Nicaragua war scare flares, subsides in week

WASHINGTON (AP) - As President Reagan was riding an avalanche of votes toward re-election the night of Nov. 6, reports that a possible Soviet shipment of MiG-21 jet fighters had reached Nicaragua stirred speculation that Reagan was preparing for a new military show against the Sandinista government.

Three days later, the MiG reports proved to be false, but Nicaragua nonetheless was seized with a bad case of war jitters. Tanks rumbled through the streets of Managua, amid government warnings that a U.S. invasion was imminent.

A week later, the war scare collapsed almost as quickly as it had begun. Washington was soft-pedaling its claims of massive Soviet arms supplies to the Sandinistas, and even a U.S.-backed Nicaraguan opposition leader was saying the United States had overreacted.

How did it? Nicaragua was scare of November 1984 got started, and why? Secretary of State George P. Shultz said it was the result of a "lack of criminal act, in my opinion," from within the Reagan administration.

Shultz and other U.S. officials denied repeatedly that an invasion of Nicaragua was being planned. Some suggested that Nicaragua itself might be gearing to invade neighboring countries, a move that Nicaragua's foreign minister declared would be "stupid" and "in any event - futile.

Whatever the truth, it was clear when the episode faded away that Nicaragua was not the focus of the U.S. national security establishment.

After all, American troops had occupied Nicaragua for most of the period between 1912 and 1933. More recently, the Nicaraguan administration had used the CIA to organize a guerrilla movement against the leftist Sandinistas.

News Analysis

The proposed Jackson County DUI-Oriented Traffic Safety Unit was given two opportunities to gain the approval of the Jackson County Board, but was turned down both times because of financial concerns.

At the board's meeting Wednesday, an initial motion proposing that the county not should not participate in the unit because of the county's present financial status was contested by board member Larry Lipe, who called the motion a "delaying tactic." At Lipe's urging the board voted upon an amendment to the motion which proposed that the county should approve the unit.

Lipe's amendment failed 7-4, and the DUI (driving under the influence) unit was rejected when the board soon after approved the original motion by the same vote.

Michael, chairwoman of the board's financial committee, called the Illinois Department of Transportation grant that the Sheriff's Office received last month to help pay for the unit "flawed.

Nelson said the board was concerned about the grant because the board didn't have for after the IDOT grant expires in 1987. The approximately $77,000 in profits which the grant would help bring to the county, she said, would not entitle the county to costs of additional personnel and equipment needed for the unit.

"In other words," she said, "we would be taking along two deputies and a statistician that we would have to pay for ourselves eventually.

"It's hard to turn down a net gain of $77,000, but if the unit hadn't had so many strings attached to it we would have agreed to it.

Lipe, one of the four board members who voted for the passage of the unit, said that the safety of the county's residents should come before the county's financial worries.

"It's kind of sad when citizens can't use their own highways because someone's driving under the influence," he said. "I think we're rather foolish not to approve the unit if it would pay itself off, but even if we don't make money it'll pay for itself in terms of lives saved."

Sheriff Bill Kilquist, who would have headed the unit had it passed, accused the board of "card-stamning," because, he said, they knew they were going to vote before they came in.

GPSC opposes housing rate boost

By David Liss
Staff Writer

The Graduate and Professional Student Council voted not to support a housing rate increase at its meeting Wednesday because it said basic maintenance needs have not been met at the Evergreen Terrace family housing area.

The GPSC passed a spontaneous resolution stating that it "does not support a rate increase for housing at this moment because maintenance problems need to be taken care of as routine procedures regardless of rate increases."

The resolution came as a result of a list of complaints and requests compiled at a Evergreen Terrace Council meeting with administration officials last Wednesday. The complaints include poor maintenance services and lack of follow up, as well as opposition to proposed separate metering for electricity due to fluctuating costs and lack of energy efficiency.

The requests call for the installation of security screens, the improved insect control and permission for residents to paint their apartments if they desire. The proposed 7.2 percent increase is to offset increasing costs of salaries and wages, food, maintenance and the installation of computer terminals in single student living areas, Rinella said.

Lebanon demands pullout of Israeli troops

NAQUORA, Lebanon (AP) - Lebanese negotiators Thursday demanded a quick and complete withdrawal of Israeli troops from south Lebanon and payment of $8 billion to $10 billion in war reparations by the Israeli state.

The Lebanese military delegation presented a long list of tough demands in the second round of negotiations with Israeli officers at the headquarters of the United Nations peacekeeping force.

Israel is concerned with the security of its northern border if the troops are pulled back. A cease-fire agreement signed by Lebanon and Israel on the future of southern Lebanon conflicted with Israel's previously stated positions.

Conf erence sources said Israel rejected the Lebanese declaration and asked instead for a detailed Lebanese plan on security arrangements following an Israeli withdrawal from the country it invaded b and-a-half years ago.

The Lebanese agreed to discuss the point of the security issue when the talks resume Monday in this border town, according to the sources who spoke on condition they not be identified.

The Lebanese demands, read by chief delegate Brig. Gen. Mohammed Hajj, included denunciation of Israel's oc cupation army and accusations that Israel had "strangled liberty and freedom of expression in southern Lebanon.

Conference sources and the joint cloning statement issued after the meeting Tuesday the Israeli delegation reiterated the Israelis refrained from arguing over the Lebanese charges in order to keep the talks from collapsing down.

A six-page copy of Hajj's statement was given to reporters.

Space shuttle headed back; participants hail successes

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Saying their pioneering flight helped pave the way for building space stations, the happy satellite watchers of Treasure Island and Discovery prepared Thursday to return to orbit, their two space salvage trophies safely locked on board. The shuttle and its five crew members are to make a dawn touchdown Friday at the Kennedy Space Center 500 miles from their launch pad where the eight-day mission began last week. In a news conference from space Thursday, the astronauts said their historic recovery of the Palapa B2 and Westar 6 satellites proved the versatility of the shuttle, showing it can both deliver and pick up in orbit.

Congressman told to refund illegal donations

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Illinois congressman must refund $7,756 in illegal contributions that he unwittingly received from the Chicago Board of Trade Clearing Corp., a divided Federal Election Commission tentatively decided Thursday. Rep. Martin Dies Jr., D-Texas, in a letter to the FEC last week, had asked the election agency to issue a formal opinion on whether he was obliged to refund the money. He said he had received nearly $30,000 that the trade group pumped into the campaign coffers of five prominent House Democrats in 1961 and 1962. The Chicago firm was fined $100,000 in Oct. 1962 for violating federal campaign laws by refusing to file four misdemeanor charges of making illegal campaign gifts.

