34 could face impeachment by USG

By Brad Bushue
Staff Writer

A recommendation to impeach as many as 34 senators and executive board members could increase the number of casualties in the impeachment war between the Undergraduate Student Government senate and the Committee for Internal Affairs.

After the removal of graduate student Vince "Makes Sense" Kelly from the USG senate, the word impeachment has become commonplace in the halls of the USG office.

A proposed bill, to request the removal of eight to 11 senators, and a forthcoming bill to remove 23 executive board members because they have not yet signed forms to release academic and disciplinary qualifications to serve under the USG, will go before the committee for review tonight, according to committee chair Juliana Taylor.

Committee member Mike Putzek is writing the bill to recommend the impeachment of the senators. He is exploring the constitutional rights of the board members, all of whom were not approved for executive appointment when the absence of four committee members, a calculated plan according to some USG members, left the senate without quorum and ended the meeting Wednesday.

John Steinbeck, former East Campus senator, said he resigned Wednesday from his senate post in protest of the council's actions against the executive appointments.

The committee has not only drawn criticism from its USG colleagues for the actions at the last meeting, but also for allowing its chair to be elected while having poor academic standing.

Steinbeck said the committee is responding to the petition to impeach Trylor from her seat as chair of the committee because she failed to meet academic requirements.

Taylor said she can remain in her USG seat because the constitution permits her to figure the grades she received before she transferred to the University into her grade point average.

Alumnus aids NASA with Ideas

By Scott Perry
Staff Writer

"When American astronauts made landings on the moon, what did they do? They planted the American flag, thus telling the entire world that we had conquered the moon and that America's technology was better than anyone else's. That's not the kind of space program we envision."

It was May 1972 when Alan Ladwig, then a graduate student in higher education, told this to a Daily Egyptian reporter.

Sixteen years later, Ladwig's ideas are the same, but now he's not telling them to a Daily Egyptian reporter; he's telling them to NASA.

Ladwig is the director of NASA's special projects office of exploration.

His mission: To help determine what the country's space goals will be at the turn of the century.

"It's not as simple as just picking the moon or Mars," Ladwig said.

"There are a lot of decisions to be made before we (the United States) can determine which is the right pathway we should take to achieve our goals."

Ladwig's interest in space came during Christmas break in 1969. It was then he was introduced to Air Force Col. John Whiteside, co-founder of a group calling itself the Committee for the Future.

"I remember the first words Whiteside said to me," Ladwig said. "Hi. We're going to New Worlds."

New Worlds — the same as Committee for the Future — was an organization devoting itself to the future of space exploration and examining how it could best be utilized to help the world we live in.

Upgrade of mall planned

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

A proposal for a $23 million upgrade and expansion of the University Mall will be presented to the City Council tonight.

A report by Interim City Manager Jeff Doherty says improvements will include an addition of a Famous Barr or Dillard's department store, enlargement of Sears and exterior changes.

The report also says a food court, which Doherty described as a variety of restaurants with a common seating area, will be added.

The city staff has been working with mall owners David Hocker and Associates for more than a year on the project and "Everybody seems to be 'go on this,'" he said.

But there is one catch: "The city has been asked to participate in some of the costs for the mall," Doherty said.

Doherty's report says Hocker and Associates has asked the city to foot $5 million of the bill.

Doherty could not give specifics on where the city money would go until the company compiled an itemization of costs, but he suggested the money could be raised through local sales tax, and property tax.

Doherty said the expansion and remodeling of the mall could be accomplished in about two years with council approval.

The last mall expansion was approved by the council in 1986.

$2,500 found during fire investigation

By Mark Barnett
Staff Writer

Approximately $2,500 in 10s and 20s, dated from the early 1930s will go to the owner of the house that caught fire last week, a Carbondale Police official said.

John Stearns, owner of the house at 312 N. Renfro St., will receive the money found in a pipe at the scene of an arson investigation. Two pipes — one filled with money and the other a possible detonating device — caused a stir in Carbondale on Oct. 13.

Carbondale arson investigators found the pipes in the residence where a fire had occurred early that morning, police said.

Lt. Larry Hill of the Carbondale Police said both an Illinois State Police bomb squad investigator and U.S. Army bomb squad members believed one pipe was a detonating device. The pipe had no explosives, police reports said.

The other pipe contained approximately $2,500 in 10s and 20s, dated from the early 1930s, police said. "By the looks of the pipe, the money had been there for a long time," Hill said. However, the detonating device was not as old, and Hill described it as "apparently new." Hill could not speculate how long the device had been there.

Police believe both pipes were placed in the house by a previous owner. The money is in police custody and will be given to current owner of the house, Hill said.

The house is rented to Stan and Cathy Wright.

Wright said he started a fire in a wood stove at 2:30 a.m. on Oct. 13. He said that 10 minutes later he noticed the ceiling was on fire.

Uganda Airliner crashes killing 31 people in Rome

ROME (UPI) — The pilot of a Uganda Airlines Boeing 707 made two attempts to land at Rome's fog-shrouded Leonardo Da Vinci Airport before the plane crashed short of the runway on the third approach early Monday, killing 31 of the 52 passengers and crew, authorities said.

American, British scientists win Nobel Prize

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — Two American researchers and a British professor won the 1988 Nobel Prize for Medicine Monday for discoveries that led to life-prolonging drug treatments of AIDS, leukemia, heart disease and a host of other disorders. Sweden's Karolinska Institute awarded the prize jointly to Sir James W. Black, 64, of King's College Hospital Medical School in London, along with Gertrude B. Elion, 70, and George H. Hitchings, 83, both of Burroughs-Wellcome Research Laboratories in Research Triangle Park, N.C.

Anti-government groups to try Burma alliance

MANERPLAW, Burma (UPI) — Leaders of Burma's largest rebel group said Monday they will try to unite dissident students, minority insurgents and communist guerrillas into the nation's first anti-government alliance. Officials representing the 12-year-old rebel National Democratic Front have been meeting since Thursday at the jungle headquarters of the Karen guerrilla group at Manerplaw, about 150 miles northeast of Rangoon.

