Pacific Rim nations commit to trade plan

Los Angeles Times

BOGOR, Indonesia—Leaders of 18 Pacific Rim countries formally committed themselves Tuesday to dismantling all trade barriers within the next 25 years, but last-minute objections from two nations showed how fragile their alliance remains.

After a six-hour meeting at the opulent summer palace of Indonesian President Suharto, the leaders of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum pledged that their industrialized members will drop all barriers by the year 2010 and that developing countries will do so by 2020. President Clinton, who last year began pushing the group toward such commitments, said the move should broaden trade and investment, bringing a harvest of benefits for all concerned, including average Americans.

"This is good news for the nations of our regions, and especially good news for the United States and our workers," said Clinton, who has made the creation of trade groups a major foreign policy objective.

The agreement came on the sixth day of a nine-day Asia trip by Clinton that Wednesday brings a state visit with Suharto. Clinton has promised to raise the issue of Indonesia's poor human rights record at the session. Meanwhile, Secretary of State Warren Christopher will meet with Indonesia's Human Rights Commission, a government agency.

Though Tuesday's trade agreement is broad and non-binding, the countries hope it will create momentum to hasten the trend toward free trade within a group that includes half the world's population and 40 percent of its trade.

Experts called it remarkable that such a diverse group of nations — which includes the United States and Japan, Brunei, Mexico and China — could even agree on common goals.

But complications raised by South Korea and Malaysia in this scrupulously scripted event suggested that the compact could rapidly become bogged down in questions about the schedule on which the barriers will come down and about who will qualify for special benefits.

Last weekend, South Korean officials were secretly pushing for a quicker elimination of trade barriers and for assurances that theirs would not be classified as a developed country. Suharto, host of the event and another key

Gingrich favors privatization of public broadcasting group

By Dean Weaver
Senior Reporter

If soon to be Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., gets his way, public broadcasting may suffer a major federal funding cut which has SIUC's public radio and television directors concerned.

Gingrich, appearing on "This Week with David Brinkley," said he was in favor of privatizing the Corporation for Public Broadcasting. The Corporation is responsible for one-third of the funds the SIUC broadcasting department receives. Lee O'Brien, director of SIUC broadcasting services, said,

"These federal appropriations are the linchpin of our funding." O'Brien said, "I don't think there is enough money in this market to replace this type of loss."

O'Brien said the $1 million in grants from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting goes to WSIU-FM, WSIU-TV and its sister station WUSI-TV in Olney. The other sources of funding include $1.5 million from state and University appropriations and $500,000 from local sources.

He said if Congress abolishes the public broadcasting corporation, the stations will instantly lose $500,000 of state matching grants. This would cut the broadcasting funds in half.

"Rural stations similar to ours would go under and metro stations would make cutbacks but probably survive," O'Brien said. "Pulling these funds would put an end to everything."

Tom Godell, WSIU-FM station manager, said he agreed that if federal funds were immediately cut, the station could not survive, but if it was phased out more gradually the station might make it.

Godell said radio programs would have to be cut, on-air hours reduced and many stations would be forced to consolidate and centralize programming which would mean less local news. He said even if these things were done stations would still need to find additional funding to survive.

"I think local news and public affairs would be one of the first things cut, because they are expensive to produce," Godell said.

He said he did not want to see these cuts made, but local donations from private

'Tis the season

Jeanne Foster of Carbondale positions a Christmas tree for "the Enchanted Forest" display at University Mall Tuesday afternoon. The display is part of The Family Friendship Fund, which allocates money to Herrin and Memorial Hospitals. Trees will be sold beginning Saturday at 10 a.m. when the exhibit opens to the public with proceeds going toward the fund. The fund provides emergency assistance to patients' family members in times of crisis. The tree and materials were donated by local businesses.

Committee redefines role

By Chad Anderson
Staff Reporter

The Undergraduate Student Government's Registered Student Organization (RSOC) Committee is in the process of redefining its role as a checks-and-balances-system.

The committee wants to streamline its job in overseeing RSOs by eliminating duties already held by the Office of Student Development (OSD).

Natalie Costa, USG senator for Brush Towers, said the committee wants to become more personable to RSOs and trust OSD to do its job.

"We want to rid ourselves of duties already being handled by other organizations on campus," she said. "We want to trust OSD to do their job, and become a

Amtrak anticipates heavy holiday traffic

Officials suggest off-peak traveling

By Stephanie Moletti
Senior Reporter

With the holidays approaching, SIUC students will cram into tight, narrow train cars as they prepare for the trek home.

Amtrak traditionally has carried thousands of college students home for Thanksgiving every year. However, this year the company has given warning to students and other holiday passengers to travel by train on off-peak travel days whenever possible.

Don Jones, ticket agent at the Carbondale Amtrak station, 401 S. Illinois Ave., said the station has been selling a lot of reserved tickets for the past two or three weeks.

"We'll put extra cars on for Thursday (Nov. 17) and Friday (Nov. 18) to handle all of the students," Jones said.

He said the days to avoid travel are Nov. 23, 24 and 27. Most students will be going home Nov. 17 and 18, and will be returning the following Sunday, Nov. 27.

Jeff Auxier, Carbondale Amtrak ticket agent, said Friday, Nov. 18 will be the busiest day for the Carbondale station.

Amtrak expects Thanksgiving weekend to be the busiest travel period of the year for its short-distance services operating between Chicago and Detroit, Pontiac, Grand Rapids, Mich., St. Louis, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, Carbondale and Quincy.

Because most accommodations provided on these routes are unreserved coach seats, the company is encouraging passengers to travel on less crowded days, such as Tuesday, Nov. 22, Saturday, Nov. 26 or Monday, Nov. 28.

CLINTON MAY REVERSE POLICY ON CUBANS — WASHINGTON—The Clinton administration is considering allowing thousands of Cuban children and their families who are now detained at the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, to enter the United States, officials said Monday. The move would mark a reversal of President Clinton's adamant policy against granting asylum to Cubans who fled their homeland on rafts and makeshift boats this summer. A trickle of Cubans have arrived in Miami in recent weeks as the administration quietly permitted several dozen children and elderly and infirm refugees to enter the United States under humanitarian exceptions to the existing policy. But the proposed policy, which could be adopted within days, would allow as many as a third of the 23,390 Cubans at Guantanamo into the United States. The release would apply to about 3,000 Cuban children younger than 17 and their family members and caretakers at the camps. Most are expected to settle permanently in the Miami area, administration officials said.

