European Community retaliates against Iraq

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — The European Community called Monday for expulsion of all Iraqi military attaches and restrictions on other Iraqi diplomats in retaliation for Iraqi raids on Western diplomatic compounds in Kuwait last week.

Some countries, including Britain and Belgium, announced such retaliatory measures Monday, and others were expected to quickly follow. France and Italy took steps over the weekend.

"We have decided on a common decision to expel military personnel connected to Iraqi embassies in our capitals, and to restrict the freedom of movement of personnel at their embassies," the 12 EC foreign ministers said in a communique following a daylong meeting.

The EC foreign ministers delayed a final decision, however, on a financial aid package for Egypt, Turkey and Jordan, three countries particularly harmed by U.N. economic sanctions on Iraq imposed after Baghdad's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Britain, joined by Holland and Spain, successfully argued a proposed EC aid figure of $1.95 billion was outdated in light of Japan's decision last Friday to boost its Persian Gulf crisis contribution from $1 billion to $4 billion.

The previous figure, suggested by the EC executive Commission, "needs to be brought up to date," said British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd.

Britain also argued its substantial

Dugan dumped

Air Force chief fired by Cheney

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney fired Air Force Chief of Staff Michael Dugan for "poor judgment" Monday in publicly discussing U.S. bombing plans that Dugan said were aimed specifically at Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

It was the first time in 41 years that a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff — the highest military body in the United States, with one officer each from the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and a chairman — had been fired.

"Relieving him is not a pleasant task but I felt it was a necessary one," Cheney said. Dugan, 53, a decorated Vietnam War veteran and four-star general, was selected for the high-level post by Cheney only two months ago.

"At this moment, we have over 150,000 U.S. military personnel deployed in Operation Desert Shield in the Middle East," Cheney said in remarks to a group of regional reporters at the Old Executive Office Building. "They may be engaged in hostilities in the very near future."

Noting that conduct of U.S. security policy is a "very delicate task," Cheney said Dugan's controversial remarks to reporters did not "reveal an adequate understanding of what is expected of him."

Dugan's comments "showed poor judgment at a very sensitive time," Cheney said at a Pentagon news conference later. He added that Dugan "will be retired" from the Air Force.

Cheney said he intends to recommend to President Bush that he nominate Gen. Merrill A. "Tony" McPeak, 54, commander of Pacific Air Forces at Hickam Air Force Base in Hawaii, to replace Dugan as Air Force chief of staff.

University adopts proposal, changes grad student status

By Leslie Colp
Staff Writer

Confusion over the definition of full-time status for graduate students has been resolved — at least temporarily.

Many graduate students were forced to pay back their loans early because they did not meet the requirements for full-time status.

As of fall semester, the number of semester hours for full-time status for financial aid is six semester hours for the fall and spring semesters. Three semester hours are required for the summer term.

This solution, proposed by John H. Yopp, dean of the Graduate School, was approved Thursday by Benjamin A. Shepherd, vice president of Academic Affairs and Research and Harvey Welch, Jr. vice president of Student Affairs.

The confusion began last June when Admissions and Records noticed that the guidelines in the graduate catalog were not being followed. The graduate catalog stated that 12 hours were necessary to be classified as a full-time student for financial aid purposes.

"Some of our departments (in Admissions and Records) were in error," said Roland Keim, associate director for admissions and records.

Loans for some graduate students were not being deferred after this error was found because many graduate students were not taking 12 hours.

"It's thought of as a larger problem than it really is," Keim said. He added that graduate assistants in default on their loans or those who had used their grace periods were the only ones affected.

This type of deferment is known as in-school deferment, said Pamela Britton, director of financial aid. She added that the best way for graduate students to determine the number of semester hours they are required to have is to contact the financial institution that lent them the money.

The hours required vary from

Council to discuss keg registration proposal

By Karen Radius
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council could delay action on a keg registration proposal tonight.

City Manager Steve Hoffner has recommended that the council delay action on the keg ordinance until further discussion with representatives of the SIU-C student body.

If the council decides to postpone voting on the ordinance, Hoffner has agreed to meet with the Undergraduate Student Government and Graduate and Professional Student Council.

"I will meet with the undergraduate and graduate student leaders to seek a joint resolution of the concerns that they have expressed and to seek their cooperation in working with us," Hoffner said in a report to the council.

USG representatives plan to attend the meeting and will meet Tuesday night in the USG office, said Jack Sullivan, senator.

"I will also encourage representatives from the University administration, the business community and other interested parties to join these discussions," Hoffner said.

The council also will discuss modifications of liquor licenses.

Poshard: Let countries pay for own defense

By Brian Gross
Staff Writer

U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard and fellow congressmen will get out the political cutlery this week as they try to trim the federal defense budget.

Poshard, D-Carterville, said defense spending should be cut so more money is available for domestic programs, and one way to reduce the budget is through making other countries pay for their own defense.

An amendment was added to the defense spending bill last week to require Japan to pay for the cost of keeping American troops stationed there or else have those troops pulled out of Japan.

Poshard voted for the amendment, and said Japan is wealthy enough to take care of itself.

"This has a lot to do with the years of frustration members of Congress, including myself, and the American people have had," Poshard said. "The United States has had to foot the bill for peacekeeping in nations all over the world at a tremendous amount of expense."

He said the salaries and health care plans of the Japanese who work on American bases in Japan are paid for by American taxpayers.

"That's crazy at a time when Japan has all this economic power," Poshard said. "At this time, (Japan and Korea) are very able to take care of themselves."

The amendment requires Japan to pay for all cost of maintaining the 50,000 U.S. forces there. If not paid for, 5,000 troops will be withdrawn each year.

Japan pays $2.9 billion, 38 percent of the $7.4 billion of the costs each year to U.S. troops in Japan.

The House is scheduled to vote on the defense budget bill this week. The figure being debated is $283 billion, a number which represents a decrease of $17 billion over the 1990 defense budget. Congress allocated $300 billion for defense this year, Dave Stricklin, Poshard's spokesman

IOC to vote on 1996 Olympic site

Atlanta among favorites for 1996 Games

TOKYO (UPI) — The success of a two-year campaign by Atlanta, costing almost $7 million, will be decided Tuesday when the International Olympic Committee votes on the site of the 1996 Summer Games.

Atlanta, Toronto, Melbourne and Athens are all strong candidates to receive the honor. The other two bidders are Manchester, England, and Belgrade, Yugoslavia.

The vote is to take place at 8:30 p.m. (7:30 a.m. EDT Tuesday). To win, a city must receive 45 of 88 votes. If no candidate attains this majority, the city with the fewest votes is eliminated and a new vote is taken.

More than 300 civic leaders and other supporters traveled from Atlanta to Tokyo for the vote, and a favorable decision would touch off a big celebration in the Georgia capital. It is estimated that the Olympics would generate more than $3 billion into the Georgia economy.

Only two U.S. cities have staged Summer Olympics: St. Louis (1904) and Los Angeles (1932, 1984).

A videotape message from President Bush will highlight Atlanta's formal presentation.

Tuesday's ritual begins with hour-long presentations by each of the six candidates, led by Atlanta. Following are Athens, Toronto, Belgrade, Melbourne and Manchester.

Athens remains the sentimental favorite since 1996 will mark the centennial anniversary of the first modern Olympics in that city.

"You don't hold a 100th birthday party in someone else's home," said one of the Athens Delegates. "The centenary Games should be held in Athens."

However, concerns over air pollution, airport access and security shadow the Athens bid.

Melbourne has several factors in its favor, including the fact that only one Olympics has been held in the Southern Hemisphere (Melbourne in 1956) and that most of the facilities already are in place. In an effort to allay worries over transportation to Australia, the Melbourne group has offered to subsidize travel costs.

Television money will work to the advantage of Atlanta and Toronto. The 1992 Summer Games in Barcelona will receive $401 million from NBC, and Atlanta or Toronto most likely would draw bigger TV revenue since they are in a favorable time zone for American audiences.

