SIUC sick day costs rise 413 percent

By Brian Gross
Special Assignment Writer

George Fraunfelter took few sick days during his 26 years as a professor in geology and a curator for the University Museum. When he retired in 1991, he was able to receive about $5,000 for his accumulated unused sick days.

Fraunfelter said it was a "nice" bonus.

"I had quite a few days saved up," he said. "It helps you pay your taxes."

But paying out lump sums of money to faculty for unused sick days increases the financial burden on the University.

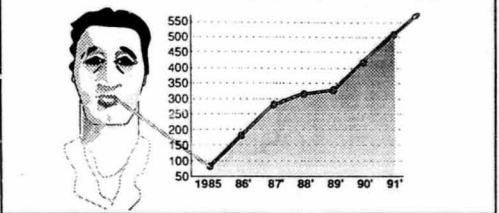

Since Illinois changed its law on sick days credit in 1983, University payouts have increased 413 percent from $98,710 in 1985 to $506,719 in 1991.

Upon retirement or termination, state employees receive one-half of their accumulated unused sick days since 1983, said Bonnie Stubbs, director of employee records for personnel.

The state passed the sick days act in 1983 as a way of saving money by giving employees an incentive not to use leftover sick time at the end of the year, but the system may be costing universities more than it is saving.

Some employees may take a day off and use it as a sick day if they have extra sick days saved. Then the state has to pay other employees overtime to come in as a replacement. By offering payouts

Ministers: Easter losing its religion

By Jeremy Finley
General Assignment Writer

Christians celebrate Easter to mark the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the grave, but some local ministers say the bunny hides the holiday's true meaning along with the eggs.

The Rev. David K. Burlison, pastor for the Lakeland Baptist Church in Carbondale, said an SIUC student came to his church last year unfamiliar with the religious aspect of Easter.

The student knew nothing about the religious meaning and knew only about the Easter Bunny, Burlison said. "That student is now a Christian and understands what Easter truly is," he said.

Easter is the day when Christians celebrate the resurrection of Christ from the dead after his crucifixion on Good Friday.

Burlison said the Easter Bunny detracts from the true meaning of Easter.

"The Easter Bunny is fun for kids," Burlison said. "I do not mind it as long as it is only thought of as fun, and people realize the bunny is not the end of the issue."

"Easter is and always has been a religious holiday," he said.

Dale Bengston, chair of the SIUC religious studies department, said the word "Easter" comes from Easter.

FDA may return breast implants to marketplace

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration ruled Thursday that silicone gel-filled breast implants may be returned to the market, but only under severely restricted conditions.

FDA Commissioner David Kessler said the devices have not been proven to be safe, and until they are, they will be available only to women who have an urgent need for them, such as breast cancer patients who undergo mastectomies.

"These types of products have to be shown by their manufacturers to be safe," Kessler told a news conference.

Based on data presented to the agency, the FDA formally denied approval of the implant devices.

However, further research on their safety was required, and women who enrolled in "controlled clinical studies" could have the devices implanted, the FDA said.

"While these devices are being studied, their availability will be limited. Yet, as I have said, women who require them as part of reconstructive surgery will be provided access to these studies," Kessler said.

Only a small number of women — enough for safety studies — will be able to receive implants for breast enlargement, the FDA said.

However, women who have ruptured implants or have other urgent medical need for the devices may be able to get them as early as next week, Kessler said.

The FDA commissioner accepted the recommendations of the agency's General and Plastic Surgery Devices Panel, which met in November and February to consider data on breast implant safety.

In both meetings, the panel concluded that despite 30 years of use, manufacturers had failed to gather sufficient evidence of safety.

In the second round of hearings, some doctors presented evidence they believed linked silicone gel implants with consequences such as Lou Gehrig's disease, scleroderma, lupus and arthritis.

While the panel rejected such reports as "inconclusive," it said women need to be aware that there may be risks associated with the implants.

The FDA said all women who receive the implants must sign "informed consent" forms outlining the potential risks associated with gel bleed and other problems.

St. Louis attorney to end IAAC term

By Brandi Tipps
Administration Writer

A St. Louis circuit attorney who pleaded guilty to soliciting a prostitute will not serve a second term as chairman of the SIUC Intercollegiate Athletic Advisory Committee.

Charlotte West, associate athletic director and committee member, said prosecutor

George Peach was not nominated and did not run for the chairman position prior to his involvement in soliciting a prostitute last month.

The committee talked about the election before police announced Peach's involvement with the prostitute, West said.

"Had there been a different sequence in the timing of events, it might have made a difference," she said.

West does not know whether Peach's actions had anything to do with the lack of support for his candidacy as chairman of the SIUC Intercollegiate Athletic Advisory Committee, she said.

Baseball team drops third straight

By Scott Wuerz
Sports Writer

The baseball Salukis are heading into the final stretch of the 1992 season, but head coach Sam Riggleman said their offense seems to have run out of gas.

"I think it's just fatigue," he said. "The injuries are really wearing us down. We just have a lot of bad swings right now and it's tough to make adjustments when you're out there playing every day."

The Dawgs dropped their third consecutive game Thursday, falling to the SIUE

Cougars by an 8-2 score.

The Cougars jumped on top with back-to-back, two-out triples in the first by Edwardsville center fielder Todd Carter and third baseman Chris Kabis.

The Cougars tagged Saluki starter John Newkirk for two more in the second, giving up a pair of singles to DH Mark Ringering and catcher Kevin Van Houten. Newkirk balked the runners to second and third, setting the table for shortstop Tim Hogan, who singled in two runs.

SIUE pitcher Tony Stoecklin held the Dawgs to two base hits through the sixth.

Shortstop Clint Smothers singled to lead off the game and first baseman Darrin Barton singled in the fifth. Both runners were retired on double plays.

In the sixth, SIUC broke through with two runs. Second baseman Pete Schlosser walked, Barton tripled, and he was knocked in on a two-out single by DH Ed Jarke.

The Cougars, however, slammed the door in the bottom of the eighth with four insurance runs off reliever Ryan McWilliams.

Newkirk, normally a middle reliever, took the loss for the Salukis.

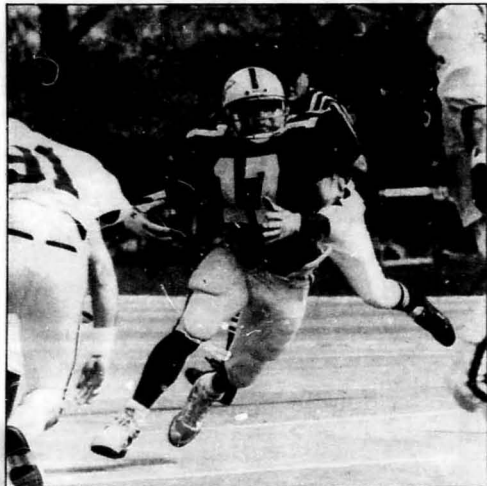

He toiled for 3 1/2 innings, giving up six hits and four runs.

Riggleman said Newkirk was thrust into action to rest seniors Mike Van Gilder and George Joseph for the Dawgs' double header against Northern Iowa Saturday.

