NIGHT MARCHERS FIGHT FOR THE

Crowd speaks out against rape and violence at annual rally

Sexual Assault Awareness

STORY BY DAPHNE RETTER

In the quiet time after people went home from work and school Friday and before the street repopulated with bar-goers, about 100 people marched on the sidewalk along the Strip.

"WHATEVER WE WEAR, WHEREVER WE GO, YES MEANS YES AND NO MEANS NO!" The chanting crowd of students, faculty and community members drew curious onlookers out of buildings to watch them stomp by.

The Take Back the Night rally, which started at about 7 and finished around 8:30 p.m., has been an opportunity for people in Carbondale to raise awareness about sexual assault for more than a decade.

Chuck Miller, Evergreen Terrace senator for Undergraduate Student Government, was eager to help make a difference for sexual assault survivors.

Miller, an undecided sophomore from Carmi, said he hopes to introduce legislation to promote safety and awareness of campus sexual assault.

"There's always a need for awareness," he said. "The public needs to realize [sexual assault] is not going to be tolerated."

The rally, which was organized by the Women's Center, 408 W. Freeman St., and SIUC Women's Services, began at the downtown pavilion. As people gathered in support of sexual assault survivors, representatives from Women's Services passed out white candles in small cups and handouts with the lyrics to the chants.

The first chant became the refrain for the evening's march.

"HEY, HEY! HO, HO! RAPE AND VIOLENCE GOT TO GO!"

Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard attended the rally to show support for the cause. He said the rally allows everyone to benefit from the stories of sexual assault survivors and lets the survivors know the community supports them.

"The most important thing here is to be with other people who have been alone," Dillard said, referring to survivors.

"Even for people that aren't here tonight, I hope they will recognize what this is about."

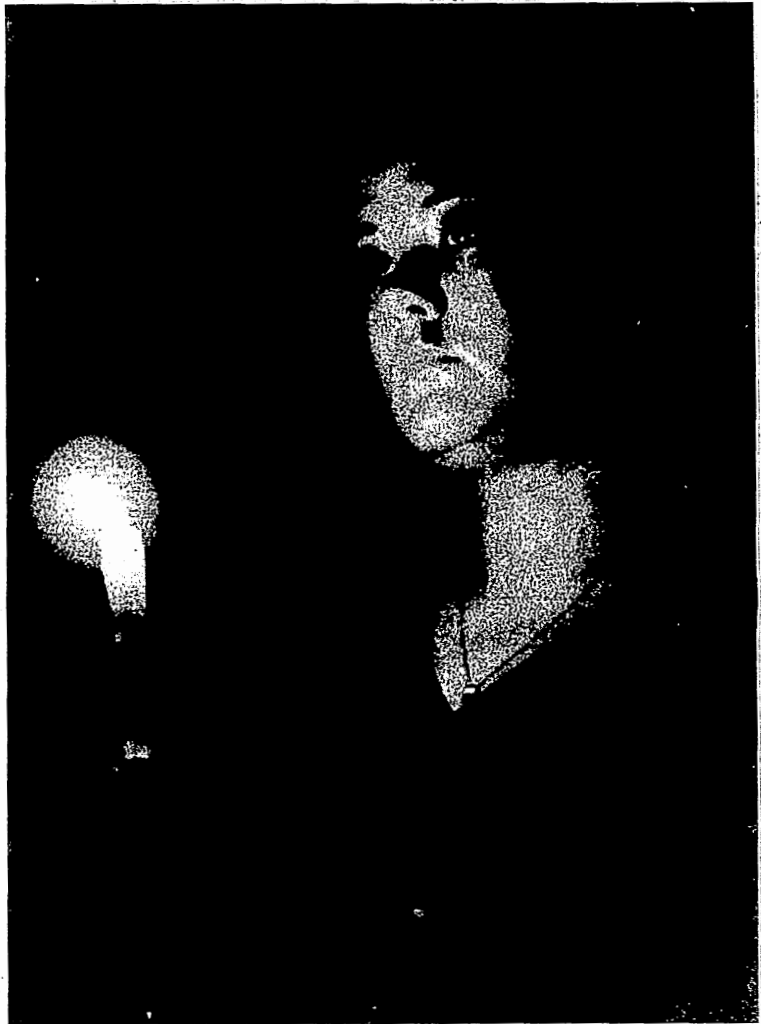

Megan Jallas, a senior in university studies from Springfield, said the rally was a positive step for Carbondale, but more support was needed.

"I kind of wish more people had shown up," she said. "I like to see the community coming out and supporting something."

The march came to an end at the Interfaith Center, 913 S. Illinois Ave., where the jovial tone of the event became somber as a few people stepped to the microphone to tell personal stories of sexual assault and read poetry.

ACLU reviews S.E.E. complaint

Student Center policy states demonstration prohibited for safety reasons

BYRNN SCOTT

DAILY EGYPTIAN

The Southern Illinois chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union is reviewing a possible civil rights violation of SIUC students protesting at the Board of Trustees meeting Thursday at the Student Center.

Dawn Roberts, a protester at the board meeting and coordinator of Students for Excellence in Education, would not comment on whether she will take legal action against the University, but she did plead her case to the Southern Illinois chapter of ACLU at its meeting Thursday night.

Emil Speers, president of Southern Illinois' ACLU chapter, said his organization is seriously concerned about what Roberts presented.

"Our legal chair is looking into a possible violation of free speech," Speers said. "If we find out that it was, we will file a letter of complaint with President [Ted] Sanders and Chancellor [John] Jackson."

According to Roberts, the 15 protesters from her organization were informed they would be arrested if they moved outside the designated demonstration area near the main entrance of the Student Center.

Members of S.E.E. were dressed in black and carrying signs protesting the board's administrative decisions that S.E.E. believes will be the "death of SIUC." One member was dressed as the grim reaper.

"We were greeted at 8:45 a.m. by an armed plainclothes police officer," said Roberts, a junior in philosophy from Carbondale. "He told us that we could not bring our props inside with us and that we would be arrested for trespassing if even one of us with a single sign went into the Student Center at all."

Interim Chancellor Jackson said the protesters were not permitted in the Student Center because of a Student Center policy stating protesters with signs are not allowed in the building.

"[What happened Thursday] is being vastly blown out of proportion by the demonstrators and the media," said Jackson, who attended the board meeting. "Rules and policies were enforced

Bonnie Salvetti spends countless hours tending to patients and racing through the Memorial Hospital of Carbondale's emergency and trauma room, yet she said the most challenging and difficult aspect of her career is picking up the telephone.

"I have a lot of personal memories from alcohol use, and the worst thing I have to do is call a family in Chicago and tell them their son or daughter has been involved in a motor vehicle crash," she said. "Most of these are from alcohol-related crashes."

"These kids wouldn't be in school if they didn't have potential dreams and abilities," Salvetti said. "To see so much potential in our youth and then see it destroyed is tremendously hard on myself and the staff."

