Sanders proposes to make interim chancellor permanent

TIM CHAMBERLAIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Appointing John Jackson as the permanent chancellor, at least for a few years, was the subject of a series of meetings between SIU President Ted Sanders, SIUC deans and constituency group leaders Wednesday at the Stone Center, garnering mixed reactions from the different groups.

In the meetings, Sanders asked the representatives for input about appointing Jackson as the permanent chancellor for a specific amount of time, likely between two to five years. At or near the end of that period, a search would be conducted, and Jackson would still be eligible to reapply for the position.

Sanders asked the representatives to gather input from their various groups and to provide responses to him by Dec. 3.

If Sanders wants to present this option to the SIU Board of Trustees, his best opportunity prior to leaving Feb. 1 would be at the Dec. 9 meeting in Carbondale, as no meeting is scheduled for January.

Scott Kaiser, Sanders' media coordinator, said the president was trying to answer questions about campus stability and the number of vacant administrative positions on campus with this proposal.

"I think the point Dr. Sanders was trying to make [about Jackson] was that this is a person they know. They know he's a man of integrity, and, with the release of his Strategic Plan, they know where he's going," Kaiser said.

Jackson said the possibility of becoming the permanent chancellor appeals to him, but he wants to see how the campus feels about Sanders' proposal.

"I want to see what the reaction is from the constituency groups,"

Jackson said. "One is not always most objective about analyzing your own situation."

Jack Parker, dean of the College of Science, said the deans in attendance at the Stone Center reached a consensus on the proposal immediately following their meeting with Sanders. But because one dean could not be reached Wednesday, Parker said an official statement of the deans' position would not be released until that dean could be reached. He did comment that the deans were "reasonably supportive" of the measure.

David Kammler, chairman of the Graduate Council, also met with Sanders and said his group would convene Nov. 30 to discuss Sanders' proposal. He said he expects debate on the issue, and thinks there are positives and negatives about the proposal.

On the positive side, Kammler said having permanent leadership in the chancellor's office may give the campus more of a sense of stability. On the other hand, he said, the chancellor's position would continue to essentially be an interim in either case because a new president would have the power to replace Jackson as chancellor.

"You can call the position permanent, or you can call the position interim, but at a time when the president is going to be gone, it's an interim," Kammler said. "No matter what you do with the title, it's still an interim."

Though he did not want to speak for the entire Graduate Council, Kammler questioned how effective the proposal would be.

"The last chancellor was fired after less than a year on the job," Kammler

Good news and bad news for three Carbondale businesses

Maier disappointed, Karayanis contemplative over license decision

Gus Bode

KAREN BLATTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN

There seemed to be a ray of hope Tuesday night for Matt Maier to receive a new bar liquor license when the City Council changed a policy to allow additional licenses in the South Illinois Avenue area.

But then, acting as the Liquor Control Commission, the council surprised two bar owners by voting against Maier's license and giving the remaining bar license to John Karayanis.

When discussing the ramifications of a bar liquor license, Karayanis became unsure if he wanted to give up Chicago Underground's restaurant license for a bar license instead.

Karayanis has 90 days to accept his class B-2 bar license issued by the city. Until he picks it up or withdraws his application, there are no bar licenses available in Carbondale under the 15-license cap.

The council voted 3-2 to rescind the council policy on the restriction on issuing new or transferred class B-2 liquor licenses in the South Illinois Avenue area. Presently there are five class B-2 liquor establishments in the area.

A class B-2 liquor license allows an establishment to make all sales and profits from the sale of liquor and requires all patrons to be

By removing this policy, Maier's proposed establishment at 315 S. Illinois Ave. would not have any restrictions on it because of the location.

The council did not take any action to change the city-wide cap of 15 class B-2 licenses, even though Councilman Brad Cole started a motion to remove the cap altogether.

"I am not entirely certain that we need a cap," he said. "We should handle applications on a case-by-case basis." Councilman Mike Neill

Vicinity, products cause Discount Den to be denied packaged liquor license

KAREN BLATTER

Discount Den was denied a packaged liquor license because of the character of the establishment after the Liquor Control Commission decided Tuesday night to keep the class C liquor license cap at eight.

The City Council, acting as the commission, voted 5-0 to deny the license for Discount Den, 819 S. Illinois Ave., because of the type of establishment it is and its location.

The vote from the commission went against the recommendation of the Liquor Advisory Board, who recommended to approve the license 5-3 at its Nov. 4 meeting.

Paul Barlett, a partner in Discount Den, wanted the license to sell beer and wine as a way to increase business at the store. He said other stores in the chain have been successful in increasing business by selling beer and wine.

The council voted 5-0 earlier in the meeting to keep the current cap at eight, leaving two class C liquor licenses available.