Netters come out fighting

The Saluki women's tennis team packed all the right punches against Eastern Illinois last Thursday to beat the Panthers 9-0, but the team's winning spirit was squashed at the Indiana Fall Invitational Tournament.

The Salukis defeated Eastern, a Gateway Conference foe, 9-0 bringing the team's record to 1-0.

"Eastern Illinois is always a good match for us to start with," SIU-C tennis coach Judy Auld said. "I feel like we had a lot more depth than they did."

"We basically had won the match coming out of the singles but we just went ahead and played 12 sets," Auld said. "I was glad we were able to get everyone involved except for freshman Wendy Anderson, who was going to play No. 9 singles."

Anderson came down with the flu Thursday morning. Junior Lori Edwards also came down with the flu over the weekend.

The team's illnesses carried over through the weekend at the Indiana tournament where the team couldn't fend off the tough competition.

The Invitational was an individual tournament so no team scores were kept. The Salukis played Indiana University, Michigan, Western Michigan and Miami of Ohio. Auld said the experience is more important than the outcome of the matches.

"This is one tournament where we go and we just really count it up as experience," Auld said. "These teams are real strong. This is more of a learning type of tournament."

Saluki defensive linemen hungry for fresh quarterback

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

The defensive lineman flies off the line of scrimmage, searching. He fights past the offensive blocker towards his target. He lines up the quarterback in his sights for the kill. Sack!

"At game time you need a quarterback," Saluki junior defensive lineman Jim Rung said. "You can almost taste it. It's a delicacy."

The Saluki defensive line feasted on the Murray State Racers last Saturday, making a smorgasbord of a pair of Racer quarterbacks for four sacks and numerous pressures. Twice in the game Saluki defensive linemen notched back to back sacks in one series of downs.

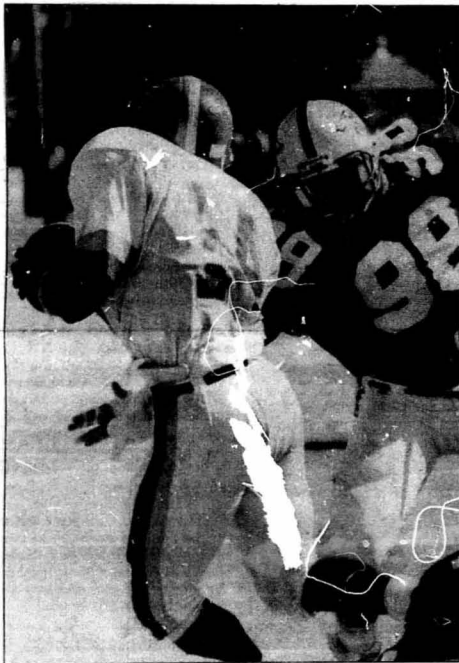

"I think we've improved the pass rush," defensive coordinator Gerry Hart said. "It's relative to good coverage by the defensive backs. They go hand in hand. If we cover well it helps get sacks, if we rush well it helps get interceptions."

"We are improving," freshman defensive lineman Darnell Laurent said. "But we have a long way to go. We've got to get better every week."

Senior defensive lineman John Dollenmaier, who had 11 1/2 sacks on the day, wanted to get the whole defense into the act on Saturday.

"I made sure I had the quarterback," Dollenmaier said. "Then I kind of tried to hold him up to give the other guys a shot at him."

In fact most of the defense did get a shot at Racer quarterbacks. Doug Reid, Dwayne Summers, Darrell Crews, Lance Tinsley and Eric Mullen all stopped

Daugherty satisfied with fourth

The Saluki women's golf team finished fourth out of 17 teams this weekend at the Illinois State Invitational.

SIU-C finished the Invitational with a two-day team total of 662, shooting 328 Saturday and 334 Sunday.

Women's golf coach Diane Daugherty was pleased with the team's finish.

"The goal I set for the team this weekend was fifth place or better out of the 17 teams, so I'm very happy with fourth," Daugherty said.

Northern Illinois won the tournament with a two-day total of 630, followed by the University of Illinois at 649 and Michigan State at 658.

The Salukis finished ahead of the home team Illinois State who placed fifth with a score of 664, only two strokes behind SIU-C.

"We were surprised to beat Illinois State on their own course," Daugherty said. "It's a real boost for the team."

Leading the Salukis was junior Debra Minter who finished with a score of 164 after two 18-hole rounds. Minter was 13th overall in the tournament out of the 103-player field.

"Debra was coming off a less than successful first outing (at Iowa State), but she worked hard this week in practice and now she is playing up to her potential," Daugherty said.

Nicole Jeray of Northern Illinois was the Invitational champion shooting a 151 over the two days.

Saluki junior Anne Childress was the second best Saluki, finishing at 165, 15th overall in the Invitational.

Rounding out the field for the Salukis were sophomore Tracey Pace at 169, sophomore Kim Haywood at 171, freshman Leslie Brunk at 172 and sophomore Beth Kozlowski at 188.

Kozlowski substituted for junior Gina Giaconio who was sidelined with a back injury. Her status is questionable.

The Salukis women's golf team is idol until Sept. 30 when it travels to Memphis State University in Tennessee for the Memphis State Classic.

The Saluki only home match in the 1990 fall season is Oct. 5 and 6 when they compete at the Saluki Invitational in Rend Lake.

Salukis fall one game short at Ball Festival

By Tiffany Youther
Staff Writer

SIU-C softball coach Kay Brechtelsbauer was impressed with the team's performance at the Ball Festival Saturday in Decatur, where the Salukis received second place in their first tournament of the fall season.

SIU-C won four of the five games they played in the tournament, and placed second after losing its last game to Illinois Central College Sunday. The Salukis defeated ICC in a 5-0 shutout Saturday, but were beaten 5-2 in the final game.

Brechtelsbauer had plenty of praise for the team despite its overall loss of the tournament.

"We had good team effort," Brechtelsbauer commented. "Overall I am pleased and I am particularly pleased with our new players. I thought they played like upperclassmen this weekend."

Sophomore right fielder Colleen Holloway and freshman catcher Laurie Wilson led the offense with four RBIs each. Holloway came away from the tournament with a team-high batting average of .467. Wilson followed close behind at .417.

Senior left fielder Shannon Taylor scored three runs and had three stolen bases in the season opener against Eastern Illinois. Her batting average is .278.

Senior third baseman and team captain Mary Jo Firnbach hit .313.

The Salukis also had strong pitching in the tournament. Senior Lisa Robinson gave up only four hits to Eastern during the season opener, which the Salukis won 4-0. Junior Dede Darnell pitched a three-hitter in SIU-C's 4-1 victory over Bradley. Sophomore Angie Mick also pitched a three-hitter in the 5-0 shutout of ICC.

"Friday I was extremely pleased with their performances," said Brechtelsbauer. "Saturday we did not play as well and as a result we almost let the Bradley game slip away from us, but we managed to come back and win the ballgame. We did not play well against ICC Sunday and gave them some unearned runs. That was the difference in the ball game. Overall, I am pleased."

This weekend the Salukis will participate in the Coors Light National Invitational Championship with 16 of the top softball teams in the country. The tournament will be held at Downing Park in Macomb.

Aquino to focus discussion on withdrawal of U.S. troops

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — President Corazon Aquino and her defense minister, bowing to political reality, conceded Monday that talks this week on U.S. bases in the Philippines will focus on a timetable for U.S. withdrawal. Aquino took the stand as anti-bases protesters demanding an immediate and unconditional pullout battled riot police firing guns and tossing tear gas canisters twice on Monday near the U.S. Embassy. At least 20 people were hurt. Aquino had never revealed whether she favored a continued U.S. military presence.

Walesa to run for president of Poland

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said Monday he will run for president of Poland in an effort to further the reforms he launched in 1980 with the creation of the East bloc's first free trade union. "I put forward my candidacy for president of Poland to be approved by the people in the general elections," said Walesa's statement, telephoned to Western media from his headquarters in Gdansk. Walesa wants to replace Wojciech Jaruzelski, the former Communist Party chief and the last remnant of Poland's former Communist regime.