Today begins National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week. Various campus groups and area businesses are sponsoring the week to help educate students

POLICE BLOTTER

CARBONDALE

- The owner of Glen's Towing was forced out of the way of a car driven by a suspect who took a car from the impound lot without paying towing charges at about 12:30 p.m. Friday at 1806 N. Illinois Ave. The suspect identified himself as "Mike," Carbondale police said, and asked to be allowed to retrieve books from his car. A short time later, the owner of Glen's Towing saw the car speeding toward the entrance. The suspect was described as a white male, 20 to 24 years old, 5-foot 6-inches tall, weighing about 200 pounds. He was driving a dark blue Mazda Protegé with a temporary registration.
- Brian J. Bechtel, 22, and Cordell T. Buckner, 20, both of Carbondale, were arrested and charged with possession of cannabis and unlawful use of a handgun when their car was stopped for a traffic violation by Carbondale police at 1:07 a.m. Saturday. Bechtel and Buckner allegedly had a .45-caliber handgun, 13 rounds of .45-caliber ammunition, and 24 grams of cannabis. Bechtel and Buckner were taken to the Jackson County Jail. Neither Bechtel nor Buckner had been released as of press time. Jason A. Harris, 18, of Carbondale, was also arrested in the same incident and charged with possession of cannabis. He was released on $100 bond.

Shane Ravellette grunted as he extracted the small brown couch, soggy and reeking of algae, from Campus Lake Saturday. As his boat moved toward shore, the couch trailed behind it attached with ropes and hooks.

"I think it came from Thompson Point," said Ravellette, the coordinator of the Aquatics and Sport Clubs. "It's been there for awhile."

Removing the couch was part of Campus

Lake Cleanup, which occurred from 9 a.m. to noon. Ravellette organized the event, the first of its kind, attempting to beautify the 40-acre lake in preparation for Homecoming weekend.

"Campus Lake has an image problem," said Ravellette. "It's actually a very clean lake [but this] will make it more attractive."

Ravellette split 60 student volunteers into five groups and assigned them to a different section of the lake, handing out maps and issuing instructions. Armed with garbage bags, the groups proceeded along the shore and picked up everything from cigarette butts to a sandal. Fifteen Sigma Pi and Tau Beta Pi fraternity members participated in the cleanup for their community service hours. Kyle Allred, a member of the Tau Beta Pi fraternity, explained they originally planned to clean a highway, but the lack of safety vests required a new assignment.

"Hopefully, we can get it super clean with two groups out here," said Allred, a senior in civil engineering from Finley Park.

Centralized purchasing center likely to be shot down

KAREN BLATTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN

An SIU committee investigating University efficiency has come to a tentative decision to not recommend a central purchasing center for the three SIU campuses, though a final report will not be completed until November.

The commission is a 20-member panel established in September by SIU President Ted Sanders as a way to review the recommendations on efficiency made to the University by Arthur Andersen and Associates.

One of the more controversial recommendations made by Arthur Andersen involved the possibility of a centralized purchasing center for all SIU campuses.

After a meeting Wednesday night in Springfield, members of the commission indicated they were leaning toward recommending against the Arthur Andersen report and keeping purchasing agents at each campus rather than one central purchasing center in the St. Louis area.

Scott Kaiser, media coordinator for the president's office, said the commission has not completed its final report, but there is a general consensus among members to not have a central purchasing center.

The new plan would put purchasing agents at each campus, with each in charge of different products, such as tires, office supplies and gas, instead of just one person in a central location.

Paulette Curtin, a member of the commission and chairwoman of the SIUC Administrative and Professional Staff Council, said the tentative decision was because of the possible loss of jobs associated with a central purchasing center.

"[The shared service center] would jeopardize people's positions," she said. "Without it, we could still accomplish the goals of the University without sacrificing people's jobs."

A final recommendation will be made at the third and final meeting of the commission in November, and a final report will be submitted to Sanders by Jan. 1.

The panel consists of SIUC and SIUE faculty and staff, as well as members of the business communities of Carbondale, Edwardsville and Springfield.

Hung jury in baseball bat attack of SIUC students

BOB JACOBINI
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Jackson County State's Attorney Mike Wepsiec has until the end of the month to decide whether to retry a case against a man accused of a hate crime on the SIUC campus that ended last month in a hung jury.

In a hung jury, the state's attorney may retry the case without violating a suspect's double jeopardy rights. Wepsiec said he is still discussing the case with his assistants.

In an April 12 attack, three SIUC students were beaten by three baseball bat-wielding assailants in an apparently unprovoked attack, University police said.

Cory R. Cummings, 20, and Garland D. Fulford, 23, both of Carbondale, were arrested two days after the incident and charged with aggravated battery, felonies in possession of a weapon and commission of a hate crime.

Both Cummings and Fulford were represented by Carbondale attorney Christian Baril.

Charges against Cummings were dismissed Sept. 20 after he was sentenced to three years for an earlier shooting incident, Baril said. Cummings currently is serving time at Menard prison in Chester.

Fulford's Sept. 20 to 21 trial in Jackson County ended in a hung jury. The case file contains two notes from the jury addressed to Judge David Watt.

"We are deadlocked at six and six, guilty vs. not guilty. We see no hope for change.

What should we do?" the jury asked Watt.

During deliberations, the jury asked Watt for transcripts of testimony including Williams' testimony and a note from the judge saying, "You have received all the evidence you will receive."

After the denied request, the jury deliberated again and wrote back.

"We are still deadlocked at 7-5, guilty vs. not guilty. We do not believe we can change anymore," the jury wrote on a yellow piece of notebook paper. The case was thwarted and the jury was relieved of their duties.

Baril said he believes the wrong men were arrested in the incident.

"It's completely up to them," Baril said. "I hope they don't file. It could be a big mess. I think they got the wrong guys on this one."

Baril said the Fulford jury could not reach a verdict because it did not believe the state's identification witness.

Montel Williams, another suspect in the incident who was not arrested in connection with the alleged hate crime, identified Cummings and Fulford in the incident.

Williams' beeper was found near the crime scene, Baril said. When police contacted him about his beeper, he identified Cummings and Fulford as the assailants.

Baril argued during the trial that Williams and his friends were the actual attackers. Baril said Williams has a long history of conflict with Cummings and Fulford.

Williams, a prosecution witness, was being sought by Carbondale police for a different baseball bat attack that occurred late last month. Both Williams and another Carbondale man were featured by Carbondale police in a "Crime Stoppers crime of the week" announcement.

The crime stoppers announcement said a warrant had been issued for Williams' arrest as a suspect in a violent home invasion of a Lewis Park apartment Sept. 20. He was accused of forcing his way into an apartment and beating a man in the face and head with a baseball bat.

Recently, the warrant for Williams' arrest in the Lewis Park home invasion incident was quashed, said Don Elliott of the Carbondale police.

Wepsiec could not be reached for comment about the quashed warrant.

In the April 12 attack, one SIUC student who was beaten on the face and head was treated at the intensive care unit at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale. The other victims did not need medical attention.

The day after the attack, SIUC officials issued a campus safety alert regarding the incident.

Mark Hamrock, assistant state's attorney in charge of the Cummings and Fulford cases, could not be reached for comment.

The case is scheduled for review Oct. 28 before Judge Watt. Wepsiec will then decide if he wants to retry the case, and a new trial date may be set.

Philip Morris admits it: smoking causes cancer

Philip Morris, the nation's largest cigarette manufacturer, acknowledged Wednesday what countless health professionals have said for years: smoking causes cancer and other health problems.