A class C liquor license allows an establishment to sell packaged liquor with consumption off the premises. The area of liquor sales, if the establishment sells merchandise other than liquor, must have a

Carbondale community exploring options for better disaster preparedness

CEREMONY

The signing ceremony commemorating Project Impact will take place at 2 p.m. today at the Carbondale Civic Center in Room 108. The public and local businesses are encouraged to attend.

BURKE SPEAKER

While most Carbondale residents know this area is close to the New Madrid fault line and located near Tornado Alley, Dan Saavedra says many are not prepared for a natural disaster.

"The idea of disaster preparedness is not if a disaster is going to happen, it's when," said Saavedra, coordinator of a Carbondale natural disaster prevention group. "We need to be prepared because it's just a matter of time."

Saavedra's group, Project Impact, will sign a partnership with state and local officials today at 2 p.m. in the Carbondale Civic Center to cement support in safeguarding city businesses and organizations from natural disasters.

The signing also will commemorate what the group has accomplished since organizing in December 1998. Among those scheduled to attend are: Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard; Bob Winchester, Gov. George Ryan's deputy chief of staff for Southern Illinois; and Michael Chamness, director of the Illinois Emergency Management Agency.

Project Impact's goal is to raise public awareness concerning the imminent threat of natural disasters and work with businesses to help deal with disaster preparedness. Carbondale is the first Illinois town to become part of the 200 nationwide Project Impact communities.

The group is concentrating on education concerning disaster preparedness in schools. They are implementing ideas such as securing overhead light fixtures and tying down bookcases

Smokeout promotes health, education

JENNIFER WIG

DAILY EGYPTIAN

Jeremy Benton took his first drag from a cigarette four years ago when he was a junior in high school.

"It gave me a buzz," said Benton, a junior in physical education from Urbana. "I don't get that anymore."

Benton is trying to quit smoking just in time for the 23rd annual Great American Smokeout, sponsored by the American Cancer Society. More people quit smoking today than on any other day of the year.

Benton said cigarettes, which used to relax him, are losing their appeal.

"When I think of smoking a cigarette, I get this taste in the back of my throat," Benton said. "I just don't want to smoke."

The Great American Smokeout began in 1971, created by Arthur P. Mulvaney in Randolph, Mass. Mulvaney asked people to quit smoking for a day and donate the money they would have spent on cigarettes to a high school scholarship fund. The event spread across the country in five years.

Joe Baker, Environmental Health and Safety Coordinator at SIUC Student Health Programs, said most smokers want to quit, but they are afraid of the withdrawal symptoms.

"The biggest problem for smokers is the fear of quitting," Baker said. "They get through it just fine."

Baker said physical withdrawal lasts from 48 to 72 hours. Smokers who quit "cold turkey," or stop smoking entirely without decreasing their nicotine intake, should cut their caffeine intake in half. This is because caffeine can give them jitters, but eliminating caffeine altogether will give them headaches. The American Cancer Society suggests nibbling on low-calorie items and chewing gum to help suppress the urge to smoke. A person's health improves 20 minutes after quitting because the body's blood pressure decreases to a normal level and the temperature of the hands and feet increase to normal, according to a U.S. Surgeon General's report.

"Quitting is the No. 1 thing you can do to improve your health," said Baker, who advises smoking workshops. "The body begins to repair itself immediately."

Eight hours after quitting, the carbon monoxide level in the blood returns to normal and chances of a heart attack decrease after 24 hours without a cigarette. It takes only a few weeks for lung function to increase 30 percent.

Each day, nearly 3,000 young people become regular smokers. Of these, 1,000 will die early from tobacco-related diseases. Pat Arcy, a volunteer for the Jackson County Board of Health Care, teaches fourth to sixth graders about the dangers of smoking. Research shows many people start smoking at this age.

"We think this is the best time to teach the negative effects smoking has on your body," Arcy said.

The Great American Smokeout is a day of action for anyone who has been addicted to cigarettes.

"The effects of smoking are psychological as well as physiological," said Arcy. "It is a very difficult thing [to quit], but it can be done. The benefits are lifesaving."

until a liquor license became available under the cap.

The commission denied Maier's application by a 2-3 vote.

Councilman Larry Briggs, who voted to remove the cap but not to approve Maier's application, said his vote was based on the presentation made by Maier. Briggs said he would have liked to see Maier have a more definite plan as to how he would attract all age groups rather than just students. He said the presentation Maier made did not support his plans of making the establishment for all ages. If the changes he requested are made, Briggs said he would greatly consider changing his vote.

The Liquor Advisory Board voted Nov. 4 to recommend approval of Maier's application by a 5-3 vote. This is the second time the Liquor Control Commission has denied Maier the license with a 3-2 vote. Maier said he reapplied since his first denial in August because he felt there was a change in the way the city was handling the Strip.

Maier said he does not know what the next step will be for him and the building.

When Karayanis' license came to discussion, he was informed his reasons for wanting the class B-2 license could be achieved with his present license. Chicago Underground, 717 S. University Ave., presently has a class A-2 liquor license, which allows it to sell liquor as long as 51 percent of sales are from food.

