IDs not always picture perfect

By Emily Priddy
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Becky, an SIUC student, is carrying a state identification card with her own photo on it. But the name, address, birthdate and Social Security number on the card belong to her sister.

Becky, who was 19 when she got the ID card, said she needed it to get into bars in Carbondale.

Getting the card was not difficult, Becky said.

"My sister was 21, and she's like a year and a half older than me. So I just took her information to the DMV (Department of Motor Vehicles)," she said. "I just took her Social Security card, her credit card and her bank statement."

Becky said no one in the facility hassled her about the information she presented.

She said she told the woman behind the counter that she lost her wallet at Mardi Gras and that the hotel she had stayed in had called to tell her they had it. She told the woman she needed an identification card in the meantime to be able to board a plane so she could go on spring break.

"The woman was so interested in finding out what I did at Mardi Gras that she wasn't even paying attention," Becky said. "I mean, it was really easy."

Becky said she got a state ID rather than a driver's license because she did not want to make her sister's license invalid.

Becky's next drink could be an expensive one if she is caught using the fictitious ID. Cathy Ritter, a spokeswoman for Secretary of State George Ryan, said.

Ritter said someone using a fraudulent driver's license or identification card faces two possible types of charges.

Because anyone presenting information for the purpose of obtaining a state ID or driver's license is required to sign an affidavit affirming that the information is true, that person can be charged with perjury — a Class 4 felony — if he or she is caught, Ritter said.

The penalty for a Class 4 felony is one to three years in prison and a fine of up to $10,000.

"The other way they can be charged is with possession of a

Credit cards cut off wrong consumers

Christy Davis came back from spring break to find a series of ominous messages from a credit-card company representative on her answering machine.

"[The company] kept calling me because I was, like, delinquent, but it wasn't me," Davis, a senior in marketing from Oak Forest, said. "The phone calls were scary. They were threatening me."

At first, Davis said she thought her sister, who had an account with that company, had made a mistake. When Davis found out her sister's account was not the one in question, she said she was confused and concerned.

"I thought someone else had opened a credit card under my name."

"I was really worried," Davis said.

What had actually happened was that another student named Davis, whose middle name was Christine, had opened an account and had given the company Christy Davis' phone number.

While Davis' credit rating was safe, not all students are so lucky, according to a representative of First USA Bank, a Delaware-based credit card company that offers a popular SIUC student card bearing a picture of Pullman Hall on the front.

Warren Wilson, a card-member adviser for First USA, said his company runs a credit check, a security check and verifies the Social Security number and address given by each applicant, but those measures do not guarantee total security.

Multicultural camp lets students share diversity

With a Puerto Rican father and a Caucasian mother, Samantha Lopez said she always has had trouble identifying herself with a particular racial group.

"I grew up with Puerto Ricans in childhood, but they pushed me away because I did not look like them," she said.

"So I was raised with Caucasians."

But when Lopez had to pick a racial group to identify with at a multicultural retreat at Touch of Nature last weekend, she sat with the Hispanic group.

"I don't know why I did that. I guess it was just because I could," she said.

"There were a lot of bicultural people here that didn't fit into one spot."

For the past six years, SIUC has had the multicultural retreat, hoping to get students to share in the diverse cultures of its campus, organizers said.

But as the years have passed, Dr. Roy Joy, co-founder of the retreat and a counseling psychologist at the Counseling Center, said students have become more culturally aware.

"One difference over the years is that the students are more aware and more involved with people of different races," he said.

"People come here and say, 'I already have friends from other race groups.'"

"Now they come here and learn about themselves."

The retreat gathers four groups of 10 SIUC students and breaks them up into Hispanic, African-American, European-American and Asian-American groups.

The students participate in exercises and talk about different racial perceptions and learn a little more about themselves.

Vivika Vergara, a sophomore in radio/television from Arlington Heights, said it is important for people to learn about their own culture so they can talk to others about it.

"If you know about yourself, you can share with other cultures and get your ideas across," she said.

"You can teach people about yourself, and that will make it easier for you to learn about them."

Dollean York-Anderson, a counselor with the Counseling Center, said she is glad more students are identifying themselves in a broader racial demographic way.

"We now have students checking boxes of three different races (on applications)," she said. "They are even more multicultural than biracial. I think it's a good change."

"Categories will not change until people start to change."

Even though students are becoming more culturally diverse, some people still need discussions and programs like the retreat to become educated, Nita Tiwari, a graduate student in counseling psychology from Anaheim Hills, Calif., said.

"It's a continued struggle for different groups to see who they are," she said.

"To say that everyone gets along, we have a long way to that."

People have to make steps towards that direction.

"That's why we have a retreat like this — to teach each other about different cultures and increase awareness."

Vergara agreed with Tiwari and said the University should continue to keep cultural programs.

"This should be a given at a university like this," she said. "You don't just learn academically but socially, and universities need to address that."

Provost candidate series begins today in museum

A series of one-hour meetings to allow students, faculty and staff to meet and evaluate candidates for vice chancellor of academic affairs and provost will begin today and will last through the week.

The meetings, which are open to everyone, will allow individuals to listen to a candidate's vision statement and ask questions.

Based on this, attendees can turn in written assessments to the chancellor, who ultimately will choose the Provost based on the input and interviews.

Each candidate will have two meetings. All meetings will take place at the Museum Auditorium.

At 9:30 today, there will be a meeting with John S. Jackson III, the dean of the College of Liberal Arts. At 3:30 today, there will be the meeting for Thomas L. Keon, the dean of College of Business.

On Wednesday, there will be a meeting with Margaret E. Winters, the associate vice chancellor for Academic Affairs, at 9:30 and a meeting with Jackson at 3:30.

At 9:30 a.m. Thursday, there will be a meeting with Donald R. Tindall, an SIUC professor of plant biology. Winters will speak at 3:30 p.m.

Friday, there will be a meeting with Keon at 9:30 a.m. and with Tindall at 3:30 p.m.

Education group gathers books for children

By La'Keisha R. Gray
Daily Egyptian Reporter

An SIUC health education honorary society has taken the opportunity to serve the community by making a donation that will help children learn the importance of reading, a student says.

Susan Hill, a graduate student in health education from Oregon and the chairwoman of service for Eta Sigma Gamma, said one of the group's goals is to make sure everybody is able to understand health literature. But she said that goal has an obstacle because there are a lot of people who cannot read at all.

Hill said literacy starts with children learning the importance of reading.

Hill said Eta Sigma Gamma donated 59 children's books to the "Book in Every Home" book drive Monday. The book drive spans all five SIU campuses, and the proceeds go to the 17 Headstart programs in this region affiliated with SIU.

