Director of School of Art and Design resigns

Chris Davies
Administration Writer

The director of the SIUC School of Art and Design is stepping out of the director's office and into the classroom.

Brent Kington, an award-winning metalsmith, has been director of the school since 1981. Kington has won several major international awards and is a member of the American Crafts Council's Academy of Fellows.

Gerald Stone, dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts, said Kington's resignation is news to him.

"I heard that Kington may have quit, but I did not know if it was anything more than a rumor," he said. "I believe he submitted a letter of resignation to the faculty, but I have not seen anything yet."

Kington, whose work is included in the permanent collections of a number of museums, said he is stepping down to pursue his art and teaching.

"I contemplated quitting last spring," he said. "I think now it is time for new leadership."

Kington said he has a lot of reasons for resigning, but mostly he wants to get back into his art.

"I have a solo show on campus, and I have been invited to several exhibits," he said. "And I will continue to teach at SIUC."

Kington said his resignation has nothing to do with the fact that the school's move from CCHA to the College of Liberal Arts in 1993.

"I have no problems with the move to the liberal arts college," he said. "The faculty has

Clinton visits Washington

The Baltimore Sun

WASHINGTON — On his visit to the town that will soon be his home, President-elect Bill Clinton ventured out Wednesday beyond the marble monuments to a distant stretch of neon signs, laundromats and liquor stores where some of his new neighbors live.

And in true neighborly fashion, thousands of area residents poured onto the block of mostly black-owned businesses in northwest Washington to welcome the incoming leader with everything from a Redskins cap to carry-out Chinese food to a saxophone solo.

"I expect to be out in this city quite a lot," Clinton told the largely black crowd that had lined a block of Georgia Avenue, not far from open-air drug markets and boarded up buildings. "I know that there is a capital city, not just government buildings, but a city out here, a city that needs a president."

Kissing babies, signing autographs and posing for photos next to the Junior Miss Metropolitan Princess, Clinton seemed to wallow in the crowds and the adulation he has been away from since Election Day.

Looking and sounding like he was back on the campaign trail, he chatted with Bernadine Carey, owner of Bernie's Hair Salon, about investing in small businesses and setting up community development banks.

He told the owner of Sing Long Carryout that Chinese people would have a friend in the White House.

One man pleaded for the president-elect to do something to stop the murders of young black males "right in these alleys" by providing jobs for them.

"That's why I came here today," Clinton said. "I wanted to send a message."

A woman in the crowd sang the praises of Alice Deal Junior High School, a District of Columbia public school in the Northwest section of the city. "I will tell Chelsea that," he said, referring to his 12-year-old daughter who will be attending school — either public or private — in Washington. "We've got Chelsea looking at four or five different schools. That's one of them."

Most of all, he tried, as much as

SIU request for '93 funding lowest of state universities

By Christy Gutowski
Administration Writer

SIU is the only one of 12 public institutions in Illinois that is asking for less than a 1 percent increase in funding from the state for next year.

The Illinois Board of Higher Education released a report summarizing the fiscal year 1994 budget requests for appropriations and grants from state universities.

SIU requested $240.25 million from the state in 1994, equaling only a 0.3 percent increase in comparison with 1993.

The Board of Trustees' only request for an increase in funds was for library materials, according to the report.

Chancellor James Brown said other schools are asking the state for new money at a time when none exists. SIU's request is more realistic, he said.

"In keeping with the spirit of the statewide emphasis on priorities, quality and productivity of public higher education, and in recognition of the current financial constraints facing state government in general and higher education in particular, no funds are being requested for academic programs in the fiscal year 1994 RAMP request," Brown told

American exports set record high

But import surge keeps U.S. trade deficit close to highest mark in years

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Led by overseas sales of chemicals, semiconductors and other high-technology products, American exports set a new monthly record in September, but a surge of foreign goods into the country kept the U.S. trade deficit close to its highest mark in two years.

The September deficit of $8.3 billion was a slight improvement from the revised $8.95 billion deficit recorded in August. The August and September numbers, though, were the highest since November 1990's $9.5 billion deficit.

Based on the first nine month's figures, the deficit for the year will reach about $80 billion, far higher than last year's deficit of $65.4 billion. Although U.S. exports have continued to grow, they have

Council requires window locks in houses

By Jeremy Finley
City Writer

The Carbondale City Council has decided to give Carbondale residents a greater sense of safety by requiring all landowners to have window locks on housing by Feb. 1, 1993.

A 1977 code had a clause exempting housing units built before the year from having to provide window locks, but the council overturned the clause Tuesday night.

The change of the code was brought about by the Graduate and Professional Council, which wanted the elimination to combat the increase of reported sexual

Olden named to MVC all-conference

By Karyn Viverito
Sports Writer

After an outstanding season in her last year with the Salukis, senior middle blocker Dana Olden was rewarded by being named to the 1992 first-team Missouri Valley all-conference team.

On the season, Olden led the Salukis offensively with a team-high 371 kills and .318 hitting percentage. Also a spark on defense, she led the team in block solos with 36, and ranked in the top three with 87 block assists and 249 digs.

SIUC head coach Sonya Locke said Olden was a player the other players felt they could count on.

Saluki spiker caps career with first-team honors

"Most of the time the setters felt very confident in giving the ball to Dana when they were able to," she said.

Olden's defensive game was one she had to work on in the beginning, Locke said.

"When she started playing, Dana's main strength was in the front row, but after working to improve her game, she had become one of our best players in the backcourt," she said. "She is a player with a lot of natural talents and one that has worked hard to become an all-around player."

With four years in a starting role under her belt, Olden was able to accumulate totals that broke four all-time school records in block assists, career kills, block solos and spike attempts.

Olden said the records were not always her main focus, but she was always aware of them.

"I knew that there were a couple of records that were definitely within reach, and I was looking forward to try and break those records this season," she said. "I am just glad that I was able to achieve what I did and go through the season injury-free."

Two of the records—block solos and block assists—were held by Locke when she was a player for the Salukis from 1979-83.

Locke said she was happy to be the coach of the recipient when the records were broken.

Olden started all of the 105 games played by the Salukis this year, and she said she felt her team was better than their record.

"We had a lot of talent on our team, and I really feel we were good enough to make it to the tournament," she said. "The season was inconsistent and we had a lot of ups and downs."

Olden found the new players competitive and fun to play with.

"Every year you are always going to have to adjust to new players," she said. "When things sometimes got rough, I reminded myself that they have never played on the collegiate level, and overall they came out of the season high in performance and expectations."

Joining Olden on the all-conference first-team were Kim Nelson and Michelle Rucker from Illinois State, Kim Flieg from Southwest Missouri State, Kristin Carr from Wichita State and Stacy Makoben from Northern Iowa.

Salukis to open season Men's basketball to face Russians

The SIUC men's basketball team will kick off a season of high expectations when it hosts the "Sport Klub of the Russian Army from Moscow" tonight at 7 in an exhibition contest at the SIUC Arena.

Saluki head coach Rich Herrin said his squad is looking forward to the chance to face some outside competition.

"I don't know if we're ready to play a game yet, but I do know we're anxious to play," Herrin said in a SIUC sports information release. "We've had 15 or 16 practice sessions now, and it's time to go up against players other than ourselves."

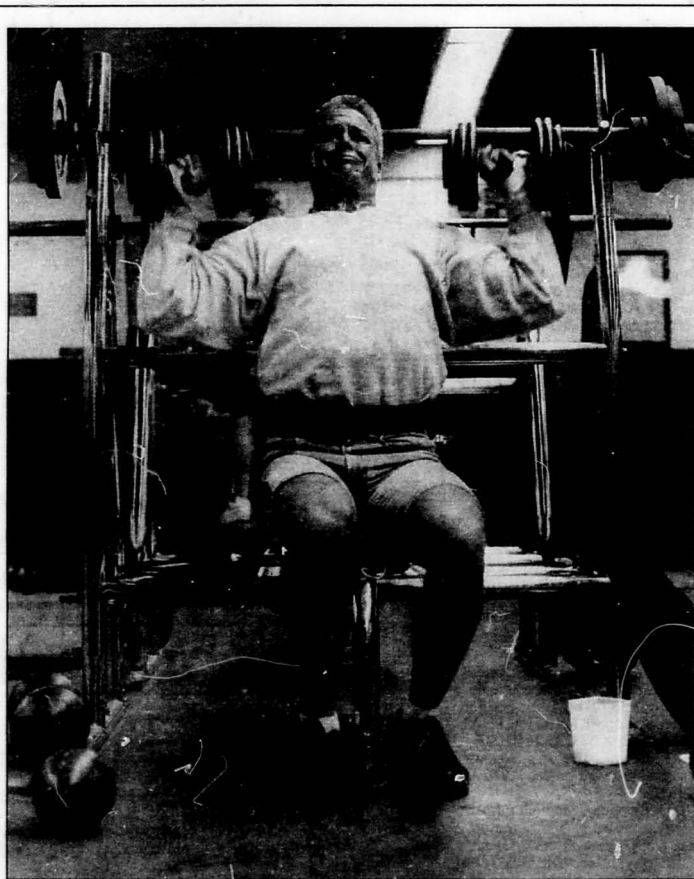

Herrin said winning tonight's game, as well as the Salukis' Nov. 27 exhibition contest against Athleten In Action, is not necessarily the team's first priority.

"Naturally we'd like to win these two exhibition games, but it's far more important to get a look at our players in actual game conditions and see how they've progressed over the last year," Herrin said.

Overall, Herrin is pleased with what he has seen of his 1992-93 squad.

"We like what we've seen in practice. This is a great group of young men, but just how good a basketball team they're going to be remains to be seen," Herrin said.

The Salukis will open the regular season Dec. 3 when Northeast Missouri State pays a visit to the arena.

Salukis ink local golfer for 1993-94

By Sanjay Seth
Sports Writer

The SIUC women's golf team has recruited another local golfer for the 1993-94 school year.

Allyson Lawrence, a member of the West Frankfort Community High School golf team as a junior and senior, signed a scholarship agreement with the Salukis this week.

Lawrence was the 1992 Illinois High School Association Girls Regional and Sectional champion, and was voted the most improved player on the West Frankfort team in 1991 after qualifying for the state sectionals.

Lawrence was recommended to SIUC women's golf coach Diane Daugherty by Gene Carello, former SIUC graduate and Lawrence's coach the last two years.

Daugherty said she was excited about the new sign-on and was looking forward to having Lawrence on the team.

"I'm most excited about her potential," Daugherty said. "It is unusual and unique to have someone who has only played two years to receive the high scores she has."

Daugherty said it was obvious Lawrence was talented and had a great work ethic, and she could only see the recruit improving with time.

Lawrence fired an 81, overcoming adverse weather conditions, to win the IHSA Regionals in October at the Jackson County Country Club in Murphysboro. She followed with a 77 for a first-place finish in the sectionals at Charleston.

