Inflation hits health service budget

By Mary E. Gardner
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Some people are concerned about the current rate of inflation. Some are worried about a recession. And still others are predicting a depression. Sam McVay, administrative director of the Student Health Program, says he is beginning to wonder how the health program will be paid for in the next few years.

McVay said the income of the Health Service is fixed at about $1,765,000. This figure is based on a projected income of $200,000 from the pharmacy, x-rays, PAP smears and some immunizations plus an estimated $225,000 from the State of Illinois and around $1,340,000 from student fees.

Expenses for this year McVay said, will be about $1,640,000. He said this figure is the sum of the following estimates: $400,000 for non-personnel items, $800,000 for personnel expenses and $440,000 for contracts (insurance, hospitalization, etc.).

The contract figure includes only 10 months of the contracts because they were new as of August 28, 1974. The budget for the current fiscal year runs from July 1, 1974, to June 30, 1975.

Problems begin to develop when inflation is brought into the picture, McVay said. By allowing for the current inflation rate of 15 per cent for medical supplies and 9 per cent for personnel expenses, McVay said he expects about a $93,000 increase in expenses for the year ending June 30, 1976.

McVay, who said he is an optimist, did not allow for any inflationary increases in the contract expenses. Thus, the figure for 12 months of contracts comes to around $526,000.

Adding to the projected contract expenses the figures for both non-personnel items and personnel expenses, McVay came up with an expected 1976-77 July through June budget of $1,858,000 million.

Taking the process a year further, McVay calculated the inflation rate for all expenses (excluding contracts) at 9 per cent, leaving a projected budget $1,977,880 for the year ending June 30, 1977.

McVay said that it is risky to expect added income before the allocation is confirmed. Therefore, the income for the next two years must be calculated to be the same as for this year, approximately $1,765,000.

Even though the budget for this year is somewhat lower than the current income level, expenditure calculations for the years are over the expected income, leaving a deficit of $180,000 for the three-year period.

McVay stressed that none of the calculations for budgets included expenses for new equipment, either for "normal" breakdowns or equipment which will be needed for the planned gynecology clinic or for the proposed dental program.

"This is only maintaining the present level of operation," he said.

Also, McVay said, the figures calculated for state funding are merely projected and the money has not yet been allocated. "We may not get the money," he added.

McVay's figures for income from student fees do not take into consideration any drop in student enrollment after this year.

A recent study of SIU enrollment trends indicated a steady drop in the number in freshman enrollment each year. Larry Juhlin, administrative assistant in the Student Affairs Office, said there has been an overall enrollment drop of about 5,000 students during the last seven years.

Hand-counted ballots delay election results

Ballot counting for Wednesday's Student Government elections was not completed until early Thursday morning, which was too late to meet the Daily Egyptian's deadline. Election results will appear in Friday's edition.

The Student Senate approved an amendment to the Student Government by-laws to allow the hand counting of ballots in the student election.

The Senate approved the change at a special meeting Tuesday night by a vote of 16-0. Senate rules require 16 affirmative votes for adoption of an amendment to the by-laws.

Election Commissioner Mike Jenkins told the Senate that the computer ballots which were formerly required by the by-laws could not be obtained in time for the election.

Jenkins said that the change had not been approved and had a candidate contested the election because of the lack of computer ballots, the entire election could have been nullified.

The change became necessary after writs of mandamus were issued by the Campus Judicial Board to Student President Dennis Sullivan and the two election commissioners Jenkins and Bob LeChien. A writ of mandamus orders an official to fulfill the duties of his office.

The writs ordered the election commissioners to change parts of the election laws dealing with the appeal process on alleged violations of election laws and the qualifications of candidates. The writs also ordered the Senate to allow the hand counting of ballots. In response to the writs, the election commissioners changed the election laws on April 11.

Sleepy elections

Dale Bramlet, a junior in chemistry, seems to be napping instead of poll watching in Wednesday's student elections. He wasn't actually, but the turnout of student voters was very light—perhaps light enough to allow Dale a chance to catch a nap if he had wanted to. (Staff photo by Jim Cook)

Massage vote rubs folks different ways

By Bruce Hackel
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Rev. Ben Glinn, leader of the Carbondale Citizens for Decency, said Wednesday he considers the result of the massage parlor referendum an "overwhelming victory" for his organization.

Gus Bode

Gus says he's waiting for massage parlors to have going-out-of-business sales.

"I really didn't expect to win," Glinn said, "but in light of the results I feel the City Council should license massage parlors and pass an ordinance forbidding any form of sexual stimulation."

One of two questions in the non-binding referendum Tuesday dealt with whether persons should be allowed to massage the genital parts of another's body. It was defeated by 159 votes, 2,056 to 1,897.

The other question which dealt with whether persons of one sex should be allowed to massage the bodies of persons of the opposite sex was approved by 540 votes, 2,280 to 1,740.

Larry Klasen, 23-year-old co-owner of Deja Vu massage parlor, said his business will continue to operate as it has in the past until it is prevented by law.

He said legislation preventing massage parlors from giving "full body massages" would hurt business, but whether it would force him to go out of business is questionable.

"From this point on the issue is really out of the people's hands, and I don't want to speculate on what the City Council will do," Klasen said.

Mayor Neal Eckert said he had hoped the result of the referendum would have been stronger in one direction or the other. He said City Attorney John Womick would be asked to draft legislation addressing itself to the second question on the referendum.

"The issue will be discussed again at the next informal council meeting April 28," Eckert said.

Newly elected Councilman Joseph Dakin said he felt the referendum was a waste of time and "didn't resolve anything."

"You can't legislate morality, and even if you did, it couldn't be enforced," Dakin said.

Councilman Hans Fischer said he also thought the referendum was unnecessary and ridiculous. He said the results show that the council is "right back where they started" on the issue.

Both Fischer and Dakin said they would favor legislation to regulate massage parlors for health and safety. They agreed that keeping minors out, regulating advertising and subjecting employees to physical examinations would be a good idea for the massage parlors.

"I'm initially inclined in the direction of limiting activities which the majority of people are opposed to," Fischer said.

Helene Westberg, the first woman ever elected to the Carbondale City Council, said she would "follow the will of the majority" and favor an ordinance to prevent sexual stimulation in massage parlors.

"I feel the people in Carbondale would be upset if their opinion wasn't followed up in the City Council," Westberg said.

Councilman Archie Jones could not be reached for comment.

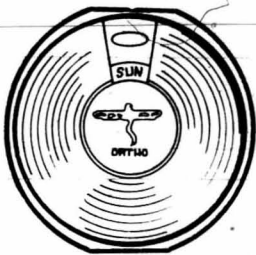

Oral contraceptives, effects explained

With recent advances in technology birth control has become easier and more convenient. Among the more popular forms of birth control are the oral contraceptives.

When a woman is pregnant, high levels of the female hormones, estrogen and progesterone, prevent further ovulation from taking place. Birth control pills, made of artificial estrogen and progesterone, put the female in a state of "pseudo-pregnancy" and prevent ovulation.

Dr. Knapp of SIU's Health Service said that a woman should have a thorough examination before being given the pills. The physical should include breast, weight and pelvic examinations and a PAP smear for cervical cancer. The Health Service offers both examinations and pills to the University Students. The pills are $1 a month.

Nausea, fluid retention and slight breast growth may be side effects for the first three months after a woman has gone on the pill while her body gets used to the pill.

If the pills are too anti-estrogenic for a particular woman, the side effects may include mood changes such as depression and changes in sexual desire, increased appetite and weight gain, fatigue, oily scalp and skin and increased body hair. If such symptoms are bothersome, a brand of weakened progesterone should be used.