"With books in homes, children will read, and their parents will read to them," Hill said. "Literacy is higher when homes have books."

The book drive was started last year by Beverly Sanders, the wife of SIU President Ted Sanders. She said she started the drive because she wanted the students to take books home.

Headstart programs are funded by the government, and the books given to the program cannot be taken from the schools.

Sanders said she cannot believe the success of the book drive, and she is both grateful and overwhelmed by how many books have been collected.

Although last year's goal was 2,000 children's books, Sanders said there were 4,000 books donated. This year's goal is 2,500 children's books.

"The outpouring is wonderful, and people have been so generous," Sanders said.

Sanders said each student will be presented a book that will have the child's name written on the inside and will state "Presented to (child's name) for your future and ours, from your SIU family" to take home.

Any extra books will be used for lending libraries at each school. Sanders said this will teach the children how to borrow and take care of books.

"This excites them because it adds a personal touch by putting their names in the book," Sanders said.

and the president of Eta Sigma Gamma, said the group tries to accomplish three goals involving research, teaching and service.

By donating 59 books, they have accomplished one of those goals.

"This was a good service project that allowed us to help both the University and the community," Koontz said.

Books still are being collected for the book drive. Bins for the books are at various places on campus, including Morris Library.

Board OKs Student Center food court

By Dylan Fenley
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A plan to build a mall-style food court in the Student Center is moving ahead after the SIU Board of Trustees approved the $2.4 million project Thursday.

The University called for bids on the same project last year, but only two firms submitted bids, and University Officials decided not to accept either of them, Lawrence Juhlin, associate vice chancellor of Student Affairs, said.

Since that time, Juhlin said the University has enlisted two consulting firms to design a new request for proposals and has increased the project's budget by $800,000.

The SIU Board of Trustees unanimously approved a renewal of the project and raised the estimated cost from $1.6 million to $2.4 million at their monthly meeting in Edwardsville Thursday.

"We're trying to provide a wide variety of foods — a series of little places around the area of the food court," Juhlin said.

Juhlin said most of the restaurants in the Student Center are contracted by a single food service vendor that also is responsible for food services at SIU Arena, McAndrew Stadium, Touch of Nature and Rainbow's End Child Development Center.

The current food service contract with Marriott Vending expires May 31, 1997. The University has been advertising since October for a new vendor to pay for a majority of the cost of the food court construction, Juhlin said.

Juhlin said the only restaurant in the Student Center not under contract with Marriott is McDonald's, which paid for the remodeling of its own store in 1990 when it moved in.

Kevin Salvi, a freshman in physiology from Belleville, said more brand-name restaurants in the Student Center would provide needed selection.

"It's a good idea," Salvi said. "We need more selection than just McDonald's and places that are open every day and weekends when the others aren't open."

Juhlin said when considering the contract bids, which are due by Dec. 5, the University will consider what services a vendor will provide as well as what the vendor will pay the Student Center in terms of rent.

"We want to get several more brand-name restaurants," he said. "We got McDonald's six or seven years ago, and it turned out to be a very good idea."

Greg Tatham, Student Center director, could not be reached for comment at press time.

USG should make stipends function like tuition waivers

IT IS EASY TO CRITICIZE ANY LEGISLATIVE body when it votes to give itself a raise — but it is not always justified. Such is the case with the Undergraduate Student Government's upcoming vote on pay increases for a few of its members.

This Wednesday, USG will decide if the president, vice president and chief-of-staff deserve $300 raises. Such a raise would bump the president's pre-semester stipend to $1,800 while the vice president and chief-of-staff would make $1,600. USG members also have proposed increasing the executive assistant's stipend from $200 to $800.

USG MEMBERS SAY THE OFFICERS' STIPENDS are designed to pay for tuition and fees — like a tuition waiver.

Fair enough. Holding the positions in USG takes time, research, patience and more time. Holding a job in addition to these positions is expecting a bit too much from USG officials.

BUT THERE IS A BETTER SOLUTION THAN periodically passing these stipend increases: a resolution that specifies the stipends for the president, vice president and chief-of-staff to exactly cover their tuition and fees. Under such a resolution, officers and those considering running for one of the positions would know what their financial compensation would cover far in advance. It also would ensure that student fee money would be used in a fair manner.

USG members say the stipends are supposed to function like a tuition waiver. They are right. That is why a resolution making the stipends equal to the cost of tuition and fees should be passed.

Whether the executive assistant stipend should be quadrupled is another question.

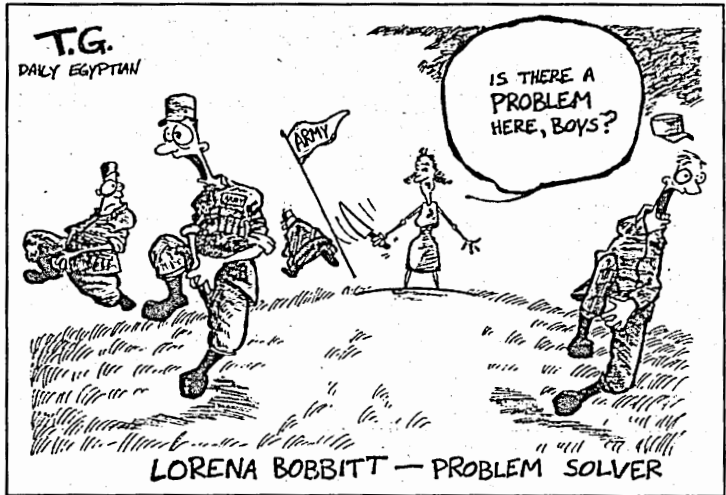

SUPPORTERS OF THE INCREASE SAY THAT THE woman currently holding the position has revamped the position to include a lot more work. Unlike the other increases that take effect next fall, this increase would be retroactive to this semester.

The one senator against the other raises has said the current executive assistant's unprecedented efforts in the position may warrant the raise. One USG member also has said the raise is needed not only because the office now does more work, but because it was previously underpaid.

FIGURING THAT THIS SEMESTER'S EXECUTIVE assistant worked about 15 hours a week translates into an hourly wage of about 83 cents per hour. Quadrupling that comes out to $3.33 per hour — still more than $1 under the minimum wage.

That's not a bad deal for students or the executive assistant. The wage may seem low, but the person holding the position is gaining experience and knowledge in return for his or her low pay.

IT SHOULD BE NOTED THAT NOT ALL Universities even pay their student government officers. This system would exclude too many quality candidates who would choose not to run for office because they could not afford to hold an officer's position. Refusing reasonable financial compensation would result in having a student government that only the financially secure could be a part of. That would not be representative of the student body.

L ETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Every city has tow problems

Mr. Hicks is absolutely wrong in condemning Carbondale for the towing industry. "Relocations," the towing of illegally parked cars, occurs in every city large enough to support a towing company.

Towing is especially successful in college towns such as Carbondale, Charleston, Bloomington-Normal and Champaign-Urbana.

Every city has a "bad apple" towing company. Carbondale itself is guilty of letting a certain company go too far.

In any industry in which a company is given a monopoly, there will be unscrupulous behavior.

The city issues licenses without which a towing company cannot legally operate. If a towing company is abusing its authority, Carbondale needs to correct the problem.

I find it incredible that Mr. Hicks watched an unmarked tow truck take a car with a tow driver who would not identify his company.

My first instinct would be to get the license number of the truck and call the police. Mr. Hicks did the equivalent of watching a moving company clean out the neighbor's house even when you know they are not moving. Hello? If you see a situation like that, call the police!

If a towing company takes advantage of you, it is because you do not know your rights. Ignorance is not bliss. If we all parked legally and knew our rights, the towing company would not be in a position of power.

As much as certain people hate towing companies, these are the same people who are eternally grateful when the tow truck driver winches their car out of a snowy ditch or tows them off the interstate when they break down.

It would have been much cheaper and less of a hassle for the guy who shot the tow truck driver to just let the driver do his job.

Now he is "on the hook" for shooting the driver, not to mention a police officer. He also will be paying for the damage to the wrecker.

The fact is, tow truck drivers make a living off of our stupidity. They are not going to quit because someone has threatened violence.

They will just pass on the cost of getting shot at to the next person who gets towed.

Halloween policy unfair to some

I am sick of all of the attention the media gives to the stupidity that goes on here in Carbondale. For weeks, local television news stations and newspapers have given their front page to the riots on the Strip.

I cannot believe that the University has to let students go home so some fools can legally destroy a whole community. I read in a past article that the city and the University have been dealing with this problem for the past 10 years. Ten years is a long time to let this problem go unsolved.

I was wondering if the city and University were willing to let other racial groups have a weekend to let off steam. I think that it is unfair that I have to pay Amtrak $80 for a round trip ticket to allow some alcoholics to dismember a town that is already in a bad condition.

People, look around. Carbondale is not a place to tear up, but instead, build up. If you have not noticed, the scenery is not close to what a real college should be offering to students who pay large amounts of money to.

I do believe that a college education is the biggest investment a young person can make, and I really do not see where my money is going.

I would also like to address the young man who decided to write to the Daily Egyptian on Nov. 18. Mr. Gooding, your apology is pathetic. The fact that you are young is no excuse for your actions. You state that you were looking for a "good time" and that "mistakes will happen."

But when you decided to pick up a train gate, what was going on in your mind? Destroying public property — wow, what fun!

I am sorry, but you are crazy if you think making a public apology is the way to gain empathy for your situation.

I think Carbondale and the University should damage some of your property, embarrass you throughout the state of Illinois and make you and your gang of friends do all the necessary upkeep for the University.

Happy people wear fuzzy hats

I never realized how uncool I was until I read James Lyon's two cents worth in the Nov. 13 issue of the Daily Egyptian.

Yes, I am one of those guys who wears big, baggy jeans. Now that it has been pointed out to me that I look ridiculous, my happiness has diminished to utter despair. I think I will go out and buy all black clothes so I can be accepted by Mr. Lyon and everyone else who is laughing as I walk across campus.

Seriously, why is wearing black or "grunge" clothing — whatever that is — an acceptable statement, but baggy jeans and skateboards are not? Not everyone's lives are full of depression and anguish. Some of us are relatively happy. Thank God.

I am sorry that your inner mood requires you to wear all black, but that is your choice. Just like it is everyone else's choice to dress however they choose. Maybe your inner mood has blinded you. Wearing a jester hat is funny. That is the point. When I see someone wearing one, I see somebody who is happy. I do not believe that that says "nothing."

I dress the way I do because it is comfortable and reflects my

"I dress the way I do because it is comfortable and reflects my lifestyle. I am happy and carefree."

lifestyle. I am carefree and happy. It also reflects the style of music I listen to and play. I am sorry you think this is not a worthwhile statement. Would it be better for me to wear nice fitting jeans and tucked-in flannels? While there is nothing wrong with that, it is not for me.

You say people laugh at us. I have never noticed. Maybe it is because I do not really care. Actually though, I think it is because there are not that many people laughing. People have better things to do. Why do you care, or even notice, when people do not comb their hair? It has no effect on your life. Maybe it is more important for these people to get that extra minute of sleep before they go to their morning classes. I do not comb my hair. I wake up and throw on a hat.

It is all a personal choice. We are in college. Being educated people, I thought we were supposed to be a little more open minded. Personally, I just think you are pretty self-righteous. You rip on anything that is not like yourself to boost your apparently shredded ego. Grow up. I really think you are in the minority here. This campus is so diverse. People are pretty accepting.

In closing, I would just like to tell Mr. Lyon to smile more and accept life for what it is. If you feel you need to wear black, fine. Just realize we all are not the same. Some of us like living. Sure, we have bad times, but there are people who are much worse off. So the next time you see one of those "ridiculous" skaters with baggy jeans, instead of laughing, say hi. It is a nice way to make friends and get out of that funk you call life. Who knows, your inner mood may even change. Peace.

Fuzzy hats, baggy pants not laughable

I, in fact, am also not an expert on fashion in America, Mr. Lyon, but people of the '90s dress in very different ways from each other.

You say in your article that people with fuzzy hats and baggy pants are laughed at. By who, may I ask? Yes, I do wear fuzzy hats, but not baggy pants. The reason I wear the hat — and pay attention here — is because I, note the word I, like it. I do not care what others think. And a lot of them do not, in fact, laugh like you do.

Why don't they laugh? Because they are not insecure like you apparently are. They have their own personalities and dress the way they want and respect how others do. These people do not act like they are in kindergarten, and they do not start giggling like fools. I am surprised that you laugh at these people just for their differences. Are you also a racist or sexist? I don't know, but I figure there are better issues to complain about other than how people dress. I suggest you grow up and look past the clothes and write about issues instead of whining about fuzzy hats and baggy pants.

Oh yeah, I do not laugh at people that dress like you do, who wear dark, plain shirts and blue jeans, just because you lack creativity and imagination.

Goodbye and good luck with your career, Mr. Lyon.

Would Dr. King be proud?

-by James Lyon

Two cents on a Tuesday: who would have thought it? Actually, we are trying to get as many letters out before Thanksgiving. And as you can see, my fan mail is growing. I love how the dislike of fuzzy hats is the equivalent of being a sexist and/or racist.

