COBA cancels plans to run book exchange

By Andrew Strauss Staff Writer

The College of Business and Administrative Council has canceled plans for the book exchange, which would have been competing with the Undergraduate Student Organization book cooperative, because the council felt the efforts of the USO would be enough to satisfy student needs, according to Kelly Ensley, COBA Book Exchange committee chairman.

Kelly added that COBA has offered to help the USO with its co-op.

According to John Mitchell, a COBA member, several members of the council had originally believed that the USO co-op would be unsuccessful, but decided at a meeting Thursday that it would be feasible. Based on this, COBA canceled its book exchange.

At the beginning of the semester, USO President Todd Nelson said it would work the co-op, but COBA refused. At the time, COBA President Todd Ensley said the USO co-op would probably be unsuccessful because students would not be able to receive money for the books they sell until after the Christmas break.

Wrn the Graduate Student Organization proposed their version of the athletic fee referendum ballot, the choices were "in my touchdowns fee" or "I support the $30 athletics fee." After one month, eight meetings and six revisions, the USO, the Undergraduate Student Government, and the University administration emerged with a ballot containing not only a $20 and $30 choice, but also a mandate to give the consequences of each choice.

In the meantime, several people's names were added to the presidency and moved around. Even a $35 choice appeared. The revisions were made during meetings between Debbie Rathbun, USO president, Laura Nelson, GSC vice president, USG president, Greg Larson, USO vice president, Bruce Swinson, GSC president, and student affairs and Albert Somit, president, of SIU-C.

NELSON SAID the meetings produced "fairly vigorous" debate on the appropriateness of the choices and the placement of information.

"The debate was not a result of bad feeling. We all just had definite stances we were defending and promoting." Nelson said.

When the students first met with Swinson, Nelson said they had already spent the summer completing the proposal which had revised once, Nelson said. Dropped from the first draft were "the language of the ballot that the fee was gathered to $30 "temporarily" and "effectively without consulting the student body." The ballot choices asked only if students supported the $20 or $30 fee.

In related news, the Sigma Kappa sorority decided to work in the USO co-op, according to Cindy Lee, chairwoman of the USO Student Opinion committee.

The survey conducted pointed out to the students the disadvantage of the USO including no guarantee of books being sold, no guarantee of books being purchased for every class, a 10 percent commercial profit, and sales, the necessity of students to make separate trips to the Student Center to pick up the books being sold and to pick up the money or unsold books, and the waiting period before money from sold books can be collected. After these, about 80 percent of the students surveyed agreed "yes" to the question. "With these changes, and this amount, will you utilize the co-op?"

"When asked, "What would you do if there were not much money coming from using the co-op?" 40 students agreed that the waiting period before receiving their money for sold books would drive them away. Eighty-six percent of the students said nothing would prevent them from using the co-op.

This third ballot also had the first choices to the consequences of each choice. But at this point, the descriptions simply said that voting for the $20 fee would result in "a reduction in the scope of the intercollegiate athletics program" and that a $30 choice would result in a "maintenance of the intercollegiate athletics program as it currently exists.

A PROPOSAL for a $25 tax on the ballot was also made during this first meeting with Swinson. Nelson said. This proposal was Somit's and he made it because he felt there might be a constituency that would want to increase the fee, she said.

"Swinson said that $15 was never seriously considered," and the $30 choice was dropped because the issue of the referendum was whether students wanted a $20 or $30 fee. The fourth version of the ballot, which also followed a meeting with Swinson, reemphasized the students' right to the choices on the ballot. Added to the $30 choice was a notation that the $600,000 would be cut from the sports program if that choice was enacted. The consequences of the cut would be the elimination of women's sport such as swimming (a number of minor men's sports. This statement of the consequences of the ballot portion from the explanatory.

THE STATEMENT would be on the move throughout the negotiations, going from the explanatory note on the fifth draft and returning to the choices on the sixth and seventh drafts.

