Halloween, 21 bar entry tabled by city council

Last minute decision:
City manager to bring amendments to May 2 city council meeting.

By Aaron Butler
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Carbondale City Council tabled recommendations to solve the Halloween problem, including whether or not to raise the bar-entry age, after disagreements last night.

At midnight, the council remained divided on the entry age question, with council members John Mills, Maggie Flanagan and Richard Morris questioning the recommended increase to 21.

"Let's not think a 21 entry age solves anything," said Mills. "It will address the image, but it's effectiveness on underage drinking occurring is another question."

At the next meeting, which will take place May 2, councilman John Mills will be replaced by newly elected Michael Neill, who has said he will support raising the entry age.

The actions came after nearly half a year of analysis and suggestions by University and city advisory groups, including a specially formed Mayor/Presidential task force, and a student referendum.

The bar-entry age question was put to a referendum vote in the recent Undergraduate Student Government elections, and voted down nearly two to one.

USG City Commissioner Michael Nolan said raising the entry age would be detrimental to both student safety and the city economy.

"For USG this is a safety issue — there will be more parties, and they will be uglier," he said. "With the reduced foot traffic on the Strip, businesses will begin to die."

The Mayor/Presidential task force was created by Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard and SIUC President John Guyon to come up with suggestions to deal with the Halloween celebration.

Once formed, the committee's first decision was to work toward completely eliminating the street party. To assure this goal was accomplished, the task force made the following recommendations:

■ Close the University for Halloween and the preceding weekend;

■ Raise the bar-entry age to 21 year round;

■ Close bars on the strip for Halloween weekend;

■ Close city parking lots for Halloween weekend;

■ Ban kegs on Halloween weekend;

■ Commit city and University resources to publicity;

■ Apply sanctions for criminal behavior.

The task force report was written by chairman Patrick Kelley, an SIUC law professor.

Kelley said the task force viewed a commercial video of the 1994 Halloween celebration in December, and in January reviewed a written history of the Carbondale celebration compiled by Carbondale City Manager Jeff Doherty.

The task force also held two public hearings, Kelley said, to gather input from the University and Carbondale communities. It then met weekly for three weeks in February to develop their proposals.

1st 100 days chaotic, Moseley-Braun says

By Shawna Donovan
DE Governmental Affairs Editor

Sen. Carol Moseley-Braun, D-Ill., met with Southern Illinoisans on Tuesday and discussed how the Republican majority has changed Washington's political climate.

Moseley-Braun said she wanted to give her constituents an update on what legislation they can expect.

"It is a very interesting time," Braun said. "The first 100 days have been chaos."

Chaos, as she defined it, is how the Republican majority can steamroll their agenda through Congress and how domestic programs are on the chopping block. About 30 people came out to talk with the senator at the Southern Illinois Airport. Braun met earlier with farmers and labor unions.

She said the senate would be the body that will water down the House's nine of the 10 Contract with America items.

"The Senate is a necessary fence against the passions of the House," she said. "There are some things I

Carr chooses NBA over senior season

By Grant Deady
DE Sports Editor

Saluki basketball lost one of its brightest stars a year earlier than expected Tuesday when junior forward Chris Carr declared himself eligible for the NBA draft.

Accompanied by his mother and girlfriend at a 10 a.m. press conference at Garfield's Restaurant inside University Mall, Carr read a prepared statement that gave limited insight to his decision.

"I've called you all here today to inform you as to my future at Southern Illinois University. This decision has not been an easy one for me to make and I consulted those closest to me," Carr said.

"I, Christopher Dean Carr, will forego my final year of eligibility and make myself eligible for the 1995 NBA draft.

Chris Carr

Career Highlights:

- Career-high 38 points vs. Illinois State (Feb. 18, 1995).
- MVC Player of the Week three times during the 1994-95 season.
- His 1,251 career points rank him 15th on the all-time Saluki scoring list.
- One of only six juniors to score 1,000 or more points at SIUC.
- 1995 MVC regular season and tournament Player of the Year award winner.
- Started 62 consecutive games in three seasons at SIUC.
- Scored 30 points or more five times.

Career statistics:

- Field Goal % = .453
- Free Throw % = .757
- Averaged 13.5 points and 5.8 rebounds per game during his career.

Students react to decision

By Sean J. Walker
DE Campus Life Editor

Saluki basketball followers have mixed feelings about Chris Carr's decision to forego his senior year at SIUC and make himself eligible for the 1995 NBA draft.

Mike Mandis, an avid member of the Dawg Pound, SIUC's group of vocal student boosters, is disappointed Carr is leaving SIUC and points to the excitement he brought to the Pound.

"It was so hard to get people excited about the game and come out," he said. "Chris Carr was one of the reasons people came out — because he is a showtime player. Mandis says it is not disappointing the Salukis lost Carr to graduation, but rather that Carr "gave up on school."

"That's more disappointing than anything," he said. "I think it's kind of a joke," Ted Cassidy, a junior in hotel and restaurant management, said. "He might get picked up, but I don't think he'll make it. This is not a good decision. He should just stick it out for one more year."

ALL ACTIVITIES OF RELIGIOUS SECT OUTLAWED — MOSCOW—A court here Tuesday outlawed all activities of the Aum Supreme Truth sect suspected in last month's deadly nerve-gas attack in a Tokyo subway, dealing the group's huge Russian organization a crushing blow. Oostankino Municipal Court ordered local leaders of Supreme Truth to pay $4 million to the plaintiffs for "moral and physical damage" inflicted on members. Moscow officials had already confiscated the sect's six Moscow apartments and frozen bank deposits. Those assets may be used to settle the award to the Committee for the Protection of Youth Against Totalitarian Sects, if the Oostankino ruling goes unchallenged or is upheld on appeal.

PLO MUST CONTINUE CRACKDOWN, RABIN SAYS — GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip—Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin warned Tuesday that PLO chairman Yasser Arafat must continue his efforts to rein in Islamic militants, as the Palestinian Authority announced that it has begun releasing Islamists arrested in a weeklong crackdown. Palestinian prosecutor general Khaled Kidrah announced Tuesday that, due to a lack of evidence against them, 60 to 70 Hamas and Islamic Jihad activists were released in the past three days. Arafat, head of the Palestinian Authority and the Palestine Liberation Organization, is under pressure from Palestinian human rights group and others in Gaza to back away from confronting the militants.

RUSSIA WARNS FORCE TO BACK ETHNIC RIGHTS — MOSCOW—Russia warned Tuesday that it is prepared to use force to protect the rights of ethnic Russians living in the former Soviet republics. The stern warning, delivered by Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev, seemed to be in line with resurgent nationalist sentiment in Russia. But Kozyrev sought insisted he was not issuing a blanket threat and by cautioning against allowing nationalism to taint Russia's political debate or upcoming legislative and presidential elections. Kozyrev's comments seemed likely to cause jitters among some of Russia's neighbors where large minorities of ethnic Russians live among non-Russian majorities eager to affirm their nationhood after years as part of the Russian-dominated Soviet Union.

NEW SUPERCONDUCTOR CARRIES MORE CURRENT — Scientists at Los Alamos National Laboratory have created a new kind of superconducting film that can carry 100 times more current than any material of its kind and may speed development of a host of hyper-tech devices from magnetically levitated trains to miniaturized medical-imaging scanners the size of a toaster. The film — which conducts a whopping million amperes per square centimeter, can operate in strong magnetic fields and is supple enough to be wound into electrical cable — constitutes a "major superconductivity breakthrough," said Christine Ervin, assistant secretary of the Department of Energy, which funds the Los Alamos lab.

IMPROVE, DON'T CUT GOVERNMENT, POLL SAYS — WASHINGTON—Americans have scaled-down expectations for their lives, and most believe that the federal government hinders rather than helps them attain the "American Dream," a new national poll found Tuesday. Still, few Americans think that cutting federal programs will improve government performance, the poll said. Instead, nearly three out of four Americans believe that government "could be effective" if it had a better work force; the bureaucracy, not federal programs, was seen as government's greatest impediment. More than half also believe that state government, like federal authority, "impedes more than it assists," the poll said.