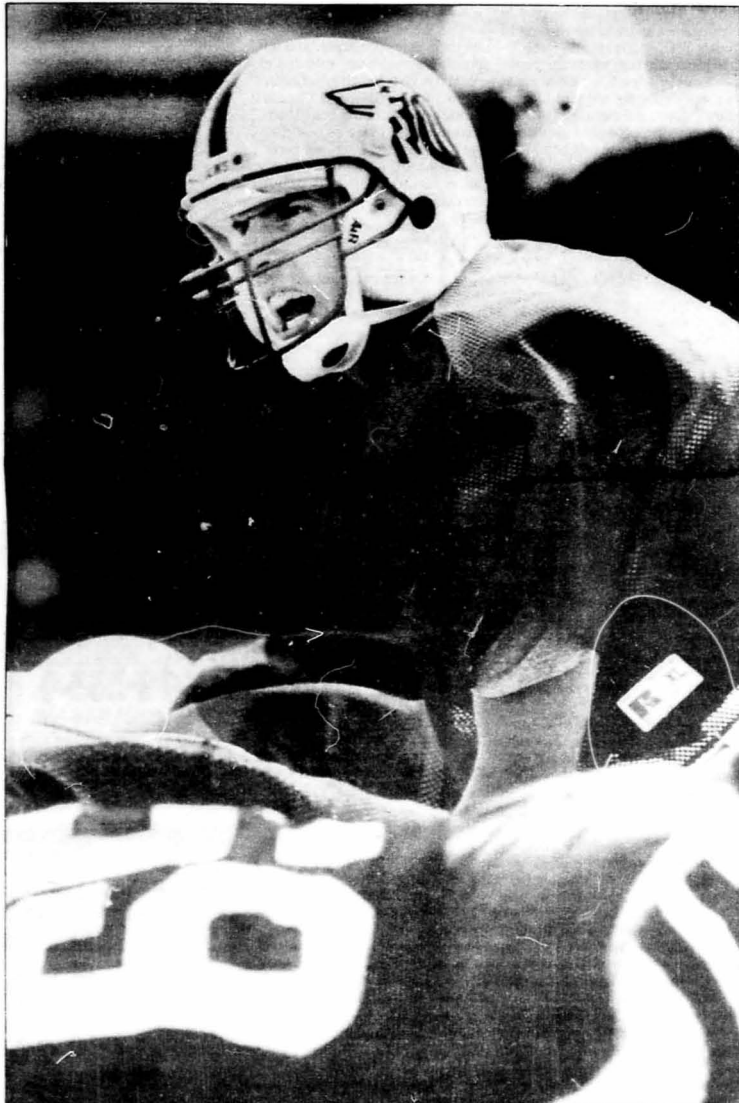

"At this point of the season we're playing every game to win. With a 13-21 record we need every victory we can get," he said.

"John impressed us in his outings last week so we gave him a chance to start. The bottom line is, however, that we need (Joseph and Van Gilder) to win two of our three games at (MVC foe UNI) or our conference tournament hopes are over."

Dawg gridders end spring on high note

By Tony Mancuso
Sports Editor

After steering the Saluki football team to a 7-4 mark in 1991, head coach Bob Smith found just as much reason to be pleased with his squad's spring practice session.

He was so pleased he cancelled the Dawgs' final practice session of the spring Wednesday.

"We have seen everything we need to see this spring," Smith said. "We've accomplished everything we set out to accomplish and we've introduced everything we needed to at this time. Therefore, we're finished."

Smith suffered through consecutive 2-9 seasons before the Dawgs jumped out to a 5-0 mark last season. They knocked off No. 5 Northern Iowa and climbed into the NCAA Division I-AA Top 20 for three weeks.

"We were the most improved team in the nation percentage-wise last year," Smith said. "It would be tough to repeat that, but we will be a hard team to beat and very exciting to watch."

He said he will not predict an extraordinary season in fall 1992. The Salukis lost several seniors, especially on the defensive line.

Graduating defensive linemen Jon Manley, John Dollenmaier, Jim Rung and Dwayne Summers anchored the squad last year, and Smith said defense will be a main

Saluki senior second sacker adapts for success

By Norma Wilke
Sports Writer

From shortstop to second base, from left-handed to right-handed batting, versatile senior Andrea Rudanovich has made an impact on the SIUC softball team.

The Saluki second sacker transferred from Meramec Junior College last year to start on SIUC's Gateway Championship team. Rudanovich chose SIUC because it was close to home, and she had a chance of starting because a number of positions were opening up.

"It's important for me to have my family come and see me," she said. "My sister kind of inspired me to start softball. When I was four and she was five she was playing softball, and I thought it looked easy, and I wanted to try. My sister and I have competed against each other all the way through high school. I continued to play, but she didn't."

Rudanovich

When Rudanovich came to SIUC, she was a switch hitter. But to adjust to the pitching the Salukis face, Rudanovich became strictly a right-handed batter. Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said Rudanovich wasn't as strong from that side, but now she has adjusted well.

"She's a hard worker," Brechtelsbauer said. "If she doesn't have class, she's out on the practice field early. She's begun to hit the ball hard this year."

"It's taken some time to get her

Simon: Health care needs reform

Democratic senator meets with community members to discuss issues

By Christy Gutowski
General Assignment Writer

U.S. Sen. Paul Simon called for changes Thursday in the nation's health-care policy, urging leaders to give the American people health care that more adequately meets their needs.

Simon met with students, faculty and Carbondale professionals at SIUC to discuss the nation's healthcare system, which he says is in trouble as a result of high costs which limit public access.

In 1990, hospital costs increased 10 percent, physicians costs increased 15 percent and pharmaceutical costs rose 11 percent. The problem of healthcare delivery has worsened this year as 1.4 million Americans lost benefits.

"When you read about General Motors laying-off workers, the issue is not just about people losing jobs," Simon said. "It's about people also losing health care."

Many Americans who do receive healthcare benefits, do not have enough coverage if an emergency resulted, he said. "If I asked how much health insurance coverage each of you have, most of you would not be able to answer," he said.

Simon said the nation has taken no solid direction yet toward one healthcare plan.

But he is co-sponsoring several different types of healthcare plans so all options will be put on the table to the American public.

The Long-Term Care Family Insurance Act will defend families against the catastrophic costs of chronic illness for seniors, working-age Americans children, he said.

A management agency will be created in each state to determine eligibility and monitor the quality of the health care offered.

His long-term plan requires care for those who need it by requiring a one-half percent increase in social security for employers and employees.

"I'm co-sponsoring an employer-based healthcare program that Ted Kennedy and George Mitchell introduced in which the employer would be responsible for payment of healthcare benefits to workers," he said.

The government would give special assistance to small businesses because that would suffer more than larger, stronger companies.

"The average business in the United States has to pay 11 percent of payroll for health costs if an employer have health coverage. For a large business, such as General Motors, those costs run somewhat less.

Simon said he opposes a different proposal of the Bush administration's to make all health care tax deductible.

"I'm opposed to tax deductibility," he said. "But it does nothing in terms of access and cost control. So, I really don't think it would have any significance in terms of solving (healthcare) problems."

SIUC student Bob Brunner, a political science junior from Freeport, said Simon should put less emphasis on the federal

CCFA awards top undergrad students

By Casey Hampton
General Assignment Writer

The College of Communications and Fine Arts brought its 174 finest undergraduate academic achievers into the spotlight Sunday at Honors Day.