RWANDAN AID FALLING INTO WRONG HANDS — GOMA, Zaire—Nearly four months after the world watched in horror as an estimated 50,000 Rwandan refugees collapsed and died in miserable camps on the bleak volcanic moonscape here, frustrated United Nations officials and relief workers say the largest, fastest international relief effort in history has become a new kind of nightmare. Their concerns range from massive theft of donated food and other relief goods, to death threats against U.N. field officers and aid workers, to daily political assassinations and other murders in the three largest camps. And humanitarian groups now openly acknowledge that the distribution of relief supplies to the estimated 750,000 Hutu refugees has come under the direct control of former Hutu government leaders and militias — the same extremists accused of slaughtering at least half a million Tutsi civilians inside Rwanda before they fled here in July.

BANK PROVIDES MOBILE AUTOMATIC TELLERS — Charlotte, N.C.-based First Union Corp. has received approval from the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency to roll out mobile automated teller machines in the District, Maryland and Virginia. The machines are mounted on the side of vans, and customers can withdraw money just as they do from regular ATMs. The machines only dispense cash; they do not accept deposits. First Union introduced the mobile machines regionally in September at the Virginia State Fair in Richmond. The bank said the vans come in handy during emergencies. When Hurricane Andrew hit Florida in 1992, the bank brought in mobile ATMs to serve customers. The mobile machines, which use cellular communications technology to link up with the bank's database, cost $120,000 each, according to First Union spokesman David Scanzoni.

MORE FATHERS WINNING CUSTODY BATTLES — In an era of blurring roles and changing rules, more fathers are seeking custody of their children — and getting it — when their marriages fall apart. Once it was virtually unheard of for a mother to lose custody of her children, and children still end up in their mother's homes without a court fight in most divorces. But when custody disagreements come before a judge, studies suggest that fathers are winning at least half the battles. Fathers' rights groups applaud the shift in custody decisions, arguing it is about time they won a fair share. But women's advocates fear there is a backlash against mothers. They contend some judges are holding them to an impossible standard of parental perfection. Behind the gender wars is a simple but significant legal change: State laws no longer favor mothers over fathers.

Council meets new member of police force

By John Kmita
Staff Reporter

The Carbondale Police Department's new police dog was introduced to the Carbondale City Council at Tuesday night's meeting.

Von Jasper Nordsee Sturm, a German Shepherd, and his handler, Doug Brinkley, appeared before the council. Police Chief Don Strom explained the canine program to the council members.

Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan asked if Jasper's first arrest, a drug bust, would be considered a legal search and seizure even though the dog had not been sworn in at the time of the arrest.

Strom said the swearing in of the dog, performed by the city clerk and city manager, is merely symbolic.

Also at Tuesday night's meeting, the council passed an action to award a bid to work on the water main along Emerald Lane.

The $68,623.10 was awarded to Haslet Construction of Beecher City to fund the water main replacement and the road work on Emerald Lane to begin next year. Haslet Construction was the only company to bid.

City Manager Jeff Doherty said

if the council held off in hopes of attracting other bidders, the construction may have been delayed up to a year. Now, the project should be finished by next winter.

Doherty recommends the use of alternate routes to keep traffic congestion to a minimum.

Prior to the city council meeting the local liquor control commission met and awarded Applebee's Restaurant, 1125 E. Main Street, an

A-2 liquor license.

Applebee's owner Dan Chandler said he plans to open the restaurant by the first week of March, barring delays. Construction already has been delayed two weeks because of rain.

To conclude the city council meeting Mayor Neil Dillard formally announced he will be running for another term as mayor in next spring's elections.

Campus group assists with canned food drive

By Diane Dove
Staff Reporter

An SIUC student organization asked more than 750 departments, administrative offices and student organizations to contribute to the 1994 Greater St. Louis Area Council Boy Scout Canned Food Drive.

Jason Ervin, president of Blacks in Business, said the organization has assisted with the food drive for the past four years.

"This year we're getting more cans and a bit more participation," he said. "This is just one community service project that we do at this time of year."

Michael Haywood, director of minority programs and undergraduate recruitment for the College of Business and Administration, said BIB sent more than 350 letters to departments and administrative offices around campus. An additional 400 letters were sent to the heads of resident student organizations, he said.

"Each year BIB sponsors the campus food drive where we reach out to the University community," he said. "We ask each department and each student organization to collect canned goods, and then we collect them in cooperation with the food drive by the Boy Scouts."

Though the Boy Scouts' food drive ended last week, the drive will continue at the University until Friday, Haywood said.

Ervin said the food drive is targeted toward the holiday season.

"Around Christmas, that tends to bring out the good side of people, and they want to give back to the community," he said.

Jack Norman, district executive for the Boy Scouts, said the scouts collected more than 86,000 cans of food in 10 Southern Illinois counties last week.

"By far the best we've ever done," he said. "The thing that we were amazed about are the bags that are full."

The greater St. Louis area collected 1.65 million items of food last week, Norman said.

"That's mind-boggling to me," he said. "That's the great part of this program — people helping people."

Norman said the food collected from the drive will go to local food pantries.

"The beauty of this program is what is collected in Carbondale, Murphysboro, ... stays in Carbondale and Murphysboro," he said.

People wishing to contribute to the food drive should donate non-perishable food in cans only, Norman said.

Food items can be left at Rehn Hall, room 122A.

Levy to speak on astronomy, discovery of historic comet

By Aaron Butler
Staff Reporter

Last summer astronomers stood transfixed as a string of cosmic debris slammed into Jupiter, creating some of the largest explosions science has ever witnessed.

Levy

The debris was the remains of the comet Shoemaker-Levy 9, an ancient stellar body ripped apart by Jupiter's gravity, then sucked down into the giant planet's atmosphere.

