Distribution of RSO funds questioned

By Marc Chase
General Assignment Reporter

The Undergraduate Student Government Finance Committee Monday, received criticism over allocations of funding to Registered Student Organizations.

The committee initially allocated funds this month for priority two RSOs, such as Mid-American Peace Project, but committee member Larry Jackson, said the committee chairman, John Shull, and other members did an inefficient job of giving out these funds and notifying organizations of their funding.

Priority one organizations, such as the Black Affairs Council, receive funding first because of a greater number of members.

According to USG files, organizations such as Friends for Native Americans will receive less funding for fall than they were allocated last fall. The organization received $1,000 last fall, but will only receive $800 for the next fiscal year.

Other organizations, such as the Arnold Air Society are receiving more funding than they were allocated last year.

The organization last year was allocated $1,000, but it was given $2,170 for fall.

Jackson said between a student fee of $3 for fall that was passed by the SIU Board of Trustees to generate an additional $111,000 for RSOs, and a reapportionment of 54 percent of funding to go to priority two organizations, there should be no reason why these organizations should be receiving less funding for the next fiscal year.

With the extra money created by the $3, approximately $400,000 would be available to fund RSOs, Jackson said.

"We charged students more money in student fees so that RSOs could receive more funding, but we

Trustee debates cite accomplishments

By Emily Priddy
Special Assignment Reporter

Candidates for SIUC student trustee described their qualifications and addressed campus issues, including state education-reform plans and child care, at a public debate Monday night at the Student Center.

Incumbent Mark Kochan, a Progressive, cited his accomplishments during the past year, including expanding his accessibility to constituents and discussing campus issues with local legislators, as evidence of his ability to represent students effectively on the SIU Board of Trustees.

Challenger Matt Parsons, of the Unity party, said he plans to rely on his past work and school experiences in the "real world" to help the University become a leader among U.S. higher-education institutions.

"I have a vision for this University," Parsons said. "I see a university that is a leader in research and athletics. I want students to be proud to say, 'I go to SIUC."

Kochan expressed concern about the Illinois Board of Higher Education's Priorities, Quality and Productivity plan.

"I've talked to many students, and they're frightened about PQP," he said. "What they came down here (to SIUC) for may be gone. I don't think we want anybody from Springfield dictating to us what our priorities are."

Kochan said, although he supports the idea of cutting unnecessary or obsolete programs, the board's plan may not be the best method of eliminating waste, because it overlooks some students' concerns.

"We've been streamlining here (at SIUC) for a long time," he said. "But we must do it in an organized, cohesive fashion, with everybody's input."

Parsons said he wants SIUC to re-examine the board's recommendations under the PQP initiative to ensure that students' best interests are represented adequately.

Gun ban case goes to Supreme Court

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—The Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide whether Congress, in its zeal to reduce juvenile violence, improperly banned the possession of firearms within 1,000 feet of school grounds.

The case, which arose from the conviction of a San Antonio, Texas, student who carried a handgun and five bullets to school, will test federal lawmakers' ability to regulate gun possession at the local level.

A court ruling on the 1990 "Gun-Free School Zones" law could, depending on its reach, affect the validity of other federal gun laws. These could include the recently enacted Brady bill, which orders a waiting period on handgun purchases, as well as pending legislation to ban the sale and possession of assault-type semiautomatic weapons.

A federal appeals court last year struck down the gun-free schools law, saying Congress had overstepped its authority. The court said schools are the domain of local officials and that federal lawmakers may ban gun possession at schools only if it affects interstate commerce.

When "Congress wishes to stretch its commerce power so far as to intrude upon state prerogatives, it must express its intent to do so in a perfectly clear fashion," the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit said in a September 1993 ruling that will be reviewed by the justices.

The appeals court, covering Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi, said that the gun-control law did not adequately demonstrate through formal findings how the regulation of firearms possession at elementary and secondary schools arose from Congress's power over interstate commerce. It is not clear from the opinion how extensive congressional findings would have to be to pass muster.

That appeals court opinion "was the first time in a long, long time that seriously addressed the question of whether there are limits" on federal gun control, said Richard Gardiner, legislative counsel for the National Rifle Association. The 9th U.S. Circuit last year upheld the gun-free schools law.

A government lawyer agreed Monday that for decades federal courts have found that Congress has the power to restrict firearms. He and a congressional aide involved in drafting the statute acknowledged that the gun-free schools law differs from prior statutes by exclusively targeting the possession of firearms rather than their sale. The latter more obviously can involve the movement of firearms in interstate commerce.

But they and other Justice Department officials insist that other gun laws have been based on general congressional findings regarding the effect of firearms on commerce, rather than on an actual connection between the activity outlawed—here, guns at schools—and interstate commerce.

The case, which the Supreme Court will hear sometime this fall, began when Alfonso Lopez Jr., a senior at San Antonio's Edison High School, was caught carrying a .38-caliber handgun and five bullets. According to the — NAIROBI, Kenya—The United Nations warned Monday that its 2,100 peacekeepers could leave Rwanda unless the warring tribes there cooperate with U.N. officials trying to organize a cease-fire. Abdul Kabia, director of the U.N. mission, said from Kigali by telephone that attempts to broker a truce between rebels of the Rwandan Patriotic Front and the government, or more precisely its army, had proved fruitless. U.N. officials were shuttling between the two sides, failing to find common ground. The 1,200-member U.N. force was brought in to monitor and facilitate terms of a peace accord reached between the rebel group—dominated by the Tutsi tribe—and the government—led by members of Rwanda's Hutu majority—last August, few of which were implemented before the latest hostilities broke out.

U.N. PEACEKEEPERS COULD LEAVE RWANDA

CHINESE CONFESS TO SETTING BOAT FIRE

— BEIJING—Authorities acknowledged Monday that a pleasure boat fire that killed 24 Taiwanese tourists last month and led to strained relations between Taiwan and the mainland was no accident but instead a case of murder, arson and robbery. Chinese officials initially characterized the March 31 tragedy on Qiandao Lake in eastern China's Zhejiang province as an "accident." But after a barrage of protests from the Taiwanese government, mainland officials now say they have three suspects in custody who have confessed to "plotting, preparing and carrying out the robbery and murders and setting fire to the boat." Chinese newspapers reported Monday.

MISSILES, POLICY ARRIVE IN SOUTH KOREA

— WASHINGTON—The first shipments of U.S. Patriot air-defense missiles arrived in South Korea Monday, as the United States prepared to step up pressure on North Korea to allow international inspection of its nuclear plants. U.S. officials said the shipment of three batteries—containing half the 48 missile-launchers that President Clinton has ordered deployed to South Korea—were unloaded at Pusan; more are expected later this week. The action came as Robert Gallucci, President Clinton's newly appointed policy czar for Korean issues, warned in a visit to Seoul that North Korea would face international economic sanctions, if it did not comply soon with requests to allow the nuclear inspections.

