Stocks rebound after frantic trading

NEW YORK (UPI) -- The stock market, undaunted by the Friday the 13th collapse, bounced back sharply in a frantic session Monday and allayed fears of a recurrence of the October 1987 crash.

In the fourth-heaviest trading day on record, the widely followed Dow Jones industrial average, an index of 30 blue chip stocks, rebounded to close up 88.12 at 2,657.38 after a breathtaking 190.58-point plunge Friday that represented a 6.9 percent loss.

Monday's gain in the Dow, a 3.3 percent jump, was the largest since a 91.51-point surge on Oct. 29, 1987 in the aftermath of the crash.

Investors, calmed by the relative strength of the economy and pledges that regulators would intervene to avert a market disaster, were lured back into the market by bargain prices in blue chip stocks, analysts said.

But stock prices finished mixed as the broader market issues recovered somewhat from Friday's selling spree but still closed lower.

Several key airline issues took heavy hits.

With the broader market lagging the Dow, declines led advances by 953 to 755 among the 1,996 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. The price of an average NYSE common share was up 81 cents and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index jumped 9.24 to 342.86.

"The performance was better than the majority of people expected to hear," said Ralph Bloch, a market analyst with Raymond, James & Associates in St. Petersburg, Fla.

After the Dow buckled Friday, the Federal Reserve Bank pledged to pump money into the banking system to help stabilize securities markets and avoid a recurrence of "Black Monday," when the Dow plummeted a record 508 points on Oct. 19, 1987.

NYSE Chairman John Phelan told a news briefing after the close of trading that Friday's drop was a "very sharp squall."

Local brokers blame computers for decline

By Tony Mancuso
Staff Writer

Friday's stock market plunge and Monday's subsequent rise caused mixed reactions from local stock brokers.

Geoff Partlow, vice president of D.R. Hancock Co., Inc. in Carbondale, reported that Walmart, GTE and CIPS all showed improvement after Friday, when Walmart dropped significantly and the latter two decreased only slightly.

"I was quite worried coming to work Monday but when the market only dropped 60 points in the early going I took heart, and realized we should begin buying," Partlow said.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed down 190.58 points Friday but rebounded yesterday, after roller-coaster trading in the morning, to close up 88.12 at 2657.38.

More than 416 million shares changed hands at the New York Stock Exchange — the fourth heaviest volume in history — as local stocks climbed along with the trend.

Partlow said he believed Friday's decrease was chiefly caused by a computer panic similar to the one in 1987.

"Most of the media say this (decline) had to do with economy, takeover bids, interest rate, or politics. That's a lot of bunk," Partlow said. "On any given day, a change in the market can be attributed to one or more of those causes but in this case it was simply a matter of computer programming."

Partlow said the major investors, which control 80 to 90 percent of daily trading volume, have programmed their computers to dump stock when a significant disparity occurs between cash markets and futures markets.

"There was no good reason for this crisis. Just like 1987, computers noticed a disparity and began to dump stocks without any human input. There were not enough buyers, and the price per share dropped even more, having a synergistic effect on the system which caused even more dumping," Partlow said.

Mike Smithhart, a broker from Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. in Carbondale, said he believed the dramatic decline in

Head-injured teens missing from clinic

By Douglas Powell
Staff Writer

Two Carbondale teens, both recovering from major head injuries, were listed by Carbondale Police as missing Monday after walking out of a Carbondale head injury rehabilitation clinic, a Center for Comprehensive Services spokesperson said.

Michelle Wyma, 16, of Alto, Mich., and Mark Moore, 17, of Grand Rapids, Mich., left the University House living center, 610 S. University Ave., Saturday evening, Kathleen Fralish, center president, said.

Both teens were living at the center while recovering from injuries they sustained in separate car accidents, Fralish said, adding that both have difficulties in the judgement of situations, problem solving and orientation.

Debra McMorrow, clinical director of the center, said the teens are dangerous to themselves.

McMorrow said when the two came to the center they were not capable of operating properly in the community and were still being rehabilitated when they left Saturday.

The Center for Comprehensive Services in Carbondale is a specialized residential rehabilitation program designed to help those who have suffered traumatic head injuries return to a functional and productive life in society, according to a center press release.

Mark Moore

McMorrow said it has not been determined if the teens have left Carbondale, but Moore apparently contacted relatives in Des Moines, Iowa, late Saturday night and indicated that he and "a friend" might be headed there.

Fralish said police in the Des Moines, Iowa, and Grand Rapids areas have been notified to be on alert.

Moore is a white male, 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighing 165 pounds, with dark brown hair and brown eyes. He has a three-inch scar on his right forearm and walks with a limp, according to the press

Second man charged in local murder

By Douglas Powell
Staff Writer

Carbondale police have arrested and charged a second man with first degree murder in connection with the Oct. 14 shooting death of Jason A. Jackson, a University student, Lt. Larry Hill, detective commander of the Carbondale Police Department, said.

"This is a complicated case and is not just a simple armed robbery where someone gets killed," Hill said. "This case has mushroomed into a conspiracy with several people involved."

Police arrested Stanley E. Algee, 36, of Carbondale, around 10 a.m. Oct. 16 on the east end of Oak Street at an undisclosed residence, police said. Algee is an alleged co-conspirator in the shooting death of Jackson, but police would not say how Algee was identified.

Police arrested Dennis L. Harris, 23, of 509 E. Birch St., Sunday and charged him with first degree murder, armed robbery and armed violence after being identified as the person who robbed four employees of Jeremiah's restaurant and fatally shooting Jackson.

In the early morning hours of Oct. 14, Jackson and three other employees of Jeremiah's restaurant, 201 N. Washington, were walking across a parking lot southeast of the restaurant when they were confronted by a black male wielding a small steel revolver who demanded money, police said.

Jackson and the co-workers were carrying receipts intended for a bank deposit when they were confronted by the subject.

The employees threw the bank bag on the ground. The gunman

City to vote on Halloween carnival

By Lisa Miller
Staff writer

Plans for the Halloween Carnival could come to a standstill if the Carbondale City Council denies the Chamber of Commerce a permit to use the land on New Era Road for the event.

Although the council gave tentative approval to the chamber's request for a permit at the last meeting, a formal vote will be taken tonight to decide the carnival's fate.

City Manager Steve Hoffner said new information has surfaced that may change the council's original decision. The Jackson County Sheriff William Kilquist said neither he nor his department has been notified of the carnival.

Since the carnival is outside the Carbondale city limits, the sheriff's department is responsible for all law enforcement problems that may occur on the carnival site, a report from the city council said.

A press release from the chamber stated that "normal patrol by the Jackson County sheriff and the city police will adequately provide the required police protection.

Senate campaign to outlaw desecration of the U.S. flag

WASHINGTON (UPI)— Senate conservationists launched their campaign Monday for a constitutional amendment to outlaw desecration of the U.S. flag and ran into a barrage of opposition from liberals who charged it was partisan, political ploy by President Bush. The proposed amendment was denounced as a desecration of the Constitution, an attempt to censor speech and an attack on the First Amendment that would not protect the flag and lead to a "hodge podge" of conflicting state laws. Supporters of the amendment said that only a constitutional amendment could assure that desecration of the flag would be outlawed.

World markets still down, U.S. slightly up

(UPI)— Asian and European markets took a tumble Monday after last week's selling spree on Wall Street, but the domino scenario of October 1987 did not repeat itself as authorities moved to restrict damage and investors took heart from the tentative U.S. recovery. Stock prices fell sharply on the Tokyo, Hong Kong, New Zealand, Australian and Philippine exchanges as they came under the delayed ripple effect of Friday's 190-point drop in the Dow Jones industrial average. The pattern of slumping prices continued on European exchanges. But the financial damage was limited compared with Oct. 19, 1987.