Joint investigation of fires planned

By John Krukowski
Staff Writer

The Carbondale Police Department is taking part in a joint investigation of fires of "suspicious origin" in the city within the last month, the most recent being a house fire Saturday.

The Jackson County Sheriff's Office, the State Fire Marshal, and Illinois Department of Law Enforcement Division of Criminal Investigation also are participating in the investigation.

Carbondale Commander of Detectives Lt. Larry Hill said the investigation was begun "when it became apparent that there were an inordinate number of fires in the area."

The investigation is in its preliminary stages. Hill said, and no determination has been made as to who or what is responsible for the fires which have destroyed two lumber yards and several vacant houses in Carbondale. Nor has any connection between the fires been made, he says.

"We're not going to come out and lump them all together and say that they're all arson," he said, "but they are all suspicious."

Hill said there are no definite suspects in the case.

"Arson investigations are difficult," Hill said, and "we don't get many in Carbondale, but when we do it takes a lot of effort."

The police are asking people with information about the fires to call the state arson hotline, at 1-800-252-2947.

The Carbondale Fire Department has also stepped up its efforts in preventing fires by having its members patrol the city for suspicious activity near deserted buildings. Fire Chief Charles McCaughan said his department hasn't discovered anything pertinent yet.

Westmoreland takes stand in libel case

NEW YORK (AP) — Retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland, who commanded U.S. forces in Vietnam at the height of the war, testified for the first time Thursday in his $120 million libel suit against CBS, saying he paid scant attention to the enemy, troop-strength reports that are the focus of the suit.

The suit alleges Westmoreland was "selectively quoted" in a 1982 documentary which said the general led a 1967 "conspiracy" to suppress information that communist reports are the focus of the suit.

"It was really historic data," he said, speaking in the accent of his native South Carolina. "It was nothing that was useful to me... I was concentrating on current intelligence."

Westmoreland is expected to be on the witness stand for at least several days to deny the charges in the network's "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Conspiracy.

"Westmoreland," the broadcast said, "is anxious to demonstrate progress in the war effort... suppressed reports that put enemy strength at over 500,000 men, instead of the then-accepted level of less than 300,000."

The network indicated that President Lyndon B. Johnson and others in Washington may have been surprised by the power of the Communist's Tet Offensive in early 1968 because of the reports from Westmoreland.

GPSC: Housing rate boost opposed

The 7.2 percent rate increase would raise single student housing costs by $64 per semester. Southern Hills and Evergreen Terrace family housing area increases would be $18 and $26 per month respectively.

"It's not just the increase we're complaining about," said Evergreen Terrace Council member Dan Defosse. "It's the goods received for the increase."

He said the housing administration is "not trying to conserve energy to cut the costs."

Defosse said a survey after last week's meeting to gather maintenance complaints, Sam Rinella, University Housing director, said. Many of the responses were "things we can take care of," he said, such as switchplates and stove repairs.

"We're going to work on screens," Rinella said. The residents want screens. Defosse said, so that windows can be opened in warm weather to cut down the use of air conditioners.

Defosse said the cost of 50 or 60 screens would be "less expensive than one month of air conditioning."

An energy audit will also be performed at Evergreen Terrace during Thanksgiving break, Rinella said. "When you get into energy, you want to make sure that you get a payback for what you have to do," he said.

The administration has considered installing individual meters in Evergreen Terrace as well, Rinella said, which would force residents to pay for their own electricity. A possible 15 to 33 percent savings could result, he said.

The residents of Evergreen Terrace are against individual metering, according to the list of complaints and requests.

Philippines murder

IT IS CERTAINLY a bad time to actively oppose the rule of Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos. Opposition leaders who pose a threat to Marcos' "democratic" rule seem to turn up dead. Another outspoken opponent of Marcos met an untimely and violent end, just weeks after the series of killings came to a time when Marcos' rule has been suspect for quite some time, especially since the investigation of the assassination of senator Edward J. Clamaco, mayor of Zamboanga City and long-time antagonist of Marcos, became the fourth opposition leader from the region of Mindanao to be killed in the past eight weeks. Marcos' reaction to the murder of Clamaco was similar to his reaction to the death of Benigno Aquino: an expression of dismay and a promise to bring to justice those people responsible for the murder.

Named to head the investigation was Lt. Gen. Fidel Ramos, who was recently promoted to chief of the armed forces after his predecessor, Gen. Fabian Ver, was implicated in the Aquino murder. The series of killings come at a time when Marcos' 16-year rule is threatened by a groundswell of opposition, especially since many Filipinos have become disillusioned with the Marcos regime. With the election of Benigno Aquino in 1986, many Filipinos hoped that the Aquino administration would bring about much-needed reforms, but this hope has been dashed with the assassination of Benigno Aquino. The investigation of the assassination of Senator Edward J. Clamaco, mayor of Zamboanga City and long-time antagonist of Marcos, became the fourth opposition leader from the region of Mindanao to be killed in the past eight weeks. Marcos' reaction to the murder of Clamaco was similar to his reaction to the death of Benigno Aquino: an expression of dismay and a promise to bring to justice those people responsible for the murder.

THE ROLE OF THE UNITED STATES in the future of the Philippines is uncertain. The death of Aquino did not play well in Washington, D.C., causing President Reagan to cancel a visit to the islands. But at the same time, the United States continues to be a principle bankroller of the Marcos regime. With Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Station forming the base of American military power in the western Pacific, the United States is sure to act in its own best interest.

To what lengths Marcos will go to stay in power is unclear. He claims to have no role in the Aquino murder, but the majority of the Filipinos believe otherwise. It is not clear whether Marcos' assassination was an act of revenge or a calculated move to maintain power. The killing of Senator Edward J. Clamaco, mayor of Zamboanga City and long-time antagonist of Marcos, became the fourth opposition leader from the region of Mindanao to be killed in the past eight weeks. Marcos' reaction to the murder of Clamaco was similar to his reaction to the death of Benigno Aquino: an expression of dismay and a promise to bring to justice those people responsible for the murder.