CCFA Dean Gerald C. Stone said those who were awarded top honors bring prestige to the college.

"(Honors Day) is our opportunity as a college to recognize the contributions of the scholastic achievement and external recognition that these students bring CCFA," he said. "To tell them thank you."

Stephanie Pickett, a senior in speech-communication from Decatur, was one of four who won a scholarship endowed by the first lady in journalism in Illinois, Virginia Marmaduke.

Pickett said she has attained her status through opportunities given to her by her college and self-ambition.

"You need motivation and direction in order to reach the goals you set for yourself personally," she said.

How Meng Chua, a senior in journalism from Singapore, Daniel Odle, a junior in radio-television from West Frankfort and Anthony Swinger, a junior in radio-television from Caruthersville, Mo, also were recipients of the Marmaduke scholarship.

Chua is the first international student to win the Marmaduke scholarship, which honors students who have a strong academic background and who have demonstrated talent in their communication field of study.

Betting a mild boon, not a blight on area

THE GAMBLING BUG BIT CARBONDALE two years ago, but it has taken that long for the state to approve off-track betting in the city. Now that the Illinois Racing Board has given the green light for an off-track parlor in Carbondale, residents who argued for and against its opening will have to grin and bear the gambling bug's presence in their city.

Not much will change in Carbondale once the parlor is opened. Morals will not decay any faster than their present rate, and the city will not be hit by thunderbolts like a latter-day Sodom. If anything, the mild financial benefits the city stands to gain outweigh such groundless concerns.

Citizens' groups opposed to such a parlor cited possible increases in crime and compulsive gambling among their reasons. In truth, a parlor's presence will serve to keep the dealings of Carbondale's gamblers, both weekend bettors and professional odds-watchers, above the table and legitimate. A licensed parlor squeezes illicit local bookies out of the loop on Illinois' racetrack action, and helps ensure their former customers will play by state rules.

Those in opposition also overlook the projected benefits to their community. The small percentage of wagers received by the city and Jackson County may reach as high as $200,000 annually for each, and perhaps 75 new jobs would become available in the betting service. The benefit is not huge, but it is a benefit that a region wounded by recession and unemployment can hardly afford to pass up.

As for cries of large-scale gambling addiction, an off-track parlor's presence does not put Carbondale at risk of becoming Las Vegas. The presence of a new soft drink machine on a street corner does not make one more likely to buy a can if one never cared for soda pop in the first place.

GAMBLING EXISTS EVERYWHERE in one form or another, whether it be wagering on Saluki basketball, the Super Bowl or the 1992 presidential race. If the city benefits by recognizing that fact, without dire costs to its citizens and within state-approved bounds, all the better for the city.

Opinion from Elsewhere

Committee can save higher ed

The Northern Star
Northern Illinois University

A common bureaucratic solution to any problem is to form a committee. In the case of higher education reorganization, it might actually work.

Gov. Jim Edgar gave his dire desires for next year's state budget April 7. The budget has higher education essentially treading water for another year; requesting the same level of funding as this year. But Edgar's message also announced a special blue-ribbon committee which will primarily study the structure of higher education.

The committee is co-chaired by Lt. Gov. Bob Kustra and IBHE Chairman Art Quern. One of the prime motivations for the committee has to be the Weaver bill, which would eliminate the Board of Regents. At a time when state coffers are as shallow as a kiddie pool, any cost-saving measure is receiving undivided attention in Springfield. BOR types must be holding their breaths, because Kustra has been quite vocal about abolishing the BOP in recent weeks.

A committee with the two top state higher education moguls should certainly be able to cut through the red tape and come up with some answers. However, the committee will have to do a rush job—it's supposed to report its findings to Edgar by June 1. One can certainly question whether the committee, when it finally gets off the ground, will have enough time to conduct a thorough investigation. All parties involved should certainly be allowed to present their side of the story.

However, the committee probably represents the best hope to come up with a new system that will more equitably distribute the state's higher education dollars.

Quest for perfect wedding brings on economic concern, embarrassment

Concerned young brides-to-be are constantly stopping me, sometimes by leaping in front of my car, and saying: "Dave, my family does not have a lot of money, but I want to have a nice wedding. What can I do?"

Even though money is tight, you can still have a wonderful wedding, if you just sit down with your family and have a heart-to-heart talk about what a wedding is really all about—things like commitment, and caring, and trust. Then you should rob a convenience store.

Your goal is to have a major, Godfather-style wedding, which will provide you with all the essential gifts you need to set up your new household. You'll find all of these items advertised in all of these 156-pound bridal magazines now collapsing the steel shelves of newsstands everywhere.

These magazines contain helpful articles for brides ("Grooms: Should You Have One?") and hundreds of full-page glossy color advertisements. Properly equipping a modern newlywed household is comparable, in terms of hardware requirements, to Operation Desert Storm, except of course that Desert Storm did not require both formal and casual tanks.

Consider just your kitchen and dining gift needs. I have here the April/May issue of Bride's magazine, which has a Wedding Registry Checklist that includes 21 categories of dinnerware, 22 categories of flatware, 17 categories of glassware (not to be confused with the 10 categories of hardware), and 34 categories of kitchenware.

I cannot overemphasize to you brides-to-be how essential it is for a household to have EVERY SINGLE ONE of these wares. My wife and I have been married for 17 years, and hardly a day goes by when we don't have a conversation like this:

ME: Dear, where are the lemon forks?

MY WIFE: Formal or casual?

ME: Casual. I wish to probe a boil while watching "American Gladiators."

MY WIFE: They are with the demitasse spoons, behind the finger bowls and the compote.

ME: What is a "compote"?

MY WIFE: I have no idea, but I cannot imagine setting up a household without one.

So you must have a large wedding. Planning a wedding takes longer than medical school, because the stakes are higher. If a doctor is trained improperly, the worst he can do is kill people. An improperly planned wedding could result in a real disaster, such as the recent wedding attended by a friend of mine named Cindy's.

Everything went fine until it was time for the cutting of the cake. The problem was, there was no cake. A catering worker had dropped it earlier, and in Cindy's words, "it exploded." So the caterer had substituted a fake wedding cake, apparently a display model made out of a hard, plaster-like substance. The caterer's idea was that the bride and groom would just pretend to cut it, for the photos, and then the guests would be served some other cake.

When the groom found out about this, however, he became angry and started arguing with the caterer. All the guests turned and looked just in time to see the groom pick up the fake cake, shout some bad words, and THROW THE CAKE AT THE CATERER.

Maybe the Cake Throw should become a standard wedding tradition, like throwing rice.

Speaking of traditions: the April/May issue of Modern Bride magazine has an article titled "Wedding Superstitions," which contains, I swear, the following statement:

"An old Scottish belief for good fortune: A bride should be met at the door after the wedding by her mother, who must then break a currant bun over her daughter's head."

I believe that this tradition sums up the very essence of the modern wedding. I would add only that if the mother has no currant bun, she may use a compote.

Letter to the Editor

Disabled students lose OASIS to apathy

SIUC has lost what could have been a very valuable Registered Student Organization due to a resounding lack of student interest. OASIS (Other Aabled Southern Illinois Students) was created to assist the disabled student population of SIUC; to project a unified voice for the resolution of disability issues on campus. In addition, it functioned as a networking environment addressing the diverse needs of the disabled student population.