'Last Temptation of Christ' banned in Israel

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israeli film censors Monday banned distribution of the movie "The Last Temptation of Christ," saying it would offend Christians in the Holy Land and violate Israeli law. "It's not that the film deals with some small aspect of Christianity," said Joshua Justman, chairman of the Israeli Film Censorship Board. "What is in the film deals with the very fundamental tenets of the Christian faith. This is no small matter."

Government: Hole in ozone layer is shrinking

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A "hole" in the Earth's protective ozone layer observed each year at the South Pole has shrunk to its smallest size since 1986, but the ozone depletion threat is not lessening, the government said Tuesday. The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said the measurements were made by balloons launched by scientists at the pole earlier this month.

U.S., Philippines agree on military bases use

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States and the Philippines signed a two-year interim agreement Monday for continued use of U.S. military bases that could include nearly $1 billion in new aid to the island nation in 1990 and 1991. But in signing the memorandum of agreement in the State Department's Treaty Room, both Secretary of State George Shultz and Philippines Foreign Minister Raul Manglapus said their countries "are keeping their options open" for the future, when the basic agreement expires.

Brush fire threatens homes, wildlife preserve

Survey: Eight in 10 find candidates insincere

NEW YORK (UPI) — A survey of 1,000 American adults shows that eight out of 10 believe the presidential candidates are insincere and nearly half said they would rather watch prime time TV than pay attention to the election. Parents magazine reported Monday. Of those polled, 78 percent said they believed both candidates "are just saying what they think the voters want to hear" and only 10 percent said they believe the presidential hopefuls are honest, the magazine reported in November.

Recording project change of luck for musicians

By Beth Clavin
Entertainment Editor

The art of making music has been expanded in Carbondale with the recording of the cassette "Down on Your Luck".

"Down on Your Luck," a Wright-Waldron Project, is original music written, recorded and performed by Carbondale inhabitants.

Michael Wright, owner of Wrihtracks recording studio at 217 W. Main St., said he and his partner, Terry Waldron, wrote the lyrics, performed the instrumentals, produced and recorded all 13 songs found on the cassette.

Waldron, an art teacher at Sparta High School, also designed the jacket for the cassette and sings two of the songs.

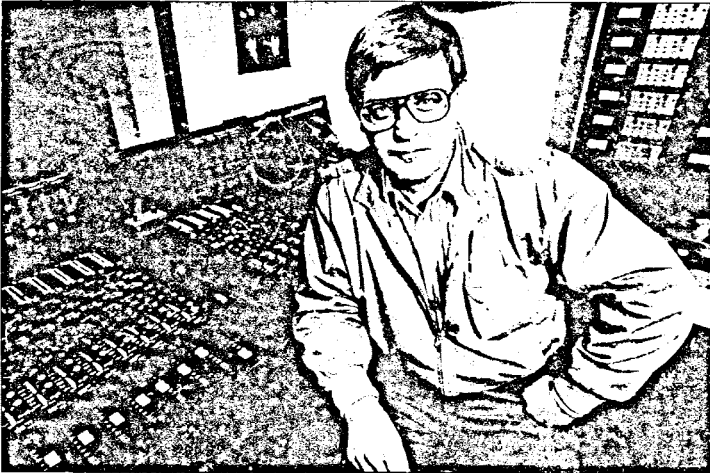

The two, both University graduates, have known each other since grade school and have been writing lyrics together for 20 years.

"We've always dreamed of (making a cassette), but we weren't sure how," Wright said.

Wright, a real estate appraiser, said he has been buying the recording equipment for a number of years. Three years ago the two decided to make their dream come true.

The cassette contains music from soft rock to top 40, Wright said. One New York producer called it "European Pop," he said.

Besides the fact that an album or cassette had never been recorded in Southern Illinois, another uniqueness is that every singer who appears on the album is from the area.

Michael Wright, owner of Wrihtracks Recording Studio at 217 W. Main Street. Wright and Terry Waldron produced an album featuring Carbondale Inhabitants.

Wright put out an ad for auditions. He was flooded with responses people.

"We narrowed it down from 100 songs to 13, and from 100 singers to seven," Wright said. "We picked the ones who showed the most potential."

The cassette is a once in a lifetime chance for the singers, Wright said.

"How many people from Southern Illinois get the chance to be on an album?" he asked. "There are so many people that are very, very talented singers but never get discovered."

"This is a vehicle for them to be heard by others," he said. "And we don't know which singer or song, if any, will be popular."

"Down on Your Luck" took three years to complete, with the group working only nights and weekends.

"Nothing would make me any happier than to see one of these singers get somewhere from this," he said.

Beth Clark, who sings six of the 13 songs on the cassette, said the recording has helped her musical career greatly.

"I have learned so much," she said. "I hear myself better than I'd ever been able to before."

Clark, who sings with the band Shades, said this experience also has helped her with stage performance and has inspired her to begin writing lyrics.

Clark, from Evansville, Ind., said she was surprised that this opportunity came to her in Southern Illinois.

"I didn't think there was anything here," she said. "I never would have gotten the chance in Evansville."

"It was just in the right place at the right time," she said.

Clark hopes to sing on the group's second release, although she isn't limiting herself to the group.

"I'd like to go further with the band," she said. "I'm waiting for any opportunity and then I'll jump on it."

The other singers on the cassette include: Julia King, a University graduate in music, now furthering her musical career in Nashville, TN.; David Gene Smith, a veteran rock singer and University student; Mimi Hawbecker, who has sung in several musicals and plays; Richard Graybill, who has sung in many rock bands; and Paul Brown, a veteran singer who already has released a solo album.

Wright said the two decided to call themselves the Wright-Waldron Project because the cassette is an "ongoing type of project," with the singers changing with a new release.

"It's not just the two of us," Wright said. "The singers are as important as we are."

Colin Austin, a University student, also was involved in the venture by helping Wright with engineering.

"Down on Your Luck," which derived its name from a song on the cassette with the same title, took three years to complete, with the group working only nights and on weekends, Wright said.