The company - which makes best-selling Marlboro and other cigarettes - acknowledged the serious health risks associated with its products after years of fierce arguments with government officials and medical experts.

The company's declaration "comes far too late, but still we must welcome it," President Clinton said. "It can be the beginning of clearing the air."

The announcement prompted a flurry of renewed calls for federal regulation of tobacco and greater efforts to keep cigarettes away from children. The Justice Department filed suit against tobacco companies last month seeking to recover billions of dollars in federal health costs for treating smokers. The states already have settled with the industry for $246 billion over 25 years.

"It certainly makes clear, as I have said for years, that the tobacco companies should answer for their actions in court," the president said Wednesday. "They should stop marketing their products to children. And certainly they should do much more to reduce youth smoking."

Philip Morris publicized its comments on the dangers of smoking on its new corporate Web site, a part of a $100 million advertising campaign aimed to remake the company's image. The company - which also owns Jell-O, Cool Whip, Stove Top and Miller Genuine Draft - has taken a public-relations beating as smokers, the government and unions have sued tobacco manufacturers for the health troubles associated with smoking. Its new Web site offers links to research on smoking conducted by the U.S. Surgeon General's Office, the World Health Organization and the American Cancer Society.

"There is an overwhelming medical and scientific consensus that cigarette smoking causes lung cancer, heart disease, emphysema and other serious diseases in smokers," the site states. "Smokers are far more likely to develop serious diseases, like lung cancer, than non-smokers."

The site also states that "there is no 'safe' cigarette" and that "cigarette smoking is addictive as that term is most commonly used today."

Anti-tobacco activists said the company's declaration will mean little until it changes its marketing practices but that the revelation at least sets the stage for greater regulation of tobacco products.

"Once you know that you are engaged in selling a product that is addictive and that virtually all smokers begin smoking as children, then you have a responsibility to reduce the number of people who become addicted," David Kessler, the former head of the federal Food and Drug Administration told the Associated Press.

CAROL McDONALD - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Glenn Poshard, vice chancellor for Administration, has been engaged in several projects, including upgrading information systems and student parking problems. Poshard joined the SIUC administration Aug. 2.

DAILY EGYPTIAN

Former U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard is amused when asked whether his years in politics prepared him for his new position as vice chancellor for Administration at SIUC.

"If you wanted to learn about the political environment, you could certainly learn a lot working here," Poshard said with a laugh.

Having spent 15 years in elected state and federal office looking at spending bills and other legislation, Poshard now spends his time looking at a time chart for several projects on which he is working.

Appointed to the vice chancellor position in August, Poshard's top projects now in development involve information technology, parking and building maintenance.

SIUC has about $123 million in deferred maintenance problems, Poshard said, including campus buildings and grounds, which makes it a high priority for the University.

One of his goals is to have every classroom on campus painted in the near future. He plans to devote $100,000 to the project this year.

Upgrading the University's information system is also on Poshard's agenda. He said administration officials are considering bringing in an outside company to manage the upgrading of the 8,000 desktop computers on campus.

A plan to rewire computers on the campus' east side is under development for completion in the fall of 2000. Information Technology and physical plant officials worked with Poshard's office to come up with the $1 million rewiring project.

Poshard said more federal and state education spending should go toward infrastructure and technology to help universities with their financial burden.

"We haven't put money into the kinds of things that really create the learning environment in which you can maximize your learning opportunities," he said.

"If we really believe that education is the first and greatest priority of any society, then we've got to look at the amount of money we're putting into that education in every phase."

Poshard hopes Gov. George Ryan and the legislature will address the Landlord-tenant task force to discuss fall issues

TIM BARRETT
DAILY EGYPTIAN

A task force formed in April to improve landlord and tenant relations in Carbondale will meet by the end of the month, according to City Manager Jeff Doherty.

Doherty said he will set a date for the Residential Leasing Task Force to meet during the last week of October. The task force last met in early August before the fall semester began.

Doherty said he had hoped to coordinate a time accommodating some student schedules, but was unable to do so, so he would go ahead and set a date for the committee to meet the last week of October.

Brian Atchison, an Undergraduate Student Government representative on the task force, said he had hoped the committee would have met earlier.

"These committees are the best way to kill any kind of movement," Atchison said.

"They get formed and never meet," he said. "It's kind of disappointing for the students that care."

The task force was created after three proposed housing ordinances were discussed but not voted on by the City Council March 30.

Graduate and Professional Student Council and USG had pushed for the ordinances in the spring, but after three hours of debate and confusion at the March 30 meeting, the task force was formed.

Originally a part of six ordinances presented by GPSC at the Feb. 16 council meeting, the three ordinances would have required landlords to give 24 hours notice to tenants before entering rental units, disclosure of owners and agents in lease agreements and identification of all fees and service charges in the lease agreement.

Further investigation of ordinances and finding alternative ways of improving landlord and tenant relations are two goals of the task force.

A method of recording complaints between landlords and tenants, a list suggesting who to rent from, encouraging the mediation process to solve disputes and providing more information on the leasing process to prospective tenants through brochures are possible topics for the committee to discuss.

The University's Alternative Dispute Resolution clinic gave a presentation on mediation at the August meeting, and Raul Ayala, a task force member and Carbondale property owner, was in attendance.

Ayala said he was disappointed that all the examples used in the mediation program revolved around problems tenants were having with landlords. The majority of tenants and landlords have a good working relationship, Ayala said, but there exists a "very small minority" of landlords and tenants who have problems. He said it was unfair to only characterize the landlords as being at fault.

"They try to do their best to protect their property and at least provide good living quarters," Ayala said of the majority of property owners.

Ayala said relations have been good this semester with his tenants, and he has only had a few confrontations.

The task force is composed of two representatives from GPSC, two from USG, two University administration representatives, one at-large community member and 10 property owners.

Study shows private institutions pay more, get better professors

RHONDA SCIARRA
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The widening rift between salaries of full professors at public and private universities is causing more professors to move from public to private institutions, according to a University of Illinois researcher.

F. King Alexander, an assistant professor of higher education at the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana, found salaries of professors at private institutions in 1998 exceeded those of professors at public institutions by an average of $15,300. In 1980, the difference was only $3,000.

He said because of the rift, larger state universities are losing faculty to private schools such as Tulane and Vanderbilt universities.

"A better public university serves as training ground for private universities," Alexander said. "They are becoming easy picking grounds for private universities."

The study looked at major research I universities (SIU is a research II institute), Alexander said. Although SIUC was not in the study, he compared SIUC to the results he found about UIUC.

"SIUC doesn't pay as well as we do here, and we have done very poorly for the last few years," he said.

Walter Jaehning, media coordinator for SIUC's faculty association, said he sees where faculty leave institutions of higher learning for better salaries, but said the competition for those jobs is often difficult.

"It's not always that easy for faculty to obtain positions at those institutions," Jaehning said.

Jaehning said the University administration has admitted that SIUC salaries lag behind those of other institutions, which may affect a professor's decision to remain teaching at SIUC.

Alexander said state funding cuts of universities contributed to the widening gap, and the loss of faculty is something that state legislature does not realize is happening.

The problem is that most state legislatures see the market universities have within the state alone," Alexander said. "They do not see the larger picture that faculty are marketed nationwide."