Lawrence plans to major in business at SIUC.

SIUC wheelchair team to host weekend tourney

By Andy Graham
Sports Writer

The SIUC wheelchair basketball team will host its fourth annual Rolling Salukis Invitational at the Student Recreation Center Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Other teams participating in the event are the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago, the Southshore Breakers, the St. Louis Rolling Rams and the Kansas City Pioneers.

"I think that any team could win the tournament," Todd Hatfield, intramurals graduate assistant, said.

"If we stay healthy and play smart, though, I think we definitely have a chance."

The Salukis will kick off the event by taking on Chicago Friday at 7 p.m. It will be the only game played Friday. Saturday holds marathon play for all teams.

"I'd like to see a lot of people out there on Friday, because that will be our most challenging game," Rich Swanson, a graduate assistant from River Forest, said.

"We have never beat the Institute of Chicago before, and I think we have a good chance now."

Saturday will begin with the Southshore Breakers and the Pioneers shooting it out at 9 a.m. followed by the Rolling Rams and Chicago at 11 a.m.

The Rolling Salukis will challenge the Pioneers at 1 p.m.; the Southshore Breakers will compete against the Rolling Rams at 4 p.m.; Chicago will play the Pioneers at 6 p.m. and the Salukis will play the day's last game against the Rolling Rams at 8 p.m.

Of all the teams, South Shore, from Racine, Wis., will be the toughest to beat, Hatfield said.

"South Shore is the team to beat. They have a player who just transferred from the Chicago Bulls' wheelchair team," he said.

The Rolling Salukis went 2-3 last weekend, when they played a tournament at Champaign.

Those were conference games, which are tougher because the teams practice every day, whereas the teams in the Rolling Salukis Invitational are independent teams.

BHUTTO BANNED FROM ISLAMABAD — Opposition leader Benazir Bhutto was expelled from Islamabad Wednesday after the government aborted an attempt by the opposition to march on the capital. Bhutto and several other opposition leaders reached Rawalpindi from Islamabad, dodging massive security arrangements. They were arrested soon after the march started.

15TH MISSION TO IRAQ SUCCESSFUL — Inspectors of the International Atomic Energy Agency said Wednesday in Manama that they have successfully completed their 15th mission to Iraq aimed at destroying the country's nuclear research program. Perricos said his team had inspected 25 facilities during the ten-day mission.

FRENCH FARMERS AND POLICE CLASH — French farmers and police clashed outside the U.S. embassy in Paris Wednesday as a demonstration against European concessions at world trade talks turned violent. France and the United States are deadlocked in a row over farm subsidies.

Superman to die after 50 years of heroic battles

By Michael T. Kuciak
Special Assignment Writer

For more than three generations Superman represented an eternal symbol of truth, justice and the American way. Through comic books, films, television and radio, Superman reached the hearts and minds of millions of children and adults.

Superman rose to become a household name, an American icon, a symbol of everything good and just.

But the invincible Superman has met his match.

The hero will be killed Friday by Doomsday, an escaped lunatic from an insane asylum in another galaxy, in Superman No. 75.

Martha Thomases, DC Comics' publicist, said the people who write and draw the four Superman titles wanted to see how the world react to his death.

"They mostly wanted to see how the DC Comics world would react, but they thought it would be interesting to see how the real world reacts as well," she said.

Some of the sales have already begun as outlets place the comic book for sale early. DC Comics projected more than 10 times the normal sales for the death of Superman.

Gary Colabuono, owner of Moondogs, the Midwest's largest comic book retailer, said he put a limited number on the shelves on Wednesday and sold several hundred copies in only 20 minutes.

"I am amazed at the hysteria of everyone wanting to buy this issue," he said. "The sales are amazing, and I'm disappointed that they had to kill him to do it. It kind of shows what corporate America is willing to do to increase profits. Instead of getting a better writer and artist, they just kill the character."

Superman fan Brian Thomas, 20, said the Man of Steel's death hurt in a way.

"It's kind of weird, but it may actually be for the better," he said. "Everybody's got to die sometime. There's not too much to Superman anymore, and his movies have gotten pretty bad. You win some, you lose some."

Superman will probably not stay dead, however. DC hints at an eventual resurrection. Thomases said the world's greatest crimefighter will remain dead at least until March 1993.

The hero will fall before Doomsday after an epic battle to save Metropolis that crossed over into all four Superman titles as well as the Justice League of America, a group of superheroes to which Superman belongs.

As the story goes, Doomsday lands on Earth after escaping from an asylum and immediately begins a path of death and destruction. Doomsday has already killed more than 100 people and seriously injured superheroes Blue Beetle of the Justice League, Booster Gold of the Conglomerate, Green Lantern Guy Gardner, Maxima and Guardian.

Superman was last seen beaten unconscious in the rubble of destruction with Doomsday heading for Metropolis.

Man of Steel greatest hero of all time

By Michael T. Kuciak
Special Assignment Writer

Superman was one of the first and surely the greatest superheroes of all time. Created by Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster, he first appeared in Action Comics No. 1 in 1938.

Superman was born as Kal-L on the planet Krypton, which was on the brink of Armageddon. In a last act of desperation, his father sent him to Earth.

The ship crash-landed near Smallville, U.S.A. and was found by John and Mary Kent, a kindly couple who adopted the boy. When Clark Kent, Superman's adopted name, grew older, he traveled to Metropolis and was hired as a reporter at the Daily Planet.

But when he changed into Superman, he could fly at superspeed, was strong enough to lift planets, could breath super-cold and shoot heat rays from his eyes. Superman was nearly indestructible. He was vulnerable only to magic and Kryptonite, a mineral from his destroyed planet.

Superman went from a hero of comic books to radio in the early 40s, various TV shows from 1948 to 1957 and eventually to a series of five Superman movies that started in 1978.

Between all the various media, many inconsistencies began to stack up. To clear things up, the various Supermen were assigned to different realities, labeled Earth 1, Earth 2 and so on.

Several years ago, DC Comics decided to clean up the clutter since alternate worlds also were given to the inconsistent realities of other DC characters like Wonder Woman and the Flash. In a series called Crisis on Infinite Earths, DC cut the fat and molded all of the worlds into one. New, by comic book chronology, Superman landed on Earth only a few years ago, and DC has drastically revamped him.

Guyon's hotel plans remain pretty vacant

SIUC PRESIDENT JOHN C. GUYON proposed the building of an on-campus hotel at the Board of Trustees meeting last week. But so far, the only vacancy is in the minds of campus administrators.

The proposed hotel would be an L-shaped building with five or six stories. It would adjoin the south corner of the Student Center and would include 150 to 160 rooms, each costing about $70 a night.

Guyon claims the University will lose nothing from the project, because it will be funded by a private investor. The hotel may draw national conferences to SIUC and would be convenient for families and alumni who visit campus.

Although the construction of a hotel on campus is in the embryonic stage, there are too many unanswered questions about the project that the community has not even considered. The risk might be too great for SIUC and Carbondale.

GUYON IS NOT THE FIRST PRESIDENT to consider constructing a hotel at the Student Center. Delyte Morris, SIUC president from 1948 to 1970, proposed a similar project in 1967.

The idea never got off the ground. A committee of local motel owners, fearing competition, urged state representatives to introduce legislation to block the University's plans.

The State College Housing Construction Act of 1967 was created to prevent the construction of a hotel at SIUC. It states that if the University decides to build the hotel, it must be approved by the Illinois General Assembly before commencement.

This legislation could possibly abort Guyon's plans before they can continue past the embryonic stage.

EVEN BEFORE THE IDEA of a campus hotel was mentioned, the hotel industry in Carbondale has become unstable. The once Ramada Inn has had four different owners and names. Holiday Inn was sold to Knight's Court.

Theoretically, the hotel only would be able to fill its hundreds of rooms four weekends out of the school year — during parents' weekend, homecoming and the December and May graduation ceremonies. The hotel would receive a steady trickle of business from alumni and parents on weekends, especially during home football games, and would house visiting lecturers and artists.

But the rest of the time, a hotel in the Student Center could suffer from lack of business, especially considering the unusually large number of rooms. During the more than two months of interim breaks per year, the hotel could be as empty as a tomb.

THE UNIVERSITY WOULD NOT SINK any of its own funds into the hotel. SIUC would only provide a site. Funding for the construction, operation and maintenance of the proposed hotel would be supplied by a private investor.

But the costs to students may run high. If the city annexes the Student Center as part of the project, sales taxes could increase from 6.25 on county land to 7 percent on city land.

In addition, a private entity would own a chunk of University property and could dictate activities on their very own "business island." Because the Student Center is partially paid for by student fees, it would be the students' loss if a section of the building is unavailable to them.

Guyon himself has expressed his doubts about the proposed project, saying that if it fails, it "would make a marvelous teaching area for hotel management students."

Although the proposal of hotel on campus is still only one week old, not enough thought has been given to the idea. Caution should be taken when checking into "Hotel SIUC."

Viewpoint

Instead of abortion, choose adoption

If the administration of SIUC allows abortions to be covered by the student health plan, it will aid only the sexually active to slip smoothly into indulgent sexual desires.

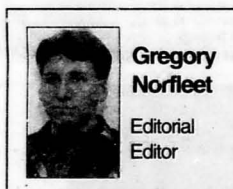

President-elect Bill Clinton promises to rescind the gag order that restricts counseling for women considering an abortion within his first week as president. But he supports a tax-funded abortion on demand. Clinton also supports condom distribution in schools.

Before he gets into office, this school may be ahead of him in bringing abortion benefits to the fingertips of the students.

THE WORLD Health Organization currently estimates that: "Every day there are at least 100 million acts of sexual intercourse, 910,000 conceptions, 365,000 cases of sexually transmitted disease, 150,000 abortions performed, resulting in the death of 500 women, because of unsafe conditions."

Self-indulgence is more convenient with the myriad of ways to relieve the responsibility of the woman. The most effective way to avoid STDs and conception is abstinence.

But couples think they can let their guard down by the woman taking a birth control pill, one or both of the partners wearing a condom, or the woman taking the new morning-after pill from France, RU 486. The government will come to the aid of the woman, after all the other options have failed, to remove the responsibility of her actions.

I have never heard of a doctor contesting that conception in a woman has led to anything less than a baby, despite any disabilities or abnormalities. Pro-abortionists have argued that a fetus is not considered a baby until the second trimester of pregnancy.

The fetus cannot survive on its own, so it is still reliant on the mother. In which case, the decision to abort is up to the mother because the fetus is still part of her body.

BUT PUT A 2 YEAR OLD out on its own and see how long it lives. There must be more to it than that.

The National Committee for Adoption estimates that for every adoption, there are 40 infertile couples unable to find infants to adopt. In 1987, an estimated 120,069 children were adopted in the United States. In 1986, about 1.6 million abortions took place. Had those abortions not been performed and the children been put up for adoption, 3,202,760 couples would still be unable to adopt. But possibly, homes could have been found for those born.