Reagan coattails miss Congress

WHAT DID THE newly re-elected Ronald Reagan mean to the voters in Illinois? The results of the recent election indicated that Reagan's policies were popular with the Illinois electorate. The victory of Reagan in Illinois means a defeat for the Democratic Party and a victory for the Republicans. With a stronger Democratic House, Reagan was a personal victory, not a political one. When he says "I'm not a politician," he was probably referring to himself.
Language help is one-on-one

By Debra Colburn
Staff Writer

International students sometimes find that knowing English doesn’t necessarily mean that they’ll be able to speak with ease and understand the English that Americans speak. By meeting with fluent speakers, students learn about the patterns of another language and become better conversationalists.

The Language Exchange Program and English in Action at SIU-C allow native speakers of different languages to meet each other and help each other become better speakers.

THE LANGUAGE Exchange Program matches people who are interested in or are studying a foreign language with a native speaker of that language. The students meet for at least an hour each week and spend part of the time speaking in English and part speaking in the international student’s language, said Mary Beth DeStefano, student adviser for the Study Abroad program.

Most Americans in the exchange have been to or would like to go to another country or have an international interest in their careers, she said. Americans who have been to another country want to maintain relationships and cultural insights gained while in that country.

The program puts people together “who normally wouldn’t take the initiative to go out and make the contacts necessary with that native speaker,” DeStefano said.

The exchange is in its third year, she said. The first year it was an experimental program with 10 students. Last year about 40 students were matched. Currently 38 students are matched in Spanish, German, French, Finnish, Mandarin, Italian, and Japanese. Ten other students have signed up for the exchange but have not been matched with someone.

International students are needed to help American

by Debra Colburn
Staff Writer

Members of the International Friends Club are striving for intercultural understanding.

“Through a group called International Wives Friendship, this community volunteer group helps people from different nations understand each other and become friends,” said Debra Colburn, executive director of the International Wives’ Friendship.

International Wives’ Friendship is made up of volunteer American women meeting with international wives and their preschool children. Each Thursday afternoon about 100 women and children meet at the University Baptist Church in Carbondale. Those women, representing 22 countries including the United States, come together for such activities as conversational English classes, cooking demonstrations, handicrafts, and educational programs.

Josephine Hall, who has worked with the program since it was established in 1969, said the majority of the women are wives of students or faculty.

Hall said she initiated the program because she saw people with a variety of cultures. She asked some American friends to join her in being hosts to international students learning English.

While the group was still small, she taught English in the women’s homes. That is now part of the services provided by the International Wives’ Friendship.

“A lot of the women thoroughly enjoy it and don’t want to miss even one meeting,” she said.

The group provides English conversation classes that are formed according to the English language ability of the international women. Hall said. Usually there are about five different classes, some of which use textbooks. Other activities include educational programs, such as talks on preventing cancer, cultural exchange of customs, sewing instructions, handicrafts, slide shows, potlucks and picnics. The women also celebrate international holidays.

Transportation is provided to the meetings for international women who need it. A free nursery is also available for preschool children while the mothers are involved in the activities.

“If we can get Americans to know more about internationals through friendships, the world will become a much better place,” Sollberger said.

Local families welcome international students

By Joyce Vanderheide
Focus Editor

Seeing American students make plans for the holidays may remind international students of traditional family celebrations in their countries.

Through the Host Family Program at International Services, local families can help alleviate any loneliness that international students may feel during the holidays.

The program, a service of the International Friends Club, makes foreign students a part of American family life.

Inga Sollberger, coordinator of the program, said families can host students on a regular basis or on special occasions, such as Thanksgiving and Christmas.

CELEBRATING AMERICAN holidays is educational for international students and allows them to see that American life is “not only these Wild West films,” Sollberger said.

Host families are asked to make no special arrangements other than putting an extra plate on the table. Students “shouldn’t be museum pieces,” Sollberger said.

Last Thanksgiving 27 students and 12 families participated. Twenty-three students and 11 families participated last Christmas.

FAMILIES WHICH regularly host students are asked to visit with the student at least once a month. These visits include activities from shopping and recreation to apple and berry picking.

Sollberger said one family interested in community affairs took a student to a city government meeting and another took a student along to choose the family’s Christmas tree. A host family in Golconda invited a student to stay at the family farm during the summer.

Families from as far away as Springfield participate in the program, Sollberger said, as do families in Carbondale, Murphysboro, Marion and Marion.
FAMILIES: Students welcomed

and West Frankfort. Host families have included University faculty members, businessmen and farmers. She said that some host families have visited students in their home countries.

THIS YEAR 32 international students and 21 families are participating in the program on a regular basis. That number is lower than previous years, Solberger said, possibly because the program wasn’t announced at the fall orientation for international students.

Solberger and her family have been hosts for four years to Zulfa Zakaria, a Malaysian student. When she first arrived, students at Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Ron Grimmer, professor in mathematics, and his wife, Pat, are hosts to Punnee Orkvisessaphiibo, a woman from Thailand. The Grimmers have also been hosts to students from Japan and Germany, and Grimmer said he has enjoyed learning about those students’ customs.

Solberger said she likes to help students get through culture shock. At first, international students are excited about traveling and being in a new environment, but later, after they have settled down and started classes, the excitement wears off, she said. Some find that they don’t understand what their teachers are saying and have to study from the textbook to understand. Adjusting to new food is difficult for some. They also miss their families and feel homesick.

Solberger had to make many of the same adjustments 22 years ago when she and her family moved to the United States from Europe.

BEING WITH American families broadens the international student’s experience, Solberger said.

Observing other people’s customs makes people more aware of their own, she said. If they understand each other and international students leave with a good impression of the country where they have studied, “that helps with peace in the world.”

have visited students in their home countries.

The program provides an opportunity for international students to practice English conversation with a native speaker for one hour each week. About 43 students and volunteers are involved and five students still need partners. Ann Atwood, chairwoman of the program, said more American volunteers are needed.

Joseph Charlie, a senior from Malaysia in the English in Action program, said “I feel I can learn something here that is not found in books. I can get much closer to Americans.”

FLORENCE FOOTE, a retired SIU-C professor and a community volunteer, said she became interested in international students when she lived in Europe. When she heard the program needed someone to talk to students she volunteered because she knew firsthand how hard it is to learn another language.