Knapp said that for convenience and safety the pill is a women's best choice. Its failure rate over a year's time is only 5 per cent.

Another oral contraceptive is the morning-after pill. It is an effective hormone birth control method which can be used immediately after intercourse. Diethylstilbestrol (DES) may be used when other birth control methods have been forgotten. The pills should not be used routinely because they may cause severe nausea, cramps and vomiting.

The 25-milligram pills are taken twice a day for five days. If the series is started within 24 hours of sexual relations it is almost 100 per cent effective. Even if the pills are started as late as 72 hours after sexual activity, pregnancy is unlikely.

Although DES was discovered in the 1930s, medical scientists do not know how it works. It was used as a preventive against miscarriage, but was abandoned when it was proven ineffective. In 1970, physicians discovered that DES given to pregnant women can cause vaginal cancer in their children.

Dr. Arthur L. Herbst of Harvard University has reported that 24 of the first 154 such cancer victims diagnosed had died. Other experts have estimated that from 3,000 to 27,000 women have or will experience DES-linked cancer.

Ralph Nader's Health Research Group has protested to the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) that some campus clinics have prescribed the pills to women without warning them of the possible serious consequences.

Dr. Knapp said that the pharmacy at the Health Service does have the morning-after pill, but it's up to each doctor to decide whether or not to prescribe them.

He said that at one time the pills were taken off the market. Since then, however, more and more companies have applied for approval to produce the post-coital contraceptive.

Knapp said he doesn't think that the pills would hurt the user, but he stressed that DES should only be used in an emergency.

ERA bill gets approval in committee

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — A House Judiciary Committee Wednesday gave overwhelming approval to the proposed Equal Rights Amendment and sent it to the full House for consideration.

The 18 to 2 vote was the first taken by members of the House this year on ratification of the controversial proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution which would ban sex discrimination.

The same resolution was passed by a Senate committee earlier this year, but has not yet been called for a vote by the sponsor. Both the House and Senate must pass the same resolution before Illinois can be considered to have ratified the proposed 27th Amendment.

Both houses held brief floor sessions Wednesday. A full slate of hearings was scheduled as committees attempted to clear the deck in anticipation of a heavy schedule of bills to be heard in the next two weeks.

The Senate approved and sent to the House a measure which would permit the State Board of Investment to close to the public that portion of their meeting that deals with discussion of the sale or purchase of securities or investment contracts.

Sponsors said the closed meeting was been the policy all along and this measure would change the Public Meetings Act to conform.

A key element in passage of the ERA in Illinois will be whether the House requires a simple majority of those elected or a three-fifths majority for passage. That matter is expected to come up soon. The Senate already has adopted a rule requiring that a three-fifths vote is needed in that chamber.

Black Affairs Council schedules election dates

The Black Affairs Council (BAC) will hold elections for new officers Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Student Center Mississippi River room.

Edgar Philpot, BAC coordinator, said Wednesday that three BAC positions need to be filled for the coming school year. These include coordinator, treasurer-comptroller, and editor of the BAC newspaper, Uhuru-Sasa.

Darnell Lawrence, BAC treasurer, said anyone can run for office provided they are an SIU student in good standing and have been a student at SIU the previous two semesters. He added that applicants must give the BAC a petition with 35 signatures before Monday at 5 p.m. in order to get on the ballot.

Hungry roommates remain sore 'with'... but not 'at' one another

By Sue Voyles

"I helped take out many a tonsil and I never gave it a second thought but now I know better," pre-med major Nancy Moreland said.

Moreland and her roommate, Kathy McLinden, a Radio-TV major, both 21, spent spring break getting their tonsils removed. They both returned to their home town, Peoria, for the operation. They had surgery the same day, in the same hospital and by the same doctor. They stayed in the hospital for four days and spent a week recovering at home. They missed a week of classes and returned to school April 7.

"A tonsillectomy is considered to be major surgery by doctors and is especially serious for adults, Moreland said.

"All that about eating ice cream after you get your tonsils out is just a rumor," McLinden said.

"For the first two days, all I could drink was water," Nancey said describing her swollen throat.

Their diet for the last three weeks has consisted of warm tea, vitamins, Geritol and baby food. They expect to be able to eat only more of the same in the next two weeks.

"On Easter Sunday, I took a pain pill and crashed so I wouldn't have to smell the food," McLinden said.

While at the hospital, the two

"celebrities" were interviewed by WRAU-TV and WMBD Radio in Peoria because of a story written in the Daily Egyptian, McLinden said.

Newsroom lab rolls into Carbondale

Editor's note: This article was set on typesetting equipment furnished by the Frank E. Gannett Newspaper Foundation, Inc.

By Wes Smith
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

This story was brought to you from an oversized trailer truck parked in the lot behind the SIU Communications Building.

The entire article was researched, typed, edited, re-edited, (those things happen), and prepared for printing within the walls of the trailer.

A course in outdoor journalistic survival? Almost, because in order to meet deadline this story had to survive a reporter's maiden flight into the whirling world of modern newspaper technology.

Unlike the early newspaper days when Ben

Franklin dealt out a daily from a backroom, today's modern equipment requires a deft touch. One finger fallen astray might have sent this story into literary limbo on the memory banks of some uncompromising computer.

The "oversized trailer truck" is actually a $280,000 expandable van entitled "Newspaper Technology . . . on the Move." It is a mobile newsroom laboratory offered as an educational tool by the Frank E. Gannett Newspaper Foundation, Inc.

Gannett also owns one of the largest newspaper chains in the United States.

The trailer expands into a 28 by 17 foot, fully equipped mini-newsroom containing modern electronic equipment designed to permit students to write, edit, assemble and print a tabloid newspaper without ever shifting a gear.

Director of the Gannett mobile lab is Ralph I. Squire, a former faculty member of the Rochester Institute of Technology in N.Y. and now special projects director for the Gannett Foundation.

The mobile lab was developed by Squire when he was assigned by the Foundation to develop a display of modern newspaper equipment and put it in a mobile instructional frame.

"The concept developed from a small mobile home, to a tractor trailer and, finally, we ended up using an expandable trailer to house the lab," Squire explained Tuesday.

"With the lab set up in this manner the equipment is placed in perspective. Within the trailer we can print a whole paper step by step and show how each piece of equipment fits into the process."

The mobile lab has made 38 visits since it first hit the road in April of last year. A well-travelled exhibit, it has visited universities in Kansas, Nebraska, Ohio, Kentucky, California, Washington, Utah, Idaho, Oregon, Connecticut, Arizona, Colorado and Illinois. The van will leave SIU Thursday afternoon for Wichita, Ka.

James Kain, who leases the truck's cab to Global Van Lines and also assists Squire in displaying the equipment in the trailer, estimates the unit has covered more than 40,000 miles in the past year.

A California native and a trucker by trade, Kain boned up on the newspaper business when he was awarded the contract to haul the Gannett exhibit.

"I had to learn the process with Ralph's help and all the books I could read," Kain said laughingly.

The exhibit contains a humming array of IBM Selectric typewriters, computerized optical character reader or "scanner," video display terminals, keyboard photo headline machine, a modern darkroom and a small offset press.

"All that is really needed of this reporter is an orientation with the typewriter keyboard," Squire said of his Buck Rogers newsroom.

This story was originally typed on an IBM Selectric. Unlike the typical Daily Egyptian typewriter, which requires a masterly pounding affecting, the Selectric reels off letters even if the operator breathes heavily in the general direction of the keyboard.