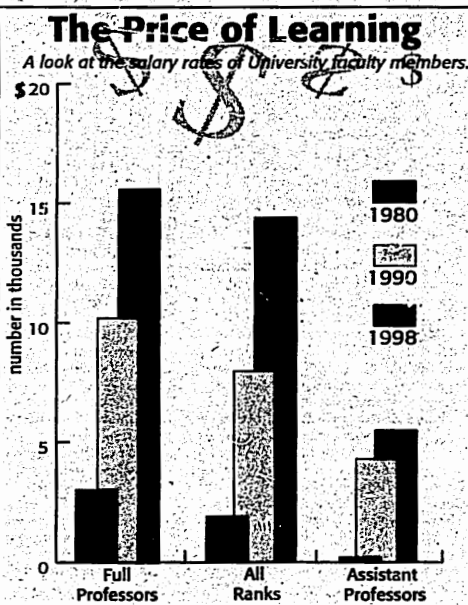

Jack Parker, dean of the College of Sciences, said that while there is not a lot of competition when hiring new faculty, keeping senior faculty can be difficult when private institutions offer a higher salary.

"This doesn't happen a lot, but when it does, it is very painful because it tends to be among the best faculty," Parker said.

Alexander said to attract strong faculty, public universities will be forced to strengthen nationally-recognized programs and eliminate others that are not as strong.

"They have had to pick and choose which academic disciplines they are going to allow to keep pace with private institutions," Alexander said.

Alexander's research will be published in the Journal of Staff, Program and Organization Development in December.

The Urge rocks the Carbondale scene

JASON KROGER - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Steve Ewing, frontman for the St. Louis band The Urge performs in front of an near sold-out crowd at Copper Dragon Brewing Co., 700 E. Grand Ave., Saturday night. The onstage performance, which personifies the energy of the band, was one of two shows put on by The Urge this weekend.

NATHANIEL PARK DAILY EGYPTIAN

As the house lights dimmed and the soft glow of black lights illuminated the audience, the quiet, collective crowd chatter gave way to a surge of applause.

In true rock star fashion, the seven members of St. Louis' most prominent urban hard-core band, The Urge, took the stage, complete with glowing, white face paint, for the second of a two-night stand at the Copper Dragon Brewing Co., 700 E. Grand Ave., Saturday.

Before the band's set, lead singer Steve Ewing said he anticipated another great show with the always-exciting Carbondale music scene. The Urge is no stranger to Southern Illinois, and it is the local fan's enthusiasm that fuels the bands high-intensity performances, Ewing said.

"The crowd from [Friday] night was really good, but we had a rough time because we got here late," Ewing said. "But it came together, and the crowd was there for us."

Eagerly anticipating The Urge, the overflowing Copper Dragon crowd released an explosion of energy for opening band, Fragile Porcelain Mice. Also a St. Louis-based rock band, Fragile Porcelain Mice combines rough-edge guitar riffs, extremely complex bass lines and an undefinable vocal display from singer Scott Randall, which punches and kicks its way through the heavy musical back-drop, to drive each show.

Randall said Saturday's performance at the Copper Dragon was better than Friday's because of the bands ability to sound-check before the show.

"Last night was on the fly," Randall said. "The Urge had some problems with their bus so they showed up a little late. Neither one of us had a sound check last night, so we were playing with no monitors, but tonight went a lot smoother."

Fragile Porcelain Mice unleashed several new songs on the Carbondale crowd, but the band doesn't plan to release a new album in the near future. Randall said the band wants to concentrate on playing live and not worry about a new album for now.

"We're just basically writing right now," Randall said. "We've been trying to work on new stuff, but it will probably be awhile before we have something new."

Randall said the band's future direction is not a concern for the group. He said Fragile's focus is to keep playing live and not get caught up in the level of the groups success.

"Right now I just want to write and play music," Randall said. "If things happen they happen. Right now I just want to play."

Fragile Porcelain Mice's hard-edge brand of rock and unusual vocals make classification of the band difficult at best. Randall said the group shouldn't be categorized as anything other than just a rock band.

"It's just rock music," Randall said. "It's based on simple rock instrumentation. Bass, drum, guitars and vocals. There's no Deejay, there's no hip-hop. It's just rock."

With Fragile Porcelain Mice whipping the Copper Dragon crowd into an early frenzy, Ewing and company had no problem capturing the enthusiasm from the herd of fans at Saturday's show.

Just like Fragile Porcelain Mice, The Urge delighted local fans with a series of selected new songs.

The new cuts will be released on an album, which is untitled at this date, due for release sometime in March. Ewing said he is not sure of the final layout of the new record, but several surprises are sure to please fans.

"You can't anticipate right now, but there will definitely be some surprises," Ewing said. "This time around, we definitely want to have a lot of guests because it's fun and it adds to the energy of the record."

The Urge incorporated several of its token surprises throughout Saturday's show.

The band showed a great deal of depth in its live performance, proving that a relentless touring schedule has paved the way for the groups more diverse sound.

Staple songs such as "Jump Right In" and "Straight To Hell" predictably sent the Copper Dragon's general admission section into mass bouncing chaos.

But it was the encore numbers that showed the best signs of The Urge's diversity. A free-form jam, which included an excerpt from the "Fat Albert Show" theme song, had the crowd singing. "Nah, nah, nah, gonna have a good time," in unison to the Saturday morning favorite. A Bob Marley cover also aided in Ewing's domination over the sweltering crowd as chants of "let's get together and feel all right," echoed throughout the Copper Dragon.

The throngs of on-lookers, captivated and energized by the two-hour long set, confirmed the prediction Ewing made before the show. He said he could not wait to hit the stage because Carbondale's response to the group's live show always makes the trip worthwhile.

"It's always good here," Ewing said. "We've been playing this town for years and it never fails; the crowd is always good."

SIUC conserves energy with environmental assessments

DAPHNE RETTER DAILY EGYPTIAN

The first of 10 SIUC environmental assessments was completed Sept. 2, providing data University officials can use to save money by taking advantage of energy-conserving techniques.

The assessment is part of the Southern Sustainability Project, an initiative committed to conservation of energy and resources at SIUC, in Carbondale and in Southern Illinois.

Phase One of the assessment was prepared by four students as part of "Interdisciplinary Approaches to Environment Issues," a course in the SIUC Environmental Studies Program.

The environmental assessment focused on solid waste and water use.

The solid waste assessment determined SIUC could conserve $20,000 annually on campus waste disposal by improving the campus recycling program.

After sorting garbage from University trash bins, students determined that more than 60 percent of waste constituted potentially recyclable materials.

According to the report, the proposed expansion of the recycling program would substantially reduce the nearly 10 million pounds of garbage hauled off to landfill each year. According to the water use assessment, SIUC consumed nearly 381 million gallons of water in fiscal year 1998, which is about one gallon per day.

Modifications such as low flow showerheads and faucets could potentially reduce the amount of water used by nearly 35 percent.

Dan Sitarz, the environmental assessment project adviser and one of four instructors for the course, said SIUC administrators have been responsive to environmental concerns.

"The administration has supported [the assessments] and they have been very helpful," he said. "They have done some very cutting-edge things."