House votes to bolster bank insurance fund

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House, moving to avoid another multi-billion dollar bailout for the financial industry, voted Monday to have banks pay higher premiums for the insurance fund that protects bank depositors. The bill, passed by voice vote and sent to the Senate, would allow the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. to raise the premiums to whatever level is needed to keep the insurance fund solvent. The action came in response to an increasing number of bank failures that has caused the bank insurance fund to suffer losses since 1983.

Prosecutors refuse to re-try Marion Barry

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal prosecutors said Monday they will not re-try Mayor Marion Barry on 12 charges that led to a mistrial in his drug and perjury case and asked for a speedy sentencing on the one cocaine possession charge on which the mayor was convicted. U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson set sentencing for Oct. 26 and said he would hold an Oct. 19 hearing on issues arising from a pre-sentencing report.

Officials call for mandatory AIDS reporting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mandatory reporting of AIDS infection "makes all the sense in the world" to help Americans stricken by the deadly virus receive proper medical care, a federal health official told the National AIDS Commission Monday. Dr. James Curran of the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta said he thinks the time has come to start keeping confidential government records listing the names of people infected with the AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency virus or HIV.

Moving Wall moves on after week at Applefest

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

The Moving Wall, a travelling replica of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, has once again been loaded onto its trailer and is heading down the road to the next destination.

The wall spent the week of Sept. 10-16 in Murphysboro in conjunction with the Murphysboro Applefest.

The wall was on display 24 hours a day and programs were given by various area veterans organizations each evening. There was a candlelight vigil for prisoners of war and those soldiers missing in action and a reading of all the names on the wall Friday night.

Public viewing of the wall was concluded with a closing ceremony

7 p.m. Sunday. The flags representing the veterans of all wars, the state of Illinois flag and the American flag were ceremonially lowered. Renditions of the national anthem and "America the Beautiful" were sung while an honor guard saluted the wall.

Guest speaker at the ceremony was Retired Lt. Col. Max Sullivan, a Murphysboro native who served in Vietnam. The color guard and firing squad were made up of members from the Illinois National Guard Company B 133rd Signal Battalion.

David Lavender, one of the Murphysboro veterans who worked to bring the wall to the area, said he had expected a crowd to come to see the wall, but the numbers surprised him.

"The whole week, it was just amazing," Lavender said. "We had 35,000 to 40,000 people come to see this wall. We almost ran out of everything."

Lavender said people came from all over the country to view the wall, which is actually one of two replicas that are collectively referred to as the wall.

The original wall is the A unit and has been touring the country for five years. The second replica of the monument is called the B unit and is a year younger than the A unit.

Each wall is exactly half the size of the original monument in Washington, D.C. The brain child of California veteran John Devitt, the wall travels the country to give people a chance to see the wall who wouldn't normally be able to travel to see the original, Lavender said.

It is comprised of 74 black plexiglass panels with 58,132 names of Americans who were killed or missing in action during the Vietnam War.

The panels of both walls are separate and mobile and fit into a trailer that is pulled behind a pick-up truck between destinations.

Since its creation, the wall has traversed the 48 continental states, Hawaii, Alaska, Puerto Rico and Guam. It has made several week-long appearances in different communities.

The Patriots Bravo Company, a group comprised of local veterans and volunteers, and other veterans groups worked for more than two years to bring the wall to Murphysboro. There is a 2 1/2-year waiting list of communities that want to bring the wall to their area and Lavender said the list is growing.

Soviets leave Carbondale after last-minute spree

Visitors buy items for folks at home

By Christina Hall
Staff Writer

People were still lingering around the table of fruit and coffee at the reception following the International Forum, when three of the six Soviets from Vladimir Polytechnical Institute left to do some last minute shopping.

Vladimir Titov, Lyudmila Sushkova and Viktor Efros from VPI East of Moscow managed to squeeze a trip to the University Mall and Wal-Mart into their hectic schedule by leaving the reception early.

Titov, the pro-rector of international relations at VPI, wanted to return some shoes he bought for his wife for a smaller pair.

In the Soviet Union, his wife's size is 37, but he had to guess what that would be in the United States, he said.

Efros, the head of the technical sciences department at VPI, wanted to buy a gift for his granddaughter.

He searched around the store looking for something his six-year-old granddaughter would like. He found some brightly colored socks and in minutes spent what he had left of his dollars on the socks and some other small gifts.

Five members of the delegation had to leave for St. Louis Lambert Airport at 5 a.m. Thursday, leaving little time to buy more gifts for relatives.

Efros said he did not have enough time to buy more gifts for his wife, but that is what he expected when he came to work on the exchange.

The Soviet visitors spent 5 1/2 days at SIU-C touring the campus, shopping, listening to and giving lectures and meeting SIU-C students, faculty and administration, said Robert Edwards, professor of Russian who escorted the Soviets during their visit.

The Soviet visitors had little time for themselves between consolidating an exchange with SIU-C and the schedule of other activities, Edwards said.

"Everything was scheduled, so they didn't have much time for themselves, but they could take it if they wanted to," Edwards said.

The delegation was prepared for a hectic visit to SIU-C because that is what happens when trying to start an exchange program, said Lev Sansonov, pro-rector of financial affairs from VPI.

Students had the opportunity to meet members of the delegation on numerous occasions including two conferences, the reception following the international forum, the mall, a football game and at the musical salute to VPI, Edwards said.

The Soviets had little time to talk to SIU-C students because of their busy schedules, but some students were able to make contact with the delegation members, Edwards said.

"Sunday at the Mall and Sunday night at the musical salute were good times to talk to the Soviets," said Tracy Gast, junior majoring in Russian.

Although students did have opportunities to meet with the Russians, the time the Soviets spent at dinners, touring the area, giving lectures and other items on their schedule seemed much more than the time they could spend with students, Gast said.

"I would like to have asked them more about their students and what they do now that they couldn't do five years ago," she said.

Cheapest alternative not always the best

JAIL OFFICIALS ARE handcuffed by the option chosen to correct the sinking corner of the Jackson County Jail.

Under the option chosen, the southeast corner of the jail will be demolished and booking will be moved into two of the four maximum security areas. This presents a problem of where to put inmates if the maximum security area becomes full.

Minimum security inmates can be housed in maximum security cell space, but maximum security prisoners cannot be housed in the minimum security area. Prisoners are classified as maximum security depending upon the seriousness of their crime, the escape risk and how prone the person is to violence.

Prisoners who are non-violent offenders or on work release cannot be mixed with maximum security prisoners in a dormitory setting. It would be ridiculous for a shoplifter to be in the same cell as a rapist.

THE DEPARTMENT OF Corrections has 13 categories of inmates and each category must be segregated from the others. Some of the categories include felon, misdemeanor, violent, non-violent, sentenced or non-sentenced, male or female.

It is difficult to predict the amount of maximum security cell space needed because in addition to the maximum security prisoners, the area is used for some inmates who cannot get along in the general prison population.

Also, if inmates fight or are a suicide risk they may be placed in maximum security.

If faced with overcrowding, the only solution would be to transfer the inmates to other county jails such as Perry or Williamson. Housing an inmate in another county jail can cost from $35 to $45 a day a prisoner. Also involved are transportation costs, an officer's time plus the security risk involved in transportation.

PRIOR TO THE building of the new jail, 30 prisoners were boarded out at a cost of $180,000 in one year. The decision was made to build and staff a new jail instead of transporting inmates to other jails. Transferring prisoners in the future would be contrary to the purpose for which the jail was built.

The demolition also has an impact on jail operations. The squad, the exercise, the evidence rooms and the civil processes will have to be temporarily relocated and plumbing installed. This is a lot of work for only a temporary arrangement.