On first contact I ended up with two lines of "m's."

After adjusting my typing touch and finishing the story, the copy was put into a "scanner" which arranges the copy in column widths and forwards it to a visual display terminal or VDT.

The VDT consists of a television screen mounted above a typewriter keyboard. Instead of tuning in "The Beverly Hillsblys" you punch a key code and your story appears on the screen.

Actually the reporter can skip the scanner stage and type his story on the VDT but I decided to sneak up slowly on progress.

Once the story appears on the VDT screen, the editor or reporter scans it for errors in spelling, punctuation and grammar. By pressing the right buttons, (and saying a German prayer to Gutenberg, inventor of the printing press), the operator can delete, letters, words, sentences, or (gulp) entire stories.

After corrections have been made on the VDT, the story is sent to the typesetter to be printed on paper which is then dried, cut out and pasted into place on a makeup sheet before being whisked into the printer's domain.

No wonder Ben Franklin took up kite flying. Squire estimated that 10 to 15 thousand people have toured his lab since it began traveling and he is very proud of his creation.

"The mobile lab has not only worked out the way I had planned it, it has turned out to be far superior to what I had originally envisioned."

"Journalism schools such as SIU's, have a crying need for this type of instruction and very often the money is just not available for the modern equipment," he said.

"We could make 30 stops a year for the next five years and not fill all of the requests for appearances," Squire said.

"One journalism instructor once told me it was like the messiah coming."

Jesus? In a Mack truck?

Final arguments presented in Connally trial

WASHINGTON (AP)—Lawyers for the government and defense argued over the believability of key witness Jake Jacobsen Wednesday as they presented final arguments in the bribery trial of former Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally.

To convict Connally on charges that he accepted two illegal $5,000 payoffs, the jury would have to believe that he "betrayed his trust and bargained away his honor to Jacobsen," said defense lawyer Edward Bennett Williams.

Vietnam stability possible, Ford reiterates

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Ford said Wednesday he was "absolutely convinced" that South Vietnam could stabilize its defenses—pointing the way to a negotiated settlement with Hanoi—if Congress approves his request for $722 million in military aid.

While confirming that he has ordered the evacuation of all "nonessential" Americans, Ford said the Thieu government "could stabilize the military situation in South Vietnam today" if Congress votes the funds within the next few days.

At the same time, Ford told a news conference that "this whole tragedy" now facing Saigon "could have been eliminated" if the United States fulfilled its commitment under the 1973 Paris cease-fire accords to a "reasonable sum" of military and economic assistance.

Energy czar warns of electrical power shortage

WASHINGTON (AP)—On top of its natural gas shortage and foreign oil dependency, the United States may face shortages of electric power within five years, Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb said Wednesday.

Unless the nation moves quickly to speed up power plant construction, Zarb said, shortages of generating capacity may develop by 1980 or 1981 which "can induce slackened economic activity because of a lack of power, particularly in some areas of the country."

State court refuses to order tax increase

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—The Illinois Supreme Court refused Wednesday to order state officials to raise 1974 property tax assessments throughout the state.

In a 5-1 decision, with two justices not participating, the court said it was clear that both state and local officials failed to enforce a state law requiring uniform assessments at 50 per cent of fair cash value.

But the court said requiring enforcement now could force officials to recompute 1974 taxes and would cause substantial delays in tax collection, forcing local governments, school districts and other taxing bodies to borrow money to meet expenses.

It reversed an order from a Circuit Court in Lake County which required state officials to equalize property tax assessments in all the state's 102 counties at 42 per cent, once thought to be the average statewide assessment level.

Council requests commemorative fast

The Carbondale City Council is calling on all residents to fast until dark Thursday to commemorate Food Day '75.

"The fast is being sought as a sign of compassion for and solidarity with hungry persons of the world's. The council is also asking Carbondale residents to contribute to hunger relief agencies."

Several local churches and organizations are supporting the Carbondale Food Day '75 Committee. Among them are the Carbondale Yoga Society, Bread for the World, SIU Student Government, Black Affairs Council and the Student Environmental Center.

The purpose of the event is to develop public understanding of the high cost of food, problems of world hunger and the improper diets of Americans, said Hugh Muldoon of the Carbondale Peace Center.

Food Day '75 is a national event being coordinated by the Center for Science in the Public Interest. Muldoon said the local and national effort should have a significant effect on the world hunger problem.

The main speaker of the Carbondale Food Day observance will be Acharya Yatischvarandanda Avudhuta, secretary of the North American Ananda Marga Society and a former member of the Ananda Marga Universal Relief team.

Other planned events of the observance will include a "Meal of the Future," a low cost, high protein meal, and panel discussions on "Spirituality and the Food Crisis" and "Economics, Politics and the Food Crisis."

Ten workshops dealing with different aspects of food and hunger problem will also be conducted.

A fund drive will be held to raise the Food Day Committee's goal of $2,500. The proceeds will go to CARE and Ox-Fam America, hunger relief agencies. Volunteers will collect Thursday door-to-door and at shopping centers.

On Saturday, a yard sale will be held at 302 S. Oakland from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Donations of books, clothing, toys and household articles are being sought. Persons interested in donating items may call 549-2888.

Also on Saturday, from 9 to 12 p.m. a benefit concert will be given by "Shoal Creek" band in the Student Center Ballrooms. Donation for the concert is $1.

The weather

Thursday: partly cloudy and warm with some showers and thunderstorms, highs 75 to 82. Thursday night, partly cloudy with showers ending, cooler with the lows in the upper 40s or lower 50s.

Friday: variable cloudiness, highs in the 70s. Winds south to southwesterly 15 to 20 miles per hour - Thursday.

Probability of precipitation 70 per cent Thursday and 40 per cent Thursday night.

Transit needed

SIU needs a safe, reliable and ecologically sane alternative to the private car. Students should revive the city campus bus system.

A bus line funded by student fees and semester passes sold to University personnel may provide thousands of persons with a safe, economical means of transportation. Buses may serve Carbondale living areas, facilities and business districts. By pooling riders, buses will alleviate traffic congestion and parking problems.

The Student Health Advisory Commission (SHAC) has launched a feasibility study of a campus bus system. Members of SHAC should bear in mind the successful bus program at Northern Illinois University (NIU) in DeKalb. NIU's plan may provide a model for SIU.

Established by students in 1971, NIU's bus system draws revenue from a $10 bus fee levied with each student's tuition, plus semester passes sold to NIU faculty and staff for $10 apiece. NIU's contract carrier operates 11 buses over seven assigned routes weekdays and three extended routes weekends. Times of operation begin at 7 a.m. and run as late as 1 a.m. Saturdays. Most heavily traveled routes pass through apartment complexes and campus living areas.

An NIU bus committee consisting primarily of students oversees operations. The system has attracted the attention of the U.S. government, which is considering funding the bus service to extend operations to the entire city.

SIU operated its own city-campus bus line between 1963 and 1971. Students paid 10 cents a ride. The low fare obviously failed to cover costs, and Student Government and the Administration absorbed the deficit. By 1970 total costs ran more than $70,000 annually.

Carbondale Model Cities experimented last fall with a bus line for the elderly, poor and the handicapped. The program failed due to low ridership.

SIU operated in February a free intra-campus Health Service bus jointly funded by the infirmary and Student Affairs. Costing $3,000, the bus made hour stops weekdays at the Health Service, the Student Center and campus living areas. During its 19-day trial period, 2,099 persons rode the bus. Each day a quarter of all riders used the bus to reach the Health Service.

The bus ceased running March 1 due to "insufficient ridership."