The report was submitted to interim Chancellor John Jackson who is still reviewing it.

The solid waste assessment supported the Student Center's proposal to sell discounted mugs to cut down on wasteful Styrofoam cups, a program that was implemented in September. Proceeds from the mugs benefit Southern Sustainability.

Sitarz said the monetary benefits have created a demand for similar environmental assessments in the professional world.

"A lot of businesses and corporations use these assessments and not just because they are altruistic for their Mother Earth," he said. "They do it because they see it can make a difference in their bottom line."

"Approaches to Environment Issues" is taught every spring, where students will continue to conduct the assessments. Sitarz said, he would like to see other programs, such as Forestry, take an interest in putting together some of the reports.

The remaining assessments will examine energy, food service, purchasing, transportation, design, land use, research, curriculum and regulatory compliance. SIUC became the first Illinois university to sign the Tallero Declaration in February, promoting programs such as "Approaches to Environment Issues" and committing SIUC to a long-term course of environmental awareness.

Sitarz said the project allowed students the opportunity to get valuable hands-on experience the traditional classroom cannot provide.

"In the real world, changes can be made if you look at some of these problems in a different perspective," he said.

Micelle Gentzler, a senior in civil engineering from York, said her contributions to the assessment gave her an idea what to expect as a professional in her field.

"It got me started in the right direction," she said. "It gave me a lot of good experience."

Students survey lake terrain

DAN CRAFT
DAILY EGYPTIAN

It has been many years since a person could walk on what is now the bottom of Crab Orchard Lake, but thanks to the efforts of SIUC surveying students, a map of the terrain now exists.

The students, led by civil engineering professor Roy Frank, finished work on Crab Orchard and Little Grassy lakes this summer and have released a completed map of Crab Orchard Lake to officials at Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge.

"From start to finish, this has been about a six-year project, and seeing it finished is a testament to how hard so many students have worked," Frank said.

Because of its large size and the irregular features in and around Crab Orchard Lake, Frank said more than 100,000 different mapping points were used.

Most of the measurements were taken by moving a small sonar-equipped boat to different places on the lake and comparing positions from known landmarks. The contours of the bottom were mapped with the sonar unit, which Frank compared to a larger, more accurate version of a commercial fish-finding unit.

Such an unusual type of surveying is highly beneficial to broadening the scope of students' experience, Frank said, but students in most programs never get a chance to try it.

"When you think of a typical surveyor, our group isn't what you would expect," said Ryan Stillman, a senior in civil engineering from Villa Grove who helped map Crab Orchard and Little Grassy lakes.

"For one thing, we did most of this with a sonar unit on Roy's boat, and most survey work is done on land. For another, we're out doing something almost constantly."

The surveying students have worked on solid ground as well. Teams have mapped out area campgrounds, cemeteries and baseball diamonds in the past.

"We basically have two choices to complete the field work aspect of the program," Stillman said. "We can go out and work for a surveying company for a summer or spend that time working with Roy on one of our local projects."

The surveying specialization is available to students majoring in civil engineering, geology and industrial technology. The program is the only one of its type in Illinois, and Frank said graduates are in high demand in the field.

"These guys are really getting top-notch training, and prospective employers know that," Frank said. "With the experience and classes they go through, they're ready to get right out into the workforce."

About 98 percent of students pass the professional certification test, Frank said.

"Given the experience they already have when they leave SIUC, landing a job is not usually a problem for them," Frank said.

"For instance, they can show these lake maps to an employer, and it shows that they've not only learned the concepts but put them to good use out in the real world."

For Stillman, the project has shown him that real surveying does not always follow the examples in a book.

"There were some days on the lake when we spent most of our time trying to pull Roy's boat off whatever we had snagged it on," Stillman said. "Those days, I thought I had enrolled in a swimming class by mistake."

All of Stillman's swimming paid off, though. Frank presented the completed map of Crab Orchard Lake to planners at the Wildlife Refuge in September. In conjunction with Take Pride In America, a non-profit group that works for the beautification of America, the refuge is offering the maps for sale to the public.

If sales go well, Stillman said, the program may release the map of Little Grassy Lake soon. The mapping of Devil's Kitchen Lake is expected to be finished within another year.

Professors angered over posting of class notes on Internet sites

ANDY EGENSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Lynda Sagrestano, an assistant professor in psychology, was appalled to learn her class lecture notes for "Social Psychology 307" were being sold to website operations and offered to students free on the Internet.

"These people are profiting from my lectures," Sagrestano said. "It is the student's responsibility to come to class and take the notes."

Lecture notes for 25 SIUC classes currently are posted at Verity.com, one of three websites that offer lecture notes to students.

Other websites such as StudentU.com and Study24-7.com also offer free lecture notes online. The websites offer lecture notes for classes on campuses across the country.

Students already enrolled in a class take notes and then sell them to the websites. Verity.com provides assurance to note takers and people using the service that their identity will remain anonymous.

Students can also go online to fill out job applications at these "companies." An advertisement on one of the websites informs students they can make up to $1,000 a semester by working for them.

The note-taking websites are legal and open to anyone who wants to use the website as a learning tool, said Jeff Lawson, one of the four founders of Verity.com.

Kansas State University's lawyer, Richard Seaton, is taking steps on behalf of their faculty to hinder this action. Administrators at KSU have advised faculty members that professors own the common-law copyright on their lectures.

Seaton issued a statement that professors can attach to their syllabi a notice prohibiting any student from selling notes or taking money from any person or commercial firm without prior permission from the professor.

Seaton believes most of the sites violate copyright infringement laws.

Lawson, however, said there is no copyright issue involved in the note-taking industry. Lawson said most of the classes for which his company provides notes are large introductory-level classes.

"Most of the courses that are covered are things that are general knowledge," Lawson said. "In economics, no one owns the copyright of what supply and demand is."

Lawson said note-taking services have been around more than 20 years. The only difference, he said, is that his company is applying it to new technology.

Lawson and three of his friends came up with the web notes idea when they were undergraduate students at the University of Michigan.

He said the business has been very successful. The business began on one college campus and has grown to 99 campuses nationwide. Lawson refused to say how much money his company has made but mentioned they were in a "high growth stage."

Anand Kumar, a professor in marketing, said the idea that someone is posting notes from his class without prior permission disturbs him.

Kumar's Marketing 304 class is listed on Verity.com's website, but he said the notes are not what he discusses in class.

"I think they must have the title of the course mixed up because they are talking about different types of things," Kumar said.

Max Grubb, a professor in the Department of Radio-Television, said that while it does not matter to him personally whether the notes in his class are posted, each person involved with the note-taking service has to address an ethical question.

"The only ethical question is the person who is taking them," Grubb said. "You will hurt yourself if you rely on websites for notes."

Grubb said the notes posted from his class are fairly accurate, but he thinks students cannot survive on their services alone.

"If a student is relying on these notes to get them through my class, they are in sad shape," Grubb said. "You don't even know if they are a good note taker or not."

These people are profiting from my lectures. It is the student's responsibility to come to class and take the notes.

Sweet-smelling swine

SIUC professor is working to develop a system to eliminate the odor of swine waste

TRAVIS MORSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

With a background in biochemical engineering, James Blackburn never thought his research would revolve around hog waste, but this SIUC associate engineering professor has developed a system that may not only deodorize waste, but could also provide an inexpensive energy source as well.