The nightly and weekend rehearsals denied many members of the group

WHY I AM IN FAVOR OF COLLECTIVE BARGAINING

Once this was a university where the dream of a community of scholars was alive, where it was an honor to serve on a faculty senate, where lively public debates were carried on concerning the merits of educational policies, where faculty and students often worked together to effect change, where, even when we disagreed, the administration and the faculty believed in each other's commitment to education, where a faculty designed and controlled grievance procedure promised fair treatment.

That was long ago. Now layer after layer of unresponsive and expensive bureaucracy, from Anthony Hall to Springfield, produces policies without educational justification. Faced with the declining quality of education and rising fees, students feel betrayed and faculty feel exploited. Rather than give up, leave the university, seek early retirement, or retreat to the privacy of one's own word processor, wouldn't it be better to exercise our right to collective bargaining and achieve by contract the respect for our professional status, fair treatment in salaries, and legal protection of our rights that we now lack?

There are skeletons in the 'Bone Yard'

USUALLY, WHEN a sensitive subject is touched on at the University, administrators will tell you one thing and someone else will tell you another.

Such is the case with the issue of the University's surplus property. University Housing workers refer to the place where they store the surplus equipment as the "Bone Yard," an apt title considering what happens to some of the equipment.

RECENTLY, ABOUT 100 lamps were destroyed at Southern Hills. To some University Housing workers, the lamps appeared to be in good working condition. Cathy Hunter, assistant director of University Housing Operations, said the lamps were checked by electricians, who told them the lamps were defective internally and presented a danger if plugged in.

ONE QUESTION arises immediately upon Hunter's response: How could 100 lamps, all originating from the same housing complex, become defective at about the same time? This seems highly unlikely, but let's grant them that.

On another occasion, Housing workers destroyed chairs that filled three dumpsters. Now, chairs have no internal parts, except for the nuts and bolts that hold them together. One housing worker, who wishes to remain anonymous because he fears losing his job, said the chairs were in good condition, neither broken nor rickety.

DONALD BALLESTRO, a Housing administrator, said he has broken chairs that were unusable. He also said the Housing worker who considered the chairs to be in good condition was making a subjective judgment.

There is no question that destroying good equipment is a waste of money. Housing administrators seem to be avoiding the red tape of having to inventory the equipment or having it shipped to The Federal Surplus Program, where the equipment is distributed to non-profit organizations.

WE UNDERSTAND the University probably is in a sticky situation, considering the problems encountered when 325 mattresses were given away by Housing to low-income families in the area, but this should not deter administrators from possibly giving the equipment to worthy causes.

Officers deserve credit

LET'S GIVE Carbondale public safety officials credit. Although the drama played out Thursday between Illinois and University avenues didn't produce an explosive ending, it didn't bomb out either.

Investigators searching a burned-out house found what appeared to be two pipe bombs, both about 18 inches long.

After evacuations, the arrival of a detachment of Army bomb experts, and what must have been a nerve-racking trip to the Carbondale Industrial Park, the bombs were exploded and found to be duds.

THERE SHOULD BE no titting over the fact that when the bombs were detonated with other explosives, the metal pipes were found to contain only wads of circa-1933 U.S. currency.

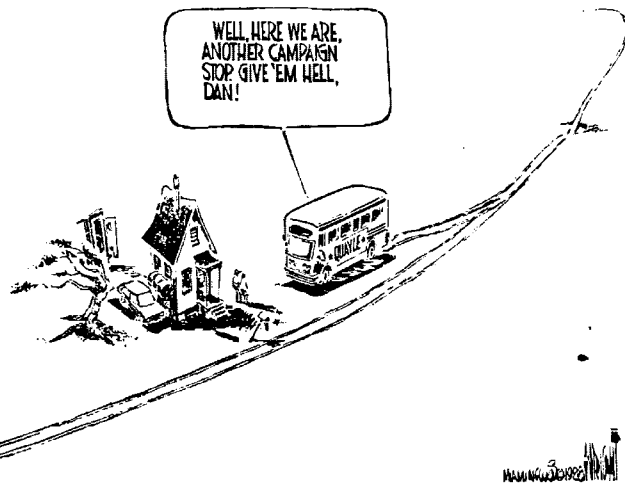

The police and firemen handled the situation well and were better safe than sorry.

Carbondale officials made the correct move by calling in outside experts to handle the potentially dangerous devices. The evacuations and traffic tie-ups created when police stopped traffic on Route 51 were minor inconveniences compared to the possible scenario of multiple injuries that might have been suffered if the bombs had been real.

TOO OFTEN the hazards of duty faced by police officers and firefighters are overshadowed by tales of police brutality and fire departments arguing over jurisdictional questions while a home burns. These are sad realities.

But, this is one instance where we are glad to support the policies and efforts of our public safety officials.

We have, and will continue to, point out instances when these officials make mistakes. This is one time when we do not have to, because these two departments responded bravely, and sanely, to a harrowing situation.

Letters

The anti-abortionists not contributing to thousands of unwanted children

This letter is in response to Julie Murphy's letter on abortion. On one hand Julie sounds like a reformed liberal, considering that she wants more government control concerning the abortion law. However, on the other hand, she announces her preference to Bush, which is interesting that he also desires heavier government control in this area.

Isn't it that the libertarian image is one of the minimal government, or does this stipulation only apply to the market place and not individual decisions? That is, we can have big government to control our personal decisions but not to control big businesses. This really strikes me funny that Bush is anti-abortion, pro-adoption, anti-social spending, less control over big business and heavy control over individual choices.

Also, if abortion is legalized, the practice will go back to the days of the burned out houses and lots of women bleeding to death. If abortions are illegal who, (maybe all the anti-abortionists) is going to be responsible to feed all those (approximately 200,000 annually) mouths? Since the anti-abortionists speak out for these "voices" who can not; then I guess they are planning on shelling out to take care of those lives.

My point is that I see a lot of anti-abortion protest; might I add that some are extremely violent in their actions. I do not see or hear of any anti-abortionist making any substantial (ie) donations of any kind. When people are close holding hands in peace they are saying that they accept one another unconditionally no matter what their personal choices. I believe it is the anti-abortionist who is averse in trying to control people so determinedly. I think they should just accept that this issue is really none of their business and thus worry about their own personal problems instead of butting into everyone else's business.