Carbondale has had bad luck with buses for one reason: Insufficient ridership to justify costs. All previous plans have required little or no funding from riders; always an administrative agency paid the deficit.

NIU's experience has been the opposite. Students overwhelmingly voted in a 1971 referendum to include the bus fee with their tuition. NIU's bus service encompasses more of DeKalb than merely the campus or low-income neighborhoods. Buses run from early morning to late at night all days of the week.

The need exists for public transportation in Carbondale. Even though fine shopping centers, clinics and restaurants are but a few miles away, small comfort is provided to the student without an automobile.

Is it feasible? One need look no further than NIU in DeKalb for a convincing example of a successful city-campus bus system.

OLD MASSAGE PARLORS NEVER DIE....THEY SIMPLY OVER-COME

We can all be thankful, decadence has arrived

By Michael Hawley

Everyone complains about the Carbondale bar scene and what a drag it is. For those who patronize that scene with the intent of spending an exhausting night on a dance floor, that drag is multiplied a thousand-fold. There just isn't a good place with good music, where one can boogie one's brains out in Carbondale.

Rather, there wasn't such a place—not until about a month ago, when Bonaparte's Retreat started its Sunday Night D.J. Discotheque. Mucho hurrahs and appreciation are extended from those of us who's legs were developing root rot as a result of extended inactivity. Discotheques are the up and coming thing and it's time Carbondale caught on.

Some people might think we've had discotheques in Carbondale before, but we haven't. Kevin J. Potts and Captain Zip-Off desperately trying to get people onto Merlin's dance floor with an old Doobie Brothers record doesn't constitute a discotheque. Neither do people standing around listening to the Peppermint Lounge jukebox.

Disco is hundreds of bodies bobbing and gyrating to music which is hot, chunky, soulful and pulse-pounding. Disco is for people who like to have music to smack them around, and for people who need to get off on something stronger than an irregular rock beat or the strum of a folk guitar.

It's Disco-Tex and the Sex-O-Lettes screaming at everyone to "Get Dancin'." Or Shirley and Company whining "Shame, Shame, Shame (on you if you can't dance, too)." Carbondale's anxiously awaited disco satisfies all the above requirements.

"Disco has been real big in the cities for years. That's where a lot of SIU students head when they go home to Chicago. Like a lot of things though, Carbondale is slow and still into the 'live band' scene. These people just want to do at school what they do at home. That's why the disco is going over so big," reasons Ed Sladek, an SIU student who willingly serves as disc jockey each week. He was the principal organizer of the local disco, along with a friend of his, Jeanne Doherty.

Sladek has also done the same kind of D.J. work in Milwaukee, Wisc., and owns a record collection comparable in quality to any big city discotheque. Manipulating the sound equipment onstage like Dr. Frankenstein happily at work in his laboratory, it's Sladek's job to make sure the music doesn't stop for a second and the dance floor is always heavily populated.

The records heard at these places are a musical entity unto themselves. One generally won't hear the songs on the Top 40, progressive FM or even a lot of soul stations. Usually they're just obscure album cuts which are dynamite to dance to, or a single which is recorded and released specifically with the discos in mind. Recently, "Billboard" magazine established a separate chart listing for disco records, and an increasing number of albums have a sticker on them which reads something like, "Contains the big disco hit 'E-Man Boogie'."

Along with the music and dancing, Bonaparte's D.J. Disco also brings with it some of the other trappings and trimmings of big city discotheques. It all depends on your personal tastes and viewpoint.

The music is very loud, and intensified with mirror ball and strobic lighting effects. A noticeable proportion of the crowd is gay. And the people are generally well-dressed; wearing something other than the tee-shirt and blue jean uniforms of SIU.

For Carbondale, which despite its student population is about as decadent as Plymouth Rock, Mass., it's a fairly loose scene. The couple combinations on the dance floor are as varied as can be. They dance to everything from the 'Bump' to the 'Hustle' to the 'Freak Out' or whatever else they see the "Soul Train" gang do on television Friday afternoons.

The first time the disco happened in mid-March, there was even a transvestite variety show to highlight the proceedings. Bonaparte's had been rented that night for a semi-private disco party which approximately 250 people attended.

Bonaparte's saw a potential for making money on a night they were usually closed and turned it into a weekly event. They did get cold feet on the idea of having weekly drag shows, however.

For a lot of people in Carbondale, Sunday night disco is something they've hoped to see for a long time.

And for a number of people, disco will be seen as further evidence of Carbondale's moral disintegration, i.e., disco is to Carbondale as Cabaret was to Berlin. A sort of "Carbondale Satyricon," perhaps. It might even end up on the Carbondale Citizens for Decency 'no-no' list, at which time we'll witness the formation of an equally enthusiastic group—the Carbondale Citizens for Decadence and Dancing.

Spring has finally begun to appear and, hot on the heels of the new season is the beginning of the season for that bloated industry that has presumptuously grabbed for itself the title "America's National Pastime," major league baseball.

Soon the amateurs will join the madness and by summer there will be more ballclubs around than alewives on Chicago beaches. All will be playing one of the most boring, yet enthusiastically embraced forms of "recreation" in the world.

Now, I know that doing anything as blasphemous as taking a dig at baseball can get me branded as a Communist or at least a Pinko, but I ask the readers to stop a moment and think about it. In baseball, there are nine alleged players on the field, one of whom has the dubious distinction of throwing the so-called horsehide (the baseball is actually bound in cowhide) toward a player from the other team standing some 60 feet away from him. This other player has a kind of warclub called a "bat" he's supposed to hit this little baseball with. If he can accomplish this feat (which is undeniably difficult, if you stop to realize that the ball can travel about 100 m.p.h.), he is then supposed to run at least 90 ft. (more if he's fast enough) before the other team can get possession of the ball and make contact with the batter (unless, of course, it's caught on the fly.)

This series of events, in itself, could be construed relatively exciting. Unfortunately, such motion occurs only a small percentage of the times the batter has a chance and the batter only sees a good pitch about one-third of the time. Of that percentage, the great majority produce nothing. An entire baseball game very often lasts two or three hours, with all the action concentrated in about twenty minutes.

The men who play this game call themselves professional athletes although, aside from pre-game exercises, only rarely does the image of the athlete actually fit most baseball players. Somehow, however, these people (not only men are playing) manage to attract crowds to their games. Granted, often the crowds are quite sparse but on occasions like baseball's self-endowed "World Series" as many as 60,000 people may be on hand for a game. In addition to those in the ballpark, the broadcast audience for these games is very solidly in the millions.

For some reason, unknown to me, baseball has a greater appeal to the general American mind than any number of sports with more and better action. After all, if someone wants to see ball hit a great distance, golf offers that with every drive; if it's running (either in a straight line or around circle) track has that and much more to offer. Those who like to see a game and marvel at the dexterity and skill of the infield should take a look at jai alai, where the action is faster and more dangerous than baseball could ever hope to be.

Naturally, there are those who will advance the argument that baseball's appeal lies in one of these traits, but rather in the synthesis of them all. These people I will ask to watch the Irish game of Hurling. A description of that game would be far too lengthy to include here, but suffice it to say that no one stands still for more than a few seconds and, in little old draws over 100,000. So why do Americans cling to the duller, slower sport of baseball?

There are probably a bunch of sociologists puzzling over that question now, but whether they will find an answer is somewhat doubtful. Americans hold baseball close to their hearts because they want to, and no rational argument is ever going to prevail over Yankee bull-headedness.