David H. Levy, who discovered the comet given his name, will present a lecture accompanied with slides and video at the Student Center Auditorium tonight at 8 p.m., describing his work as one of the world's most prominent amateur astronomers.

The event will be presented by the University Honors Program, as part of the Charles D. Tenney Distinguished Lecturer Series, and will be followed by a reception in the Student Center Gallery Lounge. Fredrick Williams, director of the University Honors Program, said Levy is one of a rare type of human being who does what he loves.

"He is one of a dying breed," said Williams.

"Levy does what he does because he can't do anything else — he is a true amateur, one who loves to do what he does."

Levy is a senior instructor at the University of Arizona's ARTIST program, and has been an adjunct of the Asteroid and Comet Survey at the Flanrau Planetarium.

He has written nine books, including "The Sky: A User's Guide" and his latest, "Skywatching."

Levy has discovered or participated in the discovery of 20 comets, including eight from his backyard telescope.

The Shoemaker-Levy comet was discovered by Levy and Eugene and Carolyn Shoemaker in 1992 at the Palomar Observatory in California.

Scientists believe the comet had been orbiting Jupiter for about 125 years, after the giant planet's gravity pulled the comet out of its solar orbit.

Scientists estimate comets as large as Shoemaker-Levy only collide with Jupiter once every 1,000 years.

Professor selected for panel

Cancer institute studies methods to curb smoking

By David Vingren
Staff Reporter

An SIUC law professor has been asked to serve with tobacco legislation experts from around the nation on a panel for a federal agency.

Donald Garner will review applications for grant funding for the National Cancer Institute.

Individuals working in the health-care field, such as doctors and health-care officials, are seeking the grant to provide funding for their efforts to curb the number of tobacco users in America.

The panel will be made up of no more than seven experts from around the nation, with Garner being the only professor.

Garner said he was grateful to be selected for the panel, whose other members include lawyers and doctors.

Garner

Garner, who earned his law degree from the University of Texas at Austin in 1971, said he was not entirely sure why he was selected to the panel, but would take the appointment as an honor.

"It's a great honor to work with these other people," he said.

Garner will begin reviewing applications over Christmas break before traveling to Washington, D.C. in January to meet with the entire panel to assess the viability of the proposals.

Garner said the grant will not be given for research purposes, but rather to stop the use of tobacco products in a more direct fashion — for example, limiting the amount of advertising of the hazardous products or educating young children on the negative effects of tobacco use.

"Our goal is just to get people to stop smoking," he said.

Garner's expertise in this area stems from three decades of tobacco legislation, including the publishing of an article in the Emory Law Journal in 1977 that proposed states seek compensation from tobacco companies for smoking-related health-care costs, an idea enacted into law this year in Florida.

Garner said he believes that lawyers may begin to take a bigger role in getting Americans to stop smoking.

"In the future I think we'll see a lot more lawyers involved than heretofore has been the case in the crusade against smoking," he said. "It's not just a doctor's show anymore."

Costs being shifted, put on students' backs

SIUC STUDENTS ARE PAYING TOO MUCH OF the rising costs of higher education. According to figures, students are paying 45 percent of instructional costs, 15 percent more than recommended by the Illinois Board of Higher Education for next year. The burden of financing college costs has shifted to students and away from state institutions.

The funding burden of higher education needs to be taken off the backs of students and their families. The increasing cost causes students to depend on more financial aid.

Increasing costs, due to decreasing state funds, cause institutions to rely more on students to make up for insufficient funds. Instead of improving programs with the increasing funds from students, the rising incomes from percentages are needed to maintain current levels of quality. This is wrong.

ACCORDING TO AN AFFORDABILITY STUDY recently released by the IBHE, "The affordability of a college education depends on institutions' ability to control operational costs as well as students' and families' ability to pay. Institutions should continue and expand efforts to use resources effectively, improve productivity, and enhance the quality of educational programs and services."

The report also said "the lack of financial resources should not be a barrier to higher education" and "a college education should be affordable and accessible to all students. In order to maintain the affordability of a college education, students and their families should not be asked to assume a greater share of educational costs than they are now paying."

But the report made no specific recommendations about how to do this. Therefore, the University administration should adopt a cap of 30 percent of institutional costs instead of increasing it over what IBHE recommends.

Over the last two years, the IBHE has recommended program cutbacks at all state universities. State universities had to declare if they were going to cut back or defend all or some of these programs. Universities were put on the defensive instead of voluntarily examining programs.

BY LOOKING AT ITSELF VOLUNTARILY INSTEAD of defending its programs to IBHE, SIUC would benefit by cutting out waste and reallocating funds to make higher education more affordable to its main customers — the students.

This awareness of over-burdened students and their families is timely with the new 3.5 percent tuition hike for SIUC undergraduates, a 14.9 percent increase for law students, a 16.9 percent increase for medical students and a 16 percent increase for dentistry students received for next year. The burden of rising costs should be placed on coming up with alternative outlets of funding instead of putting it on students.

Letters to the Editor

D.E. questioned on photo policy

A question for Walter Jaehrig, director SIUC School of Journalism and fiscal officer of the Daily Egyptian.

Approximately 500 people are celebrating the vernal Equinox in the Communications parking lot on the SIUC campus.

This is being covered by the DE staff and other media. Eventually, some groups break away and begin committing acts of vandalism. Two individuals break into the DE newsroom when it is unoccupied and proceed to spray paint and smash computers and other furnishings.

A DE staff photographer, returning from assignment, comes by, sees what is happening and takes photos of the perpetrators. They flee. The police are called. They ask for copies of photos taken during the celebration to help in apprehending the individuals and others involved in other acts of vandalism. Do you turn over the photos?

Fledgling band dislikes criticism

This letter is in response to the recent reviews by local publications regarding the bands involved in the battle of the bands this year. Most recently, senior reporter of the Daily Egyptian Aleksandra Macy's negative review of the final round taken place at Beach Bumz, last Thursday, Nov. 10.

We are with the band "Nobody's Everything" and although we have not been together as long as other established bands, we pride ourselves in how much we have accomplished with as little help as we have received. We may not have satisfied Aleksandra Macy's taste in music, but we have received numerous compliments by other musicians, music store personnel, and members of WIDB. Even though these critiques, well taken and supportive, have an effect that is minimal for us and other bands, compared to what a less qualified judgement in a local publication which reaches thousands of students and citizens can do.

