

But the law also means millions of adults who subscribe to these premium channels or pay-per-view broadcasts will be unable to see them except in late night hours. The channels themselves likely will suffer economically; the Playboy Entertainment Group estimates the programming restriction would cut its annual revenue of $4.5 million by as much as one-fourth.

The new law, included in the Telecommunications Act of 1996, deals with what industry buffs refer to as the problem of "signal bleed."

Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., sponsored the measure directed at sexually explicit channels two years ago in response to complaints from parents who came home to discover their children watching fuzzy images of X-rated programs.

Her amendment said cable operators must "fully block the video and audio portion" of channels "primarily dedicated to sexually oriented programming" on the TV sets of non-subscribers, or alternatively restrict this programming to between the hours of 10 p.m. and 6 a.m., when children are presumed not to be watching.

Officials for the cable industry said most cable systems will be forced to take the second option. Though the technology exists to completely block premium channels from homes that do not subscribe, it is new and quite costly, the officials said.

"We'll abide by the law, and if it says after 10 p.m., that's when we will offer Spice as a pay-per-view option," said Bill Rosendahl, senior vice-president of Century Communications in Los Angeles. "This puts the burden on the (cable) operators, and it means we'll have to take a look at the (blocking) technology."

In their brief, the Playboy Entertainment Group told justices that "all the major cable operators have announced they will adopt the time channeling option if (the law) becomes effective."

Feinstein on Monday hailed the court ruling. "Parents have enough to do without having to monitor hundreds of cable channels to see what X-rated materials is coming into their home," she said.

Rasberry heard Toure speak when he visited SIUC in 1995, but she wanted others to have the same chance. She said Toure's present trip to the United States may be his last.

"I believe that this is his last trip to America, let alone SIU," she said. "He is very phical, and I'm afraid that he is not physically able to make the trip again."

Rasberry's said her belief prompted her to compile a long list of people to ask for funding to bring Toure to campus before he went back to Africa.

One of the people she contacted was John Jackson, vice chancellor of Academic Affairs and provost.

Jackson used Toure's book, "Black Power," in classes he taught over the years as a political science professor, and he heard Toure speak when he was a graduate student.

Jackson wanted to help Rasberry reach her goal so others on campus could know of Toure's political influence.

"In the late '60s and early '70s, he was one of the most influential members of the Civil Rights Movement, right along with Dr. King," Jackson said. "I hope our young people come out to hear him speak because he's got a long-term perspective."

"I myself would like to hear if any of his ideas about the movement have changed since the '60s."

Although Jackson and others were willing to help her, once March arrived, Rasberry was afraid Toure would never come to campus. She almost gave up the effort, but one organization gave her the incentive to keep trying to bring Toure to the campus.

"After reading the article (about efforts to bring Toure) in the DE, the Feminist Action Committee (which is housed in Women's Studies) approached me and told me that they wanted to give us their entire budget," she said. "I was very surprised because I'd become overwhelmed by that point, but they gave me the incentive to keep pushing and trying."

Eventually Rasberry raised $3,350, with Black Affairs Council giving her most of that amount.

Jermal Powell of Undergraduate Student Government said its finance committee recommended Monday to give the NAACP an additional $700 for Toure's expenses.

Bringing Toure to campus took a lot of effort, but Rasberry received new insight about the help one can receive on the SIUC campus.

"I did a lot of the legwork, but the most important thing is that bringing Kwame Toure here was a collective effort by a lot of people," she said. "It showed me that if you put effort into whatever your vision is, it can actually become a reality on this campus. I think we are very fortunate that we get to have this man down here."

Law

According to NAFSA Association of International Educators documents, the new immigration laws primarily will affect international students through increased tracking provisions, which will detail information about a student's academic standing, current address and whether or not any disciplinary action has been taken by the school against the student.

At present, administrators such as Coppi are required to send this information to the U.S. Immigration Service upon request. Coppi said Tuesday's changes will make this a mandatory procedure in which international student information is sent electronically each month. "We never had to report on or police our students before," Coppi said. "This is going to be inconvenient and unnecessary."