In cultures all over the world, a timeless and essential ritual is underway. In bygone millennia, the ritual was known as Eastré, a vernal festival of fertility honoring Eos, the goddess of dawn. It is a liturgy of welcome, joyous greeting of the season of hope—Spring. Acting as a uniquely American observance of this necessary and natural rebirth is the microcosm of life itself, the game—our game—baseball.

Baseball is a sport that does not submit itself to a clock or an enclosure. It doesn't play against the man—made standard of time, but toward victory. The lines on the field don't enclose it; they start at home plate and open to infinity.

Baseball affords America a link with the tradition of an earlier day, when this country seemed to be the new hope of man, an infinite green field, capable of nurturing the boundless possibilities of free men. The particular link baseball offers is unmatched by any other sport or American institution, including that old stand-by, the presidency.

Through a series of tight and demanding individual conflicts—pitcher vs. batter, fielder vs. ball—baseball expresses a natural, yet ambiguous reality curiously unpalatable to many modern Americans. They find it dull. The violence and mayhem of football appeals to their sense of "action." They find the blitzkrieg of a power sweep more in tune with their perception of life. Like the melting of hockey's blood-smeared ice, baseball reaffirms just in time, that sport, like art, depends on conflict. Yet inherent in baseball's unique nature is the ambiguity of its magic and ambiguity is the essence of great art.

Yes, the poetry of Don Kessinger going deep in the "hole" to snare a hard-hit grounder, whirl, twist in mid-air to check his momentum and fire the ball, to nip the runner by an eyelash, is indeed matched by the poetry of Gale Sayers bursting through the line, swivelling his hips to escape by that same eyelash, the clutch of mere mortals. These men are great athletes, artists and poets if you will, and their moments of transcendence are matched by the grace and finality of an Abdul—Jabbar hook shot.

But the spectacle of an offensive center, endlessly snapping the ball and smashing his body into his defensive counterpart is not art. It's not even sport. Hence, it delivers the man and those who condone and encourage him to the darkness and despair of an icy night in the dead of winter.

Some, on the other hand, would rather face that pitcher, soul to soul, or confront that grounder (tricky hops and all), or, occasionally, like the wheel of life itself, circle in the sun under a lazy pop fly.

Angered over column

To the Daily Egyptian:

This is in response to a selected comment that Diane Solberg of the Daily Egyptian penned in a recent column in which she set forth her opinions regarding the elections for student government. In her column she willfully and maliciously slandered me in her attempts at playing the dual role of political commentator and public relations man for Tea Party Now. Solberg devoted half her space to discussing what, in her eyes, were the outstanding qualities possessed by Diggle and Sullivan and then turned her poison pen to the task of character assassination of every other candidate for the office of student body president, myself included in that number. Solberg stated that when my running mate and myself appeared before Black Affairs Council to seek that organization's endorsement, we appeared without a platform. My question at this point is, where does this young lady get her information? Possibly from one of the other candidates. Myself, I have never had the pleasure of meeting this literary genius. My next question is as to what Solberg, in all her divine wisdom, considers a viable platform? The fact is, at the time of our appearance before BAC we did NOT tell them that we would lower tuition and housing costs by fifty per cent as did the candidate whom BAC finally supported. We knew this could not be accomplished, that it was empty rhetoric. We further did not discuss the military budget of the United States as did the candidate whom BAC finally supported. We knew that if elected our "pull" in Washington, D.C., wasn't strong enough to affect a major change in our country's expenditures. We appeared only to talk of our plans for working together, black and white, to represent all students of SIU. It is true that at this very early stage we were still in the developmental process of our platform. But how many other candidates had formulated anything concrete at this stage? As for the BAC candidate it was only too obvious how his platform was steeped in ideology but retained little semblance of realistic goals. It appears that our ideas were a bit "unexciting," not radical enough. Miss Solberg continued in her vicious, unthinking manner by writing that I probably thought I didn't need a platform as I had brought along a "token black woman" as my running mate. With this comment, I feel only an uncontrollable anger. My running mate at the time was Rochelle Bridges; a good friend and most importantly a fine person. I would like to make one point perfectly clear: I did not BRING Rochelle along. This is something I could not do, as Rochelle is her own person. We went before BAC together because we shared a mutual concern about the role of students at SIU. As for Solberg's comment about Rochelle being "token" I can only wonder what Solberg bases her allegations upon; what gives her the right to comment on a person whom she knows absolutely nothing about? Miss Bridges and I started from a basic premise of working together to represent all students. We still share that belief, yet Rochelle withdrew from the Coalition to Defend Student's Rights Ticket after a great degree of pressure from certain individuals who wanted her off because they felt she might cause a split in the black vote.

I would point out that it was Maurice Richards, the candidate who BAC finally wound up endorsing, who appeared the very same day Rochelle and I did to ask for that organization's support and also a black running mate, whomever BAC chose, to help balance his ticket. Now THAT is tokenism.

Infuriated over column

To the Daily Egyptian:

As President of The Progressive Coalition Party, I feel it necessary to respond to Daily Egyptian Staff Writer Diane Solberg's personal and opinionated endorsement of the "Tea Party Now" for the student body elections.

Aside from mentioning Sullivan's meagre achievements during his one year of being student body president, it appears that the "Tea Party's" main qualifications are that they are familiar with various bureaucrats within the SIU and city administrations. The implication being that if student government only "knows" the right people—something will get done for the students. This assumption is of course totally false. The clearest example of such a false assumption is a comparison between the reactions of Sullivan's administration and the Progressive Coalition Party over the issue of increased fees and housing costs. When the proposals for the increases were first announced, Sullivan's response was to the effect that "we'll fight this thing internally." When the Board of Trustees met to decide on the increases it was not Sullivan or his "connections" in the SIU administration which took action against the increases—on the contrary it was the Progressive Coalition which stood up for the student body and presented almost 2,000 signatures we had collected in an effort to halt this action. It is obvious that if a student body president had the guts or commitments to oppose the administration on this the chances of successfully opposing the increases would have been greatly enhanced.

The facts are that the Progressive Coalition Party has done more in two months in the attempt to organize a united student body to fight unfair administration policies than Sullivan's presidency has done in a whole year. It should be clear that from Sullivan's "Greatful Dead" ploy in last year's election to his miserable stand on the housing and fee increases that he is unfit to hold an executive student government office in any capacity.

Disgusted over column

To the Daily Egyptian:

It is not the first time that I have found myself unhappy with the editorial liberalism of the Daily Egyptian staff, but I can no longer restrain myself from commenting on what I consider to be gross negligence on the part of the editorial board of the Daily Egyptian. I am referring to the column by Diane Solberg on the 15th of this month. I find it disturbing that editorials are approved for publication which contain damaging allegations concerning people's motives and past without any attempt at accuracy or objectivity. Ms. Solberg was both high on insult and shy on truth when she stated that Aardvark Party candidate Jim Dumont was removed from the office of election commissioner for incompetence. Mr.

Dumont was not removed from office by anyone for any reason. He resigned from that office of his own accord. Ms. Solberg's error is inexcusable, but allowing such drive into print is irresponsible as well.

It seems a problem is going to exist with Daily Egyptian editorials until such time as it is made clear that their editorial license is overextended and will no longer be tolerated. Were I Mr. Dumont or any of the others whose characters were impugned by Ms. Solberg, I would bring this problem to a court of law in the form of a lawsuit.

Vaudeville acts, dances billed for program at Lab Theatre

By Deborah Singer
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Undergraduate students at SIU are seldom given the opportunity to use University facilities without some sort of administrative supervision. But in a courageous moment, the Theater Department decided to give undergraduates a chance to show their stuff.