TEAMSTERS, TRUCKERS CONTINUE DEALING

— WASHINGTON—As negotiators for the Teamsters and the trucking industry returned to the bargaining table Monday, there were signs the Clinton administration was preparing to intervene to end the nationwide freight strike if agreement isn't reached soon. The two sides returned to the bargaining table Monday for the first time since the walkout began two weeks ago in a dispute over a new contract. Sources said Teamster President Ron Carey would make a new contract offer that should quickly determine whether there was a basis for a settlement. Details were not disclosed, but the proposal was expected to deal with the industry's insistence on the greater use of part-time workers on the loading docks. The 70,000 striking Teamster drivers haul intercity freight, carrying partial loads of goods and equipment from manufacturer to business. By the end of last week, there were reports that the strike was beginning to have an impact in some regions of the country.

Volunteer work with kids gives student lift

By Heather Burrow
Entertainment Reporter

It is not enough for SIUC student Rose Bailey to be the aunt of 16, she likes being around other people's children all day, too.

Bailey, a senior in early child development education, works at the Child Development Lab in Quigley Hall with children aged 6 weeks to 5 years, including the infants, toddlers and pre-school.

"I have 16 nieces and nephews and I've always wanted to work with children," she said.

Lab director Barb Eicholz said this is done through using developmentally appropriate activities such as a sensory table filled with corn, rice or water, flannel and magnets, board in which pictures are used to tell the story, and grocery store.

"Developmentally appropriate means that the children learn as they are playing," Eicholz said.

Student workers and staff also use positive messages without using words such as "don't" and "no," Bailey said.

"Instead of saying, 'Don't run,' we say, 'I want you to walk,'" she said. "We don't use discipline, we use positive guidance."

Bailey started working as a volunteer at the lab for one of her classes in fall 1993 and became a student worker this spring as well as working at the development lab. Bailey volunteers her time at the new Carbondale Science Center, 1225 E. Grand.

She has volunteered there since the center opened Jan. 23.

She not only gives tours and shows children different activities they can experiment with, but she also takes over director Nancy Peterson's duties when she is away.

"Rose knows most aspect of the museum and is capable of taking on most responsibilities when I am not there," Peterson said. "She is very knowledgeable and good with

Non-traditional holds many roles; credits faculty, family for success

By Diane Dove

SIUC student Darryl Cox is a man of many faces, but he is far from a Dr. Jekyll or Mr. Hyde.

Instead, he manages to juggle enough roles that could make a man go crazy: husband, father, associate minister, volunteer and fraternity president, along with being a full-time student.

Cox, formerly of East St. Louis, credits faculty of the SIUC School of Social Work with giving him the encouragement he needed to handle his work load.

"If there's one thing I found out here it's that you can grow as a man when it seems like you're stuck," he said.

The faculty recently chose Cox to receive the Social Work Recognition Award for non-traditional student of the year, which offers a $1000 award.

The award has been given annually since 1980 through the Southern Illinois University Foundation, honoring a 25 or older full-time social work student.

Cox, 47, the president of the local chapter of Iota Phi Theta fraternity, is enrolled in 18 hours of course work this semester and expects to receive his master's degree in August.

When he is not working full-time in the Student Center or attending class, Cox spends time with his wife LaVell, 35, and daughter Danielle, 13.

Murphysboro police officer retires after career of service

By Diane Dove
City Reporter

The Carbondale Police Department this month said good-bye to a man who gave more than two decades of service to the force.

Thomas S. Busch, 47, of Murphysboro, retired from a policing career where he witnessed everything from student riots during the Vietnam War to peaceful protests after the Rodney King beating.

As a senior in speech communications at SIUC, Busch was seeking challenge, and the department hired him as a patrolman in 1970.

"I had lost interest in the idea of being a teacher at the time, and I had an opportunity to go to work as a police officer, so I took that opportunity," Busch said.

Busch said like other new police officers, he saw policing as the most exciting job he could have taken.

"I was very idealistic and thought that I was going to cure all the ills of society, and there just couldn't have been a more exciting experience anywhere," he said.

Busch was promoted to the now non-existent rank of corporal in 1975, to sergeant a year later, and in 1978 he was promoted to lieutenant.

Busch said attending the 124th Session of the FBI National Academy in Quantico, Va., in 1981 was a highlight in his career.

About 250 people from all over the world attended the 11-week training session.

Busch received a bachelor's degree in administration of justice from SIUC in 1974, but he said he already had developed a good attitude about policing in the three and a half years of service with the Carbondale police.

Busch said he is proud that

Sonic opens in Carbondale, embodies 50s-style drive-in

By Paul Eisenberg
Business Reporter

Spring finally has arrived in Carbondale, and along with it is the opening of a classic 1950s hamburger stand.

At Sonic, Carbondale's newest drive-in restaurant, which last week opened at 980 E. Main, customers can order burgers, child dogs or waffle fries, and have their meals delivered to their car without waiting in long drive-thru lines.

Dave Barber, part owner and manager, is having a ribbon-cutting ceremony at 10 a.m. today to celebrate the restaurant's grand opening.

The ceremony will feature appearances by Mayor Neil Dillard and City Manager Jeff Doherty. Unfortunately, franchise spokesman Frankie Avalon will not be in attendance.

"He costs too much," Barber said.

Barber said service at Sonic is 50-percent faster than at other fast-food places because there are no long lines.

Grad student gets article published

By Paul Eisenberg
Business Reporter

SIUC business student Tony Montgomery, aspires to be a stock portfolio manager, but he already has a small career as a writer.

He wrote an article comparing no-load mutual fund investments to loaded mutual fund investments that will appear in the May issue of "Financial Planning on Wall Street," an industry publication for financial planners and stock-brokers.

Montgomery, a College of Business and Administration graduate student, conducted research on the risk characteristics of the two mutual funds for a doctoral class last year.

Montgomery

Mutual funds are a type of investment popular with smaller investors because the capital needed is lower than other investment types.

"I came up with phenomenal results," he said.

He found that no-load mutual fund investments were more risky than loaded mutual fund investments, because the no-load funds are not usually handled by a tax broker and they have a higher annual fee.

"With no-loads, investors have to offset the higher fee, and they have to go out and attract more investors, usually through magazine ads," he said.

Mark Fadiman, editor of the magazine, said Montgomery's two-page article was a good product of original thinking.

"It was a terrific article," he said.

Arnoldi best person for USG president

TOMORROW THE STUDENT BODY WILL GO TO the polls to decide who will lead the Undergraduate Student Government in the 1994-95 academic year.

Last year at this time only two candidates vied for the position of USG president. This year, students have a wider variety of candidates to choose from.

Presidential candidate Ed Sawyer, representing the Unity Party, believes the position requires someone who is realistic and a hard worker. He wants to focus on backing up proposed legislation. Sawyer believes the past administration has written and passed many bills but has rarely followed them up to ensure their implementation. He will push to have the bar entry age dropped back to 18.

