Student Trustee Race

Trustee hopefuls compare records

DAN CRAFT
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Experience is the buzzword for Wednesday's student trustee election as few differences in platforms have candidates Ben Syfert and Connie Howard turning to their records as proof of their qualifications.

In an election that has been overshadowed by Carbondale City Council and mayoral elections as well as Undergraduate Student Government and Graduate and Professional Student Council elections, both student trustee candidates have been knocking on residence hall doors, shaking hands and encouraging students to turn out and vote Wednesday.

Howard and Syfert are both vying for the position of SIUC student trustee. The student trustee is the student representative to the SIU Board of Trustees.

VOIE
• The Student Trustee election is Wednesday. Polling areas are located at the Student Center, the Recreation Center and Lentz and Trueblood dining halls.

The SIUC student trustee represents the Carbondale campus as well as the SIU School of Medicine in Springfield. SIU-Edwardsville is represented by its own student trustee. The student trustees are elected by popular election, while the other board members are appointed by the Illinois governor.

The student trustee is a full member of the board and can vote on all matters with the exception of faculty tenure and any matters that constitute a conflict of interest.

One SIU student trustee is allowed a binding vote on the board, while the other student George Clinton and P-Funk funkyed it up for a crowd of 8,000 Saturday afternoon in the parking lot of the SIU Arena. People of all ages from around the region and the country enjoyed the soulful sounds despite chilly temperatures.

Chris Kennedy and I were not sure of the exact time we passed through the turnstiles of Lot 56 but realized its irrelevance when a member of P-Funk informed the crowd it would remain 4:20 all afternoon long.

We were bundled up, struggling against the seemingly below-freezing wind that tore through the huddled mass of 1,000 that was turning faces fuchsia and fingertips numb.

The vast lot appeared empty, and the turnout looked bleak, but we could see groups of people heading for the entrance.

Dan Nolte, a volunteer wearing the signature yellow Student Programming Council t-shirt, worried little about the early lack of a crowd nor the threat of disorder.

"I expect it to be a good show," said Nolte, a senior in marketing from Brussels. "There shouldn't be any problems. [Right now] there's a few thousand — I'd say about four — and we're expecting up to seven thousand."

During the opening set, fans stood in bunches and watched as people slowly seeped into the concert domain like water drenching a towel. I was standing behind an older man sitting in a green and white lawn chair who was obviously immersed in the music. Not to disturb his groove, I waited until the song ended to approach him.

His name was William Morgan, and he was an original fan. For a few moments, I believed he could show me the true essence of the P-Funk experience.

"I was a big fan when they first came out back in the '70s," Morgan, a Carbondale resident, said. "I saw them about two years ago. They sound good — they sound great. Oh god, they're getting ready to roll."

His mind turned to the music, and my eyes searched for Kennedy. Easily spotted,

USG candidates engage in heated radio debate

DAN CRAFT
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Though USG presidential candidates remained mostly civil at an election debate at the Lesar Law School Auditorium Thursday evening, tempers flared later in the evening during a broadcast on a local radio station.

The USG presidential party candidates traded barbs on the airwaves on local public station WDBX 91.1 FM.

Allegations of misappropriation of funds and forgery brought against Presidential candidate Sean Henry last spring caused a heated exchange between Millennium Party presidential candidate Joe Sanchez and Select Party representative Jodi Golden during the WDBX forum.

During his bid for USG president last year, Henry and former Saluki Party running mate Greg Akers came under fire after allegations were raised that Henry and Akers forged signatures on documents in an attempt to transfer $300 from the account of Registered Student Organization Blacks Involved in Business into the Saluki Party election account.

During a USG Internal Affairs Committee hearing, Henry denied that any such transaction took place. Akers was not present at the hearing.

The issue was brought up during the broadcast by Select Party member Miki Nottke. According to Nottke, no embezzlement took place.

Henry was unable to attend the radio forum because of prior commitments but did communicate via phone with Nottke and Golden.

During the USG debate at the Law School, the candidates highlighted several issues they felt key to the student body.

Sanchez said that if elected he would focus on a number of initiatives that would aid recruitment and retention, including the "Communiversity" program, a tenant bill of rights, 24-hour bus service, the abolishment of Select 2000 and an increased number of

Engineers place third in canoe race

FRANK KLIMAS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The spirit of competition could not be dampened at Campus Beach Saturday despite the blustery winds and cold water.

The SIUC Concrete Canoe Team took third place overall of nine competing entries in Saturday's American Society of Civil Engineers Midwest Regional Concrete Canoe Race. Campfires and huddled masses cluttered the beachfront as civil engineering students from as far away as Oklahoma struggled for warmth after braving the chilly Campus Lake waters. Some teams even roasted hot dogs and marshmallows as the competitions progressed slowly through the late morning and early afternoon.

SIUC's entry, "Grease Lightning," placed second in both design and in appearance.

The sturdy craft's success was because of its solid design.

"Our canoe had no problems," said Tabitha Poggenpohl, SIUC's canoe team captain. "The strength was incredible."

Team members anticipating a ride on the frigid lake were confident they would stay dry. "It won't be too bad," said Kelly Kuntzman, a sophomore in civil engineering from Taylorville. "We're not worried — ours sticks out of the water more [than other boats]."

But after the first race, team member Zeb Hoerbert, a junior in civil engineering from Decatur, immediately raced to the team's campfire after emerging from the boat.

"When that water gets in that boat, you just get soaked," Hoerbert said.

Bridgebuilders span a win

FRANK KLIMAS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC's Steel Bridge building team took third place overall in Thursday's American Society of Civil Engineers regional competition at the SIU Arena.

The civil engineering student team erected a 17-foot steel bridge capable of withstanding 2,500 pounds of weight in eight minutes and 43 seconds, which is 20 seconds off the team's best time.

Team captain Chris Stine, a senior in civil engineering from St. Elmo, was pleased with the teamwork and also the quality of construction and design of the bridge.