So I thought I might as well take my lack of creativity and self-righteous attitude and turn this into the Jim Lyon page for the day with a serious issue. So here we go.

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. had a dream. He envisioned a world where everyone was equal and all people, regardless of color, could live together in peace. I wonder what he would say if he could read this?

Last week, a friend of mine was walking through the Student Center when she stopped and began to talk to one of her classmates. My friend is a white woman, and her classmate just happened to be a black man. As they were standing there, engaging in conversation, they were approached by a black woman. And as this woman walked by, she turned to the man and uttered the word "sell-out."

When my friend told me this, I was genuinely intrigued because a few weeks earlier in one of my classes there was a white woman talking to a black man. I heard the woman behind me refer to this guy as a sell-out as well. I have also heard people refer to the lead singer of 'Hootie and the Blowfish' as a sell-out. This is apparently because of how he happens to be a black singer and the rest of the band is white. Apparently, any black person who tries to make a better life for themselves without being a rap singer is a sell-out.

"Apparently, any black person who tries to make a better life for themselves without being a rap singer is a sell-out."

But back to the problem on campus. I wonder if the black women thought these black men were having relationships with these white women. I wonder if the term sell-out was aimed at the black men for engaging in a relationship with a people outside of their race? While that should not be a problem, many people still view it as wrong. But both incidents in question dealt with people talking to one another, and that brings up a much scarier issue. Have we all gotten to the point where simply associating with a person of another race is wrong? I am starting to look that way. I better start looking for the black and white water fountains.

I sit here in my little office typing out these stupid columns just for fun, complaining about stupid things. I do it so people might laugh. But now I hear people talking about members of their race selling them out. People, what are we doing to one another?

I wonder if Dr. King had a dream that people one day would refer to members of their own race as sell-outs? I wonder if he envisioned the day when everyone, all colors, would forget the lessons he tried so hard to teach? But, at least his determination and hard work were not a total failure. At least everyone gets to stay home from work on his birthday. I am sure Dr. King would be proud.

Love Feast feeds underprivileged

By Mikal J. Harris
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The children of the Carbondale community were first in line for meals at Sigma Gamma Rho's "Love Feast" because they are a top priority for the sorority's annual dinner, a sorority member said.

"Some families just don't have the food," Robin Davis, a senior in early childhood education from Chicago, said.

"Sometimes parents can find the food or they can go out and get jobs, but it's the kids who are the ones suffering. At least tonight the food was here."

Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority had its fifth annual "Love Feast" Friday at the Eurma Hayes Center, 441 E. Willow St. The sorority served hot plates of traditional holiday fare and desserts to the Carbondale community.

Davis said events like Sigma Gamma Rho's "Love Feast" are necessary for other members of the SIUC community to help underprivileged Carbondale families.

"It's really important to have events like this for the community," she said. "If we don't reach out and help, then nobody will probably take the initiative to do it."

The dinner is the sorority's biggest project of the fall semester, Sigma Gamma Rho President Tycee Thomas said.

Thomas, a senior in psychology from Chicago, said food prepared for the event included turkey, ham, about 200 chicken wings and a host of vegetables and side offerings, most of which were donated by fellow National Pan-Hellenic fraternities and sororities.

Thomas said the name of the dinner was chosen to represent what the sorority hoped to demonstrate to the Carbondale community.

"Basically, we needed a name to fit exactly what it was," she said. "'Feast' represents the food, and 'love' is the love we have for the kids and the community."

Davis and Thomas said the event is planned during the week of the sorority's Founder's Day, Nov. 12, as a homage to the founding members of the service sorority. The founding members left the sorority the motto of "Greater Service, Greater Progress."

Davis said approximately 100 people enjoyed the dinner.

"I'm happy because I think everyone enjoyed themselves," she said. "They came up for seconds and desserts, and I think it went very smoothly. It was a nice occasion."

Sigma Gamma Rho members prepared food for the event during a two-day period. Some of the children who munched on the plates of food said they enjoyed the dinner and cited dishes such as the chicken, dressing and cake as their favorites.

Sorority members brought plates of food out from the kitchen to some of the community members, including 1971 SIUC alumnus and Carbondale resident Thomas Bell.

Bell said Friday's "Love Feast" was the second he had attended.

"The food was fantastic, and the young ladies serving really seemed to enjoy themselves," he said.

However, Bell said there was one aspect of the event that was even better than the food.

"It was good to see people from the University come into the community and get involved," he said. "I think that aspect of this event is better."

Vegans buck turkey trend

The Hartford Courant

Sara Kovarovic won't be spending Thanksgiving with her family this year. The prospect of gorging on a traditional turkey dinner is too hard to swallow.

"I don't believe in eating meat, so it's really offensive for me to be sitting at the table and having people celebrating by eating this bird," says Kovarovic, who is 23 and lives in Ashford, Conn.

Instead of a roasted turkey, Kovarovic and her vegan friends will savor a feast of squash, rice and other vegetables. "Good stuff," she says.

Being a vegetarian in a carnivorous world is never easy. But on Thanksgiving, many of those who shun meat are served extra helpings of tension and stress.

"There's an awful lot of symbolism that goes into food, and if you're not part of the tribe, so to speak ... then there's a problem," says Jim Pittman, owner of Better Ways Marketplace, a health-food store in Storrs, Conn. "There's history there, and we know that previous generations have done the same thing. It's such a ritual, and rituals are necessary in people's lives."

The familiar menu was prescribed by the Pilgrims more than three centuries ago. And in most households, the turkey remains the centerpiece of the holiday tradition, from the ceremonial carving to the pulling of the wishbone. Even the dinner-time conversation revolves around the bird.

"It's the part everybody's talking about: 'How big is the turkey? How long did it take to bake the turkey? What time did you get up?'" says Sally Whipple, co-founder of the Hartford Vegetarian Society.

Kovarovic, like many vegetarians, has resolved the problem by dodging dinner with meat-eating relatives. Others simply pile their plates high with mountains of mashed potatoes and various meatless side dishes.

to fraudulently get applications through," Wilson said. "Once that happens and we realize it is fraudulent, we have our investigators find out who it is."

The Daily Egyptian reported in January that 22 cases of credit-card fraud on campus were reported to police in 1995.

In the same article, SIUC Police Det. Greg Sanders said that roughly 65 percent of his caseload at that time involved either forgeries or credit-card fraud.

There are two ways people can find out if someone is using their identity for credit-card fraud, Wilson said. The best way is to contact a credit reporting agency periodically to check their credit rating, he said. If there are items on a person's report that he or she did not charge, they can be disputed.