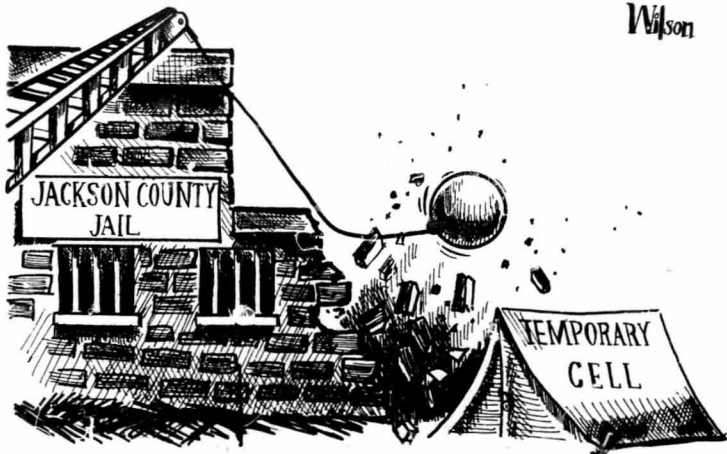

THE PROJECT CHOSEN may be cheaper, but the cost of transferring prisoners in the long run could outweigh the savings of the option. This will depend upon how much the prison population increases in the future. The cheapest plan for today may not be the best plan for tomorrow.

Quotable Quote

"In your bizarre world where detention centers have become hotels and hostages have become guests, I can make one recommendation that I have never made in all the years I have been welcoming people: Mr. Hussein, it is time to check out." —Hotel owner Leona Helmsley said explaining the difference between a guest and a hostage.

Women in military not new idea

CONTRARY TO popular belief, women being in the military is not a new concept.

Women warriors go back to the times of ancient Greece, when Queen Semiramis of the Assyrians built Babylon, founded Nineveh, and led the Assyrian army to conquer Ethiopia, Bactria, Egypt and Lydia.

During the Russian Revolution, Kerenski's brigade of death swept across the country like a whirlwind with its ranks full of women. In the American Revolution a group called the Daughters of the Revolution was formed.

THEY FILLED A more traditional role of cooking, sewing, tending the wounded and burying the dead. When the battle came close they picked up weapons and fought right along side of the men.

During World War II ladies were joining the WACs in Doves, and even more were happily dropping their housework and picking up welders, drills, and hammers to build weapons and ammunition.

The physiological difference between women and men is an obstacle women have fought hard to overcome.

ALTHOUGH IT HAS been difficult. Studies show that women do as well or better than their male counterparts in areas such as technical competence, mental ability, and performance under stress. In tests of upper and lower body strength and cardiovascular endurance, female test scores, even though the female test standards are lower.

THE ARMY HAS done thousands of studies on women and combat readiness. Most have shown that in spite of the difference physically, women actually adapt to the stresses of combat better than men.

Women are proven to endure starvation, exposure, shock, fatigue and illness better than males.

The constructive way to evaluate women's performance in the military is by comparing it to that of other women or to past performance.

There are two things to keep in mind when discussing sex differences in the military. One is that the significance of the data changes rapidly.

THE SECOND is that using the words "men" and "women" as definitive terms is misleading.

The overlap in functioning between men and women is much more significant than the extreme ends of the spectrum.

The term aggression is hard to define when studying sex differences because it is associated with social stereotypes.

More males than females display obvious traits of aggression. Society dictates that females remain submissive and quiet.

During combat situations however, that restriction of behavior is removed and the survival instinct takes over.

NEITHER SEX takes naturally to battle. For both, reservations about killing is overcome only with intensive training and strong leadership.

This training is provided to all individuals entering the military. The U.S. Army has placed its women in the vanguard.

They have many battles to fight, and most of them are caused by the assumptions of our society. Regardless of uninformed opinions, women's role in the defense of our country will continue to expand and grow.

My unit is the next in line to be activated. Those individuals, both male and female, are the most competent people I've met in the ten years that I have been in the military.

I'd be proud to go anywhere with them, whether it be across the road or across the world.

WE WORK AS a team, and some of the people on that team happen to be female.

Teamwork is what completes the mission. Mr. Striegel, and teamwork is what's missing from your attitude.—Margaret Warfield, senior, psychology.

Disks not stolen by employees

Carol Sluder has illogically determined that her diskettes were taken by a "lab employee or someone who spends a great deal of time at the lab." She is making an unsubstantiated allegation which has no sound foundation as to where or what happened to her data disks.

With the great amount of data and time involved compiling the contents of her lost disks: i.e., basic computer knowledge tells that irrefutable data should be backed up in the event of computer failure or any other disaster such as loss or theft.—Edward Glynn, finance, Preston Barlett, philosophy.

Right to fight isn't issue; war is serious business

I find certain people's attitude towards combat extremely puzzling.

Some people seem to be arguing that serving in combat is some kind of right and that the government is denying women some kind of benefit by not allowing them to serve in combat.

You can call me a chauvinist, but I find it hard to feel sorry for anyone who is denied the "right" to serve in combat.

It seems that the country has forgotten the hard lessons learned from the Vietnam war.

Ask any one who has served in the jungles of Vietnam and has witnessed the brutal and dehumanizing experience of war about this so called "right."

If the government prevents someone from being subjected to the emotional, mental and physical pain and suffering associated with combat I would hardly consider that their rights are being violated.

I find it ironic that the popular slogan of the sixties "Hell no we won't go!" had been replaced with "Hell, why can't we go!"

People such as Brad Striegel are not only puzzling, they are scary. War is no game; it is serious business.

It seems that a whole generation of people, who have grown up on movies and television which glamorize war and violence, are insensitive to the realities of war.

How soon we forget.—Thomas D. Purcell, finance.

Women's Services opens doors to opportunity

Program helps women to adjust to new situations

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

Getting women what they need or want in support services is an opportunity the University's Women's Services offers, the counseling administrative assistant said.

"All of our groups give women opportunities to meet other women who are facing many of the same problems," Laura Lyn, graduate student in counseling psychology, said.

Some of the many programs the office sponsors throughout the semester include the Re-entry Women's Brown Bag and Assertiveness Training, she said.

Re-entry women are students who are coming back to the University after being in the work force, having children or keeping a household, she said.

"Most of them are women over 25 years old, but not necessarily," Lyn said.

The brown bag is a lunch-time get together held from 12 to 1 p.m. once a month on Fridays. The next meeting will be on Oct. 5. "The brown bag is an opportunity for them to meet other women who are in a similar situation," Lyn said. "It's an effort to get them connected with each other."

The coordinator of the group, Gayle Rosche, a graduate assistant in educational psychology, also is a re-entry woman.

Rosche also teaches a section of Sociology 101 an introduction to the University and its facilities specifically for re-entry women, Lyn said.

"It's small, cohesive," Lyn said. "These are women dealing with re-entry so it is a kind of support group."

A part of the services the office offers to re-entry women is the emergency locator, she said.

The students give a copy of their schedules and a telephone number for their child care or their child to Women's Services, so the parent can be contacted if their is an emergency, she said.

"We usually have about two or three emergency calls a month," Lyn said.

The service has expanded to evening hours, she said.

"When the office isn't open the police help us out," Lyn said. "The locator does tend to be a good backup system for parents."

Single fathers and couples also can use the locator service, she said.

"It is good for re-entry women because they tend to be single mothers," Lyn said.

The office also provides books to help women find financial aid and child care available in the area, she said.

In previous years the brown bag was held on a weekly basis, she said.

"We dropped it down to one week because re-entry women don't have enough time," Lyn said.

The group helps women make the transition from working or taking care of a home to being back in school, she said.

Many women have problems with aspects of college life such as taking notes and using the library, she said.

"Maybe the last time they were in school was high school," Lyn said. "They have to get used to changing classes and having different professors for each class."

Besides financial aid, professors and child care the group also deals with issues such as self-esteem, she said.

"A lot of the time with this issue individual counseling is needed," Lyn said. "So we refer a lot of the re-entry women to our assertiveness group."

Assertiveness training deals with problems women have in saying no, she said.

"They have trouble asking for their needs to be met," Lyn said. "If they are living in the dorms they may have problems sharing space or dealing with other people. They tend to be shy and don't ask for what they need or want."

"One problem is they might not realize they have a right to ask, or fear comes in the way of them asking for what they want."

The training deals with effective communication, self esteem, self talk, belief systems, anger as a block to assertiveness, expressing negative thoughts and feelings, and the general giving and receiving of feedback.