This Friday, Saturday and Sunday at 8 p.m., in the time usually slotted for a Master of Fine Arts thesis production, a show titled "Comics and Dancers" will be presented in the Laboratory Theatre. The only people involved in all facets of the production, from handling publicity to doing technical work, are undergraduate students.

The title of the show is not just rhetoric, it actually describes the bill of fare. Eight vaudeville skits will be alternated with eight dances originally choreographed by members of the Southern Illinois Repertory Dance Theater for an evening's offering of highly divergent art forms.

Among the scenes to be performed is one that was originally written and performed by W.C. Fields and Fanny Brice. The skit titled "Ten Thousand People Killed," takes a bizarre look at domestic life.

Another of the scenes that will be presented, "The German Senator," was a vaudeville standby from 1900 to 1910 and is known to have been the best written comic monologue of its time.

"Oh to be an Actor," is another of the more well-known skits that will be performed. This scene involves a girl from the backwoods who is torn between staying home to marry Jud Simpson and going to Hollywood to become a vamp of the silver screen. Actors in the vaudeville scenes will be: Gary Wilson, Mike Meyers, George Gorham, David Jacks and Chris Marronne.

"Organismic Reign," choreographed by Lisa Thompson, is a duet that will be danced by Thompson and Michael Murray. The movement Thompson said is very organic and relies heavily on the creation of animal imagery for its slightly offbeat humorous effect.

Maura Junius choreographed

"Fetes," and says that it is a piece she has been working on since last October. "The concept came from the frenzied social scene in Carbondale," Junius said and she feels that it sort of pokes fun at the superficiality. Each dancer in the piece (Murray, Diana Cushman and Janis Waide), has a distinctive personality according to Junius, and this is exemplified through their movements.

"Shadow Walking," according to one of its two choreographer-dancers Steve Budas, "is a dance piece designed so that people who have trouble understanding dance can enjoy it." Performed by Budas and Ray Broersma, the dance was designed to explore the different ways in which two people can move, particularly walk, in unison.

Admission to the production will be $1.50. Tickets may be purchased at the University Theater Box Office in the Communications Building weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and will open at 7 p.m. prior to each performance. Tickets may be reserved by phoning (618) 453-5741.

Psychology seminar set

Two bio-feedback researchers will lecture Friday in a five-hour psychology symposium in Morris Library Auditorium, sponsored by the Colloquium Committee of the Psychology Department.

Richard Depue, psychology professor and advisor to the committee, described bio-feedback as the process where a person learns to control biological functions not normally controlled by the human being.

"It entails feeding biological information back to the individual so he becomes aware of it and can gradually learn to control it," he said. Heart beat rate and high blood pressure are two things people can learn to control, he said.

Each researcher will give two lectures followed by questions and discussion. Thomas H. Budzynski, professor at the University of Colorado Medical School, will speak on psychosomatic research and psychotherapy. Robert J. Gatchel, psychology professor at the University of Texas at Arlington, will speak on heart rate control and speech anxiety and bio-feedback.

The free symposium begins at 10 a.m. and is open to the public.

Special meeting set to discuss Giant City Blacktop load limit

By Pat Corcoran
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A special Jackson County Board meeting will be held Monday in the courthouse to hear complaints of coal truck operators affected by the 15-ton weight limit imposed on Giant City Blacktop.

A county highway, the blacktop runs along the southeast edge of Carbondale. The county board of supervisors placed a load limit on it after residents complained about heavy coal trucks traveling at high speeds through a residential area.

The road and bridge committee of the county board met Monday with members of the Williamson County coal firm owning the trucks and decided to take the issue to the full board in a special meeting. By law, eight board members must sign any petition calling for a special meeting. By Wednesday afternoon, six signatures were gathered.

Pruella Deitz, executive secretary to the county board, said the meeting would be held Monday night to insure the signatures were gathered and 24-hour notice given to all members.

"The coal company has requested this meeting because they can be driven out of business by the weight restriction," Gene Chambers, Murphysboro board member, said.

Chambers said he voted against putting on the load limits last week at the meeting.

"I wanted to give both sides of the thing a fair hearing, instead of stampeding into an ordinance," Chambers said.

The trucks began using Jackson County roads after Williamson County placed a nine-ton limit on its roads. The coal is trucked to Marion power plants.

According to coal company claims, the trucks presently weigh 40 tons when loaded.

Bill Munson, county highway superintendent, said the heavy loads were causing some road damage by creating ruts in the blacktop.

SRAs may get tuition as well as room, board

By Ray Urchel
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

All University Housing student resident advisors (SRA) may get their tuition waived next year in addition to the room and board waivers they already have.

Bruce R. Swinburne, vice president for Student Affairs, said Tuesday that chances are good SRAs will receive tuition waivers, although he added that he "hasn't touched all bases yet."

A resolution approved by the SIU Board of Trustees in May, 1954 states that an "unlimited" number of tuition waivers should be allocated to SRAs, Swinburne said. The number of waivers given is dependent upon the number of student staff positions available, currently 99.

Swinburne said that according to the board resolution the tuition waivers are the responsibility of the "chief student personnel officer," currently the vice president for Student Affairs.

When University Housing was transferred from the Student Affairs division to Business Operations two years ago, a limited number of tuition waivers were used by the Student Life Office to hire student programming assistants who worked with student governance within the residence halls, he said.

SIU President Warren W. Brandt announced at the March board meeting that University Housing will be placed under Student Affairs as of July 1.

Swinburne said he believes the decision to grant the waivers is his, although he will confer with Brandt before he acts.

The Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) requested several years ago that the number of tuition waivers granted be equal to 2 per cent of the income generated from tuition.

A report released by the Board of Trustees at the April 10 meeting indicates that SIU-C is 271 tuition waivers under the amount prescribed by the IBHE.

Swinburne said the action by the Board of Trustees making the waivers available has more effect than the request by the IBHE to limit the total number.

He said his intention to give the waivers to SRAs is "carrying out in spirit and practice" the Board of Trustees action and recognizes that SRAs have a lot of work and responsibility within the residence halls.

Citizen band radios installed in Jackson sheriff's cruisers

By Pat Cereoran
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer
Citizen band (CB) radios have been installed in Jackson County Sheriff's cars to add more eyes and ears to patrol, the sheriff said.

While the patrol cars have been equipped with the department's two-way radios for some time, Jackson County Sheriff Don White said the addition of two-way CB units was an innovation and he praised Raymond Graff, Jackson County civil defense director, for donating the radios to his department.

Many area persons have CB radios in their cars and White said his deputies on patrol would be able to communicate directly with them. Of particular interest is what criminal activity these private citizens see taking place, White said.

"We are interested in getting this information about what crimes or traffic problems these people see," White said.

Part of the program's effectiveness will hinge on two CB groups which already operate in the area, he said.

"We plan to work closely with the Radio Crime Watch (RCW) and React, both citizen's radio

Scholars' ideas still being taken

Suggestions are still being accepted by Research and Projects as to what scholars the faculty would like to have participate in the new program. "Adventures in Excellence - A Program of Faculty Development," said Michael Dingerson, director of Research and Projects.

The program will provide faculty members with the opportunity to communicate with scholars and to hear their views on trends in national priorities and new frontiers in education and research, Dingerson said.

organizations, to improve our effectiveness," White said.

In addition to the units placed in the cars, the citizen band radio in the sheriff's office will be moved from the third floor jail to the first floor communications center, he noted.

"We are trying to upgrade our communications in the sheriff's office," White commented.