"We make major improvements this year," Stine said. "Next year we'll be looking for first or second place."

SIUC was beat by two rival competitors, SIU-Edwardsville, which took second place, and University of Missouri at Rolla, which won first place overall.

Three of the 12 competing bridge teams were disqualified because of poor design. Out of those three, two bent too much when weight was applied and one broke completely under the strain.

According to Stine, lightness was the team's best category. The steel bridge weighed only 69 pounds and came in second place.

"Rolla's bridge was one pound lighter," Stine said. "Last year's bridge was 190 pounds."

Prizes donated to increase Greek voter turnout

TIM CHAMBERLAIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A plan involving a pool table and free parties designed to improve greek voter turnout in Tuesday's election was not intended to show support for a particular candidate, the plan's organizer said.

Connie Howard, the program's coordinator, said her opposition to Select 2000 inspired her to create an "incentive plan" to increase the greek vote and to demonstrate to the SIUC administration that greeks are not apathetic.

The program was designed to give prizes to the fraternities and sororities with the largest voter turnout. One of the top prizes for participating fraternities is a pool table donated by Connie Howard's uncle, Carl, who owns a bar in Indiana. Among the top sorority prizes is a computer, which Howard is donating herself with help from her brother.

Select 2000 is a program intended to revitalize the greek system through provisions such as higher grade standards, community service hours and alcohol-free fraternities and sororities.

"From the very beginning, I have been in opposition to Select 2000," Howard said. "My commitment to the opposition of Select 2000 has not been a silent issue."

Although Howard is the Undergraduate Student Government city affairs commissioner, she said she took this program on because she is the house mother for the Theta Xi fraternity. She said the plan would be a good opportunity to show Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger that greeks were concerned citizens and that their views should be heard.

As a junior in high school, Kevin Kurtz could no longer disguise the identity he had been hiding since the eighth grade. After years of confusion and self-doubt, Kurtz was finally ready to tell his friends he was gay.

"I thought, 'There's nothing I can do about it,' and as much as I wanted to be straight, I knew I wasn't," said Kurtz, an undecided sophomore from Lake Forest. "Luckily, I had friends around me that were, really supportive."

But during Kurtz's coming-out pilgrimage, not everyone was as accepting as he had hoped.

After returning home one day, Kurtz found his father burning private letters written by Kurtz's companion. Kurtz was kicked out of his house and forced to stay with a friend for two weeks.

According to Kurtz, his father hired a private investigator to search for his friend, who was illegally harboring a minor. When they were found, Kurtz was handcuffed and taken to a Catholic hospital intended to rid him of impurities.

But it was the church that anchored him to Unconscious man arrested for alleged threat on woman

Jackson County deputies arrested a Carbondale man when he was found intoxicated and asleep after threatening a woman Friday afternoon in the 200 block of Warren Road.

A Carbondale woman called authorities and said Roger M. Turner, 34, was in her Carbondale residence at 5:30 p.m. although he had been prohibited from being there by the courts. The bond violation was in relation to earlier domestic problems between the two, police said.

After speaking with the victim, deputies went to the residence and found Turner unconscious. He was taken into custody and transported to the Jackson County Jail. Turner is being held at the jail awaiting an appearance before a judge.

Thieves leave without loot in attempted burglary

Someone believed to have been trying to rip off computers from computer labs at Arkansas State University's business building grew impatient with the tactics he or she had chosen.

According to The Herald, housekeepers on March 29 reported finding on the floor a few pins from hinges on doors leading to labs. It appeared that the person or people trying to get through the doors were either impatient with all of the unscrewing that needed to be done or scared away by something else.

No property damage was noted — unlike a March 26 incident in which thieves took three computers and a monitor valued at a total of $6,300 from the business building after breaking in and entering.

Paul Simon's daughter to shave hair for good cause

BALD? Sheila Simon aims to gather $1,000 for cancer research.

DANA DUBRIWAY
 STUDENT AFFAIRS EDITOR

Mary Hughes reaches up to her short blond hairdo and without any persuasion, a clump of hair falls into her hand.

"I'm still reeling from the diagnosis," Hughes said. "There's shock and sadness every time you hear the word cancer — it's devastating."

DONATIONS:

• Those interested in donating to the research of cancer treatment should make checks payable to the American Cancer Society and send them to the SIU School of Law, mail code 6821.

"There's so many advances in treatments but still we all grew up with a fear of cancer."

On March 17, Hughes was diagnosed with lung cancer, and on March 31, she underwent her first chemotherapy treatment.

At 41, Hughes has been forced to learn the value of life, love and friendships.

"Before this happened to me, I took for granted that I had terrific friends, terrific family, and when this happened, all the support I got from those resources just amazed me," she said. "I'm much more thankful and cognizant how important friends and family are to get you through."

As the victim witness advocate for the Jackson County States Attorney's office, Hughes displays a strong will to assist others. It was the display of self-sacrifice for those falling victim to violent crimes that inspired Sheila Simon to aid Hughes in her time of tribulation.

Simon, staff attorney for the domestic violence legal clinic at the SIU School of Law, has been collecting donations for the American Cancer Society.

Inspired by Hughes, Simon is aiming to accumulate $1,000 by Thursday, and the percentage collected will determine the amount of hair she will shave from her head. Thus far, she has raised $415.

"This gives us a way to turn something negative into something positive," said Simon. "Anytime a young person faces something like this, it's really hard."

"There's something I can do to raise money for the American Cancer Society, to move in a positive direction, to prevent this from happening to other people."

The National Cancer Institute reported that since 1990, about 11 million cancer cases have been detected and about 1,228,600 new cancer cases are expected to be diagnosed in 1999.

Cancer is the second leading cause of death in the U.S., exceeded only by heart disease.

This year about 564,800 Americans are expected to die of cancer — more than 1,500 people a day.

Hughes, however, believes her endurance will remain strong, and when she overcomes this battle she will work for others like her.