UNIVERSE'S INVISIBLE 'DARK MATTER' DETECTED — WASHINGTON—Scientists reported Tuesday that they have made the "first significant detection" of the invisible dark matter that, in theory, forms a halo around Earth's home galaxy, the Milky Way. Their quarry was a population of dark objects called MACHOs (massive compact halo objects), at least as large as the planet Jupiter but not massive enough to shine as stars. What they found — or how many they found — further confounds one of the most pressing questions in cosmic science: the search for the so-called dark matter that makes up most of the galaxy's mass, as well as that of the rest of the universe.

AIDS virus treatment, funding found lacking

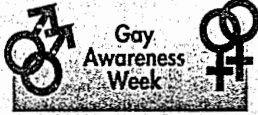

By Kellie Huttes
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Heath Karch stares into the distance pondering his life as a gay man and is scared. Although he is healthy, he has seen many friends develop the HIV (Human Immunodeficiency Virus), which causes AIDS (Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome), and die.

"If I didn't know about AIDS (when I had my first sexual experience), I'd be a statistic. I'd be dead now," he says. "I get a cold chill every time I think about it. People who didn't know about it are dead now."

Karch, an SIUC junior in computer science from Decatur, leads a normal life as a student. As a gay activist, he is president of the campus organization Gays, Lesbians, Bisexuals and Friends. The group has about 50 student members who meet weekly to discuss relationships, the acceptance of gays and AIDS in the community.

Although there have only been 23 reported AIDS cases in Jackson County, hundreds more are estimated because people with AIDS or HIV are not required to tell their county health department. Karch has made HIV and AIDS education to the public his mission.

"Sometimes I think I'm pretty calloused to the disease, because I've seen so many of my friends go through the treatments and see their T-cells decline and have watched them die," Karch said.

"I've had a couple of one-night stands and yeah, that scares me, but I'm tested every six months and I expect to live to be a very old, old man."

While Karch is an informed gay man and practices safe sex, he said he sees many 18 and 19-year-olds having their first sexual encounter, whether homosexual or heterosexual, unprotected, and those are the people con-

People don their denims to increase gay awareness

By Dustin Coleman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Wear your blue jeans today if you support the gay, lesbian and bisexual community, said the co-director of a gay and lesbian organization at SIUC.

Gays, Lesbians, Bisexuals and Friends is having its Annual Blue Jeans Day today, an event during the GLBF Awareness Week designed to increase gay awareness and break down the myths about gays and lesbians, said co-director Heath Karch.

Blue Jeans Day originated in 1973 at the University of Illinois and is now a nationwide event. Karch said the reason blue jeans were picked is because everyone has a pair, stressing the point that the average person cannot pick someone who is gay out of a crowd.

"This is to prove that gays don't wear flamboyant clothes and that the person sitting next to you could be gay," Karch said.

Karch said on past Blue Jeans Days, people have run home to change their clothes after finding out that wearing jeans was supportive of the gay and lesbian community.

"I have heard people say to someone else 'you must be a fag since you are wearing jeans,'" he said. "People will talk about this all day and that's what it is designed for."

Treadmill testing may detect coronary attacks

By William C. Phillips III
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Treadmill testing is a useful tool in detecting coronary heart disease and catching heart attacks before they happen, according to a physical fitness expert at a guest lecture on campus.

Herb Weber, director of cardiac rehabilitation and exercise science at East Stroudsburg University, spoke Monday night in Morris Library Auditorium.

The exercise test is a procedure which evaluates cardiovascular functions during physical stress, Weber said.

"Exercise may manifest the abnormalities that may not be evident while a person is at rest," Weber said.

"The exercise test can be used to determine whether or not enough blood is flowing to a person's coronary arteries while being physically active."

Weber said the test is beneficial because it makes the disease easy to detect. The diagnosis cannot be done while a person is at rest, he said.

Herb Weber

"The person has to challenge the heart to demand more coronary blood flow under controlled condition while their responses are observed," Weber said.

Weber said insurance companies may order exercise tests for life insurance applicants, and employers may order exercise tests for employees who are responsible for public safety.

The exercise is usually performed on a motor driven treadmill while a person's skin color, coordination and levels of exertion are monitored.

Weber said he can assure people the procedure is safe. Exercise intensity and its progression is based on a person's age, exercise history and clinical status.

"About one death has occurred in about 50,000 tests and a heart attack occurs once in every 100,000 tests," Weber said.

"If you have coronary heart disease, your risk of dying in your sleep is higher than your risk of dying on the treadmill."

Weber said the exercise test is like any other diagnostic test and it is not perfect.

"The electrocardiogram may not pick up on a blockage of a small single coronary artery, the machine could miss this isolated obstruction and also if you have no symptoms the electrocardiogram may interpret the test as negative when you in fact have coronary heart disease," he said.

Weber said the exercise test may be valuable for males over 40 and females over 50 especially if they want to start an exercise program.

However, Weber advises young people not to take the exercise test because about 15 percent of them are falsely labeled with the disease, leading to a lot of anxiety and expenses.

"We discourage exercise testing to younger, apparently healthy men and women without multiple risk factors of coronary heart disease," he said.

Weber said potential errors can be minimized by using other diagnostic tests to increase the accuracy of the exercise test.

Annual Olympics to highlight efforts of athletes

By Michael D. DeFord
Daily Egyptian Reporter

More than 500 Special Olympians will compete for the gold this week at McAndrew Stadium.

For the fifth straight year, SIUC will host the 28th annual Special Olympics track and field competition Thursday. Athletes from Area 15, which includes eight Southern Illinois counties, will compete in the events.

Jo Gullely Ancell, Area 15 Special Olympics public relations director, said the competition provides athletes with mental or physical disabilities a chance to showcase their talent to the local community.

"We really try to get the community involved," she said. "The event is a lot of fun and provides a tremendous opportunity for members of the community to share some time with the athletes."

"The children really look forward to the events, because with Special Olympics every athlete is a winner. Families also think it is a great opportunity for the kids, because they get to see what the athletes are capable of doing and to showcase their abilities."

Ancell said one of the more important aspects of Special Olympics is the support provided by student volunteers.

"The majority of our volunteers are SIUC students," she said. "We really need those volunteers to help out as escorts, get lunches ready and for setup and cleanup."

Because there are 550 athletes competing, Ancell said, it is important to have as many as 700-800 volunteers so they can work together with the athletes on a one-on-one basis.

She said volunteers are encouraged to show up because they have a great time.

Bernadine Doetch, Special Olympics volunteer coordinator, said so far the volunteer response has gone quite well.

"The student response has been very good in the past several years," she said.

Doetch said volunteers enjoy working one-on-one with the athletes.

"We try to match up the volunteers with the athletes," she said. "The volunteers really do a good job showcasing the athletes' abilities and cheering them on."

Ancell said the goal of Special Olympics is to provide a year-round sports program for the athletes.

"Currently we have three events in our local chapter," she said. "We have bowling in the fall, basketball in the winter and the track-and-field competition in the spring."

Ancell said Special Olympics is one of only two organizations authorized by the United States Olympic Committee to use the Olympic name.

"The International Olympic Committee recognized and endorsed Special Olympics as a sports organization in February of '88," she said.

According to Jordan Goldstein, games coordinator for Area 15, Special Olympics is getting bigger each year.

"This is an enormous event," Goldstein said. "On Thursday there will be over 2,000 people at the event, including athletes, coaches and volunteers."

Battle against rape needs help from all

HAVE YOU EVER BEEN RAPED OR SEXUALLY assaulted, or do you know somebody who has suffered a sexual violation? If figures from the SIUC Women's Services are accurate, you can probably answer yes to one or both of these questions. As we approach the last two weeks of Sexual Assault Awareness Month, we should do all that we can to inform ourselves and follow all possible recommendations to fight rape and other sexual assault.