Bush to cancel $16 billion in 'sequestration'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush was expected to sign an order Monday cancelling $16.1 billion in federal spending because Congress failed to meet a self-imposed deadline for reducing the budget deficit. Congressional leaders played down the initial impact of the automatic, across-the-board spending cuts, called "sequestration," saying drastic personnel or program reductions would not occur for weeks, giving lawmakers time to reverse the reduced spending. "The major impacts will not be felt until 30 or even 60 days down the line," Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser, D-Tenn., said.

Saudi diplomat loses legs in car bombing

ANKARA, Turkey (UPI) — A Bomb planted in the car of a Saudi Arabian diplomat exploded Monday, hurling the diplomat from his vehicle and leaving him hospitalized in critical condition with the loss of both legs. Police said it was unclear if the bomb was detonated by a timing device or by remote control. No one has yet claimed responsibility. Gulf-based diplomats said a pro-Iranian group may be responsible. On Sept. 25, two pro-Iranian groups in Lebanon threatened to attack U.S., Saudi and Kuwaiti interests in retaliation for the execution in Saudi Arabia of Arabia of 16 Kuwaitis convicted of terrorism.

Shuttle, nuclear probe given OK for liftoff

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — An appeals court Monday dismissed a last-ditch bid by environmentalists to stop Tuesday's launch of the shuttle Atlantis, setting the stage for a long-awaited flight to fire the nuclear-powered Galileo probe to Jupiter. Eight anti-nuclear activists were arrested Monday in a symbolic protest at the Kennedy Space Center, and with beefed-up security teams on guard against more serious infiltration attempts, Atlantis's countdown ticked smoothly toward blastoff at 12:57 p.m. EDT Tuesday, five days late because of work to replace a faulty main engine computer.

Coal miners rally to revitalize labor movement in local area

WEST FRANKFORT (UPI) — A United Mine Workers official termed Sunday's spirited rally of about 1,000 coal miners and supporters as a rebirth and rekindling of the labor movement in Southern Illinois. "It's time for the labor movement in Southern Illinois to take a step, but it's not backward," said Jerry Jones, president of UMW District 12, which represents Illinois miners. "The step we've got to take is to the left. If it means being a little more militant, we're going to be a little more militant," Jones said to a chorus of cheers. "We're going to be heard in the workplace. We're going to be heard in the community."

Arena's job to schedule money-making concerts

By Carrie Pomeroy
Entertainment Editor

The SIU Arena tries to cater to the community's tastes, but its main job is presenting mainstream acts that can break even financially, not limited-appeal, college-oriented acts, Gary Drake, director of the Arena, said.

Drake said the Arena receives no state or University funding, unlike the Student Programming Council Consorts, which puts together shows for Shryock Auditorium. He said the Arena must generate funds to pay for promotion, security, stage setup and clean-up out of concert profits.

"I don't care if a group sells out.

The whole point is, can you break even?" Drake said.

Drake said he determines whether a group is financially feasible by calculating the costs of producing a show, which can run as high as $25,000, and adding the costs to the artist's pre-determined take of ticket revenues. He then divides this figure by the ticket price to determine how many tickets need to be sold to break even.

Drake said he decides whether or not a group could break even in Carbondale using several sources of information.

On the national level, he consults several trade magazines such as Pollstar and Billboard to see how bands are selling in other markets. He said he interprets this information to fit the Arena's market.

"The Carbondale market is such that if a band is selling 7,000 in Chicago, we'll sell 3,000," Drake said, adding, "How many people do you think live within 50 miles of the Arena?"

Drake also consults with a student advisory board made up of two appointees from the Undergraduate Student Government, one from the Graduate and Professional Student Council and one from the Student Programming Council.

"Those people were to represent the student body and that's not always the case. You get out of the board what you bring to the board," Drake said.

Drake said he also depends on polls taken in the Student Center and at every concert to gauge the demographics and preferences of the Arena audience. But he said he doubts the polls' reliability and applicability.

"(The surveys) are all run by students. Students design those surveys and give them," he said.

He said past survey results have been inconsistent. He said Def Leppard was rated No. 2 in a student poll, yet the band filled only half of the Arena's 10,000 seats when it played there in October 1987. REM, another top-rated act, filled only 4,000 seats, he said.

Drake said students do not make up the Arena's primary audience, which makes it financially impractical to cater to them. In a survey of Arena concertgoers over a 4-year period, Drake said only 20 percent of those attending concerts were SIU students.

"That tells me students aren't our market," Drake said.

Drake said he books heavy metal bands because they appeal heavily to both college students and high school students.

Drake said because of the poor box office showings of such acts as REM and John Mellencamp, booking agents have stereotyped Carbondale as "a heavy metal town."

Three family members arrested at football game

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

The Denkowicz family of Chicago came away from Parents' Weekend '89 with more than memories when three of four family members were arrested after Saturday's football game.

Michael Denkowicz, 18, of Steagal Hall and a member of the University's Pi Kappa Alpha, was charged with disorderly conduct.

Bob Harris, director of University Police, said Michael had paid a $500 fine last year in conjunction with an auto burglary charge.

Michael's mother, Judith, 51, was charged with aggravated battery and Michael's father, Robert, 53, was charged with disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

All three Denkowiczes also were charged with obstructing a peace officer.

Bob Harris, director of University Police, said a Saluki lieutenant was investigating an older woman's complaint that she had been hit by a cardboard airplane when he observed Michael throwing a similar-type of airplane.

Although the lieutenant didn't observe Michael hit anyone, Harris said it is a matter of policy to stop people from throwing objects.

The Saluki lieutenant asked Michael to present identification, at which point Robert intervened, refusing to allow his son to be identified.

"He (Robert) was cursing and, at one point, grabbed the officer by the throat and threatened to throw him over the back of the bleachers," Harris said.

Harris said had he initially identified himself, Michael probably would have been issued a warning and a letter, which probably would have prompted three to six months probation, would have been sent to Student Life.

Harris said after the game, the officers followed the family out of the stadium, where the officers again attempted to identify Michael.

Harris said Judith searched and clawed at Lt. Bob Wingo while Robert attempted to pull Michael away. After refusing to identify themselves, they were taken to the police station to be charged.

Michael and Judith were released on their own recognizances, while Robert was released on a $100 bond to appear in court at a later date.

In other non-related incidents, seven University students were arrested at Saturday's tailgate for underage possession of alcohol.

Story of young life has very sad ending

DEATH IS never easy. But when a young life is taken for no apparent reason, the hurt and disgust is somehow magnified.

Jason Jackson, 21, a student at the University, was shot twice in the chest and killed after he and three other employees of Jeremiah's restaurant and lounge were robbed of the bank deposit they carried early Sunday morning.

The group was confronted by a man, carrying a small revolver, in the parking lot southeast of the restaurant. After the gunman confiscated the bank receipts, and fired one shot without hitting anyone, he fled. Jackson followed the gunman and was shot twice.

THE STORY line is typical: A young man trying to do what is right, is killed for money. However, it is something that is not suppose to happen in a small Southern Illinois town, and to such a young and inspiring person. A young man who was described by many as having a "zeal for life" is taken from those who loved him, and from that which he loved. No where in this senseless crime can justice be found except that Jackson perhaps died the way he would have wanted to: a hero.