Karayanis wanted to change the license to a class B-2 but did not understand all of which it would entail.

City Clerk Janet Vaught tried to explain the ordinances to Karayanis and told him that under his present A-2 license, he would not have to keep an operating kitchen to serve liquor.

Furthermore, under a class B-2 license, Karayanis was informed he would have to call patrons at the door and no one under 19 could be let in the establishment without a parent or legal guardian. The last class B-2 license in Carbondale was given to Karayanis by the commission with a vote of 3-2, even though it was clear Karayanis was unsure if he still wanted to license.

Karayanis has 90 days to pick up his newly awarded license. If he does not pick it up within that time, he has the option of asking for an additional 90 days to receive it. To obtain an extension, Karayanis has to state a "good" reason, according to Vaught. Karayanis has claim on this license, so no other licenses are currently available under the cap of 15. If Karayanis withdraws his application, then the license becomes available.

As of Wednesday, Karayanis had not picked up the license.

Jim Hart honored among sports heroes

Jim Hart, associate chancellor for External Affairs, was honored at the First Century of St. Louis Sports Celebration at the Fox Theatre where St. Louis sports heroes gathered Monday night.

Hart spent 19 years of his football career as the quarterback for the St. Louis Cardinals. He joined other St. Louis sports celebrities like Ozzie Smith, Bob Gibson, and Stan Musial at the all-star gala show.

"It was really a fun night to be included in such a group," Hart said. "It was more fun than I thought it was going to be."

Hart, SIUC's former Athletics Director, said the honorees signed autographs for an hour for fans who stood outside the Fox Theatre.

"There was a sea of people outside, but it was the least that I could do," Hart said.

Counterfeit bills found in Carbondale currency

Counterfeit $20 bills have shown up at three Carbondale businesses in the past two weeks, with losses totaling $600.

Carbondale police alerted local businesses to be on the lookout for the fake bills, said Don Elliott, community relations officer of the Carbondale Police Department. Many Carbondale businesses were notified using the police business fax hot line.

Emile A. Rey, 20, of Carbondale, was arrested and charged Nov. 2 with passing a counterfeit $20 bill to a Domino's Pizza delivery driver. Elliott said two other recent incidents are under investigation, but could not say if all three incidents are linked.

The most recent incident occurred Nov. 12 at Pinch Penny Pub, 700 E. Grand Ave., when 27 counterfeit $20 bills were discovered in the nightly bar receipts. All the bills had the same serial number, L34049790D. Two $20 bills were also passed at Lady Foot Locker in the University Mall Nov. 8, Elliott said.

Carbondale police Lt. Calvin Stearns said the texture of the bills in all three cases was different than the texture of authentic U.S. currency. Stearns advised paying special attention to the texture of any $20 bills taken in change.

OUR WORD

Support death; smoke today

After decades of denial, the truth is out: if you smoke, you die. And not only does smoking kill you, it chops an average of 20 to 25 years off your life. We're not the surgeon general, but a nicotine buzz is not worth losing about 25 percent of your life.

Despite these numbers, America just doesn't seem to be getting the message. The American Cancer Society says one in five of our nation's deaths is still attributable to tobacco use. While the level of smokers appears to be leveling off after 60 years of increases, one-third of our high school students admitted being smokers in 1997. Today is the 23rd annual Great American Smokeout, and a chance for all smokers to improve their lives by quitting.

As thousands of smokers try to break their tobacco habit today, most will fear the effects of their dependency. If you're thinking about smoking to be "cool" or just part of the crowd, don't think it will be easy to stop. Nicotine is a poison with a greater risk of physical and emotional dependency than intravenous cocaine usage. To put it simply, smoking isn't much different than using any other drug. It's hard to quit, has no benefit and slowly but surely kills you.

Hollywood is one of the biggest criminals in perpetuating the nonchalant attitude toward smoking and plays an even bigger part in creating a positive perception toward nicotine addiction. Celebrities save the world from evil and ride off with the beautiful supermodel all while puffing away on cigarette after cigarette. These same celebrities and sports heroes can then be seen gracing the pages of "Cigar Aficionado" and other similar publications with fat stogies drooping from their lips.

When such stars aren't available, seemingly harmless cartoons and studly cowboys perform the nicotine promotion. If you think this isn't having an effect on creating smokers, consider that recent studies show Joe Camel is now just as familiar to 6-year-olds as Mickey Mouse. The young minds these heroes and entertainment icons appeal to are the same minds at the greatest risk of trying tobacco products and becoming addicted.

Unfortunately, few of these impressionable minds are exposed to people suffering the long-term effects of this "cool" habit. They don't see the premature wrinkling of the skin, yellow nails and teeth, nor do they smell their bad breath, stinky clothes and hair.

