Jesse Jackson Sr. rallies students to register to vote in front of Shryock Auditorium Tuesday afternoon.

Jesse Jackson urges voter participation

By Dustin Coleman
DE Special Projects Editor

Today's generation must take the moral high road and put decency and dignity above politics, former Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson Sr. said.

Jackson, who spoke to a crowd of more than 2,000 people Tuesday on the Shryock Auditorium steps, said it is the responsibility, privilege and right of today's youth to register and vote so they can make a difference in the morality of today's government.

"We have the power to take America back," he said, as the majority of the crowd applauded. "Students on this campus have the power to make a difference."

Jackson's speech was part of his statewide Illinois Bus Tour that began Monday. The intention of the tour is to get people registered to vote and emphasize the importance of voting.

Jackson said although the cities of Chicago, East St. Louis, Cairo and Carbondale are in the same state, they present no sense of unity.

"There is a radical disconnection in the state today," he said. "We should be one state, trying to make this a better nation."

Jackson said indifference to the issues causes Americans to lose victories for morality.

Through voting, Americans can be transformers and not conformers, in order to make this a better country and state, Jackson said. Voting, he said, gives Americans the power to stop the government from dividing its people by race.

"We must go through a renewal of our minds," Jackson said. "Minds must change to reject degradation. Minds must change to reject racism."

Monday, Jackson visited the south suburbs of Chicago, Decatur, Champaign, Urbana and Mt. Vernon, Tuesday, before coming to Carbondale, he visited Cairo and Tamms, where there is a super-maximum prison being built that will cost $65 million.

He said it will cost $40,000 a year per inmate, which is much more than it costs to send a person to school.

"We must choose schools over jails and invest in our future," Jackson said.

The choice of hope and healing over pain and suffering should not be a choice Americans have to make, he said.

Jackson said to make a difference, people cannot just talk about change. He said they must take action to make changes happen.

"We can't just curse about it," he said. "We must vote about it."

Jackson said the upcoming elections will play a key role in the transformation of morality in America. He voiced his support for Dick Durbin, Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate, John Rendleman, Democratic candidate for state representative of the 115th district, Barbara Brown, Democratic candidate for state senator of the 58th district, and President Richard Hayes says he has watched Jesse Jackson Sr. become a prominent individual in society and has been a supporter of the principles Jackson has represented since he became prominent.

Hayes, a retired assistant director of SIUC Student Development, said Jackson's message is vital to the future of America, especially the youth.

"His concerns that will be expressed today concerning the involvement of the youth and our future are very important, and all of it should be considered," Hayes said.

Hayes, along with more than 2,000 others, listened Tuesday as Jackson stressed the importance of voting, as part of Jackson's statewide Illinois Bus Tour.

Jackson ran unsuccessfully for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1984 and 1988.

Hayes said he has watched Jackson evolve into a profound politician.

"His rhetoric has not necessarily changed, but it has toned down where he doesn't aggravate as many people as he used to. But he makes the same point, and that shows changes in the political climate and maturation in him being a politician," Hayes said. "Through it all, he has maintained his belief with God, and those principals guide his life."

Brian Clardy, a doctoral student in history and lecturer in Black American studies, said the message Jackson brought to campus will have an impact on the entire Southern Illinois region.

"I believe the message he left here we're going to take all over this area," he said. "I want to work with the organization that he is talking about and do what I can."

The organization is the National Rainbow Coalition, founded by Jackson in 1986. The coalition is a national organization for empowering, educating and mobilizing citizens.

Clardy said he has followed Jackson's message since childhood. He said Jackson gave him a strong sense of self esteem.

"I have to divide Jesse Jackson into two parts: the Jesse Jackson of my childhood and the Jesse Jackson of my manhood. And really, they are one in the same. But the

Thompson Woods fate unknown

Even with the donation of 30 gallons of herbicide, University officials and student leaders say they are unsure when Thompson Woods can be rejuvenated.

Monsanto, an agricultural chemical business unit, has donated 30 gallons of herbicide to the University to rid Thompson Woods' floor of exotic plants. The commercial cost of 30 gallons of herbicide is $1,500.

For the last 10 years, the University administration has been dealing with the depletion of Thompson Woods. The majority of the problem is exotic plants taking over the floor of the woods and pushing out native plants.

Philip Robertson, an SIUC plant biology professor and head of the Thompson Woods Management Committee, said the donation is a step in the right direction for improving Thompson Woods, but the problem still exists for the University to raise the money necessary to begin work in the woods.

Robertson said the 1994 committee plan calls for spraying herbicide, removing trees and replanting trees. The cost will be approximately $50,000.

Robertson said subsequent steps would require $1,500 a year for seven years following the completion of spraying the herbicide.

SECURITY ULTRA-HIGH IN JAPAN FOR CLINTON — TOKYO—Tokyo is sealed tight this week as Clinton, Hillary Rodham Clinton, Secretary of State Warren Christopher, Commerce Secretary Mickey Kantor and hundreds of other American government officials and staff arrive for the U.S.-Japanese summit. More than 22,000 police—double the normal force—are on duty every day until Clinton leaves. Manholes miles from where he will walk or drive have been sealed and inspected. The Chrysler dealership Clinton plans to visit on Thursday has been swept for everything including dust. Security is especially tight because Japan is still skittish from last year's poison gas attack on the Tokyo subway system. It is quite a change from the days when the Japanese police thought U.S. Secret Service agents were overdoing it when they forced guests to walk through a metal detector to greet President Ronald Reagan.

COMMUNIST RIVALRY FINDS NO ECHO IN CZECH — PRAGUE—Russians may prefer Communist Party chief Gennady Zyuganov to President Boris Yeltsin in the upcoming Russian elections. Poles and Hungarians have already chosen prime ministers, and even a president, from their former Communist parties. But Czechs — always the quiet revolutionaries of Eastern Europe — remain immune to the region's political nostalgia. More than six years after the "Velvet Revolution" overturned Communist rule in Prague, former Communist politicians and parties remain marginalized on the edges of the political spectrum—and thousands of former Communists remain banned from holding government posts. Communists appear to have no chance of success in the parliamentary elections scheduled for May.

HOUSE DEFEATS TAX LIMITATION AMENDMENT — WASHINGTON—The House Monday weathered a storm of partisan insults and bombast and Monday night defeated a constitutional amendment that would have made it harder to raise federal revenue through taxes. "The Republican leadership believes that they'll get publicity on April 15," said Rep. Anthony C. Beilenson, D-Calif., one of several opponents who charged that the GOP sought to run roughshod over the Constitution. "They're using the floor of the House as a stage. That is a disgraceful misuse of the process." Not so, responded Rep. Scott McInnis, R-Colo., a cosponsor of the measure: "We're talking about taxes, taxes and taxes," he said. "Taxes don't need rain; taxes don't need fertilizer. All taxes need is politicians, and we're just putting a speed bump in the road."

CONGRESS MAY LIMIT DEATH PENALTY APPEALS — WASHINGTON—With little fanfare, Congress is poised this week to approve a fundamental change in the Habeas Corpus Act and to strip federal judges of most of their power to review the cases of state Death Row inmates. The legal changes — long sought by state prosecutors and the families of murder victims — are attached to an anti-terrorism bill that Republican leaders hope to pass by Friday, the one-year anniversary of the Oklahoma City bombing. While the anti-terrorism provisions have divided Republicans and provoked bitter debate, the sweeping changes affecting death penalty cases have won broad support. The authors of the bill say they want to halt the seemingly endless and duplicative appeals for convicted killers.

ELDERLY'S HOSPITAL COSTS DECLINE AFTER 70s — Conventional wisdom says older patients cost more to take care of in the hospital, which would mean the steady aging of the population would keep forcing up the nation's medical bill. Not so, reports a study of 679,000 patients at Massachusetts hospitals. The study, by a team from Harvard Medical School and the Deaconess Hospital in Boston, is based on medical records of all 60-and-older patients discharged from non-federal hospitals in Massachusetts during 1992 or 1993. The findings appeared last week in the Archives of Internal Medicine. Hospital costs peaked for patients in their 70s, then declined progressively for each age decade after that in the Massachusetts study.