Some international students, including Kiki Sidiropoulou, a senior in microbiology and physiology from Greece, are concerned that the new laws are the beginning of the end of immigration into the United States.

"I don't think it will affect enrollment much, because a lot of students are unaware of the actual laws," Sidiropoulou said. "It will affect our lives, though."

"I think it will strain international students financially. A lot of these students do jobs (in America) that just pay cash, but now they might be thinking twice before they do that. This is not just tracking students; it's ending the U.S. policy of immigration."

Evelyn Koine, assistant director of International Admissions and Records, is more hopeful.

"In the past, changes in immigration laws haven't affected us too new laws will not have as much of an effect on the international population as does the United States' image overseas.

Kelvin Booker, an international Admissions and Records officer, Japan. When they hear of crime, killing and gangs, they think twice before sending their children here.

"Right around the time there was the Michael Fay caning trial in Singapore, we had a lot of Singapore applications in. I haven't seen a Singapore application for a long time now. It's politics."

Nevertheless, some of those who work with international students on campus are worried.

"These new laws send an interesting message to the world," Coppi said. "I know it sounds silly, but when you throw a pebble, the ripples will cross the sea. That's how international enrollment works."

In Thursday's continuation of this series, the story will explore University approaches to solving international student enrollment problems.

I know it sounds silly, but when you throw a pebble, the ripples will cross the sea. That's how international enrollment works.

CARLA COPPI
ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR OF INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS AND SCHOLARS

much," Koine said. "You have to realize that if it affects SIUC, it is affecting the rest of the country, too. So it won't be a big problem."

But even though tracking may deter potential students from overseas, one administrator believes the said the United States is hurting itself whenever it receives bad press overseas.

"Right now, there is the rape case in Korea and one in Japan," Booker said. "Things like that don't sit too well in traditional countries like

Player takes hard route to Final Four

OUT OF NOWHERE:
Bobby Jackson continues winning tradition.

THE BALTIMORE SUN

Bobby Jackson has made a career out of coming from nowhere to become a star. He did it at Salisbury High School in North Carolina. He did it at Western Nebraska Junior College. And now he is doing it at the University of Minnesota.

On the college level, it has taken five years and nearly as many injuries for Jackson to reach his current status as the player who has led the Gophers to the school's first Final Four. Minnesota will play defending champion Kentucky Saturday at the RCA Dome in Indianapolis. But injuries have long played a part in Jackson's career. "As a freshman, he didn't come out for the JV team because he broke a toe right before tryouts," Sam Gaely, Jackson's coach at Salisbury, recalled yesterday.

So through a connection with Western Nebraska Coach Dave Campbell, who had played college ball in Salisbury and had done his student teaching there, Gaely sent Jackson off to Scots Bluff, Neb. Shortly before the start of pre-season workouts his freshman year, Jackson tore the anterior cruciate ligament in his knee.

This year has been a lot different for Jackson. He has gone from being honorable mention All-Big Ten to the conference's Player of the Year.

PIAZZA

with him all season but had hoped it wasn't something of this magnitude," Callahan said. "Everyone had high hopes for Dave following a strong sophomore season, and it is a blow losing one of our top hurlers. He had a heck of a year last season. This just threw five wins right out the window."

Callahan, who has never had a pitcher suffer such an injury, said Piazza's injury will require a lot of rehabilitation once it is repaired. "The rehabilitation is an intense program and a lot of responsibility falls on Dave right now," Callahan said. "He is really going to have to stick to it. This is the first pitcher I have ever coached who has had to have surgery, but we certainly know that he is a battler and will do everything it takes to come back from this adversity."

Piazza is not the only one who will suffer from the injury.

With senior Tory Hattan and junior Aaron Bresko serving a 15-game suspension for violating team rules, SIUC's pitching staff is minus a top hurler now that Piazza is lost for the remainder of the year.