"After I have gone through this, after I have survived this, I would certainly make myself available for anyone who is going through this," Hughes said.

"By education, I am a social worker, and I would certainly volunteer my time to helping others go through this. It helps, so you know you're not alone."

The "Grease Lightning" had a successful ride, explained Hoerbert.

"The ride was smooth," he said. "There were no problems. It rode like a regular canoe."

The overall first place winner was Oklahoma State University. The OSU boat appeared to have a hull of glass instead of concrete.

The Oklahoma team has raced concrete canoes since 1970. Saturday marked OSU's fourth consecutive regional win, and the team continues on to the nationals to compete with 19 other teams in Alaska.

As each of the colorful canoes raced by the beach, some almost completely underwater, teammates on shore yelled school cheers and spirited hullybaloo to their water-borne counterparts.

Kansas State University even ferried two cheerleaders to one of the swim floats off-shore to lead the shouting.

There were five total events in the race: a men's and a women's distance race, a men's and a women's sprint and a four-person, coed sprint. "Grease Lightning" took second in the women's Poggenpohl, a sophomore in civil engineering from Raymond, said that all of the last minute preparations paid off.

"We were up until about 3 a.m. the other night, and we were up till one [Friday] night putting the last final touches on the boat," Poggenpohl said.

"We've been practicing rowing the past few days, and trying to find people to row against."

By the end of the day, most boats were patched with Duct Tape from the stress and the wear and tear of the race, but one of the boats arrived cracked and broken after the team's trailer was in an accident.

The University of Nebraska's "Yellow Submarine" was rescued by Poggenpohl's team.

"We went back to our lab and we gave them some mortar mix so they could patch it up," she said.

"They touched it up and put Duct Tape on it."

Despite Duct Tape's utilitarian appearance, it is a common repair kit item in concrete canoe racing, Poggenpohl explained.

"By the end of the race a lot of canoes will have Duct Tape on them because they get weaker and weaker, and some will be broken," she said before the race.

"We forgot ours so I'm hoping everything will turn out OK."

Pastor enflames, enlightens students outside campus building

Story by BURKE SPEAKER

A crowd of faces with expressions ranging from anger and confusion to understanding gathered outside of Parkinson Laboratory Friday as a pastor shouted scriptures from the Bible.

At about 11:45 a.m., religious beliefs were debated as Neil Kring, a Christian pastor at Ball State University's Abundant Life Church, preached the Bible's messages.

"You people are looking to yourself for the answers when you should be looking to God," shouted Kring, a former member of SIUC's Great Commission Ministries.

Kring, an SIUC alumna, was in Carbondale visiting friends Friday when he decided to organize a spiritual discussion on topics including creation and humanity's sins.

Kring preached his message to a crowd of more than 30 spectators until about 4 p.m. While some of the students listened intently to the speech, the majority spoke out against the persistent preacher.

"It makes me very angry that we come to school and there is this guy freaking out and causing a scene," said Tavia Shepherd, an undecided freshman from Kildeer. "It's harassing, and it gets nothing accomplished."

"He expects a big reaction and just wants to fight with us."

Craig Roush, also a former member of SIUC's Great Commission Ministries, traveled to SIUC with Kring. Roush said that Kring's goal was not to force his opinion on students but rather to create an opportunity for spiritual discussion.

"Neil really wants to get students to open up to Jesus Christ by creating a spiritual atmosphere," Roush said.

The atmosphere was hardly spiritual when a heated discussion, regarding homosexuals enflamed the crowd. Kring stated that the Bible and Jesus Christ condemn the "sinning" homosexuals.

"God will judge and condemn all those who are sinners," Kring said after reading a verse from the Bible.

The verse Kring read stated that all sinners, composed of liars, cheaters, stealers and homosexuals, will ultimately suffer in the fiery reaches of Hell.

"Who are you to judge anyone?" shouted one angry student. "Are you Jesus Christ? Are you God?" Rob Korsberg, a senior in political science from Rockford, also disagreed with Kring's message.

"He's trying to teach toleration, but he's actually subjecting them to degradation," Korsberg said.

"He's judging people just like the Bible tells us not to."

Shina London, a senior in theater from Chicago, said Kring's message about the evils of homosexuality was correct.

"I believe it's wrong because God said homosexuality was wrong. I follow that," London said. "Homosexuality is an evil spirit that can be removed if asked."

Kring was ultimately forced to move his religious messages to the Free Forum Area after an SIUC police officer said Kring's actions may cause a disturbance.

"It's fine that he's [in the Free Forum Area] as long as there is no disturbing behavior," SIUC police officer John Allen said.

Kring was previously at SIUC last May and preached the same message to a crowd of students.

Many students who lingered around for the majority of the forum gave spectators the opportunity to debate their beliefs.

John Campbell, a sophomore in political science and radio/television from Fairfield, said witnessing people preaching about religious beliefs is all part of the campus experience.

"This is the first time I've seen anything like this," Campbell said. "It's good for people to discuss their differences with each other."

there he was — talking to a giant water bong.

The bong was a costumed Dave Jensvold, a sophomore in finance. He was trying to use the guise to entice Clinton.

"I love George Clinton," Jensvold said. "I expect to get fucked up."

"Do you expect any problems?" Kennedy asked.

"I'm not going to cause any problems," Jensvold said. "I just want to get up on stage if I can help it and get funky with George."

Leaving Kennedy to the bong, I wandered to a camouflaged water tank sitting in the center of the lot that read "Potable Water" in black stenciled letters. I approached an SPC volunteer wearing a Bulls ear warmer who had no idea what it was doing there but humored me by saying it was a keg of beer. Something about the camouflage of the tank coupled with USG political propaganda made me uneasy and reminded me of the crisis in Kosovo.

Kennedy had the same thoughts. "This is George Clinton."

Kennedy said, "Peace and love for everyone, but the politicians are still here handing out their leaflets."