Unfortunately, OASIS was met with an underwhelming response from those for whom it was created. Due to this apathetic attitude, the only realistic course of action has been to "pull the plug."

Before the curtain falls on OASIS, I would like to take this opportunity to thank Dr. Sam McVay, a man who has the health concerns of all students at heart and also those dedicated few who did participate and tried to make a difference in helping their fellow students.—Mark Roemeling, OASIS founder, graduate student, educational administration and higher education

Earthshakers: Environmental activists restore Earth Day to national agenda

By Jackie Spinner
Special Assignment Writer

The city that never slumbers almost slept through a silent movement that spring. Vietnam had pulled at every loose thread of the nation's fabric. And nobody paid much attention in the late fall of 1969 to a group with offices near duPont Circle in Washington, D.C.

The environmental movement was just moving from the '60s street theater to Main Street America, where it was even more foreign than some place called Da-nang, where husbands and sons went to die.

It was a river called the Cuyugoga in Cleveland that burst into flames by spontaneous combustion. Nobody quite believed that water could burn.

It was a report on pesticides in states such as California that people could ignore as long as they never bought grapes.

The country, after all, was far more concerned with the tangible—blacks trying to cross the color lines, hippies ripping at the moral fabric of society, demonstrators protesting a war they avoided and students rioting over all of it.

But less than four months after they organized, people calling themselves environmentalists had slipped into the country's conscience to stay.

On the day before the first Earth Day in 1970, New York Sen. Jacob K. Javits warned a pre-Earth Day group in the sleepless city against using the environment to divert the nation's attention from problems of substance.

"The ecological campaign should not become something of a diversion from such problems as poverty and racial tensions," he said in his speech.

This first Earth Day organization was not supposed to attract more than the usual crowd of demonstrators—college and university students, who had dominated the media since the early days of Vietnam.

But on a spring day in late April, 20 million Americans gathered to participate in an environmental demonstration known as Earth Day.

They attended rallies and speeches, conducted teach-ins and protested major polluters in the U.S. industry.

The first Earth Day was coordinated by a former Stanford student body president and his enthusiastic cadre of mostly student volunteers, but it attracted a much more diverse group of people, young and old, from all avenues of life.

Jeanne Tichenor, spokeswoman for the Environmental Action Coalition, said the environmental movement touched "Joe and Jane America" unlike any movement before it.

"The environment is the first movement in which everybody has to get involved," she said. "It struck a chord with a lot of people."

In Washington, speaker Denis Hayes made it clear to the thousands attending a demonstration at the Washington Monument that Earth Day 1970 was not a waning movement, a cause that would pollinate but never take seed.

"If the environment is a fad, it's going to be our last fad," he said. "We are building a movement, a movement with a broad base, a movement which transcends traditional political boundaries. It is a movement that values people more than technology, people more than political boundaries, people more than profits."

Gaylord Nelson, founder of Earth Day 1970, later recalled the beginning of the movement.

"By sheer force of collective action on that one day, the American public forever changed the political landscape regarding environmental issues," Nelson wrote in a memoir for the Environmental Protection Agency Journal.

In the wake of Earth Day 1970, the Congress created the Environmental Protection Agency and passed the Clean Air Act of 1970, which phased out lead in gasoline and drastically reduced automobile emissions.

In the 22 years since Earth Day was born, environmentalists across the country have lobbied successfully for laws protecting the environment. They have been a strong force in unseating anti-environmentalist congressmen who were tarred as the Dirty Dozen.

Each Earth Day has been a succession of the past. In 1990, many of the planned Earth Day events took on a flavor of the first.

A parade of garbage trucks in Portland, Ore., dramatized the problems of waste removal. Students at San Jose University dug up a gas guzzler buried on Earth Day 1970 to recycle it. And a long list of rock stars and Hollywood celebrities emerged at a commemoration on the Washington Mall. Laurel Toussaint, coordinator of the Sierra Club in Southern Illinois, said Earth Day has been helpful as a first step for people to get involved in the environmental movement. "People are willing to do small things," she said. "We teach people how to lobby at all levels." Earth Day 1992 organizers hope this year will be a turning point again for the nationwide demonstration. Hayes said although the movement lost points during the 1980s, a decade of consumption and combustion, it is making a return to the American agenda. "The environmental movement failed miserably to defend itself against the Reagan assault," Hayes told Rolling Stone magazine in 1990. But organizers still believe the movement can slip back from its dusty existence in the American subconscious if 1990 Earth Day events are a gauge of future success. Earth Day 1970, no matter how silently it crept into American lives, left an impression, as the New York Times reflected in an editorial on April 23, 1970. "If Earth Day has diverted the energy of Americans from other causes it is because many have finally perceived that the problems of the environment also have urgent claim on national attention. The environment encompasses all Americans, for better or for worse, white and black, rich and poor, right and left. "Unless all can live and work together for a better environment, all may suffocate together."

Students, activists refocus movement through broader vision to save planet

By Jackie Spinner
Special Assignment Writer

Student activists at colleges and universities with strong environmental movements say the Earth Day celebration in April may have outgrown itself—this year they will take a less "media-oriented" approach to raising public awareness of the issues.

"We're trying to make it less of a big party and more talking about real issues," said Miya Yoshitani, national council coordinator for the Student Environmental Action Coalition.

"Earth Day makes it too easy for the mainstream media to marginalize it or take it out of the everyday like it's just a big party," she said. "Everyone loves the Earth, but that doesn't present the issues very well."

To celebrate 20 years of Earth

Day in 1990, students on at least 2,000 campuses organized attention-grabbing Earth Day events. Yale students baked an Earth Day cake, 6 feet in diameter, and decorated like a globe. The Memphis College of Art exhibited "Dumpster Art" in which students created art with objects collected from trash containers within a mile of campus. A folk musician at the University of Rochester performed a campus festival, using an instrument made entirely of garbage.

The president of Student Environmental Action at the University of Virginia said offbeat events on Earth Day do not give a lasting message.

"Everyone felt Earth Day 1990 was a big event," said SEA President Jason Titus. "But it came and went—that's not what we want."

Paul Davidson, a student environmental activist at Kansas State University, said Earth Day still plays a significant role among groups at colleges and universities with younger environmental movements.

"We still have to get the attention of the community," Davidson said. "A group that is already well-established and politically powerful doesn't have to, but we do here because awareness is not terribly high and involvement is low."

Students at SIUC will celebrate Earth Day with daily activities sponsored by the Student Environmental Center.

The University Community Development will have a Bucky Fuller World Games Ceremony April 22 at Turley Park in Carbondale.

Easter decorations, gifts more popular

By William Ragan
Entertainment Writer

The Easter bunny may leave more than eggs in baskets this spring.

Gift stores in Carbondale are selling stuffed balloons, Easter trees and ceramic eggs in response to shoppers who demand the unusual in Easter gifts.

The Museum Gift Shop in Faner Hall sells traditional Easter cards and baskets, along with more elaborate items such as vases, pottery and paper mache eggs covered with lacquer.

Lori Huffman, manager of the gift shop, said most students tend to buy cards because "that's all they can afford." Easter cards range from $1 for simple designs to $4 for more complex items like the three-dimensional card.