SIUC's pitching staff has yet to find a consistent hurler who can throw strikes.

"Adding a third guy to that list has caused some problems," Callahan said. "It was kind of a given that Piazza and Hattan had a good chance of being our No. 1 and (No.) 2 guys this season. That is kind of how we finished last year. I guess we are going to have to find out what we are made of on the hill."

"We've got some guys who will have to step up for us."

One pitcher Callahan is hoping will help bail SIUC out of its jam is left-hander Dave Anderson, who struggled during his last outing against McKendree College Sunday with six hits and six earned runs in five innings of work.

Salukis head to St. Louis

REMATCH:

Softball Salukis look to repeat last week's triumph over St. Louis University.

DONNA COLTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC softball coach Kay Brechtelsbauer knows the Salukis need to keep today's game against St. Louis University in perspective.

The Salukis (15-10) thrashed SLU 10-0 Friday in five innings at the Saluki Invitational during a career-first no-hitter thrown by freshman pitcher Carisa Winters. SIUC will meet the Billikens (1-15) again at 3 today in St. Louis.

"It is easy for a team to take (SLU) for granted (because we beat them last week)," she said. "As a team we cannot take them for granted."

Senior right fielder Gwen Basinger said the Salukis must set the level of the game if they want to be victorious.

"When you beat a team as bad as we beat St. Louis, it is hard to keep focus on what is important," she said. "We are concentrating on playing on our level rather than theirs."

SOFTBALL

Game time between SIUC (15-10) and SLU (1-15) Wednesday will begin at 3 p.m. in St. Louis.

"(The game) will give us a big test as to whether we can play at our level. We will come through."

SIUC's offense is led by four Salukis who are batting over .300 for the season.

Senior third baseman Becky Lis leads the host of sluggers. Lis is batting .338 in a 24-for-71 effort on offense. Lis also has recorded three doubles, two triples and 11 RBIs this season.

RAIN OR SHINE: Saluki shortstop Lori Greiner, a freshman from Morton, runs through fielding drills during indoor practice Tuesday afternoon at Davies Gym. The team could not practice outdoors because of the weather. The Salukis travel to St. Louis to take on St. Louis University today at 3 p.m.

Following Lis in batting average is freshman shortstop Lori Greiner. She bats a .333 average, while leading the team in doubles with five, and has recorded one triple, one home run and 13 RBIs in 25 games.

The other two Salukis over .300 are sophomore Jennifer Feldmeier, the Salukis' lead-off batter who is hitting .325, and sophomore Betsy Prater, who is contributing a .318 batting average to the lethal lineup.

As a team, the Salukis are batting .275, compared to their opponent's .197. SIUC has recorded seven homers, eight triples and 25 doubles in its 25 games this season.

Yet, even with the Salukis strong offensive effort so far this season, they must come out with a hot bat.

"We have to come out in the first inning and score some runs," Brechtelsbauer said. "They are a better ball club than they played against us. They are struggling and missing some pitchers, but nothing is ever for sure."

Freshman pitcher Tracy Remspecher said the game is just a matter of playing consistently.

"We will do the same thing that we do against any team," she said. "We are not going to take them lightly because every game is different."

"We will use it as any other game and to get ready for the (Western Illinois University) tournament coming up Friday."

Orioles name Reboulet to replace Alomar

PERSONNEL ADJUSTMENT:

Baltimore manager picks player to fill in for suspended second baseman.

THE WASHINGTON POST

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Manager Davey Johnson made it official and named Jeff Reboulet the Baltimore Orioles' Opening Day second baseman Tuesday.

On the day that Roberto Alomar received medical clearance to begin playing spring-training games, Johnson appointed Reboulet to replace Alomar when he serves a five-game suspension to open the season.

It became clear that Reboulet would get the assignment when General Manager Pat Gillick said Monday that club officials plan to ask Kelly Gruber to begin the season at Class AAA Rochester, and Johnson said of Reboulet: "He certainly deserves it."