Ben Smith, representing the Student Party, is the Ross Perot of this year's USG election. He says he is not a politician and admits he does not have the answers to everything. He wants to take the politics out of the USG so he can focus on making changes. His main issue is campus parking and he wants to fend off fee increases by eradicating frivolous University spending.

John Shull, of the Progressive Party, believes there is a lack of professionalism among student government members and that the USG needs to work with the administration, not against it. He wants to concentrate on educational issues, not extraneous issues such as bar entry age. Shull has proposed some ambitious legislation during his term as Thompson Point Senator and wants to follow through with the proposals if he becomes president. He also wants to keep the student population informed of the USG agenda.

Troy Arnoldi, the AAA Student presidential candidate, feels the key to solving SIUC's problems lies within the Illinois State Legislature. He has lobbyist connections in the legislature and believes strong representation there will lead to the resolve of other problems. Arnoldi thinks the last two USG administrations have worked in a retro-active manner, waiting until an issue becomes a problem before addressing it. He also wants to put together political information guides to make students more aware of the USG agenda.

EACH OF THE CANDIDATES HAVE ADDRESSED important issues relevant to the SIUC student population and are viable contenders for the office, but Troy Arnoldi is the best suited candidate for the position. Arnoldi has the experience as a leader, both in the military and in student government and has the most organized party platform.

If he becomes USG president though, Arnoldi must be aware that every issue can not be solved in the state legislature, some of the battles must be fought on the home front.

Parsons possesses realistic view, desire

THERE ARE TWO CANDIDATES FOR THE position of SIUC Student Trustee. Mark Kochan of the Progressive Party and Matthew Parsons of the Unity Party. The two are very different candidates.

Kochan, the incumbent, has one year experience as student trustee and is a strong supporter of measures that benefit SIUC in the long run. But, at the same time he seems to have become a political insider, learning, perhaps too well, the working of the political inner sanctum.

Parsons has no political experience, but possesses the fortitude brought about by working his way through college and the strong desire to see SIUC move forward. He also has a realistic view of University issues and what can be done about them.

Parsons should be the next SIUC Student Trustee.

Welfare termination wrong solution

I was awestruck this day to encounter yet another ingenious solution to Americans welfare woes, on the always insightful Opinion and Commentary Page. According to R. Roben Caillouet, welfare reform is a great deal easier than anyone could imagine. Of course! Ending welfare will cause the instant creation of employment, for America's welfare recipients. And don't forget, ceasing the payment of benefits to the underprivileged will motivate millions to stay in school and seek out high paying jobs.

What Mr. Caillouet had forgotten (and this is surprising since he is a financial management major) is that a college education costs money, and lots of it.

Therefore, it is illogical to assume that poor people will stay in school and pursue college degrees because they no longer have any food or shelter. Mr. Caillouet would also do well to realize what kind of employment is available to those who, in his words, "refuse to get a job." Many of the jobs available to high school graduates are low paying occupations in the service industry.

I attended grade and high school with children whose food was provided by welfare programs. Does Mr. Caillouet seriously suggest that these children would be better left unfed while their parents flip burgers and punch a cash register?

Change is needed in the current system. We must reward hard work, but first the opportunity for employment must exist.

The political scheming of Ronald Ray Gunz provided quite convincingly that the poor are an easy target for inept criticism. Can we blame the poor for the lack of employment or the high cost of education?

Terminating welfare will do nothing to improve the situation of the poor in the US.

Common sense ideology needs rebirth

I am a Native American and the article of April 12, praising the bilingual elementary teacher stressing multi-culturalism in class is specious and insulting. I don't know if Mrs. Greeley or her husband were born in America or not but if they were, then they too are not only Americans but Native Americans, as much as it may distress her.

The multi-cultural scholars and the liberal national socialists on American campuses today want to stress differences, our ethnic, racial, religious and cultural divisions, reducing individual identity to an ethnic or racial molecule.

Pointy headed intellectual theorists attack the fundamental concept of a unified theory of citizenship. They want to Balkanize America. Diversity that once fostered tolerance now demands conformity through speech codes, politically correct language and allegiances and even sensitivity training sessions to eliminate "deviant" differences.

Similar intellectual gobbledygook leads to nihilistic, bigoted, racist and anti-semitic rhetoric.

Substituting relativism for meaning, nihilism for history, shredding a unified outlook into an ivory tower of Babel. This is no more than "thought control" from the Ministry of Truth foretold by George Orwell in his nightmare novel, 1984.

The old notion of diversity is far preferable to the new. The diversity that went into the melting pot and came out as unity, pride, patriotism and one nation, common language. We must bring common sense back to the culture that gave birth to the most successful multi-cultural society in the history of mankind: American culture.

— Jeff Thomason, Murphysboro

Overpopulation most pressing trouble

Recently, a group of SIU students protested against observatory construction atop Mount Graham in Arizona. Why do astronomers feel the need to construct telescopes in such a remote location in the first place? The problem is called "light scatter." The lights of urban areas, as they spread further and further into the countryside, are making astronomy more and more difficult. The nation's largest telescope, at Mount Palomar in California, is threatened by the urban sprawl in the southern part of that state.

What is the real underlying problem here? The fundamental problem is the same one which exacerbates virtually every problem which we face at this time: overpopulation. There are just too many people on the planet, and there are too many more coming along at too fast a rate. It does not matter what it is that you care about, whether it is astronomy, or the survival of endangered species, or the preservation of the rights and customs of Native Americans. Whatever your concern is, if we do not deal effectively with overpopulation, it is a lost cause, guaranteed.

University administration. Student Development made the council an official student organization Friday.

The council lost momentum last year because membership dropped so low that the organization deactivated, Hillman said.

The council brings presidents or leaders of the student organizations on campus together to create an atmosphere where concerns and problems can be discussed, Hillman said.

"It's a round table of ideas to voice concerns and serves as a representative body as well," he said. "We help educate (the RSOs) on how to get through the University bureaucracy."

Hall said the council provides a powerful voice necessary to improve campus conditions for students' benefit and unites student organization leaders to give added strength to ensure RSOs have enough money for activities and programs.

The council also provides an information base for student organizations, such as how to get meeting rooms at the Student Center and requesting funds for activities from student government.

Hillman said. The council unites student government with the group to benefit all students. The leaders of Undergraduate Student Government and GPSC and the student trustee serve as ex-officio members, Hall said.

Hall said he got the idea to start the council after talking to a student from Virginia Tech who said students got their power from a combination of three sources: student government, the student newspaper and the President's Council.

"I asked the guy, 'What's a president's council?' and he said it was a student club composed of leaders of other student clubs," he said.

Hall said in the past, the council assisted student organizations network to pool resources.

"It has helped RSO leaders to accomplish activities and programs that one or two (separate organizations) couldn't afford on their own," he said.

The council plans on having its first meeting at the end of this month with time and place to be announced.

Justice Department's brief, Lopez intended to deliver the gun to someone for $40 for use in a "gang war." He was convicted and sentenced to six months in prison and two years' supervised release.