Huffman said because the store is on campus, people often come to browse for gifts.

"People come in and decide what they want to give relatives," she said.

"Once they get in here they think of other things they could possibly get them," she said.

Mr. Bulky's in the University Mall carries 500 different kinds of candy for $3.99 to $4.99 a pound.

A big seller is Tearjerker gum, a candy that is sour on the outside and sweet on the inside, said Margaret Flatt, associate manager.

The store also offers balloon bouquets, and anything can be suffed inside the balloon, from candy to engagement rings. Mylar balloons cost $3 each and $3 more to stuff the balloon.

Kirlin's Hallmark in the University Mall offers a variety of cards and gifts.

The store makes personalized easter baskets, containing candy and toys, that range in price from $7.25 to $13.95.

A popular item this season is Hallmark's Easter Tree, which costs $25, said manager Patty Crowe.

Ornaments can be bought to hang on the tree that cost from $4.25 to $8.50.

Crowe said Kirlin's began preparing for the Easter season immediately after Valentine's Day in February.

The Apple Tree in the Westown Shopping Center also offers the Easter trees, as well as nylon bunny dolls, hand made ceramic eggs, bird feeders and banners.

Betsy Brewer, owner and manager of The Apple Tree, said she started putting out Easter merchandise in early March because customers demanded it.

"People were ready for Easter stuff in February," Brewer said. "People get into Easter more when its later, and when the weather is nicer."

Brewer said Easter is a major gift selling season, rivaling even Valentine's Day.

"A lot of people give flowers or candy. People purchase more gifts for Easter than for Valentine's Day."

Easter is April 19.

the name of the pagan goddess of spring.

"Easter's symbol was that of a rabbit or hare," Bengston said. "She took a bird and changed it into a rabbit, which explains why the Easter Bunny is associated with eggs."

According to one tale, a medieval princess started the tradition of hiding eggs because she wanted to thank her people anonymously. She hid colored eggs around the countryside.

When the children of the countryside found the eggs, they saw a rabbit run out of one of the bushes where the eggs were hidden. The children thought the rabbit hid the eggs. The Easter Bunny is like Santa as an incentive to employees to save their sick days unless they really were sick, the state figured it would save money.

Charles Gilbert, associate director for institutional research at Western Illinois University, said the state's policy is not an unusual concept.

Gilbert studied sick leave payouts with two WIU professors in 1990.

"In manufacturing, somebody must work if you're not there," Gilbert said. "Any time you're sick is down time. And if somebody at Menard (prison in Chester) doesn't show up, somebody has to be there."

But when a university professor is sick, the class usually is canceled or a colleague takes the class or writes an assignment on the board. The professor does not have to take a sick day, and the university does not have to pay overtime for a replacement.

"It differs in any kind of professional employment," Gilbert said.

"Somebody else is being paid to do the job," he said. "But if a professor in economics calls in sick one day, the secretary goes down and says 'Professor Jones is sick' and writes an assignment or not. The incentive for this goes away."

SIUC President John C. Guyon said the policy does not address the way universities function.

"It was to encourage people to come to work," Guyon said, "but faculty call in and have someone fill in."

SIUC sick day payouts have increased an average of $68,000 a year during the last six years.

Sick days were not accumulated before 1983, so employees who retired or left in 1984 could accumulate only a year of sick days.

But some employees who leave in 1992 will have nine years of accumulated sick leave. In 1993, retiring employees will have 10 years of accumulated sick days.

"The University accrues a liability that is growing," Guyon said, "and it continues to grow. It is a lot of money."

The SIUC accrued sick leave liability was $10 million in 1989,

"It was to encourage people to come to work, but faculty call in and has someone fill in."

—John C. Guyon

according to Gilbert's study.

But Mark Schmidt, spokesman for the Department of Commerce and Community Affairs, said the policy is working for the majority of Illinois employees.

The state actually has seen a drop in use of sick days, he said.

But Gilbert said that after the act was passed, the level of sick leave use for faculty did not go down.

"It stayed the same," he said. "The only thing you get is to pay a big chunk of money when the person leaves. That's where you run into a problem."

Fraunfelder knew he would receive a $5,000 payout for his accumulated sick leave when he checked with the personnel office about a year before retiring, he said.

Larry Johnson, a personnel officer who counsels retiring employees, said many are not aware of the sick day payouts.

Stubbs said every employee should be aware of it.

"It's in all the handbooks and all employees are told when they're hired," Stubbs said.

Gilbert said the policy also encourages faculty to leave the state university system because they can receive a bonus to cover the costs of moving to a private college.

"There's really no benefit to the institution whatsoever," he said. "What it's doing is paying junior faculty to go on to universities and get a big lump severance payment. You have to look at what the accrued cost brings the institution. I'll take the benefits, but from a policy point of view it's crazy. There's no savings."

Schmidt said the state has never discussed the policy's application to university faculty, but any revision would require a change in statutes.

But in an unscheduled three-minute court appearance, Peach pleaded guilty to soliciting a prostitute and was placed on one year unsupervised probation and released.

Peach decided last month not to seek re-election as circuit attorney for a fifth term. He has served in this capacity for nearly 16 years.

Steve Jensen, coordinator of the SIUC radiologic technology program, will replace Peach Aug. 1 as chairman of the Intercollegiate Athletic Advisory Committee.

for the First Baptist Church in Murphysboro, said the Easter Bunny has the potential to become like Santa Claus.

"The Easter Bunny has not commercialized Easter as much as Santa Claus has with Christmas," Treat said.

"But the bunny may someday reach those heights," he said.

Burleson said people are more familiar overall with the Easter Bunny than the religious background.

"In our church we stay away from decorations of the Easter Bunny except in our nursery area," Burleson said.

"Old pagan history has combined pagan and Christian beliefs," he said.

Forest Service lifts closure on Fairview timber sale area

By Teri Lynn Carlock
City Writer

The U.S. Forest Service has lifted the closure order on the Fairview timber sale area of the Shawnee National Forest, south of Murphysboro, but local environmentalists say the reopening may spark another protest.

The order, which was posted in 1990 and stayed up through the harvest of 1991, had made the entire 661-acre study area off limits to the public.

"The order was put on to allow our contractor to fill his obligations of cutting timber without disturbances," said Tom Hagerty, Forest Service spokesman. "We didn't want any equipment damaged or anyone hurt."

The service decided to reopen the area rather than keep it closed indefinitely, Hagerty said.

"The contractor is having some delays in this work, but when he gets started working again the closure order will be reimposed," he said. "The contract is still open and there is still lumber to be cut."

The Fairview timber sale area has been the site of protesters blocking logging roads, circulating petitions and shouting chants of "Save the Trees!" Earth First is a loosely organized movement that promotes preservation of nature and often takes drastic steps to make a point.

Jan Wilder-Thomas, organizer of the Shawnee Defense Fund, said the closure being taken off the timber sale opens the door for more protests, despite the absence of timber cutting.

"We feel like it is an illegal closure—a Forest Service ploy to keep the public out of its woods," she said. "They don't close sales in many parts of the country, they were forced to close because of the protesting."

The way the Forest Service portray protesters is misleading and outrageous, Wilder-Thomas said.