"If someone had told me five years ago I'd be working with swine waste, I'd have been quite surprised," Blackburn said. "As it turns out, this research has been one of the highlights of my career."

Blackburn's system, which is called advanced aerobic thermophilic treatment, utilizes bacteria already existing in manure to recover offensive ammonia odors.

At the same time, lab tests indicate that hot water heat produced during the treatment process could be used as a heat source for animal nurseries or containment buildings.

According to Blackburn, he was initially working on a system to decay industrial waste.

"I've been working on a concept to use high energy organisms to decay waste for quite some time," Blackburn said. "At first, we were working with industrial waste but then we discovered it was useful in decaying swine waste."

Blackburn began his experiments in November 1998 after receiving funding from the Council for Food and Agricultural Research.

He said the intent of the experiment was twofold — to deal with the odor issue, which has become a significant problem in the Midwest, and to produce an energy source for profit.

"We were motivated by being able to come up with a system that eliminates the odor problem while making energy that pays for itself," Blackburn said. "I feel really good about it because it may be able to help farmers stay in business through these difficult times."

One of the reasons hog waste odor has become a problem in recent years is because pork production has become more concentrated, according to the Illinois Agricultural Statistics Service.

George Swisher, dean of the College of Engineering, said helping solve the odor problem is very important in hog farm areas.

"Anything we can do to help that situation and help the environment is a very good thing," Swisher said. "Refuse odor is a major problem in Kentucky and Tennessee where there are a lot of feeder lots. His system has the long-term potential to be a great solution to some of these problems."

Robert Arthur, associate dean of Agriculture, agreed that if Blackburn's system works, it could really help farmers who are struggling in this country.

"I truly hope Mr. Blackburn's system works because not only could it solve the odor problem, it could also help farmers recuperate some of their utility costs," Arthur said. "In the rearing of swine, several buildings have to be heated. This process could help decrease that cost."

For Blackburn, the next step will be to deal with larger quantities of waste to prove the process's potential.

"The biggest problem we faced during experimentation was trying to measure the amount of heat produced in small quantities of waste," Blackburn said. "That's why the next step will involve running a full scale system."

Blackburn predicts that a year from now, a 30- or 40-gallon system will be built on an actual farm to show the public how the process works.

"Building the system on a farm will be the first step in commercialization," Blackburn said. "Then people will see that it works, and hopefully, it'll be something that makes a major difference in people's lives."

deferred maintenance problems at SIUC and other universities in the next legislative session.

"I think it's time for the state government to really take a hard look at this," he said. "While we need money on all these other issues, this is an area that needs to be addressed."

The problem of student parking also is being addressed, Poshard said. He recently allowed the Parking Division to create 140 additional spaces near Thompson Point to ease the problem of limited space on the west side of campus.

"We built a brand new parking lot on the east side of the campus," he said. "Unfortunately, the parking problem is on the west side of the campus. There's a real need to balance out the equality of parking for our kids no matter where they are."

Campus security matters also fall under Poshard's jurisdiction. In light of recent school shootings, he is working with the Department of Public Safety on developing a violence response plan.

"You hope things like that never happen," he said. "If something like that ever took place here, we want to be ready and we want a plan in place to respond to that very quickly."

Poshard said he has already gotten a taste of University politics in dealing with various campus committees. He said, however, the activism and involvement in the University community is a good thing.

"In a way, there's more democracy going on at a university campus than there is in Washington, D.C.," Poshard said. "The campus is political in a good way in that there is a participatory governance here that even surpasses anything that you see in the private sector and certainly in congress."

"I think people are given a maximum opportunity here to participate in their own governance."

CLEAN UP

But Kristen Suryk, a Delta Zeta sorority member, was unconcerned with community service hours and assisted in the cleanup for different reasons.

"I run [around] the lake every day," said Suryk, a sophomore in interior design from Springfield. "I hate the litter. It's not too difficult and it helps out a lot."

Bill McMinn, director of the Student Recreation Center, was excited about the number of volunteers who wanted to clean up the lake. The Student Recreation Center is responsible for upkeep of the lake.

"I think it's very unique to have a lake [on campus]," said McMinn. "It's a special asset [that] we should take care of."

The lake became a part of SIUC in the 1950s when the campus bought it from the Thompson family, and is used for recreation such as fishing, swimming, and boating.

Margo Willis, a Carbondale resident who walked her dog Saturday morning, agrees the lake needed a makeover.

"People are pretty ignorant about throwing trash," said Willis, an SIUC alumna. "It's one of the prettiest campuses in the state and we ought to keep it that way."

THAT SCRAMBLED WORD GAME

by Henri Arnold and Mike Argleton

Comic Striptease

I almost told her how I feel, but decided it was better to not mention it.

It's for the best and I think it'll be really good for both of us.

So long do you think that will last?

A month or two, tops...

by Charles Boyce

Shoot Me Now!!

Wrongfully imprisoned Chuck and Phil were kidnapped by the criminally insane Sister Mary Carnaticos, who between her Januaries and active social calendar, likes to hack up fat little men.

And now, even as we speak here in Lunch Lady Land, Bill and Belko are on their way to rescue them. If they make it in time, all will be well and they may go out for tacos afterwards.

Now get the hell out of here and finish your Salisbury Steak and French-fried okra before I spork your ass, you little hippie

by Garry Trudeau

AND THERE ARE NO GUARANTEES. THE COMPANY COULD STALL OUT, ALONG WITH THE STOCK PRICE. THERE'S ALSO AN UNLIMITED NUMBER OF OUT-COMES.

SOUNDS COMPLICATED. CAN'T YOU JUST TELL ME HOW MUCH MONEY?

DON'T FORGET YOUR FRIENDS, PLEE.

GATEWAY RECAPS

NORTHERN IOWA 29
SW MISSOURI STATE 17

Adam Bengtson ran for 165 yards and Ryan Helming threw for 246 yards as Northern Iowa (6-1, 2-1 Gateway) was supplied with enough offense to hold off Jay Rodgers and Southwest Missouri.

With the score tied 10-10 at halftime, UNI broke the game open in the second half, scoring 19 unanswered points on a Bengtson 4-yard run, two field goals from Brian Stegall and an interception Jerome Peterson returned 81 yards to pay dirt.

Rodgers and the Bears (3-3, 1-2) would be the last ones to see the end zone for the rest of the day, as he fired a 9-yard pass to Sean Adams with 4:53 left in the game. The Bears were unable to muster another score.

Rodgers ended the game with one touchdown on the ground and one in the air, with 257 yards passing. Southwest Missouri was contained to 56 rushing yards.

SOUTH FLORIDA 14
ILLINOIS STATE 13

Illinois State kicker Jake Strader hooked a potential game-winning field goal attempt from 24 yards with six seconds left in the game, giving the Redbirds their first I-AA defeat of the season.

Scoreless with a minute left in the first half, the slow-developing game became more lively when freshman quarterback Dusty Burk pitched to Walter James for a 3-yard plunge into the end zone, capping a 57-yard drive.

South Florida responded quickly, beginning the second half with an impressive seven play, 65-yard drive closed by Manque Blackwell's first touchdown pass of the day to R.J. Anderson.