Nelson said the statement was originally moved to the ballot choices because Smot commented that people might not read the top half of the ballot thoroughly, and the consequence of the choices were needed to make sure the students made an informed choice.

The main problem that occurred when the statement of consequences was moved into the ballot, however, was that it made the choices look imbalanced, which's way it was returned to the explanatory note on the fifth draft, Nelson said.

But Nelson said that Smot suggested that if they added a description of the present program to the $25 cut and already knew that people might not read the top half of the ballot thoroughly, and the consequences of the choices were needed to make sure the students made an informed choice.

The explanation of the $25 cut could be returned to the choices and the ballot would still be returned to the choices and the ballot would still be returned to the explanatory note on the fifth draft.

Kirkland lashes out at Reagan economics

NEW YORK (AP) - AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland, ignoring a White House peace-making initiative, lashed out Monday at President Reagan, criticizing the administration's "promised us a boom and brought us a bust.

In a keynote address to the convention of the giant labor federation, Kirkland also assailed federal budgets.

In his first public comment on Stockman's statement that supply-side economics is only a "bush root" substitute for the old "trickle-down" theory that benefits for the rich will aid the poor, Kirkland asked:

"What can we do change the policies of this administration from the beginning now say that is one half of devastating as the recorded fleeting spans of honesty of its leading hatchet men.

The Kirkland broadside came as the administration sought to:"

Robert A. Smoln, special assistant to Reagan for public liaison, delivered to Kirkland over the weekend an invitation to meet with the president in the Oval Office on Dec. 1.

Reviews led to fee referendum wording

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a two-part series on the workings of the recent athletics fee referendum. Another story, focusing on the questions of biases in the wording of the referendum, will be in Wednesday's DailyEgyptian.

Chicago service tax ruled unconstitutional by state court

SPRINGFIELD (AP) - Chicago's 1 percent service tax imposed last summer to help raise money for the city's ailing mass transit system was ruled unconstitutional Monday by the Illinois Supreme Court.

The 4-3 high court ruling reversed a decision handed down in August by Judge Richard L. Curry, Circuit Court Judge Richard L. Curry, who upheld the legality of the tax on the service of lawyers and other business and professional firms.

The Supreme Court did not explain its decision, saying a written opinion would be filed Tuesday. "It is the judgment of this court that the judgment of the Circuit Court of Cook County is hereby reversed on the grounds that the Chicago service-tax ordinance is unconstitutional," the court said in a four-paragraph announcement.

"This announcement is made at this time because of the public interest in this revenue generating ordinance," the court said.

The state's high court heard oral arguments in the case Sept. 8.

Bob Sajig, a spokesman for Mayor Jane Byrne, said city officials had just learned of the decision and had no immediate comment. He said he did not know whether city lawyers would appeal the decision or if officials would seek some other relief for the tax to raise mass transit.

The Chicago City Council imposed the 1 percent services tax after the legislature failed to approve any increase in state aid for the metropolitan area's deficit-ridden transit system.

The Chicago Bar Association and other professional groups have immediately challenged the levy on a variety of grounds.

While the tax is paid by those who receive the services of lawyers, accountants, doctors and others, it is collected and turned over to the city by the service providers.

Hinchley listed in serious condition

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Justice Department said Monday it could not determine yet whether accused presidential assassin John W. Hinckley Jr. suffered permanent brain damage in a 5-minute attempt to hang himself before marshals cut him down.

Department spokesman Tom DeRosa said Hinckley was in serious condition, but improving in the intensive care unit of the hospital at the Fort Meade, Md., army base where he was confined. Hinckley's neck was not broken, and his spine was unharmed, but he was suffering from acute lack of oxygen when he reached the hospital emergency room at 3:46 p.m. Sunday.

"He is expected to recover but it is not possible at this time to determine if any permanent neurological defects will result," DeRosa said. "It was not a suicide attempt."

DeRosa said Hinckley was scheduled to be arraigned in trial here Jan. 4 on charges of attempting to assassinate President Reagan.