The other way people learn of credit-card fraud is by applying for a loan and being denied because of bad credit, Wilson said.

If an individual does not keep tabs on his or her credit reports, Wilson said the fraud can go on indefinitely.

Men aim to recoup last season's losing record

By Michael DeFord
DE Sports Editor

James Watts' inaugural season at SIUC was far from positive, and the sophomore center does not want to see the basketball Salukis repeat it.

Last season's 11-18 struggle was something new for Watts, who says he hopes the Dawgs will fare better this year than they did last season.

"I've never really been on a losing team," Watts said. "Last year was my first year of ever losing that bad, and I don't want to repeat last year again."

Watts is one of eight returning lettermen on this season's roster who will try to pick up the pieces left over from last season. The team will try to put the Salukis back on top of the Missouri Valley Conference after a 4-14 finish in the league last season.

SIUC is ranked seventh in this year's conference preseason poll. But this year's poll doesn't mean all that much considering the fact that all 10 teams in the league, instead of the traditional eight, automatically will make the trip to the Kiel Center in St. Louis regardless of league records.

Yet a respectable finish in the Valley is an all-together different story for the Salukis.

SIUC Coach Rich Herrin, now in his 12th year at SIUC, said the talent needed to get the job done exists, but youth coupled with experience may present some obstacles.

"It could be another difficult season for us," Herrin said. "Particularly during the early weeks of the season until our returning veterans get acquainted with the newcomers."

Eight sophomores, three juniors and a lone senior comprise Herrin's roster this season.

Leading the way for the Salukis this season will be the backcourt, led by returning guards Shane Hawkins and Troy Hudson.

Both Hudson and Hawkins combined to averaged 33.7 points per game last season.

Yet Herrin said the duo cannot go it alone.

"It's a given that Hawkins and Hudson can score," Herrin said. "They're both outstanding shooters, but we definitely need to improve our game percentages over a year ago."

In an effort to do just that, Herrin inked junior college transfers Rashad Tucker and Chris Wright.

Tucker, a 6-foot-7-inch guard, averaged 15.9 points per game at Southeastern Community College last season. Wright, a 6-foot-6-inch forward, averaged 15 points and nine rebounds per game for Kaskaskia Junior College.

Both Wright and Tucker combined for 59 points during the Salukis' two preseason wins against Athletes In Action Nov. 5 and SAK-Moscow Nov. 8.

"People are kind of underestimating us and do not think we're any good," he said. "I think we are going to prove people wrong."

Tucker got off to a good start in SIUC's two preseason games against Athletes In Action and SAK-Moscow. He scored 18 points against AIA and poured in 22 against SAK, while combining for 14 rebounds.

Yet rebounds is one area that has skeptics concerned. Last season, the Salukis ranked 9th in the conference in rebounding. And once again, Herrin is concerned when it comes to boards.

But the added strength from the junior college level and a more physically balanced team should provide for a sounder rebounding game.

Wright and 6-foot-7-inch forward Jamie Veach, SIUC's lone senior who also lettered at SIUC in 1994 before heading to Rend Lake College, should provide the Salukis with some extra punch inside.

"The physical play is there," Herrin said. "We are physical and tougher. Every player on our team has played at least community college basketball, and that does make it easier."

The Salukis got their first taste of physical action against a rough SAK-Moscow club and held their own, out-rebounding SAK 47-42.

"I don't know if we are physical enough," Herrin said. "But we are going to get better."

With such a tough schedule, Watts hopes the pieces simply fall into place.

"We have to step up to the challenge," Watts said. "We've got the competition, we've just got to prove

Women hope to surpass unlucky No. 19

By Donna Colter
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The number 19 does not sit well with SIUC women's basketball Coach Cindy Scott.

Three times in the past six years, and four times in Scott's career, the Salukis have finished the season winning 19 games — one win short of a record that may have helped ensure them an at-large bid to the NCAA tournament.

The winner of the Missouri Valley Conference tournament automatically advances to the NCAA tournament, but in the four years that the Salukis have won 19 games, they have not won the MVC crown.

Scott said good recruiting this year and the return of some key players to the squad should enable the Salukis to exceed the 20-game mark.

"We are tough enough, and 20 is the magic number," she said. "We have to get to No. 20 and beyond."

The Salukis had some trouble in the early going last season, and Scott said a slow start this season could affect the team's amount of post-season play.

"We feel we have to be good right off," she said. "Historically, we have gotten better as the season goes along. But it could hurt us for an at-large bid to the NCAA tournament."

A key to the Salukis getting over a rough start this season could be the amount of depth the team has, Scott said.

The Salukis' main returnee is senior guard and co-captain F'asia McClendon. McClendon was first-team All MVC in 1995 and MVC defensive player of the year in 1994 and 1995.

McClendon, who is 5-feet-5-inches tall, will be commanding the point guard position this season. After leading the MVC in steals per game for the past two seasons, McClendon is expected to be a candidate for the MVC player of the year this season.

With such a young team, McClendon said she will assume a new role on the court.

"I will be the team leader on the floor," she said. "So it is important to let the young players know I have confidence in them. The freshmen are coming along well, but I have to stay patient with them and try to help them along."

Another key returnee to the Salukis is junior co-captain Beth Hasheider from Okawville. Hasheider played on a torn anterior cruciate ligament her senior season at Okawville High School, but Scott said she is back to form.

"I think just now she is beginning to play like the real Beth Hasheider," Scott said. "She was tentative on the knee her freshman year and got stronger last year, but she is really looking good this year."

With more freshmen than seniors, the team's inexperience has been in question. But Scott said it will not have much of an effect on the team's success.

"We have 13 players who are very young, so we will depend on the freshmen this season," she said. "We are every bit as good as we were last year, but our opponents don't understand that."

A new face to the team this season is highly touted freshman center Melaniece Bardley, whom SIUC fought down to the wire to get, Scott said.

Bardley, who chose SIUC over the University of Marquette, comes to SIUC from West Side High School in Gary, Ind., which is also McClendon's home.

In high school, Bardley played only three years of organized basketball but led her team her senior season as MVP. She is expected to make a big impact on the SIUC basketball program.

"Melaniece had the potential to be of the best to ever play at SIUC," Scott said.

This season, Bardley said she has a lot she would like to accomplish and a goal that could be within her reach.

"I want to play good defense and have a good scoring average for the season," she said. "My goal is to be newcomer of the year in the conference."

SIUC finished second in the 1996 MVC standings behind six-time defending champion Southwest Missouri State University, but Scott said there is no predicting the finish this year.

"I would think we would contend for the conference during the regular season," she said. "But I am not sure who I would pick if I had to."

Southwest will start the season without all-conference member and newcomer of the year Roshonda Reed, who is out with a torn ligament in her knee.