The American Cancer Society presents the evidence for quitting clearly: More people die annually from tobacco use than the number of people who would die every year if three jumbo jets crashed each day with no survivors. That's more than 400,000 people, a death total higher than the combined casualties resulting from alcohol, crack, heroin, murder, suicide, car accidents and AIDS.

Make the decision to quit smoking and stick to it. It isn't easy, but it's necessary for a long, healthy life. Getting buddy-buddy with the "in" crowd pales in comparison to living long enough to support your children and watch them grow-up. The financial costs of smoking over a shortened lifetime are dumbofounding. Why pay all that money to die sooner? Instead of being "cool," be different. Be smart. There is no safe way to smoke, so why even start?

Don't force religious beliefs on others

As Thanksgiving rolls around once more, it is time for me to think back on all of the blessings in my life.

This year, I find my mind wandering back to my years in high school. I am thankful my classmates and I graduated safely and without the tragedy faced by several schools in the nation. At the same time, I pray for wisdom among school administrators and law makers in order to prevent such tragedies in the future.

Recently, the Harrisburg school system made headlines with its proposal to hang copies of the Ten Commandments, U.S. Constitution and Magna Carta in the school hallways. School officials in the nearby district claim this action is a precautionary measure toward preventing a school shooting from taking place in their town.

My concern is: What better way for guest alienated students to take out their frustration than by shooting holes through the school's list of biblical crimes?

And really, in the society we've created, who can blame them?

I'm not saying gun-toting youths are completely without blame in these painful tragedies. But at the same time, what are we really doing to fix the problem?

According to Darrell Scott, father of a victim in April's Columbine shooting and keynote speaker at a recent rally held in Harrisburg, children are in need of the kind of guidance that can only be provided through the depiction of Christian rules on the doors of equal-opportunity learning institutions.

Ironically, this means the same classrooms that teach America's youth about our forefathers' establishment of religious freedom will be blatantly attempting to force one specific religion on all students.

Scott asserted that when the commandments were displayed in public schools during the 1950s and '60s, these tragedies did not occur. What Scott failed to mention was that also during the '50s, pop culture did not arm our children with scenes from movies glorifying angst-ridden teen protagonists who avenged their frustration by shooting their peers. Nor did Scott point out that most record labels in that decade were not filled with songs about hate crimes and violence.

Today's children are not the ones in Hollywood and music studios, condoning these messages. Nay, many of the VIP's marketing these projects are the same baby boomers who, in the '50s and '60, studied in public classrooms below framed copies of the Ten Commandments.

Granted, some of the commandments listed in Exodus are completely legitimate values to teach in schools, as they correspond with U.S. law. "Thou shall not kill." "Thou shall not steal." That sounds pretty reasonable to me.

But what about the very first commandment? "Thou shall not have any god before me," sounds like a pretty harsh rule toward members of other theological faiths in the United States.

I noticed there were no public requests for similar copies of the Five Pillars of Islam or excerpts from Wiccan spell books to be posted in our public schools. If we are going to remain politically correct, should we not line our walls with values drawn from all religious faiths?

Furthermore, in many cases of school shootings during the past few years, the general consensus has been that most of these juvenile gunmen made it widely known that they hated the school system. If Christians are attempting to truly reach these angry kids, is it really wise to present the faith in an environment the target audience already despises? If anything, this is likely to add to their contempt and give the teenagers additional fodder with which to lash out against their community.

Matthew 28:19-20 of the New Testament, also known as the "Great Commission," states, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you."

I am a strong Christian. But I am very concerned about the approach several denominations are taking toward this issue. I mean, growing up in Sunday School, I remember always being taught that one must watch for opportunities to appropriately witness. It seems as though many people today are ignoring this tradition and instead forcing all settings to become arenas for religious overtime, an action that is likely to blow up in our faces.

In fact, the idea that the government would let something like this even take place within the confines of the United States is very disturbing to me. If I were a member of another religious faith with children enrolled in a public school, I would be extremely upset that the government was overriding the First Amendment and trying to convert my child while they taught him to read and multiply.

Bottom line: I am sure that the intentions of the Harrisburg school system are good, but I think we, as a society, need to pause and reflect more on cause-and-effect possibilities before we do anything that might lead to more tragedies down the road.

In addition to the "Great Commission," the Gospel of Matthew also states, "Make a tree good and its fruit will be good; or make a tree bad and its fruit will be bad; for a tree is recognized by its fruit." On this note, let us always remember that every action we take will be echoed forever in its effect, so we must always be careful in the angle from which we approach delicate situations.

Dan Quayle for president

DEAR EDITOR:

The resignation of Ted Sanders as the president of SIUC gives the Board of Trustees a unique opportunity to attract a nationally known and well-recognized person to lead this University.

President Sanders was chosen by the board because he was a republican and because he was the acting secretary in the Bush administration for about four months. I do not think President Sanders had to go through the usual academic procedures for selection, e.g. search committee, faculty and employee input, etc. The board thought President Sanders would be able to attract more state funds, but unfortunately that did not happen.