DeRosa said Hinckley had stuffed a piece of cardboard cracker box in the doorlock to his cell at 5 p.m. Sunday when the U.S. marshal who was watching him from an adjacent room turned away to attend his replacement. When the marshal turned back, Hinckley was standing on a chair on his bed tying an army field jacket onto a bar of the window opposite his door. He then dropped from the makeshift noose.

It was Hinckley's second reported attempt to hang himself in prison and could lead to a defense request to review again whether he is now competent to stand trial.
Write-in candidates important in upcoming USO elections

By Andrew Straag
Staff Writer

Mickey Mouse, Richard Nixon or Pat Paulsen to have shots at winning a seat in Wednesday's Student Senate elections.

Since only 23 senators will be named on the ballots, and two seats have no candidates running for them, write-in candidates must win in order for all 25 seats to be filled.

The Senate, which allocates Student Activity Fee monies to various student organizations and represents student opinions in many campus issues, has five open seats to be filled in Wednesday's elections.

The seats to be filled include one from Thompson Point, two from East Campus, six each from the east and west sides of the city and one from each of the University's 10 colleges. Students can vote for two senators, but can only vote for senators running in their residential district and in their academic unit.

For example, Thompson Point residents can vote only for the Thompson Point candidates and the candidates representing the academic unit in which they are registered, according to Gary Daughenbaugh, Undergraduate Student Organization election commissioner.

Polling places for residential areas are: both ends of the Student Center, Morris Library, the Communications Building, the James Necters Building, the Technology Building and the General Classroom and Office Building for the west side, which represents students living off-campus west of the Illinois Central Gulf railroad tracks, the Recreation Center and Krugel Hall for the east side, which represents students living off-campus east of the railroad tracks: Lents Hall for students living in Thompson Point and Trueblood and Grinnell halls for students living in University Park and Brush Towers.

No names will be on the ballots for seats representing the College of Communications and the School of Technical Careers, and only four students are running for six west side seats.

The only contested positions will be the six east side seats.

Police see car as clue in murder case

The Jackson County Sheriff's Department said it is looking for the driver of a black-over-silver car that was seen parked Wednesday along the gravel road near the strip mine pit where the body of Joan Wetherall of Carbondale was found.

Sheriff Don White said a motorist noticed the car parked about one-half mile south of the pit, between 7:30 and 8 a.m. Wednesday. Miss Wetherall's nude body was found at about 10:45 a.m. Wednesday along a bank of the pit which is off of the Elkville-Vergennes Blacktop Road.

White asked that the driver of the unidentified car, or anyone else who may have information related to the Wetherall investigation, call the sheriff's department at 694-2177.

Jackson County Coroner Don Ruskadale said a preliminary autopsy showed that Miss Wetherall was strangled. He added that it could not be determined if Miss Wetherall had been sexually assaulted.
Reaganomics reflected in Washington populace

WASHINGTON, D.C., is a city of contradictions. On one hand, a flower-potful political center in the world, and has the trappings and opulence to match. On the other hand, many city residents are concretley poor minority members who do the menial jobs - waiting tables, opening doors, driving cabs - that make the living easy for the more fortunate.

Last week an SIUC delegation of journalism students stayed in one of those centers of opulence, the Hyatt Regency Hotel near the Capitol Building. The event was the annual convention of the Society of Professional Journalists Sigma Delta Chi.

The hotel and the society pulled out all the stops for the convention, and of Midwesteners accustomed to simpler lifestyles, it was easy to be dazzled by the chandeliered ballrooms, the free drinks, and the patronage of servants-in-waiting.

The WEEK WE were there was the week that Reaganomics hit the headlines, and that Ronald Reagan's economic policies were really warmed-over "trickles down" theory, and that nobody really had any solid ideas of where the economy would go when the policies would take effect. Needless to say, the article, that Ronald Reagan's economic policies will result in the rich getting richer, and the poor getting poorer.