"They've always said we were violent terrorists, which is the total opposite picture of what we really are," she said. "They are the violent ones—they're like a bulldozer through a museum full of art—Fairview was a living art, and they killed it, on purpose."

Little Grand Canyon and Crip's Bend areas still are available, but Wilder-Thomas said the Forest Service is planning to move soon into Crip's Bend.

"Their business is to fragment the last 100-year-old forest we have," she said. "We found 165-year-old stumps in Fairview, and by golly we're going to hang on to all of them we can, no matter what it takes."

Three Earth First members were arrested in the Trail of Tears State Park in fall 1989 for blocking a logging road and preventing employees of East Perry Lumber Co. from getting to work for a few hours.

In April of 1990, the Fairview site was proposed by the Forest Service for a 661-acre timber harvest.

Fairview was the site of two summer-long protests against logging in the summers of 1990 and 1991, that ended with dozens of arrests.

Members of the movement repeatedly have accused Forest Service officials of abusing their authority and breaking federal laws to promote commercial interests.

Clear cutting is the process of harvesting in which everything is cut out of an area. Selective harvesting calls for only large, mature trees to be harvested.

PLANET, from page 5

The ceremony will mark the beginning of the inscription of a World Games dymaxion map on the floor of the main pavilion of the park.

Students at Harvard University plan to celebrate Earth Day this year with simple tactics aimed at raising awareness among a large group of people.

"I still think it is important for the stage of activism at Harvard to reach more people than conduct a large degree of education," said Brett Huff, president of the Environmental Action Committee on campus.

The activities at Harvard will be "run-of-the-mill"—bands and speakers, he said. Environmental groups in varying stages target different groups.

But Randy Viscio, SEAC national office outreach and field coordinator, said Earth Day must be broadened.

"The people with the money need to broaden who they are reaching," he said. "Earth Day has a real tightrope to walk in terms of doing what the Earth

"Students are trying to take a broader look. We need to create alternatives rather than just meeting immediate needs."

—Miya Yoshitani

Day people want it to do and raise money."

Yoshitani said students will be the driving force in making this transition for Earth Day.

"Students are trying to take a broader look," she said. "We need to create alternatives rather than just meeting immediate needs without looking at a greater picture. Students are making that connection."

And unlike the first Earth Day celebration in 1970, students are not using the movement to take on the entire world, she said, just their own backyards.

Drive collects 789 units of blood

By Trumier Campnor
General Assignment Writer

The American Red Cross Southern Illinois April blood drive has collected more than 789 units of blood since the blood drive began Monday.

Vivian Ugent, local blood drive coordinator, said the American Red Cross wants to make sure the available blood supply meets the need for blood. "Our goal for this month's blood drive is 775 units of blood," Ugent said.

Ugent said she is pleased with the turnout for this week but would like to see more people come and donate blood.

"People depend on blood especially with the holiday this weekend," she said.

Ugent said holiday weekends are always a vital time for blood.

The SIUC Emeritus Association has volunteered more than 100 members of its organization to help with the blood drive, she said.

The final day of the blood is Friday and will take place at the Recreation Center from 2:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

The drive collected 278 pints Thursday.

SIUC College of Agriculture to sell bulls used in weight gaining tests

By Annette Holder
General Assignment Writer

Charles Lasley likes the bull SIUC dishes him every year.

The Anna student says the quality of bull SIUC sells keeps him coming back.

The SIUC College of Agriculture will sell about 58 bulls today tested for 112 days since last fall from owners in Illinois, Missouri and Kentucky.

Lasley, who raises bulls in Anna, said he has purchased all the bulls he owns at the SIUC auction because it has the best bulls.

He also enjoys talking with other people who raise cattle while attending the auction.

"SIUC has the best bulls," Lasley said. "They'll gain about 1,000 pounds in a year. That's really good."

Lasley said the performance figures on the bulls are good to have because it allows him to know how fast the bulls will grow.

The auction will be at 7:30 p.m. Friday at SIUC Bull Test Station on Rowden Road.

The college is able to give a performance evaluation by marking the bulls progress during the 112 days. The measure of performance is evaluated by observation and statistical analysis, said Dee Woody, associate professor in animal science.

"A bull with good performance data will get to the market faster," Woody said. "It will grow faster."

The performance evaluation is determined by giving the bulls as much feed as they want to eat during 112 days. Because all the bulls are fed the same, the researchers can determine the quality of the bulls by comparison.

Researchers document the average daily gain, the weight of the bulls. They also access quality by measuring feed efficiency, or pound-of-food for pound-of-gain.

"Visual observation is used by looking at the weight of the bull and looking for muscle composition," Woody said.

But a large bull is not always what breeders want, Woody said. A large bull may create problems for breeders with small bulls.

The bulls all eat the same food, so the researchers can determine if growth is connected by inheritance.

The feed is composed of corn, corn cobs and protein supplements. Hay also is fed to the bulls.

The bulls get access to the feed by tripping a circuit with a magnet worn around their neck. This way, bulls do not get access to the other animal's food.

"The bulls learn overnight where the door for their food trough is," Woody said.

The owners of the bulls pay $150 and pay for the food and veterinary expenses. The average bull will sell for $1,923, about the same as last year. Most bull buyers come from a 50-mile radius, Woody said.

The bulls come from people whose names are put on a mailing list. About 100 people sent in applications to have their bull included in the program, but the department could only test 72, Woody said.

The program is a community service so cattle raisers can improve their herds, Woody said.

HONORS, from page 3

Each scholarship is worth $500.

The college recognized the five top graduating senior achievers who have the highest grade point averages in the school.

The top five have overall grade point averages of 3.90 or higher.

Mark Stoffel, a 27-year-old radio-television major, has maintained a GPA of 4.0.

The key for academic success is being focused and choosing a major a person enjoys, he said.

Seniors Scarlet Coy in art and design, Lena R. Mayer in communication disorders and sciences, Jacquelyn Spinner in journalism and Le Khin Wee in music rounded out the top five graduates.

Coy was awarded $160 for the Leah M. Reef Memorial Scholarship, which was established in 1954.

She received the scholarship for demonstrating exceptional academic performance.

Spinner received $445 for the Delyte W. Morris Scholarship, which was established in 1952.

Preference for the award is given to a graduating senior who has displays the highest potential in scholastics, character, social leadership and ambition.

Three students with high academic achievement and potential who earned a GPA of 3.25 or higher were awarded Robert W. Davis Memorial Scholarships.

Menik Jayasuriya, a junior in radio-television from Sri Lanka, Kenneth Perrin a junior in cinema and photography from Carbondale, and Terri McReynolds, a junior in art and design from Harrisburg, each won $300.

Stone said the students achieved honors status because of dedication to their studies.

"I think it has a lot more to do with hard work than true genius," he said. "We recognize that not all our prize winners are our most creative."

government's responsibility to provide healthcare benefits.

"Some of his views are contradictory because he says he is for total access, but where do you draw the line," he said.

"Government can't do everything for everyone," he said. "You have to take responsibility for your own actions. The government and hospitals need to work together."

Carbondale resident Tina Santy, a sophomore in English, said she would like to see the government continue subsidizing the Orphan Drug Act which provides benefits to pharmaceutical companies to supply the 200,000 people who suffer from orphan diseases with medicine.

"The Systick Fibrosis Foundation is making medical breakthroughs to help treat people but the act that supports the research may be canceled," she said.