According to a statistics gathered by the campus safety representative from Women's Services, one in three women are raped some time in their lives. Of these rapes, a reported 85 percent are committed by acquaintances of the victim. These figures were gathered by Women's Services from various literature and organizations including the National Center for the Prevention and Control of Rape. It is also known that rape and sexual assault and abuse are not just a threat to women; men, women and children alike are plagued by these horrible and unfortunate elements of society. Therefore, on a local level, it is up to SIUC student and Carbondale citizens to stand united against these elements.

IMMEDIATE LOCAL OUTLETS NOW EXIST FOR becoming more informed on issues of rape and sexual assault. There have been events co-sponsored all month long by the Carbondale Women's Center and Women's Services. On Thursday, an information table on the topics will be set up at the Student Center between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. Also, the Carbondale Police Department will conduct a personal safety class Saturday from 6-9 p.m. and again on April 25. Information on additional activities which run through April 30 can be obtained by contacting Women's Services, 453-3655. The DE urges all concerned people to attend some or all of these activities.

IN OUR DAY-TO-DAY LIVES, IT IS IMPORTANT for us to know how to prevent rape or sexual assault from befalling us or the ones we love. Women's Services suggests — in the case of avoiding acquaintance rape — that letting a partner know early on what your sexual limits are can help prevent unwanted sexual encounters. Also, all people should know that "no means no." If one pushes oneself sexually on another, one can be guilty of either rape or sexual abuse.

A key point in attempting to prevent rape is avoiding excessive use of alcohol or other drugs. Many times in party settings on campus or in the city, drugs and alcohol are present. Since these substances can impair abilities to think or physically act, they can leave one open to sexual assault. According to a University pamphlet, 70 percent of men and women used alcohol in situations of acquaintance rape. While none of these precautions are guarantees of preventing rape or sexual assault, each is a step in the right direction.

FOR ANY VICTIMS OF RAPE OR SEXUAL assault, it is important for you to know that the misfortune is not your fault. It is also important to know that you are not alone. Women's Services offers counseling sessions for rape and sexual assault victims, as do other groups in the city and across the country. All victims deserve to get their lives as fully back on track as possible, and services like these can help victims do this. It should also be known that the law is available for victims. Though the judicial process can put a victim through agony once more, and thus may be an undesirable outlet, it is important for victims to know that a means of punishment exists for their aggressors.

LIKE MANY OTHER PROBLEMS IN SOCIETY, there probably is a long road to significantly curbing incidents of rape and sexual assault. The quickest way to cure a social ill, however, is for all of society to join in the fight.

Student claims fast-food restaurant lures customers with 'green washing'

The thing to look for in recycled products is the post-consumer content. Saying that it is just recycled could mean that the paper companies are using green advertising to promote their products. The paper companies by law are allowed to state that their products are recycled if they take their scraps from the paper mill floor and put it back in the process of making virgin paper products.

Paper companies have been doing this since they came into existence. It only makes economic sense to put the scraps back into the paper-making process rather than sending them to the landfill, which costs them money. Manufacturing processes are most efficient when there is the least amount of waste possible.

Recently, I noticed that McDonald's has started advertising that they have adopted policies suggested by the Environmental Defense Council in using recycled products in their packaging. McDonald's could ask their packaging supplier to increase the amount of post-consumer content and really help to slow down with the environmental degradation of our planet.

While I would like to commend McDonald's for their effort with post-consumer content and would like to see it continue, I do have a problem with false advertising on the part of the McDonald's in the Student Center.

"I had been told that the amount of waste that McDonald's generates by their products was a concern to students before McDonald's was allowed to move into the Student Center."

Steve Christianson
Senior, Political science

McDonald's had been doing this for a couple of years until last week. They had been leading people to believe that they themselves had actually been recycling. This is false and is known as green washing, or using the earth as an advertising tool.

That is morally wrong and should be a crime, just as it is a crime to steal or commit murder. McDonald's had been saying that they were shipping their recyclable materials by UPS to markets that would accept plastics. In actuality, McDonald's was taking those materials to the loading dock and throwing it in the trash compactor.

The signs are gone now, so if you didn't notice them in the past, you've missed your chance to see an example of outright false advertising.

I had been told that the amount of waste that McDonald's generates by their products was a concern to students before McDonald's was allowed to move into the Student Center. They seemed to satisfy that concern in order to become established, and now it isn't of concern to them any more.

This is a typical example of a corporation making a promise before they build or move into a building and then failing to follow through on their obligation for the long term. McDonald's needs to clean up their advertising and quit misleading people and tell the truth.

Steve Christianson
Senior, Political science

Sexual assault ugly social reality

Lecture on subject creates unnecessary tension, falsehoods

I applaud your coverage of the recent lecture presented by Laura Martin ("Porn danger in promoting violence," DE, April 12) in conjunction with Sexual Assault Awareness Month.

Ms. Martin and the other speakers rightly decry myths perpetuated by the media's presentation of women as sexual objects.

Unfortunately, in their remarks they present at least six myths of their own (readers, see if you can spot them) with no supporting evidence to help their audience separate fact from opinion.

Sexual assault is an ugly reality in society and thus merits serious, thoughtful discussion.

The superficial, thinly veiled anti-male rhetoric presented in Martin's lecture does a disservice to men and women of the campus community.

Such a presentation is better suited for the trashy talk shows on daytime television.

tracting and spreading the fatal disease. But his friends and any one else with the virus cannot be treated in Southern Illinois because there are no infectious disease doctors in the area. He guessed there are probably 25 SIUC students with the disease, but because students' and AIDS patients' records are confidential, there is no way to verify the numbers.

According to Tom Schafer, director of communications for the Illinois Department of Public Health, said the number of AIDS cases reported in the state in 1994 increased by 3 percent, from 3,024 to 3,118 cases. There have been 14,750 known cases in the state since January 1981, the sixth highest state total in the United States.

According to the Center for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, 441,000 people have contracted AIDS since 1981 and 250,000 have died.

Karen Grueter, spokeswoman for the Illinois department, said in addition to the reported AIDS cases, there have been 16,369 anonymously reported HIV cases which may develop into AIDS.

In 1993, AIDS was the second leading killer in Illinois of people between the ages of 25 and 44. Since 1981, 8,794 infected residents have died, Schafer said.

In 1994, homosexual and bisexual men had the highest percentage of reported AIDS cases, but women's cases have increased as the infection has spread from the gay to the heterosexual community. African Americans and Hispanics, which make up one fourth of the state's population, have 60 percent of the new AIDS cases reported in 1994, he said.

While metropolitan areas have the most concentrated numbers of the disease, downstate numbers are increasing as well. With increased cases has come a greater need for health care that many patients cannot afford or receive in Southern Illinois.

"Even gay people can't pick gays out of a crowd," he said. "Blue Jeans Day hammers that point home."

"...people have to travel to Evansville, Springfield, or St. Louis to receive adequate care."

Sandra Ceto
 dir., HIV Consortium

Sandra Ceto, program director of the Jackson County Health Department's HIV Consortium, said the department offers AIDS testing and counseling, education and case management.

The consortium, which serves people who are uninsured in the 15 Southern Illinois counties, has been in operation since November and provides emergency and medical assistance, mental health support, housing and utility assistance and dental and primary care to its clients.

Ceto said the consortium serves about 40 clients, based on need. She said because of the rising costs of care, her budget increased from $100,000 to $150,000 for fiscal year 1995.

"Although we only serve about 40 people, there are an estimated 286 cases (in Southern Illinois) out there, and statistics show there could be four to 10 times that number. There is a great need for awareness in the area," she said. "Because care is less accessible here, these people have to travel to Evansville, Springfield or St. Louis to receive adequate care."