The GOVERNMENT side of the city is beautiful. All the power and majesty of a rich and strong nation are solidly stated in the massive and ornate buildings of the federal government.

Washington also contains Georgetown, which is a trendy merchant center crammed with small stores and restaurants and an even more residential district. Part of this section is called home by the small contingent of middle-class found in the city, although the "silent majority" also resides in other pieces of the town.

But unlike most of America, there doesn't seem to be a large middle-class population here. Then there's the good news of the day. Like most of America, Washington has a seamy, marginal side to it that is not found sleeping in the street, or in the blocks from the Capitol Building. The starkly and freshly-painted White House can be viewed from butechered buildings where people live. White House, Reagan, herself a symbol of pristine purity, looks over 250,000 worth of low class, and her own beauty salon a mile away people scrounge around restaurant garbou looking for dinner and maybe a new rag for their backs.

THESE CONTRASTS make one wonder whether this land remains the land of economic opportunity. With the ad ministration's plutocratic policies now being rubber-stamped by Congress, it doesn't look as though a poor person can rise above his station. Reagan's policies will allow the wealthy to escape more of their tax burden by cutting, among other social programs welfare for the poor. The poor get poorer, the rich get richer.

If Reagan and Stockman continue to get their economic way, the whole country may become the microcosm of its capital - a contrast of rich and poor where the economic policies are hanging on for dear life.

With a waste dump in the backyard, how long 'til the corn starts to glow?

By Michael Scott
Graduate Student, Curriculum and Instruction

Does the image contain a story of a waste dump in the backyard and the impact it has on the corn crop? Yes, the article discusses the impact of a waste dump on the corn crop, suggesting that if the dump is not properly managed, the corn may be contaminated and not suitable for consumption. The article uses the metaphor of the dump causing the corn to 'glow' to emphasize the potential negative effects on the ecosystem and human health.

A long-term cure, not a quick-fix solution

By Ken Oehler
Senior, Pre-Law

The image contains a quote from a senior who states that the solutions to environmental problems are long-term and require a comprehensive approach, not just a quick fix. The quote highlights the need for sustained effort and commitment to address environmental challenges, emphasizing the importance of looking beyond short-term solutions.

The Viewpoint

With a waste dump in the backyard, how long 'til the corn starts to glow?

By Bill Weaver
Graduate Student, Speech Communication

The author suggests that living near a waste dump can have serious consequences for health and the environment. The article highlights the need for proper waste management and the importance of advocating for environmental protection to prevent such situations from occurring.

'Freedom' is a matter of privileges

By Byli Weaver
Graduate Student, Speech Communication

The article argues that true freedom is not simply the absence of constraints but is a matter of privileges, highlighting that certain groups benefit more from this freedom than others. The author calls for a more inclusive and equitable definition of freedom that acknowledges the power dynamics and inequalities that exist in society.

Voices forged together 'beautifully' by chorale

By Joe Walter

Individual voices forged beautifully into a largely impressive performance in the concert Friday night by the SUU-C chorale, conducted by David Williams of the School of Music and accompanied by his wife, Kazee, on piano.

The concert contained some very beautiful choral pieces, including two experimental selections which were accompanied by Kazee on recorded electronic music.

The first number, "Budavari Te Deum" by Hungarian composer Zoltan Kodaly, started off beautifully with well-done solos by Susan Clark-Hepes, soprano; John Kazee, tenor; Para Jones, alto, and Ron Heeter, bass.

Joyce, who hit her high notes flawlessly, and Kazee, with his strong, rich voice, without a doubt highlighted the solos, which were very much appreciated by the audience.

Williams had "Set Me As A Seal Upon Thine Heart" from "Baal" launched by Kazee's fine tenor.

A solo performance by Julia King, soprano, was very moving, evoking a feeling of sorrowfulness.

The next two selections, "The Call of Isaiah," by J.R. Heiligenberg, was sung very well by the chorus, but "The Shepherd's Song," by John Winslow, included some very beautiful music. The chorus also included percussion by Russell DeVore.