ISU (5-2) answered right back, scoring on a 13-yard dart from Burk to Rickey Garrett. However, the extra point attempt failed, and the visitors led 13-7.

Burk played in place of star Redbird quarterback Kevin Glenn, who suffered a season-ending knee injury against Indiana State last week.

Blackwell connected with Anderson again at the end of the third quarter, giving the Bulls the lead and setting the stage for Strader's failed attempt at the end.

INDIANA STATE 34
ILLINOIS STATE 13

Led by a punishing ground attack, Indiana State notched its first victory of the season in the battle of the winless Saturday in Terre Haute, Ind.

The Sycamores (1-5) found the end zone three times in the opening quarter on one-yard runs by Sheraton Fox (18 carries, 68 yards) and John Effinger and a 3-yard dash from Steve Englehart.

Englehart then tossed a 64-yard pass to Matt Nelson three minutes into the second quarter giving ISU a comfortable 28-0 halftime lead.

The Sycamores' final strike would come with 8:57 left in the third quarter, when Jared Sessum ran in from 4 yards out.

Thursday and that has to happen in our community."

But Roberts said her civil rights were violated when she was having a conversation with a friend outside near the north end of the Student Center. Although Roberts said she did not have a protest sign, the officer said he would arrest her unless she left.

"I pointed out that I wasn't holding a sign or anything and was simply having a conversation with a friend and was still told that I had to leave," Roberts said. "I was also not allowed to walk through the breezeway of the Student Center with a sign in my hand."

Roberts said the plainclothed officer would not identify his name, so she took his picture to use for identification.

When asked about protesting procedures, an SIU policeman in uniform standing outside the Student Center near the protesters also would not provide his name to the DAILY EGYPTIAN.

"Didn't see anything, didn't hear nothing," the SIU policeman said.

Harvey Welch, vice chancellor for Student Affairs, said during Wednesday's meeting with University officials, they discussed the upcoming protest and decided a demonstration would violate University policy.

"The protest could possibly interfere with the Board of Trustees meeting and violate safety concerns," Welch said. "They might block doorways and passages in the building."

University policy prohibits "demonstrations which disrupt the regular and orderly performances of authorized University functions; interfere with the safety, welfare, and the rights of members of the University community; University guests and local citizens; or are destructive of public or private property," according to the SIUC Crime Awareness and Campus Security Act.

Welch's concerns are reflected in the demonstration policy which states demonstrations will not be allowed if they present a safety hazard. In this case, Welch said blocking doorways violates the building's fire code.

Although a March 17, 1998, Daily Egyptian article reported that about 80 international students protesting for lower tuition were allowed inside the Student Center holding signs and placards, Jackson said the students may have been given an exception to the policy.

Greg Tatham, the director of the Student Center, was unavailable for comment Sunday.

game two as the Shockers capitalized on Saluki mistakes to take a 2-0 lead.

The Salukis fought back in game three to win 16-14, led by junior outside hitter Zazza Green and senior setter Debbie Barr.

Green recorded nine kills in game three for a 500 hitting percentage, while Barr dished out 11 assists.

However, the Saluki comeback was short-lived as the Shockers regrouped to win game four, 15-8.

Once again, Kemner led the Saluki offense with 20 kills, while Green had 13 kills. Barr, who played in her 400th career game, handed out 41 assists.

The Salukis will travel for their fourth straight road match Tuesday night at 7 in non-conference action against Murray State University in Murray, Ky.

said the survivors' stories can serve as a wake-up call to communities like Carbondale.

"It's real easy for us to wear our rose-colored glasses and think that it only happens in other places or it couldn't be our town or our school," Sommer said. "Sexual assault and violence against individuals is a real thing that's going on in the community."

Jinwi Ghogomu, a senior in chemistry from Chicago, participated to support a close friend who was assaulted two years ago. Ghogomu said the event serves as an avenue to deal with negative feelings in a productive way.

"It's a release," she said. "In the beginning there was a lot of anger, but I've learned that anger is destructive."

After her friend was assaulted, Ghogomu realized everyone is vulnerable to sexual assault.

"It's made me very aware," she said. "It could happen to me one day."

ALCOHOL

about the dangers of alcohol.

Salveti, nurse manager for the Emergency Department for Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, said the hospital attends to more alcohol-related injuries while school is in session.

The Wellness Center offers educational opportunities to decrease such occurrences, including a Wellness Fair at the Recreation Center Wednesday.

Activities and information about alcohol, including tasting of non-alcoholic beverages and free safety whistles for women, will be available at the fair.

Chris Labyk, coordinator for the Wellness Center, said the consequences of binge drinking or intoxication may be more detrimental than people imagine.

"Many things may be related to alcohol," Labyk said. "Students tend to have unprotected sex when they are drunk. People are prone to have unprotected sex or even sex they would not normally have engaged in because their inhibitions are down when they are drinking."

Salveti said Memorial Hospital will add extra sessions to its educational programs throughout the week but stresses the importance of continuing the educational processes of awareness.

"It is always a conscious choice to drink; it is a conscious choice to drink and drive," she said. "If that focus is out there for Alcohol Awareness Week, that would be my message. There is a conscious decision made, and the consequences are damaging."

According to the 1997 Harvard University's School of Public Health College Alcohol Study, which surveyed 130 colleges, 43 percent of U.S. college students had engaged in binge drinking at some point in the two weeks prior to the survey.

Students most likely to be involved in binge drinking were white males age 23 or younger who were either involved in athletics or residents of a fraternity.

Binge drinking generally is defined as five or more drinks in a row for men and four or more drinks in a row for women.

Labyk said 76 percent of SIUC students are not binge drinkers and the University falls below the average statistics of binge drinking and associated problems with alcohol abuse.

"I think compared to other schools, we have been progressing in alcohol awareness," she said. "We have been seen as the party school, and I think often other schools have a much larger problem than we do here."

Recent events surrounding the University of Illinois have sparked attention to the problems associated with binge drinking and the consequences of such actions.

Three men under the age of 21 were treated at Carle Foundation Hospital in Urbana Thursday night after obtaining alcohol poisoning from a fraternity-related function. One of the three men ingested nearly six times the legal definition of intoxication; having a blood alcohol level of 0.48.

Megan Styles, a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma at U of I and a bartender in Urbana, said the incident at her school is not a rare sight, but the fraternities and sororities are not to blame.

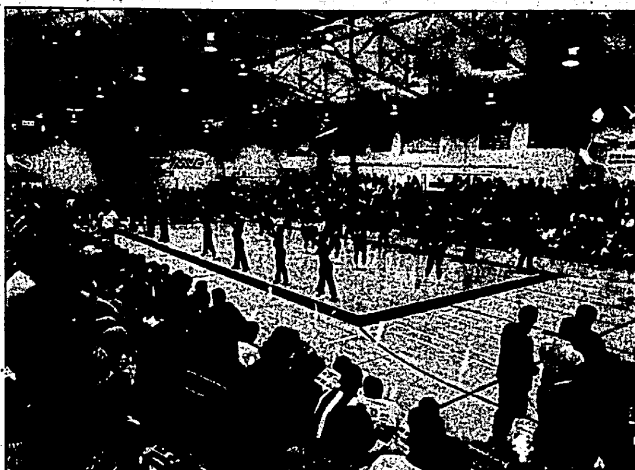

"They knew they were drunk, but they were not forced to drink," she said.