Jackson was also depicted as a lover of nature. He had a garden in his front yard and built a bird feeder for his backyard. Both which he used to nurture life. That is why this murder, or any for that matter, is so unfair. Jackson obviously had faith in life and used his own to promote other forms. It is a sad ending to a caring person.

WE CANNOT begin to suggest why this robber was committing the crime, or why he killed Jackson. In this unfair world in which we live, many horrible things take place and we do not always know why they happen. However, finding solace in what a wonderful person Jackson was may one way to ease the pain of losing him.

His roommate, Heidi Carr, said "He was more alive than any of us. He always said 'I feel a sense of togetherness.' He felt that togetherness was important." Perhaps those who knew and loved him can join together, keeping their pleasant memories of Jackson alive.

We cannot express enough sorrow to those who lost Jason Jackson. The time that will never be regained is heartbreaking. But now is the time to keep your loved one close to the heart and remember him in his most favorable form — remember him alive.

Death of friend is unjustifiable

I have witnessed and experienced many aspects of life. But even in my most rational thoughts, I still remain unable to explain the underlying reasons of death. More importantly, meaningless death.

Why? The perpetual question we will all ask. Why was Jason Jackson, in cold blood, killed under the moonlight of an early Saturday morning?

We all have a hidden destiny, whether it's realized or not. A destiny, that will someday inevitably be fulfilled.

What was yours? To murder our friend? What an admirable destiny. Murder, plain murder.

Whatever your reasons for robbing Jeremiah's; drugs, hungry children, or lack of intelligence. I hope you, regardless of being caught or not, take a few minutes and think (if you're capable) of the pain you created for us.

Think of his parents, who brought a beautiful, innocent child into this pathetic world, only to be gunned down 21 years later for a nights take at a restaurant.

Think of his friends and all the memories they have of Jason. The laughter, the joy, the bonding moments between friends, that you obviously have never felt.

Finally, think of the life that will never happen, the life Jason will never know. Love, marriage, children and a natural death.

You altered history; Jason's history, all by your pathetic self. This should be a proud and triumphant moment in your life, one you should tell your own children about someday.

I truly hope, that indeed there is a heaven and a hell and someday Jason will look down and watch you enter the gates of hell and forever burn by the hand of Lucifer.

Personally, I hope you catch aids, pall I hope that someday an unknown stranger causes you the pain you caused us.

Ironic it seems, but even more confusing, that someone with such zeal for life killed at the hands of one who has no respect for the miracle of life. — Michael Peterka, senior, finance.

USG upholds its stand on Halloween, encourage students to relate views

In response to the letter to the editor by Osbaldo Gonzalez in the Oct. 5 Daily Egyptian, we would like to take the opportunity to address and clarify some of the inaccuracies of Mr. Gonzalez's letter.

Mr. Gonzalez stated incorrectly that Rinella Field, the "beautiful grassy field that overlooks the Student Recreation Center and Brush Towers" named after long time Director of Housing, Sam Rinella, is to be converted to a parking lot.

We would like to assure the SIU students that this field has not been considered as a possibility for relieving the parking problem at SIU.

Lots that have been discussed and approved by the USG are a new addition to the lot behind the Recreation Center and a new addition to Lot 29 on the land occupied by Stehr Field.

Mr. Gonzalez also seemed rather agitated by the Carbondale Halloween issue. Yes, the USG supports the necessary decision to eliminate the Halloween Street Party, and with good reason.

Maybe as a freshman, Mr. Gonzalez has not had the opportunity to witness the violence and recklessness that Halloween has become.

The DE does a good job of relating all of the arrests that occur during the celebration, but these statistics do not include the injuries and vandalism that occur in campus residence halls.

These incidents have also risen each year. Halloween in Carbondale has clearly gotten out of hand.

Mr. Gonzalez, as a freshman in news-editorial, the article that appeared in the DE on Oct. 3 was just that — an article.

Nowhere in its content did it mention that Tim Hildebrand, USG president, or the USG "enjoyed being accomplices to this action (the elimination of Halloween and subsequent information campaign in Illinois) or excited about telling the state."

Mr. Gonzalez exercised his editorial opinion by making this decision for his readers.

In reality, the USG is doing its job in providing accurate information for potential Halloween parties throughout the state. This information is true, the party is over.

Mr. Gonzalez also seemed upset about the Halloween Carnival that the Carbondale is holding as an alternative to the Halloween Party.

Notice, Mr. Gonzalez, that we said "Carbondale is holding." Halloween has never been an SIU event. It is a city of Carbondale event that SIU students participated in.

As a result, SIU has offered to help control the event in recent years by allocating funds for off-strip entertainment and food concessions.

SIU also contributed to the Halloween Safety Campaign. Unfortunately, all efforts to control the event have failed, so President Guyon has asked that SIU withdraw all support and that the city of Carbondale take action to end the party.

The city of Carbondale is holding what Mr. Gonzalez has dubbed the "Bozo the Clown and Bugs Bunny" event. USG is not a part of this, but it is a good idea and we wish the City of Carbondale our best.

The last point that we would like to make is that while the Graduate and Professional Student Council supports the elimination of SIU's football team, the USG has recently reaffirmed its stance that football is to remain as a part of SIU.

If the USG has anything to say about the issue (we like to think that we do) football will be an important part of campus life for a very long time.

Yes, Mr. Gonzalez, your Resident Assistant and your Student Government are here to help you. We can not help you, however, unless we know your views.

Therefore, we invite you or any other SIU student to visit our office on the 3rd floor of the Student Center. Let us know what you think, or better yet, get involved.

SIU is a fine institution that does not deserve its reputation as a party school. The resolutions that the USG has adopted concerning the issues that Mr. Gonzalez addressed is allowing the USG to say (quoting Mr. Gonzalez) "Hey America, look what we've done (for) SIU-C, what we're just begun." — Clint Potts, graduate intern, Tim Hildebrand, USG president

'Headbanger' enjoys more than just loud music

I wonder if Mr. Faidutti has ever taken the time to actually absorb the lyrics sung by "head bangers" such as Guns n' Roses, Ozzy Osborn, and others who display an amazing talent for saying important and intelligent things in clear, uncluttered language.

Granted the sound may be harsh, but pointed social criticism is there for all to hear if one but listen closely.

Of course, taste has a lot to do with what clothes one wears, or what music one listens too. Note that mood has a bearing on these as well.

Chances are that one will see as many ripped jeans at a Pink Floyd concert as a Guns n' Roses concert.

While one like Mr. Faidutti may not like or understand the hard language used by Guns n' Roses, even he surely cannot say Pink Floyd is "unintelligent on a college level," or that people in funny clothes and hairdos don't go to intelligent shows.

I know several people who dress like I do, ripped jeans, long hair, black leather jacket, destroyed runners, earring and yes, they enjoy loud, obnoxious head-banging music, just as I do. But not every day.

Does Mr. Faidutti listen to Dylan every time he turns on the stereo?

Despite my dress, (or perhaps because of it,) I am an Honors Student, fully capable of understanding and appreciating "intelligent" music and lyrics.

If a band plays at the arena, is well received, and no one dies, what's the problem? Why not get Ziggy? I'm sure a lot of ripped jeans would show up.

We don't need the Mr. Faiduttis of campus assuming that people who enjoy headbanger shows enjoy only headbanger shows.

I have been seen at Ramones' concerts and chamber music recitals. How about Mr. Faidutti? Is his taste limited to one drum beat? — Jon Alexander, freshman, honors, English major.