While I see the reasoning behind the board's idea, they were wrong because Sanders was not known either state or nationwide. He had no experience with the seasoned politicians, though he intended to "schmooze" with them.

Fortunately, the board now has a great opportunity to attract a great dynamic candidate from our neighboring state who should be immediately tapped for. This person is nationally well known and also is very well-known in our state. He is a dynamic speaker and is well known for his high levels of integrity and moral standards. He served as a vice president of this country for four years under the Bush administration. We need people like Dan Quayle to lead our University. Dan Quayle has extensive experience to handle the most seasoned politicians, and in the Senate race, he defeated the well-known Senator, Birch Bayh.

I hope our board will immediately approach and try to persuade the former vice president of our country to accept the presidency of SIUC. The presidency of Dan Quayle at our University will instantly give national recognition to this University.

Do the right thing

DEAR EDITOR:

While the news of Ted Sanders' resignation as president of SIUC is certainly welcome and long overdue, the more important problem is still before us. Our University is still under attack from those people who are destroying Delyte Morris' dream that we be the second jewel in the state's higher educational system and not the dysfunctional party school we currently are.

Those who understand what a university should be cannot be hopeful of the future. Because of a lack of background, education and proper experience, Sanders never had a chance. He was simply over his head in his position. However, he was appointed by a Board of Trustees that continually shows its contempt for faculty, students, academic quality and in the standards it uses to conduct public business. Apparently, this is what Gov. Ryan and our local politicians such as Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, and Sen. Dave Luechtfeld, R-Oakville, want — the continuing destruction of Delyte Morris' dream.

There is a simple solution to our problems. It would give Sanders the right to say he did one significantly good thing as president; it would give the board the right to say that they finally did something for the public good; and it would restore to SIUC the talented and charismatic leader we so desperately need.

BRING JO ANN ARGERSINGER BACK.

Of course, Sanders and the board will probably not make the sensible decision. They would rather be wrong and keep their egos intact than to take the right action for the common good.

These events clearly illustrate that people who care about the quality of this University and organizations such as Southern Illinois HOPE are making significant progress. However, there is still much work to be done to establish these goals, and they are unlikely to be done without the rightful return of Argersinger as chancellor.

Young pianists bring Beethoven to life

KELLY E. HERTLEN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Heidi Williams recounts the moments she spent seated upon a piano bench in her grandmother's home, practicing countless tunes at the ripe age of 4. Twenty years later, Williams would practice with some of the most renowned pianists in the world.

"I started taking informal lessons with my grandmother when I was 4-years-old," said Williams instructor of piano performance. "I have always loved music, and my parents helped by exposing me to great music at an early age."

Williams is one of two featured guests performing during this weekend's 16th annual Beethoven Society Young Pianists awards festival. Beginning the weekend activities is world-known pianist Ann Schein as she conducts a piano master class from 3 to 5 p.m. today at the Old Baptist Foundation Recital Hall.

Friday, Schein will perform pieces from Ludwig Van Beethoven, Robert Schumann, Frederic Chopin and Sergei Rachmaninoff during an 8 p.m. recital at Shryock Auditorium. Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. is the Young Pianists awards festival, featuring Williams at the Old Baptist Foundation Recital Hall.

Sunday, talented youngsters from grades K through 12 may showcase their talents at the Young Pianists awards recital at 7:30 p.m. at the Mitchell Art Museum in Mount Vernon.

Don Beattie, founder of the Beethoven Society for Pianists and a professor of piano, said his aspiration in making the Society well-known and enhancing the music culture of Carbondale is becoming a reality.

"We are very pleased with how things have been progressing," Beattie said. "One of the dreams is coming true for us by having world renowned artists such as Ann Schein performing for us.

"Ann is one of the best pianists and has a beautiful spirit and talent."

Schein is dubbed a legacy in the pianist realm, having studied under notable professors such as Arthur Rubinstein, Dame Myra Hess and Mieczyslaw Munz. Schein has been performing for audiences across the globe, including a highly acclaimed debut at Carnegie Hall in 1962.

Williams recently joined the faculty at SIUC and the Beethoven Society for Pianist in the Fall of '99. A former student of Schein's at the Peabody Conservatory of Music, Williams said she is overwhelmed at the chance to perform in concert with her mentor.

"I can't imagine a more special way to cross over than to have my teacher here with me to perform," she said. "I studied with her for about 8 years, and I am just thrilled about this."

Known across the globe, the Beethoven Society for Pianists is the largest Beethoven society in the world. Beattie said anyone is welcome to attend the event, and should.

"For the folks who are here, this will be an opportunity they will never forget," he said. "This is a chance to hear one of the greatest pianists of the time."

"Music is a great language of the heart, and Beethoven speaks that well."

Beattie said because of the love and joy that Beethoven's music provides, this weekend's event is a fantastic plate for children to be introduced to the classic world of piano.