For the women who report rape, the state should support their needs until birth and then offer adoption services.

According to President George Bush, the cases of rape and incest are the only exceptions to the rule for allowing abortions, though the fraction of women impregnated is small. But even if there is one, the government should help the woman.

SOME WOMEN have been impregnated after being raped and have felt the life within them to be worth more than nine months of carrying and years of rearing, regardless of the origin and violence taken upon them. Women who choose not to take their anger out on the baby, who see it as a victim of the crime as well, should be viewed with respect, not scorn.

Women have the choice of what to do with their bodies. But that choice should be made before they engage in sexual intercourse. The consequences of deciding against abstinence must be her responsibility. Couples need to learn the responsibility of their actions, not insist that the state or federal government pay to remove their responsibility. If they cannot handle the responsibility of their actions, then options other than abortion must be readily available for the child to have a chance at life.

If one cannot practice celibacy, practice adoption.

anyone who arrives in a lengthy motorcade, could be one of the people.

"I love your earrings," he told one woman.

"I run through shoes faster than anyone you know," he told the owner of Coates Shoe Repair.

After Wednesday's walk in a working class neighborhood not far from crime-ridden parts of the city, Clinton and his wife, Hillary, attended a fund-raising reception for the Children's Defense Fund and then a private dinner at the home of Vernon E. Jordan, the Clinton transition chairman who is a Washington lawyer.

Thursday, after meetings with congressional delegations, the president-elect will attend another private dinner, this one at the swank Georgetown home of Pamela Harriman, a prominent Democrat.

IBHE board members. President John C. Guyon also said the request was in focus with the state's budget constraints. "Big budget requests are pointless exercises (at this time)," he said.

The Board of Governors, which includes Chicago State University, Eastern Illinois University, Governors State University, Northeastern Illinois University, Western Illinois University and the Chancellor's Office, requested $233.4 from the state, a 6.6 percent average increase from 1993.

The Board of Regents, which includes Illinois State University, Northern Illinois University, Sangamon State University and the Chancellor's Office, requested $262.9 million for 1994, a 6.7 percent average increase from 1993.

Ross Hodel, deputy director for IBHE, said SIU's 1994 budget request differs from ones in previous years.

"It's unusual," he said. "But I think the rationale behind it is that they recognize the state of Illinois is $1 billion in debt. Some speculate, with the nursing home tax expiring June 30, we soon may be $2 billion in debt.

"SIU is saying 'Hey, there's no money.' Why raise expectations that (SIU) may receive a windfall of money when we're in hard times?"

Hodel said most of the university's requests were relatively moderate, such as University of Illinois' budget request of $723.2 million, a 5.4 percent average increase from the previous year.

But SIU's request will not put it in a compromising position with other universities, he said.

In fact, Hodel said there is a chance SIU will receive additional funding from the state and pointed out the budget process is only at the request stage.

Brown said SIU has three different funding request options, each conditioned by the state's fiscal situation.

SIU's budget request for 1994 follows the guidelines of its first option. The second choice would allow a small request for new state dollars to cover 4 percent increases in salary, general price and utilities at SIU, with a 10 percent increase in utilities at SIUE. An 11 percent increase in support for library materials is included. This option recognizes adequate salary increases for faculty and staff, as outlined at the July 9 Board of Trustees meeting.

The third option requests new state resources for those areas considered essential to maintaining the quality and centrality of SIU's educational missions. It includes 4 percent increases in salary, general price and utility costs at SIU, with a 10 percent increase in utility spending at SIUE.

IBHE staff will shape all the requests from state universities into one recommendation throughout November and December. It will adopt a recommendation for all higher education in Illinois at its Jan. 5 meeting, Hodel said.

assaults in Carbondale.

Karen Hampton, campus safety representative at Women's Services and a member of SIUC's task force against sexual assault, said eliminating the clause will aid in lowering the number of assaults in Carbondale.

"It will certainly contribute to crime lessening, but there are a lot of other entry ways in houses," she said. "I think it will have an overall impact, especially in older houses. In general, things are going in a good direction."

Doug Moslehi, GPSC liaison to the city council, said he urged the changing of the code because of safety concerns for students.

"A lot of us have to leave our families at home when we go to the library to study, but I know that's part of being a graduate student," he said. "This is something that needed to be done for the overall safety of students."

Morris McDaniels, building and neighborhood services division manager, said the revised code covers every housing unit, including apartments and mobile homes.

McDaniels said an investigation was done to find locks for all types of windows.

"I looked at window devices in retail stores, and there are locking devices that would help defer someone (illegally) from entering," he said. "There are some alterations (devices) out there—even some for sliding glass doors."

McDaniels said if a renter wants the locks installed and the landlord doesn't comply, they renter can notify the city and an investigation will be done.

"Whenever we're notified, we can investigate," he said. "We certainly want the service available to them."

But Bonnie Owen, landlord for Bonnie Owen Property Management, said not enough notification time was given to the landowners.

"My concern is that it wasn't very well publicized," she said. "I might not have known if I wasn't a member of the Chamber (of Commerce)."

Owen said she supports the change and is concerned about the safety of her tenants.

"This is going to be expensive," she said. "It's timely and it needs to be done, but more time was needed."

Moslehi said the locks already should have been installed by the landlords.

"I don't have a whole lot of sympathy for landlords," he said. "It's something they should have done in the first place."

The amendment to the code states that the city will not incur any additional expenses, but property owners may incur additional expenses related to the installation of the locks.

City Manager Jeff Doherty said people do not always take necessary precautions, and student organizations should help educate students for safety.

"People don't necessarily take precautions," he said. "The Undergraduate Student Government and GPSC can educate students to use safety precautions."

not kept up with imports from abroad, and in order to finance the recurring trade deficits that began in the 1980s, the United States has had to sell vast amounts of bonds, real estate, companies and other assets to foreigners.

Nonetheless, Commerce Secretary Barbara Hackman Franklin looked at the bright side of the report and called the record export level of $38.2 billion "good news for America and the American economy."

Steve Cooney, director of international investment at the National Association of Manufacturers noted the "strong and broad-based rebound of manufactured exports," which set an all-time record.

Chemical exports increased $350 million, semiconductor exports $250 million and exports of aircraft engines, general machinery, computers, computer equipment and telecommunications equipment each increased by about $200 million.

Economist Bruce Steinberg of the New York brokerage house Merrill Lynch & Co. took a more pessimistic view. He agreed that there was "surprising strength on the export side," but said the continued recession in U.S. markets of Europe and Japan means overseas sales next year "will almost assuredly be weaker."

IPS seminar to aid students readapt to home countries

By Angela Hyland
International Writer

International students often find readjusting to their own country more challenging than their initial adjustment to the United States, said foreign student adviser Diane Wissinger.

"People don't expect to have a difficult time returning home," she said. "They do expect to have to make adjustments when they come over here. Their expectations help prepare them for the shock."

The International Programs and Services office is offering a pre-departure seminar at 3:30 p.m. Friday in the Student Center Iroquois Room to help graduating students begin preparing for their return home.

A number of factors determine how difficult it will be for a student to return home, said Wissinger, who works in the International Programs and Services office.

"The individual, the culture and the duration of time spent in the United States will determine the severity and duration of the readjustment process," she said.

Wissinger said students may have to face adjustments in a number of areas.

In the job market, for example, students may find that their countries are not using the same technology that they were trained on in the United States, she said.

"They may not be using the same equipment or even the same approach," Wissinger said, "so (graduates) really have to be adaptable."

International students often tend to be surprised by the changes within their families.

Students often find that the better they were at adapting to life in the United States, the harder time they will have when they return home, Wissinger said.

"The more involved they were, the more active they were and the longer they have been here will all affect their level of adjustment," she said.

Julietta Monteiro, a doctoral student in educational psychology from Brazil, said when she returned home, she felt very left out.

"I really tried to keep in touch with my family," she said. "The information was easy to pass on, but you can't really capture the experience. No matter how hard you try you can never transfer the intensity of the moment.

"They would be talking and I'd feel like they were sharing secrets," Monteiro said. "I was home, but they were treating me like a guest — like a stranger."

Often, students will go home excited about the experience they have had in the United States and will feel like nobody cares, Wissinger said.

"Many students are absorbed in getting ready to go home, and they don't realize the adjustments they will have to make until they get back," she said.

'Be prepared to dance': The Drovers are in town!

Band to stop at Hangar 9 during tour to promote album 'World of Monsters'

By Dave Kazak
Entertainment Writer

The Drovers will bring their unique style of Irish rock to Carbondale tonight at Hangar 9, and bassist Dave Callahan said anyone going to the show should be prepared to dance.

Touring after the recent release of their independent CD "World of Monsters," the five-member, Chicago-based band will play a style of rock that Chicago Tribune rock critic Greg Kot called some of the best music released.

Lead singer and guitarist Mike Kirkpatrick said the band's roots come from some members' Irish background.

"Some of us knew each other from playing traditional Irish music," he said. "Anything we do is going to have that Irish influence."

"World of Monsters" is filled with music that would sound right at home in an Irish bar in Chicago. Violins, flutes, and pounding percussion make up the backbone of the Drovers' style of rock.

Both Illinois Entertainment and Billboard magazines have labeled the music of The Drovers "Celtic," and although the Irish influence is very apparent on their album, Kirkpatrick and Callahan both say the label is not entirely accurate.

"It's really just pop music," Callahan said. "There is an Irish influence of course, but that gets thrown into the stew. I really don't know anything about traditional Irish music. The band is really just a collection of different musical personalities."

Band members say the music on the album is a few steps behind what they now play because although the album was recently released, it was recorded during a two-year period while the band went through many transitions.

"The stuff on that disc is kind of old history," Kirkpatrick said. "Our music has grown very muscular since then. The beat is a lot more lively and the rhythm is a lot more solid."

Callahan said "World of Monsters" represents the band "at an early point.

"We sound different now," he said. "I'm not going to say we're better, but our sound has definitely gotten wilder."

One of the reasons Kirkpatrick and Callahan attribute a better sound at live shows is that they can play and jam on stage the way they want to, and the album does not reflect that.

"We've always had a loose attitude to music," Kirkpatrick said. "We are real reactionary toward tight corporate bands. In our music, we act and react toward not only what we are doing on stage, but what the audience is doing as well."

"World of Monsters" is musically upbeat, and listening to it gives the impression of listening to a band rehearsing for a show. The fast-paced tempo of most of the songs is accompanied by the wide ranging melodies and haunting vocals.

The band said it likes to perform for a college crowd more than any other.

"We don't like playing for people who are bored or are into a scene just because of the scene," Kirkpatrick said. "We like playing before bright and enthusiastic people. I like playing in front of people where music means something."

Callahan said college students are not caught up in the realities — or distractions — of life.