NORML and 611 Pizza still suffer due to Harvest Fest controversy

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

The Southern Illinois chapter of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws and 611 Pizza have suffered because of the controversy surrounding NORML's Harvest Fest on Oct. 6, Lin Chang, owner of 611 Pizza, said.

"It has hurt the reputation of 611 Pizza and NORML for no reason," she said. "There was nothing illegal going on at 611 Pizza."

NORML's Harvest Fest, scheduled to be a day of music and speeches about the legalization of marijuana, was cut short when police were called to 611 Pizza, the site of the fest.

The police department had received two phone calls, both claiming NORML members were smoking marijuana at 611 Pizza.

Chang said she feels responsible for the resignation of NORML's faculty adviser, Mary Lamb. "I feel like because of what happened at 611 Pizza, Mary Lamb quit," Chang said.

Kirsten Bonde, the president of the Southern Illinois chapter of NORML, said Chang should not feel responsible.

"What happened isn't her fault, or the police's fault," Bonde said.

Chang said the police were responding to two telephone reports of marijuana smoking on the premises.

"This was not true," she said. "There was no smoking going on in my place. When the police came they even said they didn't see or smell any smoke."

Chang said she feels bad because Lamb quit right after the problems at 611 Pizza.

"I feel sorry that Mary Lamb can't trust NORML," Chang said. "Whatever happened at 611 Pizza, it wasn't NORML's fault." NORML recruited Lamb, an English department faculty member, early in October. Lamb resigned from the faculty adviser position Oct. 10, saying she believed in the officers of NORML, but was unsure of the sincerity of some of the members.

NORML, in its quest to become a registered student organization, had problems securing a faculty adviser at the beginning of the semester. All registered student organizations must have a faculty adviser.

NORML has already begun a search for a new adviser, Joe Goldsberry, NORML treasurer, said Thursday.

Chang said after the police came and asked that the restaurant be cleared, NORML members left 611 Pizza so Chang wouldn't have any trouble with the police.

Police Blotter

University Police reported two students were arrested Friday for retail theft at the University bookstore.

Andre Lamont Gay, 22, 250 S. Lewis Lane, was arrested at 1:10 p.m. for the theft of a cassette tape valued at $6.98. He was released on his own recognizance to appear in court on Nov. 1.

Thomas J. Hall, 19, 205 Schneider Hall, was arrested at 3:10 p.m. for the theft of a stuffed animal valued at $3.25. Hall was released after he posted $100 bond and is to appear in court Nov. 1.

One University student and four others were charged with illegal transportation of alcohol Friday evening when a Saluki patrolman spotted one of the individuals drinking from an opened bottle.

The five men involved were cast-bound on Neely Drive in a 1984 Chevy.

The University student, Brian A. Lienen, 25, 413 Allen I, posted his driver's license in lieu of bond.

Paul W. Wilkie, 29, 120 Shupper Lane, Highland; and Jeffrey Schultz, 27, R. 2, Breese; also posted their driver's licenses. Michael J. Krebs, 25, no address given, posted $50 bond. Kevin K. Foederer, 31, 2708 Milan St., Highland, was released on his own recognizance.

Emergency response time is very rapid in the area."

Kilquist said the sheriff's patrol functions for the Halloween weekend will not be "normal."

"If they (the chamber) want to speak for me, they should at least call me first," Kilquist said.

He said this will be a very pivotal year since the traditional street party was canceled and a strong police presence may be required on the Strip.

"What do they think our officers are made of," Kilquist asked? "We may not have enough manpower to handle everything if there is a big crowd on the Strip."

However, he said he has heard mixed assessments about Halloween this year.

"Some people say there will be a lot of people in Carbondale this Halloween, other say it will be dead," Kilquist said. "I don't believe that we, in law enforcement, know what the ramifications will be this year in Carbondale."

Kilquist said he would commit himself and his resources to the city if the council decides to proceed with the carnival plans, but that it would not be in the best interest of the city to schedule another function until the street party has been permanently laid to

The Friday market was in part due to the computer panic but largely caused by a number of factors including rumors that high leverage takeovers, especially that of United Airlines, would not be completed.

"The market didn't think these takeovers, proposed by a number of different syndicates, would go through. Therefore, those stocks were sold on a high volume," Smithhart said.

"I also believe the market declined because it, as an entity, dictated that interest rates needed to be lowered. People don't dictate to the market, it dictates to us," Smithhart said.

He said he believed that, as a result, government officials got together and decided to ease the federal money supply and that the smart money investors used the lowered interest rate to buy more stock yesterday.

"People tend to act on emotions rather than logic. Many people panicked Friday but the smart investors used the decline as a buying opportunity," Smithhart said.

He said he called all of his major clients Sunday night and reassured them that the drop was only temporary.

"I think investors need to have a long-term perspective and, in my opinion, there was and is no reason to worry about a repeat of Black Monday," Smithhart said. "The market is fundamentally sound and companies' earnings have tremendously improved over the past year. The longterm outlook is that the market will continue to rise."

release. He was last seen wearing a pale green, short-sleeved surgeon shirt and beige pants.

Wyma is a white female, 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighing 135 pounds, with blond curly hair and blue eyes, according to the release. She has 15 to 25 scratches on her left wrist that she would attempt to hide. She was last seen wearing a short-sleeved white blouse and jeans.

Anyone with information about these two teens should contact the Carbondale Police Department at 549-2121.

then picked up the bank bag and fired a shot, possibly at the ground, then fled north across Jackson Street, police said.

Jackson then chased the suspect for 75 to 80 feet, closing quickly on the gunman, at which time he was shot three times, police said. One shot hit Jackson in the chest and entered his heart, killing him.

Hill said Algee, a former employee of Jeremiah's restaurant, was in the immediate vicinity at the time of the murder.

Hill said the department was unsure how long Algee and Harris had been planning the robbery but were sure the robbery was not a spur of the moment thing.

Algee has a string of prior charges that go back as far as 1980, including eight counts of unlawful delivery of a controlled substance.

In 1986 Harris was convicted and sentenced on two counts of unlawful delivery of a controlled substance. Harris was convicted of delivering 7.1 grams of cocaine.

Harris' record also includes a conviction involving the use of a handgun.

On May 29, 1986, one day after he was sentenced for unlawful delivery, Harris was convicted and sentenced for armed robbery, aggravated unlawful restraint, home invasion and residential burglary that occurred at a private residence in Carbondale, a Jackson County Circuit Clerk said.

Carbondale Police said they were withholding some information about the case because the case was still under investigation.

Attorneys working to avoid court decision on abortion

Rockford doctor, health department try to find solution

CHICAGO (UPI) — Attorneys for a Rockford doctor and the state health department worked Monday toward averting a U.S. Supreme Court decision on regulating abortion clinics.

Attorneys from the American Civil Liberties Union and the attorney general's office met for nearly three hours to discuss ways of settling the dispute over a series of state regulations opponents charge could make abortions too expensive for most women.

"It (the meeting) was worthwhile enough to continue this in an expedited manner," Attorney General Neil Harigan said following the session that included himself, Public Health Director Dr. Bernard Turnock and ACLU attorney Colleen Connell.

Both sides agreed to meet again next week.

At issue are a series of regulations imposed by the General Assembly in 1978 and 1979 involving out-patient clinics and surgical centers. Dr. Richard Ragsdale successfully challenged the regulations in the lower courts, saying complying with the rules would unconstitutionally limit a woman's right to an abortion. The regulations were suspended in 1985.