We agree that the volume levels were too loud, this was the sponsor's responsibility, not the band's. Negative reviews have a strong impact on whether the people will go out and support local bands or not. With this approach, a diverse music scene will not evolve in this town. We urge others to come and check out the local bands in the other bands in the other battle still taking place, and judge for yourselves.

—Craig Roberts, senior, microbiology

Sigas, Greeks benefit campus

Have you looked at the other side of the "gangs" here in Carbondale lately, Mr. Parrott? Without the Greek system, whose members volunteer a lot of time, most of SIUC's blood drives would not be as successful. Phi Sigma Kappa has been extremely successful in sponsoring a safe, fun Halloween environment, with the support of the other Greek organizations, for the children of Carbondale for at least the last five Halloweens. The Greek organizations have contributed a lot of time to other Carbondale efforts as well as to national charity efforts. This includes participation in Carbondale Clean 'n Green, the Jerry Lewis Telethon, and the MS

Walk-a-thon.

I am proud to be a lifetime member of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority. I was a member for all of my four years of undergraduate work here at SIUC. During that time, it was taught and stressed upon us to uphold higher standards of morals, mostly due to the negative image of many people such as you, Mr. Parrott, had of our type of organization. I also know that all of the national governing bodies of Greek organizations condemn hazing and other forms of violence. The national organizations impose a penalty of expulsion from the organization to those in violation, something that, to other Greeks, is as shameful as being dishonorably discharged by an arm of the military.

I would like to know where you obtained this long history of violence by "gangs" in Carbondale as well as your information that violence on the strip is frequently caused by members of these "gangs". One account I read about the Halloween weekend violence told of members of a "gang," Sigma Phi Epsilon, who stood on their front lawn keeping partiers from trespassing. This sounds more like stopping or curbing violence as opposed to creating it.

—Kristin E. Ryan, first-year law student and member of Sigma Sigma Sigma administration of justice from Joliet, said she is leaving this Friday or Saturday depending on which train she can get onto comfortably.

Kappel said she plans to return to Carbondale Sunday, Nov. 27.

She said she is not able to return Saturday, Nov. 26 to take advantage of the temporarily cheaper rates.

"We can't get back into the dorms until Sunday," Kappel said. "If I had a place to stay off campus Saturday, I would come back earlier."

The train transports most passengers on Wednesday and Sunday of the holiday weekend.

Debbie Hare, public relations officer for Amtrak, said she recommends students purchase round-trip tickets before traveling to avoid long lines in both directions.

She also recommends that passengers arrive at least 30 minutes before departure, because the stations may be crowded.

Students may purchase tickets at the station or through most travel agents.

individuals and businesses would not be enough to compensate for the loss.

Robert Gerig, WSIU-TV station manager, said it was too soon to speculate about funding cuts, but over the past eight years both the television and radio stations have worked to increase local funding.

The radio and television stations have two major on-air fundraising drives with some additional off-air fundraising events.

Despite Gingrich's comments, Geannie Bunton, spokesperson for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, said she does not think Congress will abolish the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

"Traditionally broadcasting has received bipartisan support," Bunton said.

"I'd like to think no senator or congressman will go back to their district and explain why there's no

'Sesame Street.'"

O'Brien said privatization sounds good in theory, but in practice it fails to make sense.

"If you cut funding and force stations to rely on advertising, you limit high quality programming that meets the needs of the community," he said.

By cutting our funding you limit the programming we provide to the poor, rural and young people, O'Brien said.

committee that keeps RSOs in line and make sure they follow the rules."

Costa said the committee wants to make itself available to RSOs for problem-solving consultations.

"The grunt work is already done. We want to become more personable and not just pass papers," she said. "We want to make it so they can talk to us."

Carin Musak, USG vice president, agreed with Costa in saying they passed papers.

"According to the constitution, they're (RSOC) a bunch of paper pushers," she said. "They don't want to be secretaries (to OSD). They want to be on the same level as OSD and it's not known if they can do that. We're working on building them up to whatever they can achieve."

Costa said the reason RSOC wants to redefine its duties is to abolish meaningless problems that are so small they never arise. "All the things we're empowered to do are so minuscule they don't come up often enough," she said. "It's a checks-and-balances system right now, but we want to specify our goal more clearly and make ourselves known to OSD."

Musak said the group is still in the process of defining itself.

"It's a brand-new group we've been trying to get off the ground," she said. "We don't want to be a miniature version of OSD."

According to Costa, all the duties now held by RSOC are also under the purview of other organizations or committees.

Groups wanting to become RSOs must first gain approval of the OSD, and then elect officers. Once they gain RSO status through OSD the group must ask for funding through undergraduate government's finance committee. As Costa explained, the only real power RSOC has is to revoke RSO status from groups, which can also be done by OSD.

"Basically, RSOC is the same job as OSD," Costa said. "They want us to do the same job over again."

Duane Sherman, USG senator for the college of technical careers, said he expects changes to be made to better the committee.

"As it is set up now, its basic role is to assist the finance and internal affairs committees. USG has never had this committee before, and we need to find a reason to keep it going," he said. "Hopefully, we can form it so it can really help the RSOs."

Musak said constitutional changes to help RSOC should be expected either during the Dec. 7 or Jan. 25 senate meeting.

Center provides free turkey dinner

By Chad Anderson
Staff Reporter

A number of local businesses and organizations are providing a free Thanksgiving meal for students who cannot make it home for the holiday.

The meal will be given out at the Newman Catholic Student Center, 715 S. Washington Ave., on Nov. 24 between noon and 2 p.m.

Deb Watson, the Thanksgiving meal's coordinator, said the meal originated 26 years ago when the priest at the time offered a meal for international students and other students who were too far away from home or could not afford to go home for the holidays.

"It started with a turkey that was given to him, and he invited the people over to his house for the meal," Watson said. "Then it just went from there."

The meal has grown from a few students at a house to more than 500 meals served last year.