Simon said there is no clear plan that will meet all the needs of the American people.

"But what is clear is that we need significant change if we are going to protect our people and American businesses," he said.

He said the nation must invest more money in research for mental health care.

"In the last seven years, the nation has spent the same amount on military that it has on health care since the beginning of the century," he said.

"This year, we are spending $160 billion to defend Western Europe from a nonexistent Soviet Union," he said. "This kind of thinking is irrational and changes must be made."

School to celebrate journalism with presentations

By Sherri L. Wilcox
General Assignment Writer

The SIUC School of Journalism begins its 1992 journalism week celebration Monday with a night of advertising presentations sponsored by the SIUC chapter of the American Advertising Federation and ends the week by giving student achievers $10,000 in scholarships.

■ AAF will sponsor a visit by Bill Salzman, account executive from D.M.B.&B. in St. Louis, who will give an account presentation at 5 p.m. Monday in Lawson 201.

■ AAF will give its 1992 account presentation for VISA at 7 p.m. Monday in Lawson 201. Each year the local AAF chapter is presented with an advertising problem by a corporate sponsor.

Scott Winston, vice president of SIUC AAF, said the assignment is a year-long project.

"Throughout the year, we have participated in two research studies on campus, as well as competed in teams for the honor of presenting our finished product in competition," he said.

The winning team will offer its account presentation at regional competition April 24 in Chicago.

■ AAF will sponsor a creative workshop at 7:30 p.m. Monday in Lawson 201. The workshop will offer younger students information on creative thinking, creative advertising and presentation skills.

■ William Harmon, former faculty managing editor at the Daily Egyptian, will be guest speaker at a luncheon at noon Tuesday in Communications 1213. The visit is sponsored by the Journalism Graduate Student Association.

■ Steve Phelps will present a video of 1990 award-winning commercials at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday in Wham 203.

■ The AAF will repeat its VISA account presentation from Monday at 7 p.m. Tuesday in Wham 203.

■ Dr. William Elliott and Dr. James Kelly will present their findings of a study done on Oliver Stone's film JFK at 3 p.m. Wednesday in Lawson 171.

"In the experimental study, we provided students with tickets to the movie, then compared their knowledge of the Kennedy assassination to that of students who had not seen the film," Elliott said. "We looked at how realistic they felt the movie was, whether or not they felt the assassination was a conspiracy, and whether or not they felt interpretations like Stone's should be allowed or should be limited to the government."

■ Jack Kramer, midwest manager for Esquire magazine, will speak about the media at 10 a.m. Thursday in Communications 1213. The visit is sponsored by the Saluki Advertising Agency.

■ Kramer also will talk to students and guests of Journalism 372, Advertising Media and Management, at 2 p.m. Thursday in Wham 308.

■ Clark Stallworth will head a "Writing for Readers" workshop at 3 p.m. Thursday in Communications 1213.

■ The School of Journalism/SIEA Banquet will take place at 6:30 p.m. Thursday at Giant City State Park Lodge. Nearly $10,000 in awards will be presented to about 20 student winner.

■ Master Editors Awards will be presented at the SIEA luncheon at noon Friday at Giant City State Park Lodge.

■ Jim Bitterman, foreign correspondent with ABC News, will be the guest speaker at the Virginia Marmaduke luncheon at noon Friday in the Student Center Ballroom C.

■ The Daily Egyptian Policy and Review Board will conduct interviews for the position of student editor in chief of the newspaper for the summer and fall semesters Friday.

■ Jim Bitterman of the ABC news Paris bureau will lecture at 3 p.m. Friday in Lawson 151.

For more information about the events, contact the School of Journalism at *36-3611.

More jobs open to engineers than other majors

By Annette Holder
General Assignment Writer

An SIUC engineering graduate has joined a growing number of engineering students who are finding jobs in a market that has been tough for students in many other majors.

Brad Beiermann, of Freeport, is a 1991 graduate of the manufacturing systems, a graduate program in engineering and technology.

Beiermann worked for a local engineering company before being hired by Micro Switch, a division of Honeywell, Inc.

Micro Switch makes sensors and switches for automobiles. Honeywell, Inc. specializes in electrical engineering products.

"It's a tough race in the job market right now," Beiermann said. "But by networking with industries and my experience at interning at Lindsey Associates, I was able to get a job right away."

The job market is bad for all graduates, but engineering majors are finding it easy to get jobs, said Mike Murray, assistant director of the University Placement Center.

The new recruits also begin their jobs with the highest salaries.

"The pay is extremely good for engineers," Murray said. "Engineering graduates are reporting back to us with beginning salaries of $32,000 to $36,000."

Engineering graduates may find a more open job market when the economy is in bad shape because engineers help companies out of the recession, said Jim Orr, director of Industrial Technology.

"Engineers come up with the new ideas," Orr said.

"They help with new development and design. This helps get the economy going," he said.

For March, the College Placement Council's Salary Survey indicates job placement for 2,407 engineers, 102 public administrators, 1,673 financial majors, 99 communication majors, 552 marketers, 137 professional health care professionals, 83 social service majors and 413 computer scientists.

The survey reports beginning salaries for engineers at $33,635, public administrators at $24,733, financial majors at $25,433, communication majors at $20,086, marketers at $24,728, professional health care workers at $26,840, social service majors at $18,722 and computer scientists at $29,850.

Although the University Placement Center will help engineers with employment, the department also has its own contacts to help their students get jobs, Murray said.

Cooperative Education, a one-year program, places students with businesses.

The student alternates one semester of work with one semester of school.

Participating companies include General Dynamics, Caterpillar and General Electric Aircraft Engines.

Orr, who heads the program, said it is his job to bring the student and the company together. Opportunities for engineering internships in Southern Illinois allow companies to take advantage of these skills for less money.

"Students are usually hired by these companies when they graduate," Orr said.

"The company doesn't have to worry about training them," he said.

Albert Kent, chairman for mechanical engineering and energy processes for engineering and technology, said because of continually changing environmental laws, the demand for environmental engineers cannot be met.

The college does not offer a degree in environmental engineering but offers environmental classes for the civil engineering degree.

Orr said this means even more jobs for engineers for the future.

"I had a call from a company the other day for an environmental engineer," Orr said.

Men runners receive No. 15 rank nationally

The SIUC men's track team has been ranked the nation's No. 15 squad in outdoor track by Collegiate Track Weekly in its April 14 issue.

This is the first such ranking for SIUC in an outdoor season since head coach Bill Cornell took over the track program in 1984.

During the recently completed indoor campaign, the Missouri Valley Conference champion Salukis reached the No. 14 spot in CTW's indoor rankings for NCAA Division I men's teams.

"I think this is another indication and result of the balance we have on our team," Cornell said.

"We have at least one athlete among the top five in every event, and several in the top 10 in many events."

The Salukis have an immediate chance to test their ranking this weekend at the prestigious Kansas Relays in Lawrence, Kan.

The meet annually draws many of the nation's top track and field teams.

Arkansas, Clemson, Florida, Nebraska and Washington State were selected as the top five teams in the CTW rankings. Iowa State, Oregon, Indiana, Brigham Young and Georgetown round out the top 10.

concern in the fall.

"It remains to be seen if we can become a more dominant defensive team next fall," he said.