Foote and her partner, Zhao Xin Zhu, a research scholar from Shanghai, China, talk about changes in China and American politics.

“It is very difficult to explain to someone how a person can get 56 percent of the vote and still get almost all of the electoral college votes,” Foote said.

ZHU said the program is good for him because when he was in Shanghai he had few chances to practice English.

David Allan Coe’s latest album has too much on divorce theme

By Susan Sarkaukas

Writing from one’s emotions is an excellent way to capture the pain of life’s bad times in words and music. But unless such emotions are held in check by some sense of balance, the results may not be totally successful. The emotionally cathartic work of country singer-songwriter David Allan Coe on his most recent album, “Just Divorced,” proves this.

Seven of the nine songs on the album deal with something leaving men: the lyrics to four of those songs were written by Coe. They show his preoccupation—almost a morbid fascination—with his third, and most recent, divorce.

ONE SONG IN PARTICULAR. “For Lovers’ Only,” Part III seems to open a wound for Coe. He prefaxes the song with a monologue on the history of the “Down” side, as he has labelled the album. “Monna Lisa’s Lost Her Smile” is a top-20 country ballad, an unusual choice for a man formerly known as “the mysterious rhinestone cowboy” and former member of the Outlaws motorcycle gang.

“SWEET ANGELINE” and “He’s Taking It Easy” return to the roots of today’s music. The first is a bit of double entendre: Coe is a middle-aged country singer, and the song is about a middle-aged country singer. The second is an old-fashioned, cry-in-your-beer she’s-done-him-wrong song. Coe puts his rough-edged voice to good use here.

“For Lovers’ Only, Part III” is next, followed by a pretty little bit of banjo strumming by John McEuen of the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band. McEuen lends his considerable talents on banjo and mandolin throughout the album.

ONE ONCE AGAIN changes styles on “Thief In My Bed,” going to a traditional, two-stepping beat, complete with steel guitar and fiddles. The short little ditty about finding a new love doesn’t get in the way of the music.

In fact, throughout the whole album, it’s the music that takes precedence over the lyrics. From the acclaimed songwriter who penned the Tanya Tucker hit, “Would You Lay With Me In A Field Of Stone?” and Johnny Paycheck’s “Take This Job (And Shove It),” there is surprising lack of irony or humor, as well as tenderness. This is a self-pitying album, at times.

Some of his humor surfaces on the “Up” side. The title song, “Just Divorced,” is a bit-sweet tale of one man’s over-reaction to his divorce by decorating his car like a new Topps.

“IT’S Great To Be Single Again” is where Coe lets his pen loose, listing the advantages of living alone while slipping in a few unpleasantries. It’s set to an optimistic Dixieland jazz style tune, complete with banjo, brass, and harmonica.

UNFORTUNATELY, another song about a woman leaving her man surfaces in “Blue Grass Morning.” The bluegrass sound here is a little harder, to complement the words about a man turning to drugs and alcohol to dull the pain of abandonment. This sound might have sounded fine on another album—but after listening four previous songs on the same subject, one wishes he could have found something more positive, or at least different, to sing about.

None of the songs on “Just Divorced” are real losers. But where’s the tender and subtle balladeer David Allan Coe, or the humorist who could make fun of himself in “Long-haired Redneck” and “You Never Even Called Me By My Name”? He’s sorely missed on this album. Maybe now that he has had his crying session, the real Coe will return. That is something worth waiting for.

Political science instructors disagree on Ferraro's impact

By Jeff Curl
Staff Writer

While three political science faculty members said the nomination of Geraldine Ferraro has significantly helped women's roles in and out of politics, another said, "If it took Geraldine Ferraro to prove women are important in politics, then parents haven't done a good job of socializing their daughters."

David Derge said that, with the appointment of a woman to head the United Nations, as a Supreme Court justice, and to cabinet posts, the Reagan administration had already settled the question of whether women can hold high governmental positions.

"The Democrats have obviously not groomed women to serve in top positions," Derge said. "They had to drop down to a three-term congresswoman to find one."

The question of whether Ferraro has helped women's roles in politics depends on whether she helped the Democratic ticket, Derge added. "If studies show she hurt the ticket, I'm not sure people can say she helped women in politics."

Lianne Kosaki, associate professor in political science, said whether Ferraro helped the Democratic ticket doesn't matter because Republicans were favored in the campaign anyway. Ferraro's nomination has meant more, said Kosaki. Now people will realize that women are not only helpers to a political party, but can be leaders as well.

"There's no doubt Ferraro has vastly increased women's status in the political arena," Kosaki said. "I think it was still pretty common that people had doubts about women as leaders. This is the first time that they had to be taken seriously."

However, added Kosaki, women still have a way to go before they are equal to men in other issues like work pay. Barbara Brown, instructor of political science and Randolph County Democratic Chairwoman, agreed with Kosaki that Ferraro served as a good role model for women in politics. Brown also said Ferraro's nomination shows that women can be team leaders and are not only interested in feminist issues.

"Ferraro covered all issues and was compromising," said Brown, thus putting "to rest the thought that women are only interested in a limited amount of women's issues. I think women, as a result of her candidacy, will be treated more seriously in politics."

Rash of delivery-site attacks leaves pizza people perplexed

By John Krukowski

The third attack on a Domino's Pizza employee and vehicle in the last two weeks has its manager concerned, although he says he's not sure what can be done to prevent further incidents.

"It's sort of like asking why we have tornadoes," Kevin Neuzil says, "it just happens." Early Wednesday morning, while deliveryman Mark Arbycani, 23, was taking a pizza to a room at Wright Hall in University Park, his vehicle outside was broken into by two Wright residents.

Witnesses said the residents broke a window of the car with a General Electric clothes iron and removed a pizza and a pizza delivery bag. An SIU-C police spokesman says that Jason Chan, 18, and Daniel Mayer, 18, were arrested later that morning.

Chan was charged with criminal damage to property, burglary and an additional count of theft for some license plates found in his room which police believe to be stolen. Mayes was also charged with criminal damage to property. A third person was questioned and released.

Neuzil says he doesn't understand why people would chance the crimes, especially since they've all taken place in the open and, in the latest incident at least, in front of witnesses.

"I can't see taking that sort of risk over a $10 pizza," he says. "Breaking into a car is a serious charge."