Illinois State University is expected to be a force in the Valley this season, after making a post-season trip to the National Invitational Tournament last season.

Scott said she believes the Salukis are a hot product this year, and are worth watching.

"We have a great product to sell, and the sport is viable entertainment," she said. "We are excited about this year, and we want to get a conference championship."

The women's regular season kicks off Nov. 23 when SIUC takes on Murray State University at SIU Arena. Game time is 7:05 p.m.

Junior co-captain Beth Hasheider attempts to block a pass during SIUC's 89-70 exhibition victory against the St. Louis Express Nov. 14.

Good things come in small package

By Kevin DeFries
 Daily Egyptian Reporter

They are only 5 feet 5 inches tall, but as co-captains of the Saluki women's basketball team, the two-guard tandem of Kasia McClendon and Beth Hasheider stand tall on the court. McClendon, a senior in recreation from Gary, Ind., and Hasheider, a junior in management from Okawville, are the shortest members of the Salukis — a team which boasts nine women who are at least 6 feet tall.

But Saluki Head Coach Cindy Scott does not consider the tandem vertically challenged.

"Hasheider is little, and McClendon is little," Scott said. "But I'm not afraid to play two small guards."

McClendon has had plenty of basketball accomplishments throughout her career at SIUC.

McClendon has averaged 11.1 points per game throughout her career and is perhaps one of the best defensive players in country, finishing last season ranked 14th in the nation with steals per game.

For her defensive effort, McClendon was named the MVC Defensive Player of the Year twice in her career — so far, also was named to the all-MVC first team.

"She had a tremendous year last year," Scott said. "The best thing about Kasia McClendon is the effort she plays with. McClendon was chosen as the preseason player of the year said she plans to maintain that status and show the freshmen to get the job done on the court."

"I think it would be a let down if I don't do well for the team," McClendon said.

Scott said the team looks up to McClendon for her work ethic on the court.

"We gave the team questionnaires for the media guide, and one of the questions was, 'Who do you admire the most on the team?'" Scott said. "And the only player who received any mention was Kasia."

Scott said McClendon is looked up to by the team because of her hard work and determination.

"It's a thing that runs true through all the kids in our program, that Kasia McClendon is about as hard of working player that you can have as a teammate," Scott said. "She's as hard of a working player that I have ever coached."

Hasheider, who will be playing the one and two guard positions this season, has seen her share of problems in her first two years as a Saluki. She played with a torn anterior cruciate ligament her senior year at Okawville High School, but led her team to a Class A state championship. That injury has haunted her at SIUC as well.

"Last year it bothered me a little bit, and I was tentative," she said. "Physically, I was probably fine. But in my mind, I was always scared to step on someone's foot."

Hasheider has been working on rehabilitating her knee and said the program has worked exceptionally well for her.

"I haven't had any problems with it in over a year," Hasheider said.

McClendon will try to continue her defensive prowess on the court, and Hasheider will put her knee to the test against the Lady Racers of Murray State University in the Salukis season opener Nov. 23 at SIUC Arena.

Herrin philosophy: have fun, enjoy it

By Michael DeFord
DE Sports Editor

Unlike fun, goals never have been a part of Saluki basketball Coach Rich Herrin's coaching philosophy.

In fact, Herrin, who enters his 12th year at SIUC this season, says fun is more his style.

"I've never been a goal setter," Herrin said. "We want to have fun mainly — enjoy it and try to get better. We hope the kids can have some success. And that's the kind of thing you are looking for."

Yet without establishing a framework of goals during his 11 seasons at the helm of Saluki basketball, Herrin has managed to set some career marks at SIUC and within the Missouri Valley Conference.

With a composite record of 198-141, Herrin ranks second among SIUC's all-time coaches. In the Valley, the 63-year-old coach ranks fourth in all-time wins with 97, which puts him among legendary names such as Henry P. Iba, Eddie Hickey and Dr. F.C. Allen. Then there is his most cherished award. In 1990, Herrin was selected as the MVC's Coach of the Year, which he considers perhaps the most prestigious award in his 41 seasons as a coach.

"The Valley is one of the oldest conferences in the country," Herrin said. "It's had some of the all-time greatest coaches. Being selected Coach of the Year in the Valley is one of the nicest honors I've ever received."

But unfortunately, the bad has accompanied the good in Herrin's 11 seasons with the Salukis.

Take last year, for instance, when the Salukis failed to get a berth in the conference tournament after seven consecutive appearances. What disappointed Herrin the most, however, was his seniors missing the opportunity to participate in the tournament.

"I think a player should have the opportunity to participate in the tournament," he said.

This season, Herrin gets his wish as all Valley teams will make the trip to St. Louis for the annual post-season tournament. Like his philosophy in previous seasons, winning the tournament is not a goal of Herrin's this season, but having fun is.

"We just want to have fun, enjoy the season and make young men better people."

Scott attempts 20/20 record

By Donna Colter
Daily Egyptian Reporter

In 1983, Scott took her squad to the women's National Invitational Tournament, the school's first post season appearance since 1970. The season marked what would be her first of five consecutive 20-win seasons.

SIUC women's basketball Coach Cindy Scott is in her 20th year at the helm of Saluki basketball, and this season she will try for her 20th consecutive winning season.

The love of the basketball program at SIUC is what Scott said has kept her here for 20 years.

"This university and the basketball program have been very good to me," she said. "There are several other prime-time universities that have tried to recruit me a number of years ago. No one tries now because it is quite known in our profession that I'm not coaching anywhere else but SIU."

In the previous 19 winning seasons at SIUC, Scott and her teams have compiled a 364-183 record. The record places her at No. 31 on the list of winningest coaches in NCAA Division I play.

Scott began her career SIUC in 1977, and in her second year as a coach, she took her team to the Illinois AIAW State Tournament and finished with a 20-6 season.

Scott also was the winningest coach in the existence of the Gateway Conference, posting a 149-35 record. She was named Gateway Conference Coach of the Year in 1986 and 1987. Her teams combined for a 38-0 conference mark, the first and last team in the history of the conference to go unbeaten in conference play.

Scott has seen seven of her players inducted into the Saluki Hall of Fame, as well as being inducted in 1994 for her successes as a coach of Saluki basketball.

While at SIUC, Scott's teams have won three Missouri Valley Conference championships, appeared at the NCAA tournament four times since 1986 and posted eight 20-win seasons.

The Salukis had to replace five seniors from last year's 18-10 squad, which was runner-up in the MVC behind Southwest Missouri State University. But Scott said this will not be any less successful than any other year for SIUC.

"The future of this program is very bright," she said. "We don't have down years where we rebuild here at SIUC."