The choir of the West, probably "The Call of Isaiah was the most listenable. This was probably because the mood evoked by the chorus was so touching. The music seemed to fit well with the chorus part.

Unfortunately, the taped music seemed to be only a distraction on "The Shepherd's Song." However, Karen Siener's soprano solo, delivered from offstage, offered a unique effect that enhanced the selection.

The finale, H.T. Burleigh's "My Lord What A Morning," was performed with much tradition and was delivered in fine style.

A massage and relaxation workshop, co-sponsored by the Student Wellness Resource Center and the Office of Intramural-Recreational Sports, will be offered for students from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday in Room 108 of the Recreation Center.

William Wright, associate professor in computer science, will speak on "Some Average Performance Measures for the B-Tree" at 4 p.m. Tuesday in Facer 1238. The lecture is sponsored by the Department of Computer Science.

Tom Erickson, an instructor for the Becker CPA Review Course, will be the guest speaker at a joint meeting of the Accounting Society and Beta Alpha Psi, a professional accounting fraternity, at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in Ballroom A.

Eugene T. Moroni, former senior vice president of operations for the Old Ben Coal Co., will be the guest speaker at the November membership meeting of the Southern Illinois Iota of Delta Chi, a non-profit organization dedicated to economic development in Southern Illinois.

The Recreation Center meeting scheduled for Tuesday has been cancelled. The next and final meeting of the semester will be at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 8, in the Thebes Room.

MACHINE THAT NEVER STOPS

You may not know it, but you have a machine that will keep running as long as you live. And that can be a long time if you take good care of it. The machine? Your body.

The human body is a wonderful machine when it's in good working order. But it can happen to it that it throw it out of balance. Poor posture. Muscle strain. A spinal column out of alignment putting unbalanced pressure on nerve centers. A general fatigue caused by poor nutrition.

Spiral realignments can be spotted, so can the stress that results from the misalignment. The nervous system can be smoothed and pressure relieved. The "out of balance" body can be restored to proper balance.

Every machine has a structure designed for smooth operation. Any defect in that structure can cause problems. In the human body, structural defects can cause aches and pains in the back, neck, and other parts of the body. When these aches and pains persist over a period of time that means you need treatment.

TWO OTHER significant changes then appeared on the fifth draft. First, a statement about the referendum being the opportunity for students to "influence the administration of athletics" was changed to the referendum being the opportunity for students to "influence the administration of athletics." Second, Swinburne was saying "according to the administration," which appeared before the phrase "the $30 fee was necessary to maintain the current program," was taken out.

Swinburne said that he suggested the "influence the future" change, but he could not remember exactly why he said so. However, that it could have been because the administration didn't want to think about current problems, "but also what should be done years from now."

The "according to the administration" clause was removed. Nelson said, because the administration felt it was a fact that the $30 fee was necessary to maintain the current program, and the "according clause" might make it seem that they were not certain.

NELSON SAID that her feeling was that the consequences were not cut out a curriculm because "any time you cut $20,000 from a program, it has to cause changes." Other than the return of the state to the consequences to the ballot choices, the sixth and final beatings were one major change. The $20 choice, which had been placed above the $30 choice on the fifth draft, was placed below the $30 choice.

Swinburne said that there was a feeling that the first changes would have an advantage. And, while it was obvious that the administration would like to see the $30 fee win, the students agreed to go ahead and switch the choices.

Nelson said the students realized only two weeks remained before the referendum, and that they were getting a little panicked because they still had to set up physical arrangements for the election.

"We realized the order of the choices was not as important as the election itself," Nelson said.

SWINBURNE SAID, however, that he would compromise of splitting half the ballots with the $20 choice on top was discussed, but was later rejected because the ballots might have gotten mixed up.