By this time it was 4:20, and Kennedy and I were trying to get back stage after the show to interview Clinton. We needed to find Andrew Daly, the head volunteer and SPC director who would lead us to Clinton's public relations representative.

As time slipped by and the evening grew frigid, we thought our chances of interviewing Clinton were minuscule. But the band warmed up, and the funkadelic grooves pacified our concerns.

Kennedy talked to a volunteer who said he was just one of about 144 workers patrolling the event. Dozens of police officers stood about without a cause — they seemed sure the crowd was absent of cameras, alcohol or cannabis.

About the time Kennedy commented on the laissez-faire attitude of security, I directed my attention to the ground only to watch an airplane bottle of citrus Bacardi clank against the pavement. I followed the path of its fall up to the face of the bottle's owner, who staggered back with a squeamish expression on his face.

Kennedy had interviewed Christ Anderson, a freshman from Chicago, who was working security for the performance.

"Not having alcohol is a big turnoff to people," Anderson said. "But when they have alcohol, they have problems. Personally, I think it would improve it. They should have alcohol — people would enjoy this a lot more."

The show was nearing its end when a girl wearing a short brunette bob, a white shirt, blue jeans and a red, feathered boa handed me a blue wristband she had been given.

I did not realize the wristband would be my ticket onto the stage. There I was with 15 other girls, dancing to the rhythm of Parliament.

After the show, Kennedy and I slipped past the yellow shirts and prepared for our interview with Clinton.

On our quest to find Clinton's publicity manager, we watched as the colorfully dreaded man escaped in an unmarked vehicle. Dazed and confused, we presented our dilemma to Daly, who located the woman we needed to talk to. We were given a phone number and told to call him in 15 minutes. "No more than a couple of quotes," she had instructed.

Kennedy and I were thinking the same thing — we needed to talk to the man face-to-face. For reasons unknown, Clinton agreed to our request to visit his room at the Holiday Inn. Clinton answered the door of room 201 when Kennedy knocked. He shook our hands as we introduced ourselves and cleared off a chair that Kennedy willingly accepted.

The bed was blanketed with room-service food. Beyond the croissant sandwich, the hamburgers and the fruit, I saw the heater that would serve as my uncomfortable work station. Hot air blew up my ass the entire interview. Clinton looked at ease as he sat on the edge of the bed wearing a tattered, yellow, hooded sweatshirt, red camouflage cotton pants drinking a glass of ice water.

After the few short sestas during the interview, he switched to Coca-Cola.

Clinton: They told us they were going to pull the plug on us.

Kennedy: Really. Did they say why?

Clinton: They said you had a curfew or something.

Kennedy: Ha, ha, at 6:30?

Clinton: 6:30. I said "What? Why a 6:30 curfew? That don't make no sense."

Dubriwny: I agree. I agree.

Clinton: They were gonna pull the plug.

Dubriwny: You guys should have been able to jam out as long as you wanted to.

Clinton: We'd still be going on.

Kennedy: How was today's crowd compared with the crowd

Brian Janse, a sophomore in radio-television from Naperville, and Niles Wray, a freshman in radio-television from Decatur, scream for George Clinton during the free Spring Thing concert sponsored by Student Programming Council Saturday afternoon.

when you were here in '69?

Clinton: [In '69] we was all tripping acid and half the campus was, too. It was those kids who gave us yellow sunshine. We were walking up walls, but everyone was tripping in '69. If you remember '69, you wasn't there.

Kennedy: How do you come down from the show high after a concert?

Clinton: Just sit down for a while. I'm still coming down now.

Dubriwny: How long did it take you to grow out your hair?

Clinton: About 20 years. They used to be extensions.

Kennedy: How do you pick the colors?

Clinton: I'm colorblind, so I just get whatever they got.

Dubriwny: So what's your favorite color?

Clinton: I don't know. I'm colorblind

(laughter from Clinton and Kennedy)

Kennedy: Oh shoot.

Dubriwny: If you were from a different planet where would you be from?

Clinton: The planet Dog Star.

Kennedy: How many days out of the year are you touring?

Clinton: 280.

Dubriwny: If you were a plant, what kind of plant would you be?

Clinton: Probably kind-bud.

(laughter, Clinton falls asleep sitting up. Silence)

Kennedy (to Dubriwny): So, do you have anything else to ask him?

Dubriwny: No, I don't.

(Clinton wakes up)

Kennedy: Thank you very much for your time.

Clinton: You're going to end with that?

Dubriwny: Well, it's a fun one to end with.

Clinton: Aren't you going to ask me what kind of insect I would be or something?

Kennedy: All right, what kind of insect would you be?

Clinton: I'd be a roach.

(laughter from all)

Kennedy: What's a typical night for you after the show? Do you just 'kick it'?

Clinton: (mumbles and falls asleep... then wakes up)

Dubriwny: Did you see the guy dressed as a bong?

Clinton: Yeah, I wanted to go smoke him.

(everyone laughs. Brief silence)

Clinton: I keep dozing off. Did I miss something? (phone rings) I'm not going to answer that.

Dubriwny: If you could sum it up, what's your favorite part about what you do?

Clinton: Hmmm. That's a good question. The part that leads to the next part.

Dubriwny: How long are you going to continue to play?

Clinton: I think time will have a real serious effect... there's no such thing as time. I think there will be a quantum leap in time. There's going to be something, it's going to be in the here and now. In that case, it will probably be 24 hours of forever and two days after. The 12th day of never.

Realizing it was 25 minutes into the 'here and now,' we hugged our fatigued friend goodbye and thanked him for his time.

On the way back from the interview we stopped at the gas station. As we approached the counter the attendant asked, "What do you need?"

Kennedy misinterpreted the question in his excitement and blurted, "We just interviewed George Clinton."

I quietly told Kennedy to shut up, but the man just ignored him and continued the task at hand, breaking a $20.