Police Blotter

Three University students were arrested and charged with burglary from a motor vehicle early Saturday morning in Parking Lot 105 across from Meadowridge Apartments, University Police said.

Denny W. Gingerich, 19, 409 Wright III, John E. Kenny, 24, 1200 E. Grand Ave., No. 154D, and David E. Lindsey, 21, 1200 E. Grand Ave. 151B, were arrested after police observed them take an in-dash stereo, radio detector, and a Cobra CB from a vehicle, police said. They were taken to Jackson County Jail.

A student was arrested and charged with battery Saturday evening after he physically assaulted another student, University Police said.

Martin W. Bednarz, 19, 205 Felts Hall, was arrested for allegedly striking David C. Dezonno, 21, after a verbal confrontation outside of Felts Hall, police said.

Bednarz posted $50 bond and is to appear in court Sept. 18.

A Carbondale man was arrested and charged with several offenses, including aggravated battery, Sunday evening after being sought by police for allegedly throwing boiling water in the face of the person he lived with, Carbondale Police said.

Larry McDaniel, 43, of 517 E. Fisher St., was arrested after Wilma C. McDaniel claimed he threw boiling water in her face at their residence. She was treated and released from Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, police said.

Also, McDaniel was charged with driving under the influence, possession of cannabis, unlawful use of a weapon, and possession of a stolen weapon, which were discovered at the time of his arrest, police said.

A residential burglary occurred at 800 E. Grand Ave., No. 29C between 1:30 and 2:45 a.m. Saturday, police said.

Jody R. King, 20, told police that someone entered her residence by unknown means and stole an Emerson VCR, police said. The loss was estimated at $280.

Steven A. Grujich, 19, 408 Wright III, was arrested and charged with driving under the influence early Sunday morning, University police said.

Group helps members find support

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

One of the most popular groups Women's Services offers is also its most controversial.

The Women Loving Women support group is for bisexual, lesbian or women who are just exploring their sexuality, Laura Lyn, graduate student in counseling psychology said.

The group is the only one of its kind in the area and has been running for two years, she said.

"There has been so much interest in this group we are thinking about starting another group," Lyn said.

There are eight people per group, which has closed membership, she said. Women thinking about joining the group go to a screening interview and talk with group facilitators.

"They have to decide if this is a group they really want to belong to," Lyn said.

The group meets once a week for one hour and a half throughout the entire semester, she said.

"Women want to come to the group because they are exploring sexuality, they have relationship problems or they are coming out for the first time and labeling themselves as lesbian or bisexual," Lyn said.

"They may feel alienated or isolated."

Because the issue is so controversial the group has had problems getting publicity, she said.

"We can't keep our fliers up for 20 minutes," Lyn said. "People see them and go 'oooh, ick.' People will walk by and rip the flier off my office door, and that really is upsetting."

The issue is important to the community, she said.

Foreign students offered tour

By Brandi Tipps
Staff Writer

The SIU-C community has an opportunity to fall into a seasonal new experience.

The Fall Color Tour is a one-day trip to Garden of the Gods in Southeastern Illinois and Cave-in-Rock, a late-1700s pirate hideout on the Ohio River.

The trip is sponsored by International Programs and Services and is one of three trips planned for this semester, said Chae-kin Lum, graduate assistant foreign student adviser for IPS.

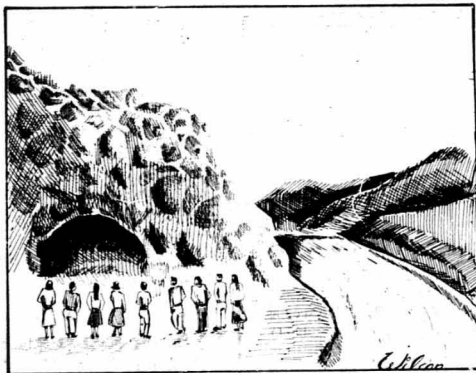

"We primarily go on the trips to give international students an opportunity to see sights in the United States," said Diane Wissinger, foreign student adviser for IPS.

"You can get a real picturesque view from the cliffs (at the Garden of the Gods)," Lum said.

Some students come from countries where the leaves on the trees are green all year and the weather is always warm, said Lum, who is from Malaysia where the climate is warm throughout the year.

"A lot of international students have never seen snow or all the different colors of leaves in the fall," said Alice Neblett, chief clerk of International Programs and Services.

"The thing that touched me the most is the natural beauty," said Kungshang Lee, graduate student in Early Childhood Education from Taiwan.

Graphic by Jay Wilson

Lee went on the tour last year and recalled that it was the first time she interacted with other foreign students.

"I still have friends that I made on the trip last year," Lee said.

All the trips are educational as well as recreational, Neblett said.

"We encourage American students to also participate so there is an opportunity for interaction and to foster a greater understanding between the American and international students," Wissinger said.

Not only is the trip a chance to see some beautiful sights, but also an opportunity to meet and make friends, Neblett said.

Even if it happens to rain there are alternative plans for the trip.

"We go to the mall in Paducah if it happens to rain," Neblett said. "The international students seem to enjoy shopping as much as the American students."

The trip is scheduled for Oct. 13 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The cost is $3 a person.

Panel suggests policy for Mideast

United Nations must be strong, members say

Natalie Boehme
Staff Writer

A stronger United Nations was the favored alternative for U.S. foreign policy suggested by speakers at the gulf crisis panel discussion held Thursday night in Lawson Hall.

The panel discussed issues and options of U.S. foreign policy using the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait as an example.

Gary Wolf, a journalist who taught in Saudi Arabia, said the U.S. reaction to the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait will set the stage for reactions in future conflicts.

By independently stepping into this conflict, the United States is taking a regional war and internationalizing it, Wolf said.

David Christensen, retired SIU-C professor of geography, said peace in the Middle East has always been illusive and claimed America's two-faced foreign policy with the Middle East is partly to blame.

Christensen said as long as the United States gets gas they aren't worried about the Middle East.

"A major power like the U.S. speaks too easily about policy out of one side of its mouth while worrying about it's own private interest. The New Age President Bush keeps speaking of should start now with a consistent foreign policy," said Christensen.

Christensen said although the New Age is a scary time it gives opportunities for change, and the U.S. should increase its use of the United Nations as an international force. Christensen said a United Nations-sponsored Middle East conference is needed.

There are many issues that should be discussed at this conference because it isn't just an Iraq-Kuwait issue, Christensen said.

According to Christensen this will require more from the United States than other countries because the nation hasn't been realistic.

"We [Americans] have been taught our strength is in military power, but it isn't. A healthy, educated population is the sign of strength," Christensen said.

Dr. Roya Akhavan-Majid, assistant professor of journalism and a native Iranian, said the Iraqi invasion has demonstrated no one country in the world can protect weaker countries from stronger ones.

Akhavan-Majid said the United States' attempt to be a world police has not only proven to be an economic burden, but also increased tension in the conflict. Unified support through the United Nations would be less explosive and cheaper, she said.

"I think the New World Order that leaders are looking for is collective security," said Akhavan-Majid.

Collective security would establish an international treaty where all nations would agree to work together against invading countries.

Akhavan-Majid said a strong U.N. military force would be a more legitimate form of intervention between countries and would naturally decrease national military forces.

Rec Center to host night for foreigners

By Brandi Tipps
Staff Writer

International and American students are invited to participate in a night of sports and activities at the Student Recreation Center for International Night from 8 to 11 p.m. Friday.

International Night will be held on the third Friday of each month. "We offered this about three times in the last year and a half but this is the first time we offered it as a once a month event," said Kathryn Hollister, assistant director of intramural recreational sports.

The evening is sponsored by International Programs and Services and Kathryn Hollister.

International Night is designed to promote interaction between foreign and American students, said Diane Wissinger, foreign student adviser at IPS.

This Friday the emphasis will be on a basketball tournament with a maximum of eight teams competing, Hollister said.

For students who don't want to play in the tournament there are other activities she said.