Candidates: Voters should prove they care

Student apathy leads to less input into University policies, according to party leaders

By Signe K. Skinion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Students need to vote to lend credibility to the Undergraduate Student Government elections and to show student leaders that they care about campus politics, USG candidates say.

After last year's low voter turnout, Saluki Party and Students First Party leaders agree that the main concern with today's election is to get students to the polling places.

Last year, only 1,490 students out of a possible 18,172 voted in the USG and student trustee elections. Historically, USG elections have only had about a 10-percent voter turnout each year.

Scott Pfeiffer, Saluki Party presidential candidate and current USG chief of staff, said students need to vote today because it will show that USG is a body that should be taken seriously at SIUC.

"The higher the voter turnout, the more credibility USG gains with the administration and the students," he said. "Through voting, students are more likely to go to USG and let them know what the issues are that concern them."

Troy Alim, Students First Party presidential candidate and current USG Evergreen Terrace senator, said his party tried to get a high voter turnout by talking with students and explaining the necessity for voting in the election.

"I think in actively recruiting students to vote and become a part of the USG Senate and the elections, we are creating an interactive and proactive forum," he said. "These elections are an opportunity for student feedback."

Robert Irby, Saluki Party vice presidential candidate and current USG College of Education senator, said it is hard to pinpoint why students normally do not vote in the student elections. However, he said it is a situation that needs to be rectified this year.

"It is not valid for an election when only 1,000 students vote," he said. "But if 9,000 students come out to vote, it would hold more weight."

Irby said students' concerns will not be heard unless they choose who they think is the best candidate.

David Yingren, Students First Party vice presidential candidate and current Thompson Point senator, said USG controls more than $400,000 of student money that is given to registered student organizations. He said students should vote so their money is in the right hands.

In addition to the presidential and vice presidential positions, students will be able to vote for USG senatorial candidates from both parties and for student trustee candidates.

There are a total of 38 senate positions, and any seat not filled by election must later be filled by a vote in the senate. The senate must approve all funding allocations and other USG action.

The student trustee is the only elected member of the SIUC Board of Trustees. It is the student trustees' duty to represent student concerns on the board.

The Undergraduate Student Government is in charge of allocating money to student organizations, such as the Black Affairs Council, and also votes on issues of student concern, such as fee increases. USG acts as a liaison between the SIUC administration and the student body.

Aside from electing candidates, students will also be able to voice their opinions regarding proposed student fee increases by voting in a referendum.

The elections are today from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m., with voting booths in the Student Center, the Recreation Center, Trueblood Hall at University Park and Lentz Hall at Thompson Point.

City Council approves development permits

By Brian T. Sutton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Some actions taken by the City Council Tuesday night are signs of future economic growth and development in Carbondale, one city official says.

The Carbondale City Council approved of a company to build a Ramada Inn Limited. Also approved was a resolution to continue development of a 20-lot residential subdivision.

Mayor Neil Dillard said the market for hotel rooms has remained steady throughout the seasons in the last few years. He said the constant need for hotel rooms represents a continued tourism growth in the Carbondale area.

"The hotel will help fulfill a need in Carbondale," Dillard said. "Also, this sends out word to the market that we are filling rooms and need more."

The Ramada Inn Limited will be constructed on Giant City Road, south of Pier 1 Imports, 1401 E. Main St.

Dillard said another example of growth in Carbondale is the development of a subdivision on Chautauqua Road by Gary Hill of Cherry Hill Realty. The subdivision, called The Villas at Chautauqua, is being built with townhouse-style duplexes.

One duplex has already been built, and the city gave the green light to Cherry Hill Tuesday to build another 19 duplexes.

"There has been a desirable amount of interest for these upscale townhouses, and that is a positive sign of growth," Dillard said.

In other business, the council approved a $31.4 million city budget for fiscal year 1997. The council reviewed the budget at a special City Council meeting April 9. At the meeting, the council removed $8,880 from

Irish Studies focus of weekend conference

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Assistant Features Editor

The Irish were an important voice in defining America because of their direct impact on literature, poetry and art, organizers of the American Conference for Irish Studies said.

A four-day meeting of the 1996 conference, a 1,700-member academic group, will gather at SIUC this weekend. More than 30 workshops will be held to discuss different themes and topics regarding Irish studies, including discussions on Irish literature.

Charles Fanning, an associate professor in English and chair of the SIUC Irish Studies Program, said there is a growing interest in Irish studies because of the amount of Irish descendants in the nation.

"The impact of Irish immigration can be felt deeply in the U.S.," he said. "They have made significant contributions to the history of our nation and the American literature."

Matt Jockers, a graduate student in English from Livingston, Mont., said Irish immigrant writers, such as James T. Farrell, dealt with more human issues. He said Irish immigrants had experienced oppression and poverty in their own country, so their perspective

Irish Americans criticize media coverage of Northern Ireland

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Assistant Features Editor

Media coverage of the problems between Great Britain and Northern Ireland is resulting in increased apathy among Irish Americans in the region toward Irish issues, SIUC Irish Americans say.

Mike McMann, a junior in engineering from Schaumburg and an Irish American, said some of the coverage in America is not relevant to the issues in Northern Ireland. He said gathering small pieces of different news media can lead to an elementary view of the problem.

"Many Irish Americans are apathetic to the issue because they think it's this simple disagreement between Catholics and Protestants and that everything will be worked out," he said. "But, in actuality, this is more on the lines of the American Revolution."

Northern Ireland is a part of Great Britain. Groups such as the Irish Republican Army and the Sinn Fein sometimes use terrorist measures, including bombs, to fight for the independence of Northern Ireland.

Great Britain and Northern Ireland reached a cease-fire agreement 18 months ago, but the Irish Republican Army broke the agreement in February with a series of bombings in London.

Peace talks have been reestablished, but unrest persists.

Edward O'Lay, an SIUC associate professor in history and an Irish American, said most of the news regarding events in Northern Ireland are through London reporting. He said because England is directly involved, the reports can be one-sided.

"I don't want to alienate the British press," he said. "But there is not a lot of American press in Northern Ireland."

O'Day said news about Irish issues lies in more urban settings such as Chicago and Boston, where the Irish-American population is high.

see CONFLICT, page 7

on the American depression was different.

"Before the 1930s, some of the old-stock Americans hadn't suffered like the Irish, Jews and blacks already had," he said. "They (Irish immigrants) were equipped to talk about the problems and write about them artistically."

Fanning said Pulitzer-Prize winning novelist William Kennedy will read from his latest novel,

"The Flaming Corsage," as part of the conference.

Jockers said Kennedy, the author of the modern-day novel "Ironweed," deals with Irish American issues set in Albany, N.Y., the same way as past immigrant writers.

"He does not have the immigrant experience of some of the other writers," he said. "But his style is parallel to them because they are realistic. In one way or another, you can emphasize with the emotions within the story, no matter what the topic."

Kennedy will speak at 8:30 p.m. Thursday in Student Center Ballroom B.

David Koch, director of Special Collections in Morris Library, said SIUC holds a nationally recognized collection of books and manuscripts centered around the Irish Literary Renaissance from 1890-1930.

Koch said original works from William Butler Yeats, John Swinge and a world-renowned collection of works by James Joyce are housed in the collection.

He said the collection attracts a great number of people involved in Irish studies because of the authenticity of the materials.

"Our collection includes some of the most prominent materials from 1890-1930," he said. "They range from historical perspectives to literature and poetry. These writers captured the essence of the time period and are sought after for research projects."

Thompson Woods opportunities must not be ignored

WITH THE TREES THAT WERE DEEMED unsafe having been cut down within the last month in Thompson Woods, now is the time for the question: what next?

In an ideal world, the next step would follow the plan set out in 1994 by the Thompson Woods' Management Committee. And that step is to go into the woods and apply the herbicide Round-Up to the undergrowth plants that threaten younger trees.

Unfortunately, SIUC is not an ideal world, and even though the Monsanto company has pledged 30 gallons of Round-Up to the University, when the herbicide will be used is up in the air.

As absurd as it may seem, a golden opportunity has been dropped in the administration's lap, yet nothing may come of it.