Contraceptive claims to fight acne

JULIE SEVRENS
KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSPAPERS

PALO ALTO, Calif. - Every day, the young women file into the student health center at Stanford University and ask for prescriptions for a medication they've never tried - and can't quite remember the name of.

"They call it the Pill for acne," explains Robyn Tepper, chief of medical services at the health center. "And we know what they're talking about."

Just about every physician in the country does.

Since being marketed on television and in fashion magazines as the only birth-control pill "that helps your skin look better, too," Ortho Tri-Cyclen has become a must-have for many acne-conscious young women. It is, so far, the only birth-control pill that has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration for the treatment of moderate acne.

A hit among teens and twentysomethings nationwide, the drug and the publicity surrounding it have been credited with raising awareness of birth-control pills - and even encouraging more women to speak with their physicians about trying them.

"I think it's good for women's health," says Diane Lamotte, a senior pharmacist at the University of California-Santa Cruz's Cowell Student Health Center, who fills about five prescriptions for the drug a day.

But some health professionals say they have mixed feelings about Ortho Tri-Cyclen's remarkable success, worrying that not all women are making the best birth-control decisions because of their obsession with pimple-free skin.

"It's not a bad pill, but it wouldn't necessarily be my first choice for someone starting on birth-control pills," says Tepper. "For women that smoke or have migraine headaches or other issues, I might choose a pill that has lower (levels of) estrogen in it."

But it hasn't been easy to convince the throngs of women who are making pilgrimages to reproductive health centers that they should consider other birth-control options. Many teens don't want to hear that one birth-control pill doesn't necessarily fit all, reasoning that if Ortho Tri-Cyclen was advertised during episodes of TV's "Dawson's Creek," it must be good for them.

The phenomenon has been mind-boggling to clinicians, many of whom report that the medical advice they've offered to some patients has been completely ignored.

A decade ago, "patients certainly didn't ask for things by name," says Dr. Robert Latta, director of the student health center at San Jose State University. "They would ask for the Pill or some kind of contraception, and then they would leave the recommendation up to you."

But now many patients seem less interested in discussing the potential side effects of specific brands of birth-control pills than in buying what Madison Avenue tells them to, some physicians believe.

"You feel like Cosmopolitan can have more credibility than you," says Tepper, whose clinic added Ortho Tri-Cyclen to its offerings this school year because of the growing student demand.

"Women who are of reproductive age would like to have nice-looking skin," explains Abbe Schiffman, manager of public affairs for the drug's manufacturer, Ortho-McNeil Pharmaceutical.

"It's not the first step in acne treatment," says Dorothy Furgerson, medical director of Planned Parenthood Mar Monte, which serves Santa Clara County, Calif.

"But if a woman wants to be on birth-control pills for contraception and if she has acne problems, it would be a good choice."

Despite all the hype surrounding it, Ortho Tri-Cyclen should not be considered a magic bullet, physicians say. The drug has not been proven effective at clearing up severe acne, and individual results tend to vary.

"I've seen a few patients be disappointed," says Tepper. "They thought it would have a much more dramatic effect on acne."

AWARENESS

his feet again.

"I talked to a nun who helped me get out of there," Kurtz said. "She sent books home with me and tried to help my parents understand that I was gay."

Although Kurtz's parents still do not agree with his lifestyle, they have allowed him into their lives again.

"My mom is more accepting now, and my father and I have a kind of 'don't ask, don't tell' relationship," said Kurtz, secretary of Gays, Lesbians, Bisexuals and Friends. "I understand that by accepting his son, it's like denying his church, and that must be hard."

Today begins Gay Awareness Week, which is intended to support those coming out and educate those who are unaware.

According to Kendra Swezey, co-director of GLBF, coming out can be an apprehensive time for a homosexual, not just the first time but every time.

"Coming out will be a process someone goes through for the rest of their lives," said Swezey, a junior in information management systems from Edwardsville. "You have to come out every time you meet someone new."

But coming out to friends and family may be less intimidating than coming out to the self.

"Coming out can be a really tough process for many people," Swezey said. "It's not just coming out to others — they have to come to terms with themselves and understand what they're feeling."

Swezey believes society has played an obtrusive role in the lives of homosexuals but agrees that views are successively changing.

"Carbondale has a long way to go, and the changes are slow but progressing," she said. "I guess we just all want the American Dream — getting married, having children, living a long life — that's what I want to see in my future."

"I guess I just hate the fact that I have to screen who I am, and I would like to see that change."

Hiding the true identity allows those who have not come out to survive the oppression of society, and according to Kurtz, there is a time, a place and a preparation for exposing homosexuality.

"Every person who is coming out must be prepared for the fact that the people who love you the most may not accept you," he said.

"Sometimes it's just not a good time to come out because you have to make sure you're emotionally and financially able to be independent."

"When you come out, you can't do it alone. The love of my friends has helped me turn my life around."

INCENTIVES

"I know what [Argersinger] is hearing, about greeks being pathetic," Howard said. "And I thought, 'This is a really good opportunity to prove to the Chancellor that we're not everything that she's hearing we are.'"

Sigma Phi Epsilon President, George Grey said Howard ran a good program, but the more important demonstration to the administration will come in the upcoming USG elections.

There is a non-binding referendum on the USG ballot about whether the Select 2000 program should be abolished and replaced with a program created with student involvement.

"There's no real direct correlation between Select 2000 and city government," Grey said. "A better gauge [of student opinion] will be the USG referendum."

Howard said allegations that her incentive program was sponsored by or designed to benefit mayoral candidate John Budsliek were completely unfounded.

"John Budsliek had absolutely nothing to do with my incentive program," Howard said. "I could care less who they voted for, I just wanted them out there voting."

Grey said he could understand questions being raised about Budsliek's involvement because he was viewed as the most student-friendly candidate but said Howard showed no bias toward any candidate in her program.

"She never came to one of our meetings and said, 'Vote for Budsliek,'" Grey said. "She was not interested in who we voted for but that we got out and voted."