Employee morale hasn't been affected yet, Neuzil explains, because he says it's an unavoidable risk for his type of job.

The Navy Needs Your Head In The Clouds.

The Navy needs people in the sky who can think fast. Pilots to fly the world's most sophisticated aircraft and flight officers to control the complicated weapons and navigation systems onboard. Both jobs require advanced training. And both jobs reward you with the kind of management responsibility and leadership authority it takes to make your career take off.

To qualify, you must have a BA or BS, be no more than 28, be able to pass aptitude and physical examinations, qualify for security clearance and be a U.S. citizen.

Your base pay is above $30,000 after only four years. On top of that, you'll receive an outstanding benefits package: 30 days' paid vacation earned each year, medical and dental care, low-cost life insurance, and tax-free allowances.

Black belt battle

The Student Center martial arts room was starting to get hot and stuffy. University Martial Arts Club members surrounded the open floor, some sitting and others standing, all dressed in traditional white robes closed with colored belts. At one end of the room sat a table of judges, all with black belts tied around their waists. Some were rubbing their chins as they watched five club members who were trying to earn black belts of their own.

Bill Anderson, Jim Raffensperger, Ed Linquist, Brandon Greene and Mike Moy were in the second phase of a six-part test which would take most of a Saturday. The floor exercises were to test their skills in kicking, punching and blocking techniques. The first part, mat work, tested their skills in takedowns, flips and evasive movements.

Remarking was further testing on forms — movements a fighter uses for more than one attacker, board breaking — to show focus of power and concentration, sparring and an essay question. But first the floor exercises had to be completed.

Giving the orders at this point was second-degree black belt Guido Bernstein from Carbondale. However, another judge, Todd Jones from Gainesville, Fla., saw that Anderson was putting a bit too much effort into his kick.

"Mr. Anderson?" asked Anderson.

"Sir?" answered Anderson.

"Are you planning on fighting Kareem Abdul Jabbar anytime soon?" asked Jones, while the audience chuckled.

"No sir," said Anderson with a slight smile.

"Then bring down your kick," said Jones.

And so it went throughout the test. The five students would be given a command, then carried it out. And often between commands, while the students stood at attention with tired faces shining with sweat, a judge would give some advice in an often satirical tone, much to the delight of spectators.

One reason the judges can have such fun with what would seemingly be a serious situation is before people can be tested for a black belt, they must have already shown leadership, good attitude, dedication and a good attendance record for practices.

"Usually we don't test them unless they're going to pass," Jones said. But knowing a black belt is in the bag doesn't make the test any easier. The contestants jumped, kicked, blocked, punched and sweated through nearly eight hours of rigorous testing. Then they had to write at least three pages worth of essay on the subject: "Black belt is an attitude."

The sparring session was one obviously more tiring sections of the test. The black-belt judges rose from their seats, strapped on feet and hand pads, then showed the students where and how to lay kicks and punches. Although the shouts of "CMON, YOU CAN DO IT!" from the audience backed the candidates, they did little to help the candidates fatigue.

"They said the test was going to be fun," said an exhausted but joking Brandon Greene. "But they didn't say who was going to have the fun."

But the tests were over. The martial arts room smelling like eight hours worth of sweat, the five wearied candidates knelt on the mat with their backs straight as boards.

Elliott Freeman, the club's head instructor, proudly and slowly walking back and forth in front of the candidates. They were to be awarded the first black belts to UMAC students since the club was formed four years ago.

Freeman spoke of his pride in the candidates and of the importance of having a good attitude.

"What is a black belt if he doesn't have something about him that is special from others?" Freeman said quietly, walking with his hands behind his back. "You must have a certain dignity that is unlike others around you."

Freeman told the candidates to rise as each had his brown belt removed by a judge. The room was quiet as Freeman wrapped a shiny black belt around each candidate's waist. The ceremonies ended with a hug.

Class shows sex role changes

By Cathy Brown
Staff Writer

The roles of men and women have changed rapidly in recent times, so rapidly that some people have trouble understanding the changes and understanding exactly what the roles of men and women are.

To help people understand the changes from a historical perspective, a general studies class called "Women and Men in the Modern World: Humantities" has been developed.

Judy Little, English faculty member, who has taught the course twice in the past, and will teach it again this spring, said the course "looks at the roots of current issues regarding the roles of men and women in Western society.

Students will be looking at the cultural imagery and ideology which have contributed to the definitions of "masculinity" and "femininity" in the general area of humanitites — history, mythology, art, literature, and popular media.

Little said the class usually has about 30 people in it and about two-thirds of them are women. Most of the people seem to like the course, and almost all of them feel pretty strongly about it," she said. "They are usually, a highly committed bunch.

The issues are sensitive ones to some people. They’re alive. Some people feel concerned that the roles are changing."

In the course, students learn that the issues have always been there. "Scholars have noted isolated escapees from male-dominated cultures," while studying history, she said. "There have been Gloria Steinems — they just have written these things in diaries, instead of in Ms. magazine."

Students taking the course will learn about the issues from a variety of sources. They will study the history of both men and women over the last 100 years, including the stereotype image of the "Marlboro man."

They will also examine visual images of men and women from different cultures and time periods, historical documents, journal entries, short stories, and two novels about women written by feminist authors.

Little said the course is a challenge to teach because of its broad scope. The course used to be a team-taught course with experts from different fields coming in for each section, but next term she will teach it alone.

Little said that students who are planning to minor in Women’s Studies can take the course as a prerequisite to starting the minor. The course is not listed in the schedule book, but students can register for it under GEC-222.

A similar course, GEB-221, which examines men and women’s roles from the viewpoint of the social sciences rather than that the humanities is also offered. It can also be used as a prerequisite for a minor in Women’s Studies.

Campus graffiti keeps maintenance busy

Judging from the number of scrawled messages that have appeared on campus sidewalks and building walls lately, one might think that "Kilroy" has enrolled at SIU-C this semester as an advertising major.

Harold Lerch, superintendent of building maintenance, said his department has been unusually busy painting over and sand-blasting graffiti the last few weeks. Lerch says that he’s not sure who’s been leaving the messages around campus or why, only that it’s been taking up an incredible amount of his crew’s time.

The sad thing is that when you’re using more hours for that sort of thing you can’t be doing it for something more productive," he said.

Lerch says that most graffiti is reported to his office by custodians, and that a crew will be sent out to clean it up as soon as possible.