Three things that could hold up the spraying are University budget constraints, a requirement that herbicide be applied by a state licensed pesticide applicator, and timing — the herbicide is effective when used in the spring.

But while the opportunity is not lost yet, the responsibility is now in the hands of the administration — others have done their part.

The SIU Foundation has acquired the herbicide for the University. Student and citizen groups have volunteered time to clear out the undergrowth, plant seedlings and ball stock after the herbicide is sprayed. The Physical Plant has personnel licensed to apply pesticides. Finally, it is still early in the spring, the time when the herbicide should be applied to be effective.

THE ADMINISTRATION NOW MUST FIND THE money to act. For more than 10 years the woods have been in trouble, sitting squarely in the center of the University for all to see, and the administration has put off properly fixing the situation.

Yes, the University is suffering difficult times financially, but surely it can find the $55,000 required for the management committee's plan. But if it cannot, then it should be looking to other avenues such as alumnus donations and the SIU Foundation for funds.

One thing is clear: Thompson Woods is no longer a "natural" area, and allowing nature to take its course is not an option. The University eliminated part of the natural element when it constructed walkways and roads and installed lights in the woods. Now it must take the lead in healing the woods' problems.

But time is running out. Phillip Robertson, chairman of the Thompson Woods Management Committee, said he is pessimistic about the woods' future given the budget situation. Robertson said it is conceivable the administration may decide, in the future, to rework the woods into a lawn atmosphere similar to the rest of the campus.

It is not a good sign for the woods when the chairman of the committee set up by the University to cure its problems is so pessimistic. But Robertson and the committee have done its job, now the administration must do its part. To do otherwise would continue years of mistreatment and neglect for a University landmark.

Commentary

Saluki Party has wrong idea

I suggest that voters take a good look at what is being said by the Saluki Party.

First, examine the party's flier. A component of its platform reads as follows: "Springfest/Halloween: We will fight for the revitalization of revenue building traditional events and make Carbondale fun again."

Now look at what Robert Irby, Saluki Party vice presidential candidate, said in the Daily Egyptian Wednesday: "All you seem to hear any more is what a party school SIU is ..."

The extreme contradiction these statements leads me to believe that the Saluki Party hasn't figured out what its platform is yet, or they are simply being political and are trying to sucker votes from the students.

The fact that part of their platform is aimed at bringing back Halloween and Springfest is extremely scary for those who will be using SIUC degrees to get a job. These events decrease the value of our degrees and make it harder to obtain a job, thus costing us many dollars in starting salaries.

It is absolutely essential that all the serious students of this school vote for Troy Alim (presidential candidate) and his Students First Party and keep Scott Pfeiffer (presidential candidate), his Saluki Party and its platform that degrades the student body out of power.

The Students First platform reads: "We will work to improve the quality of the education at SIU which will enhance the reputation of the University and increase earning power of SIU graduates." They say they will do this by establishing aggressive Registered Student Organization recruitment, not by revitalizing riots that kill our image.

Do what you want! Lower the bar-entry age, remove restrictions on kegs and house parties if you want to make Carbondale fun again. But whatever you do, don't bring back events that degrade the work students have put forth at SIUC by slapping Halloween and Springfest back in the Chicago Tribune.

Nixon tapes rightfully released

The Los Angeles Times

For two crucial years of his presidency, beginning in early 1971, Richard Nixon secretly and routinely taped thousands of hours of conversations with top aides and other officials. The aim of this obsessive bugging, as he subsequently justified it in his memoirs, was to ensure that his time in the presidency would be "the best chronicled in history."

What Nixon did not intend was for the tapes to be made public, least of all in an unedited and — given the vulgarity of much of the language heard on them — unsanitized version.

Neither did he ever imagine that 63 hours of the tapes — once their existence became known and their release ordered by the Supreme Court — would become an instrument of his undoing. The Watergate tapes, dealing with the attempt to cover up White House involvement in a 1972 burglary of Democratic Party headquarters in Washington, helped lead the House Judiciary Committee to approve articles of impeachment against Nixon. Facing the virtual certainty that the Senate would convict him in an impeachment trial, he resigned the presidency on Aug. 9, 1974.

Only now has agreement finally been reached for a phased release of virtually all of the tapes beginning later this year. The first batch — described by the National Archives, the tapes' custodian, as the "abuse of power" series — is expected to deal with such matters as presidential misuse of the CIA and FBI and other illegal activities.

Stephen E. Ambrose, author of a three-volume biography of the 37th president, expects the recordings to "show that Nixon was even (worse) than many thought he was." Ambrose also speaks for the nation's historians and, even more important, for the public interest when he describes the outcome of this long legal battle as "good for America." The idea that a president somehow retains proprietary rights to documents generated during his tenure — and the tapes, bearing directly on Nixon's conduct as president, are unquestionably documentary — is not defensible. Neither is the claim that release of the tapes would violate Nixon's right to privacy. That assertion is especially egregious given the utter lack of respect that Nixon showed for the privacy of others when he made the secret recordings.

In the end, the only argument worthy of any serious consideration is that argument in behalf of supporting open government, of the fullest possible disclosure, of the public's right and in fact need to know. The tapes are likely to reveal much that is ugly and demeaning. They are also likely to provide a picture unparalleled for the candid insights it gives into presidential decision making and behavior.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board.

Letters to the editor must be submitted in person to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 350 words. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Americans need history lessons to view state of Israel properly

The recent human rights violations in Palestine (and I insist on calling it Palestine), which have manifested themselves in the deaths of innocent women and children, should cause all civilized nations to enforce sanctions against the criminal settler government dubbed Israel, much in the same way Great Britain enforced sanctions against Nigeria's terrorist Abacha. There are some basic history lessons that Americans need to know in order to view the "so called" state of Israel in its proper light.

Did you know that in 1917, when Great Britain created "the Palestinian problem," that more than 97 percent of the population was Arab? There were no more than 56,000 Jews in Palestine. Did you know that half of them were recent immigrants seeking refuge there from the decades of persecution in Europe? The Arabs of Palestine owned more than 97.5 percent of the land and the Jews owned 2.5 percent. During 30 years of British occupation and Zionist rule, the Zionists were only able to purchase 3.5 percent of the land despite the encouragement of the British government. Much of this land was "transferred" by the British government, not sold by the Arabs. In layman's terms this is called theft or in formal language, armed robbery. When the Palestinian problem was handed over to the United Nations in 1947, the Jews owned no more than 6 percent of the land nevertheless, the UN recommended the establishment of a "Jewish state." This was no less than an incredible leap of logic, or maybe just bad math.

Perspectives

The Jews, after then maintaining a disproportionate 54 percent of the land, proceeded to occupy 80 percent of the land — all of this having taken place before the withdrawal of British forces in 1948.

I am ashamed at the foreign policy making of the United States that still gives billions of dollars to the illegal government of Israel even after they continue to break international law, which is now somewhat of a joke to the chief arms dealers of the Middle East and Africa (i.e. Israel). In light of all of this, the Zionists still talk about peace and democracy more than anyone in the Middle East.

Now that those historical contradictions are clear, I want to ensure the world that the Zionists are not the rightful owners of the land of Palestine. They have no historical claim because their ancestors are of the Ashkenazi ethnic group whose Jewish dates back only to 740 A.D., in a kingdom called Hazan in eastern Europe ("The 13th Tribe" by A. Kossler). This essentially means that any biblical relation that they claim is unfounded.

Let ignorance, weak thinking, and wrong ideas not prevail among the masses. The human rights struggle world wide cannot be allowed to recede no matter who the parties involved may be. Those interested in this subject should read "Zionism in the Age of Dictators: A Reappraisal" by Lori Brenner.

Enough is enough in Lebanon

The Washington Post

The Israeli government had a goal to make in Lebanon — that it would greatly raise the cost to Lebanon of continued Hezbollah shelling of Israeli towns — and it has made it.

The retaliatory attacks that began last Thursday were continuing Monday, producing a score or more of casualties, destroying valuable economic targets and pushing some hundreds of thousands of Lebanese out of their homes.