"They are still thinking and it's easier playing for people stretching their horizons rather than for people coming just relieve their boredom," he said.

The Drovers' music has grabbed the attention of record companies, but the band is in no hurry to sign. Kirkpatrick said it has already turned down a couple of deals already.

"We've pretty much blown it off," he said. "The deals offered weren't what was right for the band. We don't want to sign with a label and then have them be unresponsive to the music of the band."

If Kirkpatrick has his way, he said he would like to be a band more along the lines of the Beatles, whom the record companies pretty much left alone to do whatever style of music they felt like playing.

Being unsigned has not hurt The Drovers' reputation. It was voted Best Independent Band in a Chicago critics poll when "World of Monsters" was released, and it is hoping to release another independent album by spring.

and bone spikes jutting from his body. Dressed in the tattered remnants of an outfit that looks like a green chemical-warfare suit, he is as strong and indestructible as Superman, and can leap 50 miles in a single jump.

But Doomsday possesses no powers that Superman has not already faced. Superman defeated countless villains in the comic books, including the late Lex Luthor, Braniac and Metallo. In the Superman II movie, he fought three evil Kryptonians with powers equivalent to his, only retreating so the people of Metropolis would not be injured in the ensuing carnage.

Superman's editor Mike Carlin said Doomsday simply puts up a better fight.

"He doesn't have any Kryptonite and he has no more brains than Superman, but he could go the distance," Carlin said. "Doomsday is like a force of nature. He is like a hurricane. Superman was able to defeat all these other villains, but what sets Doomsday apart is no one has been able to fight Superman for six weeks straight before."

Colabuono said Doomsday represents Superman's alter-ego.

"Whereas Superman is a force for good, Doomsday is a force of nature for evil," he said. "It's kind of like the irresistible force meets the immovable object."

"We know nothing of the character of Doomsday before this fight," Colabuono continued. "When it happens it happens so fast and so unexpectedly. If Superman was real this is probably how things would happen."

This situation has happened before. In 1980, former Marvel Comics writer Chris Claremont killed Jean Grey, one of the four original X-Men. Grey eventually returned to life, however, and survives in the X-Men title.

Every year the city of Metropolis throws a celebration in honor of Superman, which is slated for the second week in June 1993.

Mayor Bill Kommer said Metropolis is erecting a bronze Superman statue. He said DC Comics warned the statue-raising committee of Superman's imminent demise two or three months before the public announcement.

"A lot of people are coming in and getting their picture taken with the Superman statue," Kommer said. "(Senator-elect) Carol Mosely Braun got her picture taken the other day."

"When I was growing up, there wasn't anything that could kill Superman," Kommer remembered. "I hear he's going to be revived, though."

Editions of Superman No. 75 on sale today for a higher price. Some issues will sport a black arm band with Superman's "S" symbol and a death certificate. The issue also will be available at regular price without the arm band and certificate.

Nobody yet knows where Superman's body will be buried, but there will be a special place of memorial in the hearts of the millions of people who have looked up to the man of steel.

already voted on that issue and we have decided to move."

Kington has been in the School of Art and Design since 1961.

As an undergraduate at the University of Kansas and as a graduate student at Cranbrook Academy of Art, Kington studied jewelry and silversmithing, but in the early '60s he became interested in blacksmithing.

Health problems, negative effects go hand-in-hand

To Your Health

By Joyce Combes
Wellness Center

Diversity is a buzz word around many campuses today and SIUC is no exception. This powerful nine-lettered word simply means "different."

Even though the definition is simple, students exposed to diverse cultures in residence halls, classrooms and on basketball courts can experience negative side effects which can lead to health problems. Stress-producing thoughts come up, such as "I wonder if they think I am different?" "What will happen if I don't speak clearly?" and "Will I be able to get along with my roommate?" This stress lowers a student's self-esteem and raises susceptibility to illness such as headaches and stomach aches which are followed by health service visits and inability to concentrate on studies.

This chain of events can be stopped by supporting commitment to accepting differences and building bridges to commonalities among individuals which, in the end, can produce a healthier academic environment.

Here are some steps each individual can take to help bring the diversity commitment process on our campus:

1. Decide to differ with years of accepted social norms; be aware of stereotypes — just because someone is from another town, state or country, or has a disability does not mean that he/she will act in a certain way.
2. Become educated about challenge that others face; economic problems, disability issues or racial injustices they have experienced.
3. Personalize by thinking about instances where you were the minority or the one who was "different." Recall those feelings.
4. Set a goal this semester for getting to know one person from another background or culture. This could be accomplished by asking someone to become a study or workout partner, or setting a time to eat together.

1992 Fall Semester Final Exam Schedule

The examination schedule attempts to avoid examination conflicts by providing separate examination periods for Tuesday-Thursday lecture classes. Other information about final examinations is listed below:

1. The class final exam period is scheduled based on the meeting time and days configuration listed on the first line of the class entry in the Schedule of Classes book (which should be the same as the first printed line for the section on the registered student's schedule print-out). For example, a class section is listed in the Schedule book on two lines in this manner:

08:00 T TH
09:00 - 10:50 W

The listed starting time for the first line of the entry is "8:00." The meeting days of that first line are "T TH", and therefore are in the category "Only T or TH or T TH". The Exam Date and Period is by the attached Fall '92 Final Examination Schedule to be Wednesday, Dec. 16 at 12:50 p.m. - 2:50 p.m.

2. Classes should plan to hold their final examination in their regularly scheduled class rooms. The space scheduling section of the Office of Admissions and Records will forward to departments information relative to the location for examinations for those classes that cannot hold their examinations in their regularly scheduled rooms because of a space conflict. This will be done sufficiently in advance of the final examination days to provide adequate notice for all.

Classes that meet less than the entire semester should hold their exams during the last regularly scheduled class session prior to final examinations.

Please note that University policy indicates that exams are not to be given prior to exam week, or at times other than those scheduled.

3. Students who find they have more than three examinations on one day may petition, and students who have two examinations scheduled at one time should petition their academic dean for approval to take an examination during the make-up examination period on the last day. Provision for such a make-up examination period does not mean that students may decide to miss the scheduled examination time and expect to make it up during this make-up period. This period is to be used only for students whose petitions have been approved by their dean.

4. Students who must miss a final examination may not take an examination before the time scheduled for the class examination. Information relative to the proper grade to be given students who miss a final examination and are not involved in a situation covered in the preceding paragraph will be found in the mimeographed memorandum forwarded to members of the instructional staff at the time they receive the final grade listing for the recording of grades.

2. One credit hour courses ordinarily will have their examination during the last regularly scheduled class period prior to the formal final examination week.

3. Other classes (not those for 1 credit)

COBA students finish third in recent academic contest

By Vincent S. Boyd
Business Writer

Four students from the College of Business and Administration recently finished third in an academic competition that focused on federal tax issues and the complex financial dealings of a hypothetical family.

Margaret Al-Qassas, Paul Brennan, Brian Horan and Anita Maulding, all graduate students in accounting, received $2,500 as third place winners.

Horan said although the team wanted to win the competition last weekend, the members are happy to win third place.

"We are very proud of our achievement," Horan said. "We were shooting for first place, but third is nice."

A team from the University of Denver finished first, and a team from Brigham Young University finished second.

Randall Hahn, an associate professor in accountancy, said the students' performance last weekend is a reflection of their academic prowess and the School of Accountancy's educational program.

"The quality in their performance reflects on how well the students stand against the best in the country," Hahn said. "It also reflects on the master of accountancy program in its ability to produce quality students."

Sponsored by the Arthur Andersen Accounting Firm, the SIUC team competed against 57 teams, including the University of Illinois, Drexel University, the University of Florida, the University of Washington and Texas Tech University, at the firm's Center for Professional Education in St. Charles.

SIUC advanced to the finals by winning the Oct. 30-31 regional at the University of Illinois.

Howard Engle, a partner at Arthur Andersen and architect of the Tax Challenge, said the competition represents the best experience the students can have.

"This is the 'College Bowl' of tax research and planning," Engle said. "Students go through an intense seven-hour day trying to develop the best tax solutions based on their knowledge of the tax code and the intricacies of tax research and planning."

Hahn said he is grateful to Arthur Andersen for the competition because it is the only of its kind and it is the basis of what the School of Accountancy is trying to accomplish.

"The competition is the essence of education," Hahn said. "It places students in a competitive and learning environment."

"That is what business is all about," he said.

Harry Ruffalo, worldwide managing partner of Arthur Andersen's Tax and Business Advisory Practice, said the added taxation in society makes the competition vital to the field.

"In light of the ever increasing importance of taxation, we strongly believe the Arthur Andersen Tax Challenge will help stimulate student interest in tax careers," Ruffalo said. "This program, in turn, will help participating students, their schools, and ultimately the profession to face the challenges of the future."

Hahn agreed, saying the cash prize the students won, which will go the University's general scholarship fund, will help a deserving student finance his or her education.

"It is a wonderful benefit that will help some student in their educational pursuits," Hahn said.

New television series explores raise and fall of dinosaurs

By Melissa Willis
Entertainment Writer

Contrary to popular belief, prehistoric dinosaurs were not the slow-moving, sluggish animals depicted in old movies and ancient textbooks.

In reality, they were dynamic and quick in their movements, and scientists have discovered evidence that prehistoric dinosaurs are linked to today's birds.

How scientists discovered this evidence and other facts will be explored in "The Dinosaurs," a new four-part, four-hour television series premiering Sunday and running through Wednesday. The series will be shown at 7 each night on Channel 8.

Produced by WHY-TV, a public television station in Philadelphia, "The Dinosaurs" adds revealing flesh to bones of these prehistoric creatures.

Researchers and scientists will explain where they came from, what they looked like, how they moved, where they lived, what they ate, and how they became extinct.

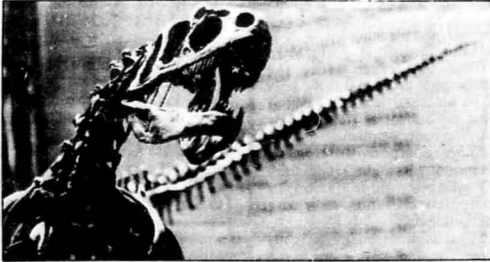

Art Ellis, associate director of public information at WHY-TV, said the series took three years to produce.

"We went through a research phase and talked to a lot of people who were knowledgeable about dinosaurs," Ellis said. "We narrowed down the field choosing the people who knew the most."

Ellis said he hoped audiences will learn the latest facts about dinosaurs.

"The series presents up to date scientific evidence on how dinosaurs lived and died," he said.

Filmed in 50 locations on three continents — North America, Europe and South America — the series focuses on the research of a new breed of paleontology, the branch of geology that deals with prehistoric forms of life through the study of plant and animal fossils.

The skeleton of an Allosaurus at the American Museum of Natural History in New York offers a new view of this ancient creature, one of the stars of the new PBS series The Dinosaurs!