The majority of women having abortions are from lower income families and what I would like to know is who is going to provide for these children once they are alive? During the first three months of pregnancy, as it stands, it is a matter of opinion whether there is a life inside.

After that, I believe we are pretty much in agreement that there is a life inside. Therefore during those first three months, make this a matter of judgment, since people cannot agree on whether it is alive or not.

Furthermore, it is really upsetting to see someone base their vote on one aspect of a presidential candidate's platform. I feel that it is best to look at the whole picture.

A person might feel very strongly about one issue and vote a candidate into office, then find that he does not care to present a bill for higher education or funding any other social institutional spending for the less fortunate. When he does present a bill, it's for $30 billion in Star Wars. What do people think the consequences might be from Star Wars? We may not have to worry about abortion after that is put into operation.—Victor L. Aponte, Junior, psychology.

DE editorial misleading on film's censorship; manager not authority on screening of movie

This letter is in response to everything ever printed in the DE about the "banning" and "censorship" of the film "The Last Temptation of Christ"—every letter, every article, and, most especially, the editorial in the Aug. 30 edition of the paper, in which it was stated that the manager of the Varsity refused to show the film because of overwhelming public opinion.

It was that editorial which led everyone to believe that the film had been banned in Carbondale, and which prompted many people to write letters to the DE—most of them expressing their outrage. The truth, however, is that the film was never censored or banned at all. Many weeks ago, after reading that editorial, I spoke with both the manager and the assistant manager at the Varsity Theatre. Both of them told me that what appeared in the DE editorial was not true. They said, among other things, that there is no way either one of them could succumb to pressure from protesters because they have no say in what the theater shows (Kerasotes theatres in Springfield solely makes the decisions concerning which films will be shown at the Varsity).

The manager told me that the DE must have "misconstructed" what he had told them, and pointed out that none of the area papers that interviewed him on the matter printed anything saying the film had been banned. Another thing that many people do not realize is that "The Last Temptation of Christ" is a limited-run film. That is, it plays mainly in larger cities before coming to smaller areas (like Carbondale), if it ever reaches such places at all. In fact, when I talked to the manager, he told me the film was playing at only 11 or so places around the country and would probably never get the chance to be shown here.

The ultimate irony, however, was that Greg Williams, the person who started the petition, thought he had succeeded after reading about the film being banned in the DE editorial. When he later learned that this was not true, he started taking the petitions around again.

Out of all the people I talked to—the manager, the assistant manager at the Varsity, Greg Williams, and managers at other area theaters—none of them supported was printed in the DE editorial. Yes, banning the film would be censorship and would be unconstitutional, but by not checking their facts, the DE led a lot of people to believe their rights had been infringed upon, when in fact nothing happened. Allan Edwards, sophomore, cinema and photography.

Emergency personnel remove the body of Florence Rosen, 87, who died from smoke inhalation Monday morning from a fire in her home at 107 N. Springer.

Carbondale woman dies in fire

An 87-year-old Carbondale resident died in a fire caused by faulty wiring at 107 N. Springer St. at 8:45 a.m. Monday.

Florence Rosen died from smoke inhalation, Jackson County Coroner Don Ragsdale said. Mrs. Rosen's unburned body was found in the kitchen by firefighters.

Assistant Fire Chief Bob Biggs said the blaze started in the basement from an electric short in the wiring. The fire spread up the basement stairs to the kitchen and to the attic, Biggs said.

Assistant Fire Chief John Manis said the fire was reported by a passerby and neighbor who saw smoke coming from the rear of the one-story house.

Funeral services for Mrs. Rosen will be 10 a.m. today at Huffman-Harker Funeral Home, 210 W. Ork. Burial will be at Shalom Memorial Park in Palatine.

Survivors include a daughter, Sandy Minsky of Skokie.

become acquainted with each other. In fact, Waldron only has met two of the singers.

"Beth and I do a duet, but we've never met," Waldron said.

"At first I thought he didn't exist," Clark said, "but now I know he does."

"This first (cassette) was a live and learn type of thing," Wright said. "No one knows what is going to happen."

The cassette, which is being made in Philadelphia, will be distributed locally in record stores and other outlets in November or December, he said. The price will be about $7 or $8.

"The general public will decide who and what they like," he said. "Some will buy it out of curiosity."

"(The public) will think it is just a guitar... but it really has full orchestrations," Waldron said. "It will surprise people."

Waldron said he would really like to see the cassette become popular everywhere.

"I'd like to have someone come up to me and say, 'Hey, I heard your album. That was pretty neat,'" he said. "I'd also like some oig time person to record one of our songs."

Regardless of the success of the first cassette, the Wright-Waldron Project is already committed to another release.

Wright said "will take about a year to complete and it will use a lot of the same singers, plus some new ones.

Wright describes he and his partner as being a left and right hand, each needing the other in order to write lyrics.

"We each sit at a keyboard and start playing and soon we're both playing the same thing," Wright said. "It's incredible."

"We both play by ear and work the whole thing at once," Waldron said. "The finished product is the only copy."

Although their style is unique from that of others, Wright said they have no intention of changing it.

"As long as it works, don't fix it," Wright said.

The vision of the Committee for the Future was for the United States, as well as other nations, to move aggressively into space to advance technologically, Ladwig said.

Ladwig said such a movement was unpopular during this time since space was generally thought of as being connected to the military.

"The campus, as well as the nation, was in a period where they were against the fighting in Vietnam and very anti-technology," he said.

Ladwig said people thought putting money into the space program "was nothing more than a waste of money at the expense of more pressing problems."

But Ladwig defended the space program saying, in the May article, "Basically what we are trying to do is get people to look at our planet from an extraterrestrial perspective, as if they were on the outside looking in. Once you do this, you realize that all the world's problems are interrelated and that man now exists in a limited environment whose resources are almost depleted."

Ladwig's activities were interrupted in 1972 when he was drafted into the Army. But when his tour was finished, he went to Washington D.C. where he was part of the Forum for the Advancement of Study in Science and Technology.