"We just don’t drive around and look for it," he said, although the campus is so cluttered with graffiti these days that recently while driving out to clean up a message his crew came across a couple of other graffiti on the way.

SIU-C Police report that no arrests have been made in connection with the vandalism.

SIU-C foresters best at conclave

The SIU-C Forestry Club has retained its bragging rights as having the best student loggers in the Midwest.

SIU-C earned 37 points, outsizing 10 other colleges in the Midwestern Conclave, a contest of forestry skills held this year at Ohio State University. This is the second consecutive year SIU-C has won the competition.

The Saluki Foresters won four first-place, five second-place, three third-place and one fourth-place honors in 14 events.

Tom Dearlove won first place in the one-man bucksaw competition. Dearlove and Dean Smoronk placed first in the two-man bucksaw competition, and Marty Calvert captured first in speed chopping. SIU-C foresters finished second in match splitting, one- and two-man bucksawing and the pulp toss.

SIU-C placed fourth in the bolt throw, a test of strength based on how far a piece of wood is thrown. Other events at the conclave were the chain throw, the tobacco spit, tree identification and the traverse compass skill test.

This year's special event was a four-person relay race. Foresters identified trees for the first leg of the race, and the second competitors dragged the logs rope to their third teammates, who rolled the logs through an obstacle course. The anchor person finished the race by drinking two mugs of beer.

"We practiced hard every day for two and a half months and built up a lot of enthusiasm, which was partly brought on by momentum obtained from last year's victory," Smoronk said. Next year's conclave will be held at SIU-C.

Parking garage to be inspected

Part of SIU-C's mid-campus parking garage will be closed early next week for maintenance inspection, said Alan Haake, supervising architect-engineer from SIU.

Haake said outside consultants will try to determine if the leaking problems of the structure can be solved. Half of both parking decks will be closed Monday, Tuesday and possibly Wednesday, Haake said.

Ray Dorr has been kidnapped. To win his release, the kidnappers have asked for the ransom from sports fans. How? Buying season tickets to Saluki women's basketball home games, Dorr says on his television set. And some Saluki fan could win big, since every home game provides a chance for a Caribbean cruise. Winning is a part of the Saluki women's tradition, but they have yet to gain the kind of fan support that would make their efforts revenue generating.

"We need to start to turn our own way, and the only way to do that is by game and season ticket sales," Saluki Coach Cindy Scott said.

They started at the beginning of the year with an upbeat job of promotion that included bringing in Olympic Coach Pat Summiti. Scott said Dorr has been highly supportive of the program and volunteered his services for the commercial.

"Basically, he's trying to help us gain exposure and promote us by saying, 'Hey! The women have a good product in the basketball program. Support them,"" Scott said. Besides perpetrating the kidnapping of Dorr, the Salukis have provided plenty of action on the court with back-to-back 22-win seasons.

At each home game, three tickets are called for the half-time shootout. When a number is made the contestant needs to make a lay-up, a free throw, a shot from the top of the circle and a half-court shot. No one has made the four shots yet, but the prize is a Caribbean cruise offered by B&A Travel.

"We have tried to make an event a happening," Scott said.

For the home opener, also sponsored by McDonald's, Scott said they will be giving away small basketballs, frisbees, cups and more. Also, each ticket stub from any home game is good for a free sandwich at McDonald's.

A goal of Scott's has always been to help women's basketball produce revenue.

Scott said, "We haven't reached our goal but we've exposed our program to the public enough to see the generation of more game ticket sales."

The Salukis are ranked third in the conference for attendance, trailing Illinois State and Drake, which has sold $40,000 in season tickets already this year. Scott would like to see the program catch that kind of fever and sell out Davies Gym. "It's been frustrating at times, but I think the support is getting better and better and we will continue," Scott said. "As high school programs grow and gain exposure, over time it will carry over into the college programs."
Women harriers make steady gains in DeNoon's second year

By Steve Kouson Staff Writer

In two years, Coach Don DeNoon has made the women's cross country program respectable and thus it is holding in the right direction.

The Salukis finished seventh last season in the Gateway Conference Championships, but this year they improved to fourth. All nine of DeNoon's runners this year broke into the top 16 of the all-time school list. My goal was to finish in the top three of the conference," DeNoon said. "We didn't achieve that but, I thought we ran well all year.

The Salukis' top three runners this season were senior Sally Zack, sophomore Lisa Hicks, and junior Kathryn Doelling, who moved into fourth, fifth, and sixth, respectively on the all-time list.

Zack's best time this season was 18 minutes, 11 seconds. Hicks' personal best was 18:17 and Doelling posted an 18:18.

Overall, Zack was the team's top finisher in four races, Hicks paced the team in three races and Doelling in two.

"I think Sally Zack is going to be missed as a friend by everybody including myself," DeNoon said. "I don't look at it as losing her because she will run on the track team in the spring."

The three freshmen runners, Patty Kelly, Amy Marker, and Santha Gore, also made a solid contribution to the team. They were the fourth, fifth, and sixth runners on the Salukis.

"They certainly had a major effect on our overall program," DeNoon said. "We're a team that should progress and they're responsible for our future."

DeNoon said Marker, a walk-on from Riverside, Ill., was the biggest surprise on the team this season. Marker moved into seventh on the all-time list with a time of 18:27. "She is a solid kid and is one of the few that had no injury problems this year," DeNoon said. "She only had two or three days of bad practice all season, and she gave everything she had."

Kelly (18:33) placed ninth on the list and Gore (18:40) was 12th. Other runners who placed in the list were Odette James (14th, 18:52), Bonnie Helmick (13th, 18:57), and Chris Hangren (16th, 18:58).

The Salukis had an 8-3 record and one dual meet record with losses to Kansas (15:45), Illinois (17:28), and Ball State (24:32). But DeNoon indicated that record was misleading because it occurred early in the season.

"That is disappointing but I don't know what early season results have to do with cross country," DeNoon said. "The ultimate goal is how you do in the conference championships.

While the Salukas has a very balanced team, their one weakness was not having a front-runner who could finish in the 15-minute range. DeNoon said if the Salukas are going to challenge Illinois State for the conference title next season, they have to recruit some solid freshman runners and have a healthy Lisa Reimund return. Reimund is the Salukas' all-time record holder with a 17:30 and was an all-conference selection last season, but she missed the entire cross country and track seasons this year because of two stress fractures.