Students can participate in racquetball, squash or tennis and may use any of the other equipment in the Student Recreation Center, Hollister said.

Hollister expects about 100 students participating in the tournament, she said.

The International Nights will focus on competition and hopefully highlight activities from other cultures, she said.

"We're hoping to have an international league for intramural basketball this winter," Hollister said. "One of my goals this year is to try to expand the international student recreational program."

Other International Nights with different sports emphasized have already been set up, Wissinger said, adding that on Oct. 19 a table tennis competition will be held.

Power company to try burning tires with coal

DECATUR (UPI) — Illinois Power Co. has received permission from environmental officials to try burning 500 tons of shredded tires in combination with coal at its Baldwin plant southeast of St. Louis, officials said Monday.

"Late last week, we got permission from the Illinois EPA for a test burn using chunks of rubber tires," said IP spokesman Mike Monahan.

"We're looking for alternatives as fuel sources."

The company said burning tires produce more energy than burning coal and mixing tires with coal has been shown in other experiments to be environmentally safe.

"Overall, coal is cleaner when you combine it with tires," Monahan added.

Although others have tried a coal-tire mixture with 10 percent tires, IP will use a 3 percent tire mixture.

Monahan said the boiler design of the Baldwin plant will allow for the "test burn" without modifications.

"We have done some testing to make sure the fuel handling equipment can handle it," he said. "One of the concerns is about the steel in the belts of the fires."

The four-day experiment to burn 500 tons of tires is expected in the next two weeks, he said.

The company projected using about one million tires a year if the experiment is successful and projected there would not be a problem finding tires.

However, finding the tires in shredded form and storing them is more complicated, Monahan continued.

"We're not looking at being a used tire storage facility," he said, suggesting stored tire shreds might not be any more of a problem than storing coal.

"There are plenty of tires around in landfills," Monahan said. "We would need to find some source of shredded tires."

Heating oil prices on the rise

United Press International

Home-heating oil prices are headed up — way up — this winter unless there is a swift, peaceful end to the military standoff in the Persian Gulf, energy analysts say.

Worse, a shooting war would mean out-of-sight prices and very likely serious strains on supplies.

But there's no agreement among oil specialists on what the upper price limit might be.

Although there are too many variables and too much doubt for anyone to make a firm prediction, some analysts are estimating prices could reach as much as $1.50 a gallon for heating oil, a distillate that doubles as diesel fuel, even if there's no fighting. With war, that might be a minimum.

Heating oil prices in early January had risen as high as $1.41 a gallon in New York and $1.51 a gallon in Massachusetts following last winter's record December cold snap.

The stage was set for a rapid rise in prices because of the relatively low level of heating oil inventories, which stood at 119.8 million barrels at this time last year. But the nation's heating oil stocks now are at a five-year high of 131.7 million barrels and provide a bigger buffer against wild price swings.

The U.S.-inspired embargo against Iraq and Kuwait has removed more than 4 million barrels of crude a day from world markets. Not all of that oil flow has yet been replaced by increases from other producers and some analysts believe it never will be. With less oil available, they say, prices inevitably will be bid up.

"If everything goes right, we should be able to get through without any serious supply problems," said Kevin Lindemer, an oil analyst at Cambridge Energy Research Associates in Cambridge, Mass. "But it's going to mean higher prices, I'm sure of that, unless there's a resolution to the gulf crisis." Pessimists expect spot shortages of oil even without an outbreak of hostilities, but that does not mean homeowners will be without heat.

They warn that especially frigid weather in the Northeast, where two-thirds of the nation's more than 12 million households that heat with fuel oil are located, could strain supplies.

Even more than two-thirds of the fuel is burned in the nine Northeastern states that include New England, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania because the weather is colder there than in other areas where heating oil is used, the Department of Energy said.

Some unforeseen problem such as storm damage, an accident or sabotage at one of the country's approximately 140 oil refineries, which are operating at capacity, could cause real problems.

Pressure also is building on the federal government to tap into its Strategic Petroleum Reserve.

Black group disrupts Nike shareholders meeting

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Members of the civil rights group Operation PUSH disrupted the Nike, Inc., annual shareholders meeting Monday, demanding the shoe company hire more blacks and share more wealth with black-owned businesses.

Nike shareholders, meeting in Portland's posh Multnomah Athletic Club, shouted down the 50 demonstrators with cries of "extortion."

They also cheered Nike Chairman Philip Knight, who deftly handled the protest, and gave him a standing ovation after he announced a record 31 percent increase in quarterly profits and a 42 percent jump in future orders for the company's footwear and athletic clothing.

Operation PUSH, a Chicago-based group founded by Jesse Jackson, has called for a nationwide boycott of Nike products, which are heavily promoted by famous black athletes such as Michael Jordan, Bo Jackson and David Robinson.

PUSH leaders have demanded that Nike hire more blacks and other minorities, deposit money in black-owned banks, use black-owned advertising agencies and support black-owned businesses.

"The movement for civil rights in the 60s has become the silver rights movement in the 90s," said Chicago minister Tyrone Crider, who led the demonstration.

"We have moved from courthouses to shareholders meetings."

"It is the next level in our struggle," he said. "This is corporate America versus African-Americans."

Crider and the other protesters stood silently at the back of the meeting while Knight announced the financial results for the first quarter of Nike's fiscal year. The quarter ended Aug. 31.

But when Nike president Richard Donahue began discussing how the endorsement of Jackson, Jordan and other world class athletes had contributed to an 89 percent increase in Nike's foreign sales, the group began to walk one by one to the front of the room where they blocked a large video display.

After Donahue finished his speech, Crider launched into a sermon-like prayer in which he outlined specific ways Nike could share its wealth.

"We want them to put money in our banks," he said at one point. "You mean your pockets," shouted one shareholder.

"Extortionist," added another. The prayer was eventually drowned out by clapping and Knight asked the group to leave. Crider and the others then slowly marched out of the room, chanting "Nike said No."

Knight later defended his company's record in minority hiring and Donahue accused Operation PUSH of distorting Nike's dealings with the black community.

Minorities now constitute almost 15 percent of Nike's workforce, up from 11 percent a year ago, Knight said.

Comptroller candidate releases commercials for hearing impaired

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — In what could be a first for Illinois and the nation, Republican comptroller candidate Sue Suter Monday unveiled political television advertisements closed-captioned for the hearing impaired.

Suter said the 30-second ads would begin airing statewide on Tuesday. The spots are aimed at the estimated 100,000 deaf and hearing impaired Illinoisians.

"I wanted to make my ads accessible to the deaf and hearing impaired," said Suter, who was stricken with polio in childhood and walks with the aid of two crutches. "It's real hard for them to get involved in the process when they see these ads over and over and can't understand what (candidates) are saying."

In closed captioning, a special machine transforms dialogue from a TV program into a coded message on the television tape.

A decoder attached to a television set at home translates the code into subtitles at the bottom of the TV screen.

Suter believes she is the first state politician in the nation to run closed-caption ads.

Former President Ronald Reagan ran the first such ad in the United States, she said.

The spots show side-by-side photographs of Suter and her Democratic opponent, state Sen. Dawn Clark Loutch of Chicago.

As the announcer stresses Suter's management experience, Netsch's picture shrinks as Suter's grows larger.

Suter's campaign will spend about $150,000 to produce and buy air time for the ads, a substantial chunk of the candidate's estimated $700,000 campaign budget.

A New York firm encoded the ads for $2,000.

Suter said she hoped her spots would encourage other campaigners to closed-caption their political advertising.

In other campaign news Monday: Hartigan challenged Italian-American groups Representatives of Italian-

American groups threw their support behind Democratic gubernatorial contender Neil Hartigan at an appearance in Chicago. Hartigan said the groups, which include The Sons of Italy, the Italo-American National Union, the Amerital Unico Club of Chicago and the Justinian Society of Lawyers, were supporting him because of his commitment to senior citizens and family values.

However, Republican candidate Jim Edgar's campaign manager Carter Hendren immediately dismissed the endorsement.