Also in the planning stage is toll-free telephone service to the sheriff's office for persons in the Elkville-Dowell and Campbell Hill-Ava areas. White said he felt persons in these areas feel hindered about calling his office for aid and being charged for a long distance phone call.

White said the monthly charge for a toll free line to Elkville would be $75, and $73 for Ava. Either the county would pay for the lines or the residents in the area served by the toll free service would be charged 25 to 30 cents a month, concluded White.

Police arrest two students for illegal drug possession

Two SIU students were arrested by SIU Security Police about 1:05 a.m. Wednesday on drug charges. Marc C. Weisberg, 19, of Rt. 2 Crab Orchard Estates, was charged with unlawful possession of a controlled substance and unlawful possession of cannabis. Michael B. Casey, 23, of 219 Garden Park Apartments, was charged with unlawful possession of cannabis.

The security police report said Weisberg and Casey were sitting in a car at a stoplight at Illinois 51 and Harwood when the security police car pulled up behind the car.

The car sat at the light for about

Class changes flood registrar

Over 100 scheduled class sections for summer semester and 81 class sections for fall have been cancelled as of Monday.

Henry Andrews, assistant director for registration, said Wednesday that in addition to the section cancellations, his office has received notification that 50 class sections for summer semester will reflect changes in either meeting time or location. He added that time and location changes will affect 86 sections scheduled for fall semester.

Andrews said the class schedule projections that have to be made by each department well in advance of the term often prove inaccurate.

"As the term approaches, changes have to be made," he said.

He said the Office of Admissions and Records will run a full page advertisement in the April 22 edition of the Daily Egyptian listing the affected sections.

Andrews advised students who have registered for classes that have been changed to come to the registration center as soon as possible if the time or location change will pose a conflict with the student's schedule. He added that students who have signed up for cancelled sections must drop the class.

"We hope the students will make the changes now instead of waiting until the mad rush that occurs at the beginning of the new term," Andrews said.

Advance registration for the summer semester ends May 9.

The last two segments of the Feynman film series will be presented by the SIU Physics Department Thursday and April 24 at 7:30 p.m. in Neckers, room B40.

The lectures are open to all interested persons.

The series consists of four lecture films given by Richard Feynman who was awarded the Nobel Prize in 1965 in the area of fundamental particles.

The third lecture is "Probability and Uncertainty: The Quantum Mechanics View." The final lecture is "Seeking New Laws."

two minutes before the officer walked up to the car to see if anything was wrong. The officer noticed a strong odor of marijuana, the report said.

Police allegedly discovered three vials of marijuana, a marijuana cigarette butt and clip, a plastic vial and one white pill.

Casey posted bond, but Weisberg remained in Jackson County Jail Wednesday.

A return date of 10 a.m., April 24, has been set for both.

Everyday living taught in coed home ec class

Student Writer

Planning to get married? Want to get the most out of your dollar? Want to become a great connoisseur? Then sign up for Home Economics Education 399 - Fundamentals of everyday living.

The class was started in 1959 for men only, but Arlene Heisler, assistant professor in Home Economics and Management, has urged women to sign up for the course too. Until this semester only men have taken the course.

"One year we had 900 men in the course, but this year about 59 men and 11 women are enrolled," Heisler said. "It's simply a survey course for non-home economics majors, aimed primarily at males to show them how to perform certain tasks around the home that women would normally do."

Activities in the class range from preparing French bread to diapering a baby. In the cooking department students have been shown how to make coffee cake out of a can of biscuits.

"Many times unusual questions are asked relating to table manners," said Heisler. "We're not trying to change anyone's eating habits, but students need to know what foods are finger foods, that you should always eat the salad to your left, or any small table manner which could be helpful to know."

With rising inflation becoming a major problem today, Heisler teaches the students on the fine elements of buying food. She said everyone needs to know how to stretch a dollar, because in her words, "there are so many junk foods now, it pays to be a wise consumer."

Not only do the students find the course humorous and exciting, they often find themselves running back to Heisler asking a number of questions even after graduation. "One person asked me how to get milk out of a kashmir sweater," said Heisler.

Colson given annual atheist phony award

The winner of the "religious hypocrite of the year" award, at the annual American Atheist's Convention in Los Angeles is Charles W. Colson, former President Nixon's one-time aide who was sentenced to prison for his part in the Watergate scandal.

Colson was given the award because he "suddenly saw the light and professed his new found religious dedication," when faced with a prison sentence, a convention spokesman said.

Madalyn Murray O'Hair, who was responsible for the 1963 Supreme Court decision banning prayer in public schools, sponsored the convention.

Literature workshop set for summer

Literature is one way of expanding our world. Unless a person can find his identification, the world is not meaningful, says Marion Kleinau, instructor in the Speech Department.

With this theme in mind, Kleinau along with other speech and literature instructors will be conducting a summer workshop called "Literature and Creative Self."

The Speech 492 class will be held from June 22 to July 11 for graduate students and secondary school teachers. The workshop is worth five credit hours at a graduate level.

Classes involving literature in sensory awareness, interpersonal communications, imagination and creativity will be conducted.

Activities during the three-week period will consist of multi-media games, improvisation and interpersonal exercises.

The workshop seeks to stimulate a student-centered approach to creative writing, speech and literature.

The methods used stem from theories of creative problem solving, play as a learning experience and transpersonal educational approach.

Hancock leads field at Kansas decathlon

By Dave Wiczorek
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Kansas is one of several states that is considered to be in "Tornado Alley," because of all the twisters that are so common to the area.

So it would not be so unusual to sight a tornado in Lawrence, Kan., home of the University of Kansas and the Kansas Relays. However, a strange tornado has hit Kansas, coming from the Carbondale and SIU areas and it, rather, Saluki trackster Bill Hancock, is hitting with full force and is expected to last at least another day.

After the completion of five events in the 10-event decathlon, SIU strongman Bill Hancock has amassed the third highest point total for opening day in the 47-year history of the Kansas Relays. Hancock won four events—the 100-meter dash, long jump, high jump and 400-meter dash. He finished third in the shot put.

His total of 4,209 puts Hancock well ahead of the second place total of 3,954. If Hancock were to have an average day Thursday, scoring approximately 3,500 points, that would give him a new lifetime best total easily. His best effort to date is 7:591 at the Florida Relays at the end of March.

Hancock finished third at the relays last year, and two years ago he won the decathlon competition. His first day total puts him well on his way to capturing the title again.

"Bill is ready to go," said his coach Lew Hartzog. "He had a solid performance in every event."

The 6-foot-2 Glasford native, recorded a 24.9 leap in long jump competition, the best ever in a decathlon and Hancock's third best jump. His 10.9 time in the 100 meters was just one-tenth of a second off his lifetime best. In his specialty, the high jump, Hancock soared 6-11 and 7-8. He just missed setting a decathlon high jump record, as the bar fell after he brushed it at 7-11.

Hancock is presently the co-holder of the record at 7-1.

A lifetime best was clocked by Hancock as he knocked a full second off his previous best time in the 400 meters, with a time of :49.4. His 41-11 toss in the shot put was good for third place.

The final events of the decathlon will be completed Thursday.

The rest of Hancock's teammates, who will be competing at the relays, leave for Lawrence Thursday afternoon. One trackman who won't be going is Jack St. John, who won the steeplechase and three-mile run at Saturday's meet with Illinois.

St. John says, "It helped my confidence a lot to win those two races. I won't be going to Kansas, though. I want to try and qualify for the nationals in the six-mile, so I'm going to stay home and train for three weeks. Getting in good condition is the main thing."