But he said the spring provided him with a good view of potentially strong defenders.

Junior defensive tackle Wayne Manu, who is expected to fill a void on the line, was termed by Smith as the most improved defensive player.

In addition, he said six junior college recruits showed they would make an immediate defensive impact.

End Joe Hay, tackle Chris Moore, inside linebackers David McLeod and Jim Murphy and outside linebackers Joe Estes and Tyler Cortwright played well in the practice sessions.

"They all really showed they will compete for a lot of playing time in the fall," Smith said.

Three players, cornerbacks junior Scott Walker and sophomore J.J. Chaney and sophomore free safety Clint Smothers, return from the 1991 starting defensive backfield, and they will be assisted on the corner by freshman Mark Neal, who converted from running back.

On the offensive side of the ball the Dawgs lost five starters. But Smith said the Salukis will not be hurting in any area.

He said junior quarterback Scott Gabbert had an outstanding spring and will prove a great leader for his team.

"He is bubbling over with experience, and based on that and his talent he will be the most productive quarterback we have had in four years," Smith said. "He knows the system, and he is making good throws and good decisions."

The running backs—especially junior fullback Yonel Jourdain—and receivers, led by junior Justin Roebuck, will be strong as well, he said.

Junior tackle Chuck Neitzel and sophomore guards Jason Jakovich and Mike Strickland anchor a strong offensive line that will be bolstered by junior James Snyder, whom Smith declared the "most improved offensive player."

Smith also said the Dawgs' schedule may be a strong factor in the fall.

SIUC had just four home games in 1991, but in their fifth win Sept. 28 against Illinois State the Salukis drew a McAndrew Stadium record 16,500 people.

This season, six home games are on the slate.

"If we get the same kind of support from the student body and local fans with six home games, it will boost our team that much more," Smith said.

over first place with a 4-1 record this week. Southwest Missouri State is 8-2.

The Salukis are in a three-way tie for fifth place with Drake and Eastern Illinois. SIUC hopes to pick up four wins this weekend in conference games. They will play a doubleheader at Braley, 1-5 in the conference, at 3 p.m. Friday and another twin bill at Western Illinois, 3-3, at 1 p.m. Saturday.

SIUC has fashioned an 8-1 record in one-run games against non-conference teams this season, but the Salukis are 0-5 in one-run decisions against Gateway foes. Similarly, SIUC has gone 0-5 in extra inning affairs in non-conference games, but 0-1-1 in league.

The Salukis were on a five-game losing streak before picking up three wins this week, one against Illinois State and two against SIU-Edwardsville.

SIUC faced Bradley and Western in games earlier this season at SIUC. The Salukis beat Bradley in both games and split the two games with WIU. Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said both teams are tough.

"Bradley's much improved since we saw them last," she said. "If you don't score on them early, they keep getting tougher and tougher as the game progresses. When Western's hitting, they're hard to stop."

Bradley, 9-14 overall, dropped its last two games to Western Illinois in a doubleheader Tuesday. The No. 10 preseason pick has a freshman leading the team offensively.

Shortstop Amy Pera leads her team with a .325 batting average. She also leads the team with 25 hits and 14 runs. Catcher Kim Melchoir leads the team with 12 RBI.

Pitching has proved to be a problem for the Braves. The staff has a combined 3.28 ERA.

SIUC is leading the Gateway with a team ERA of 1.60. After the two games against SIUE, the Salukis have improved their overall ERA to 1.55.

WIU, 10-10 overall, plays Eastern Illinois today before taking on SIUC Saturday.

Western's offense is led by second sacker Jodi Osterberg with a .387 batting average, outfielders Stefanie Ryan, with a .384 batting average, and Stacey Dudley, with a .375 batting average.

Veronica Wilson leads the pitching staff with a 1.30 ERA and a 6-9 win-loss record.

The Westerwinds have won five of their last six games, and WIU coach Kathy Veroni said she expects it to be a great doubleheader.

"We played well against Southern when we beat them," Veroni said. "If we play the way we've been playing, we have a good chance of winning. We've been hitting well and playing consistent defense."

to hit well on the right side. She batted left and right last season, but she hadn't really mastered her batting on the right."

Rudanovich batted .250 last season, and so far this season has a .255 batting average with six doubles. She had a game-winning triple against Gateway foe Northern Iowa April 1.

Rudanovich also has been successful in seven of 10 stolen base attempts. Brechtelsbauer said Rudanovich's best asset is her quickness. She is extremely quick out of the box, and that is very important.

Before playing for the Salukis, Rudanovich always had played shortstop. The hardest thing for her last year was making the adjustment to second base, she said.

"You have a different angle on the ball and a lot more bunts to pick up," she said. "It's more challenging and I have to keep my head more in the game. Now that I've been playing it, I love it."

With a 95.5 percent fielding percentage so far this season, Rudanovich has proven herself at second base. Defensively she keeps getting better as time goes on, Brechtelsbauer said.

"I have her playing a little deeper, and she's done well," Brechtelsbauer said. "She works hard, and in a sense leads the team as an example. She's not a standout leader, but her desire to do well and put in the extra hours has set a good example to the other players."

Rudanovich said the competition she faces at SIUC's level is a lot tougher than a junior college schedule.

"You face a lot better pitchers," she said. "It's also a more competitive atmosphere. It seems more challenging, more important."

"The team here all works hard together. It's not just one person on a team. It's the whole team. One thing softball taught me is how to get along with other people. Another thing I remember is when things are down to, not give up."

Rudanovich said her goal in her final year on the team is to win the conference tournament.

"The most important thing about softball is you have to hustle, work hard and never give up," Rudanovich said. "If I wanted to leave any message to future players, that's what it would be."

Women's golf team heads to Purdue invite

By Karyn Viverito
Sports Writer

After a week of rest, the women's golf team is ready to get back into the swing of things as they head out to Purdue University to compete in the Boilermaker Invitational.

Coach Diane Daugherty said the Salukis had a good week of practicing and are ready to face the competition going into West Lafayette, Ind., Saturday and Sunday.

Among the 17 teams scheduled to compete are the Big Ten's Michigan, Wisconsin, host Purdue, and power Michigan State, which has topped SIUC twice so far this season.

Gateway Conference rivals

Illinois State and Southwest Missouri St., which the Salukis have not faced yet this year, also will be competing.

The Salukis are ready to play with the Big Ten teams and are anxious to see how Southwest Missouri St. plays Daugherty said.

"We are going to go out there and play like we know we can play," she said. "We have a good chance to go out there and win it, but thinking realistically, I feel we can finish in the top three."

Five Saluki golfers qualified to compete in the invite.

Senior Anne Childress will lead off the Saluki attack, followed by sophomore Lieschen Eller, junior Tracey Pace, sophomore Laura Stefanich, and

Stefanich said the team is ready to put out some good performances.

"We feel we can do a good job this weekend, and we have a lot of confidence going into the invite," she said. "It will also be nice to go home, as the majority of our team competing is from Indiana."

Eller is the only golfer in the Saluki lineup that does not hail from the Hoosier state.

The big schools do not intimidate the Salukis but challenge them, Stefanich said.

"Our spring break competition at LSU built our confidence, and we feel we can play with the big schools," she said. "We're right in there with everyone else."