In overturning the conviction, the appeals court quashed James Madison on the constitutional limits of the federal government and the "numerous and indefinite" powers left to the state governments. It said that the case put the state's traditional authority over education and schooling against the federal government's acknowledged power to regulate firearms in or affecting interstate commerce.

The court said that the gun-free schools law could be permissible under the Commerce Clause but that Congress had neither made formal findings about the effects of gun use on interstate activity nor required a prosecutor, for conviction, to prove a connection to commerce.

"I'm not saying that PQP is a bad program, but SIU seems to be getting a bad deal," Parsons said. "I don't think that SIU (at) Carbondale should necessarily back away from PQP, but...I think we can work harder as an institution to look at the priorities the board of higher education has given us and not go strictly on their recommendations."

Kochan and Parsons criticized the Rainbow's End child care center for failure to help students with families.

Kochan said he is upset that, although student fees were used to pay for a recent expansion to the facility, faculty child-care needs are given top priority. "It's a shame, during finals week and even other times, when you look down and there (are) little kids basically out on their own," he said. "There's no reason for that. We need more services to students in the non-traditional capacity — students with children. Their needs are not being met."

Parsons said the situation is doubly unfair because students generally have lower incomes than faculty members, so they cannot afford private babysitters.

"The students at this University don't have (as much) money (as the faculty)," Parsons said. "Students at this University deserve first priority. They helped fund that (facility), not the faculty."

see no results from collecting these additional fees," Jackson said. "That is like taking $50 from students and not telling them why."

Shull, who is also the presidential candidate for the Progressive Party, said one reason for organizations receiving less money for fall than in years past is because last year 60 RSOs applied to USG for funding, and this year 115 applied. He said more organizations applied for funding, so naturally there will be less money available for all organizations.

"There was a radical difference this year (in funding applicants) because the number of RSOs who applied almost doubled," Shull said. "There were many new organizations that applied this year who never applied before."

Some organizations, such as Voices for Choice, an advocate of pro-choice in cases of abortion, applied for USG funding for the first time this year.

Jackson said even with the increase in the number of applicants, it is no excuse or some groups being cut close to 50 percent of their funding in comparison to past years.

Many RSO members, such as members from the Pre-Medical Professionals Association, said they were disgruntled with the entire process of fee allocations from USG.

President Sunel Chaudry, said his RSO never received notification that their funding for fall was $600 less than what they were allocated last year.

Chaudry's organization was allocated $1,000 last year but only received $400 for fall.

Organizations Monday had an opportunity to appeal to the finance committee to receive more funding, but Chaudry and Robert Gates, faculty adviser for the Wildlife Society Student Chapter, said their organizations never received notice of the appeals or of their funding cuts.

"My organization did not receive notification of our funding amounts or of the appeals process until twenty-four hours ago," Gates said.

Only 30 out of the 115 RSOs who applied for funding were present for the appeals process.

Jackson said this lack of communication from the finance committee to RSOs is a reflection of the poor leadership of Shull as the committee chairman. He said if Shull cannot do his job as chairman efficiently, he questions his ability to be president of USG.

"They are doing this (not communicating with RSOs) deliberately so their budget won't be challenged," Jackson said. "The committee has no basis for underfunding these organizations."

Shull said Jackson is in no position to criticize the committee since he has missed many of the committee meetings this semester.

"If Jackson has such a problem with the way I was doing my job as committee chair or the way the committee as a whole was operating, he should have attended more meetings and debated how things were being done," Shull said.

Shull said he did not vote in favor of decreasing funding for RSOs, but the majority of the committee voted against him.

"I can not control the majority vote of my committee," Shull said.

"I think Jackson criticisms are purely political to sink my campaign."

Jackson said since he is not running for office and is not affiliated with any political parties, his motives are not political.

"I have no political motives," Jackson said.

"I just am concerned that RSOs are not receiving funding they deserve because Shull and other members of the finance committee are not doing their jobs fairly."

Welfare reform to hurt immigrants

Newsday

NEW YORK — As a way to fund welfare reform, members of Congress and the Clinton administration are looking at a variety of proposals that would cut or eliminate access to public assistance for legal immigrants.

These vary from a proposal by President Clinton to include a sponsor's income in figuring public assistance eligibility until an immigrant becomes a U.S. citizen to a House Republican plan that would cut most legal immigrants from the welfare rolls, in addition to denying them and their children health care benefits, immunizations, housing, some educational programs and school lunches.

And the Mainstream Forum, a congressional coalition of moderate and conservative Democrats, is in the process of drafting a bill close to the Republican plan.

Advocates of restricting benefits to citizens argue that Americans have to look out for their own first and may have to make hard choices to finance reform.

"These were not pleasant choices, but we believe the government should step up to the plate and make the tough choice," the founder of the Mainstream Forum, Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., said in one published report.

Supporters of the Republican and Mainstream Forum proposals say each of the plans could save more than $21 billion in five years.

Ballet troupe uses Shryock to show beauty with motion

Dance Review

By Melissa Edwards
Entertainment Reporter

BalletMet has a shoe budget that might make Imelda Marcos blush.

But ballet dancing is about more than $300,000 worth of shoes each year — its consists of dedication and coordination — beauty through motion.

BalletMet, the internationally known ballet troupe, performed Sunday night at Shryock Auditorium.

BalletMet originally was founded as a civic company in Columbus, Ohio and joined the professional circuit in 1978. With 18 dancers and 10 apprentices, it is known for bridging the gap between classical jazz and modern dance.

The ballet performed "Il Distratto," "Underbelly" and "Serenade," three widely contrasting ballets with unique energy propelling each one.

The first, "Il Distratto," was like watching shadows at play. It was darkly humorous and slightly absurd.

The ballet used pitch black and fluorescent lighting to its advantage by making two dancers look like half a person each.

They bobbed and whirled and leapt to impossible heights while topless or bottomless.

The next ballet, "Underbelly," was a study in sensuality — it had a tough, gritty feel that dramatized the power of the dancers.

They writhed, almost cried in anguish, then as if on a roller coaster, escalated to near heights of ecstasy, only to be yanked back to the ground.

The third ballet, "Serenade," was as traditional as ballet gets. In ice blue with ermine skirts, ballerinas looked almost like skaters, effortlessly flowing around the rink.

The contrast was intentional. Scott Brown, a dancer who has been with the ballet for seven years, said.

"The variety helps ensure that there will be at least one aspect of the that will appeal to everyone. But Brown does have his "Underbelly" has a special place in my heart — at times I love it, other times I hate it," he said.

He said the performance was a bit rough because the stage was harder than one they normally practice on.

"Technically, it wasn't clean, but time goes on — (you) get on with it," he said.

Brown decided to become a dancer when he was in college. He said he was on his way to becoming a computer "hack" when he took a physical-education class that changed his life. He enjoyed the class so much that he has danced ever since.