From this program, Ladwig was able to expand into NASA.

In 1981, Ladwig was made the manager of an organization to get high school students involved with the space shuttle program by soliciting ideas for experiments to be performed during shuttle missions.

Some of the experiments on space shuttle Discovery when it went into space September 29 were those Ladwig had arranged.

Ladwig said he was "very happy" to see the shuttle program back on its feet after the two and a half year break caused by the Challenger disaster in January 1986.

"The shuttle disaster was much like getting a speeding ticket. You are always a little hesitant to get your car up to the speed limit right after you get the ticket. But once you get over that initial fear you are able to move ahead."

Ladwig said said the next president will play an important role in the future of the space program.

"We need to get away from these one-time glamour shots."

"The next president will have to help us come to a national decision on just how far the space program wants to go."

Ladwig said there has been a reluctance by the past administrations to establish a space goal for the nation.

"There is no instant gratification any more," Ladwig said. "We are past the point of just planting a flag or leaving footprints."

"The next president must realize that he won't see the fruits of his work during his term in office."

Alaskan couple pins hopes on Dukakis

Editors note: The St. Louis Post-Dispatch recently sent reporters around the country to gather interviews with ordinary voters who will help choose the next president. This is one story in a series.

By Terry Ganey
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

NOME, Alaska — When his real-estate insurance business dried up this year with the rest of Alaska's oil-based economy, Jim Stimpfle created a new role for himself: travel agent for Siberia.

He arranged two "friendship flights" between Nome and Provideniya, a Soviet city 220 miles across the Bering Sea. Now he dreams of the day when Nome will become a tourist gateway to Siberia.

Stimpfle said that glasnost, rather than anything done by President Reagan's administration, helped break the ice curtain that had separated Alaska from Siberia. So he doesn't feel obligated to vote for George Bush for president on Nov. 8.

"I'VE ALWAYS felt the Democratic Party best represents where this nation should be moving," he said. Stimpfle is married to Bernadette Yaaquk Alvanna-Stimpfle, an Inupiaq Eskimo. She also plans to vote for Democrat Michael Dukakis, but for reasons related to her heritage.

"He seems to have more of a sympathetic view to ethnic minorities," she said. "There are some minority people who do well in America. But there should be more of them, and I think Dukakis might offer more opportunities for minority people."

STIMPFFLE'S OFFICE is off the kitchen of his two-story frame home and is cluttered with remembrances of his meetings with the Soviets. He runs his businesses while caring for his two children, Megan, a pigtailed 5-year-old, and Ian, a "Terrible 2."

Right across the dirt street from their home is the new Nome Elementary School, Ms. Alvanna-Stimpfle teaches Eskimo and English.

"I like Dukakis because he is bilingual," she said. "Because he knows Spanish, he has an idea how Spanish people feel. He knows they think differently from white people or English-speaking people, whatever you want to call them. That's another reason why I think he'd be more sympathetic to minorities. When a person speaks another language, the person can think differently."

BEFORE THE federal government moved her people off, they lived 90 miles northwest of Nome on King Island, from which they fished and hunted. The Inupiaq have felt misplaced ever since they were moved into the government-built housing on Nome's East End where Ms. Alvanna-Stimpfle was born.

She was attending the University of Alaska in Fairbanks and Stimpfle was teaching a college preparation course when they met and married. Stimpfle, 40, had grown up in Washington, D.C., and in 1970 was drawn to Alaska by adventure.

"THE DEMOCRATIC Party usually pays more attention to the rights of an individual and the needs of a community," Stimpfle said. "While I believe in free enterprise and the free market, sometimes the free market doesn't take into account the needs of a community and individuals. We have been moving the last eight years under a Republican mandate. It helps business, but it doesn't always help everyone."

Living in Alaska, the couple already have many of the housing and health insurance programs that Dukakis and the Democrats support. The oil revenue that Alaska has collected is used to pay for home loans and day-care help. Because she is an Eskimo, Ms. Alvanna-Stimpfle and her children are entitled to free health care.

THEN HELP is welcomed, given Nome's prices — $1.78 for a gallon of gasoline, $5.50 for a gallon of milk and $2.87 for a loaf of bread. Nearly everyone hunts and fishes to feed their families, and the Stimpfles' freezer is filled with moose steaks, frozen salmon and caribou sausage.

"Not really," he said. "The Russians are ready to change, and a Democrat could work with them as well as a Republican."

Author for kids to speak

James Van Oosting, author of the popular children's book "Maxie's Ghost," will read selections from his writings at a dinner meeting on Tuesday.

The dinner meeting, sponsored by the Southern Illinois Reading Council, will be held at 8 p.m. in the Old Main Room of the Student Center.

Van Oosting, a faculty member in speech communications, recently returned from a sabbatical leave in the British Isles.

He frequently lectures and reads excerpts from his writings at universities around the country.

Also at the meeting, the council will present a "Celebrate Literacy" award.

Persons interested in attending only the meeting should be present by 7 p.m.

Self-employment becoming a career

By Miguel Alba
Staff Writer

With job security decreasing in today's job market, many people are looking toward self-employment as a possible career opportunity.

The Young Entrepreneur Seminars, sponsored by the Small Business Development Center, is a conference for people 30 and younger who are interested in starting their own back."

Lindberg said the majority of small businesses in Southern Illinois are owned by women from lower income households and are home based.

Some of the more successful small businesses include janitorial services, craft services, clothing alterations, and shoe shining services.

Although the chances for success are stacked against a new business, Lynberg said those chances could be improved by following a solid business plan and being willing to risk everything for the business.

The time element becomes a dilemma for some people because they try to keep working at their regular job, to support the family, while attempting to make their business succeed.

business, Lynn Lindberg, assistant director of the Small Business Development Center, said.

"This conference is for newcomers, it's a nuts and bolts approach to what you need to get started," she said.

Lindberg said the three things needed to start a business include proper financing, expertise in the chosen field, and market potential.

"Many people become discouraged when they find out the amount of work there is to be done," she said. "Of the people that come here (Small Business Development Center) 50 percent never come

But the sense of accomplishment and the freedom to be your own boss are two of the biggest incentives when it comes to owning a business, she said.