"We always have a festival for young pianists," he said. "It is a celebration instead of a competition. We honor every child, and we've earned the reputation of being one of the nicest festivals because of that."

His personal goal extends the mission of the Society. Beattie said he wishes to place the gift of music into the hands of every life.

"I have the goal to try and get copies of Beethoven's Symphony #9 to every person possible. I have watched it change people's lives."

"Beethoven has something for everyone," Beattie said Schein and Williams play their recitals from memory of the music.

"Ann plays everything from memory," he said. "I would say at least a thousand pages are from memory when she performs."

Williams said the art of memorization is a difficult task, but fulfilling when completed.

"The earlier you start the better," she said. "It is like the equipment becomes a part of you physically; it's like another language. But you have to practice over and over — practice the mental, oral and also visual parts."

The message of music is an important inspiration to Williams and Beattie. A message they hope to extend to those attending the festival.

"Music teaches you to love and to listen," Beattie said. "We are only able to express as much joy as we have sorrow. How could we do anything else in the world better than to love more?"

I just can't think of a better way than to celebrate it with music."

separating wall and a separate check-out. The establishment must also not be within 100 feet of a church, school or any other institution of higher learning.

Councilman Larry Briggs voted against the license because of its location.

Although Discount Den is not within the 100-foot location restriction, in the vicinity of Discount Den are three religious facilities, a child day care center, a teenage billiards facility and the University.

Briggs said some of the surrounding establishments added to his concern of Discount Den selling beer and wine, specifically Power Players, 815 S. Illinois Ave.

"Power Players has a lot of underage kids," he said. "It is close to a church and makes it too close to kids."

Certain items sold at Discount Den were also cause for the council's concern. Councilman Brad Cole expressed concerns to the owner about the paraphernalia sold in the store.

Bartlett said he started selling smoking paraphernalia to increase competition and business when other business around him began selling the items. He said some of the items sold in the store were most likely not bought for legal purposes.

"I sell smoking accessories such as pipes," Bartlett said. "I have all kinds of pipes, some are small, some are tall. I do not believe they will be used for legal substances."

Behind the scenes of Madame Butterfly

Take a glance
backstage moments before
Sunday's opera

BRYNN SCOTT
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Joseph Bolin rubs his fingers up and down both sides of his nose while buzzing his lips and singing vocal scales. Floating from stage left to stage right, Bolin warms up his lungs for Sunday's opera performance, "Madame Butterfly."

"Madame Butterfly" tells the story of an American naval officer, played by Bolin, who marries a young Japanese woman but doesn't plan to stay with her. The woman, Cio-Cio-San (Madame Butterfly) renounces her family and religion to marry the officer. Although he leaves her, Madame Butterfly stays in Japan to care for their child.

The crew and cast come trickling into Shryock Auditorium at about 5:30 p.m. humming musical notes every few minutes. The usher, dressed in a red and black button-down vest, sits gazing at the stage, looking like he is in midst of a day-dream.

The classy evening for the opera was set.

The two lead female actresses prepare in near silence for their performances. Kellie Evans, who plays Madame Butterfly, absorbs the white makeup onto a sponge and wipes it over her face. Hollie Molesworth, who plays Suzuki, Madame Butterfly's servant, thinks about her role as she puts glue on her fake eyelashes.

Bolin reaches into his cosmopak makeup container and pulls out a stick of mascara. He dips the mascara wand into the black liquid and flushes his lids with it, face elongated and mouth hanging wide open.

Gustavo Flores, stage manager and assistant director, suddenly busts into Bolin's room. "30 minutes," he shouts.

The mood is full of high expectation and intensity. Will the actors perform to their fullest potential? Will Bolin's sore throat plague him with a scratchy voice?

The cast and crew move at a much faster pace, hustling to put last minute magic touches on their faces and costumes. Members of the cast check the time every few minutes. Meanwhile, the crowd is stirring in an eager gossip session, awaiting the first note of the opera.

Flores runs around, wide-eyed.

"15 minutes," he warns.

About 170 people pack into the auditorium. Some of the cast peers at the crowd and tries to locate that special someone. Last minute alterations are made and members of the orchestra arrive. Evans and orchestra conductor Edward Benyas shake hands to congratulate each other for the extraneous efforts made.

Final hair-spray shots are fired from the aerosol cans. Bolin takes a last sip of water before delivering his preview vocal performance.

"Five minutes," Flores yells.

The orchestra plays pleasant tunes to grab the audience's attention. The crowd chatter decreases to a whisper.

"Places, places," Flores says.

A low-toned bell rings twice backstage to warn the cast of the show's beginning. People scramble to get in position. The lights in the auditorium are dimmed and silence spreads throughout the crowd.

"Madame Butterfly" opens on a vocally powerful note.

CARIN MCDANIEL - DAILY EGYPTIAN

in homes and businesses to lessen personal injury during an earthquake or tornado.