Rich Baniewicz, associate producer of WHY-TV, said one of the most rugged, yet spectacular trips was to Argentina.

"We flew into San Juan and then drove 10 hours into the desert to an excavation site," Baniewicz said. "At one point in the drive we ran out of gas and had to knock on a farmer's door. The trip lasted a week and was very intense."

Baniewicz said he hoped viewers got a sense of science from the program and that the program conveys how important science is.

Robert Bakler, adjunct curator of the University of Colorado Museum, said audiences will get a giggle and a shock from the program.

"Viewers will be surprised at how knowledgeable scientists were a century ago," he said. "They were very accurate about birds evolving from dinosaurs."

Bakker said dinosaurs still are alive today in the form of birds.

"When people are eating their Thanksgiving turkeys next week, they are actually eating dinosaur," he said. "If they save the bones and boil them to clean them, and then take them to a museum to compare to a Tyrannosaurus Rex dinosaur, they will see they are the same in everything except size."

"The Monsters Emerge" is first in the series. It focuses on the events leading to the modern discovery of dinosaur fossils. Although dinosaurs dominated the earth for 140 million years, their existence was not recognized until 200 years ago. This program deals with explorations that led scientists to give dinosaurs their name, which means "terrible lizards."

Second in the series is "Flesh on the Bones." This episode deals with recent discoveries made scientists as to the nature of the dinosaur. Questions explored in this program include: Were dinosaurs slow-moving beasts or speedy roadrunners? Were they hot-blooded or cold-blooded? Did they eat plants, or did they eat each other?

"The Nature of the Beast" is third in the series and examines the three successive geological periods through which dinosaurs evolved. Almost half of t dinosaurs today have been discovered or described in just the past 20 years.

Finally "The Death of the Dinosaur" examines why the species disappeared 65 million years ago.

The program explores different possibilities, including the hypothesis that a giant asteroid struck the earth 65 million years ago, wiping out nature's most colossal success.

Rockies, Marlins hope 'Who?' turns to 'Wow' for draft picks

The Hartford Courant

NEW YORK—Let's hope the Colorado Rockies and Florida Marlins are more exciting on the field than the exercise Tuesday to determine their teams.

As expected, the baseball expansion draft to stock the rosters of the National League franchises that begin play next year was mostly a recitation of names that begged the question, "Who?" Both teams hope the answers will be positive the next several years, but the latest members of the major league fraternity have a collection of strangers for the most part.

Not that there were not some recognizable names. Taken in the first round were four regulars, including third baseman Charlie Hayes of the Yankees and second baseman Jody Reed of the Red Sox, both by the Rockies.

Reed was traded to the Dodgers for right-handed pitcher Rudy Seanez in one of several deals announced after the draft. The Rockies also traded outfielder Kevin Reimer, whom they had drafted from the Rangers, to the Brewers for outfielder Dante Bichette.

Not to be outdone, the Marlins made four trades. Florida acquired shortstop Walt Weiss from Oakland for a catcher they had drafted from the Athletics, Eric Helfand, and dealt three pitchers with major league experience.

The Marlins sent left-hander Greg Hibbard, who had been drafted from the White Sox, to the Cubs for shortstop Alex Arias and third baseman Gary Scott. Florida drafted Danny Jackson from the Pirates and traded him to the Phillies for left-handed pitchers Joel Adamson and Matt Whisenant. Tom Edens, whom the Marlins drafted from the Brewers, was traded to the Astros for pitchers Hector Carrasco and Bruce Griffiths.

In another deal unrelated to the draft, Cincinnati traded reliever Norm Charlton to Seattle for outfielder Kevin Mitchell.

There had been speculation the Cubs' Shawn Dunston, the Pirates' Jose Lind and Cardinals reliever Lee Smith would be picked, then traded, but all were bypassed.

So, too, was outfielder Danny Tartabull, but the Yankees were nonetheless the team hardest hit by the draft. Hayes, 27, had been the solution to their third base problem in recent years. Colorado made him the third overall pick in the draft after both teams raided the pennant winners for their first choices.

Selecting first by virtue of winning the coin toss, Colorado picked David Nied, 24, a right-hander from the pitching-rich Atlanta Braves. Florida used its first pick to select Nigel Wilson, 22, an outfielder from the Toronto Blue Jays and a Canadian, no less. Neither selection came as a surprise.

Lockout threat in MLB may be losing support

The Sporting News

Remember how the doomsayers predicted a lockout? Remember how owners would be shutting the game down for the entire 1993 season in the wake of Fay Vincent's ouster? Now they're suggesting that support for a lockout is waning.

That's hardly a surprise.

For more than a year, we've been reporting that there has never been a consensus for a lockout and that the whole Vincent affair wasn't directly connected to some "Red Scare" to "shut the game down and break the union."

That is more true now than ever. There's just too much unfinished business for the owners to get bogged down in guerrilla warfare with the players' association. The television negotiations need to be hammered out. The issue of realignment needs to be settled. The job of commissioner needs to be defined. Someone must be found to DO the job. And, the expansion clubs need to get off the ground.

In light of all of these issues, several club executives say there is diminishing support for reopening the Basic Agreement — a prelude to a lockout.

There had been some support for reopening the agreement without a lockout and using the year for contract discussions with the players.

But that strategy could be risky. Should talks collapse along the way, the players could threaten a strike before the playoffs, which would put a big scare into the owners.

Unless there is some significant change of heart, look for the deadline for reopening the Basic Agreement to pass and the 1993 season to proceed uninterrupted.

GREAT AMERICAN SMOKEOUT

AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY

A FEW QUIT TIPS

Hide all ashtrays, matches, etc. Lay in a supply of sugarless gum, carrots, etc. Drink lots of liquids, but pass up coffee & alcohol. Tell everyone you are quitting for the day. When the urge to smoke hits, take a deep breath, hold it for 10 seconds, & release it slowly. Exercise to relieve the tension. Try the "buddy system," and ask a friend to quit too.

LEAVE THE PACK BEHIND

Join the Great American Smokeout on the third Thursday of November. Millions of smokers across the country will take a break and try not to smoke for 24 hours. How about you? Or, if you don't smoke, adopt a smoker for the day and promise to help that friend get through the day without a cigarette!

Thursday, November 19
10:00a.m. - 2:00p.m.
Stop by the information table near SHAC in the Student Center to pledge your commitment to quit smoking or to adopt a smoker.

Healthy NFL QBs an endangered species

The Washington Post

Although the number of players on injured reserve is down slightly from last season, quarterbacks continue to be injured — eight went down on Sunday — at an alarming rate. This is a trend that started in the mid-'80s and continues despite every effort by the league's Competition Committee to protect its highest-paid, best-known players.

Through Sunday's games, only nine of the league's 28 quarterbacks who started the season have played in every quarter of every game, including only three in the AFC (Buffalo's Jim Kelly, Miami's Dan Marino and Kansas City's Dave Krieg).

That's the conference in which the run-and-shoot and other spread offenses are more prevalent. Seven teams have used at least three quarterbacks, including five teams in the AFC.

The run-and-shoot floods receivers into the defense, but offers less protection to quarterbacks, especially to run-and-shooters such as Houston's Warren Moon and Detroit's Rodney Peete, both battered all season.

That's the result of many teams using fast, blitzing outside linebackers, such as Washington's Wilber Marshall, Kansas City's Derrick Thomas, New Orleans's Pat Swilling and the recently injured Lawrence Taylor of the Giants.

Some teams, such as the Redskins, build an offense around the protection of the quarterback, and most of the nine season-long quarterback survivors are in formations designed that way.

"It's not the sack," said former Browns general manager Eric Accorsi. "It's the hit they take after the throw."

That's how Seattle's Stan Gelbaugh (sprained knee) was injured Sunday.

"It's almost simultaneous ... just after the ball is released," said Saints President Jim Finks, chairman of the Competition Committee.

"That's when they're the most vulnerable. Their arms are up, their ribs aren't protected and their (passing) foot is planted. And that rusher is quite legal doing whatever he's doing."

Many injuries, Finks and others point out, occur when the quarterback becomes a runner, a situation in which Moon (broken left arm), Denver's John Elway (shoulder), Pittsburgh's Neil O'Donnell (hamstring) and Indianapolis' Jeff George (wrist) went down Sunday.

Quarterbacks have the option of sliding to the turf and thus conceding the tackle, a recent rule that forbids contact by a defender. Elway, however, tried to imitate a fullback Sunday night against the Giants. It was a poor imitation.

"You can't legislate against that," Finks said. "If he wants to run the ball, it's buyer beware."

"Injuries have been and always will be a major part of this game. We look at it each year and recognize the importance of quarterbacks to the league. ... We eliminated the in-the-grasp rule, and it's worked beautifully. The referee's only responsibility now is to protect the quarterback and make sure he doesn't take a late hit. ..."

Malone denies he drove Magic out

Newsday

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Karl Malone once said that he knew when he had arrived as a superstar.

"It was when Magic invited me to his summer all-star game,"

Malone said.

"Then, I knew."

And so Malone finds it ironic that he has been painted by some people as a villain in Magic Johnson's decision to retire a second time from the Los Angeles Lakers.

Malone said he has nothing but respect for Johnson as a player. But Johnson has the human immunodeficiency virus, and despite assurances that the chances of it being transmitted on the court are infinitesimal, Malone said he still is concerned.

Taylor hoping to heal for January playoffs

Giant linebacker facing 4 to 5 months of rehab

Zapnews

NEW YORK — The doctors treating his ruptured Achilles' tendon, have one timetable. Lawrence Taylor apparently has another.

Improbable as it seems, considering medical wisdom says it likely will take four or five months before his right leg is strong enough for him to play again, LT said Tuesday that he hopes to heal fast enough to return in January should the Giants make the NFC playoffs.

And he sounded serious.

"Then I wouldn't have to answer the question of whether I'm gonna return or not," Taylor said at his first news conference since undergoing surgery eight days ago to repair the tendon torn on Nov. 8.

"Because that would be my last gig. I'm not sure if it's possible. But I'm still trying to come back faster than normal. That's the way I think and that's what I believe I can do."

LT said this at the Upper Montclair Country Club, where he and the Jets' Browning Nagle represented the NFL as the PGA introduced the NFL Golf Classic, which will premier as a regular Senior Tour event on May 24-30, 1993.

Taylor wore a knee-high plaster cast that probably will come off next week. When it does, Giants team physician Dr. Russell Warren will fit him with a flexible brace-type cast that he will wear for several more weeks.

Then the difficult physical therapy will begin.

Led by a candidate for All-American, can SIUC miss?

By Norma Wilke
Sports Editor

Ashraf Amaya has a heavy label to carry this season—SIUC's first bonafide All-American candidate in 15 years.

But the 6-6, 230-pound senior said he does not feel any added pressure on himself—the pressure is more on the team to reach the NCAA tournament.