The Young Entrepreneur Seminars will be held from 8:00 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., on Sat. 22, at Davis Auditorium in Wham. The five 45-minute seminars will cover various topics that will introduce newcomers to the business world.

A $15 registration fee is required for the lunch that will be provided. To register contact Jane Evers at the office of Continuing Education, 536-7751. The registration deadline is Friday.

University flying team places high in regional competition

By Beth Clavin
Entertainment Editor

The Flying Salukis had four individual champions in the regional intercollegiate flying team competitions held at the University of Illinois Oct. 14 and 15.

The Salukis competed extremely well, Ted Hupp, faculty member in aviation, said.

The team competed against seven colleges in the event. The top two or three colleges in each of the 12 regions will compete at the national competition in North Dakota.

SIU-C has been the national champion six times within the last 12 years.

Dave Kempe placed first in the message drop and Dave Carlton placed first in pre-flight. Chris Shaw and Scott Bucek placed first in the team navigation route and tied for first in the simulator event.

Scott Shaw, who placed sixth in both computer accuracy and aircraft recognition, received the Top Male Pilot award, and Hupp received the Coach of the Year award.

Also placing from SIU-C were: Rob Kaczor, ninth in the message drop; Jim Van Horn, eighth in short field landings and power-off landings; Mike McDonald, sixth in power-off landings; Wally Pretkelis, eighth in computer accuracy; Dave Bertolotti, seventh in aircraft recognition; and Dave Parsons, ninth in pre-flight. Hupp said the team is looking forward to competing in the nationals in May.

"North Dakota is presently the national champions," he said, "and we're looking to unseat them."

Culture pushes people to diet, counselor says

According to recent surveys, about 30 percent of women between the ages of 19 and 30 diet at least once a month and about 50 to 80 percent of teenage girls and young women would like to lose weight.

Segments of the culture seem obsessed with slimness, which is currently identified with social and professional success.

Magazine articles and ads, fashion models, television and movie stars, and many other segments reinforce the image and promise of the trim athletic figure.

This message is so pervasive and compelling that dieting, weight control and fitness have become national obsessions. It becomes easy to understand how this obsession can generate an epidemic of eating disorders among young people, many of whom are college students.

"Often times I am faced with a young woman desiring to lose weight when it seems obvious that her weight is normal," Leslie Anderson, nutrition counselor at the Wellness Center, said. "So many people don't seem clear about why they want to diet — for reasons of health or beauty or just because it's the thing to do."

Anderson believes that chronic dieting in itself could be considered an eating disorder like anorexia and bulimia and can lead to binging and purging behaviors.

To determine how students think about eating and dieting and to see if they are at risk for an eating disorder, students should see if those statements are true for them.

■ A day rarely passes that they don't worry about how much they eat.

■ They are embarrassed to be seen in a bathing suit.

■ There are many foods they always feel guilty about eating.

■ Most attractive people they see are thinner than they are.

■ They usually begin the day with a vow to diet.

■ Their thighs are too fat.

■ They feel uncomfortable eating certain foods in front of other people.

■ They get nervous if people watch them from behind.

■ After eating they think of ways to burn up the calories.

■ They hate seeing themselves in a mirror.

■ They feel bad about themselves if they don't exercise every day.

■ They find their naked body repulsive.

■ If they eat too much they sometimes vomit or take laxatives.

■ Their worst problem is the appearance of their body.

According to American Health magazine, if two to four of the questions are true for students, they have no problem with weight or food. If five to eight of the statements are true, students could be overly concerned with their weight. If more than nine are true, students could be developing an eating disorder and might consider professional help.

If students suspect that a friend, family member, or themselves suffer from an eating disorder, health professionals and support groups can provide essential help.

The Wellness Center, Counseling Center and Women's Services provide individual counseling and group counseling. The Health Advocate Program's "Dieter's Dilemma" is available to residence hall groups. Call the Wellness Center at 536-4441 or watch the DE for more information.

To Your Health is produced in conjunction with the Wellness Center

Corps seeking recruits

By Loria Roberson
Staff Writer

The Peace Corps fall recruitment campaign kicks off today at the Student Center with a film and a discussion session with former volunteers and a Peace Corps representative.

Mark O'Keefe, Peace Corps recruiter in the College of Agriculture, said two sessions will be held in the Ohio Room for interested students, at noon and 7 o'clock tonight.

O'Keefe said the film will feature past and present Peace Corps activities, and return volunteers from Nepal, Philippines, Africa and Latin America will share their Peace Corps experiences at the night session.

The Peace Corps is interested in juniors and seniors, whose studies range from agriculture and liberal arts to health and engineering, for jobs in international development, O'Keefe said.

"We're looking for at least another 25 new volunteers during the next year," he said. "The Peace Corps is looking for volunteers with college degrees or at least two years of professional work experience."

For the past year, O'Keefe said, SIU-C ranked 23rd among the university recruiting offices nationwide.

Steve Rypkema, Peace Corps recruiter from Chicago and SIU-C alumnus, said the Peace Corps is ideal for those who have graduated but are not ready for a 9-to-5 job.

"The reasons for joining Peace Corps are unlimited," Rypkema said. "It offers international experience by allowing people to live and work overseas in a developing country, it offers professional experience in a field of study and it's an opportunity to travel. People also get a chance to see the U.S. from a different perspective."

The Peace Corps is a two-year term and volunteers go through an extensive two-to-three-month training period involving language training, cross-cultural orientation and health and technical management.

Rypkema, who was a forestry volunteer in the Philippines, said applicants can state a preference for where they would like to be stationed, but the decision ultimately is based on which countries make requests for volunteers.

Some of the benefits offered by Peace Corps are a monthly paycheck to cover living expenses, free medical and dental coverage, 48 days of paid vacation and $4,800 readjustment allowance for completion of assignment, O'Keefe said.

Rypkema said the readjustment allowance is the $200 set aside by the government for every month a volunteer participates in the Peace Corps. When their term is over, volunteers then have that money waiting for them in the States, he said.