In this hard way the Israelis have given the Lebanese authorities full incentive to realize that the previous status quo, which left Hezbollah terrorists as the ultimate arbiters of border peace and security, is no longer acceptable. There is no call to generate more casualties or refugees. This is enough. The Lebanese authorities are, as usual, pleading that their state's weakness renders them unfit to police the Hezbollah bands. They deserve sympathy, but their alibi will not do. It dumps upon Israel a burden of vulnerability and insecurity that no self-respecting state can be expected to carry for another's political convenience. A state cannot simply absolve itself, by its own pronouncement, of its elementary international responsibilities.

Jesse Jackson of my childhood has been elevated to a level of a world leader," Clardy said. "I saw him as one who gave young blacks, like myself, encouragement as we were growing up because we really needed the 'I am somebody,'" he coined Jackson phrase.

Hazel Richardson, a junior in science from Chicago, said Jackson's speech was a special message for students.

"It reached a lot of people, and a lot of people do not have knowledge

"I think he's come away from the bandwagon idea of 'I have to lead all the black people.'" of what they can do as an individual to help society today," Richardson said.

Richardson said the speech motivated her to teach others the importance of voting.

"I will tell my friends and others to register to vote," she said. "Like he said, 'That one vote counts.'"

Dianne Meeks, an activist in politics and community affairs, said she remembers listening to Jackson, on the radio when he was the President of Operation PUSH, an organization she said is aimed at expanding educational and economic opportunities for disadvantaged and minority communities.

She said the issues he has addressed have provided people with the knowledge that concerns America.

"I think because of Jesse, we are more aware of what we need to do and where we need to go," Meeks said. "Jesse is always there when you need him. I think he has been instrumental with leading and with getting the black leaders that we have today."

Buashie Amatokuw, an unclassified graduate student from Chicago, said Jackson spoke on critical issues that affect America.

"I think he's come away from the bandwagon idea of 'I have to lead all the black people,'" Amatokuw said. "He spoke on issues that are real. Basically, the issues that he spoke on are called revolution."

Amatokuw said Jackson must address issues that plague the inner city and not focus on politics as much.

"He has to let people know they have to go beyond the political party," she said.

Woods

Robert Irby, the undergraduate representative to the Campus Environmental Committee, said there are a few more problems that need to be worked out.

"There are more trees that need to be removed and two or three asphalt walkways that need to be worked on, yet," he said.

Bruce Francis, SIUC superintendent of grounds, said there is a greater need for spraying the herbicide in Thompson Woods because of the recent removal of trees.

Francis said the removal of the dead trees has allowed significant light to get to the floor of the woods, and exotic plants such as Japanese Honeysuckle and Creeping Euonymus are spreading.

Francis said the spraying needs to be done in the spring.

"The spraying needs to be started right away during the growing season," he said. "That is the best time to kill the exotic plants."

Francis said the Thompson Woods' Management Committee must now meet to decide whether or not to use the herbicide.

"We are still trying to get past the hurdles on this decision," he said.

Francis also said other people have expressed interest in cleaning up the woods, in addition to the SIUC Physical Plant units that would normally do the job. But he said there could be a problem with volunteers doing the work.

"The University Risk Assessment has to verify that it will be safe for volunteers to work for insurance reasons," he said.

Dan Schroeder, head of the Southern Illinois product development representing Monsanto, said Round-Up, the herbicide donated to SIUC, is the safest herbicide on the market.

"It only controls the plants it is sprayed on," he said. "The herbicide is tightly absorbed by the soil, so there is absolutely no leakage into water sources. It is very safe to the environment and to the user."

Irby said receiving the donation of the herbicide is the first step in getting Thompson Woods back to the way it should be.

"It is a beautiful thing that we have the chance to better the woods," he said. "Thompson Woods is crying for this."

Jackson

Bill Clinton for the November elections.

Jackson criticized Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole and Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich. After the recent death of Commerce Secretary Ron Brown, Jackson said the two Republican leaders offered no condolences to Brown's family, an act Jackson called "unpatriotic."

Toward the end of his speech, Jackson asked how many people were not registered to vote. More than 75 raised their hands. Jackson requested that all of these people come up to the podium. He then started handing out voter registration cards.

When a female asked Jackson for a hug, he asked her if she was registered to vote. When she said no, he said he could not hug her until she was registered.

"This is what is called positive discrimination," he said.

Mitsubishi threatens employees' jobs

Sexual harassment allegations could hurt sales, resulting in job cuts, officials say

The Washington Post

NORMAL, Ill.—Two days after it was named in a huge federal sexual harassment case, top officials at a Mitsubishi Motor Corp. plant here called their employees together and warned that people could lose their jobs if the allegations caused sales to drop.

The Mitsubishi officials said the company would install telephones at the plant that employees could use to make free telephone calls to their congressmen, the president and the national press to tell them the charges were false.

And the company said it will plan an employee march on the Chicago offices of the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which brought the allegations.

The EEOC action "affects their job security," said Gary Schultz, the plant's general counsel, when asked about the meetings. "If people don't like us, they'll show us by not buying our cars."

The employee meetings came amid rising tensions in the plant and the community about allegations that Mitsubishi officials did little to stop pervasive sexual intimidation of at least 300 women employees at its manufacturing plant. There are 700 women among the 4,000 employees at the plant.

Friday night, the day after the employee meetings, the house of one of Mitsubishi's key managers—human resources manager Pat Walter, who had spoken in support of the company at the meetings—burned down.

The cause of the blaze is under investigation, according to Lt. Brett Beyer of the McLean County Sheriff's Police. Beyer said he expects to announce the cause Wednesday. "I'm not going to say it's arson until it's proven to be arson," he said, noting that it started in the garage of Walter's home at night.

"When you enter the (Mitsubishi) building, you can feel the hatred," said one male worker who asked not to be named. "You can cut the tension in there like a knife."

The EEOC says its pastoral setting belies what has been happening inside the barbed wire-ringed plant. After a 15-month investigation, the EEOC last week filed a class-action suit against the company on behalf of an estimated 300 to 500 women the EEOC said suffered the harass-

"This case is of a different order of magnitude than" any other case the EEOC has faced, said John Rowe, director of Chicago's EEOC office.

EEOC officials said they found that women were grabbed on the breasts and buttocks, were addressed by men as "slut" or "whore" rather than their given names and were belittled and demeaned until some quit or were fired.

Mitsubishi attorney Roy F. Davis has asked the court for documents on the women involved in a private lawsuit against the company, including complete gynecological records, information on abortions, divorce records, the names and addresses of people with whom they have cohabited as well as the women's credit card records. Mitsubishi said it would make the documents available to 13 of its top executives.

Following the Thursday employee meetings, threats are being made against women at the plant for suing, said Peoria attorney Patricia Benassi, who is representing the women in the original suit, about half of whom still work there.

Benassi said she has also been told that a scrawled message on the wall of the men's washroom warned in harshly crude language that if a woman caused him to lose his job, he would "go hunting" for women.

Some residents of the community say they are worried about the potential financial impact on the company, which is the region's second-largest private employer and pays higher wages than most any other employer in town. Few people want to be publicly quoted on the issue.

"They make a lot of money," said one local woman who works at a nearby Cracker Barrel restaurant. "Why ruin something that's good for the town?"

The EEOC said it is seeking damages that could cost Mitsubishi as much as $300,000 for each individual. The suit comes as the company is introducing a new convertible targeted to the female market.

A packet of photos is now circulating around town that depict undressed women and men involved in sexual activities at a party. Two workers say the photos were once in a basket in the Mitsubishi lunchroom and freely available. The workers also say some of the men pictured worked at the Mitsubishi plant.

Conflict

lation is larger, and not in regions such as Southern Illinois.

"In areas like Chicago, there is more of a continuing flow of information about issues in Ireland," he said. "People pass news by word of mouth. They keep the information alive."

Tony Blood, a freshman in speech communications from Naperville and an Irish American, said the concern for the issue he felt at home is declining at college because of a lack of accessible information in the area.

"Back home, my family keeps up on current events in Ireland, so I hear about it," he said. "In school, it's harder to follow because the news does not come around as much. It's hard to get concerned unless you stay up with the issues."