But with seven of his top nine runners returning, DeNoon is optimistic about next year.

"Everybody seemed to have a lot of little problems during the season with the flu, and aches and pains," DeNoon said. "But felt they overcame a lot of personal problems and we expect more from them next year."

Tough meet awaits men

By Stan Goff Staff Writer

The Saluki men gymnasts will begin their Thanksgiving break by competing in what could be the strongest tournament outside of the NCAA Championships when they travel to Chicago for the windy City Invitational Tournament this weekend.

The twelve-team field will include eight of the ten schools that competed in last April's NCAA Championships, including the Nebraska Cornhuskers who won the Big Eight Invitational two weeks ago. SIU-C placed second at the Big Eight Invitational.

The tournament, which will be hosted by the University of Illinois-Chicago, will also include such gymnastic powerhouses as Oklahoma, Ohio State, Iowa State, Iowa, Minnesota and Illinois.

This is by and large the best tournament excluding the Nationals. Nothing comes close to it," U. of I-Chicago Coach Ralph Johnson said.

The Salukas will be looking to improve on the 27th place finish they registered in their season opener at the Big Eight tourney. Last year, SIU-C placed fourth at the Windy City with a score of 270.30, but Saluki Coach Bill Meade believes his squad can improve on that score this weekend.

Talent: Saluki youth improving suspect at the beginning of the season, but that changed because of the development of several young players. Thomas is the only defensive back who will be lost. So Dorr expects the unit to be solid next year. "We may be able to get away with not recruiting a J'layer at that position," he said.

"If the season started today, John Fields would move from free to strong safety, Bobby McNabb would play free safety, Ira Davis would play one corner, and Ron Page or Tony Jackson would play the other. That leaves Tim Spencer, Kevin Gleason and some other young, talented players in reserve positions."

THE RECEIVER spots are another potential asset for the Salukis. Freshmen Nate McGhee and Bobby Sloan played well this year, and Todd Rotz should be healthy after suffering a season-ending leg injury in the opening game. The group could be even stronger if James Stevenson and Sebron Spivey return from academic ineligibility. The pair were key performers on the Salukis' 1983 national championship team.

Starting tight end Mike O'Day is slated to return, as is backup Ed Dockweiler. CAREY Sheperd, a starter in 1983, could also return from academic ineligibility. The Salukis are fairly secure at running back, although senior tailback Derrick Taylor will graduate. Fullback Bruce Phibbs will return, however, as will reserves Dave Duncan, Byron Mitchell and Tony McKnight. Redshirt freshman Robert Smith also could play, Dorr said.

The quarterback position is clearly up for grabs. Freshman Pat King was the starter at the end of the season, but sophomore Joe Graves and redshirt freshman Kevin Brown are strong contenders to unseat King. Dorr said he expects a tough battle between the three in spring practice.

"It's going to be a battle royale, it will be interesting," he said. "We expect a lot of positions to be won in spring practice, and that's one of them."

Coach Ray Dorr's football Salukis took their lumps this year, but he hopes his young team will come of age in 1985.

Blossoming young grid talent lifts Dorr's hopes for 1985

By Mike Frey

Star-Spangled

The football Salukis witnessed both peaks and valleys during their 1984 campaign, but Coach Ray Dorr hopes the experience his young club gained this season will help them in 1985.

The Salukis began the season by losing four straight games. SU-C then went on a three-game, midseason winning streak culminating with a thrilling 48-40 win over Eastern Illinois in Charleston. After that game, the Salukis fell apart by going on another four-game losing skid that dropped their final record to 3-4.

Dorr said he was disappointed by the season and will make adjustments in the offseason in an attempt to improve the Salukis' weaknesses. However, one of the Salukis' most glaring deficiencies coming into 1984 -- a lack of experience -- has been corrected.

GOING INTO fall practice, Dorr had 76 freshman on a 125-man roster. Most of those players had never played a game or in spring practice, and we'll work hard during the season and will make adjustments in the offseason in an attempt to improve the Salukis' weaknesses. However, one of the Salukis' most glaring deficiencies coming into 1984 -- a lack of experience -- has been corrected.

"The young kids have got to be better, and that's a direct result of experience," Dorr said.

"Next year, we have an experienced player coming back at every position. We're going to get him in this spring practice, and we'll work hard during the season and make adjustments in the offseason in an attempt to improve the Salukis' weaknesses. However, one of the Salukis' most glaring deficiencies coming into 1984 -- a lack of experience -- has been corrected.

The Salukis had only 10 seniors on their roster at the end of the season. Of those, only one was starting B.T. Thomas and leader Ralph Van Dyke. Petes Jansens, a highly-regarded tackle, was redshirted, and he will return in 1985.

So does tackle Dave Smith, who started several games this year. Pete Jansens, a highly-regarded tackle, was redshirted, and he will return in 1985.

Dorr also pointed toward the outside linebacker positions as potential strong spots for the Salukis. Starting left outside line ace Dan Wetzel will return, as will junior Tony Wrenn and freshmen Greg Giever and Alfonso Bailey. All three started games this season.

Dorr said that defensive line and inside linebacker are two positions the coaching staff are trying to strengthen. He said SU-C lacks depth at both spots, and he has placed special emphasis on recruiting players at those positions.

Women cagers set to face Tennessee
By Anita J. Stoner Staff Writer
The SIU-C women's basketball team will travel to Bowling Green, Ky., when it opens its season against the University of Tennessee at the Bowling Green Bank Invitational Tournament on Nov. 19, at 6:30 p.m.

"I've never gone into a game thinking we couldn't win," Cindy Scott, the Salukis' head coach, says. "Certainly, we have a difficult task.

These cagers are a perennial powerhouse coached by Pat Summitt, the women's basketball coach at the University of Tennessee. Since Tennessee's season opener, the Lady Volunteers have lost four starters and will need to find help from their freshmen to support the veteran stars.

Despite the loss, the Lady Volunteers have continued to be strong. They have won their last seven games and are only effective offensively, according to Summitt. "We have a difficult time winning if we don't shoot the ball quickly," Summitt said.

In order to win, Scott says the Salukis need to do three things: (1) keep the Lady Volunteers on their composition and not make them out of their defense while working the ball in for a percentage shot. Second, they must play very aggressive defense, and third, they must rebound. Who will do this is the question.