The city is exploring the possibility of an installation of a community-based broadcast system, which will be used to broadcast weather information, emergency notices and public information relating to Project Impact activities.

There are 60 business and community members in Project Impact, including the Illinois Department of Transportation, American Red Cross and Murdale True Value, 1915 W. Main St. Saavedra said it is important that local businesses become involved because of the crippling effect natural disasters have on small business.

According to the Federal Emergency Management Agency, a nationwide organization dedicated to disaster prevention and relief, 40 percent of small businesses never reopen after a natural disaster. FEMA has spent about $20 billion helping to restore businesses and locate jobs for those affected by natural disasters, according to the group's website.

Carbondale received a $500,000 grant in December 1998 from FEMA for Project Impact. Under the agreement, the city would match 25 percent of the grant. Saavedra said the funds are being matched through community service.

Ken Jaros, chairman of the Planning Committee, said it is important that faculty and students become involved in Project Impact because every Carbondale resident is affected by the group's efforts.

Project Impact is currently working in conjunction with the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign on several studies to evaluate earthquake risk to businesses. Saavedra is urging Carbondale and SIUC to unite in a common goal.

"If SIUC were to suffer a serious disaster, Carbondale has the most to lose," Saavedra said. "Where would that leave Carbondale? Well, [SIUC] is Carbondale."

said. "Does it make sense to choose a chancellor, who serves at the pleasure of the president, before we have a permanent president?"

"This is not really solving the problem of a leadership vacuum on campus by making this move now."

Max Yen, Faculty Senate president, is out of town this week but was able to consult with Sanders through a conference call. Karen Prichard, vice president of the Faculty Senate, spoke with Yen after the meeting and said the senate would meet Nov. 30 to discuss the proposal.

Prichard said she saw the meetings with Sanders as encouraging that there is some notion of opening up the process of selecting the permanent chancellor.

"I do think it is a good thing that input is being sought," Prichard said. "At least some opportunity for constituent input is helpful for the process."

The Administrative and Professional Staff Council met Wednesday afternoon and generally supported the idea of Jackson as the permanent chancellor for a three to four year period, Chairwoman Paulette Curkin said.

"The most obvious advantage is to provide stability to the campus in this time of interims," Curkin said. "The obvious concern is that it wouldn't be the result of a national search."

If Jackson is appointed permanently for a set amount of time, Curkin said this would be a good opportunity for the campus to evaluate his skills.

"During this time, Dr. Jackson could prove himself as a leader," Curkin said. "But if he doesn't match up with the position, then we can do an outside search."

The group that seems to be most adamantly opposed to Jackson's permanent appointment is the faculty association.

Kay Carr, faculty association president, said the faculty association was originally unhappy with the lack of consultation in the decisions to terminate former Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger and to appoint Jackson as her interim replacement.

She said there is no way the association could approve of the appointment of Jackson to the permanent post with such little consultation and no search process at all.

"His meeting with the constituency heads cannot be an attempt to argue that he has constituent feedback," Carr said. "There's no way we will say that he can do this without a search."

Carr said the association is not necessarily against Jackson being the permanent chancellor, but it is objecting to the process being used.

"Jackson has nothing to do with anything here," Carr said. "We are objecting to another appointment without consultation. The process is such that you can't do it this way. If you do, it's a coup."

winning the Most Valuable Player award in the All-Star game of 1975.

In addition, Frazier received the All-NBA first team award in three years between 1970 and 1975, and the All-NBA second team award in 1971 and 1973. Also, he was on the All-Defensive Team seven years in a row from 1969-1975.

Frazier presided over the Knicks for 10 years until the 1977-78 season when New York sent him to the Cleveland Cavaliers. From there, Frazier's career crept out of the limelight. One of the most glorious players in NBA history came to a close in Cleveland in 1979.

Career-wise in the NBA, Frazier averaged 18.9 points, 5.9 rebounds, and is still New York's all-time assist leader with 4,791 (6.1 per game).

WALT FRAZIER
former SIU
and Knick guard

Frazier was elected to the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame, and in 1996, he was named on the NBA 50th Anniversary All-Time Team.

Frazier said being awarded one of the 50 greatest players of all-time honor was the highlight of his career, along with winning the NIT at SIU and winning the Knicks' first championship.

"The hardest thing for me to do was hang up the phone. I spent 40 minutes of my life talking to arguably the most famous SIU alumnus, the best player ever to wear a Saluki uniform, legendary Knicks' forward and New York radio broadcaster.

As big-time as he was and still is in New York, Frazier will never forget where it all began — a small town in Southern Illinois called Carbondale.

"We made a name for SIU," Frazier said. "People in New York still remember. It is very humbling to have people remember. I haven't forgotten about SIU. I think about it all the time."

"We expect Terica to do great things for us," Beck said. "Molly is a good basketball player and a savvy shooter. She is quite the offensive player."