JoAnn Reese, SIUC's medical specialist, said any student who develops the disease while enrolled at the University will be covered by student insurance. If the disease is pre-existing, as with any pre-existing disease, students must wait one year before they will be covered by insurance.

Ceto said awareness among the public and health care providers is needed because many Southern Illinois physicians are not trained to care for AIDS and HIV infected patients.

The Jackson County Assessment will wear jeans on Wednesday. "If it is cold, I probably will wear jeans," he said. "But that is the only consideration."

Kowalickzo said he understands the desire of homosexuals to be considered equal but that this effort is a weak attempt to make a point.

"They (the gay community) are only drawing attention to the fact that they are different by having everyone wear jeans," he said. "The best thing to do is not to bring attention that they may be different."

Plan of 1994, Southern Illinois' Hospital Services priority list, names sexually transmitted diseases as the top health care priority. However, most Southern Illinois physicians are family care and primary care practitioners. There are no infectious disease care specialists.

Another health care issue is the cost of treatment for HIV and AIDS patients.

Care and medication costs have escalated and many facilities do not accept public aid medical care cards. Karch said he has seen friends spend several thousand dollars on care for the disease, then die, leaving a large debt to their families.

Judith Clausen, board president of the Southern Illinois Regional Effort for AIDS, a non-profit incorporation established in 1991, said Southern Illinois is 10 years behind the rest of the country in providing health care to needy patients.

"In Southern Illinois, most cases are young people and they do not have the resources to pay for their medical costs," she said. "Sometimes the state reimburses medication costs, sometimes a person's insurance pays and sometimes Medicaid pays. It's one thing to get on Medicaid, but it's hard to find physicians who will accept a Medicaid card in the area."

She said many of those infected are young people who have not worked long enough to get adequate insurance to cover treatment and care costs and are forced to turn to state aid.

Medicaid cards are not widely accepted in Southern Illinois because Medicaid has not always paid its bills to health care facilities, causing hospitals to incur debts.

Nancy Zimmers, director of public affairs for the SIUC School of Medicine in Springfield, said the hospital has an infectious disease branch including staff supporters and physicians to treat HIV infected and AIDS patients. The school does not accept Medicaid cards because it is a public state institution.

The Memorial Hospital of Carbondale offers primary and Hospice home health care to AIDS and HIV infected patients.

But Michelle Malkin, a member of GLBF, said the event is not to expose the differences in gays, but to promote awareness.

"Being homosexual is as ordinary as wearing jeans," she said. "It is not meant to mean that you are gay if you wear jeans, but that you are aware of gay and lesbians rights and issues."

"This is not a time for us to get empathy," he said. "It is a time to be proud of who we are."

agree with in the contract and there are also the items I don't."

She said she agrees with some type of welfare reform, but does not agree with cutting children's programs.

"Welfare is a respondent to poverty," Moseley-Braun said. "Poverty is the real problem."

Moseley-Braun responded to constituent concerns about tax reform, public housing and proposed federal cuts.

She told the group that an ideal solution to solve the budget problem would be streamlining Social Security.

Her idea would be to cut payments to those who have received the amount of Social Security they paid into the program. "This idea would be for anyone who can afford not to live on it," she said. "If they have received what they paid into it, then we should consider getting them off of it."

Fred Smith, a consultant for Williamson County public housing, said many residents were at Tuesday's meeting to hear what Congress is planning for the Housing and Urban Development agency.

The housing residents are forming committees to lobby local legislators, Smith said.

Moseley-Braun said the residents should take the opportunity to unite and take a stand on housing issues.

She said HUD will be greatly changed because the Republicans want to give more authority back to the community.

Betsy Streeter, from the SIUC Legal Clinic, said she was concerned about federal cuts for legal services.

Moseley-Braun said legal services will not be cut but reduced. She said the constituency demand for the services will save it.

"Legal services is one of those targeted for elimination," she said.

The meteor would have killed all the frogs, clams and fish if that were true, she said.

The meteor may have hit the earth, but virtually nothing died, he said.

When dinosaurs went extinct, there were large land bridges, he said.

The large species of dinosaurs, which could travel over long distances in a short time, didn't have strong enough immune systems to battle the diseases they faced in different regions, he said.

"These dinosaurs didn't go out with a cosmic bang, but diarrhea," he said, confirming his theory.

Bakker said he collaborated with the special effects artists in Jurassic Park. He also said that Michael Crichton has finished "Jurassic Park 2" which is due this fall.

He is the author of the 1986 book "The Dinosaur Heresies," and has changed the world's concept of dinosaurs from slow, stupid, cold-blooded beings to warm-blooded, fleet-footed animals.

"One senator can slow the process down, but a block of senators can block a whole bill."

Lilian Adams, a Carbondale resident and the senator's Jackson County coordinator, said she was worried about women and children's issues facing Congress.

"I'm scared to death (about issues facing Congress) and not as optimistic as she is," Adams said. "It seems the Congress is anti-poor, anti-black and anti-working people."

Moseley-Braun is the first woman member of the finance committee, and a member on the banking, housing and urban affairs committee and on the special committee on aging.

She was a member on the judiciary committee, the small business committee and the bi-partisan commission on entitlements and tax reform.

skulls, hips and spine as a majority of the dinosaur specimens he has unearthed. He would refer to them as terrible chickens.

Bakker's humor and wit prompted the audience of approximately 300 to laugh out loud as he reiterated the evidence that helped revive a century-old theory that birds are living relatives of dinosaurs.

His presentation entitled, "Jurassic Park is just north of Laramie" at the Student Center Auditorium Tuesday night ended this year's Charles D. Tenney Distinguished Lecturer Series for the year.

Bakker is an adjunct curator of paleontology at the University of Colorado museum. Has led more than a dozen expeditions in the American West and has discovered two new species of Jurassic dinosaurs.

The additional evidence he presented was the detachable jaw of birds which is the reason baby birds are all mouth.

The seven detachable places in the jaw of a road runner correlate precisely with the Tyrannosaurus Rex jaw specimens he has seen.

Bakker said people should not refer to the T-Rex as a five ton meat-eating beast.

"T-Rex should be called a 10,000 pound road runner from hell," he said ending the presentation.

Bakker refuted the long standing theory that dinosaurs became extinct as a result of a meteor that hit the earth 66 million years ago, causing a dust cloud to block out the sun and producing acid rain-polluted water.

Senator urges student activism

Mosely-Braun says cuts to aid cause for concern

By Shawna Donovan
DE Governmental Affairs Editor

An opportunity to discuss Washington politics with Sen. Carol Mosely-Braun, D-Ill., during the short trip between Carbondale and Murphysboro Tuesday was a journey behind the scenes.

The senator was downstate for a few days talking with students, citizens and interest groups. This is one of the few times she has come to Carbondale since being elected in 1992.

"I wish I could be in Illinois more and down here," she said. "But I like to talk with people and keep the home fires burning."

The senator met with farmers and labor unions. She also had a chance to talk with a few students from the SIUC College Democrats.

Mosely-Braun said students should energize themselves politically to fight for direct loans, pell grants and other proposed cuts in financial aid.

"Direct loans make sense to allow young people to borrow money without having to pay for an expensive bureaucracy in the middle," she said. "I intend to fight to preserve it."

The proposed spending cuts—rollbacks—for student aid include the elimination of $63.4 million State Student Incentive Grants Program and financing several graduate fellowship programs, all designated for 1995-96 academic year.

"The opportunity side of this democracy responds to people who participate. It worked in the last election," she said. "Unfortunately, that 21 percent of the American people gave us this (Republican majority)."

"The other 79 percent should be energized by the threat to our collected future of the extremism of this Congress poses," Mosely-Braun said. "I hope the threat of losing programs will get students registered and activated again. I hope that if nothing else the students will send a message to Congress that they are not a group to mess with."

People should rise to challenge the proposed cuts, Mosely-Braun said. "The Chinese symbol for chaos also means opportunity," she said. "If nothing else, students ought to be energized by the challenge of the end of pell grants or direct loans or the underfunding and eliminating of financial aid that don't relate to increasing education opportunities."

As Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., retires in 1996, it will be up to her to step up to the plate and take the lead.

Mosely-Braun said her first two years in the Senate have been exciting because her involvement with the issues, such as children and education. Seven of 14 bills she sponsored, such as the Education Infrastructure bill, have become law.

Mosely-Braun is the first woman member of the finance committee, and a member on the banking, housing and urban affairs committee and on the special committee on aging.

She was a member on the judiciary committee, the small business committee and the bi-partisan commission on entitlements and tax reform.

Goldstein said the day of the events is one of the happiest days in the athletes' lives.

"The events really make a large difference in their lives as far as being showcased for the day," she said. "They have people out there caring for them and doing the best they can to help them out."

Goldstein said Special Olympics would not be possible without the support of the volunteers.

"The event really opens your eyes to the energy of the volunteers," he said. "It could never happen without the help of the volunteers and we can't thank them enough for helping out."

He added many local businesses from Carbondale, Marion and Murphysboro contribute financial support in sponsoring the event.

Opening ceremonies will begin at 9:30 a.m. on Thursday, with the games beginning at 10 a.m. and lasting until approximately 2:30 p.m.

Shaping up Rural Health Initiative brings care to rural communities

By Dave Mack
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Obstetrics, prenatal care and pediatric services are not strong points of Southern Illinois' health care, SIU School of Medicine officials believe. In response to these deficiencies, Ray Robertson, assistant provost of the medical school, and Dr. Phillip Davis, a research associate professor, set the Rural Health Initiative in motion.

"There were 13 counties on the southeast side of (Illinois) that had no obstetrical services and very few prenatal services available," said Robertson.

RHI is a program intended to assist medically deficient communities, hospitals and clinics in Southern Illinois by planning and developing new programs to fill medical service gaps, Robertson said.

"Its highest priority is (to provide) good general health care where it doesn't exist," he said.

"The governor's office asked us to solve some health care problems and we began collaborating with the public health department," Robertson said. The SIU School of Medicine took care of the details and got the RHI on its feet, he said.

The RHI program was passed by the Illinois legislature and signed into law by Governor Jim Thompson in 1990. Funds were not appropriated by the government, however, until 1993.

When the SIU School of Medicine received the funding, the $527,000 allotment fell far short of the original request for $6.8 million.

"$527,000 was peanuts," said Robertson. "We had to be very selective where we spent it."

RHI administrators decided to direct the money to towns whose health care resources are below par.

The level of medical care a town can provide is rated on a scale from 0 to 3. A level 3 health care center offers specialized services, whereas a level 0 facility offers only the most basic medical services.

Carbondale maintains an above average rating of 2, but many smaller surrounding communities have ratings of only 1 or 0, Robertson said.

Communities with less specialized centers often need to send patients to faraway towns, which can be a major inconvenience, he said. Those are the towns that RHI is designed to assist.

"(The Initiative) was intended to develop new services in communities with little or no health care," Robertson said. "We

Clinic offers obstetrics care

Convenient services: Pre-natal care comes to clinic through SIU-sponsored initiative.

By David R. Kazak
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Sam and Terra McGowan are having a baby and to ensure their child's health, Sam drives Terra once a month across town to the Harrisburg Family Practice Clinic, for regular pre-natal care.

It is a much shorter drive than the 40- to 50-mile drive to Evansville, Ind., Paducah, Ky., or even Carbondale.

Before last year, however, such a drive was necessary for most pregnant women in Harrisburg and surrounding communities, because no doctors were practicing prenatal care. "If we had to go to any of those towns, it could mess up a whole day," Sam, a coal miner from Harrisburg, said. "We'd have to take a day off of work. We would do it of course, but it would be a mess."

So in 1994, the Harrisburg Family Practice Clinic became a partner in the SIU School of Medicine's Rural Health Initiative, a program designed to bring needed health services to rural areas in Southern Illinois.

Now, families such as the McGowans receive quality prenatal and ob/gyn care because the RHI brings ob/gyns in from the Carbondale Clinic once a week.

Once a week, two ob/gyn doctors from the Carbondale Clinic travel to the Harrisburg Family Practice Clinic. Dr. Roger Klam and Dr. Luis Guillen make the hour long drive so the patients do not have to.

Dr. Larry Jones, founder of the Harrisburg clinic and graduate of SIU's Medical School said he used to perform pre-natal services and deliver babies, but had to stop offering that service in 1986.

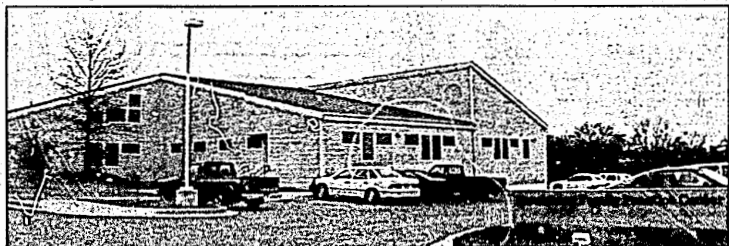

"The malpractice insurance for ob/gyn service just got too high," Jones said.

Klam said malpractice insurance depends on many different factors, such as location and experience, but malpractice insurance can range from $45,000 to more than $110,000 a year.

Jones said, "For this area, I couldn't afford to keep offering the service."

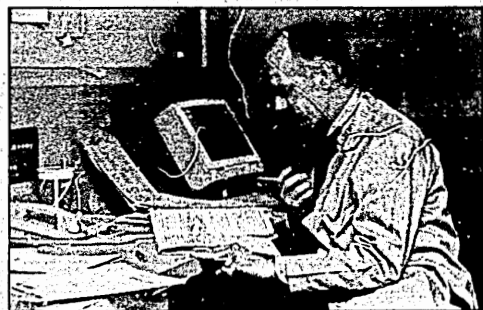

Harrisburg is a rural area, but the clinic is not lacking in urban aesthetics. It is as modern as any in Chicago's suburban area. Its

SIU School of Medicine trains the rural doctor

By Dave Mack
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Recruiting rural physicians is a difficult proposition, an SIU School of Medicine administrator said. To help meet the need for such doctors, the School of Medicine curriculum trains medical students to work in such an atmosphere.

The goal of the SIU School of Medicine is to "assist the citizens of Central and Southern Illinois in meeting their present and future health care needs," said Kevin Dorsey, a clinical associate professor.

"We are dedicated to creating primary care physicians, pediatricians, family practitioners and internists," Dorsey said. A primary care physician is a doctor who offers generalized services, he said.

Doctors tend to gravitate toward an environment that is similar to the one that they were raised in, said Dorsey. Since many medical students are from large cities such as Chicago, many of them go there to practice when they get their M.D., he said.

Aaron Klepper, a third-year medical student from Freeport, a town of 25,000, said "(My practice) will probably be in a city with less than 150,000 people. That's what I'm used to."

"Some people in my class will be going back to their home town (to practice)," he said.

The School of Medicine admissions department favors students who are more likely to practice in areas where their skills are most needed, Dorsey said.

"Preference is given to central and Southern Illinois students," he said.

The School of Medicine has altered its curriculum to coincide with RHI goals, Dorsey said.

"The week of Thanksgiving, we had students go back to their home town to spend a week with their local practitioner," he said. "(We wanted to) teach them what goes on in a primary care facility and establish relationships with doctors in their community."

Medical school administrators are studying a pilot program called the rural primary care track. Currently, medical students get one year of education in Carbondale and receive the following three years in Springfield.

"We're trying to discover the viability of keeping students in rural areas for more of their education," Dorsey said. "If this is what you're going to do, be a physician in Murphysboro, then maybe you'd do better training in a place like Murphysboro."

Klepper agreed, saying there is a need for physicians in rural areas. "That's something that should be done," he said.

"I think (the SIU school of medicine) does a good job in preparing you for primary care, whether it's internal medicine, family practice or ob/gyn," he said.