To make sure the program would not violate any election rules, Howard said she checked with County Clerk Larry Reinhardt before presenting it to any greek organization.

Howard said she would not know who the winning organizations were or be able to gauge the success of her program until she received official figures from Reinhardt.

The program involved non-greeks in blue t-shirts with clipboards at polls to keep track of which greeks voted and which house they were from. Fraternity and sorority members participating were instructed to tell the people in blue shirts that they had voted.

Greek organizations participating also were encouraged to tell their alumni and friends about the program so that the administration would see the amount of support the greeks have.

The prizes for the winning fraternities and sororities were donated from a number of local businesses, as well as some donations from Howard's family. Other donated prizes include free parties at local bars and food prizes from local restaurants.

Howard said winners should be announced as early as this week.

Voter turnout was larger across Carbondale in Tuesday's election, and Howard thought what she did helped.

"I felt like this was an awesome motivator to get them out to vote," Howard said. "And I feel like they did turn out."

Appreciation month highlights women's accomplishments

ERIN FAFOGLIA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Beneath the stereotypical image of a strong, capable military man, there lies a man who is perceived as weak and vulnerable.

When a man is sexually harassed by another man, the object of harassment is not always the act of sex but the need for the weak to become hyper-masculine individuals.

According to a study done by Leena Batra, Margaret Stockdale and Michelle Wood, sexual harassment is not just about men wanting sex. Rather, it targets individuals who are perceived as weak and vulnerable and pushes an ideal of "the perfect man" on them.

The sexual harassment research project was just one of 30 topics addressed at the 6th-annual Refereed Poster and Paper Session Wednesday in the Gallery Lounge of the Student Center.

Presenters at the event included SIUC faculty, graduate and undergraduate students and was one of the many events scheduled for April in honor of Women's Appreciation Month.

Topics from ginseng and its effects on breast cancer to women's multiple roles of balancing career and family transformed the Student Center Gallery Lounge into a celebration of women's research and studies.

"The event highlights women's accomplishments on campus," said Martha Ellert, coordinator of University Women's Professional Advancement.

"It gives them a chance to display their research topics in preparation for further professional settings."

The session is a written paper and poster presentation that, unlike a contest, supports every participant.

Essay submissions for the session began in the fall semester and poster submissions in February. Every submission is read by three chosen SIUC professional faculty members.

"It represents a broad spectrum of disciplines on campus," Ellert said.

"Instead of selecting one winner, we would rather have all the participants honored.”

This was the sixth year of the poster session and the third year of the paper session. Overall, Ellert said she was pleased with the attendance turnout, which has increased each year.

"There were some really good displays and research discussions," Ellert said. "I was very pleased with the participation on a whole."

The newly created Donna M. Summerfield Women's Studies Undergraduate Scholarship and several other women student scholarship winners were awarded at the event.

The Summerfield Scholarship was named in honor of the SIUC philosophy professor who died during winter break.

"The session was a way for us to honor women students who received scholarships in a variety of disciplines on campus all at once," Ellert said.

Batra, an assistant in the SIUC psychology department, contributed a poster to the presentation titled "The Sexual Harassment of Men: Evidence for a Broader Theory of Sexual Harassment and Sexual Discrimination."

The research surveyed men in the United States military across the world, asking questions about sexually distressful situations they have encountered.

According to the study, sexual harassment against women by men is similar in some instances.

"Sometimes, it's more about enforcing power and standards on women to be an image of hyper-masculinity," Batra said.

Another mainstream topic addressed at the poster presentation was the lack of interest in science and math by adolescent teenage girls.

Mary Wright, SIUC mathematics professor, helped produce a project in which 22 Girl Scout troops from Southern Illinois counties traveled to the St. Louis Science Center.

Wright said the goal was to expose girls grades four through six to science so they will develop an appreciation for it.

"By having them participate in cooperative group activities as opposed to competitive ones, they will know that it is not so strange for girls to like science," Wright said.

worked with three other students on a poster project addressing the issue of absence of growth hormones in mice.

Wernsing said the project found possible links to Laron dwarf humans and dwarfed mice. Laron is a specific type of dwarfing in humans.

"We found similar instances in which dwarfed mice and Laron dwarfed humans have trouble reproducing," Wernsing said.

The project also found a direct correlation between humans and mice who are hypoglycemic, which is having a low blood sugar level.

Both humans and mice who are hypoglycemic produce large offspring, Wernsing said.

Wright said the judged poster session gives women a chance to come together on a variety of subject matters and issues.

"We appreciate the continual support of SIU, and that's an important part of the mission," Wright said.

"It creates an opportunity for us to network with others and see what everyone is doing."

minority faculty and staff on campus.

The "Communiversity" program, designed to strengthen ties between the University and city while improving recruitment and retention, would pair incoming freshmen with "foster families."

Sanchez said the program would help involve students in the community while easing their transition to SIUC.

The tenant bill of rights is designed to help improve rental conditions in Carbondale through the renter rather than through ordinances.

Sanchez contends that the abolishment of Select 2000 and increased minority staff representation also would contribute to better recruitment and retention rates.

— CONNIE HOWARD
STUDENT TRUSTEE CANDIDATE

Millennium Party vice presidential candidate Ted Clark stressed that a Millennium administration would be open to concerns that might be brought forward by students.

Henry said making the USG name more recognizable among students by hosting events and encouraging students to run for vacant Senate seats are also Select Party priorities.

Select Party candidates advocated researching a possible multi-level garage, most likely in the lot north of the Communications Building.

They also seek to strengthen the greek system by abolishing Select 2000.

The abolishment of Select 2000, they argue, will bring in more greeks, who have better retention and graduation rates than non-greeks, thereby strengthening the University as well.

The student trustee candidates spent the majority of their debate discussing procedural and experience questions rather than on specific views.

"We are the voice of the students," Howard said.

"What we bring to the board is the opinion of the students rather than our own views."

Syfert stressed dialogue as the key to an effective student trustee.