McDowell led all scorers against AIA with 18 points, and Hathaway, last year's leading scorer, added 14 points and a team-high eight rebounds.

A prime weakness against AIA was the Salukis' play on the boards. AIA out-rebounded the Salukis 39-29. Twenty-seven of AIA's 39 rebounds came on the defensive end, as opposed to SIU's 18.

Beck knows the Salukis, despite winning their first pre-season game against Goldstar 81-63 last Wednesday, have a long way to go. However, there is little time left to make last minute corrections.

"We have a lot of wrinkles to iron out," Beck said. "We must rebound better and go forward on defense."

SALUKI SPORTS

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1999 • PAGE 12

Tomorrow:

- Saluki football plays season finale at McAndrew Stadium Saturday.
- Men's basketball team opens regular season against Western Kentucky at the SIU Arena.

Katie Berwanger, a freshman forward from Lake Zurich, drives the lane for two points in the 62-48 loss against Athletes in Action Monday night. Berwanger and the rest of the Salukis travel to Lincoln, Neb., Friday for the Time-Warner Cable Classic. The tournament runs from Nov. 19-21.

The real deal begins in Lincoln

Women's basketball team opens regular season Saturday in Time-Warner Classic Tournament

CHRISTINE BOLIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

SIU women's basketball coach Julie Beck is ready to forget about the last exhibition game against Athletes in Action and let the games begin.

The regular season games, that is. After closing out pre-season action against AIA 62-48 Monday night, Beck can only look to the regular season to get things going for the Salukis.

"Losing one game does not make everything wrong," Beck said. "We are far from discouraged. Playing Athletes in Action was a good test for us."

The big test the Salukis must now pass is getting the regular season, which begins Friday at the Time Warner Cable Classic Tournament in Lincoln, Neb., off to a positive start.

The challenge, however, is not going to be simple, as the Salukis take on 1999 Women's National Invitation Tournament finalists, the University of Wisconsin. The Badgers are ranked 30th in the pre-season USA Today/ESPN poll.

Badger head coach Jane Albright will not allow her team to get a big head going into the SIU game.

"Our team does not put too much thought in our rankings," Albright said. "It will not matter on Friday when the score is 0-0."

The Badgers have a cast of talented players, including last season's Big Ten Freshman of the Year, Jessie Stomski, sophomore guard Tamara Moore, and highly regarded freshman center Nina Smith, all of whom scored double-figures in a 76-66 victory over Athletes in Action Nov. 9.

The two other schools competing in the three-day tournament are the host University of Nebraska and Georgia Southern University.

Nebraska, who won 102-50 in its lone pre-season game against Lithuania, was 21-12 last season and advanced to the NCAA Tournament. The Huskers return senior starters Nicole Kubik, Brooke Schwartz, Charlie Rogers and Naciska Gilmore.

Georgia Southern, who did not play any pre-season games this year, posted a 13-14 record under head coach Rusty Cram last season. The Lady Eagles bring back seniors Sharon Mitchell and Tonda Warren, and sophomore Danna Simpson.

The Salukis have a decent group of offensive characters as well, led by junior Terica Hathaway and freshman guard Molly McDowell.

Walt Frazier still remembers Southern Illinois

CHRISTINE BOLIN

SPORTS REPORTER

For the sort of person who gets star-struck when given the opportunity to talk to famous people, particularly professional basketball players. This was the case Nov. 11.

As I was working on a story about the 1967 SIU National Invitational Tournament that day, I had earlier attempted to contact Walt Frazier at the Madison Square Garden Network where the former Knicks' star currently is working as a commentator for Knicks' games.

Yeah, like "Clyde," as Frazier was nicknamed in his early playing days for his unique and flashy sense of style, was going to call me.

But when I was handed the phone last Thursday afternoon and heard the words, "Walt Frazier here," I was tongue-tied. In fact, I couldn't believe I was actually talking to Walt Frazier, who was ready to unfold his tale of being a Saluki.

Coached by Jack Hartman and assistant coach George Iubelt, the 1967 "Cinderella" Salukis became the first small school to win the NIT after a remarkable 20-2 regular season record. Led by Frazier and a talented cast of athletic players, the little-known Frazier earned All-American Honors as a junior leading the Salukis with 18.2 points and 11.9 rebounds per outing.

"I didn't think I would make it to the pros until the NIT," Frazier said. "Even then I still did not get my hopes up high. It was always a dream of mine."

Frazier's dream soon became a reality as he opted to forego his senior year at SIU for basketball's heaven, the NBA. The Knicks drafted the 6-foot-4-inch Atlanta native fifth overall in the 1967 NBA draft.

From there, a legend in the Big Apple was born. As a member of the Knicks, Frazier's highlights include making the All-Rookie team in 1968, being a member of the 1969-70 and 1972-73 Knicks' championship teams, appearing in seven All-Star games and