"It's something you always dream about, playing Opening Day," said Reboulet, a .248 hitter during his five major-league seasons with the Minnesota Twins. "My job is as a utility guy obviously, and I want to do it well. As a utility player, your job is to fill in when you're needed to fill in and be ready when you're needed. I just have a little more preparation for this one. I can't be Roberto. I just need to be Jeff Reboulet."

"Whatever happens the first five days happens. My goal is to be here at the end of the year and win the World Series."

Alomar, who hasn't played all spring because of a badly sprained left ankle, was available for a pinch-hitting appearance Tuesday, club officials said. He didn't appear in the Orioles' 8-5 loss to the Florida Marlins, but Johnson said Alomar will accompany the team on its trip to Port St. Lucie, Fla., for Wednesday's game against the New York Mets.

X-rays on center fielder Brady Anderson's ribs revealed no fractures. Anderson is listed as day to day with bruised ribs.

The Orioles claimed catcher Tim Laker off waivers Tuesday from the Montreal Expos. They optioned reliever Hector Ramirez to Rochester, reassigned pitcher Brian Williams to their minor-league camp and returned infielder Danny Magee, a Rule 5 draftee last winter, to the Atlanta Braves.

Schutteck earns MVC honors

Saluki softball hurler Jamie Schutteck has been named the Missouri Valley Conference's pitcher of the week. During the Saluki Invitational Friday and Saturday, Schutteck, a senior right-hander from Herrin, went 2-0 with a minuscule 0.30 ERA. Schutteck allowed just six hits while striking out 15 in 14 innings of work. Against Northern Iowa University, Schutteck threw a one-hitter on her way to a career-best 13 strikeouts.

Bulls memorabilia among items to be auctioned

A basketball signed by every member of the Chicago Bulls and a pennant signed by Michael Jordan, Scottie Pippen and Ron Harper are among several items being auctioned at the first annual Saluki baseball fish fry and sports memorabilia auction Friday night at the Carbondale Elks Club, 220 W. Jackson St.

Included in the sports memorabilia auction is an autographed baseball and ticket by Dennis Eckersley after the former Oakland Athletics pitcher turned St. Louis Cardinal got his 300th save. Other items include caps, photos, pennants and balls signed by former major leaguers Whitey Herzog and Bob Feller, plus former Saluki players Steve Finley and Sean Bergman. The event will begin at 5 p.m., with the auction starting at 8. Cost for the all-you-can-eat dinner is $5 for adults and $3 for children under 12. All proceeds will benefit Saluki baseball.

Salukis washed out again

The baseball Salukis' game against the University of Illinois Tuesday afternoon at Abe Martin Field was canceled because of rain. No make-up date has been set. Tuesday's cancellation marks the fourth game that has been called because of rain.

The Salukis try their luck again Saturday and Sunday when they play host to the Southwest Missouri State University Bears for two doubleheaders beginning at noon Saturday and 1 p.m. Sunday.

Indians and Braves cutting blockbuster trade deal

The Atlanta Braves announced Tuesday they would be trading outfielders David Justice and Marquis Grissom for the Cleveland Indians' center fielder Kenny Lofton and left-handed reliever Alan Embree.

Justice, who was said to be angry about the trade, was traded because the Braves wanted to unload his high salary to another team. The Indians traded Lofton because he will be a free agent at the end of the 1997 season, and they do not want another situation like the one that occurred when Albert Belle left the team.

Under the new contracts, the Braves will pay Lofton $4.75 million, while the Indians will shell out $6 million for Justice and $4.8 million annually for Grissom for the remainder of his four-year contract.

Embree was considered a throw-in to the trade. He will fill the need for relievers in the Braves' bullpen.

Thomas returns to Cowboys

The Dallas Cowboys have re-signed free-agent defensive end Broderick Thomas. Last season, he tied for second on the team with 4 1/2 sacks and tied for the team lead with three fumble recoveries.