In addition, medical students have frequent contact with Carbondale doctors, said Dorsey. "We're talking about taking the med school out to the local physicians' offices," he said.

Klepper said off-campus work has played an important role in his education.

"I did six weeks of family practice in Carbondale with Dr. Roger Jones," Klepper said. "My first year, we did home health visits."

"We're taking native sons and daughters and educating them here in local offices," Dorsey said. "If we raise the (local) participation level, the education will become better."

Providing field experience has been a focus of the School of Medicine's curriculum.

"They like to send you to different places to give you an idea what it would be like to be a physician there," Klepper said.

equipment is modern. The staff is well-trained.

But Jones said Harrisburg is in the middle of one of the poorest areas in the state and that hurts the kind of care available in two ways.

"The rural aspect of Harrisburg and the surrounding communities make it extremely difficult to attract doctors to this area," Jones said. "Med students are not stupid. They want to go where the money is, and it's not here, it's in the cities."

Jones said the second reason is because people with close to or below poverty level incomes will avoid pre-natal care because of the cost or time needed to travel to a clinic staffed with an ob/gyn.

"Before the Rural Health Initiative was instituted, many women in the area went without pre-natal care," Jones said. "About 25 to 30 percent of the patients we have now would not have sought out care for one reason or another."

"Out of the rest, some 50 percent could afford to go to private clinics closer to Harrisburg, and the rest would make the hundred-mile round trip to Evansville, Paducah or Carbondale," he said.

Klam said, "About 65 percent of the patients I see in Harrisburg are on public aid."

"They are motivated to get good pre-natal care and probably would travel to get it, but that isn't the issue," he said. "The issue is whether the tires on their car are going to make it or if they have enough gas for the trip."

Those on public aid are not slackers, Klam said. The cost of the health care is what would keep them from regular visits to the doctor, not a lack of desire.

"The thing is, when you have a healthy pregnancy, you have a healthy child," Klam said. "I would rather take in less money by seeing people on a regular basis rather having to see someone in the emergency room with major complications because they didn't come for any pre-natal care," he said.

Jones started the clinic in 1979 by himself. He now has three other doctors as partners in the clinic, but adding more doctors to the staff did not mean adding ob/gyn services to the clinic.

needed to look at specific areas, specific needs, and target the money there."

The SIU School of Medicine does not provide medical services; instead, it provides broker services, Robertson said.

"(RHI) helps communities to pull together health services that are necessary to their citizens," said Carl Getto, dean and provost of the SIU School of Medicine. The traditional plan of building a clinic and then hiring a physician to work there is less effective," he said.

"We're... the health care brokers for rural Illinois," said Robertson. "We're not here to supplant, we're here to supplement."

In 1993, the town of Hardin lost its clinic to the flood, leaving two physicians and their nurses without a practice, said Getto. RHI, working with the Jersey Community Hospital and a local committee, solved the problem.

"We got them a building where the doctors could continue to serve the community," he said. "Before that, they were operating out of a local school."

In Lebanon, the sole physician retired, leaving the community without any local medical care, Getto said.

RHI placed a faculty member in Lebanon to continue seeing patients and provided a rural training site for resident rotation, he said.

Continuing education of physicians is another area of RHI concern.

Most physicians can handle child care problems, but if a child needs greater care, they often must be sent a long distance from their home, Robertson said. Under RHI, practitioners come to Springfield to be further educated by doctors there.

RHI administrators are developing new technologies which will revolutionize the health care industry. However, some of them are not yet available for widespread use.

"The absolutely newest thing we were working on with RHI is telemedicine," said Robertson.

Telemedicine is an interactive video where the doctor sees the patient on TV, he said. It can be used for diagnosis, wound management, checkups after surgery and many other medical services.

The most important feature of telemedicine is that it would allow people in rural hospitals to be linked to Springfield, Robertson said.

"If you had the smallest wart on your finger, the microscope could magnify it, and it'd be seen on a monitor 500 miles away," Robertson said.

Telemedicine is not yet ready for widespread use but will have profound implications when it becomes available, according to Robertson.

"It's still in its infant stages," he said. "We don't even know what the outer limits will be for telemedicine."

The cost effectiveness of telemedicine is questionable. Currently, specialists who perform services via long-distance video won't be reimbursed by Medicaid.

Emergency transportation is another field upon which RHI focuses.

The proposed Airborne Regional Medical Specialists Program would transport doctors whose services are in high demand to various clinics via helicopter on a rotating basis to diagnose and treat patients, Robertson said.

"You have very expensive, busy people and this way you could move them efficiently," he said.

The system would use the state's helicopter system, Robertson said. "It's another piece of the system, and you've got to have all of the pieces to make it all work," he said.

Despite all the work RHI administrators have done, Southern Illinois health care deficiencies are far from being eliminated, Robertson said.

"There are no quick fixes," he said. "You don't fix this overnight."

Martha McCammon Clark, a professor emerita of SIUC's English Department, died April 8 of heart disease at Meadowbrook Healthcare Center in Urbana at age 98.

"She was a very sincere person — she had very high standards and stuck to them," said George McCammon, Clark's brother. He said Clark enjoyed literature of all types and was an excellent mother to her three children.

"Everybody who knew her respected her," McCammon said.

Clark was hired in the 1940s when the University experienced tremendous growth as young soldiers returned home from World War II and enrolled in college, said

Betty Mitchell, associate professor of English, who taught with Clark during her 17 years at SIUC.

She said the English department was understaffed for freshman composition classes and the administration learned that Clark had a degree in English. Clark was one of the many faculty wives who were recruited to teach, Mitchell said.

Clark was born in Mounds City Dec. 26, 1896 to George and Ella Clucas McCammon. She married Marshall G. Clark on June 23, 1923.

Clark began her teaching career after earning a degree from the University of Illinois in 1918. She taught English at high schools in Deland and Hoopston, then returned to the University of Illinois for graduate work in 1921 and 1923. She supervised English instruction at McKendree College in Lebanon and was a substitute teacher at Dundee High School prior to coming to SIUC in 1948. Clark retired from SIUC in 1965.

Clark is survived by a son, Malcolm Clark of Syracuse, N.Y.; two daughters, Janice Impey of Arlington Heights and Kathryn Allen of Glen Cove, N.Y.; 11 grandchildren, six great-grandchildren and one brother, George McCammon of Springfield.

Memorial services will be held at 3 p.m. April 22 at Clark-Lindsey Village, 101 W. Winsor Road, Urbana.

Student pinches pennies to pay college tuition

College Press Service

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Four years of planning and saving finally paid off Joshua Smith's tuition recently when he dumped 198 rolls of pennies on the counter in the University of Florida's cashier's office.

Since his first year at UF, the mechanical engineering senior, who graduates in May, has saved pennies to pay for his last semester's tuition. Through donations from friends, picking pennies off the ground and "saving the little change

"I've always collected pennies as a hobby. I've always watched people throw them away."

Joshua Smith

I got," Smith saved up the $99.01 he needed to pay the remainder of his tuition. Smith found his final penny on the floor in the UF cashier's office. "I've always collected pennies as a hobby," Smith said "I've always watched people throw them away,"

Smith was warned ahead of time that UF might not accept such a large number of pennies. The office had a change of heart, but first Smith had to spend 45 minutes labeling each penny roll with his name, Social Security number and phone number.

"Students are supposed to do oddball things," he said. "It's better than drinking 'til you puke."

As he lined up the 198 penny rolls in groups of 10 on the counter to give to the cashier, Smith said he was pleased with the way everything worked out. One penny-needy woman even thanked him for the rolls because it spared her a trip to the bank.

Smith's accomplices said while they couldn't see themselves doing the same thing, they thought penny-saving made bill-paying more fun. "I think it's hilarious, otherwise I wouldn't have helped," said Julie Silva, Smith's fiancée. "It's one of those things like saving up your pennies to pay for your college education. It's like the American dream."