Saturday's race was the first steeplechase race in which St. John has been entered in two years. It was in that event two years ago that he tore a tendon in his ankle while leaping over the hurdle in front of the steeplechase water pit.

"This was my best meet in two years. I didn't do a thing since that injury. That injury caused me a lot of other small injuries because I favored it," St. John said.

"I just wish the season was a month longer. I'm afraid I might hit my peak in the middle of the summer," the senior added, explaining that his injury threw his time schedule off.

Women explain 'sports discrimination'

(Ed. note: This is the first of a two-part story by Daily Egyptian sportswriter Martha Sanford concerning the discrimination at SIU and across the country against women's sports.)

By Martha Sanford
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Sports thrives on fair play and an equal calling of the shots, but women's sports aren't receiving fair play and, as a result, often come out on the losing end of the game.

Women involved in sports usually call this mistreatment "discrimination," a term that is easily applied to a number of issues.

But what does discrimination mean to women athletes, coaches, referees and administrators?

The question was tossed around by representatives of each of these groups of women involved in sports at SIU, and the answer echoed by each group, directly or indirectly, was "not enough money."

Claudia Blackman has been at SIU since 1968 and is presently the coach of contribute some of their time to officiating games. Occasionally, she has been reimbursed by other schools where SIU plays, but the most she has been paid for a game is $12.

How does she feel about not getting then it's worth supporting and worth developing," she reasoned. "And one way to do that is to have good officials. But to do that they must be paid."

Charlotte West, director of women's intercollegiate athletics and coach of the women's basketball team at SIU, also feels that lack of money is a problem, but her biggest concern is to first make people understand that women's programs can't be judged on the same basis as men's programs. And this is where the money comes in.

West said that many administrators who allocate money seem to say that if the men spend $200,000 on football, then the women should do the same, or if the men's baseball team plays 35 games a season, then the women should, too.

West believes that this is obviously ridiculous.

"I myself am a coach and I feel that a coach should know how much stress goes on a student," she said, "and I say students because my players are students first and athletes second. If they want to be professionals, they shouldn't be in college."

"Most women want the opportunity to build and design their own programs and not be a mirror image of the men."

West added. "Therefore, the additional money we need should go to developing our entire program."

To emphasize that statement, West used monetary scholarships as an example. If the athletic program is poor, then any money spent on scholarships for good athletes is wasted because they won't be able to develop their potential or best use their talent.

West said another problem for women's athletics is poor facilities. The women don't have enough playing fields and the fields they do have are in very poor condition. Their athletic building, Davies Gym, is in poor condition and any renovation program is long overdue.

The women also need additional money for equipment, personal services and traveling expenses.

(Tomorrow: The athletes tell their views.)

Coach: Most women donate their time for education's sake the women's cross country and track and field teams. Blackman also referees basketball games for SIU and some of the schools they play.

Speaking as an official, Blackman said she does not get paid for officiating games because the money just isn't available. At home games, all SIU coaching staff members are expected to paid and being expected to contribute her time?

"Well, most women donate their time for education's sake," she said. "If there were no officials, then women wouldn't be able to play and, to me, that's more important than getting paid."

"But on the other hand, if a program is worth having, and SIU's certainly is,

Hodges, Derry coast to 5-1 victories

By Ron Sutton
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

Learning from mistakes is the big thing, but avoiding "learning the hard way" can be pretty vital, too.

Saluki southpaw Robin Derry showed just that Wednesday afternoon in escaping with a 5-1 victory over the St. Louis Billikens in the nightcap of an Abe Martin Field doubleheader.

Ace righthander Ron Hodges improved his record to 6-1 in the opener, pitching strong innings in another 5-1 win.

The nightcap provided most of the excitement, though, for the few fans who

Handball slated

Entry blanks for next week's men's intramural handball tournament must be turned in to the Office of Recreation and Intramurals by 5 p.m. Friday.

The singles and doubles tournaments will be held Monday through Thursday, with games starting at 4:30, 5:30 and 6:30 p.m.

Pairings and court assignments will be available at the office Monday, and all participants must report to the tennis court shack before and after each match.

Matches will consist of the best two-out-of-three games to 21 points, with all official United States Handball Association rules applying. Ceiling interference will be played as agreed upon by the participants.

braved chilly early afternoon winds to enjoy a warm sun later.

Derry was pitted against Billiken cleanup hitter Steve Craig twice with the bases loaded and the game in balance. The first time, Derry lucked out; the second time, he won.

In the fifth, he protected a 3-1 lead—on, rather, rightfielder George Vukovich did—as the freshman flycatcher robbed the lefty-swinging Craig with a beautiful backhanded running grab in right-center to retire the side.

Two innings later, after the lead was up to 5-1, Derry took on the responsibility himself, setting up Craig with three teasing curves—two for strikes—then blazing a fast-ball past the swinging Billiken for the win.

"He had been hitting fastballs out over the plate all day," Saluki pitching coach Mark Newman said of Craig, who singled his first two times up. "Derry set him up just like we planned with three curveballs, then threw that fastball up and in, where he couldn't handle it."

Derry, who allowed just a first inning run on a walk and two singles, evened his record at 2-2, mainly behind the hitting of Steve Shartzter.

Shartzter, who belted his fourth homer of the year in the opener, upped his RBI total to a team high 27 in the nightcap with a two-run double in the third and a run-scoring single in the fifth.

His third inning blow followed an two-out error and a walk to Howie Mitchell, putting SIU on top, 2-1. A single by Jim Locascio and Vukovich's low-bagger set up Rick Murray's successful squeeze bunt for a fourth inning run.

In the fifth, after Vukovich's catch had taken the steam out of the visitors, John Hoscheidt opened with a single, stole second and continued to third when the ball glanced off secondbaseman Dave Poth's glove.

With one away, Shartzter's hit scored him, then Shartzter swiped second and third. Locascio's two-out single produced the final run of the day.

In the opener, the excitement ended—instead of beginning—in the fifth. Hodges carried a no-hitter for 4 1/3 innings, before the Billikens broke through.

They appeared to have done so on designated hitter Tom Flavin's one-out grounder which Hodges backhanded to the thirdbase side of the mound, but slipped as he pivoted to throw. The play was ruled an error, though, leaving the next batter, Poth, to get the first official hit, a line single into left.

"There was no question about that grounder being a hit," Saluki coach Itchy Jones said after the game, to which Newman added, "Any time you have to come off the mound the way Hodges did, it's a hit."

It made little difference, though, as long as the Billikens still got their hit. Hodges then left as scheduled after the fifth, giving way to reliever Dewey Robinson. Robinson lost the shutout in the sixth on Don Droege's home run.

"We took Hodges out so we could have him in relief at Indiana State (Friday and Saturday) and then use him at Edwardsville (Sunday)," Newman explained. "This was the best he's pitched all year. He was bringing his leg up more like we've been showing him."

Hodges' pitching made it easy for the hosts to relax all the way. After Mitchell's single and stolen base and Frank Hunsaker's base hit produced a first inning run, they iced it with four-run second.

Locascio and Murray singled, and Dan Herbst sacrificed, to set up the big inning. Hoscheidt then drilled a two-run triple to right-center, before Shartzter came through with his two-out circuit shot.

The Salukis now hit the road until Tuesday, when they play host to Western Kentucky in a 1 p.m. doubleheader. Friday, Jim Kessler will start the single game at Indiana State, with the starters for Saturday's doubleheader there coming from the trio of Robinson, Tim Verpaele and Bill Dunning.

Hodges and freshman Jim Adkins figure to start the Sunday twinbill at SIU-Edwardsville.