The case is scheduled to come before the Supreme Court Dec. 5 and Justice John Paul Stevens already has said he will not participate, presumably because one of the attorneys representing the state is a relative.

"Deadlines do sometimes create an environment where people will take action," Turnock said after the meeting.

"What we are taking a look at is the question of how best to protect the health and safety of women who exercise their constitutional right to choose abortions."

Connell said she would prefer settling the case rather than waiting for the Supreme Court to rule.

"The way the regulations were being enforced had a counterproductive impact against doctors providing abortions," she said. "The regulations sometimes put good providers out of business while keeping some of the bad providers in."

Attorney Ann-Louise Lohr of Americans United for Life sharply criticized Harigan for negotiating.

"These laws protect the life, health and safety of the women of Illinois," Lohr said. "The ACLU won everything at the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, and they have no reason to settle other than that they feel they will lose at the U.S. Supreme Court level."

The Illinois case is one of three abortion cases before the Supreme Court this term. Vermont Gov. Madeline Kunin and nine other governors have filed a friend of the court brief urging the justices to uphold the lower court rulings.

Social work accredited for two years

By Mario Millikin
Staff Writer

SIU-C's School of Social Work has been awarded accreditation for its master's degree program by the Council of Social Work.

The 4-year-old program earned the maximum accreditation period of two years, Mary Davidson, director of the School of Social Work, said.

"It's rare to get maximum accreditation the first time around," Davidson said.

The Council on Social Work is a national agency responsible for evaluating prospective universities for accreditation.

Once a school has applied for accreditation, the agency, located in Washington D.C., issues a site visit. A team is sent to the school for an on-sight campus evaluation.

This visit, along with a comprehensive self-study formulated by the University, serves as the basis for an accreditation grant or denial.

Davidson said being accredited is important because most positions in social work can be filled only by graduates of accredited programs, a process similar to the licensing of professionals in other fields.

"It's really extra insurance," Davidson said. "It says the graduate has been introduced to the values and ethics of the profession."

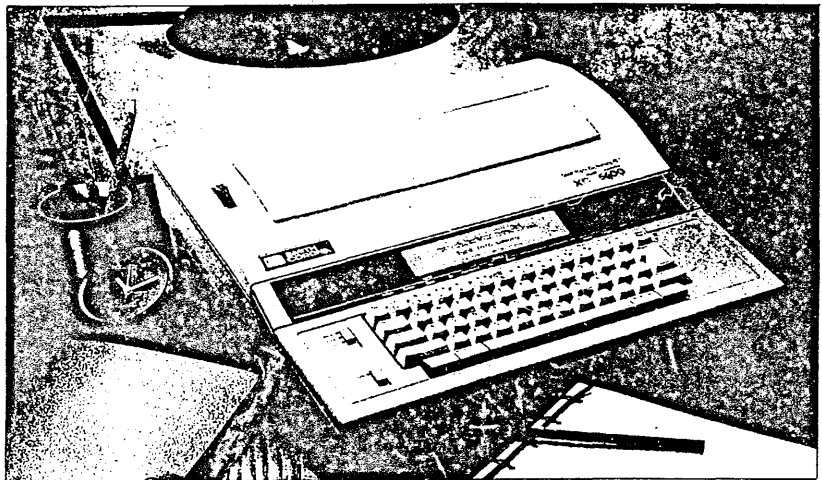

With the program's 100 percent employment rate of master's degree graduates, the majority of them working in Southern Illinois, Davidson said the accreditation is a reflection of the program's success.

When Davidson came to SIU in 1985, she began the master's program with just five students and had 90 students in the undergraduate program. The master's program now has 30 graduate students and the undergraduate program has 212 students.

Applications for the master's program are now being accepted. Students from all areas of undergraduate programs are welcome to apply, Davidson said.

From janitor to journalist; prize winning Bell to speak

By Mario Millikin
Staff Writer

Dennis Bell used to sweep the floors at Newsday. Now he is busy sweeping up awards.

The Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist will be on campus Oct. 17 and 18 to lecture on his 1985 African Famine series that earned him the Pulitzer Prize. He also will meet with interested faculty members and students.

Beginning at Newsday as a janitor in 1972, Bell said he did not start out with hopes of a journalistic career. But his ambitions soon changed.

"I was angry at the way blacks were portrayed at Newsday," said Bell.

Bell said stereotypical pictures such as old women with rags on their heads would appear with social service and welfare stories.

This was not always an accurate portrayal, he said.

Once he began applying his concern through the means of journalism, there was no stopping him.

Advancing from janitor to composing room to editorial assistant in the sports department, Bell achieved staff reporter status in 1978.

In the course of his career, awards have been numerous. In addition to the 1985 Pulitzer Prize Bell was named Journalist of the Year by the National Association of Black Journalists. Bell was also the recipient of the 1983 Long Island Press Club first-place award for his participation with the series "The Poor Among Us."

Bell will lecture on his 1985 African famine series at 4 p.m. Tuesday in 121 Lawson Hall.

Bell's appearance is the result of a joint effort between the School of Journalism and the student chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists.

Rappers simply normal guys keeping pace with neighbors

By Carrie Pomeroy
Entertainment Editor

Rappers EPMD, who appeared at DuMaroc's last Thursday night, say they're just "two nice guys from respectable homes" who thought they could rap as well as their famous Long Island, New York neighbors Public Enemy, Biz Markie and Eric B. and Rakim.

Their conviction has won EPMD members Parrish Smith and Erick Sermon two gold records, "Strictly Business" and "Unfinished Business," both of which hit No. 1 on the black music charts and acclaim from many music critics.

The band got started in 1987, when Sermon contacted his childhood friend Smith, who was attending Southern Connecticut University, and asked him to collaborate on a demo tape. Sermon and Smith practiced rapping over the phone while Smith was in school.

Their demo, "It's My Thing," won them a record contract with the independent label Sleeping Bag Records.

Sermon said he and Smith work together so closely that it's almost like one person is creating their songs. The rappers write rhymes separately, then combine them for a finished song with interweaving vocals.

In the studio, Smith said they produce and mix their records themselves, "messing around" with keyboards, drum machine and sounds sampled from other records.

"Our style is different from other rappers because there's a slow flow to what we do," Sermon said.

Not surprisingly for a group whose name stands for "Erick and Parrish Making Dollars," EPMD seems motivated in large part by materialism.

"Once your financial situation is better, you can get into what you really want to do," Smith, 21, said.

Sermon, 20, who has rapped at house parties since the age of 12, said besides performing, money is his favorite part of success.

EPMD also seems motivated by a genuine love for music. In their dressing room, the band talked animatedly about their favorite rap and funk records as well as older music "our moms played for us," like Wilson Pickett and Otis Redding.

Smith said he tries to make music that can give his fans the same kind of good feeling James Brown, Parliament and Funkadelic gave him.

Sermon echoed his partner, saying, "I love the feeling of seeing the fans and watching the kids go crazy. Sometimes when I'm alone in my house I think it's got to be a dream."

However, both Smith and Sermon said making it big has its negative aspects.

Sermon said he felt a great deal of pressure to hit No. 1 again after the success of the first album.

"People said it was luck when the first album went to number one. But we had the No. 1 black album two years in a row. That ain't no joke," Sermon said.

Sermon said another problem with fame is that his friends and acquaintances treat him differently.

"People classify me since I drive around in a Benz and wear chains. They think I've got a big head," he said. Sermon expressed distrust of women who "put on their goldigger suit" as soon as they find out he's in EPMD.

The group expresses the downside of success in the song "It Wasn't Me, It Was the Fame" on "Unfinished Business."