This season, Scott hopes to win the MVC for the fourth time in her career and appear in the NCAA tournament, while posting a 20-plus win season, she said.

"The work ethic of this team is outstanding," she said. "This year we just want to win. Anything less than the MVC, and we won't be happy."

"The effort, intensity and togetherness is the trademark of this team."

fictitious driver's license," Ritter said. "A fictitious driver's license is one that's based on fictitious information. That is a Class A misdemeanor."

Ritter said the same charge applies to state identification cards.

She said Class A misdemeanors are punishable by up to a year in jail and a fine of $1,000, with a mandatory $500 minimum fine.

Ritter said if an individual is in possession of more than one fictitious ID, the charge is increased from a misdemeanor to a felony.

"Young people are taking a huge risk when they carry these false documents around," Ritter said. "And if they are caught, the penalties are severe."

In Carbondale, a city ordinance prohibits the use of false IDs. Carbondale Police can arrest a person who is caught using a fake ID or misrepresenting his/her identity, Sharon Hammer, Carbondale city attorney, said.

Numbers of people who have been arrested for using false IDs were not available at press time Monday.

Becky said she is not worried that she will be caught.

"The only way that I would have been caught was if I was caught in the process of getting (the card)," she said.

While state-issued identification cards are harder to detect than those manufactured by outside sources, some cards are recovered, Ritter said.

She said the state uses several techniques to spot fraudulent IDs, including computer programs that sort out suspicious driver's licenses and training programs to help police and liquor-industry workers spot fake IDs.

Anyone caught with a false or fraudulent driver's license or identification card can lose his or her driving privileges for a year, even if he or she is not convicted, Ritter said, and a police report is sufficient grounds for suspension of a driver's license.

"Anyone in possession of a fictitious driver's license should probably immediately quit using it and seek the advice of a lawyer," she said. "Because if somebody used fictitious information to obtain a driver's license, the record of that transaction remains permanently on file in our office. That transaction generates a driver's record, which does not go away until the driver's license is surrendered."

tious ID, Ritter said her sister also is subject to a one-year suspension of her driver's license.

But Becky said she will continue to use her state ID until Carbondale begins offering non-alcoholic ways for her to maintain her social life.

"A lot of my friends are older and could get in (to the bars), and honestly, there's nothing to do in Carbondale unless you can get into the bars," she said. "Until they can find alternative forms of entertainment, I'm going to be going to the bars."

Amber Boisen, a student worker in the administrative office responsible for issuing SIUC identification cards, said it is difficult to obtain a fake state ID.

New students who come in to get an identification card must present two pieces of information: a copy of their schedule and a photo ID, Boisen said.

The only way students can get an SIUC identification card without showing a photo ID is if they come in with their parents, Boisen said.

If a student loses his or her wallet and needs a new ID, Boisen said the student can go to campus security to get a copy of his or her security card, which includes a photograph and a form containing the student's basic information.

Students who had cards made recently do not need to go through this process because all information, including the student's photograph, is logged into a computer in the ID office and is saved so the information can be retrieved on the spot, Boisen said.

Students would gain little by having a fake SIUC identification card even if they could get one, Boisen said, because the only information on the card is the student's name, Social Security number, photo, signature and status as a graduate or undergraduate.

"People come in and go, 'Can I put a different age on [my ID]?' and I'm just like, 'Yeah, right, that's not even on it,'" she said. "The only difference between undergrad and graduate is you get more privileges at the library (with a graduate ID)."

Six runners make MVC Academic Team

The Saluki men's and women's cross country teams placed three members each on the Men's and Women's Academic All-Missouri Valley Conference Cross Country Team. Senior Stelios Mameros, a food and nutrition major from Cyprus, topped the men's squad in being named to the squad for the third consecutive year; while sophomore twins Jeremy and Joseph Parks, pre-elementary majors from Eldorado, were first-time honorees.

"No one puts in more training than the mileage these men do," Saluki Men's Coach Bill Cornell said. "I think it shows other athletes that they can be successful in academics and athletics as long as you put those priorities in order."

Senior Kim Koerner, a physiology major from Murrayville, led the Salukis in being named to the squad for the second year; juniors Kelly French, a health care management major from Barrie, Ontario, and Raina Larsen, a physical education major from Waterloo, were first-time honorees.

Italian middleweight declared dead

Italian boxer Fabrizio Di Chiara died Monday, two days after collapsing in the ring during a fight against middleweight champion Vincenzo Imparato in Pisa, Italy. Di Chiara, reportedly the seventh Italian boxer to die from injuries sustained in the ring in 50 years, lapsed into a deep coma Saturday night after a technical knockout in the final round of his bout with Imparato. Doctors said the 25-year-old had been brain dead since Sunday, and an Italian prosecutor ordered an investigation into Di Chiara's death.

Falcons' Odomes sidelined indefinitely

Atlanta Falcons' cornerback Nate Odomes was released from a suburban Atlanta hospital Monday afternoon after receiving minor injuries in a car accident earlier that morning. Odomes suffered a concussion and multiple contusions and abrasions, but X-rays and a CAT scan revealed no further damage. Odomes, who was a mainstay on the Buffalo Bills' squads of the early 1990s, will be sidelined indefinitely.

Notre Dame's Holtz to resign today

WNDU-TV in South Bend, Ind., has reported that University of Notre Dame Head Football Coach Lou Holtz will announce his resignation at a press conference at noon today. The station reported that Holtz, who has a lifetime record of 99-29-2 and is just seven victories shy of breaking legendary Notre Dame Coach Knute Rockne's school record for career wins, will step down following this season. The station also reported that Holtz, who has said he would rather not break Rockne's record, possibly may be replaced by Northwestern University Head Coach Gary Barnett.

Belle close to signing with White Sox

The Chicago White Sox reportedly are close to signing free-agent slugger Albert Belle to the highest salary in baseball history. A Chicago radio station reported that the deal is worth $50 million for five years. Belle, who has spent his infamous major league career in Cleveland, will turn down offers from the Indians and Florida Marlins to take the White Sox' offer, the station reported.

The Pittsburgh Penguins traded holdout forward Bryan Smolinski to the New York Islanders for defenseman Darius Kasparaitis and center Andreas Johansson Monday. Smolinski, who never reported to the Penguins' training camp this season over a contract dispute, has agreed to a one-year deal with the Islanders.

The six-time Most Valuable Player, who won two scoring titles with the Milwaukee Bucks in the early 1970s, retired in 1989 with 38,387 points, eclipsing Chamberlain's career total by 6,968 points to become the NBA's all-time leading scorer.