When asked why he wanted to be a dancer, he answered in a voice filled with sarcasm.

"The hours, the money, the pain," he said.

But then he became serious, and qualified his answer.

"(You) do it because you want to ... (you have) to love it," he said.

"(You never) wake up without pain."

At 31, he said he finally has reached a point in his life where he is not consumed by ballet.

He said dancers should have life experiences beyond ballet so that when they dance passionate roles they will have a source of inspiration.

"What are you going to draw from (if you don't know passion) in a "Cinderella" or "Romeo and Juliet?" he said.

Traveling comes with the job, but Brown looks upon the experience as an adventure.

The ballet has been to Spain, Egypt and all over the United States.

"The best beds and Martinis are in Anchorage, the best showers are in Las Vegas," he said.

Future of flying discussed by official

By Doug Durso
General Assignment Reporter

SIUC aviation students last week traveled to Washington D.C. to express their concerns and ideas for improving the industry to one of the most influential and powerful officials in the field.

The SIUC chapter of the Aviation Management Society sent 20 students to talk with Congressman James Oberstar, chairman of the aviation subcommittee, about the future of the aviation industry.

Craig Lotgren, president of SIUC's program, said the trip and especially the meeting with Oberstar shows the dedication of the SIUC aviation program to the field.

"Discussing issues with the head of the aviation subcommittee, who is the most influential person in the industry, is something other collegiate aviation organizations are not able to do," Lotgren said.

Lotgren said the meeting was a chance for aviation students to voice their concerns affecting the industry today, including: product liability, a national airspace system and air traffic controller pay scales.

"These issues are very important to people who are going into the field of aviation because they affect the future of the industry," he said.

Product liability deals with the amount of time an aircraft manufacturer is responsible for an aircraft and can be sued for malfunctions or other problems.

Lotgren said the society stressed to Oberstar the importance of having the amount of time in which a manufacturer is responsible cut down from unlimited to 15 years.

"If you have a 1940 plane and something goes wrong, it is not fair to blame the manufacturer who built the plane over 50 years ago," Lotgren said.

In addition to product liability, the society also is concerned about a new national airspace system, Lotgren said.

Lotgren said the Federal Aviation Administration and IBM are collaborating on a new system that will handle more planes and see upcoming weather systems, but the project is way over budget and behind schedule.

"The technology we have right now is 60s and 70s, which can only handle a certain number of planes, and because of heavier air traffic we have reached the limit of planes the current system can handle," Lotgren said.

"Flying under the current system is getting dangerous so we urged Congressman Oberstar to try and move the project along."

Oberstar and the SIUC group also discussed the proposal to pay all air-traffic controllers on a level pay scale instead of having pay scales dependent on where they work, Lotgren said.

"The problem with this proposal is if you pay all the controllers the same they will leave the larger, more stressful airports like Chicago and Los Angeles for the less stressful, smaller airports," Lotgren said.

He said now larger airports can pay controllers more so they will stay.

Oberstar said he was very impressed with students' knowledge and understanding of important issues.

"With students like those at SIUC, the future of aviation is in very good hands," Oberstar said.

Members of the chapter also met with Federal Aviation Administration officials to see how the organization operates and discuss the different branches of the organization including: accident prevention, operations, certification and rule making.

The SIUC chapter of the society has 110 members and is a student organization of the American Association of Airport Executives, which has 30 chapters averaging about 20 members per chapter.

Faculty advisor, David NewMyer, said the trip to Washington D.C. provides excellent recognition for the SIUC program and also increases contacts in the industry for the students.

"At the same time the 20 students were meeting in Washington, D.C., Congressman Jerry Costello, a member of the aviation subcommittee, was at SIUC addressing the rest of the aviation program about important issues for aviation," NewMyer said. "This shows the SIUC aviation program carries a voice in the industry."

"It's like we have 35 drive-thrus," he said.

Barber said the food is good at Sonic because orders are made fresh right after customers voice their wishes.

"We don't put the burgers in a warmer or anything," he said.

Business is excellent, Barber said, listing burgers and onion rings, which are made fresh daily, as his biggest items.

"We also have Cherry-lime aid," he said, "which is a mixture of real limes and cherry juice and a cherry."

Jim Prowell, director of the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, said Sonic looked at Carbondale as a possible location for more than a year.

"We met with them and they asked us questions about the number of restaurants and traffic patterns and the like," he said.

The new restaurant is starting out with a crew of 70, but 20 are trainers who will work for only a few weeks.

Expedition to offer students unique opportunity to travel

By Stephanie Moletti
Environmental Reporter

Coming this May, SIUC students can experience Greek, Roman and Phoenician archaeological sites, natural areas, wildlife refuges and search for medicinal plants in Portugal, Spain, Morocco and Gibraltar.

A 14-day travel study program through the four countries will examine the ethnobotany, taxonomy, archaeology, history of medicine and marine biology fields of study.

The Iberian Natural History Expedition not only offers a unique study experience, but students can receive class credit for the trip, scheduled for May 26 to June 8.

David Brussell, SIUC adjunct assistant professor of plant biology, said the tour allows participants to live out a fantasy, and learn about culture on the way.

"Spain has a lot of natural areas that people are not aware of," Brussell said. "It has the largest population of the European brown bear."

Brussell said the group will visit archeological sites along coastal areas, natural areas, an area which has not been greatly disturbed by human activity and search for plants with medicinal properties.

During last year's trip, which toured five Hawaiian Islands, participants found a plant which contains significant antibiotic properties.

The group this year will search for the mystic mandrake, a member of the nightshade family, which produces twilight sleep. Brussell said the plant is one of the first-known anesthetic for surgery.

It was highly valued in the ancient world as a pain killer. The plant was buried with King Tut to ensure twilight sleep after his death and also is mentioned in the Bible, Brussell said.

The potent belladonna plant also is on the list to look for, he said. Belladonna, often found in Spain, is in the nightshade family too. The plant contains atropine, an important bioactive chemical.

In the ancient world, girls would drop juice from the plant in the eyes prior to a date to dilate their pupils, therefore making them look more romantic, Brussell said. Derivatives of the plant and semi-synthetic copies, today are used to dilate pupils for medical purposes, such as eye examinations.

Silphium is a plant last seen about 200 A.D. in the Mediterranean region. Participants will look for the plant as a type of treasure hunt, Brussell said.

The root of the plant was used to make a birth-control concoction which was affected when looking at the limited faculty size of the time period. The top of the plant was used to create a libation which went for high prices.

However, the plant was over-collected in the wild and not sufficiently cultivated and disappeared, Brussell said.

Ancient Greek coins portray the plant and numerous historical accounts have been found, mentioning the plant and its uses.

"Searching for this plant is like a treasure hunt for participants," Brussell said. "It would be an important find."

Brussell has been involved in teaching travel studies in Egypt, Greece, Turkey, Hawaii and Mexico and has traveled to 42 different countries. He has participated in travel studies at SIUC since 1987.