"We average about 500 meals a year," Watson said. "It has been as high as 700 meals, and as low as 400."

Watson said she is planning for 500 meals this year, but is worried about the food running out.

"We are planning for 500, but the food stretches and we always over-buy," she said. "If we get over 500 people, it seems to stretch to however many."

Watson said the meal will include the traditional Thanksgiving menu. "It (the meal) will include turkey, mashed potatoes, gravy, green beans, cranberry sauce, pumpkin pie and whatever else is brought in," she said. "We ask people to bring in desserts to help make the meal stretch."

Watson said the meal will cost the center about $2,500.

She said SIUC's Undergraduate Student Government donated a substantial amount to the center — about $800 — and some local businesses made small donations.

Other groups sponsoring the meal include the Clinton Country Knights of Columbus, area churches, community members and several individual organizations.

Magnolia Manor highlights history, Christmas spirit with holiday tours

By Kellie Huttes
Senior Reporter

Lights are twinkling, boughs are hung with holiday bows and the halls are decked with holly. Although Christmas is more than a month away, Cairo residents have been decorating a historic mansion there for tours to begin next week.

Magnolia Manor, a 125-year-old, four-story home decorated with white wrought-iron, located at 2700 Washington Ave. in Cairo, will open its doors for tours Thanksgiving Day.

It will remain open Nov. 25, 26, 27, Dec. 3 and 4 from 1-5 p.m. for individual and group tours.

Victorian Christmas carols are piped into every room, putting tourists in the holiday spirit, and Myra Polston, curator of Magnolia Manor, said 10 of the mansion's 14 rooms will be decorated with different themes.

The overall theme this year is "A Christmas to Remember."

The drawing room is filled with floating angels, the library houses various Santas and the rustic kitchen hosts playful snowmen and aromatic gingerbread houses.

A new twist to the decorations this year lies in the master bedroom. A celestial extravaganza of furnishings and trees covered with golden suns, moons, stars and bright blue bows awaits guests.

"We all care about the historical aspect the manor brings to the community. There is a lot of heritage here, and we want to preserve all we have."

—Monica Smith

The bedroom where President Ulysses S. Grant stayed is decorated with Christmas golfers.

"We've got an awful lot of different types of Christmas here," Polston said.

"So there will be something for everyone."

Each room is filled with handmade decorations available for sale to patrons, in addition to baked goods and bazaar items.

Kris Bagbey, president of the Cairo Historical Association and local florist, said this was his first time to help decorate the house.

"I always look forward to this time of year," he said.

"I was born two days after Christmas, so I'm Christmasy all the way around."

Bagbey has worked with eight decorating volunteers about four hours each evening for the past month.

In addition to specialized decorations, he's been putting up wreaths, greenery and garlands.

The Cairo library and Customs House also may be toured with the manor, except for Thanksgiving.

All three sites are on the National Register of Historic Places for architecture and history.

Monica Smith, librarian and decorating volunteer, said she has helped decorate the home for three years. "It's kind of an adventure," she said.

"We all care about the historical aspect the manor brings to the community."

"There is a lot of heritage here, and we want to preserve all we have."

The Victorian home, banked with giant magnolia trees, became an attraction in 1952 after its residents moved out and it sat empty for a few years.

Polston said all handmade ornaments and decorations purchased may be picked up Dec. 4 after 5 p.m., with prices ranging from 50 cents to $200.

Admission for adults is $4, and the price for children ages four to 12 is $2.

Both the Customs House and library are free to tour.

advocate of the program, resolved the issue by putting off—for now—questions of which nations fall in which category.

Later Tuesday, at a news conference in Jakarta, the Indonesian capital, Chinese President Jiang Zemin seemed to stake out his nation's position when he flatly declared, "China's the biggest developing country."

U.S. officials, for their part, were arguing that the question was not vital, because the rapid pace of development makes it impossible to know which nations should still be classified as developing in 15 years. So far, it is clear only that the United States, Japan, Canada, Australia and New Zealand will be considered developed.

Some administration officials, and some outsiders, have argued that the Asian deal could make the administration vulnerable to charges that it is giving away too many benefits to U.S. trading partners.

Critics of the GATT agreement say the administration is too easily surrendering national sovereignty in its provisions for new international trade rules.

SIUC to develop physician assistant program

By Diane Dove
Staff Reporter

As part of a goal to increase the availability of health care in Southern Illinois into the next century, SIUC officials are developing a physician assistant program.

Plans for the program, which stem from a recommendation by the Health Education Task Force Report, were presented by John Haller, vice chancellor for academic affairs, at the IBHE meeting last week.

"They congratulated us on the report and urged us to move as quickly as we can toward implementing the (report's) recommendations," he said. "But they reserve the right to review each program as it comes forward."

University administrators, along with officials at the School of Medicine and the College of Technical Careers, hope to set up curriculum to train physician assistants, Fred Isberner, associate dean for CTC said.

Isberner said the program would contain curriculum involving at least one year of clinical experience in a primary care setting and would offer a bachelor of science degree.

Details such as to cost and curriculum have yet to be determined, he said.

Though many students have already expressed interest in the program, Isberner said health care practitioners will be needed to assist with providing clinical experience.

"These students would be training at a level equivalent to the first year of medical school," he said.

The role of physician assistant differs from nursing, Isberner said. "This is beyond nursing," he said.

"Nurses could be advancing their training through this program."

Elaine Vitello, dean of CTC, said duties of physician assistants would include doing physicals and primary care assessments.

Though the program, which could be in place by fall 1996, would be in the technical careers college, Vitello said the School of Medicine would design the curriculum.

"There's a lot of little details to work out when you have two different entities cooperating to offer a program," she said.

Paul Sarvela, director of the Center for Rural Health and Social Services Development, said he hopes the IBHE and the Bureau of Health Professions will help fund the program.

Sarvela said bringing physician assistants to the area would be one solution to the shortage of health care professionals in Southern Illinois.

"I think it's a neat program and I think it will really help address some of our medical shortages," he said. "It won't be a cure all, but it will help."

The health education task force, which Sarvela was a member of, estimated that Southern Illinois needs to recruit 122 physician assistants by the year 2000.