However, Matt Cissell, a senior in English from Carbondale and an Irish American, said media coverage is not the only reason for the decrease in sympathy of Irish Americans toward Ireland.

"It's the nature of the journalistic machine to jump issues," he said. "They can't afford to cover the issue every day. If people want to become informed on the issue, sure the media coverage is important. But you need to read back to grasp the issue fully."

But Cissell said Irish Americans must take it upon themselves to look beyond the media to find out the real issues in Ireland.

the Carbondale Convention and Tourism Bureau's funds in the budget.

The council removed the funds because the bureau decided not to move its office to the historic 1903

Passenger Depot, 111 S. Illinois Ave., that is being restored. Council members said because the bureau decided to remain in its office in the University Mall, 1237 E. Main St., it did not need the extra money.

During the citizen comment period of the council meeting, Jeff Shepard, of Carbondale, asked the council to provide funding for the Saluki Express during SIUC breaks.

Shepard said because the SIUC administration does not fund the bus service during breaks, he would like the city to look into funding the service because community members would make use of the service during SIUC intercessions.

"As a handicapped person, I find it hard to get around," he said. "A lot of people need route 1, the route to the mall and the Murdale mall."

Dillard said he would ask City Manager Jeff Doherty to look into the matter and report on it at the next City Council meeting.

The next City Council meeting is scheduled for April 30 at the City Council Chambers, 607 E. College, St. ...

A Dawg's life: Students vie for mascot job

By Mary Beth Arimond
Daily Egyptian Reporter

As the Saluki fight song pounded the floors of Davies Gymnasium Friday and Monday nights, cheerleaders were performing their routines. But off in a narrow hallway just outside the gymnasium, seven Saluki mascots practiced their skits for this year's auditions.

"Work it! Work it! Shake those hips like you are a woman," cried out Mike Keller, a senior in marketing and management from Decatur and the captain of Saluki mascots. "You guys need to exaggerate every motion and gesture you make."

Keller said he was conducting Saluki mascot auditions Friday and Monday nights in Davies Gymnasium.

Keller said it takes hard work and dedication to be a Saluki mascot, as well as a little grief. He said he came from a high school that did not have much school spirit, so when he saw an advertisement for Saluki mascot auditions four years ago, he thought he would give it a try.

He said his family always dragged him to all of the sporting events his siblings were involved in. But as a mascot, he said he provides endless entertainment to the children who are growing up in a similar environment. He said those kids who sit in the same seats every game expect a greeting from him.

Keller said he likes to travel to away games. A memorable one was SIUC's appearance in the 1995 NCAA tournament against Syracuse University in Austin, Texas. He said he could not visit there if he had to pay for the trip himself.

He said during game season, it can be rough being a Dawg.

"The Dawg suit gets about 120 degrees," he said. "I have to put up with the heat and the smell in the suit for at least three hours. I also have to carry a 30-pound bag that holds the Dawg suit as I travel to and from the games."

Keller said getting kicked in the head by teen-agers is not one of his favorite highlights of his job.

"Whenever I jump into the crowd and get carried across the top of their heads, I know there is a chance for injury," he said. "So far, I've never been dropped, but there are times when people set me down on the ground in fear of dropping me. All of a sudden, some teen-agers come by and kick me in the head. Fortunately, there's a helmet inside the mask to protect my head."

He said SIUC does not supply any of the clothing that is seen on the Dawg, such as a basketball jersey. Instead, he said the money comes out of his own pocket. He said students are expected to give up their breaks for the Saluki mascot position, but he has accumulated 12 hours of course credit for his time.

Nancy Esling, spirit coordinator for the Saluki mascots, said students receive two hours of credit in the fall and one in the spring. She said she is a tough grader.

"I have given all grades, including F's, depending if they have met those expectations for being a Dawg," she said.

She said students also receive $125 dollars per semester during their second year and $200 per semester beyond their second year.

"There are very few advantages or paybacks for being a member of spirit groups," she said. "There's no scholarship for these students, and I wish they could be scholarship applicants because of the hard work."

Some students already are getting their taste of hard work as they try on the dawg suit for the first time.

Matt Friedman, an undecided freshman from Northbrook, said the heat in the dawg suit is one of the distractions while performing as a Saluki mascot.

"There is nothing I can do while being in that Dawg suit except wear shorts and a t-shirt," he said. "I'm also having a hard time seeing through the mask because it's designed to make me look down instead of straight ahead. My motions have to be extreme by exaggerating a wave or a foot step."

Esling said her goal for the mascots is to get them visible because SIUC has a unique mascot.

"No one else at a major college has a mascot like the Saluki Dawg," she said. "I want people to identify SIUC as the Saluki, but that can't happen until the mascots make an appearance. We try to do some skit or novelty act to get attention. If they're out there roaming on court, people might miss them."

PATRICK T. GASHON — The Daily Egyptian

Matthew Friedman, an undecided freshman from Northbrook, suits up in the gray Dawg costume at Saluki mascot tryouts Monday at Davies Gymnasium. Friedman said the temperature in the uniform — which reaches 120 degrees at times, according to mascot captain Mike Keller — can be extremely distracting during a performance.

Poll Track compiles information from a growing database that contains more than 500 national and state-level polls. The site is maintained by a former polltracker for the 1992 Republican National Committee. The data is clearly presented and expertly interpreted. Public opinion data is available on a wide variety of political topics, from the presidential campaign to incumbent job ratings.

Visitors to Cybertown will feel they are glimpsing the future, and they will probably be right. This virtual city is huge, but it's no lumbering beast of a server. Traveling from place to place is easy and fun. The artwork of the city's buildings is stunning, creating an exciting science-fiction atmosphere. Cybertown is highly interactive. Free "apartments" are available to anyone. The apartments display resident's current web pages or can create pages at no cost. Once they are familiar with the area, residents can play games, visit or contribute to the art museums or shop in the virtual mall.

Chaos theory has become one of the "most fascinating fields in existence," according to this site's author. But don't take his word for it. Here he provides more than enough background for an investigative visitor to decide his or her self. This is an introduction to chaos theory designed for those who are interested in the subject but don't have mathematical background. Theory is emphasized rather than mathematics, graphics explain the text and a bibliography is provided for further investigation.

GPSC proposal focuses on diversity

By Lori D. Clark
DE Assistant Politics Editor

A Graduate and Professional Student Council proposal will focus on ways the council can consider affirmative action in its policies, council members say.

Affirmative action is a program which requires colleges and employers to admit and hire women and minorities.

H. Paul LeBlanc III, a GPSC representative, said a proposal he wrote asks GPSC to consider how policies the council discusses might impact diversity and equality on campus.

The resolution states, "It is the intent of GPSC to both represent the voices of the graduate student constituency and to be inclusive of all voices of graduate students at Southern Illinois University."

Mark Terry, GPSC vice president of Graduate School Affairs, said the affirmative action resolution is a good idea. He said GPSC wants the resolution to be considered by the various constituency groups at SIUC, such as the Undergraduate Student Government.

"I think it's worthy of consideration by the council," Terry said. "We should consider issues of diversity in business."

Another item being discussed by GPSC is an outreach committee to familiarize graduate students with the campus and campus issues, LeBlanc said. He said the committee would go beyond the orientation handed by the Graduate School and other Graduate School departments.

The Graduate School offers orientation to graduate students on dealing with sexual harassment and multi-culturalism. The other departments put on orientation related to the department for the graduate students.

GPSC President Bill Karrow said the Graduate Orientation Task Force was created to inform GPSC on what it could do for other graduate students to help them adjust to SIUC's campus. He said the task force wants to help make things smoother for the graduate students by providing them information on where to go for different problems.

Terry said the task force is a positive idea because GPSC should be involved in providing services that help all graduate students.

Karrow said GPSC also will discuss the formation of a positive ad campaign. He said the campaign would make students more aware of SIUC Board of Trustees meetings and GPSC meetings. He said this would help make students more aware of issues that the board and GPSC discuss.

GPSC is scheduled to meet at 7 p.m. in the Student Center Mississippi Room.