"I don't feel any added pressure because I think Marcelo da Silva as well as having five returning starters is taking a lot of that pressure off myself," Amaya said. "I feel we have enough talent and capabilities so that one person shouldn't feel that pressure."

As a junior, Amaya was named the MVC Most Valuable Player. He averaged 19.4 points and 10.3 rebounds a game, and as a result, he was named first-team all-conference Defensive Player of the Year, as well as winning the MVC scoring and rebounding titles. He is the preseason favorite for conference MVP again this year.

Amaya was also named Illinois' Most Outstanding Player by a Springfield paper that polled all Division I head coaches and sports information directors in the state.

Coach Rich Herrin said Amaya is definitely an All-American candidate. His statistics and his awards have shown him to be a good candidate.

"He's a tremendous athlete," Herrin said. "He's a great individual off the court and on. He's sincere, and he's a class player that deserved any honor he receives. He accepts the pressure well. Everybody has pressure on the team. He's a great player on a great basketball team. He just goes out and does his job."

With Amaya's ability, he could become SIUC's seventh NBA player.

Women hungry for more

Another All-American candidate, 3 seniors return from 23-8 team

Saluki guard Anita Scott said preseason publicity is nice, but she would rather wait to give her response on the basketball court.

The senior from St. Louis is one of four returning SIUC women's basketball starters who hope to live up to expectations for another trip to the NCAA tournament.

Scott, Kelly Firth, Angie Rougeau and Tiffany Bolden all return as starters from last year's 23-8 team and will lead the team again this year.

Scott is tabbed as an all-conference pick in the Missouri Valley Conference and an All-American candidate by NCAA Preview and Street and Smith's magazines. The 5-9 point guard said she noticed the recognition but will let her playing do the talking.

"I am grateful for being named a preseason All-American, but I know that I have to live up to it," Scott said. "I don't hold the predictions to be written in stone."

Herrin said Amaya is a legitimate NBA prospect.

Amaya is the type of player who is the first to help another player up when someone knocks him down, Herrin said.

"Amaya shows leadership by example," Herrin said. "He motivates the team through his actions. Amaya's more of a team-player, and he gives his team credit rather than himself. He'd rather win a game than score a lot of points himself. Though we look for him to do that."

The team's leader, Amaya, has the added pressure of getting the team to the NCAAAs. Amaya said the pressure is on the team after missing the tournament last season.

"There is somewhat of a void because we have not played in the NCAA tournament," Amaya said. "There's pressure that we put upon ourselves because we've fallen short of that goal so many times in the past when we know we should have achieved it."

"I think with the talent we have this year, we have the capabilities and the potential to fill the void," he said.

Amaya's goals for the season also reflect his emphasis on the team more so than on an individual player.

"What I want to accomplish this year is to win the conference championship, win the Missouri Valley Tournament and definitely go to the NCAA tournament and have success there," he said. "Those are the only real personal goals I have for myself, and those are associated with team goals. I never really set goals for myself as far as an individual because there is no one person who can run up and down the court and do it by themselves."

Amaya said areas he looked to improve on this year was his outside shooting, which was a weakness for SIUC last season, his left perimeter game and his ball handling, as well as his defense.

Herrin said Amaya is a complete player with the athletic skills, the personality, the desire and the intelligence. He has great work habits, and he works hard for everything he achieves, Herrin said.

As for taking a leadership role on the team, Amaya said he will receive help from junior point guard Chris Lowery and fourth year senior Tyrone Bell.

"Tyrone Bell's been in the program as long as I have, and that takes a lot of pressure off myself," he said. "We also have a lot of experience in Marcelo da Silva and Mirko Pavlovic as juniors. Paul Lusk is coming in as a new player in a new system, but he's also experienced. Marcus Timmons is older this year, and he's been helping the freshman along."

Amaya enters the 1992-93 season third on the career list for free throws made with 347, second in free throw attempts with 536 and 16th in games played with 95.

Mike Glenn, who played from 1974-77 and leads SIUC's all-time list for career points with 1,878, was the last SIUC All-American and the last Saluki to be named MVC Player of the Year.

Amaya is 11th on the career-point list with 1,319. Glenn is one of only six Salukis to play in the NBA.

SENIORS, from page 1

Scott's opponents probably thought that they were hit over the head with a rock after her performance last year. Scott garnered All-Gateway Conference and Kodak district five honors with 13.7 points and 4.5 assists a game, which ranked third in the Gateway.

Firth

Scott said the key to success is teamwork.

"I want this to be our best year ever," she said. "If we play like a team, it is going to be a great season."

Senior center Kelly Firth said that the Salukis' success will depend on how the young players blend in with the veterans on the court.

Bolden

"The most important thing is that we lead by example," Firth said. "If we can show the younger players the system, it will help out a lot."

"We would like to make it as far as we can in the tournament, and I think with the closeness of the four seniors and the way we play together nothing should stand in our way," she said.

Rougeau

Senior forward Angie Rougeau, a three-year starter, is sixth on the all-time Saluki women assist list with 282 and eighth in blocked shots with 41. Rougeau said she is looking to step up her game a notch to help the Salukis win.

Scott

"I need to contribute with court confidence, rebounds and assists," Rougeau said. "We also need to get great leadership."

Saluki coach Cindy Scott said despite their different backgrounds off the court, the four seniors' leadership on the court has been crucial in the success of the program over the past three years.

"They come from very diverse backgrounds, but they have come together on the court and provided tremendous leadership and that will be the reason we do well this season," she said.

The coach said Scott, Firth, Rougeau and Bolden are the core of the Salukis' success.

"They are the most talented class that we have ever had," she said.

Senior forward Tiffany Bolden said that the seniority sisters have developed into a family.

"We are really close," Bolden said. "We are like sisters this year because we know that we have the ability to do it."

Bolden came through in the crunch for SIUC last year as she scored a career-high 24 points in the Gateway tournament loss to Southwest Missouri State. Bolden also collected 22 points in the Salukis' opening round upset of Colorado in the NCAA tournament.

"I am sure that we will get our 20 wins this year, but I want to win them all."

inside game by opening up more.

"We're going to try shooting from the outside perimeter so that the other team won't be able to shut us down on the inside," Timmons said. "We just have to watch ourselves, help each other out and correct what we may do wrong."

Did the freshman feel belittled by the intimidating prowess of All-American candidate Amaya, a forward with the Salukis?

Apparently not.

Timmons said Amaya has helped him from Day 1 and it was hard not to like the guy.

"He just helps me out with good advice, which I follow," Timmons said. "I'm just gonna push myself and help him out in any way I can, and he'll help me out as well."

Timmons said one of his goals was to play in the NCAA, a goal for most of the other Salukis as well.

"I'm gonna take every game one at a time and try to focus on doing my best from the first game on out," Timmons said. "I'm happy to be at SIUC and I intend to do well in my stay here."

Amaya also became the first MVC player since Drake's Lewis Lloyd, who played from 1979-80, to lead the league in both scoring and rebounding in the same season.

Balfour Choice of Champions

Women favored in MVC

By Jay Reed
Sports Writer

Saluki women's head basketball coach Cindy Scott said the 1992-93 Salukis can travel one of two paths this year.

One path is a dead end where they fall flat on their faces.

The other is a freeway where they race past the competition and surpass the success of her 1987 team that finished 28-3.

"I have great faith that this team will not fall on their faces, and we can surpass what did in 1987," Scott said.

One reason for Scott's faith: four starters return from the squad that finished second in the Gateway Conference and advanced to the second round of the NCAA tournament.

But Scott said the success of last season's team does not guarantee the success of this year's team.

"They will not win for any other reason than the fact that they get out on the floor and work extremely hard everyday and play like a team," she said.

College Sports magazine ranked SIUC seventh in the nation, Street and Smith ranked the team 23rd, and NCAA magazine rated it 30th.

"I will not allow them, nor will my assistant coaches allow them, to think because they are ranked that they can go out here and do things halfway or three-quarters way or anything less than maximum effort," she said.

The Salukis are picked to finish first in the inaugural season of women's basketball in the Missouri Valley Conference. The Salukis are picked ahead of 1991-92 Gateway Conference champion and NCAA national semi-finalist Southwest Missouri State.

Expectations high for men

By Karyn Viverito

A Democrat is in the White House for the first time in 12 years, and Toronto captured the World Series trophy for Canada for the first time, and the SIUC men's basketball team could be the first Saluki team to go to the NCAA tournament since 1977.

The Salukis have been picked to finish first in the Missouri Valley Conference by most preseason analyses, including Street and Smith's magazine and the MVC coaches' poll.

If the Salukis can live up to their billing, they may be on their way to the Big Dance of March Madness—the NCAA tournament.

Head coach Rich Herrin said it is nice to be picked the favorite, but it also puts some extra pressure on his team.

"I know we would rather be where we're at now rather than somewhere else," he said. "It does put a little added pressure when we take the floor, but it is a great challenge and we are ready to defend our title."

The Salukis have been practicing to defend their title since Nov. 1, and Herrin said he likes what he's seen from his team.

"So far the team has shown a lot of effort and our practices couldn't be going any better," he said. "Their dedication shows good attitude and habits, and they are playing like they want to win."

As for the NCAA's, Herrin said his team is going to take it one game at a time.

Senior 6-8 forward Ashraf Amaya is again predicted not only to lead the Salukis, but the conference as well, after being named MVC player of the year for the 1991-92 season.

As a junior, Amaya led the MVC in scoring, averaging 19.4 points a game, rebounding, averaging 10.3 and field goal percentage, also managing to win MVC defensive player of the year honors as well.

This season Amaya is a unanimous selection to the MVC coaches preseason all-

"I think the Missouri Valley could not be more proud to have the caliber of women's basketball teams in its conference than it has this year," Coach Scott said. "We believe the Missouri Valley is stronger than the Big Ten and Big Eight."

The four starters that return for SIUC are guard Anita Scott, center Kelly Firth, forward Angie Rougeau and forward Tiffany Bolden.

Scott led SIUC in scoring, averaging 13.7 points a game; assists with 140; and steals with 59. Scott also played a school record 1,139 minutes last season. The senior guard from St. Louis was named All-Gateway and was a Kodak All-District Five selection last season.

Springfield center Kelly Firth anchors the middle for the Salukis again this year after averaging 12.5 points and 9.7 rebounds a game. Firth, a senior, led the Salukis with a .563 field goal percentage and a .756 free

Timmons faces stress of accolades—head on

By Sanjay Seth
Sports Writer

Marcus Timmons, who could have chosen to play in a high profile basketball conference such as the Big 10 or the Big 8, is very much a home boy.

Timmons said his friends, family and hometown of Haywood City, 10 miles from Sikeston in Southeast Missouri, were important factors in his choice to play at SIUC.