EPMD, whose live shows are dominated by hip-hop dancing and strong doses of street-wise humor, emphasizes having a good time over getting a message across to its audience.

"I'm not trying to give people a message," Sermon said.

"We just choose to do our own thing, and we let the fans do the same," Smith added.

Textones latest album spans six years in L.A.

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

During a time when older bands are trying to recapture their popularity and newer bands are trying to get national recognition with their first cassettes, one band manages to do both at once.

A Review

"Through the Canyon" by The Textones represents the third full-length cassette the band has recorded, but that cassette spans six of the Textones' Los Angeles club circuit-playing years.

The Textones started out in 1978 with a lineup that included leader Carla Olson and Kathy Valentine, who later went on to become a member of the Go-Go's. The band has gone through a number of personnel changes and has performed songs with a variety of musicians like Ry Cooder, Phil Seymour of the Dwight Twilley band and Gene Clark of the Byrds.

"Through the Canyon" is a compilation of some of the band's best songs from 1980-1986. The band has a distinctive, refined sound that is present in all the tracks on the cassette. The music also varies in style and mood as the years go by and the band members change.

The earlier songs on the cassette, "What Do You Want With Me," "Reason To Leave," "Some Other Girl" and the title track have the hardest musical edge to them.

In terms of energy and lyrics, "Through the Canyon" is by far the best of the early works. This song contains some of Olson's best guitar playing anywhere on the cassette and Seymour provides outstanding background vocals to Olson's lead.

As time went by and some of the founding group members moved on, Olson took over more of the songwriting chores for the band. The result is music that feels less hurried and has better quality lyrics. Tracks like "Number One Is To Survive" and "The Drifter" are the best examples of this transition. The overall sound of the music is the same but the band was definitely maturing in style.

The two highlights of the cassette are "Stay With Me," an emotional and powerful ballad and "Silver," which is the best example of the band's sharp style.

Granted, Valentine was a member of both groups, both came from the same area and lyrically the bands are very different. But without looking at the tape case, it would sound as if the Go-Go's had just released a new cassette without Belinda Carlisle.

The Textones definitely belong to the L.A. club scene. Of the many bands that have emerged from that background in the first part of this decade, most have been popular for a song or two before sinking out of sight.

The emergence of MTV around that time probably was a major factor in some of those bands' successes. The Textones, a group with a good sound and a lot of talent, never made a video and therefore missed its chance at reaching a large national audience.

"Through the Canyon" represents some of the best club band work around. The Textones, being a product of the early 1980s, don't sound like U2, R.F.M., or Metallica clones. While this different sound is refreshing, it also goes against what is popular today. This band is good, but it's possible that time has passed the Textones by.

Digital tapes offer highest sound quality

By Scripps Howard News Service

If there is an ultimate audio frontier, a promised land of sound reproduction, it is digital.

Since the early days of tube amplifiers and monaural systems, audiophiles have sought a machine that could produce in their homes the fidelity available in a concert hall or recording studio.

While changes in the equipment industry have advanced things from crude mono to stereo and then digital, there was no equipment that could equal the sound quality of a professional, first-generational master recorded in a studio.

Then came the promise of digital audio tape. The digital recording method, which encodes sounds and then reproduces them onto tape through a numerical system rather than simply capturing impulses on tape (analog), offers the closest thing to concert-hall authenticity.

The compact disc revolution, despite some problems with mastering techniques and price ranges, gave the first hints of digital's potential and spurred even more talk about what might happen once DAT blank tape was available.

But squabbles and obstacles posed by a recording industry already angry over perceived sales losses triggered by blank audio cassettes, reacted quickly to the specter of DAT.

Judicial Board governs University by-laws, rules

By Chris Walka
Staff Writer

The Judicial Board of Governance, while admitted by some of its members to be an enigma, serves to oversee the actions of the undergraduate student president and senate.

The board has 12 to 13 members, and according to published materials, examines cases in which alleged violations of the student constitution, by-laws and University rules and regulations have taken place.

The board, while a part of the USG, acts as a check and balance system. It examines cases in which alleged violations of the student constitution have been committed.

Additionally, the board can serve as a forum for appeals on decisions reached by the Area Governance Boards and all other Registered Student Organizations.

According to Michael Parker, acting chief justice of the board, all students except first semester freshmen are welcome to join the board. The student must have a 2.5 grade point average, be a full-time student, have no other affiliation with any other Registered Student Organization and be in good disciplinary standing with the University.

Additionally, any interested student must go before an interview with the Committee on Internal Affairs. The committee interviews students and submits their recommendation to the senate for approval. The senate then votes on the approval or disapproval of the candidate.

The Committee on Internal Affairs is comprised of USG senators.

Parker said the board, while a part of USG, acts as a check and balance on the system. The organization thus remains aloof from the other organizations.

When making a decision on a case, at least seven members of the board must be present. Parker said once the appeal has gone to the board and has been decided, the case can go no higher.

Parker blamed apathy for the board's low membership this year.

While apathy may be to blame for low membership, Parker and several other board members said the board really does not have many cases put before it.

Illinois abortion bill spawns moral, legal disagreement on regulation

By Dale Walker
Staff Writer

The Illinois abortion debate, specifically the House Bill 574, provides an arena for area supporters on both sides of the abortion issue.

The bill calls for a viability test for women seeking to abort a fetus more than 20 weeks old and mandates that a second physician be in attendance during the abortion as well as banning abortions in public hospitals.

If the bill becomes law and is challenged in the courts it could test how far the Supreme Court is willing to let states regulate abortion. On July 3 the high court upheld a Missouri law similar to the proposed Illinois legislation.

Beth Firestein, counseling psychologist for the Counseling Center and coordinator for Women's Services, addressed the financial ramifications of the bill.

"My primary concern is that the legislation will place an undo burden on providers of such services and on people who are less able to afford services, which will create an inequality in access to abortion, which is the fundamental right of every woman," she said.

Firestein said that the rich will continue to be able to get abortions on demand while the poor will be forced to look into illegal sources or have to go to extreme measures to be able to fund the cost of an abortion.

Ralph Stewart, pastor of Bible Baptist Church, spoke about the fundamental issue and the viability test.

"I'm against it unless it's a choice between it (abortion) and the mother's life. They (women) say it's my body, and it's my choice but I don't see it that way. From a biblical standpoint, I believe they're taking a life," he said.

Stewart said scriptures indicate that life begins at the instant of conception and after that it's just a matter of development.

"It is a life even though the person isn't able to make a choice for themselves or isn't able to support itself," he said. "But the same argument can be made for certain individuals who are adults that are unable to support themselves."

Cass Van Der Meer, president of Shawnee National Organization for Women said, "I think the choice to terminate a pregnancy is the choice of a woman and her doctor. It doesn't have to do with the public funding. It's a medical issue between a woman and her doctor. I think this should not be banned anywhere."

Van Der Meer also said physical and financial problems could.

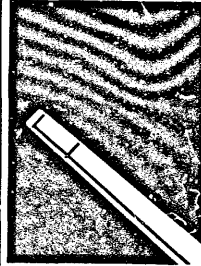

"The American Medical Association and the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists state that the earliest point of viability is 23 and a half and 24 weeks, almost a month later than the 20-week deadline in the House Bill 574," she said.

The majority of abortions at 20 weeks or more into a pregnancy are performed because of health problems, she said.

"Anytime there's a delay in an abortion, which this viability bill would cause, (the delay) can cause severe health consequences for a woman," she said.