Swinburne also noted that a majority of the administration wanted was included in the ballot. He said that the consequences of the cuts were "less ominous then they really were" because a cut in fees might reduce the amount of state revenue the program got, and the loss in money for the athletics program more serious than the ballot reflected.

"Every attempt to be fair in what was stated was made. There was no compromise on both sides. Nobody dictated what the ballot would be," Swinburne said.

Those who shaped the athletics fee ballot said they were attempting to show the clear effects of the $20 and $30 choices. But Dave Beal, a visiting instructor in speech communication and his class in "Theories of Persuasion" concluded that the wording which presented the clear effects was biased.

Project aids ‘unconventional’ learners

By Vicki Olgeasy
Staff Writer

Woodrow Wilson and Thomas Edison have school in common with students in a program at SIU-C called Project Achieve.

The two prominent Americans had certain disabilities similar to those of students involved with the project.

Wilson and Edison, who were unable to learn in the conventional classroom setting, were able to succeed in their fields because they received extensive one-on-one training, according to Barbara Cordoni, director of Project Achieve.

"These are people who learn differently than who cannot learn or will not learn," said Cordoni. "Everybody learns differently.

Project Achieve, funded by the federal Office of Special Education, provides the one-on-one training that makes the difference between success and failure to college students with learning difficulties—specific kinds of disabilities that inhibit understanding and the use of symbols. Cordoni said the students have average or above intelligence in other areas.

Although his name is fictional, Bruce is a real SIU-C freshman who receives help from Project Achieve. He doesn't know what his learning disability is, but he said it "shows up in math and spelling."

"I don't notice how I'm learning," he said. "You don't know if you're learning from hearing or seeing."

Cordoni said each student’s specific learning disability is identified through two days of extensive diagnostic testing. An individual plan is effectively deal with the difficulty is then designed.

Students who have trouble reading, for example, may learn more if they are able to hear what they are reading, Cordoni said.

Like most of the Project Achieve students, Bruce receives help from a tutor—help that complements the usual course method of lectures and reading. Graduate students in special education are the usual tutors, Cordoni said, but graduate students from other disciplines are often hired to tutor students in higher-level courses.

Bruce meets with his tutor, Margie Beurig, twice a week in a lab in Pulliam Hall. In addition, he can call her anytime he needs help.

Besides helping him study for exams, Bruce said his tutor is planning to teach him to spell. He is learning to type now, something that he tried but couldn't learn in eighth grade.

Bruce says he can read well, but students who have more difficulty can listen to their books on tape. Students who have difficulty writing can take their tests orally through Specialized Student Services.

"Bruce was in special education classes in high school, but he said he is learning more and getting better grades in college."

He had wanted to go to college for some time, but he doesn't think he would have succeeded at the University without Project Achieve.

"I could probably make it here without the program," Bruce said, "but I wouldn't have a B average."

The goal of Project Achieve is to teach students with learning disabilities to monitor their own errors. Cordoni said. About half of the students who receive help from Project Achieve only do so for a short time.

"We keep them for a couple of years and really work with them until they don't need us anymore," she said.

Cordoni estimates that it costs about $4,500 to help a student with Project Achieve, but she said the program trains people to be taxpayers instead of tax users.

The Project Achieve students know what job they want after graduation. Cordoni said.

"Just because you have a learning disability doesn't mean you don't have goals," she said.

The quickest way to get emergency money.

These days a trip to the college bookstore can reduce your available funds to some small change. Luckily, that's about all you need to make the one phone call that can replenish your depleted funds in a couple of hours. Here's what to do:

1. Call home. Report the situation, and tell the folks they can get emergency cash to you fast by phone.

2. Ask them to call Western Union’s toll-free number, 800-325-6000 (in Missouri, 800-342-6700), anytime, day or night. They charge the money and service fee to their MasterCard® or VISA® card. A Western Union Charge Card Money Order, up to $1,000, will be flashed to the Western Union office or agent nearest your emergency.

3. Pick up your money—usually within two hours—at the local Western Union office or agent. There are 8,500 nationally, except in Alaska. Conveniently, about 900 locations are open 24 hours.