Matthew Cox, a participant in last year's trip to the Hawaiian Islands, said it was a trip well worth taking.

"I would definitely do it again," Cox said. "I went mainly for the travel interest and was really surprised at how much I learned and the quality of the areas we visited."

Cox said the trip provided a good lesson in the history and culture of the islands.

Students will stay in a medieval castle, visit museums, wineries, a sultan's palace, the pillars of Hercules site and St. Michael's Cave in Gibraltar.

Brussell said this will be a comfortable trip, traveling by air-conditioned coach bus.

"People learn a lot on location," Brussell said. "There are limitations to what you can learn vicariously, but the experiences you have no one can take away. Travel gives you experiences which are priceless and with you forever."

Brussell said this is a multi-dimensional trip, dealing with agriculture, zoology, pharmacology-medicine, and taxonomy.

"We aren't just going to see plants and archaeological sites," Brussell said. "We'll visit many spectacular landmarks and natural sites and students on the trip for credit will collect specimens of medicinal plants."

The trip to Hawaii costs about $1,700 plus air fare and Brussell said although a price is not confirmed, he expects this trip to be cheaper by about $1,000.

There is room for 25 participants this year and deadline for signing up is May 1. However, people will be taken on a space available basis after May 1, Brussell said.

Credit may be obtained in plant biology or biology, two to four credit hours are available in Biology 210, one to four credit hours in Plant Biology 391 and graduate credit is available in Plant Biology 591. Non-credit option is available.

For further information contact the Department of Plant Biology, Life Science II, room 420 or 417 or call 536-2331.

A lot of campus rapes start here.

Whenever there's drinking or drugs, things are not out of hand. So do not suppose that many campus rapes involve alcohol. But you should know that under any circumstances, sex without the other person's consent is rape. It's not just a matter of being drunk. And drinking is no excuse.

There are other parties to rape. You know what you have to do. Since a little sobering thought can save you from the probable rape.

Improv troupe amuses SIUC

By Heather Burrow
Entertainment Reporter

Ranging from Bill Clinton and Whitewater to Lorena Bobbitt's mishaps, the Second City National Touring Company Sunday entertained and amused audience members Sunday night.

In the opening skit of Roe vs. Wade, a man and woman fought in a boxing match over the rights of women. Six comedians took the stage by storm with liberal viewpoints with comments like, "No point for Republican values," and "Lose God."

The main parts of the show were the comedians' usage of improvisation. For example, one troupe member would ask the audience to participate by shouting out a word, style or idea to use in the act.

One idea was literary style in which the audience shouted out a style for each member and they were to make up a story based on the genre. The styles used were a Klingon from Star Trek, slasher, thespian, Dr. Seuss, and Beavis and Butthead. As shown by the choices given, the audience had different ideas on what a literary style is.

Much of the humor was political satire like President Clinton getting shot. A doctor was called, but because the doctor was not his primary health care physician, she could not help him.

Comedians also made fun of current events, such as Kurt Cobain calling Courtney Love from Heaven and her putting him on hold.

Members went to a more personal level of talking about SIUC's tuition hike with the word association skit of "money in pocket, money out of pocket, tuition, SIUC tuition hike."

Another improvisational technique used was to show a scene shown in several different movie styles. They showed a bathroom scene between two men talking about being too touchy with each other and a woman walking in on them, in the varying styles of science fiction, Kung-fu and X-rated.

No props were used and the piano was implemented as part of the skits to add drama and emphasis. The troupe was amusing and the ending Gap ad told the audience what was wrong with the world including gang violence and AIDS. However, through humor the audience was told Gap clothes would solve all the world's problems.

This kind of in-your-face humor permeated the show and made it entertaining, as well as politically enlightening.

Comic Breuer gives U.S. tour at SIUC tonight

By Heather Burrow
Entertainment Reporter

New York comedian Jim Breuer likes to take his audience on a laughing tour of the streets of New York to the beaches of Miami through his comedy — without props.

Breuer will perform at 8 p.m. tonight in the Big Muddy Room at the Student Center.

Ande Lipps, center programming chairperson for the Student Programming Council, helped bring Breuer to SIUC after she saw him perform at an entertainment conference in November.

"He is very much a performer, comedian and actor," Lipps said. "We basically fell out of our seats laughing and decided there was no choice of if he would come, but when we could get him to come."

Breuer not only does shows at college campuses, but performs on VH1's "Fools For Love," A&E's "Caroline's Comedy Hour" and is a cast member of Fox's "Uptown Comedy Club."

The stage also will be graced by SIUC student Reginald Dale, a freshman in elementary education, who won the Last Laugh Comedy Championship at SIUC this semester.

"I mainly do jokes about things that have happened to me and my friends and relate that to the audience," Dale said.

In winning, Dale opens for Breuer and gets this opportunity.

Breuer first was given his own opportunity in Clearwater in summer 1989 at amateur night at Ron Bennington's Comedy Scene.

"Two or three amateur comedians were given five minutes to do their act and see how well they did," Breuer said. "I basically performed for free at amateur nights, nursing homes, local high schools, anything to get experience and stage time."

Bennington gave Breuer the chance to be master of ceremonies for the club's amateur nights and give 10 minutes of his own act beforehand.

"I was only paid about $10 a night but it was helpful because other comedians would tell me to call certain agents for help," Breuer said.

"I expect that our 50,000 readers will enjoy it."

Fadiman said Montgomery did not center on investment actions in his article, but reactions of investments when in competition with each other.

"His article was innovative and sophisticated," he said. "We will welcome any more articles done by him or others that can bring a fresh perspective to the material, instead of just rehashing old stuff."

Montgomery originally queried several financial publications, and his first offer came from "Financial Planning."

Other publications showed interest as well, but when Montgomery informed them that he already was dealing with "Financial Planning," interest dropped off.

The magazine editors did not pay Montgomery for the article, but he does not mind.

"It was my first effort at writing, so I was just glad to be published," Montgomery said.

Montgomery plans to write again if the opportunity presents itself, "but not as a money-making venture."

the most of his time.

"My wife types all my papers, and they support me in my efforts and make things easier for me," he said.

Cox also serves as associate minister at the Hopewell Baptist Church, at 407 E. Jackson St.

Cox said a spiritual calling to preach the gospel gave him his first taste of social service.

"Within my ministry I've met a lot of people that were, in essence, in need of some type of intervention services," Cox said. "That plays into why I went back (to school)."

Before returning to school in 1990, Cox was a janitor at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale.

"What made me go back to school is that I was stuck in this position (janitor) that I didn't want to be in for the rest of my life," he said.

Volunteer work which he performed through his church was what led Cox to study social work, he said.

Cox currently volunteers for the U.S.D.A. Commodity and Distribution Industry.

The organization dispenses food to low-income families through Star Human Services Development Association of Carbondale.

He received a bachelor's degree in social work in May and started graduate school last summer.

A stipend awarded by the Department of Children and Family Services pays for Cox's tuition and fees.