"We really have not settled on a starting five," Scott said. "It seems silly to say that four days before the opener.

The only sure starter is Petra Jackson. Scott and her coaching staff are prepared to see this situation all season until they find seven or eight key players. After a scrimmage game Wednesday night, matters were complicated more.

"It made the coaches come back and think things through again. We are anxious as a coaching staff to see our kids in a game situation," Scott said.

The play of the per-classmen has impressed Scott. She is pleased with Colette Wallace and Ellen O'Brien, while Cheri Bacon has put in a good effort in Wednesday night's scrimmage. Freshmen Annette Thoovanen, Bridget Bonds and Mary Berghuis are coming along, but Scott said they still have much to grasp in a short period of practice.

Scott said she feels good about the team because they work hard in practice.

"I'm not sure we have team cohesiveness yet," she said, "simply because we're new."}

Rockets lose first contest
HOUSTON (AP) - Coach Bill Fitch never thought the Houston Rockets' spotless 16-0 record would fall the way it did.

"We dream of the end way you want them to," Fitch said after the National Basketball Association's last unbeaten team fell to the Indiana Pacers 125-117 Wednesday night. The Pacers are now 2-1.

"If you had to picture a way to get your first loss of the season, you would certainly draw up a much better script. I could have thought of a lot better ways for it to end," he said.

Herb Williams scored a season-high 36 points for the Pacers but it was Terence Stansbury, picked up from Dallas last week, who lifted Indiana with 11 of his 25 points in the final period.

Stansbury's spurt offset 14 consecutive points from Rocket John Lucas, who singlehandedly put Houston briefly into the lead.

But Ralph Sampson, one half of the Houston "Twin Tower" attack, played only 17 minutes on a bad ankle and scored only seven points. The 25th pick, rookie Akeem Olajuwon, was in for only 22 minutes and closely defended by Williams.

Olajuwon had 20 points but connected on only 2 of 11 shots, which accounted for 23 attempts from the floor as he suffered his first loss as a pro.

Spikers ready for SMS Bears
By Duane Cray Sports Editor
The Saluki volleyball team ended its regular season with winning its last six matches and 13 of 15. But a whole new season is upon the team. As it travels to the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Championships at Springfield, Mo., this weekend.

The Salukis will face Southwestern Missouri State in the first round of the Gateway this evening. Earlier in this season, SIU-C lost to the Bears in four games at Carbondale. Saluki Coach Debbie Hunter said that the Salukis have made significant progress in aggressive volleyball in order to defeat the Bears.

"We need to maintain a quality serving game," she said, "and we will have to put our best blockers against their best hitters if the matchup presents them. Then it will come down to which of the two team's hitters that don't get as many opportunities plays the strongest and gets the job done."

One of the mover Hunter plans in order to limit the effectiveness of Bears' attack and heightens the Salukis' attack is to move Chris Boyd. The Salukis' most consistent hitter and normally a hitter on the left side of the net, over to the right side. When the two teams met earlier this season, Boyd was used exclusively on the left side.

"Our blocking has improved with Chris on the right side of the net," Hunter said.

Hunter said she will also attempt to place her strongest blockers and Ann Katrheh, a senior, on the Bears' top hitter.

"With our new adjustment, we can put some of our stronger blockers on her and take her strong side away," she said.

Hunter said it will also be important for the Salukis to control the ball and pass well to setter Lisa Cummins.

"Setters are only effective when they get good passes," Hunter said. "Lisa is an intelligent setter, but so is Annette Thoovanen. They both have a good feel of the rhythm of the game."

Neylon led the GCAC in assists, and Cummins finished a close second.

After the first match between the two teams, Hunter noted that the team had some ten tativness in the backcourt. She said she has been working with both the strategic and mental approaches of the team.

"Since Sunday, we have been watching the match against Southwest to see what separated us from them the most." She said, "We are trying to get a mental edge and polish our execution. We are trying to get to the point where we can win in the tight situations by instilling the belief we can win instead of saying, 'Oh my God, here comes the ball.' I feel it is better to be ready to attack the ball instead of waiting for the other team to make the mistake."

Should the Salukis defeat the Bears on Friday night, they would play the winner of the match between Illinois State and the winner of the Bradley-Duke playoff game. Hunter said she hasn't thought past the match against the Bears, however.

"If we win on Friday, we will take one hour and then have a crash course on Saturday's match," she said. "It will be like studying for final exams. We are so close to Southwest Missouri, we can't afford to look ahead."

Cager Brewer chooses Evansville over SIU-C
By Steve Keen Staff Writer
The soap opera between Vincennes forwards Jerome Brewer and SIU-C came to an apparent conclusion last Friday in the first day of the one-week early signing period.

Vincennes' assistant coach, Dan Sparks said he was a little disappointed Brewer didn't go to SIU-C.

"He is the type of kid who didn't handle the recruiting process at all," Sparks said. "A lot of schools were after him, and he is the type of kid who won't commit to a school until the last moment." "Coach (Allen) Van Winkle was disappointed, and I can see why. They spent a lot of time and did a good job of recruiting him. But with the season they were pretty close to him and that might have played a role," Sparks said an important factor in Brewer's decision to attend Evansville was he wanted to stay close to his hometown of Indianapolis.

Even though Brewer signed Wednesday afternoon, Sparks said he didn't learn of the signing until later that night from an Evansville TV station. Sparks said that Brewer told him of his decision before Thursday's practice.

Brewer, who was described by Van Winkle as the best small forward junior college player in the nation, told The Sports News last week that he was going to break the commitment to SIU-C and was leaning toward signing a letter of intent with Oklahoma.

"He told me he wasn't ready to make a decision but then he said he was going to Southern last month," Sparks said. "He shouldn't have said that.

Last year, Brewer averaged 21 points, nine rebounds, and shot 34 percent from the field to help Vincennes qualify for the National Junior College Athletic Association Tournament at Hutchinson, Kan.

But this season Brewer is averaging only 14 points and four rebounds per game, while shooting 38 percent from the field for Vincennes, which has a 2-1 record.

"He's not playing like he can," Sparks said. "We play a tough team Saturday (Purdue Community College) and it will be interesting to see what he does. All of this media attention regarding Brewer doesn't bother me, what bothers me is we're re playing."