"Medical professionals have said that viability testing at 20 weeks is a stupid thing to have in a bill," Sally Albrecht, an area pastor who is pro-choice, said. Doctors who know about viability say that it's not something that should be in the bill, she said.

Rugby team dedicates season to slain student

By Kevin Simpson

Writer

The SIU-C rug- an additional letdown had their 15-6 loss to Illinois in the Collegiate Tournament in Champaign Saturday.

The team learned a former rugby club member, Jason Jackson, was fatally injured early Saturday morning by a man who allegedly robbed four employees of Jeremiah's while they were in the parking lot of the establishment.

Jackson, 21, was member of the rugby club until a knee injury ended his career. Junior Norm Smyth said Jackson was a good rugby player and a great person to know.

"It was a big shock for everyone on the team," Smyth said. "We're dedicating the rest of the season in his honor. He injured his knee in the spring of 1988, but he had always followed the team closely since. He would come to all the home games and hang out with members of the team. He was just a great guy to be around."

The rugby club, now 6-5, was looking to avenge an earlier loss at the hands of the Illini at SIU-C. Smyth said a couple of key players couldn't make it to Champaign for the tournament, and their absence hurt the team.

Scott said. "The players worked extremely hard in off-season and I'm encouraged."

The Salukis finished 19-10 overall last season and came up a win shy of a third Gateway Conference championship and NCAA bid.

Smith thinks a tournament bid is a goal for the Salukis.

"I think our goals could be a 20-win season, a Gateway Championship and getting a tournament bid somewhere," Smith said.

The Salukis return only two seniors including Kibelkis and guard Eileen Richardson.

"I don't think inexperience is as big a factor as coming together as a team," Scott said. "You need confidence in yourself and this team looks confident."

"The attitude has been real good and we're excited about the season," Kibelkis said. "You can't really put any limits on us. We're a young team and we can do what we want."

Back to the basics

The loss to Illinois State was not an unexpected occurrence to the Saluki coaching staff, Smith said.

"Both teams were evenly matched," Smith said. "It was not any revelation we could lose a ball-game."

"Practice this week will emphasize fundamentals, Smith said. "I think we really played hard and there is a lot of belief we are going to lay it out," Smith said. "We are going to gear practice toward the fundamentals," Smith said. "They did a little better job of blocking, tackling, catching and throwing than we did."

It's not over yet

Smith said when the players and coaches met Sunday to watch game films, the players and coaches had a good meeting.

"I feel a special rapport with this football team," Smith said. "They are a proud bunch."

"These players have been through a tough deal with the different systems and the rash of injuries," Smith said.

Smith said the coaches and players are probably doing their best work because of 1-6 Saluki record.

"No one said it was easy," Smith said. "We are building a winning pro- before. It's been in this situation good. It's hard to never feel hung and winning a few, the games."

"Every week you'll get a little better and wiser," Smith said. "This game will help from a maturity standpoint."

Hoyas building twin towers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Any team scheduled to play Georgetown this be warned — Coach John Thompson is constructing the Twin Towers.

Thompson, beginning preparations for his 18th season at the school, said Monday he plans to unleash an alignment this season teaming 6-foot-10 Alonzo Mourning and 7-2 Dikembe Mutombo regularly in the lineup for the first time.

Both Mourning, the nation's leading shot-blocker a year ago, and Mutombo, who set a Big East Conference record for blocked shots in a single game, are entering their second seasons with the Hoyas.

"The difference this year will be the fact that Dikembe and Alonzo will be playing together a lot more than they have in the past," Thompson said at a news conference one day after the team opened practice for the 1989-90 season.

"They both need to start to become more comfortable with one another," Thompson added.

The Mourning-Mutombo tandem could eventually emerge as one of the most dangerous front-court duos in college basketball history, but both players still need seasoning. Mourning, coming off a freshmen season during which he was voted the Big East's defensive player of the year, loves the Twin Towers concept.

"It's a great idea," Mourning said. "I think it's a big advantage for the team. Dikembe takes up a lot of space. And if they get past me, they have to go through Dikembe. That's a lot."

Thompson rarely used the two young centers together last season on a team dominated by play of departed guard Charles Smith. Mutombo, who came to Georgetown from a Jesuit school in Zaire, appears ready to take the next step in his career, while Mourning already might be the nation's best collegiate big man.

The Twin Towers alignment could wreak havoc on opposing offenses, but Thompson said he likely will not be able to play as much full-court pressure defense with the big men in the game, instead relying more on a zone strategy.

"It gives us some added advantages. And it gives us disadvantages in certain areas of the game, too," Thompson said.

Clippers' center bolts for Italian league team

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — The Los Angeles Clippers lost another player to an Italian team Monday when center Benoit Benjamin announced he has signed a one-year contract with Philips Milan.

The enigmatic 7-footer, who averaged career-highs of 16.4 points and 8.8 rebounds for the Clippers last season, said he would not "play for peanuts," so the former Creighton star decided to play overseas.

"At this point I think it's best for me to get a fresh start and get some of the negative influences that surround Benoit Benjamin away from me," he said during a news conference at a YMCA gymnasium. "(I want to) totally concentrate and showcase my talents."

Benjamin follows Danny Ferry, the team's top draft pick who spurned the Clippers in July and is now playing for Il Messaggero of Rome.

Benjamin's agent, Herbert Holmes, would not reveal financial terms of the Milan deal, but said it is in line with what the Clippers were offering. Los Angeles reportedly offered a 2-year contract worth $1.25 million a season, with money deferred.

Holmes said he asked the Clippers to trade Benjamin to another NBA team, but "got no response." He added that final details of the Milan contract were worked out Sunday. Talks with the Clippers broke off Friday.

"I'm signed, sealed and delivered," said Benjamin, who will become a teammate of former NBA star Bob McAdoo in Milan.

Benjamin, 24, has often been criticized for lackluster play and poor conditioning throughout his four-year NBA career. He was said to weigh as much as 275 pounds — 25 pounds over his playing weight.

Benjamin said he weighed 260. He was to board a flight Monday night for Italy and hoped to play in this weekend's McDonald's Open.

Clippers officials could not immediately be reached for comment. However, Los Angeles general counsel Alan Rothenberg recently indicated he did not want to sign Benjamin for more than two years.

"I have this mortal fear that if we give him a long-term, rich contract, we will never see that talent on the court," he said. "I really think a long-term contract will make him complacent."

It was that attitude, Benjamin said, that made him want to leave.

"I don't think the Clippers treated me fairly," said Benjamin, the No. 3 pick in the 1985 draft. "All I wanted was to be treated fairly. They dragged my name through the mud and treated me like a dog."

Benjamin's departure comes as yet another blow to the Clippers, who have won just 50 of 246 games the last three years.

said. "We hope to have it all taken care of this week."

There are two teams that compete independently. Their is an all-women's team and a co-ed mixed squad.

The women are 7-0 this season. In their most recent game Sunday at McAndrew Stadium, the women's team shut out St. Louis 1-0 on a Wendy Darius goal early in the first half. Gerry Reuss and Nancy Hattrich received assists on the winning play.

In their first competition Sept. 8-10 at a Michigan hockey camp, the women's team won four games against NAIA schools. During the last weekend of September, they won two games in an all-girl St. Louis tournament.

The co-ed squad defeated St. Louis twice as well.

Hattrich, a senior, said she's happy to be playing on the team.

"This shows who really wants to play," Hattrich said. "This is a different league and it can be frustrating because the other team may not show up. But we're happy to be playing."

Illner said there are some differences in playing independently and representing the school.