Moose collisions growing problem in New England

The Washington Post

Collisions with moose, which frequently result in serious head or facial injury and sometimes the death of drivers, are an increasing public-health problem in northern New England, a team of surgeons and wildlife officials reports in the current issue of the Archives of Surgery.

While such accidents may sound like a bad joke, they are a growing threat, reports Eugene Grabowski, a surgeon in Bennington, Vt., who lost a patient in such an accident, known by wildlife officials as a "moose strike."

Most such accidents occur between dusk and dawn from April through October. They are always fatal to the animals, who in adulthood weigh between 1,000 and 1,200 pounds and can trot at 24 to 30 mph. Moose, unlike many other animals, do not instinctively flee when confronted by a threat. "This behavior has survival benefits in interactions with wolves," the authors wrote, "but clearly is not advantageous in encounters with motor vehicles."

To analyze the epidemiology of such injuries, a team of doctors led by Timothy M. Farrell, a surgeon at Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center, analyzed 23 collisions that occurred in New Hampshire and Maine between 1990 and 1994.

Seventy percent of the patients sustained head or facial injuries, while 26 percent suffered upper spinal-cord injuries.

Two of the six with spinal-cord injuries were left quadriplegic and two of the 16 with head injuries died of massive brain trauma; two others suffered permanent brain damage.

While they remain rare, such collisions are growing, Farrell and his colleagues note, because the moose population in northern New England is on the rise.

Police Blotter

University Police

■ Mark O. Bingeldein, 20, of Washington, was arrested at 12:53 a.m. April 13 and charged with underage possession of alcohol on a sidewalk near Mac Smith Hall. He was given a notice to appear in court.

■ A 19-year-old resident of Mac Smith Hall said that sometime between 6:30 a.m. and 7:30 a.m. April 13, someone allegedly took approximately 100 compact discs from his room. There are no suspects.

■ Poncevenus L. Stokes, 24, of Chicago, was arrested at 12:05 a.m. April 14 and charged with driving with a suspended driver's license and driving the wrong way on a one-way street. He also was cited for a seat belt violation. He posted bail and was released.

■ At 12:35 a.m. April 14, two men, ages 24 and 25, reported to police they were battered in lot 102 by four men. The two men did not seek medical treatment. There are no suspects.

■ On April 15, Tara J. Dinn, 29, of West Frankfort, was arrested for driving with a revoked driver's license.

Also arrested was John C. Koczowski, 21, of West Frankfort, for illegal transportation of alcohol. Holly G. McCord, 41, of West Frankfort, was cited for unlawful use of a driver's license.

They were all released after posting bond.

■ Salena R. Strobel, 18, of Carbondale, was arrested for driving with a suspended driver's license on April 15. She posted $100 bond and was released.

Carbondale Police

■ Billy C. McDade, 36, of Carbondale, was arrested and charged with unlawful use of weapons by a felon, resisting/obstructing a peace officer and not having a firearm identification card.

At 11:34 p.m. April 14, a police officer heard a gunshot in the 200 block of North Washington near Tres Hombres.

The officer saw an unidentified man who pointed out McDade, who allegedly was running down the street.

After a chase, McDade was apprehended. A search allegedly found McDade to be in possession of a .25-caliber bullet and an empty magazine for a .25-caliber handgun. A shell casing that matched the bullet was found in the street.

McDade was released from the Jackson County Jail after posting bond April 16.

Police are investigating a residential burglary that occurred between 8:30 p.m. and 10:20 p.m. April 14 in the 500 block of South University Avenue. An apartment was entered through an unlocked window.

Year 2000 could wreak havoc on world's computer systems

Newsday

The year 2000 may not bring the end of the world, as some religious zealots suggest, but it could mean some nasty consequences for the world's computer systems, experts say — at a cost expected to run in the billions of dollars.

That's because the mainframe systems that have been quietly running business and government since the 1970s are about to face what one analyst calls "The Crash of 00." Their software, which sends out Social Security checks, accommodates international financial markets, guides airplanes to their destinations and sets maintenance schedules for train signals — among many, many other things — cannot, in most cases, count past Dec. 31, 1999.

The software designers who wrote the original codes for many of the older computer systems used by governments and industry expected them to be rewritten or replaced long ago, which is why they allocated only two digits in the date field to identify year.

But the basic codes were not rewritten (in typical fashion, government just kept adding on to them), and the initial coding is about to create havoc: When the year 2000 arrives, many government computers will drop back in time to 1900. And that, experts agree, can yield spectacularly wrong answers to questions about dates, ages and interest calculations.

Because date-dependent numbers are frequently chained into other calculations in computer software, experts say virtually any number will be suspect. Other problems: The government will be unable to integrate old and new data, and there are big questions whether solutions developed by different technicians will be compatible.

Tuesday, Rep. Stephen Horn, R-Calif., chaired a congressional hearing in which computer experts from government and business agreed that the issue should be put on the front burner as quickly as possible.

Horn suggested that the cost of fixing just the federally operated systems could run as high as $30 billion, and he said there is almost no money currently budgeted to do the job.

Meanwhile, an aide to Horn noted that a number of government computers exchange information with computers operated by other agencies and by the states. In those cases, he said, agencies will have to coordinate their updates to ensure that the systems continue to communicate.

Others in government say the $30 billion figure isn't rock hard, though they agree the cost will be substantial. "There is no cost estimate yet," an administration official who asked not to be identified said recently. "Industry estimates are pretty widely variable. One thing to find out this summer is what the cost impact will be."

Fixing these problems is not simple and in many cases, data processing experts say they do not even know where to start. The authors of many older programs did not document how they worked, seeing that as the best form of job security.

To fix the problem, experts say, the software has to be patched almost on a trial-and-error basis, making small changes wherever dates appear, then running those changes through elaborate tests to simulate the software's performance on post-2000 dates.

The Mitre Corp., which studied the problem for the Department of Defense, placed the cost of testing software at $8 to $9 per line. To give an example of what that might mean, the Social Security Administration alone has more than 40 million lines of undocumented code in its databases.

It's not clear at this point whether the government can handle the job with existing staff pulled off other projects, or if it will have to bring in consultants.

Meanwhile, experts say that even though personal computers and the Internet will be affected, they appear to be less vulnerable since their software is well documented and of comparatively recent vintage.

Also, these systems are not used generally in critical applications like government computers are, professionals say.

Seahawks owner Behring accused of sexual assault

The Los Angeles Times

MARTINEZ, Calif.—Seattle Seahawk owner Ken Behring was accused of sexual assault and battery in a complaint filed in Contra Costa Superior Court on Monday.

The complaint stated that Patricia Parker, who worked in Behring's Blackhawk, Calif., offices and managed his finances, faced more than two years of sexual innuendo and verbal sexual harassment before Behring allegedly assaulted her in January.

In a prepared statement, Behring, who has expressed a desire to move his team to the Southland, denied the allegations and called the claims "a thinly-veiled attempt at extortion."

In the court document Parker filed, she describes an office atmosphere where "sex is a quid pro quo for employment" and where she was required to hide Behring's sexual liaisons from his wife by changing "soiled linens" and arranging phony hunting trips for Behring and his friends.

This year, the complaint says Behring asked for a New Year's Day hug and then "inserted his tongue in the plaintiff's mouth," "fondled the plaintiff's breasts" and "ground his pelvis into her hip."

Parker was hired as an executive assistant in October 1993 and rose to chief financial officer, where she oversaw Behring's multimillion-dollar investment portfolio, Parker's attorney Jeffrey Lipow said.

Parker, who resigned March 1, also charges Behring regularly hired women to submit to his sexual whims. The complaint states that Behring has been sued three times for similar behavior.

"This guy prides himself on being a great hunter and travels the world hunting and killing animals," Lipow said. "I think he believes he has a hunting license for women that he fancies."

Lipow said while the Blackhawk offices provided a hostile environment, Parker did not quit or file a complaint earlier because she valued the high-paying job that was also high-responsibility and high-profile.

"Sometimes you close your eyes and do what you gotta do to pursue your career," Lipow said.

Magic to disappear for three games after bumping referee

The Los Angeles Times

INGLEWOOD, Calif.—Magic Johnson, apparently paying for the actions of others as well as his own, Monday was suspended for three games and fined $10,000 by the National Basketball Association for bumping referee Scott Foster during Sunday's game against the Phoenix Suns, the third time the NBA has disciplined a player within a month for making contact with a referee.