The ability to communicate effectively with both student leaders and high-level administrators and legislators is essential, Syfert said.

Howard also stressed the need to cultivate and maintain contacts outside the University, while Syfert advocated close ties with University administration and student leaders.

USG and student trustee elections are scheduled for Wednesday.

RACK 'EM UP: Softball team wins pair from Evansville on road, improves to 30-14.

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC sophomore softball pitcher/designated hitter Erin Stremsterfer continues to damage opposing teams in a number of ways.

Whether with her hot bat or consistent pitching arm, Stremsterfer has been a royal pain for both opposing hitters and pitchers.

The University of Evansville was her latest victim, as she led the Salukis (30-14, 7-1) to a 8-0, 5-4 sweep of a doubleheader against the Missouri Valley Conference foe Thursday evening in Evansville, Ind.

Stremsterfer (14-6) shut the Purple Aces (36-15, 4-6) out in game one, giving up only two hits and two walks while striking out five in the 8-0 victory. She also drove in two runs on a 2-for-4 hitting performance.

In game two, Stremsterfer provided the Salukis with a game-winning home run in the bottom of the fifth to break a 4-4 tie and move the Salukis ahead for good at 5-4. Stremsterfer went 2-for-3, hitting her fifth homer of the season.

Stremsterfer's hot bat has led to a career-best 13-game hitting streak. During the streak she is batting .425 (17-for-40) with four doubles, three home runs and 14 RBIs.

"It makes a big difference to have (Stremsterfer) in the lineup in both games — her bat is critical," Saluki head coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said. "Having her in there as both a hitter and a pitcher is a real plus for the program."

Senior utility player Jaymie Cowell also continued her hot hitting in game two, going 1-for-2 and hitting her fourth home run of the season.

Junior pitcher Carisa Winters (12-3) picked up the victory after going seven innings, yielding four runs (three earned) and striking out nine.

The Saluki pitching duo of Stremsterfer and Winters held Evansville's powerful sophomore catcher Jessica Huff to just 1-for-6 on the day.

"Erin (Stremsterfer) did a great job throwing, and Carisa did as well, except for that fourth inning (where the Salukis surrendered four runs), but fortunately we fought back in the thick of things," Brechtelsbauer said.

In game one Thursday, sophomore center fielder M. a r t i a V i e f h a u s tied the SIUC all-time home run mark

(16) with Jamie Schutteck ('94-'97) and Colleen Holloway ('90-'93) after hitting her eighth home run of the season, which also tied her own record for most home runs in a season. Viefhaus was 2-for-3 for the game with two RBIs.

The Salukis also broke the team record for home runs in a season Thursday (26), breaking the record they set last season (23).

The Salukis, winners of 11 of their last 12, have moved into the two-way tie for first place in the MVC with Illinois State University (22-14, 7-1). Creighton University trails closely behind in third (20-22, 5-1).

"We may have a three-way tie after this weekend," Brechtelsbauer said pending the outcome of Creighton's doubleheader with the University of Northern Iowa Sunday. "Or we may have just a two-way tie with us and Illinois State."

Starkweather got the nod to play this weekend after freshman Lindsey Henage, who was expected at the No. 5 slot, injured her shoulder last weekend at Illinois State.

"We were coming back from (Illinois State) and she picked up her golf bag and separated her shoulder," Daugherty said. "But I have full confidence in Jane. Jane has been playing really well."

If all goes well, the Salukis will have a lot of celebrating to do.

"Last year they had to get home to paint the rocks [across from the Rec Center] and teepee my house," she said. "It took them all night to do it, so hopefully we've got some celebrating to do afterward."

trustee serves in an advisory capacity. The binding vote is awarded to the most qualified student trustee as determined by the Illinois governor.

Former Gov. Jim Edgar awarded the binding vote to SIUE student trustee Phil Gersman last year.

Both Syfert and Howard are currently involved in USG — Howard as Chief of Staff and City Affairs Commissioner and Syfert as a College of Agriculture senator and chairman of the Internal Affairs Committee.

In addition to campaigning in Carbondale, Howard travels to Springfield Sunday to present her platform to the SIU School of Medicine. Medical students are represented under the SIUC trustee vote and are eligible to vote Wednesday.

Syfert is emphasizing his experience with student government at SIU and Lakeland Community College in Mattoon and his work as a member of the Student Advisory Committee at the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

Howard points to a stint in Washington, D.C., lobbying against HR 715, the Accuracy in Campus Crime Reporting Act. This bill, which was signed into law in October 1998, required campuses to keep logs of all accused parties in a crime and opened judicial records to the public.

Both Howard and Syfert said the technology fee referendum, which will appear on the student trustee ballot, might help increase voter turnout Wednesday.

"Students will turn out if they think something is important enough," Howard said. "And there are a lot of students on this campus concerned about technology."

The technology fee is one area where Howard and Syfert have differing views. While Howard supports the fee, Syfert questions whether additional technology should be funded by a new fee.

A technology fee would only "fine the pockets of someone outside the University who brings in the technology," Syfert said. "Poor planning on the administration's part doesn't constitute a need for a fee."

Syfert argues that the University should have recognized and allotted money for technology improvements earlier, rather than trying to make up for lost time by charging students a fee.

Howard, however, called the fee "a necessary increase."

"SIU is falling behind," Howard said. "If we cannot be competitive with other universities, we stand to lose."

Howard said service and infrastructure were two areas of technology that needed additional funding to receive crucial upgrades.

Syfert cited deferred maintenance and academic programs as budgeting priorities in his campaign. Howard admitted that "I'm not a budget expert" but declared that a balance in distribution was necessary.

Both candidates support renewal of HB 2364, which will expire soon because of a sunset clause built into the bill. The bill gives the binding vote to the student trustee.

The renewal of HB 2364 is critical because it allows the position power equal to that of any other trustee, both candidates said.

Both Syfert and Howard advocate increased communication between student governments and the student trustee.