SIUC School of Music to host low brass spectacle, mezzo-soprano

By Paul Eisenberg
Entertainment Editor

The SIUC School of Music wants to prove there is more to culture in Carbondale than the hairy goo in many students' refrigerators. The school will present two mid-week concerts which may broaden some horizons.

On Wednesday, tuba, euphonium and trombone players will unite for a low brass spectacle.

Todd Adams, a junior in music education from Dix, will play the euphonium at the concert.

He said the ensemble has been practicing all semester for the event.

"We're billing it as a heavy metal concert," he quipped.

There will be four tuba players, four euphonium players and three trombone players. SIUC low brass instructor Robert Weiss will also perform on trombone.

The first four pieces, including Sousa's "Washington Post March," will be performed by the entire ensemble. Then the focus will shift to soloists. The performance will end with a tuba quartet.

Adams said there has not been a concert like this in the five years he has been in Carbondale.

"Since I've been here, this is the largest class of low brass musicians," he said. "Also, I think this is one of the most talented low brass sections we have ever had."

The Low Brass Recital begins at 8 p.m. Wednesday at the Old Baptist Foundation Auditorium on campus. Admission is free.

Thursday brings the student mezzo-soprano concert given by Min Hui Chen, a native of China and senior in vocal music.

The hour-long concert will feature works by Brahms and Bach, as well as four pieces by Chinese composers, "Homesickness," "Saltine," "The Sun," and Lady with a Drummer."

Chen will sing with accompaniment by a pianist. There will be no drummer in "Lady with a drummer."

"I sing alone," Chen said. She said she is performing the Chinese songs "so American people can hear these Chinese songs they have never heard before."

Chen will perform Thursday at 8 p.m. at the Old Baptist Foundation Auditorium. Admission is free.

Kings' McNall to plead guilty in fraud case

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES—Los Angeles King President Bruce McNall was formally charged Monday with defrauding six banks of more than $236 million over 10 years in a long-awaited plea agreement with federal prosecutors, the culmination of a dizzying collapse that is virtually unprecedented in the sports business.

The four-count criminal information consists of two counts of bank fraud, one count of conspiracy and one count of wire fraud. In December, McNall plans to formally plead guilty to all counts, according to his attorney.

The charges, which stem from a nine-month long investigation, also allege for the first time that McNall and his executives in one deal took advantage of Kings superstar Wayne Gretzky, his longtime friend and investment partner.

According to the charges, McNall improperly pledged their horse "Honor Grades" to Union Bank as collateral for an $850,000 loan without telling Gretzky, representing to the bank that the horse was 100 percent owned by McNall's Summa Stables.

Gretzky, who bought 25 percent of the horse in 1991, isn't mentioned by name in the papers and is referred to only as "an investor." Sources confirmed, however, that it is Gretzky. McNall lawyer Tom Pollack contended that any such action "was done by lower-level employees" without McNall's knowledge. Neither Gretzky nor his agent returned phone calls.

In April, the Los Angeles Times reported that McNall was the subject of a federal bank fraud investigation, and in August reported that he had struck a plea agreement with prosecutors. Monday, Pollack publicly acknowledged that his client will plead guilty to the felony charges, most likely next month.

"Bruce is saying he did wrong, and he is taking responsibility," Pollack said. Pollack further said that the false loan applications were part of a larger effort to keep McNall's business afloat while trying to put together new ventures — such as a new sports arena — that would generate money to pay off McNall's debts.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Peter S. Spivack called McNall "the primary motivator and beneficiary of this scheme" to defraud the banks.

"It wasn't called McNall Sports and Entertainment for nothing. The company was the man and vice-versa," said Spivack, who said that "a 10-year period without discovery is pretty extraordinary."

Technically, McNall faces a maximum of 45 years in prison. Realistically, under federal sentencing rules McNall is said to face nine years in prison, with the possibility that the amount could be chipped away with extensive cooperation with prosecutors and depending on how a judge views the seriousness of the case.

Over the past three months, prosecutors and McNall lawyers have hammered out the terms and wording of the charges made public Monday, which portray a systematic effort dating back to 1984 by McNall and his associates to defraud bankers, many of whom were enamored with McNall's glitzy image and who eagerly lined up to lend him money.

The charges largely involve providing phony documents that overstated McNall's assets and understated or failed to list his debts.

TRADE, from page 16

"I think the chances of (the trade) happening are good, but only if the Warriors don't get greedy," said a source close to the negotiations. "If they're greedy, (the Bulls) will back off. Will they try to get the Bulls out of their future? That's key."

Webber, back in the Bay area, was on the phone constantly with Erwin Monday getting updates.

"Chris is doing great," Erwin said. "He's anxious to get back to playing."

The 6-foot-9 forward/center, who was last year's Rookie of the Year award, had problems with Warriors Coach Don Nelson last season.

Whether those problems led to Webber opting out of his 15-year, $74 million deal is unknown.

Nelson recently said he would step down as Golden State's coach if it means Webber would return.

The person left dangling in the entire episode is Gagliotta, Washington's first-round pick in 1992.

"It's not a distraction," said Gagliotta, using his standard response since rumors began to swirl last week.

It hasn't showed in his play. The 6-10 power forward out of North Carolina State had 20 points and eight rebounds in Saturday's win in Miami and has continued playing hard.

"A guy like Tom, it's probably on his mind," said guard Doug Overton. "But he's playing. He's been a professional the whole way."

Calbert Cheaney said the main focus has been to improve on the team's 4-1 record.

"We know we have a good team and we're playing well," he said. "We're not worrying about that at all."