"A lot of my friends around here come up to me and ask why I didn't go to Mizzou or Georgetown or North Carolina or a Big 10 school," Timmons said. "They don't look at the situation with my family. I didn't want to be that far away from home."

Timmons said even his brothers and sisters said he should stay close to home so that they could still come down and support him during games like they did when he was in high school.

"I feel better in my game knowing I'm close to home where my friends and family are," Timmons said. "It's really nice to see faces that you grew up with since the third grade in the crowd."

Timmons will be watched by friends and fans alike in the season opener tonight against Belorussia.

The pressure will be on for the 6-8 forward to prove that his freshman season was not beginner's luck, but true to his potential.

Timmons was voted Freshman of the Year in the Missouri Valley Conference last season and Mr. Basketball by coaches throughout Missouri two years ago.

He had a lot of pressure coming in last season after leading Scott County Central High School to the 1A state championship for the fourth straight year, but his Saluki teammates said he handled it well.

Senior forward Ashraf Amaya said he felt Timmons was a good player who had a lot to contribute to the Salukis.

"Marcus came in with a big tag on his head being Mr. Basketball or Missouri player of the year," Amaya said. "He was under a lot of pressure because of this tag being the, so to speak, marked person."

Amaya said Timmons did well for himself and won the MVC freshman player of the year—and was picked in the '92-'93 preseason All-Conference selection—in spite of all the pressure.

"Marcus can be as great as his abilities will let him as long as he keeps his head on straight," Amaya said. "If he works hard and remains consistent, he'll be a great player."

Tyrone Bell, a senior guard for the Salukis from Evanston, said he thought of Timmons as a good person both on and off the court.

"Being voted preseason All Conference is a great honor for Marcus, and he has to live up to that," Bell said. "He's going to have to step his play up this season."

Timmons said looking back at video footage of last season's performance, he realized that he hesitated before shooting on a number of open shots, and he saw other little mistakes that bothered him.

"I'm gonna improve on my overall game and not let the crowd get to me," Timmons said. "I just want to do my best and help the other players as much as I can."

He said the team has been playing well in the preseason in pick-up games, and both physical and mental improvement could be seen in the players.

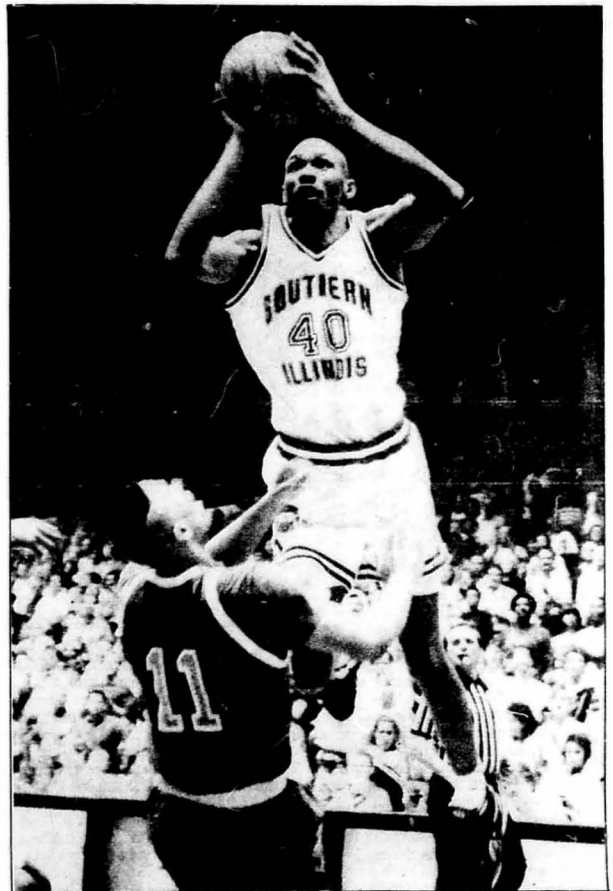

This year, the Salukis will not let 10-point leads slip away, Timmons said, but will work harder to build up on the lead instead of turning the ball over.

Timmons, averaged 5.9 rebounds a game and had a career best of 12 rebounds in the game against Wichita State in February. He wants to be more of a rebounding force this season.

"I'm going to try my best on rebounds and to help the other players with passing and shooting," Timmons said.

The trio of Amaya, Marcelo da Silva and Timmons will also attempt to develop the

Scott force behind success of Salukis

By Andy Graham
Sports Writer

Seven games short of her 300th win, SIUC women's basketball coach Cindy Scott enters her 16th season as one of the winningest women's coaches in NCAA Division I history.

A St. Louis native, Scott grew up on basketball. Both her father and brother are avid men's college basketball fans.

"I probably know more about men's college basketball than most die-hard fans," Scott said.

She attended Lindburgh High School, where she played tennis and basketball. When she graduated, Scott wanted to become a lawyer.

At Memphis State University, Scott played guard for the women's basketball team and was recognized as a truly great athlete, said Charlotte West, SIUC assistant athletic director.

"She had tremendous poise and potential as a player for Memphis State," West said.

Scott came to SIUC after earning degrees in political science and physical education at MSU. She decided on SIUC, the only place she has ever coached, because it was one of the only places she could work as a graduate assistant in physical education.

Scott was offered the position of women's coach before the 1977 season. Her assistant coach was George Eubelt, from whom Scott said she learned a great deal.

"My whole defensive philosophy was shaped by George Eubelt," Scott said.

Scott, who is tied for 35th in wins among NCAA Division I coaches, has an amazing list of accomplishments under her belt. With a career record of 293-142 in 15 seasons, her teams have accomplished eight 20-win seasons, three conference titles and four NCAA tournament appearances.

In 1985, Scott took the Salukis to the National Sports Festival in Baton Rouge, La. where they won a gold medal. Her teams have also been victorious at the Dial Classic tournament three times, where they also boasted the tournament MVP each time.

In 1986, Scott coached the team to an SIUC record 23-game winning streak and a record of 25-4. The team's success earned Scott Gateway Conference Coach of the Year honors.

In 1987, her team did even better, notching a 28-3 record, including the Salukis' first win in the NCAA tournament. She shared Coach of the Year honors for the Gateway Conference in 1987.

"Cindy Scott is the major reason that the women's basketball program has had the success that it has," assistant coach Julie Beck said. "She's an intense hard worker who despises mediocrity."

The 1992-93 season marks the debut of women's basketball in the Missouri Valley Conference. The Salukis have been picked by a preseason coaches poll to be the first-ever conference title winners. Scott said this year's team has potential like no other.

One of Scott's goals for this season is to be the first women's MVC champs. She would also like to make it beyond the first round of the NCAA tournament.

Scott's long-term goals are to be a consistent national top-25 team and a consistent NCAA tournament contender. This season, the Salukis are ranked 23rd in the nation by Street and Smith magazine.

Scott has a well-respected national reputation that could be attributed to the consistency of her teams' success, the team's schedule and Scott's constant presence in the women's basketball scene.

"I've been in the game for a long time and have been very involved in the sport," Scott said.

Scott recently was elected president of the Women's Basketball Coaches Association,

The 5,000 members—high school, junior college and college coaches—are responsible for promoting the sport, passing sports legislation and trying to get television exposure.

"Coach Scott is a highly reputable coach who has a sincere caring for her players, and they work extremely hard for her because of this," West said.

Big men on campus

Height advantage may make Salukis a winning team

By Sanjay Seth
Sports Writer

The Salukis inside game of big men Marcelo da Silva, Ashraf Amaya and Marcus Timmons translates into a SIUC height advantage for 1992.

But will it translate into a winning advantage?

The three inside players, all 6-8 or taller, helped SIUC lead the MVC in rebounds last year with an average of 41 in a game. They also led in the rebound margin, blocked shots and field goal percentage.

Da Silva, the Salukis' 7-foot center from Brazil, said the height advantage alone does not make the Salukis unstoppable.

"We are going to have very strong players on the post, but it doesn't mean all that much either," da Silva said. "Last year we had the same combination, but we still lost in the end. We didn't do as well as we should have."

"The height question is no guarantee that we will win," da Silva said. "If we play hard, work hard and correct our mistakes, then we're going to win."

Illinois State Redbirds head coach Bob Bender said the Salukis have had the size factor for the last couple of years but are more [?] this year with the experience they have gained.

"With Amaya, Timmons and Marcelo, SIUC is probably the biggest team in the league," Bender said. "Amaya can step out and shoot 3's and Marcelo in all his 7 feet is a rebounding force to reckon with."

All-American candidate Amaya, the 6-8 forward for the Salukis said the height advantage is not a guarantee for victory.

"We basically have one 7 foot player in Marcelo," Amaya said. "If you look at the league and some of the other teams, they have some really big guys."

Creighton has a 6-10 sophomore returning as a starter, and Bradley has a 7-1 freshman who is redshirting this year.

"We do realize that we do have an advantage," Amaya said. "But it's not so much the size (of the player) but the size of the heart that is going to matter. As long as we play inside our capabilities I feel we will do well."

Timmons said the height advantage for the Salukis would be most obvious against schools with smaller players.

"We can take advantage at that point and try our best to win a lot of games," Timmons said.

But if the Salukis cannot get the ball on the inside, Timmons said they would have to concentrate on opening up the game—by penetrating, working on short passes and being accurate on the outside throws.

Mark Bernsen, head coach of Southwest Missouri State Bears, said he did not think that there were any guarantees for winning for any team in the league.

"A coach would not be very smart if he did not concede that the SIUC squad have some good-sized players," Brendan said. "The Salukis are well coached and are very athletic as well — all put together it does guarantee some kind of success, but there is no total guarantee."

Bender said the Bears will have a tough time playing the Salukis this season and just hope to keep the game close during competition.

Bender said the Salukis could use their size in different dimensions since they had all these strengths.

How would the Redbirds, who are tied with the Bears in second place after the No. 1 Salukis in the MVC preseason coaches poll, overcome this potential height problem?

Bender said the Redbirds could not expect to just jump the Salukis in the game.

"Firstly, the scoring on the inside will have to be stopped by our defense," Bender said. "Secondly, we can't just turn and go to rebound with them. We'll have to try keeping them from the basket with good, aggressive blocking."

SIUC head coach Rich Herrin said size is no guarantee in the game of basketball.

He said when looking for a good ball club, size alone would not cut it.

Colleges such as Wichita and Illinois State also have big guys, Herrin said, and Northern Iowa is probably the biggest team in the league.