The Los Angeles Laker star not only accepted the penalty — the suspension will cost him $30,487.80 a game and $102,463.40 in all, counting $1,000 for Sunday's ejection — but agreed with it.

"I apologize to Scott Foster, to all the NBA referees and to the league, and I hope they know, as I do, that the incident was accidental and that I respect them and their professionalism in what is a very difficult job," he said.

"Hopefully, other players will learn not to even put themselves in a position to make contact with a referee when arguing calls in the future."

That won't begin to happen until at least Sunday, when Johnson returns for the regular-season finale at Portland after missing games at Dallas Tuesday night, at San Antonio Thursday and against Minnesota Saturday at the Forum.

"At least that tender left Achilles' tendon is sure to get the rest it needs."

But even then the controversy

"I apologize to Scott Foster, to all the NBA referees and I hope they know ... that the incident was accidental."

*Magic Johnson
Lakers' forward*

won't truly be behind them, not with Nick Van Exel still out for that last game while serving his seven-game suspension for a forearm shove of referee Ron Garretson five days before Johnson's out-of-character display. In the meantime, the Lakers will have to go at least the 11 days leading to the playoffs, and maybe 12 days, without two of their top six players in the lineup.

Both are allowed to practice and attend game day shoot-arounds as long as they are out of the arena at least two hours before tip-off.

But even the best scrimmage is no match for an NBA game in speed and physical play, so getting in sync will have to happen during Game 1 of the playoffs.

"These incidents are regrettable and have been a distraction from what I believe the fans really want to see — the basketball action on the court."

"Our focus now is on getting our entire team back together and getting ready for the playoffs."

The incident occurred with 4:13 remaining in the second quarter of the Lakers' eventual 118-114 victory.

Johnson became clearly upset after missing a twisting layup when no foul was called on the Suns' A.C. Green. Perhaps already agitated about having been whistled for two fouls in the previous two minutes, he yelled at Foster for an explanation.

Getting no response, Johnson walked about 10 feet, to near the sideline across from the Laker bench.

Saying later he had wanted to get in front of Foster in another attempt to get the attention of the second-year referee, Johnson bumped his chest into Foster's right shoulder.

He was immediately ejected. Johnson has grown more embarrassed with each passing hour.

He first claimed that Foster had initiated the contact by stopping short, then saw a replay while watching the game in the Laker locker room and summoned an NBC reporter to correct himself and plead guilty.

After the game, he conceded that his actions had been wrong, especially since he had criticized Van Exel only five days earlier.

He took the blame but also suggested that Foster should also accept some for refusing to give Johnson the respect of a veteran and acting team captain.

Extra innings

who defeated SMSU's Olympic pitcher Jarrod Mays last Friday 6-4, came on in the tenth inning, and blew past the Governors' attack in a dominating performance in two innings of relief work.

Callahan has commented the entire season that Frasor was supposed to be his closer, but the inconsistency of the starting pitching this season forced him into the starting rotation.

"He did a great job, and once we went into extra innings I kind of liked our pitching situation," Callahan said.

"When Piazza finished his last inning, he came in and said his arm was dragging a little bit, but Frasor was in good shape.

"He threw Friday, and today would have been a good work day for him anyway."

Russell's game-clincher in the bottom of the 11th came off Austin Peay's fourth pitcher of the afternoon, and Russell said he was looking for the fastball, which he hit for a towering shot, with a new pitcher in the game.

"It was a fastball inside, just like his last two (pitches). "I was hoping he would stay with it, and he did," Russell said.

"I knew it was going when I hit it, but I didn't know if it was going to be fair or foul. It curved around the pole, and they called it. I'm not going to argue."

Most of all, this mid-week victory will give the Salukis a charge going into a four-game series at Wichita State University (27-5, 9-2), which is ranked third in the nation.

"It's important, and I said the same thing last weekend when we went to Mizzou (April 4, and defeated them 18-8)," Callahan said. "Some people don't look at mid-week games as being very meaningful, but a win is a win and anytime you can attain a little momentum going into a weekend it's good."

not to put too much stock in pre-season polls — this year being no exception — and feels any team can win the Valley.

"I knew at the beginning of the year it was going to be up for grabs," she said.

"Whoever is up and whoever is performing is going to win. Right now there is a lot of jumping around.

"In about two more weeks there will be less jumping around and somebody is really going to come to the top."

While any team can emerge as the dominant one in the league, Brechtelsbauer feels that the Redbirds, who have taken 10 out of their last 14 games, are the toughest team in the conference at this point in the season.

"Illinois State has a tremendous amount of talent and depth, and they have got a lot of experience," she said.

"They are a strong team and have got a good ball club."

Southern may not have earned the respect it deserves from the coaches around the league, but its bats have certainly earned the respect of opposing pitchers lately.

As a team, the Salukis are second in the conference in batting with a .312 average.

The Redbirds remain just ahead of the Salukis with a .313 average, followed by SMSU at .308.

"We seem to be swinging the bats well, and we hit the ball well enough to win and score runs," Brechtelsbauer said.

"The bats have to keep coming through in key situations."

Senior center fielder Christine Knotts has proven to be a major force in Southern's lineup, and a major headache for opposing pitchers.

Knotts leads both Southern, and the MVC in batting, and is hitting a sound .460 (40-67) through 29 games this season.

Knotts said she attributes her ability at the plate on remaining focused and treating every at bat differently.

"We seem to be swinging the bats well, and we hit the ball well enough to win and score runs. The bats have to keep coming through in key situations."

Kay Brechtelsbauer
Saluki softball coach

"Each and every at bat is different," she said.

"I just go up there focusing on helping the team rather than helping myself. I just want to go up there each and every time and get a hit, and score some runs."

Equally impressive are junior third baseman Becky Lis' statistics. Lis is batting .402, and has collected 33 hits in 82 trips to the plate. Lis leads the team in doubles, with 13, and is tied for first in the Valley for two-baggers.

Defensively, Southern's pitching has remained steady throughout the season, despite a brief struggle against the Redbirds Sunday.

Junior hurler Jamie Schutteck has been Southern's strongest arm on the hill thus far.

Schutteck leads the team with a 10-5 record, and her mere 1.12 ERA is the second best in the Valley.

As a team, Southern posts a 1.56 ERA.

However, Brechtelsbauer said SIUC's pitching needs to get stronger as the season nears its end.

"The statistics are purely based on ERA, and that doesn't necessarily tell you when hits are given up," she said.

"What we've not done as well as we need to is pitch our way out of problems."

"We've gotten ourselves into problems by way of base runners getting on through walks, errors or base hits and we have not pitched our way out of that.

"Our pitching, in my mind, has to pick up."

Southern's pitchers gave up 12 hits, and walked five in its double-header against the Redbirds Sunday.

In the second game against ISU, freshman pitcher Beth Fields pitched three solid innings before giving up four earned runs in the fourth.

Fields is 2-0 in five appearances on the mound and has a team high 6.00 ERA.

Fields said her struggle on the mound Sunday was more mental than physical.

"I think, on my part, I need to get tougher and work more on mental toughness and endurance," she said.

"The last game I started, they hit me more because they got my timing down."

Fields may not have gotten the win, but Brechtelsbauer said she is pleased with how the young freshman performed.

"I thought Beth did a good job," she said.

"This is the first time she pitched a number of innings, and really did pretty well, then got tired. They weren't hitting her all that hard, but she was getting behind the batters."

All-in-all, the Saluki squad is pleased with its efforts so far this season, and is happy to be where it is in the Valley rankings.

"We're really happy," Knotts said.

"I definitely had high hopes for the season, and I know that we can keep getting better. I hope we just keep going up from here."

Fields said the squad has to keep up its current pace to stay in contention for the Valley.

She said the team is having fun right now, which only serves to ease some of the pressure involved.

"We are very content with being 6-2. We would have liked to have beaten ISU, but we will see them again later on," she said.

"We are having a lot of fun right now and we need to keep hitting and moving forward."