Raiders' rowdy fans trade blows at games

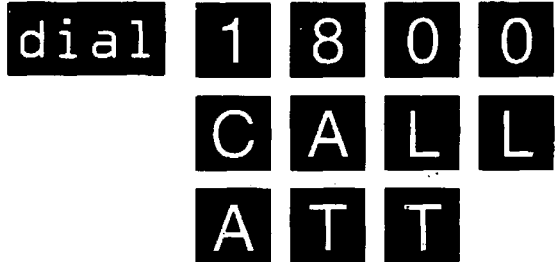

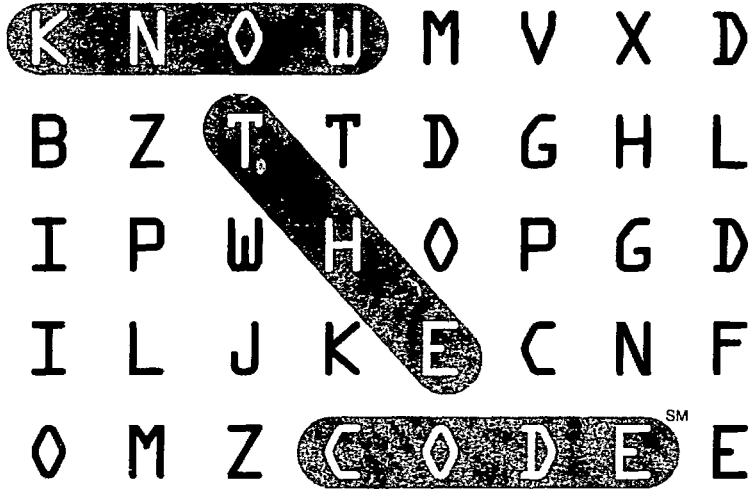

Los Angeles Times

EL SEGUNDO, Calif.—As Los Angeles Raider defensive end Anthony Smith was leaving Sunday's game against the Los Angeles Rams at Anaheim Stadium, he spotted a departing fan who had been placed in a holding cell for unruly behavior.

What the Raiders hope is that their more aggressive fans get the message: Do the cheering and leave the hitting to us. There were 26 fights at Sunday's game, 20 arrests and 55 ejections, four times the normal number of arrests and five times the number of ejections for a regular Ram game.

At Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum, there have been anywhere from 30 to 150 ejections per Raider game this season and a little less than 10 bookings per game by law enforcement officers, according to Lieutenant Mike Downing of Operations South Bureau of the Los Angeles Police Department.

In comparison, there are fewer than 10 ejections per game at the Coliseum for USC games and few arrests. The high this year for a USC game was 25 ejections at the California game.

Chanhassen, Mimm, had 123 assists in two matches last week to bring her season total to 1,231, which set a Drake school record.

Bradley is in the tournament for the first time since 1985, when they were defeated by Illinois State in a five-gamer in Springfield, Mo.

The Lady Braves won some key matches in the season to get into the tourney after sweeping SIUC.

Southwest Missouri State's freshman sensation Vanessa Wouters from Malte, Belgium finished the season with 364 kills, which is the 10th-best single-season effort in Lady Bear history.

Indiana State's senior outside hitter Jessica Barkman led her team to nine conference wins to mark the most by a Sycamore team in school history.

Wichita State's senior Nona Saldana ended her Golden Hurricane career by tying a personal best at Indiana State last week with six block solos. She also hit .419 with 15 kills in the match.

Creighton's first year in the season wasn't a total loss as it won three conference matches to finish in ninth place.

Evansville's Vicki Spahn finished her career with 1,015 kills, which is the fourth-best mark in school history.

Tulsa finished the season in last place, but did take third place in the Oral Roberts Invitational Nov. 11-12.

finishing 10th in the championship meet.

The Salukis also expect strong sophomore campaigners from Raina Larsen and Leah Steele.

"Both Raina and Leah had good performances early in the season before injuries set in," DeNoon said. "I fully expect both of them to have outstanding years next season because they possess the innate qualities of physical ability and mental toughness."

DeNoon said some of the other younger runners did not perform as well as they could have.

"We have a few of our runners who did not run to their potential, but who could bounce back and have good seasons next year," he said.

"They have the physical skills now they need the mental toughness," he said.

He said the key to next year is the offseason training. "Right the runners will focus on track, so the crucial training comes in the summer," he said. "A lot of freshmen and sophomores didn't put the effort in last summer, so they need to work hard in the upcoming summer."

The Salukis need to train hard because out of the 117 runners at the District Championships on Nov. 12, only 20 of them were seniors.

Redbirds failed to live up to preseason expectations, posting a 5-5 overall record.

The '94 Redbird campaign was the teams worst since 1988.

Southwest Missouri State had its three-game winning streak snapped against Tulsa as the Golden Hurricane handed the Bears a 38-28 loss.

SMSU quarterback Kyle Geller scored three TDs, which was the first time a Bear player had accomplished the feat since Jonah White did it against Prairie View in 1991.

The Bears head to Mississippi for a non-conference showdown with Jacksonville State to cap off their season Saturday.

Western Illinois continued its winning ways against Buffalo with a 49-7 route of the Bulls.

Leatherneck wide receiver Gunnard Twynar caught four balls for 53 yards- all of which were touchdowns.

Twynar's afternoon broke the Gateway record for TDs catches in a game, which was held by five different players.

WIU will close-out the season against Murray State in Macomb.

UNI continues Gateway domination

By Grant Deady
Sports Editor

The usual cream has risen to the top of Gateway Conference football as the league heads into its final Saturday of the season.

Northern Iowa drilled the Salukis 39-7 Saturday at McAndrew Stadium and the Panthers are saddled in for another shot at the national title as the league's only post-season qualifier.

UNI is the 14th-ranked team in Division I-AA and is slated to face Eastern Washington in its season finale.

Getting a look at next season's prospects will be one of the main tasks at hand for SIUC (1-9, 0-6) this weekend when the Salukis wrap up their 1994 campaign in Charleston against Eastern Illinois.

Saluki senior quarterback Dave Pierson failed to throw a touchdown pass for the first time in seven games against UNI, but the Norwalk, Calif. native ranks fourth on SIUC's all-time list for total TD passes with 24.

One more payday strike will tie Pierson with Rick Johnson, who tossed 25 TDs from 1980-83.

Western Kentucky flunked its third Gateway test of the fall Saturday when Eastern Illinois got by the Hilltoppers, 28-20.

WKU was already tripped-up by Indiana State and SIUC after being ranked among the nation's top-25 in I-AA at the beginning of the year.

Eastern tailback Willie High needs just 11 yards against SIUC to become the fifth back in Panther football history to put together back-to-back 1,000-yard seasons.