It’s that easy.

Be sure to remind your parents about our toll-free number. It’s all they need to back you up at the bookstore.

Proposal would shield farmers from grain elevator closings

GREENVILLE (AP) — Proposed legislation that would provide financial protection for farmers against grain elevator shutdowns was discussed at a public hearing Monday in Greenville and Murphysboro.

Earlier this year, Greenville-area farmers lost an estimated $466,000 when a grain elevator in the community closed unexpectedly. Early government estimates were that the company's remaining assets equaled only about 70 percent of the amount due to farmers.

The proposed bill would authorize a referendum on creating a state fund to provide 100 percent payoffs to farmers who lose assets when a grain elevator closes, said Rep. Frank Watson, R-Greenville, one of the bill's sponsors.

He said the fund would be created by a small tax on grain sales by dealers.

"We're concerned about recent increases in the number of grain elevators that have closed or gone bankrupt," Watson said. He said such a shutdown can wipe out the assets of farmers throughout a region and plunge an entire community into economic peril.

Elevators are currently required to post a bond according to the volume of business they do, up to a maximum of $100,000.

COMMON LAW

The School of Law will present a lecture by faculty member Patrick J. Kelley at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the auditorium of the new Lesar Law Building.

The topic of Kelley's talk will be "100 Years After The Common Law: A Critical Analysis of O. W. Holmes Jr.'s Theory of Torts." The Common Law, published in 1881, is considered a central influence on the development of the modem law of torts. Kelley, who recently joined the faculty at the School of Law, is currently researching tort law.
Three alumni to perform in concert

Three graduates of the SIU-C School of Music, Wilfred Delphin, Edwin Romain and Jeanine Wagner, will perform in concert at 8 p.m. Thursday at Shryock Auditorium.

Delphin and Romain have appeared together as duo pianists since their undergraduate days in New Orleans, where they attended Xavier University. Since that time the two have earned master's degrees in music at SIU-C and doctorates in music at the University of Southern Mississippi.

The two pianists have toured the United States for recitals in several major cities, including Washington, D.C., where they gave a command performance for President Jimmy Carter at a state dinner.

Wagner is a recent graduate of SIU-C's School of Music, where she earned bachelor's and master's degrees in music, specializing in opera performance. She has appeared in Mary Lou Lawrence Opera Theater and Summer Music Theater productions. Her most recent role was as Polly Brown in "The Boyfriend" in July.

Wagner has won National Association of Teachers of Singing competitions and the New York Metropolitan Opera district competition. She has also appeared with the Memphis Symphony as a violinist.

Admission for the performance is $2.

William Holden dies

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actor William Holden, who won an Oscar as the hard-living prisoner of war in "Stalag 17," and was the disenchanted news executive in "Network," was found dead at his apartment here Monday, police said.

Holden, 61, apparently died of natural causes, said Police Sgt. Dick Tappa. He had apparently been dead "for some time, possibly two or three days," Tappa said.

The body was found by the apartment's manager, who became concerned when he had not heard from Holden in two or three weeks, Tappa said.

"He went to the scene," Tappa said. "He was on the floor. No one else was there."

Holden had not been reported as poor health. But last year there were reports he was going to West Germany to consult with Dr. Hans Nieper, a cancer expert. Nieper had said at the time he did not think Holden was seriously ill.

The actor was a close friend of President Reagan. The president Monday expressed his sorrow about Holden's death.

Whitley was the first female to cross the finish line and had a time of 30:30 and also won a trophy and medallion.

Medallions were presented also to the runners who finished closest to their predicted times. Roger Giller won the men's prediction with a forecast of 18:00 and finished the run in 18:12. There was a tie for the women's prediction medal between Whitley and Sally Gross. Whitley missed her predicted finishing time of 20:00 by 25 seconds. Gross predicted a time of 30:00 and finished at 30:35.