"It isn't as structured and we don't have as much time," Illner said. "It is a different level but they want to play."

Hattrich is hopeful that field hockey will be put back into the program in the future. But she doesn't expect that to happen.

"I think everyone's bitter about what happened," Hattrich said. "But we're playing and trying to make the best of it."

"I'd be very pleased with the golf season if it wasn't for the last tournament," Hartzog said. "We're going to hang it up for a while and let them rest. We'll regroup in force and get back at it again in the spring. "I'm highly discouraged with the last tournament," Hartzog said. "But that still doesn't alter the fact that this is the best team in my four years as coach."

Hawaii trip to highlight early season

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

The SIU-C women's basketball team feels that the ingredients are there for an exciting season.

With basketball practice officially getting underway Sunday, the Salukis are looking forward to opening their season in the Hawaii Invitational Nov. 24-26.

"We're all real excited about going to Hawaii," senior forward

Deanna Kibelkis said. "We are hoping for a good tourney. It's going to be great and we're looking forward to it."

The players aren't the only ones looking forward to the opening tournament.

"I don't know who is more excited, me or the girls, because I have never been to Hawaii," Coach Cindy Scott said. "We've been on a three-year waiting list to get in. It is great exposure for us as well."

SIU-C opens a 28-game slate against top-seed Virginia in the Classic. Kansas, Oregon State, Vanderbilt, Toledo, Washington State and host Hawaii round out the eight-team, double elimination tournament.

One of SIU-C's top newcomers, junior guard Alison Smith transferring from San Diego State, is one of few Saluki players that have been to Hawaii.

"Our San Diego State team went to Hawaii," Smith said. "I'm really looking forward to the tournament."

The Salukis also will receive their most extensive radio coverage ever with the Eagle, 104.9 FM, airing 25 live broadcasts during the regular season plus all post-season games. This is another reason for excitement in the Saluki camp.

"We are all very excited about it," Scott said. "The fans will now have a consistent means of following the team. It is a positive step for our program and it's something we have wanted very much for long time."

In addition to a long-awaited trip to Hawaii and the Saluki women's most extensive radio coverage ever, Scott feels she has a team to be excited about as well.

"I'm really excited about this season and I really like this team,"

Hartzog pleased with golf season

By Kevin Simpson
Staff Writer

The men's golf team ended its season with a fourth-place finish in the Bradley Fall Classic.

Illinois State captured first place with 616 strokes during the two-day tournament, followed by Iowa State, 618, Southwest Missouri State, 626 and SIU-C with 627.

Sophomore Sean Leckrone led the way for the Salukis with 156 for 36 holes, followed by juniors Mark Bellas and Greg Mullican, who tied with 158. Senior Mike Cowen stroked a 160 and sophomore David Lewis clubbed a 162.

Coach Lew Hartzog said his team did not play very well despite its fourth place finish. He attributed this to the back nine holes on the last day of the tournament. Every player had more strokes on the back nine than they did on the front of the course.

"The kids did not play well on Sunday," Hartzog said. "They just didn't handle it well. I didn't feel the team put together a strong effort."

Despite the last tournament showing, Hartzog said this was the best team he's coached during four years as golf coach.

Saluki football team may be hurting, but Smith makes no excuses for loss

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

The football Salukis are bruised, battered and generally beat up. All but six starters were injured entering the 21-17 loss to Illinois State Saturday but head coach Bob Smith said his team's rash of injuries is not an excuse for the performance against the Redbirds.

"Every team has injuries this time of the season," Smith said. "You have to play with whoever is ready."

Entering the Illinois State game guard Tom Roth was nursing a sore shoulder and left the game in the first half because of the injury. Smith said Roth should be ready to play this Saturday against Southwest Missouri State.

Football notebook

Linebacker Leroy Wright probably won't be as fortunate as Roth.

Wright possibly dislocated his shoulder and could miss the remainder of the season, Smith said.

The Salukis are already short of linebackers with the absence of leading tackler Kevin Kilgallon. Kilgallon suffered an ankle injury against Northern Illinois two weeks ago.

Smith said Kilgallon will likely play this week after suiting out the Illinois State game.

With Wright and Kilgallon banged up, Smith expects sophomore linebacker Jon Manley, juniors Melvin Kimble and Herb Larson, and senior Brian Miller to see more playing time at the position.

Fullback Chuck Harmke, last year's leading rusher, also is expected to see addition playing time in the weeks ahead, Smith said. Harmke has been out for most of the season with a hamstring injury.

Smith said Harmke needs to work himself back into shape after the long layoff.

"He couldn't go a full ballgame yet," Smith said. Freshman running back Yonel Jourdan is doubtful for Southwest Missouri game because his sprained ankle, suffered against Northern Illinois, has not responded to treatment, Smith said.

Smith said after the loss Saturday the team is generally tired. "We are a tired football team. We came off a rough road trip, and the kids were in mid-term exams all week," Smith said. "We're going to try and get our legs back against a tough outfit coming in next week or otherwise we're going to have big problems."

Women golfers maintain hot pace, Childress leads linksters into 4th

By Kevin Simpson
Staff Writer

The women's golf team hopes to land the Gateway Conference Golfer of the Week award for the fourth time in four tournaments thanks to sophomore Anne Childress' performance at the Lady Auburn took first place with 920, Kentucky second, 926, Wake Forest, 940 and SIU-C 955.

The Lady Kat was not a one-player show by Childress. All of the Salukis shot at least one round in the 70s.

Seniors Julie Shumaker and Lisa Johnson fired 236 and 243 respectively, followed by sophomores Deborah Minter, 248 and Gina Giaccone, 252.

The Salukis have been playing tough against Big 10 schools all season—until the Lady Kat. Illinois, Purdue and Michigan State were in the lineup, but the Salukis smoked the Illini by 33 strokes while Purdue and Michigan State were left behind in the dust. Coach Diane Daugherty said the team her was beaten by three of the best teams on the collegiate circuit.

"The team did fantastic. Auburn, Kentucky and Wake Forest are all past NCAA qualifiers. They are three of the top 15 teams in the country," Daugherty said. Daugherty has had some problems in the past with the fourth and fifth spots not being as productive as possible. She said this was not the case in the Lady Kat when the golfers came together as a team.

"They came through with flying colors," Daugherty said. "Everyone on the team had at least one 70. An 81 was thrown out on the last day. That was the lowest score to be thrown out in three years."

"They came through with flying colors. Everyone ... had at least one 70."

—Diane Daugherty

Kat invitational in Lexington, Ky. Childress made her move for the golfer of the week award by placing fifth individually when she fired 77-80-76 for 233 strokes in the 54-hole tournament.

The Salukis placed fourth in the 17 team tournament, bettering their 16th place finish from last season.

Budget cuts don't keep field hockey off the field

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

Less than a year after the SIU-C women's field hockey program was dropped because of budget constraints, members of the team continue their love for the sport.

Julie Illner, who coached the now-defunct SIU-C field hockey team for 20 years, is the coach of a squad comprised mostly of former Saluki team members.

"We've been planning on this since we were officially dropped last December," Illner said. "It was just a matter of seeing how many people we would have."

Illner said the team practices once or twice a week. She said 15 regular players show up for practice. All but two of these players were members of the SIU-C field hockey team.

"We also have some brand new players and one that has never played," Illner said.

The Undergraduate Student Government passed a request by the team to be recognized as a student organization Wednesday. Being recognized as a student organization enables Illner's team to use money it raised. Illner said the team is now in the process of becoming a club sport.

"I don't think there will be any problem with that," Illner