High is currently ranked sixth on EIU's all-time rushing list with 2,608 yards.

The Dawgs will also have to keep tabs on Panther wide receiver Greg Jensik, who caught eight passes for 143 yards and a touchdown against WKU.

Illinois State finished its season with a 27-27 tie against No. 17 Middle-Tennessee.

Punter on academic team values school above sport

Saluki football punter Mark Gagliano added to his list of honors this season by being named to the Gateway Conference All-Academic first-team.

Gagliano was named the Gateway special teams player of the week twice this season, but it's his academic achievements that mean the most.

"I definitely say academics are more important (than sports) because there comes a time when I'll have to hang up my cleats and you have to have something to fall back on," Gagliano said.

Two other SIUC kickers head the list of Gateway All-Academic second teamers as Brad Bohannon and Ryan Given were both recognized by the league.

Bohannon's 3.4 GPA in health care management was good enough to land the Godfrey native a spot on the squad, while Given knotted a 3.2 in engineering technology.

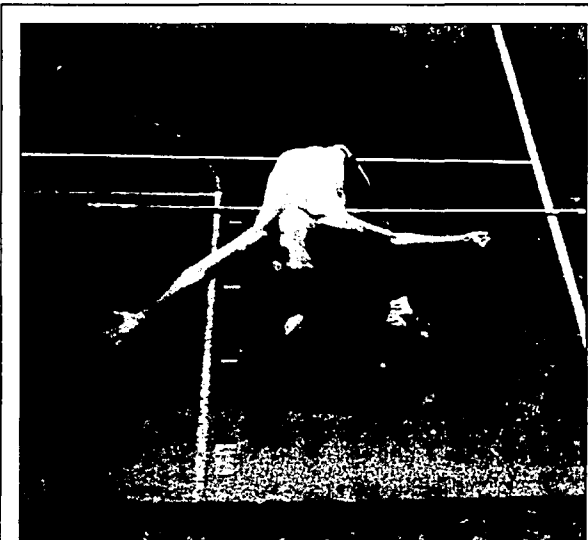

Down in the trenches, SIUC sophomore offensive tackle Brian Hawkins posted a 3.1 GPA in administration of justice.

And sophomore Brian Prudent registered a 3.5 in physiology to also make second team.

Junior outside linebacker Tony Seman, a product of Williamsville High School in Sherman, rounded off the SIUC honorees with a 3.0 in marketing.

Webber shoots for Bullets' camp

The Baltimore Sun

ORLANDO, Fla.—Chris Webber likes the Washington Bullets and badly wants to play alongside former Michigan teammate Juwan Howard. It appears now that the only thing holding that up is just what the Golden State Warriors want in return.

Webber's agent, Fallasha Erwin, was on the phone all day Monday with Webber, Bullets general manager John Nash and Warriors officials as he attempted to broker a deal that would send the Warriors' restricted free agent to Washington.

"The Bullets still have a strong interest, and the league is looking at this situation closely," Erwin said. "Chris likes the situation in Washington, and they seem to want him badly. Golden State has made it clear they don't want Chris. But what kind of return they try to extract, I don't know."

Technically the two sides can't talk trade, because National Basketball Association rules forbid the trade of a free agent. If the Warriors agree to send Webber to the Bullets, they would first have to sign him to a contract suitable to Washington — and then trade him.

Although Nash has downplayed the talks, the obstacle appears to be what Golden State wants in return. Washington would likely give up Tom Gugliotta and a first-round pick for Webber. Asking for anything more could kill the deal.

DeNoon expects runners to lead next year's harriers

By Doug Durso
Senior Reporter

The SIUC women's cross country team season is at its conclusion, but hopes are already high for next year as the young Salukis get another year of experience.

SIUC loses two runners, senior standouts Debby Daehler and Jennie Horner, but returns the rest of the team.

Saluki cross country coach, Don DeNoon said next year's team should be better than this year's because of the extra experience the younger runners gained.

"We'll certainly miss Horner and Daehler, but I think we should have a lot more depth next year," he said. "If we can keep them all, two years from now should be really good."

Koerner

French

Kelly French will be looked at to step into leadership roles next year.

"Kim gave us some really good performances before she got injured and is one of our best runners," he said. "I can't say enough about Kelly — she has run great all season and if she wasn't ill at Districts, she would have finished 10-to-15 places better."

"The Koerner-French duo next year should be equal to the dynamite tandem of Horner and Daehler this year."

Koerner and French have been battling for the third and fourth spots on the squad before Koerner was injured. French earned All-Missouri Valley Conference honors.

Spikers end season 5th

By Sean Walker
Staff Reporter

The Saluki volleyball team is out of the Missouri Valley Conference post-season action as Northern Iowa continues its run for the title.

SIUC finished the season with an 18-12 overall record and 13-7 in the Valley for its best season since 1989. The 13 conference wins are the most league victories in Saluki history.

SIUC finished in fifth place in the conference after two disappointing losses on the final weekend of action in Carbondale.

Northern Iowa hosts the conference tournament in Cedar Falls for the first time since the MVC and Gateway conferences merged in 1992. The Panthers are riding a 19 consecutive win streak, and have won 29 straight at home.

Panther setter Kara Galer is only 15 assists shy of the 3,000 career-assist mark making her only the eighth player in the conference history to reach 3,000.

Northern Iowa is ranked sixth in the Midwest Region at the end of the regular season with a 25-1 overall record.

Illinois State is the only school in the conference to play in every conference tournament sponsored by the MVC and the Gateway. The Redbirds have also been in seven championship matches, and have won all seven.

ISU is set to end its Cedar Falls jinx having lost in the semi-finals in all three of the Redbird's tries in Cedar Falls in post-season action.

Redbird middle blocker Andi Hardwick, a sophomore from Normal, Ill., is hitting .321 with 68 kills in her last eight matches.

Illinois State is also sixth nationally in average attendance with 1,852 per game.

Drake, riding on its first winning season since 1984, set a school records with overall 19 victories, and 14 conference wins in a season.

The Bulldogs will see post-season action for the first time since 1984, when they were defeated by Illinois State, the eventual champion.

Setter Kelly Hanson, a sophomore from