Rypkema also said a lot of student loans are deferrable when they enter the Peace Corps.

O'Keefe said the Peace Corps pays as much as 70 percent of recruits' National Student Loans.

Schumacher leads women's cross country at Holy Cross

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

The women's cross country team's No. 1 runner, Jane Schumacher, came through with another quality performance Saturday at the Holy Cross Invitational. She finished 11th overall, and led the Salukis' team effort with a time of 18:51.

Freshman Amie Padgett also turned in a solid performance setting a personal best time for the 3.1 mile race in 20:22.

"That was the toughest course we've run all year," DeNoon said. "It was very demanding, but the team performed very well. I think the athletes were individually at their best."

But the Salukis did not fare well as a team. They finished only eighth overall in the 10-team meet.

"The competition had more bodies to work with," DeNoon said. "It seems all year we have had problems with injuries or sickness. It has created a problem where we are lacking the right people to run with, all healthy and injury-free at the same time."

DeNoon said that the loss of three scholarship athletes, Lisa Judasack, Lisa Schmelling and Kelly Flynn, also hurt the team's performance this year.

"Michele (Sciano) has also been sick with bronchitis this year and that has hurt us," DeNoon said.

Sciano again felt the wrath of misfortune this weekend, as she fell down at the 1.5 mile mark. However, she got up and finished the race, crossing the finish line with blood seeping down both legs.

DeNoon said the injury was worse than it looked, as Sciano had only punctured the skin on both knees by falling into cinders which covered the track. He still commended her for finishing.

"Michele needs a couple of good weeks of training to get her back to the level of racing she is capable of," DeNoon said. "Hopefully we can accomplish some of that in the next few days."

The Salukis do not have a meet this weekend.

Women's golf ends season on sour note

By John Weiblay
Staff Writer

The women's golf team ended its season at the Lady Kat Invitational in Lexington, Ky., with much of the same fashion it used throughout the fall.

The 16th-place finish in a field of 19 teams could not be excused as bad breaks, Coach Diane Daugherty said.

"We finished the season on the same note as we've been playing (this fall)," Daugherty said. "I think we'll have to chalk this season up to experience."

The low-scorer for the Salukis was Lisa Meritt with scores of 85, 81, and 76 for a three-round total of 245 strokes.

Julie Shumaker had a three-round score of 258, Peggy Ellsworth a 261, Anne Childress a 263 and Gina Giacone a 269.

The Salukis' overall team total was 1,021 strokes.

Kentucky was first with 927 strokes overall. Auburn and Alabama tied for second at 930 strokes each.

"Lisa (Meritt) has been our rock this season, she's been our low-scorer," Daugherty said. "It's just that the others haven't pulled their weight."

play. The remaining doubles matches were canceled because of rain, and Boardman and Edwards ended the tournament with a 0-1 record.

"We haven't played doubles consistently for a couple of weeks," Auld said. "I'm not disappointed — it's just that I know we're capable of doing better."

Edwards finished second in the No. 4 flight, defeating players from three schools before losing to Gisele Baudouin of Drake, 6-0, 3-6, 2-6.

"The first match was a good one for Lori to win," Auld said. "She beat (Jamie Knight, Illinois State) earlier this season in three sets. This time it only took her two."

Edwards defeated Knight 6-1, 6-0 last weekend. She also defeated Sue Hofer of Western Illinois, 6-2, 6-0. Edwards lost to Hofer earlier this season.

"Lori just ran out of gas by the time she met Gisele," Auld said. "She had an excellent tournament, and she's only a freshman."

"She was on medication this weekend for a sinus problem which made her real tired."

Dana Cherebetiu finished the tournament with a 1-1 record. She was defeated in the No. 2 consolation flight by Tisha Vail of Drake, 1-6, 6-4, 0-6.

In addition to SIU-C, Auld included Drake and Southwest Missouri among those to watch for in the championships of next spring's conference championships.

shutout of Louisville. Hamilton, a native of Perth, Australia, scored the Salukis' first goal.

A time-honored field hockey tradition — tapping a pumpkin with sticks in a pregame ceremony — came through for the Salukis this weekend.

After the players charmed their playing equipment with the pumpkin's good luck, Coach Julee Illner's team won three of four games at Stehr Field to put the season record at 6 wins, 10 losses.

"The front line has finally started putting some things together," Illner said.

By attacking the goal from both the right and left sides of the field, the Salukis had no difficulty in executing their offense and defeating Louisville 2-0 and Bellarmine 3-0 on Sunday.

The offense, which averaged just 1.25 goals per game going into the homestand, scored a total eight goals in four games.

The scoring was sparked by junior Jodie Hamilton, a transfer student from Perth, Australia, who became eligible to play only a week ago.

"I've waited so long, I'm excited just to play," said Hamilton, who scored the first goal in Sunday's victory over Louisville. "It's a good feeling to get the first goal. It lifts everybody up."

Hamilton also had a goal that gave the Salukis a 1-0 victory over Eastern Kentucky on Saturday, breaking a four-game losing streak. The score, at 27:49 of the second half, came from outside the striking circle and bounced off goalie Tracy Oke.

The only loss of the weekend was Friday in a 3-2 decision that went to Southwest Missouri. Cindy Oppermann who leads the team with nine goals this season, scored both points.

"We should've won that one Friday," Oppermann said. "We saw much improvement in the team's performance."

"The passing is a lot better," Oppermann said. "We're getting off more shots. We're crossing fields a lot and that opens it up that much more."

The Salukis had a total of 81 shots in the two games Sunday.

Even though the Salukis were getting plenty of chances at the goal, Illner said the team should have scored more times off those opportunities.

"But we just don't have the finesse to finish someone off in there," said Illner, disappointed that play was getting rough near the goal. "It looks like we're trying to hoe our garden in there."

"The Toughest Job You'll Ever Love"

Fund-raiser to tap former contributors

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

Wayne Williams is starting to see what his job entails as he heads into his third week of work as the newly-appointed athletic fund-raiser.

Williams said his main area of emphasis will involve contacting contributors who have failed to give in recent years.