As a condition of the stipend, Cox agreed to give one year of work to the department after he graduates.

He will work in Southern Illinois as a child-welfare specialist, and will investigate child abuse cases, and will work with adoption and foster-care systems.

Cox said he hopes to continue working with the department after his year of service.

In light of the lack of funding in the department, coming up with fresh and innovative ideas is challenging, Cox said.

"It's a broad-reaching challenge for me, because you can see the area in which you can walk into fresh territory trying to manifest a different environment for the department as well as for society," he said.

Busch said he is proud that he did not become cynical or burned out -- a fate of many police officers.

"I feel pretty good about still enjoying my work with the public, and I still found it enjoyable to interact and help out with whatever the problem was," he said.

Busch said since he began his work more than 23 years ago, the department has gone from being more militaristic to more sensitive to the needs of different groups of people.

Busch began working during the Vietnam era when students frequently rioted on campuses all over the country including SIUC, and police were seen as the enemy.

"We were called 'pigs' back in the early days," Busch said. However, "It's just one of those things, you have to learn to be called names," Busch said.

Busch said policing a university community is a unique experience, and the department works with SIUC students to identify and resolve their concerns.

"The students are afforded much more understanding and consideration than they have been in the past," he said.

Busch said the department has become more individualized through recognition of concerns of different segments of the population, and through minority recruiting.

"The department has become more sophisticated, and I think we have more comprehensive services than in the old days," Busch said.

Busch said the department is working towards a goal to recruit minorities so the police force reflects the community population.

"I think the department is doing an absolutely outstanding job at trying to recruit minorities and women to become police officers," he said.

In addition to the demographic changes within the department, Busch said legislation and policies have both negatively and positively affected policing. Busch said legislation narrowly defines the way police should enforce laws.

New football rule could make first year coach's job easier

By Dan Leahy
Sports Editor

A new rule change in the Gateway football conference could make SIUC's first year coach Shawn Watson's life a little easier.

Watson, who has anything but an easy job in rebuilding SIUC's football program, will be the first coach in SIUC history to have the luxury of going to overtime to decide conference games.

This is a big change from the game ending pressure of having to choose whether to go for two point conversions and wins, or the standard extra-point kick and a tie.

Former SIUC head coach Bob Smith knew the old scenario all too well. As twice he went for two points and the win against Western Illinois, and twice he came away with losses.

With overtime waiting in the wings, Smith could have kicked the safer extra points both times and taken his chances in the extra stanza, an option current Gateway coaches are sure to take.

Here's how the new format works:

- In an overtime, one end of the field is used and each team gets an offensive series beginning from the 25-yard line.

- Each team retains the ball during a series until it scores or fails to make a first down. A possession ends on an interception, fumble or unsuccessful field goal try.

- Teams are awarded one timeout per extra period. Timeouts not used during regulation may not be carried over into overtime. Unused extra-period timeouts may not carry over to other extra periods.

- The team scoring the greater number of points after the completion of both possessions is the winner. A team may score on defense.

- If, after both possessions, there is no score or the score is tied, there will be subsequent overtime periods until a winner is declared.

- The final score will be the total of all points scored by each team in regulation and overtime periods.

NL East teams look to Braves

By Peter Schmuck
The Baltimore Sun

A review of the week in major league baseball.

National League East

The Atlanta Braves actually lost a game last week, which should be very comforting for the four clubs that already are doomed to spend the entire season looking up at them. Their 12-1 record is frightening enough, but they are 10-0 on the road. ... Philadelphia Phillies first baseman John Kruk put a happy beginning on the week when he returned to the starting lineup with three hits in the club's home opener last Monday. He completed his radiation treatment Wednesday and has every reason to hope that he will recover fully from testicular cancer. ... Braves pitcher Kent Mercker exceeded his 90-pitch limit by about 40 in his no-hitter April 8, but he had plenty of time to recover. He returned to the mound Sunday and pitched seven strong innings against the Chicago Cubs for his second victory.

National League Central

Still trying to figure out what Cincinnati Reds outfielder Reggie Sanders was thinking when he charged the mound to get at Montreal Expos pitcher Pedro Martinez Wednesday, Martinez was working on a perfect game when he ran Sanders with a pitch. Sanders sat it and he was angry because Martinez had thrown high and tried to hit a couple of times earlier in the game. Earth to Feggie: The game used to be called hardball. ... Rick Sutcliffe has landed on his feet again. He pitched a solid 6 1/3 innings in his first start for the St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday and record'd his first National League victory in three years. ... Anthony Young update: Can't blame Friday's 11-3-inning, eight-run outing on bad luck, unless it was just bad luck that the Braves showed up on time for the game.

National League West

Everybody is so sensitive. Mild-mannered Los Angeles Dodgers third baseman Tim Lincecum reacted harshly last week when California Angels (and former Montreal Expos) Manager Buck Rodgers used him as an example of how the "juiced" baseball in 1987 helped some players get rich. Wallach had a career year with 26 home runs and 123 RBI that season. "I guess all the other guys having great years were not getting to hit corked baseballs," he said. Wallach had a good week with this year's version of the rabbit ball, hitting three home runs during an 12-for-23 run. ... Apparently, San Francisco Giants starter Bill Swift is the real deal. He has come back from last year's breakthrough 21.8 performance to post an 0.42 ERA in his first three starts of 1994. ... After Sunday's games, the Colorado Rockies' Dante Bichette is batting .455 average with six home runs and 16 RBI.

American League East

The Toronto Blue Jays didn't

miss stopper Duane Ward for the first nine games of the season, but his absence may have cost them a couple of victories last week. Substitute "opper Todd Stottlemyre pitched admirably through his first three late-inning appearances, but gave up leads in the ninth inning Wednesday and Friday. ... Dreams don't always come true deep: Comeback pitcher Bob Ojeda made his first start for the New York Yankees Saturday night and lasted just two outs.

Lewis, friends smash record

Los Angeles Times

WALNUT, Calif.—The setting remains one of the most picturesque in the world for track and field, the weather is unfailingly pleasant, and the fans can be counted on to provide enthusiasm. But, because the Mount San Antonio College Relays come so early in the outdoor season, the performances on the track do not always match their promise.

That was not the case Sunday at Walnut in the 400- and 800-meter relays, which provided everything that was boasted beforehand—even the rare sight of Carl Lewis gritting his teeth.

Pushed by a group of cocksure sprinters, who apparently were not overstating their capabilities when "We don't find out where we are seeded for the Championships until Wednesday evening," Auld added. "It doesn't matter who we play this weekend, we are a better team than our record shows."

they dubbed themselves the World All-Stars. Lewis and his Santa Monica Track Club teammates ran the fastest time ever in the United States in the 400-meter relay, then returned 2 hours later to run the fastest time ever anywhere in the 800-meter relay.