Salukis second at golf invite

HOME GREEN:

SIUC women golfers send statement to competition at Saluki Invitational.

BRAD WEBER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Senior Molly Hudgins was determined to show her women's golf competitors Monday that SIUC should not be taken lightly.

The Salukis finished 14th place at the Louisiana State University/Fairwood Invitational March 16, but came back Monday finishing second place at the Saluki Invitational.

Hudgins said the team was disappointed by the performance in Baton Rouge, La., and wanted to come out and make a statement at their own invitational Sunday and Monday.

"I think we had an overall good performance," she said. "For us it was a good finish in a great field. I think this performance gives us confidence heading into the conference championship."

The University of Missouri won the Saluki Invitational with a score of 622, which was 22 strokes ahead of SIUC, while Illinois State finished third.

Eastern Kentucky's Beverly Brockman shot five over par 77 Monday to hold on to first place for individuals, while Missouri's Letitia Moses finished second one stroke behind. SIUC junior Stacy Skillman placed third scoring 156 and was six shots off the pace.

Women's coach Diane Daugherty said golf is a funny thing because one day someone can have a great day, while the others play average and still can win.

"For us Stacey shot a 74, which was only two over par," she said. "That helps when you're playing against tough teams."

Besides Skillman, Hudgins and junior Jamie Smith finished in the top 10.

Smith said she knew Missouri was going to be tough but thought the team still came through and performed at a high level.

"We did really well," she said. "Our second day score was excellent because it was so windy out there."

For the Salukis, it was their only home meet of the season. Daugherty said having a home meet during the regular season is helpful to the program because she is able to bring in top recruits.

"Playing at Hickory Ridge Golf Course is a tremendous asset in recruiting," she said. "We had over 100 volunteers help during the invitational, and coach May Scott of Missouri said the invitational was the nicest one that the program has ever been a part of."

Hudgins said the team needed some confidence after its tough spring break trip, and playing before the home crowd was just what the team needed.

"It did a lot for our confidence when the people in the crowd were cheering for us," she said. "We fought hard and kept competing."

Up next for the Salukis is the Indiana Women's Invitational April 5-6 in Bloomington, Ind.

Hudgins said the team has shown it can compete, and the team will have a lot of confidence heading to Indiana University.

"We're going to face many Big 10 schools at the invitational," she said. "I think we can finish in the top five because we've shown we can compete."

Smith said the team has been practicing since February and now is the time to hit stride before the Missouri Valley Conference Championship.

"Each competition gets you more ready for the MVC," she said. "We're feeling more confident each week."

SIUC pitcher out on injury for season

BULLPEN BLUES:

Dawgs left short-handed on mound due to Piazza elbow surgery.

Saluki pitcher Dave Piazza will have to sit out the remainder of the season because of a torn ulnar collateral ligament in his right elbow.

Piazza, a junior from Aurora, had been experiencing elbow discomfort all season but had no idea how severe it was until Tuesday, when he was informed of his season-ending injury.

"I really don't have any thoughts on it," Piazza said. "It's just very discouraging because there is nothing I can do about it. I just have to take care of it and hopefully come back next year."

Piazza, a second-team Missouri Valley Conference selection last season, will undergo surgery Thursday to repair the ligament, as well as six to eight months of rehabilitation.

Fortunately Piazza's injury occurred early in the year, which may enable him to be red-shirted. Piazza meets the requirements necessary to apply for a medical red-shirt.

If he is granted the red-shirt, he will not be charged with a year's eligibility.

"Our initial impression is that things will work out," Saluki coach Dan Callahan said. "But that is not to say it is a given. We have to put in a request for it."

After going 5-1 in league action last year, Piazza made just six appearances this season, going 0-5 with a 9.97 ERA, which Piazza attributed more to lack of rest rather than injury.

"I just thought I needed some rest," Piazza said. "But it just kept getting worse, and I thought it was something else."

Callahan decided to rest the right-hander in hopes Piazza could overcome the injury before the tear was discovered.