"We've gone back as far as 1984 and are getting together a list of names of those who haven't contributed in a while," Williams said. "For some reason a lot of people stopped contributing at this time."

A problem did exist in Saluki

Athletics at the time; a sports scandal rocked the men's basketball program and changes were made throughout the athletic department.

"They (University) were going through some changes in A.D. and coaching at the time," Williams said. "I think many of the contributors were unsure what was happening, and where the program was headed."

Williams said his next step will be to contact these people to see why they aren't contributing and if they plan to in the near future.

Williams, who took over the job on Oct. 3, worked in a similar capacity at the University of Illinois. He said the Saluki fund-raising effort is headed in the right direction, and Athletics Director Jim Hart will have little trouble exceeding his $200,000 goal for fiscal year 1989.

"I think Hart's goal of $200,000 will be easily met," Williams said. "Even though I am getting differing contribution totals at this time from the Hart First Fifty Campaign."

"The figures I have and the figures I have seen of Hart's campaign are contradicting each other. I saw Hart in the NCAA News holding up $88,000 dollars in contributions. My most recent figures (contributions through Sept. 30) show only $69,000 having actually been collected so far."

But Williams attributes this difference in contributions to those gifts which are still outstanding.

"I think the discrepancy lies in the fact that many of the contributions have not been sent in or collected yet."

"Right at the moment I can't tell what money is going where," Williams said. "There are so many different funds available to contributors, it will take me a while to figure out where the money is going, and who is actually contributing at what time."

Optimism abounds in Herrin's camp

By David Gallianetti

The men's basketball team has had only two winning seasons in the past 10 years. Head coach Rich Herrin is hoping three is this year's magic number.

"I am very optimistic and I know we have a better team talent-wise than last year's," said Herrin, who is entering his fourth season as the Salukis' coach.

The Salukis were 12-16 last year.

"This year is a step in the right direction. We would surely like to be over .500, and that has to be one of the things we are shooting for."

Along with returning starters senior Kai Nurnberger, senior Randy House and sophomore Rick Shipley, the Salukis boast the addition of five potential starters to their ranks.

Forward Jerry Jones, guard Freddie McSwain and center Darin Parker all enter as college transfers. Center Tony Harvey and guard Kelvan Lawrence come to the Salukis fresh out of high school.

High hopes ride on McSwain, especially with the loss of standout Steve Middleton.

"We considered him to be our top guard prospect from day 1," Herrin said. "I am really looking forward to coaching Freddie. He is a leader to a vocal way."

At 6-8, Jones, who will be eligible for play on Dec. 17 after transferring from Texas-going to take a lot of work on his part," Herrin said.

As for the starting roles, Herrin said there are a number of players that will be vying for each position in his eyes.

Herrin said McSwain, Lawrence, Nurnberger and sophomore Sterling Mahan will all be gunning for the two guard spots.

Shipley, House and sophomore Erik Griffin all will compete for a forward spot, Herrin said.

Harvey Parker, sophomore David Bush, Jones, Shipley and senior Todd Krueger will go for the power forward or center spots, Herrin said.

"(The competitiveness) will make us a better basketball team," Herrin said. "We will have to compete every practice to get playing time. We have not had that luxury in the past."

"We will have a three-guard offense to a certain degree. I like to have three guards out there who can play."

On defense, which proved to be a major stumbling block last season, Herrin said the Salukis should see great improvement.

"I think we will trap more, not strictly as a zone but in a man-to-man set. You have to have tremendous athletes to do this, and it's tough to guard the goal when you're stretched out further."

"We can do it when we have Harvey or Bush out there guarding the goal."

"I think we will have a lot better rebounders in Jones and McSwain," Herrin said.

Gateway presents Hamke with weekly offensive honor

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

Saluki halfback Chuck Hamke has been selected Offensive Player of the Week by Gateway officials.

Hamke said the award comes as a complete surprise, considering his performance in last week's game.

"It's kind of hard to believe that I got it when I didn't score a touchdown and wasn't even over 100 yards rushing."

In the Salukis' 10-7 victory over Indiana State, Hamke piled up 95 yards, 51 coming from a third-quarter drive.

"I had three touchdowns and over 100 yards rushing (against Arkansas State). I figured if I had a chance to get it it would be that week, but when I didn't, I figured I wouldn't get it at all. I really don't know how that works."

Hamke said since it was the first time he had received the honor, he wasn't exactly sure how to deal with it.

"I don't know how I'm going to approach it. I suppose I'll just say thank you, take a bow and just go on. I still plan on waking up the same way every morning."

Hamke is the second Saluki to receive the offensive award. Quarterback Fred Gibson was selected after the first week of play.

Hamke, a walk-on during his sophomore year, is among the rushing leaders in the Gateway.

Hamke said despite the fact

that he didn't feel he deserved the honor for Saturday's performance, he was proud of getting it.

Women's tennis coach pleased with squad's performance at tournament

By Megan Hauck

The women's tennis team concluded its fall season at the Gateway Fall Invitational at St. Louis, winning three championship titles and respect from conference foes.

Michele Jeffrey won the No. 3 flight, defeating Kim Foru of Drake, 6-3, 0-6, 7-5.

"Missy got too forceful and tried too many things with the ball in the second set," Coach Judy Auld said. "She went back to playing her game in the third set and pulled it out."

Jeffrey also defeated Diane Nale of Bradley, 7-5, 6-2 and Jill Jackard of Wichita, 7-5, 6-2.

Michelle Toye defeated Cathy Farrell of Bradley, 6-1, 6-2 for the championship of the

No. 5 flight.

Toye, who played one flight higher than she usually plays, increased her record to 7-1 this season.

The No. 2 doubles team of Cherebetiu and Jeffrey also proved to be the best in the Gateway Conference, winning the No. 2 flight championship and remaining undefeated for the season.

Beth Boardman won the No. 1 consolation flight after losing to Kathy Gates-Washington of Western Illinois, 6-1, 6-0. Boardman and Lori Edwards, the freshman Saluki standout from Texas, lost to Gates-Washington and Tawanna Pratt, Western Illinois, 1-6, 2-6, in the first round of doubles