Campus store to offer customized textbooks

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — McGraw-Hill Inc. and the University of Southern California said Monday that they will open the nation's first publishing center for customized textbooks.

The center, a pilot project due to open in January at the USC campus bookstore, could make it possible for professors to compile and design a text specifically geared for their courses within a few hours.

"We think that this center can help speed up the process of getting new material into classroom textbooks," said Kenneth Green, a senior researcher at USC's Center for Scholarly Technology, in an interview.

"Most college curriculum materials are ordered in April and May for use in October and November," Green said. "But, with changes in the world coming as quickly as they have in Eastern Europe and the Middle East, parts of textbooks can become obsolete very quickly."

Green said the program could also revamp the distribution process within the $2 billion-a-year college textbook business. "It sometimes takes two or three years for a new text to reach students," he said.

The move by New York-based McGraw-Hill, the nation's second-largest textbook publisher, comes at a time when industry leader Simon & Shuster has teamed up with Follett Corp., the nation's college bookstore operator, to print customized texts.

"We think it's a much more flexible approach to providing course material," Green said.

Currently, McGraw-Hill offers Custom Publishing System databases in constitutional law, accounting and chemistry.

Sachs sells reusable sacks

CHICAGO (UPI) — For Michael Sachs, caring for the environment made sense but making a choice between plastic or paper grocery bags was not his idea of environmental awareness.

"The fact of the matter is, neither one is good," he said. "It's the wrong question to ask. The point is, we're using packaging when we don't have to."

So Sachs and his brother Harvey followed their entrepreneurial instinct and did something about it — they started selling reusable grocery bags.

"With a name like Sachs, you've got to be in the bag business," he said.

The bags — called "Grocery Sachs" — come in canvas or plastic mesh. The bags come in a number of different sizes and colors.

Sachs said production began a few months ago and the sacks are now available in a few grocery stores in the Chicago and St. Louis areas.

He said deals were also in the works with Venture and Wal-Mart.

At Grand Food Center in Winnetka, where owner Dave Ruchlman has begun encouraging his customers to use the reusable bags, Grocery Sachs sell for $4.

"We sold about 400 in two weeks," Ruchlman said. "It's slow getting started."

He said he's noticed only "a handful" of customers actually bringing the bags back to use them but added the movement to replace disposable bags is gaining "momentum."

"I think that it's here to stay," Ruchlman said.

"They've been doing it in Europe for a long time," he said.

Ruchlman said he could save about 2 percent of his operating costs if he didn't have to buy bags, and that could be passed along in the form of lower prices.

Sachs said reusable bags are "a simple solution for a simple task."

"It (the idea) all started a couple of months ago when I was taking my paper bags back to the recycling center, which is pretty dumb," he said.

It's dumb, he said, because so many resources are wasted — including trees and the energy consumed by his car and the recycling process — just so he could use a bag to carry groceries for about 15 minutes.

Re-emerging Circle K Club to offer community service

By Stephanie Steiner Staff Writer

The Circle K Club is re-emerging to offer students the opportunity to serve their campus and community.

"The club has been around for years, but it has always had an up and down career," said Stuart Rosenstein, assistant professor of finance and faculty advisor to the Circle K Club.

The strength of the club depends on its core members and it is trying to get back on its feet again by involving students who are really interested in serving the community, Rosenstein said.

Circle K is sponsored by the Carbondale Kiwanis Club and its main goal is to be a student organization that serves the University community.

"The club gives students the opportunity to feel good about the work that they're doing," Rosenstein said.

The club also gives students the chance to make friends with others who share their same interests, he said. Rosenstein invites anyone interested in joining to attend the first meeting at 6 tonight in the Makinaw Room of the Student Center.

Students to oppose keg registration

Those interested in voicing their opinion on the proposed Carbondale keg registration ordinance are invited to an emergency student senator's meeting at 6 tonight.

Student senators, their constituents and all interested parties will organize a proposition to be given at the 7 p.m. City Council meeting.

The proposition will stress student opposition toward the ordinance as well as possible effects the ordinance would have on the community.

The proposed ordinance would require purchasers of beer kegs to leave their name, address, telephone number and destination of the keg.

The meeting will be held in the Undergraduate Student Government office, located on the third floor of the Student Center.

Depression test developed for school children

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Researchers at the University of Texas said Monday they have developed a written test that is successful 75 percent of the time in detecting depression in school-age children.

The testing procedure, developed by the Childhood Depression Project, is designed for children in grades four through seven.

"One of the best predictors of whether children are depressed is their sense of self-esteem," said Kevin Stark, director of the project and assistant professor of educational psychology at Texas.

Stark said the test utilizes about 30 variables that can identify depression and predict anxiety or a combination of anxiety and depression. He estimated that about 3.5 percent of children suffer from depression and that they can be identified by having them fill out personality inventories.

In addition to self-esteem, Stark said a child's style of interacting with other children is significantly related to depression because depressed children tend to be "more angry and nasty, probably as a reflection of their low self-esteem."

SIU-C professors awarded $2,500 for accounting study

By Shonda Talerico
Staff Writer

Keeping the best and brightest minds in the accounting field is the goal of two SIU-C professors.

Randall Hahn and Allan Karnes, assistant professors in the School of Accountancy in the College of Business and Administration, have been awarded $2,500 for their research project, "Attracting the Best and Brightest to Accounting," from the 1990 Illinois Certified Public Accountant Society/Foundation's 1990 Research Grant Program.

"Obviously I'm real happy," Hahn said of receiving the grant. "It's not only a chance to do research, but it's also a chance to help our field."

Their project, to be completed in one year, examines the image problem in the field of accounting, he said.

"His image has been one of guys with thick glasses and brown suits in a boring field," Hahn said.

"It's a tough area. We have to determine our image, when students make the decision to study the field and what we can do in academics and in our profession," he said.

Karnes said that in the past 10 years, accounting hasn't been recruiting the best students. Many change their majors to study finance, law and engineering, he said.

"Accounting is a full-fledged profession, we must be certified like doctors, but we don't have an 'L.A. Law' or a 'Wall Street' for free public relations," Karnes said.

"It's not only a chance to do research, but it's also a chance to help our field."

—Randall Hahn

"Without this we have to rely on ourselves to get information out to young students."

Hahn began his teaching career in 1980 at Eastern Kentucky University and has been an assistant professor in SIU-C's School of Accountancy for six years.

He received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Murray State University before receiving his doctorate in business administration from the University of Kentucky in 1984 and is certified in the state of Kentucky.

Hahn served as assistant professor of accounting at MSU for two years and was an instructor in financial accounting at Eastern Kentucky University. He is also an alumnus of Price Waterhouse and Co.

The Carterville resident has published more than 13 articles for professional accounting journals and written various professional presentations on accounting and computer-related issues. He has also been involved in accounting research.

Hahn received the Outstanding Professor in Accounting award in 1988 by Peat Marwick Main & Co.

and was named to the COBA Graduate Faculty Honor Roll for 1987 and 1988.

Karnes began his teaching career at SIU-C in 1981 and has been an assistant professor in the School of Accountancy for the past four years.

He received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Ball State University before receiving his doctorate from SIU-C in 1986. Karnes was certified as a CPA in Illinois in 1979 and was admitted to the Illinois Bar in 1986. He served as an instructor in the School of Accountancy at SIU-C and is an alumnus of Ernst & Young.

Karnes has written more than 22 articles for professional journals in accounting and law, several presentations for professional meetings and has researched into the taxation, ethics and international accounting specialties.

The Carbondale resident received several honors and awards, including the Outstanding Professor in Accounting award for 1984-85 by Peat Marwick Main & Co., the COBA Scholars Summer Research Grant, an SIU-C Teaching Fellowship and was named to the SIU-C College of Business and Administration Graduate Teaching Honor Roll.

The grant is "testimony to their expertise, especially because they have received external funding," said Thomas Gutteridge, dean of COBA.

"It enhances the prestige of the college and the funding gives additional flexibility for their research."

To Your Health

By Teresa Taylor
Wellness Center

For many people getting high means using drugs or other mood-altering substances. For others it may mean something very different known as a "natural high"—an innate feeling of elation or excitement.