"The more we are winning the more fun we are having, and I see us gelling together more and more."

Bench: The Lakers had versatile Keith Erickson, sharp-shooting Flynn Robinson and bruising Pat Riley.

"But Chicago could counter with Toni Kukoc, currently in the starting lineup as a forward, Steve Kerr, a suitable shooting match for Robinson, bomb for bomb, and Bill Wennington and Jud Buechler, who supply strength up front.

Coaches: Both Sharman and Phil Jackson are masters of psychology, excellent at innovation and skilled at using a soft but firm manner to keep their superstars in line.

One swing impeaches Governors

Mike Russell's 11th-inning, two-out solo shot cinches SIUC win

By Chad Anderson
DE Sports Editor

It may have taken 11 innings, but the Saluki baseball team defeated Austin Peay State University in style Tuesday with a home run by senior designated hitter Mike Russell in extra innings.

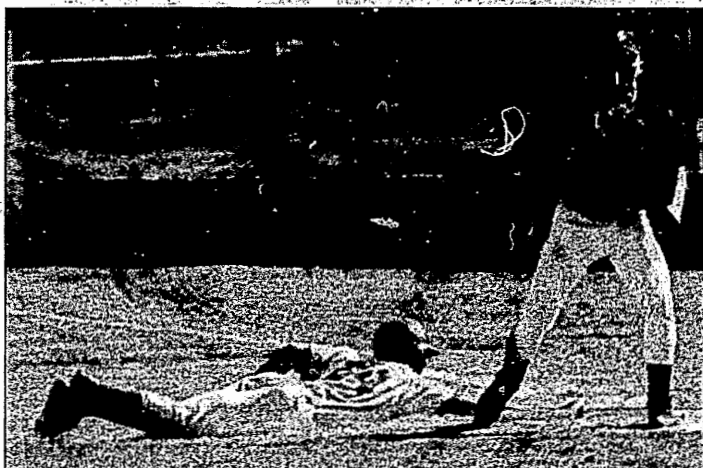

The game started off with Saluki senior hurler Greg Harrier plunking two Austin Peay State batters in the first inning, and surrendering one run, but the Salukis (20-16) seemed to take command of the game early by scoring three runs in their half of the first.

The beginning of the game was a sign of things to come, as both clubs traded runs in the early innings in a wild game.

Aside from Russell's game-winner, senior left fielder Tim Kratochvil and junior second baseman Jay Mansavage both hit home runs in the early stages of the game to equalize the Governors' attack, which included a three-run home run in the third inning.

Mansavage's two-run blast in the first inning was not his only fireworks of the day. He also drove in freshman third baseman Jerry Harston to tie the game at six in the bottom of the ninth with two outs.

"I knew he was going to try and keep it away from me, and not give me anything to hit," Mansavage said. "He threw a change-up first pitch, then came back with a fast-ball down the middle on the second pitch, and I hit it. It wasn't really much."

Saluki first baseman Aaron Jones, a junior from Newport, Mich., attempts to pick off an Austin Peay runner early in Tuesday afternoon's contest at Abe Martin Field. The Dawgs defeated the Governors 7-6 in 11 innings on a Mark Russell home run.

SIUC baseball coach Dan Callahan said Mansavage, Kratochvil and Russell all struggled last weekend in the team's series at Southwest Missouri State University, and it was nice to see the three players have a decisive effect on this game.

"We had a couple guys that struggled this past weekend, namely Russell, Mansavage and Kratochvil, and they were three guys Hendu (SIUC hitting coach Ken Henderson) spent some time with yesterday, as far as just getting some extra hacks in," Callahan said. "I'd say between the three of them, they had a pretty good day for us."

After Harrier plunked his third batter of the game in the fourth, junior pitcher Mike McConnell came on in relief, and held the Governors scoreless through seven when sophomore David Piazza came in to close the door on Austin Peay.

Piazza did his job in holding the Governors scoreless, but the Salukis could only manage enough dramatics to tie the game in the ninth. Freshman pitcher Jason Frasar,

Salukis' MVC schedule about to heat up

By Michael DeFord

Like all coaches, SIUC softball coach Kay Brechtelsbauer would prefer to have an unblemished league record, but considering the stiff competition in the Missouri Valley Conference, Brechtelsbauer and her squad remain content with where the Salukis are right now.

"I would prefer to be 7-1, but I think we're off to a good start at 6-2," Brechtelsbauer said.

Illinois State University swept the Salukis in a double-header Sunday to take over the Valley's No. 1 spot, while Drake University enters this week's standings at No. 2.

Southern's 6-2 league record is good enough for the No. 3 spot in the standings, which sits pretty well with Brechtelsbauer.

"The only team that has defeated us at this time is the team that was picked well ahead of us for No. 1 in the Valley," she said. "We started off by winning our first six, and that eases things a bit. But we have to keep winning or we will put ourselves into a pressure situation at the end."

With solid performances on the mound, as well as at the plate, Southern has managed to become a formidable threat, and has opened some eyes around the conference, while staying in contention for the No. 1 spot.

In this season's MVC preseason coaches poll, Southern was picked to finish fifth in the Valley's final standings, while ISU was picked to finish first, followed by Wichita State University, Drake and Southwest Missouri State University.

However, with 28 years of coaching experience under her belt, Brechtelsbauer has learned

The Race to '70

Bulls have won 70th, but are not NBA's best

The Los Angeles Times

Which team would win a series between the 1971-72 Los Angeles Lakers and the 1995-96 Chicago Bulls? Bill Sharman, coach of that '71-72 club, analyzes the classic series that can never happen. The edge, however, is our call, not Sharman's.

CENTER

Wilt Chamberlain vs. Luc Longley

Sharman: "If Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen tried to come down the middle, they would find a lot of the shots they normally make blocked. And that's where the Bulls get a lot of their shots."

Edge: Chamberlain. By lots. If the other man in the middle isn't a dominating figure like Bill Russell, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar or Shaquille O'Neal, there's no discussion.

POWER FORWARD

Happy Hairston vs. Dennis Rodman

Sharman: "Neither could shoot from the outside, but both were strong on the inside. Happy worked well with Wilt and could also trigger the fast break."

Edge: Rodman. Hairston had one of his best years, but Rodman has been having those for some time now. Beyond the hair, the rings and the tattoos is the best rebounder in the game.

SMALL FORWARD

Jim McMillian vs. Scottie Pippen

Sharman: "Pippen can do more things. That's for sure. McMillian's strength was his consistency. He was great at finishing the break, but he was not as fancy or as flashy as Pippen."

Edge: Pippen. He is probably better than anyone in the game at his position. He would certainly be better than McMillian.

POINT GUARD

Jerry West vs. Michael Jordan.

Sharman: "I would pay to see that one. Jordan is the better athlete. He can jump higher than West and has a greater variety of shots. But nowadays, Jerry would have the SIUC sophomore high jumper Neophytos Kalogerou was named the Missouri Valley Conference Most Valuable Field Athlete of the Week. Kalogerou provisionally qualified for the NCAA Outdoor Championships by clearing a height of 7-2 1/4 at the Tyson Invitational in Fayetteville, Ark., Saturday. Kalogerou's leap is also the best in the MVC this season and sets him fourth on SIUC's All-Time Top 10 list.

SIUC junior Aaron Jones is the Missouri Valley Conference baseball Player of the Week. In five games last week, Jones batted .524 (11-for-21) with four extra-base hits and 10 RBI's.

Perhaps RBI's best performance came against nationally ranked University of Missouri April 10, when he went 3-for-6 with five RBI's and a grand slam home run.

The Chicago Cubs will have two additions to their current roster. Third baseman Dave Magadan, who underwent surgery March 11 on his hand, was activated after Monday night's game and made his return Tuesday against the Cincinnati Reds. Pitcher Steve Trachsel also made his return to the Cubs Tuesday after spending the last two weeks with the AA Orlando team.

The Chicago Bulls became the first team in NBA history to win 70 games in a regular season with an 86-80 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks on Tuesday night.

The previous record of 69 wins was held by the 1971-72 Los Angeles Lakers.

The Bulls, now 70-9, have three games remaining on their schedule to try and extend the record.