Methods offered to reduce stress

By Matt Denis

To your health

ART or CREATIVE activities.

■ Obtain COUNSELING for assistance in exploring personal values and meaning.

Many people find that having something that gives life greater meaning and taking necessary risks to embrace it strengthens their ability to cope with stress.

To obtain more information on exploring meaning and purpose in your life, and its relationship to stress, contact the Student Health Programs Wellness Center at 536-4441.

■ Practice an organized RELIGION, but only if one feels right. All religions have in common the quest for higher meaning and purpose.

■ VOLUNTEER time to others or choose a career that will help others.

■ Express individuality through

One source of stress in college can arise from within, as a normal process of growth. A person may become dissatisfied with the activities and ideas that once seemed to be enough. An individual may feel a chronic and vague sense of tension, boredom or even desperation that results from feeling that one has been unable to reach his or her full potential. One may feel as though something vital is missing or may have little sense of purpose. A lack of meaningfulness in life may provide fertile ground for stress-related health problems (e.g. anxiety, depression, headaches) when academic and personal demands become intense.

Here are some ideas for strengthening a sense of purpose and reducing stress:

■ Learn and practice MEDITATION. Many meditators report an increased sense of wholeness, peace, happiness and empathy. Research has demonstrated that meditation effectively reduces anxiety and headaches.

■ REACH OUT to others to share warmth, caring and love. Accept help from others. Social support is important for emotional and physical health.

■ SPEND TIME ALONE for self-rediscovery.

■ Spend time OUTSIDE or with a PET, realizing the connectedness of all nature.

■ KEEP A JOURNAL. Record private thoughts about life, including personal values, ideals and experiences.

Carr

"I feel I have accomplished all I can here at Southern Illinois University as far as my basketball career is concerned.

"The only logical thing for me to do at this time is test the waters of the NBA."

Over 30 people attended the press conference, including former teammates Marcus Timmons, Shane Hawkins, Scott Burzynski and Ian Stewart.

SIUC basketball Head Coach Rich Herrin and his staff were not on hand for the announcement, but Herrin did release a statement later in the afternoon.

"Naturally, we're sorry Chris is leaving us, but wish him the best of luck at the next level," he said. "He was an exciting player for us for three years, but I assure you that life will go on as will basketball at SIUC."

Carr, who leaves SIUC as the 15th-rated scorer of all-time, did not take questions upon the conclusion of his statement.

However, the 6-6 forward did thank coach Herrin, the only Division I coach to offer him a scholarship when he came out of Arcadia Valley High School in Pilot Knob, Mo., in 1992.

"I'd also like to thank Rich Herrin for everything he's done for me and also for allowing me to not only be a part of Saluki history, but for being a part of his heralded history also," Carr said.

Carr averaged 22-points per game in his final year, which keyed his Missouri Valley Conference Player of the Year award that followed the season.

He scored 50 points in three NCAA tournament appearances, and is one of just six juniors that have reached the 1,000-point level (1,250) at SIUC.

A Cleveland, Ohio-based agent who also represents Dallas' Jimmy Jackson and Chicago's Ron Harper of the NBA, will be handling Carr's career moves.

Like Carr, both Jackson (Ohio State) and Harper (Miami of Ohio) left college early to pursue a career in professional basketball.

Saluki freshman guard Shane Hawkins, the only returning starter for SIUC next season, said he and the rest of the team support Carr in his decision to leave.

"We support his decision even though it may not be the right one," he said.

"He made his decision based on what he thought was best for himself. He wouldn't have made it if he didn't think it was the right one."

Redshirt freshmen Reggie Nelson and James Watts are the likely candidates to help fill Carr's absence, while junior forward Scott Burzynski should receive significantly more playing time.

Also, the recent signing of Rock Island High School all-stater Monty Jenkins and the emergence of walk-on Jamie Veach will help fill the void left by Carr.

Hawkins said despite losing Carr, Timmons, Stewart and Paul Lusk, it would be a mistake for the rest of the Valley to count SIUC out next season.

"We'll be a lot smaller and we'll have to play a lot harder, but we'll still be competitive because we'll be more of a team," he said. "We lost his (Carr) rebounding and we'll miss his clutch play late in the game.

"We're kind of disappointed, but other players will get the chance to step up. Not as much me as Reggie Nelson, or Monty Jenkins."

Mike Rosenwald, a junior in journalism and English from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., said he does not think Carr is ready for the NBA either, and adds that basketball is not the only avenue for student athletes to explore.

"I am not an NBA scout, but Carr is fooling himself if he thinks that his next step is the NBA," he said.

"I doubt he's ready physically and now I know he's not ready as a mature individual capable of making sound decisions.

He just gave up a chance to get a free degree and have a future other than basketball, which is only an injury or a poor scouting report away."

Dan Barker, an undecided freshman from Park Ridge, said he is not mad at Carr, but said with Carr the Salukis would be a better team next season.

"I think all basketball players should go all four years," he said.

"I don't think he'll go that far in the draft.

"He should have stayed; be better next year and get better known nationally."

Whether Carr, the Missouri Valley Conference Player of the Year, will make it in the pros is not what Jeff Zilinsky, a sophomore in advertising and public relations from Wheaton, said is his concern.

"It's stupid, because he's a good talent," he said.

"If he came back next year, he would most likely be an MVP again.

"I don't know his background, like if he needs money, but if he's getting a free education then he should stick around for another year."

Rosenwald said student athletes at universities across the nation have been leaving school early for a chance at the pros.

"It's extremely disturbing to me that Chris Carr can come here on a full ride and then vanish after three years," he said. "And that's a trend that's not just taking place at SIU. It's everywhere."

"The student athlete in major collegiate sports is basically extinct — save for a few — and I stress few."

championships with the 49ers. He left two years ago to play for the Kansas City Chiefs.

With his four young children sitting nearby, Montana said his decision to retire after 16 years came down to leaving the game relatively healthy. He underwent back surgery in the mid-'80s and an elbow problem caused him to miss 32 consecutive games in 1991 and '92.

"I'd like to be able to run around with my kids," Montana said. "There are tragic accidents in the game every year. It was one position I didn't want to find myself in with my family."

He insisted he was not quitting because his wife, Jennifer, wanted him to. "My wife had nothing to do with it," he said, adding that his daughter, Elizabeth, "got really upset one morning. She said 'Nobody made you retire, Daddy. You made your own decision.' She doesn't like to lose at anything either."

Montana said his decision never was based on the premise that the Chiefs would not be a Super Bowl contender this year. He denied that Coach Marty Schottenheimer working the team too hard caused him to stop playing. And he insisted that his left knee, missing all of its outside cartilage, still was strong enough to get him through another season—even if that meant risking a more serious operation and possible knee replacement 10 to 20 years later.

"I reached the point where the day comes and you wake up and you realize it," Montana said, adding there wasn't a specific day or time when he made the final decision, but that he made up his mind long after the season ended. "It just came upon me all of a sudden. I wasn't as fired up about working out, I just wasn't looking forward to it as much. There were signs that said things aren't the same any more."

Montana also said he felt it necessary to make his decision known before this weekend's college draft. He said he wanted to get the Chiefs every opportunity to get a quality replacement through free agency or the draft, and he wanted to free up the $2.4 million in salary he would have been paid this season.

Asked if he might consider a comeback, Montana said: "At this point, I don't see it. Michael Jordan did, didn't he? Just kidding, just kidding. I'm not leaving the door open."

Zihler made up ground later, as SIUC's doubles squads blanked Southeast with a perfect 3-0 record for the event.

Card and Steele paired for a 8-0 win; the tandem of Johnson/Berksoy defeated their opponents 8-1, and the duo of Zihler/Gardner rounded out the competition with a 8-6 victory.

The SIUC netters will have a light practice today as they gear up for the MVC Tournament to be held in Springfield, Mo.