Researchers have shown that the signals or impulses from our nerve cell to another can increase person's intensity of feelings or emotions. Feelings of elation and happiness seem easy to attain in children. For example, "runners high" is caused by the transmission of natural chemicals after exercise. Simple activities like riding a bike, opening presents for Christmas and spinning until dizzy all produce this sense.

As adults it becomes more difficult to attain these natural highs and unfortunately, some individuals try to achieve mood-altered states by using drugs and alcohol. Drugs and alcohol actually inhibit the bodies production of its natural "feel good" chemicals and the individual then begins to rely on these substances to attain altered states.

As an option there are several activities which can produce a "natural high" such as physical activity, laughing, meditating, or hugging, which pose no health risks. For more information contact the Wellness Center at 536-4441.

Gibbs spreads blame for 26-13 loss to 49ers

HERNDON, Va. (UPI) — Redskins coach Joe Gibbs spread around the blame Monday for his team's 26-13 loss to the San Francisco 49ers, saving some criticism for himself when Washington failed on three straight plays to reach the end zone from 1 yard out.

"I guess if you're going to lose a football game, then this would be the way to do it," Gibbs said following the Redskins' loss Sunday to the two-time Super Bowl champion 49ers, 2-0 this season and winners of 26 of their last 29 games.

"I really felt like all of us were together, and by that I mean, special teams had a chance to win it for us, defense did, offense did and I guess you could throw the coaches in there too."

Gibbs was particularly dissatisfied with the Redskins failing to score a touchdown after quarterback Mark Rypien, and Gary Clark hooked up on a 40-yard pass in the third quarter, setting up Washington with first down and goal at the 1.

The Redskins, 1-1, tried three times to run the ball in but were stopped each time, the last on a keeper by Rypien.

Washington's Chip Lohmeyer did kick a field goal, narrowing the gap to 20-13, but the 49ers' goal-line stand shifted momentum and the Redskins never seriously threatened the rest of the way.

"On offense, I think it really boils down to not scoring from the 1-yard line and we had three shots at it down there," Gibbs said. "The last play was a keeper that I called and took a shot at and we just flat missed our opportunities."

Gibbs also was disappointed with special teams.

"We had a (33-yard) field goal blocked, which really hurt us," the Redskins' head coach said. "And we had a long return in there. Then we had a number of penalties, on some of our other returns that kept the offense really backed up in the hole."

While conceding "it was tough... to contain" 49er stars Joe Montana, Jerry Rice and John Taylor, "We gave up some big plays, particularly on third down we gave up a lot of big plays." The 49ers converted 11 of 18 third-down situations and controlled the clock 34 minutes, 26 seconds to 25:24 for the Redskins.

Bears showing new 'recklessness'

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (UPI) — Defensive end Trace Armstrong calls it "recklessness." Whatever it is, the Chicago Bears' defense is showing shades of "something good."

"I think it's more in attitude and style of play," Armstrong said. "We're coming off the ball and not worrying about mistakes. It's a great group and we've got a lot of momentum. You can't really put a value on that, of just going out there and playing with emotion and chemistry."

After the disaster of 1989, the Bears are off to a 2-0 start following their 31-13 trouncing of the Packers at Green Bay Sunday.

The famed defensive unit that dropped to 25th overall a year ago is back among the league leaders, allowing just 13 points through the first two weeks.

Coach Mike Ditka said the reason for the resurgence is obvious. The front line of Armstrong, Richard Dent, Dan Hampton, William Perry and Steve McMichael is relatively healthy and turning up the heat.

"What's the key? The pressure," Ditka said. "When you have pressure you have better coverage. We're playing smarter with the defense. We understand what our limitations are. We're trying to win within them. Yet we're playing aggressive, and we're challenging people."

Seattle had enough of it the first week, never allowed inside the Chicago 45-yard line. The Packers were able to cross that barrier but paid in other ways. The Bears' defense recorded six sacks against Green Bay, the most since 1988, forced three fumbles and intercepted two passes.

Armstrong, a rookie during the debacle of 1989, sees the change clearly.

"We're having six, seven, eight, nine guys putting hats on the ball carrier, and any time you do that you're going to get your share of turnovers," he said. "It's great to watch on film to see a guy maybe break a tackle and see five guys ready to level him. I think that's why we got the turnovers. We're flying around and playing really hard."

Armstrong leads the league's currently top-rated defense with four sacks. The team has recorded nine in the first two games to go with five interceptions while allowing just 402 total net yards. The team's take-away-giveaway ratio stands at plus-6.

"We have confidence, first and foremost," Armstrong said. "Last year, I think we would go out early on and maybe play well in the first series or the second series, then a team would have some success moving the ball against us, and it kind of tore us up a little bit. We never seemed to bounce back or to face a challenge later in the year."

"This year, the thing I like most about our win (Sunday) was the Packers got an interception and went down and scored a touchdown, but we continued to play reckless," he said. "A lot of teams at that point might have slowed down, put on the brakes and started to be cautious, and maybe we did that last year. But this year's team we just turned the heat up a notch and kept coming after 'em."

There is caution mixed with the confidence coming from Bears' camp, however. Chicago jumped to a 4-0 start last season before Hampton went down and the team went out.

Tagliabue reviewing case to reinstate Colts' Dickerson

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eric Dickerson and his attorney argued their case against the Indianapolis Colts before NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue for three hours Monday without any word on whether the running back will be reinstated.

Dickerson and his attorney Arn Tellem claimed the Colts improperly placed him on the non-football injury list — meaning he must languish without pay for the first six weeks of the 1990 NFL season. The Colts, represented by general manager Jim Irsay and general counsel Michael Chernoff, say Dickerson was rightfully placed on the list after refusing the organizations' requests to examine his injured hamstring.

"The Commissioner will review the matter," NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said in a statement. "The league will have no further comment until the review is completed."

Dickerson left the NFL offices without comment but Tellem said his client is ready to play football.

"We believe and hope the commissioner, after reviewing the facts and considering the law, will find the Indianapolis Colts acted improperly in placing Eric on the non-football injury list and reverse it," Tellem said. "Eric is healthy, he has been healthy, and is ready to play football as soon as possible."

Young said. "Until this weekend the effort was way below standard, but we're going in the right direction. The bottom line is we need consistent improvement."

The defensive linemen saw this problem too and decided to do something about it. Friday, the Saluki defensive linemen called a meeting. There they set a goal of getting to the quarterback much more often.

"After dinner we had a meeting," Rung said. "We decided to set some goals. We wanted to come out with more intensity, we got fired up. We had something to prove."

"At that special meeting," Dollenmaier said. "We said, 'we have to get home.'"

Home for any defensive lineman is on top of the opposing quarterback and the Salukis were homebreakers last Saturday.

At practice the linemen are not allowed to get home, they cannot hit the quarterback. After a week of very little hitting, the Saluki defensive linemen were seething to get some live contact.

"By Saturday you can't wait to hit somebody," freshman defensive lineman Darnell Laurent said. "Especially the quarterback."

And what goes through a lineman's mind when that quarterback is in range?

"You just try to follow through and get him down," Rung said. "Never give the sucker a break. It's you and him, one on one and you want to win the battle."

The Salukis did not win any doubles matches, and four Salukis were winless in the singles tournament.

Auld was anxious to see how the younger players would compete against the strong opponents.

Freshman Leesa Joseph was 0-3 in weekend play but Auld said the experience was a good one for her.

"I told Leesa that it was a welcome to college tennis situation," Auld said. "She played well, but it gives us an indication of what she needs to work on. Even though she was 0-3, I was happy with what I saw."

Top Saluki player Missy Jeffrey was 0-3 for the weekend due to a recurring shoulder injury.

"We're just trying to work her back into her serves slowly," Auld said. "I was looking at how she was playing the all-court game. Once her shoulder gets stronger she can start playing more of a game."

Senior Michele Toye and sophomores Wendy Varnum and Lori Gallagher came out of tournament play 2-2, making them the lead players for the Salukis.