"They seemed to feel obligated because someone else had bought the drinks for them, but they obviously didn't refuse."

Styles also said bartenders and waitresses have a responsibility that is often overlooked.

"I've seen plenty of people falling all over our bar when they are really drunk," Styles said.

"I think stressing preventative methods to bartenders and those who sell alcohol helps. We are the one's to make a judgment call as to when to stop serving and realize when people have had too much."

PRAMONGCHAI NOPSUNAWONG - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Let the madness begin: A capacity crowd filled Davies Gymnasium Friday night to witness the Salukis' first basketball practice of the season. "Almost Late Night" consisted of free food, a three-point shoot-out, a slam dunk competition and the Saluki spirit groups. The Saluki men's and women's "Millennium" teams were introduced to the fans.

Zanders tossed a career-best four touchdown passes. More often than not, Zanders' receivers were easy targets.

"I couldn't throw the ball fast enough on a few of those," Zanders said. "When I turned around [to look at a receiver after play-action fakes], the next thing I knew he was wide open right in the end zone or on his way to the end zone."

After Quarless made a curious choice to allow WIU to have the ball and the wind at their backs to start the game, the Leathernecks got busy.

WIU took the lead on the opening possession when the agile Tharp, who appeared to be bottled up in traffic, scooted out of a cluster of Saluki defenders and bolted to his right en route to a 37-yard touchdown run.

WIU's Bobby Starks ran for a 4-yard touchdown seven minutes later, and a 22-yard pass from Zanders to a wide open Starks widened the Leatherneck lead to 21-0 by the end of the first quarter.

The rout was officially on at the onset of the second quarter, when a pass from Saluki quarterback Sherard Poteete deflected off the hands of senior fullback Rodney Kennedy and WIU's Edgerton Hartwell snatched the ball out of the air and rumbled 41 yards for a back-breaking touchdown. WIU led 28-0, and a number of sheepish SIU fans in attendance began heading for their cars.

With the loss, even a late season resurgence would not be enough to catapult SIU into the playoffs. Saluki sophomore free safety Bart Scott said the team needs to do some soul-searching to avoid a prolonged slide.

"This is embarrassing, but a loss is a loss," Scott said. "There's no way to point fingers... everybody needs to point the finger at themselves."

In addition to being a step faster than SIU, the Leathernecks were aided by a boatload of costly Saluki penalties. A discouraged Quarless said he never envisioned his defense could play so atrociously.

"Of course not," he said. "Maybe we got to get a new head coach, I guess."

Trailing 28-0, SIU briefly stopped the bleeding when freshman running back Tom Koutsos ran for a 2-yard score, but the Salukis failed to capitalize on good field position on their next drive.

WIU then used a 7-yard Ford touchdown run to push the lead to 35-7 with 5:19 left in the half, and the Leathernecks took a 35-13 lead into halftime.

A pair of Zanders-to-Ashlee Frazier touchdown passes after the intermission quickly ended any thoughts of SIU making the final score respectable.

SIU's offense tried to keep up with WIU, but Poteete was under attack all afternoon by a speedy, blitzing Leatherneck defense that recorded five sacks.

WIU's defensive line manhandled the Saluki offensive front, routinely collapsing the pocket and forcing Poteete to run instead of throw. Poteete rushed for 144 yards, but completed less than half of his passes.

Patterson said watching film on SIU revealed weaknesses his squad was able to exploit. "We felt [the Salukis] were a little more predictable with how they lined up than some teams we play," he said. "We were looking for some specific personnel matchups, and I guess it's safe to say we found them."

Those looking for a silver lining can take comfort from a familiar source — Cornell Craig. Craig broke the Gateway record for most consecutive games with a reception when he caught a 17-yard pass with 10:24 left in the opening quarter.

It was the 34th game in a row Craig has made a catch. Craig also grabbed a 19-yard touchdown pass to cut WIU's lead to 55-27 with less than a minute remaining in the third quarter.

SIU's pain stemming from the game is not limited to mental anguish. Sophomore receiver Brian Hamlett, a worthy complement to Craig, is out for the season after suffering a broken collarbone.

A number of other Salukis, including defensive tackle Tavita

Saluki quarterback Sherard Poteete is flushed out of the pocket by a Western Illinois defender. Poteete had little time to throw the ball all afternoon, as SIU lost in embarrassing fashion, 68-27, Saturday in Macomb.

Saluki defense falls apart as Western Illinois ties all-time Gateway record for most points scored in a conference game

JAY SCHWAB

MACOMB — As if beating SIU for the 16th straight time wasn't satisfying enough, the Western Illinois University football team administered a pounding of historic proportions Saturday.

By the time the 68-27 drilling of the Salukis was complete, a homecoming crowd of 13,341 at Hanson Field in Macomb had witnessed one of the most embarrassing days in SIU football history.

The 68 points surrendered was the most points the Salukis have allowed since a 70-7 loss to Oklahoma State University in 1973, and the Leathernecks tied the Gateway record for most points scored in a league game.

SIU (3-4, 0-3 Gateway) has lost four in a row and is beginning to draw comparisons to the '98 team that folded late in the season, losing seven straight games. However, SIU head coach Jan Quarless is not ready to accuse his players of shortchanging him in the effort department.

"I'd like to believe they [gave full effort]," Quarless said. "I just think when you score that many points you have to wonder."

"I don't want to fault their effort, I just think our concentration was less than it needs to be."

Western Illinois (5-2, 1-2) amassed 625 yards of offense against a Saluki defense that didn't appear to be in the mood to play football. WIU running backs Charles Sharp, Rashad Harris and J.R. Ford flashed their quickness to

Volleyball team hangs tough, but not tough enough

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Although the SIU volleyball team showed some fight this weekend, the squad could not prevent its sixth and seventh losses in a row.

The Salukis fell 3-0 (15-10, 15-8, 17-15) to Southwest Missouri State University Friday night in Springfield, Mo., and 3-1 (17-15, 15-12, 14-16, 15-8) to Wichita State University Saturday night in Kansas.

Against the Bears, the Salukis (3-15, 1-10) battled throughout, but the Bears proved to be the stronger of the two teams in the latter portion of the games.

It was a see-saw battle in games one and two before the Bears took over. SIU jumped out to an early three point lead in game three, but once again, the Bears (12-8, 6-4) came back to win the game, 17-15.

"We need to learn how to close those kind of games out," said Saluki head coach Sonya

Locke in a press release following the match.

"I think we need to believe we can do it. We have moments when we're good and then we have them slip by."

Freshman outside hitter Kristie Kemner led the Salukis with 21 kills and seven digs, while sophomore middle blocker Jenny Noel had 13 kills, and senior outside hitter Marissa Kimbrough recorded 10 digs.

The Bears were led by senior Amanda Omar's 19 kills and seven digs.

Unfortunately for Locke, Saturday night's match was a replica of the Southwest Missouri State match.

The Salukis jumped out to a six point lead in game one against the Shockers (8-14, 5-6) but could not hold off the Shockers comeback, losing 17-15.

The tough, game-one loss carried over to