CROSS COUNTRY

NCAA eludes runners

By Donna Colter
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The SIUC men's cross country team's expectations of making it to the NCAA national meet fell far short Saturday.

The Salukis needed to finish in the top two of their district at the District 5 meet in Peoria to advance to the national meet Monday in Tucson, Ariz. But instead, the team finished in a distant eighth place.

"I'm not very happy," Coach Bill Cornell said. "The team ran like they were tired and like they didn't believe in themselves."

Big 12 conference member Oklahoma State University won the contest and will advance to the nationals.

Senior Stelios Mameros, three-time Missouri Valley Conference champion, finished in 15th place with a time of 31:42 over the 10,000 meter course. The next best finisher was sophomore Joseph Parks in 35th place.

"We wound up with a few minor sicknesses the week before district," Cornell said. "But you can't blame it all on that."

Sophomore Ben Basalay said there was more than one factor affecting the team's eighth place finish.

"The competition was tough. But as a team we had a couple of runners who ran good and a few who were unhappy about their races," Basalay said. "I think the finish was a combination of the competition and not running well."

The team will now be looking toward next year without Mameros, but Cornell said he still is happy to reflect on this season.

"I recognize the fact that we are a young team," he said. "But hopefully they can come back in better condition and improve."

"I am not dissatisfied. I am proud of what they have done, but you always hope for more. Second out of 10 in the MVC isn't bad."

The women's team finished back in the pack at 13th, behind co-champions Iowa State University and the University of Missouri, but had some misfortune to contribute to its placing in the meet.

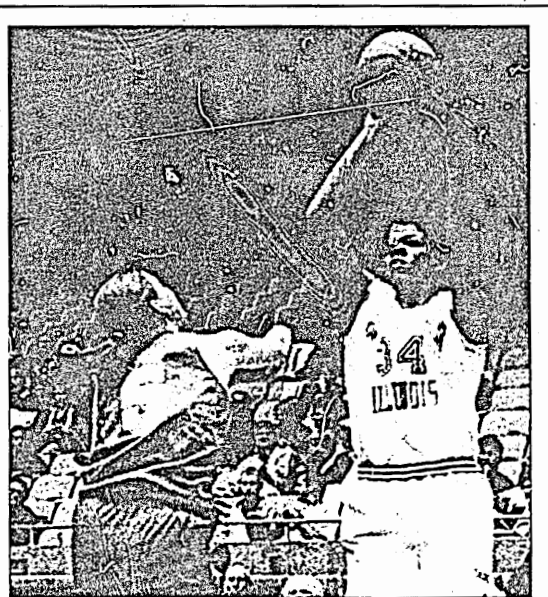

Sophomore Colleen Bouck, the Salukis fifth runner, came down with the flu prior to the race. Consequently, the team had to run with six runners instead of seven.

Coach Don DeNoon said the performance of senior Kim Koerner also may have affected the team's finish.

"I think our finish was reflective of not getting a good performance from Kim," DeNoon said. "Kim, who is a 4.0 student, had some major exams the week before district, and I don't think she ever recovered from her lack of sleep. She just couldn't get feeling good."

Koerner finished in 45th place, but her time was 18:45, well below her best time for the year. Regardless of Koerner's finish, DeNoon said the district standings weren't reflective of the team's overall effort.

"We got a good solid performance from our other girls that was just as good as their performance at MVC," he said. "But I think we went into the season with overall high expectations. At the beginning of the season we seemed to meet those expectations, but we fell flat."

FOOTBALL

Team loses seniors, looks to future as season closes

By Michael DeFord
DE Sports Editor

Under .500 and injured is not exactly how Saluki senior running back Coe Bonner wanted his SIUC football career to end.

Bonner rushed 76 yards in the first half of SIUC's 34-17 season-closing win over Southeast Missouri State University Saturday before being forced to sit out the second half with a fractured shoulder.

The win ended SIUC's five-game skid and concluded the Salukis' season with a 5-6 record.

"A 5-6 record is a disappointment," Bonner said. "We wanted to be on the other side of the ball and end the season at .500, but that is the way the cookie crumbles."

Bonner ended his senior season with 1,234 yards, which is the most a Saluki back has posted since Andre Herrera's 1,588-yard season in 1976.

"My shoulder finally gave out," Bonner said. "It's been like that the whole season, but it finally got me. For a while I wanted to come back in (Saturday). But I went and got a few X-rays and it popped out, then popped back in. And I said, 'I'm done.'"

It has been a long season for Bonner and third-year Saluki Football Coach Shawn Watson, but the season-ending win has made things a little more bearable.

But the win over SEMO served more than to just end the skid; it provided Watson and the entire Saluki squad with a brighter outlook for next season.

In fact, Watson, who ends the season with an 11-22 overall record since taking over in 1994, said he would like nothing more than to see a few more games pass the Salukis' way.

"I love to play, and you never want it to end," Watson said. "You are never glad it's over, and that is the downside of football. You only get 11 chances to go out there."

The win over SEMO finally got rid of the bitter taste Watson has been carrying since the 42-17 loss to Gateway Conference rival Southwest Missouri State University Oct. 5.

That avalanche may have been what triggered the slide, but Watson said he is not reflecting on how things could have been if the Salukis had walked away with that win.

"There were some disappointments, but there were also a lot of good things that happened, too," he said. "I'm probably most pleased with the way our offense

"There were some disappointments, but there were also a lot of good things that happened, too."

Saluki football coach

responded and came around."

Led by Bonner, SIUC's offense was among the top three in the Gateway all season long. Saturday, for the fourth time this season, the Salukis went over 400 yards in total offense.

"The Gateway is a very good football league," Watson said. "What I think I've learned this season is that it is a defensive league. Offenses that play in this league have to be patient."

Unfortunately, Watson is losing Bonner, as well as several other big contributors to SIUC's offense this season.

In 1997, the Salukis will be without senior tight ends Damon Jones and Dave Smith, who netted a combined 57 receptions this season.

Jones, who is destined for the NFL, said Saturday's win gives next year's squad a solid foundation to build upon.

Jones, who will also make an appearance in the annual Senior Bowl, said he is confident leaving SIUC.

"I think this will be a good offense next season," he said. "They have got a lot of guys returning, and I'll be watching for them in the newspapers."

Watson also will be without offensive lineman Steve Jones in 1997, whom Watson considers "one of the best in the league" and an all conference selection.

Defensively, SIUC is losing its most productive senior in defensive back C.J. McDavid. McDavid led the Dawgs in tackles this season with 116, which also was good enough for the No. 1 spot in the Gateway Conference.

"It ended the way I wanted it to," McDavid said. "We ended on a good note, and I think that will carry over to next year. We really needed that win to carry us into the future."