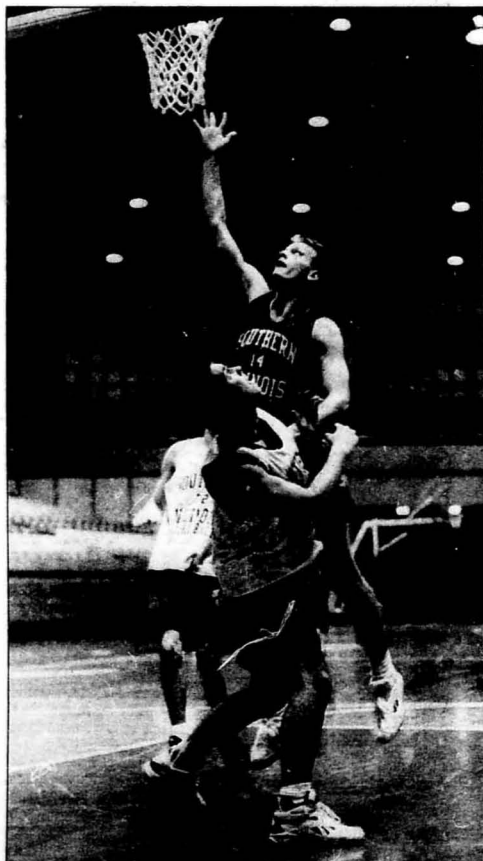

"We have good size, sure, but that's not an advantage against all the teams we play," Herrin said. "A 6-6 player can take on a 6-8 player in a lot of cases."

He said the Salukis want to be the best rebounding team in the country and were setting their goals to it.

"Good positioning is important in rebounding, and we're working hard on that," Herrin said. "More important than that is the amount of effort we put into the game."

He said determination was as crucial as height in the game and a balanced attack would take the glory.

"You have to be good on the inside and the outside game to win," Herrin said. "Everyone has a role to play, and if they play it to the fullest potential, you have a great team."

Women's basketball short on attendance

By Andy Graham
Sports Writer

Despite the success of the SIUC women's basketball team, attendance at the games is usually sparse and always trails attendance at men's games.

With eight 20-win seasons, three conference titles, four NCAA bids in the last decade and a 23-8 record last season, the Salukis have been exciting.

The SIUC women's basketball team averaged only 839 spectators in attendance for 13 home games for the 1991-92 season.

"Students should take more pride in following such a talented team," associate coach Judy Beck said.

The problem may be visibility rather than a lack of student pride. Women's sports do not get as much television time as men's athletics.

Yet despite lesser visibility, other women's programs find ways to draw large crowds.

SIUC's rival, Southwest Missouri State, averaged 6,035 in attendance for only nine home games. When SIUC played Southwest Missouri Jan. 4 in Springfield, Mo., there were 9,108 in attendance, which was a record for Southwest.

On the road last season, the Salukis played before crowds averaging 1,768. At home, SIUC saw crowds of 1,000 or more only three times. The largest crowd at a women's basketball game at the Arena was 2,603 Jan. 21, 1989, against Wichita State.

"We just haven't been able to get students interested, and it has been a big frustration for a long time," said Mitch Parkinson, women's sports information director.

Southwest Missouri attributes its success to the women's Fast Break Club, a group of professional women in Springfield who have contacts that help them promote the team.

Hard work is also an important reason for Southwest's success with attendance, said Mary Jo Winn, Southwest Missouri's director of women's athletics.

"We work really hard at making women's basketball games fun so that the spectators will want to come back," Winn said.

SIUC has adopted this strategy and is trying new and old promotional methods to try and increase attendance at women's basketball games.

The people responsible for athletic promotions, Mike Trude and Tom Davis, have a schedule of events planned that they hope will appeal to a broad range of Carbondale community members, Trude said.

All the games this season will have a halftime promotion:

■ For the season opener against Northern Illinois Dec. 1, the promotion will be student appreciation night. At halftime, SIUC will have a drawing for free tuition for the spring semester.

■ At halftime Dec. 8 against Tennessee Tech, a local travel agency will give away a free trip.

■ A grocery store will have a giveaway at halftime of the Dec. 30 game against Wisconsin, and the game is being played at John A. Logan.

■ The Jan. 14 game against Bradley will be elementary school night. Children get in free.

■ On Jan. 16, SIUC plays Illinois State on Alumni Association night.

■ On Feb. 4 against Murray State, a Carbondale bookstore will have a pregame giveaway.

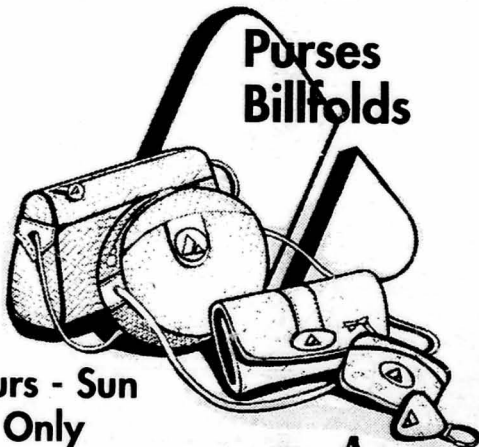

■ On Feb. 11, a chili dinner will precede the game for faculty/staff night. Admission is free with the purchase of a dinner.

■ The University bookstore will have a giveaway Feb. 13 against Northern Iowa, and Feb. 15 against Creighton will be scout night, free for all scouting organizations.

"In a lot of ways, women's athletics are still in an infancy stage. Right now we are experiencing many growing pains and stages," Scott said. "If any team needs to be promoted, it's this one. It has potential like no other."

"We just really need to promote the heck out of it," she said. "We need to put a lot of money into this sport and see what happens."

conference team and is predicted to be the outstanding player of the year for the MVC.

Amaya is the first Saluki since Mike Glenn (1975-76) to win the MVC player of the year. If he is successful again this season, he would be the sixth man in MVC history to win back-to-back titles, joining the likes of Hershey Hawkins, Xavier McDaniel and Larry Bird.

Even with these expectations, the Salukis' big man said he's not feeling the pressure.

"It doesn't really bother me because of the supporting cast I have behind me," he said. "A lot of players have increased their level of play, and with the addition of players such as Paul Lusk and Jo Jo Johnson, we are going to have a strong team on the court."

Amaya's versatility between his inside game and his ability to step out and shoot from the outside will be a great asset to the team, Herrin said.

Senior guard Tyrone Bell will join Amaya as the other senior returning starter.

Last season, Bell averaged 9.3 points a game and 70 percent of free throws. He also was selected to the MVC all-defensive team.

Herrin said Bell might see a little bit more action at the point guard position, switching over to give junior guard Chris Lowery a bit of a rest a times.

With one year of experience behind him as starting point guard, Lowery said he has gained confidence at his position.

"Last year I was thrown into the starting line-up with little experience after not playing much the season before," he said. "This time around I know what it's like and I know what to expect."

Lowery, the Salukis' only player under 6-foot, earned MVC second-team honors after averaging 13.1 points a game as well as leading his team in assists with 118 and steals with 51. Last season, Lowery also managed to play 106 minutes at the point guard position without a turnover.

After an outstanding freshman season that earned him MVC Freshman of the Year, forward Marcus Timmons was selected for MVC coaches' preseason all-conference team.

As a freshman, Timmons averaged 8.7 points a game and 3.9 rebounds. He said he is going to try and better that this season.

"When I looked back at some of the tapes from last season, I see my mistakes and what I could have done," he said. "There were times I hesitated when I had an open shot, and I had factors that got in my way."

Amaya said the 6-8 returning starter is a great team player who handled the pressure coming into SIUC last season.

"Last year Marcus came in with the Mr. Missouri Basketball image to live up to all season, and he was able to overcome that," he said. "He has received some nice honors for his abilities on the court, and he keeps his head on straight, he will be a great player."

Seven-foot Junior Marcelo daSilva finished second on the squad in rebounding with a 6.2 average and averaged 7.2 points a game all while only playing an average of 17.7 minutes per contest.

With physical strength being important in basketball today, Herrin said da Silva looks to be ready for the challenge.

"Marcelo is a lot bigger and stronger that he was a year ago," he said. "We should continue to see him improve in his game."

At 6-8, junior forward Mirko Pavlovic averaged 6.6 points and 3.3 rebounds per game as a sophomore, with his season rebound total of 160 more than doubling his performance as a freshman.

Not only did he provide for the Salukis coming off the bench, but he also started eight games, a role Pavlovic said he enjoys.

"It does not bother me to come in for my team off the bench, and it is always nice if I get to start a couple of games," he said. "I just try to make quality time of the time I spend on the court."

Another player expected to see a lot of time on the court when he becomes eligible Dec. 18 is sophomore guard Paul Lusk.

Lusk is a transfer from the University of Iowa basketball program, where he was starting point guard for the Hawkeyes before he broke his leg in the third game of the season. He made seven of the nine shots he took from the field that season. The Salukis will play four games before Lusk is available to play, and it will be important for him to catch up to his teammates, he said.

"I will have to go in and work hard to get into the rhythm," Lusk said. "I am most likely going to be a little rusty because I have not been competing for a year now."

Returning Salukis include sophomore forward Ian Stewart, who won the Almost Late Night 3-point contest, junior forward Tim Pace and freshman guard Brian Piper, both of whom redshirted last season.

New recruits expected to see some action in SIUC's games this season are freshman guards Jo Jo Johnson and Chris Carr, and forward Scott Burzynski, along with a transfer from John A. Logan, junior forward Ralph Hughley.

throw percentage, while committing only 1.8 turnovers a game.

Senior Angie Rougeau contributed 12.1 points a game and 6.1 rebounds a game for the Salukis. The Memphis native registered a career high 26 points in the Salukis' upset win over Colorado in the first round of the NCAA tournament last season.

SIUC power forward Tiffany Bolden returns after averaging 7.4 points and 5 rebounds a game last year. Bolden, a senior from Kansas City, Kan., scored double digits in both points and rebounds in five games.

"I can honestly say that I have tremendous faith in this group of seniors," the coach said. "They are leaders and they want to win."

Complimenting the four returning starters are sophomores Rocky Ransom and Kelly Geistler. Ransom averaged 6.7 points a game and 4.5 rebounds for the Salukis, and Geistler averaged 6.8 minutes of playing time in 23 games at center. Karen Powell, who averaged five points a game, and University of Oklahoma transfer Robin Smith will battle for the off-guard job.

Freshmen guards Heather Slater, Nikki Gilmore from St. Louis, Christel Jefferson from Kennett, Mo., and Tracy Holscher from Fowler, Ind., will vie for playing time. Freshman forward LaQuanda Chavours from Racine, Wis., and standout Jennifer Williams roundout the Saluki newcomers.

Anita Scott, tabbed as a preseason All-American candidate, said if the Salukis work hard and play together things will work out.

"I think the main key to success will be how the seniors help the kids," she said.

The SIUC schedule features matchups against nationally ranked Wisconsin, Vanderbilt, Arizona State, Tennessee Tech and a possible rematch against Colorado in the Coors Classic Dec. 5. The Salukis knocked off the 24th ranked Buffs 84-80 in the first round of the NCAA tournament last year to advance to the second round. The Salukis will also be seeking revenge on Southwest Missouri State, who clipped SIUC in all three encounters last year.