In an event Santa Monica has owned in recent years, in large part because no one else has the depth of sprinters to even lay claim to it, the team of Mike Marsh, Leroy Burrell, Floyd Heard and Lewis bettered its 2-year-old world record in the 800-meter relay by almost half a second, completing the two laps in 1 minute 18.68 seconds.

The previous record was 1:19.11, which the World All-Star team of Jon Drummond, Dennis Mitchell, Brian Bridgewater and John Regis also eclipsed with a second-place time of 1:19.10.

"I've been complaining about not having anyone to run against at the end of these relays," Lewis said.

"Today, I did."

base than get brushed off the plate."

Saluki pitchers have only delivered 16 bean balls to the opposition so far this spring, with sophomore hurler Dave Farrow being credited for a team-high 6 stungers.

Riggelman said if he were to be coaching again the 1994 Saluki squad, he would take notice to the huge number of batters being hit.

"If other teams are paying close attention to our stats, I'm sure they are aware of the number of hit batters," he said. "I would be very wary of Sauritch and if he made no effort to get out of the way, I would have a gripe with the umpire about it."

SIUC still has 19 games remaining in this seasons campaign, which may allow for even more records to be shattered.

Women's track, field win 2nd in triangular

By James J. Fares
Sports Reporter

The SIUC women's track and field team had plenty of athletes leading the way for the Salukis at the Purdue Triangular in West Lafayette, Ind., as names like LaTonya Morrison and Leeann Conway-Reed were just the tip of the iceberg on the success the Saluki women achieved this past weekend.

The triangular competition consisted of Indiana University, who finished first with 126 points, SIUC in second with 114, and Purdue in third with 99.

The Salukis ran into some bad weather conditions that included winds up to 40 mph. Head coach Don DeNoon said the wind affected some athletes but the top performers still prevailed.

Some of those top performers were Morrison, who ran a 15-flat in the 100 meter hurdles and also topped out at 63.28 in the 400-meter hurdles, good enough to give her first-place.

Reed dominated as usual in the 1500- and 800-meter runs with times of 4:45.88 in the 1500 and another first-place finish in the 800 with a time of 2:19.46.

"Leann has had a good year so far," DeNoon said. "Jennie Horner and Leann have helped this team tremendously."

April Cokley had a personal best performance with a toss of 46 feet 4 inches in the shot put, not to mention her second-place finish in the javelin throw with a hurl of 109 feet 10 inches.

Cokley lost first-place to her teammate Stephanie Smith who launched a throw of 116 feet 1 inch. The Salukis weren't done yet as Stefany Soracco finished third in javelin stretching the measuring tape to 104 feet 3 inches, with Vena Clendenin right behind tossing 103 feet 2 inches.

"It appeared we were dominating at the beginning," DeNoon said. "But Indiana just took control in the sprints and horizontal jumps."

In the 3000-meter run Debbie Daehler placed second with a time of 10:18.01, as Horner finished third with a time of 10:23.06.

Freshman standout Leslie Batson fared well in the 100 meter dash finishing third with a time of 12.45.

Finishing the day out for the Salukis was the 4 x 400 relay team of Morrison, Elissa Pierce, Shelia Hollins, and Katrina Daniels, which finished in second-place with a time of 3:58.19.

"Anytime you beat a Big Ten team you know you are doing something right," DeNoon added.

Netter victories end slump

Weekend play prepares Salukis for MVC Championships

The SIUC women's tennis team had a perfect ending to a perfect weekend of weather and tennis.

The lady netters first took on the Aces of Evansville early Saturday morning and had little or no problem in defeating our neighbors to the east.

SIUC started off a little rusty as Irena Feotanova and Liz Gardner dropped their first two matches early, but the depth of the Saluki line-up picked up the slack and came through for a victorious win of 6-3.

Head coach Judy Auld said she thinks the Saluki slump has come to an end just in time to prepare for the Missouri Valley Conference Championships this upcoming weekend at Illinois State University.

"I thought we were playing more in focus and with more intensity than the last couple of weeks," Auld said. "I was pleased in our performance."

SIUC practically owned the singles play as they won every match from the No. 3 spot on down to the No. 6 spot.

"I was glad we were able to play," Auld added. "We need to try and start to get back to the type of play we had at the beginning of the season."

In doubles action the Saluki women took two of three from the Aces as the tandem of Feotanova and Catherine Pietsch came out on top along with Jenny Rubin and Lucy Steele who had nice outcomes as well.

"There were some matches that could have gone either way," Auld said. "It was nice to see our competitiveness again."

SIUC (6-13, 5-10) was heading into the second match of the afternoon against a not-so-tough Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville team that gave the Salukis a chance to try some new strategies.

The Saluki women prevailed in a 6-0 win with no doubles action, as coach Auld said she was mostly happy with the way things turned out for her team this weekend.

"It was a nice win," Auld added. "But overall it would have been good to play against a team that would have pushed us a little harder."

SIUC blanked the Cougars to up their record to 7-13, 6-10 in conference play, only to prepare for the Conference Championship this weekend at Normal, Ill.

Auld let Gardner have the afternoon off and moved all players up one slot to play against some tougher competition in preparation for next

Dawgs get pegged by pitches in record numbers

Salukis approach conference record with 51 stingers

This season's Saluki baseball team is taking the old "take one for the team" baseball cliché to an all new level.

Through the first 33 games of the season, 51 Saluki hitters have been hit by pitches, just two stingers shy of the Missouri Valley Conference single season team record of 53 set by Wichita State in 1994.

The number of Saluki players hit by pitches since Sam Riggelman took over the SIUC program in 1991 has soared, with an average of 42 players being narked per season (not including 51 so far in '94). But Riggelman insists he has never intricately the bean ball into his teams' offensive game plan.

"I've never mentioned it (getting beamed) to them so I guess it's just a coincidence," he said. "What has happened this year is kind of incredible."

Saluki infielder Chris Sauritch has taken more shots than anyone else on the team with 21, which broke the previous MVC record of 13 set by Illinois State's Terry Bena in 1993.

The national single season record for a player being hit by pitches is 32.

Sauritch is also the MVC's all-time career leader for being pegged, having taken 30 blows since transferring to SIUC from California's Saddleback Community College in 1993.

The old MVC career record of 20 HBP's was set by a pair of Wichita State players, Arnie Beyerler (84-86) and Chris Wimmer (90-92).

Other Saluki players putting up big numbers in baseball's most painful statistical category include senior Scott DeNoyer, who has been nailed eight times this season and senior Jeff Cwynar who has been hit with seven pitches.

Riggelman said some of the Saluki players are not willing to let opposing pitchers intimidate them with inside pitches.

"We've got a couple guys, like Sauritch, who are willing to turn a shoulder into it," he said. "They would rather take it and go to first

Number of Saluki Batters Hit by Pitches on the Rise

The number of Saluki batters who have been hit by pitches has risen by 14% from four years ago. After only 33 games this season 51 batters have been hit and the team still has 19 games left.

Year	Number of Batters Hit
1991	42
1992	38
1993	45
1994	51