The 21 entrants, 16 men and five women, covered an estimated 15 miles around campus.

Women runners finish season

The SIU-C Women's Rugby Club ended its season Saturday, but it didn't have to play a match.

The team from Indiana University failed to show up for the noon contest in Carbondale. The match did not count as a forfeit, so SIU-C ended the season with a 9-3 mark.

SIU-C scored two victories to place third in the All Illinois Tourney held last Saturday and Sunday at Champaign.

After losing 16-6 to Chicago, SIU-C came back to trounce Northern Illinois 124-0 Saturday with tries by Shannon Maulding, Adrianne Wesol. and a shared try by Erikson, two tries by Chris Killigan, Karen Paquin, Lupica, and a shared try by Barb Cavoto.

Gymnasts take 3rd in Kalamazoo meet

By Bob Morand

Staff Writer

Coach Bill Meade was "fairly satisfied" with his gymnasts' performances at the Bronco Invitational in Kalamazoo, Mich., a day later and 50 miles south of Springfield, Ill.

A day earlier and 50 miles north of Springfield, Ill., the Salukis gymnasts "got a bit better," according to Meade, at the Illinois Coaches Classic, but still showed some home early season jitters, according to Meade.

The SIU-C gymnasts wound up second place at the Bronco Invitational Friday with a five-man all-around score of 246.20. Michigan won the meet with a score of 198.35, and Illinois State came in second, posting a total of 153.30 points. Western Michigan, just barely edged out by the third-place Salukis by 20 points, finished fourth with 150.70 points. Moline State and Ball State finished fifth and sixth with totals of 149.8 and 140.75.

There were some bright spots for SIU-C gymnasts, however. Sophomore John Levy, who finished seventh in all-around competition two weeks ago in the Big Eight Invitational, landed again in the seventh spot this weekend with a score of 50.30 points.

Levy won the horizontal bar competition with a 9.50 mark and took second place in the floor exercise, with a 9.20 score, edging Marvin Gibbs' score by .15 points. Gibbs, of Michigan State, finished third with a 9.35 score, topping Minnesota's Zachary Pette, who took third place with a 9.20 score.

Senior Kevin Mazeika, coming off a score of 9.60, 6th in the floor exercise last weekend, won the floor exercise with a mark of 9.30.

Sophomore Kevin Mazeika won the vaulting competition with a score of 9.65, edging Michigan State's Carl Voss by .20 points. Mazeika also won the rings competition with a score of 9.50.

Mazeika took second place in the horizontal bar competition with a 9.15 mark.

According to Meade, the Salukis found themselves in sixth place after the first round of the pommel horse. From that point on, the SIU-C gymnasts started turning in some of the top nine in the pommel horse.

Mazeika again won the second place in the horizontal bar with a score of 9.40. Mazeika again was second notches below Levy. Levy won the horizontal bar with a fourth place score of 9.20. Illinois State's Kevin Kirks won that event with a 9.40.

Kirks is the Mideast Region's Most Valuable Performer for the invitational, according to Meade.

The gymnasts won't compete again until the Windy City Invitational in Chicago. However, a lot of practice is scheduled in the next two weeks to work out the kinks in some of the routines, Meade said.

STU-C tennis players Lito Ampon and David Desilets traveled 562 miles and seven hours to the Overland Park Invitational tournament near Kansas City over the weekend and came home with one of the first round losses to some tough competitors, according to Coach Dick LeFevre.

There was no consolation bracket for those who didn't make it past the first round, according to LeFevre. "There were a lot of excellent matches in the tournament, and no easy matches at all," LeFevre said. He added that not only collegiate tennis players participated, but area professional as well, which made for a more than competitive contest.

Ampon, described by LeFevre as the most consistent player on the Saluki team, lost in the first round to Mike Wolf, the top junior player, in the first set 6-4, but was closely beaten in the next two, 7-4 and 7-6.

Desilets lost to Missouri's Mark Casel, 6-4 and 7-6.