"I'm anticipating us going into the tournament as the No. 3 seed," Auld said. "But there are a number of teams that can beat each other on any given day."

"It is going to come down to who is playing the best tennis at that point in time. It's really critical for us to have team contributions."

Seed numbers and pairings will be given out at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday.

a defense so that the slow-footed Luc Longley and Myers could give the opposition offensive fits.

Saluki head coach Rich Herrin and assistants Ron Herrin, Rodney Watson, and Tommy Deffebaugh must do the same. Guys like Hawkins, Scott Burzynski, and new comers Monte Jenkins and Troy Hudson will be unable to create shots at will like Carr and Marcus Timmons did. So the coaching staff must create shots for them.

Players like Aminu Timberlake and Jamie Veach will not be able to complete the defensive and rebounding tasks alone. They will need smarts from the sidelines to aid them.

A greater variety of zone defenses will be needed. More picks will have to be set. Fundamentals are essential to a team that lacks the gifts of a one-on-one scorer like Carr or a big time defensive stopper like Timmons. Fundamentals are not easy to derive and are difficult to instill in players, but with the brains of a good coaching staff, it can be done; and a Saluki team that does not match up favorably on paper with the majority of the MVC can still come away with its fourth straight conference title and head to the NCAA tournament again.

But just like Jackson initiated the surprise performance in the Bulls, Herrin must do the same for the Salukis by putting on his best coaching display yet.

Carr is not around to hit the big shot anymore, so Herrin must step up as the man who does.

Dawgs ride Thoroughbreds

22-hit explosion fuels Saluki baseball to 20-8 victory

By Doug Durso
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SHIRLEY GIOIA — The Daily Egyptian

Saluki third baseman Jay Mansavage, a sophomore from Riverviews, slides safely into third base against Murray State Tuesday afternoon at Abe Martin Field. The Salukis slaughtered the Thoroughbreds 20-8.

Any problems that the SIUC baseball team were having are now forgotten as the Dawgs pummeled Murray State 20-8 at Abe Martin Field, Tuesday.

The Salukis pounded out 22 hits and the club's largest run output of the season on their way to snapping a three-game losing streak.

The Thoroughbreds jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the top of the first, but the Dawgs tied it in the same frame and scored a total of 16 runs in the next four innings.

The Salukis also came through with clutch hits scoring their first 10 runs after two outs had been recorded.

SIUC baseball coach Dan Callahan said this game was a nice change of pace.

"Lately we are at the receiving end of these types of games and not the upper end," he said. "It was great to get a lot of pitchers get some work and have offense perform that well."

David Kranz went five innings giving up two earned runs on his way to collecting his first collegiate victory.

Hurler's Jason Kline, Greg Harrier, Zac Adams and Brad Blumenstock all worked an inning in SIUC victory.

The Dawgs most impressive performance came from reserve second baseman Brad Cosgrove. Cosgrove replaced Braden Gibbs in the second inning after Gibbs jammed his hand diving back to second base on a pickoff play.

After Gibbs went out with the injury, Cosgrove came in and went three-for-four with three RBI's, four runs scored and connected on his second home run of the year in the seventh inning.

"We knew he (Cosgrove) was a good hitter and very capable of playing like he did today," Callahan said. "Unfortunately it had to happen after Braden (Gibbs) went down, and Braden was swinging the bat well." Gibbs hand will be examined tomorrow.

Other SIUC stars included Bill

True, who had four hits. Pete Schlosser drove in five runs on three hits and Jay Mansavage stroked three hits including two triples.

The Salukis improve to 16-18 on the season, while Murray State falls to 16-23.

Callahan said while this can be a confidence builder, he knows that the Salukis have done this before and are facing a tough opponent today.

"I hope this is a stepping stone for our team, but we did the same thing to Eastern (Illinois) a couple weeks ago and then got swept by Creighton," he said. "We face a tough opponent in Arkansas State, who's team ERA is in the mid-three's with is tough in college baseball."

"Their conference ERA is around 1.5, so we should see better pitching than we did today (Tuesday)."

First pitch at Abe Martin Field, today is 3 p.m.

Montana says farewell to football

Washington Post

SAN FRANCISCO—Lauded by his former coach, Bill Walsh, as "the greatest football player of all time," quarterback Joe Montana made it official Tuesday at a downtown ceremony attended by more than 20,000 of his fans. He announced his retirement from professional football two months before his 39th birthday because "I felt it was the right time for me."

"I really and truly thought this day would never come when I'd say that word retirement," Montana told the crowd, which interrupted him with a loud "Boooooo" when it heard him say "retirement," once and for all. "It's like living a dream for me. It started throwing a football through a tire on a swing and then playing in the Super Bowl. My dream, like most dreams, you end up waking up. It's like a wakeup call for me. It's time to move on."

This was Joe Montana Day in San Francisco, a city he captivated during the 1980s with year after year of magical performances and four Super Bowl

Jordanless Bulls should provide lesson for Dawgs

Remember the sense of hopelessness that emerged from Bulls fans as Michael Jordan stood at the podium and gave his farewell speech to the NBA? A general consensus arose quickly that the three-time champions could be no more than a .500 ball club, if that.

The champion-to-instant-rebuilder scenario that hit the Bulls in the fall of 1993 has struck the Saluki men's basketball team in the spring of 1995.

The Saluki die-hards' strong confidence in the team's chances of acquiring its fourth consecutive Missouri Valley Conference Tournament Championship was gradually whittled away to a sense of doubt, as Chris Carr stood at Garfield's Tuesday and waived good-bye to the SIUC hardwood.

A team that once was returning the MVC Player of the Year-nom returns only one starter, Shane Hawkins, and he will be just a sophomore.

But, recall the likes of nonamers Pete Myers, Steve Kerr, and Bill Wennington, and the superstar emergence of Scottie Pippen and how the Bulls resurrected hopes of a fourth title during the course of the 1993-94 season.

But, the Bulls' abrupt re-emergence did not just happen with the stroke of a magic wand. Coaches had to conduct a renovation of the team's style. They could no longer sit back and call a clear-out for Jordan in the winding minutes. Head coach Phil Jackson and his staff had to tightly grab the reins and create offensive systems that would get the Wenningtons and the Kerrs open shots. They had to devise a

Women's tennis squad overcomes wind, SEMO

By Cynthia Sheets
Daily Egyptian Reporter

With tall trees bending and swaying in the blustery wind, the Saluki women's tennis team breezed past Southeast Missouri State in its last meet of the spring season.

University Courts held the competition, as the SIUC netters captured a 6-1 victory in just under three hours.

"We have to learn to deal with the wind factor," said SIUC women's tennis coach Judy Auld. "It's the same on both sides of the net, and we have to go out with the attitude that SEMO is dealing with the same problem."

"I do have a concern with over-hitting into the wind, which could cause an arm injury."

Only SEMO's egos would be bruised, however, as Saluki seeds two through six grabbed wins against their opponents in straight sets.

Liz Gardner, in the No. 2 singles flight, defeated Southeast's Elena Novikova 6-2, 6-0. As of Tuesday, the sophomore has also captured a spot on the 1995 Academic All-Missouri Valley Conference list with a 3.57 GPA in Management.

Freshman Sanem Berksoy extended her overall seasonal record to 29-11 with a win against Lucie Wade, 6-1, 6-0.

"Sanem is very mentally sound," Auld said. "She is a baseliner, but we've spent a lot of time getting her to develop her short game."

"For Sanem to lose a match, she would have to play someone who is just a better all-around player."

Molly Card, Helen Johnson and Lucy Steele rounded out the win column, each victorious in straight sets. Each member of the Saluki trio contributed 20 plus wins on the season.

Steele, a music major, and Patricia Zihler, an accounting major, made the honorable-mention list of the 1995 Academic All-MVC team, as Steele garnered a 3.31 GPA, while Zihler earned a 3.36.

Zihler gave up the only point to SEMO's Valerie Vanderstappen in a 6-4, 6-4 loss.