The student trustee election will take place Wednesday.

Sunday taking care of Bradley. With Petrutu and Floro sitting out, seniors Jennifer Robison and Maria Villarreal were able to start in the final home match of their careers.

Robison handed Bradley's Ah Kail a 6-4, 6-2 loss, while Villarreal did the same to Beth Hoag 6-1, 6-2.

Esrock, who began the season slowly, has since settled in, compiling a 2-0 record this weekend in singles action. Esrock defeated Bradley's Mary Milan 6-0, 6-1.

"I knew she had all the tools," Auld said about Esrock. "But she was just a little slow getting started. But it's not how you start, it's how you finish."

Esrock is finishing strong just in time for next weekend's MVC Tournament.

"I think we have a chance of actually doing very well because all the schools that we have played against in conference, we have given them a really good go," said Esrock, who joined the squad in January from Johannesburg, South Africa.

Ochoa also finished the weekend undefeated in singles play for the second consecutive weekend as she defeated Bradley's Lisa Justice, 6-0, 6-1.

"I think playing at home helped me very much to improve my game and gain more confidence," Ochoa said.

Sophomore Keri Crandall (6-0, 6-1) and Monica Villarreal (6-0, 6-0) also earned victories for the Salukis.

"So if it's going to happen, let it happen now, and let us beat them when we need to."

— JUDY AULD
SIUC WOMEN'S TENNIS COACH

The Salukis swept all three doubles matches.

The Salukis travel to Cedar Falls, Iowa, for the MVC tournament next weekend.

"This is what we have been working for all year," Auld said. "I'm ready to go up and let the chips fall where they may. I know the girls really want it very, very bad."

Jennifer Robison returns a shot during a 9-0 doubles win over Bradley University Sunday morning.

Saluki offense, it did not happen. Out-hitting the Shockers 9-7, SIUC's nemesis was the strikeout by WSU pitching.

WSU pitcher Ben Keiter (4-0) pitched seven innings, allowing two earned runs while striking out nine in the victory.

"Their pitching is the best I've seen all year, and I think in my three years here," junior right fielder Marty Worsley said. "They are a good ballclub, and I tip my hat to them."

SIUC's best chances for runs came in the fourth and seventh innings.

In the fourth, two straight singles by junior shortstop Joe Meeks (5-for-13 on the series) and Schley (3-for-14) to start the inning only provided one run to cross the plate.

In the seventh, freshman left fielder Scott Boyd (1-for-10) hit a solo home run with one out. That would be the last run the Salukis would score on the afternoon.

However, for the Shockers there was a recurring theme on the weekend — bombs away.

Hitting 11 home runs during the series to the Salukis' two (Jeff Stanek and Boyd), the Shockers improved their home run mark this season to 57. Andy Schreiber (3) Kevin Hooper (2), Jeff Ryan (2), Brian Preston (2), Koyie Hill and Bradley Wright all hit home runs for the Shockers.

The Shockers outscored the Salukis 27-7 on the weekend.

Saluki starting pitchers did not fare well on the weekend. Senior Jason Frasier (4-2), Adam Biggs (5-4), David Piazza (3-4) and Brad Heuring (3-2) all suffered losses on the weekend.

"When we factor in what we did the past two weekends, and you factor in this weekend, we needed to be better than that, better than what we've done the past two weekends," Callahan said. "But we didn't show that in one of the games, let alone four."

Women's tennis team splits weekend in preparation for MVC Championships

PAUL WLEKINSKI
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC women's tennis team cannot afford to give away victories any more now that the regular season is over.

The Salukis ended a four-match winning streak after dropping a 5-4 decision to Missouri Valley Conference foe Indiana State University Saturday at the University Tennis Courts.

"I wasn't upset with the loss," Saluki head coach Judy Auld said. "I was upset with the way we lost. I felt like we just kind of handed it to them. I have to admit that was the only match that we really didn't really fight to the now."

The Salukis bounced back Sunday by whipping Bradley University 9-0. Freshmen Simona Petrutiu and Pamela Floro took the day off, moving everyone else up two slots in the lineup.

"I still have to look at the bright side," Auld said. "We lost to them now. Now we go up to conference tournament, so it's really immaterial. It just makes a difference in the seedings, that's all."

In their last two meetings, Indiana State and SIUC decided the winner with 5-4 scores. Saturday would prove no different, as the match was tied at 3-3 after singles action.

Petrutiu picked up her 32nd career win at SIUC, defeating Luciana Espinar, 6-3, 7-6. Freshman Erika Ochoa (7-5, 6-4) and sophomore Taryn Esrock (6-1, 7-5) earned the other two points for the Salukis.

Petrutiu and Floro earned the only doubles point for the Salukis, defeating Espinar and Judy Liwampo, 8-2.

"Indiana State has beaten us in the last three years in the first round of the conference tournament and we had beaten them in the preseason," Auld said. "So if it's going to happen, let it happen now, and let us beat them when we need to."

The Salukis had little trouble.

Wichita State sweeps baseball team at home

Luke Nelson

MIKE BJORKLUND DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The series between No. 13 Wichita State University and the SIUC baseball team could have been much worse, but thankfully for the slumping Salukis, it wasn't.

Despite being swept by the Shockers this weekend at Abe Martin Field in four games, the Salukis did not lose as bad as in previous weekends to Southwest Missouri State University and Creighton University.

Losing by the scores of 5-2, 6-2, 11-1 and 5-2, SIUC (21-15, 7-12 in the Missouri Valley Conference) did not do the necessary things to beat WSU — namely play perfect baseball.

"We just did not do enough things right to play with them this weekend," SIUC head coach Dan Callahan said. "That's a hell of a ballclub right there, and in order for us to win games we have to do almost everything perfectly. We played well enough to be in some games and not well enough to win any of them."

Losers of 11 straight MVC games, the Salukis will have a chance to end their eight-game overall losing streak against Murray State University at 3 p.m. Tuesday at Abe Martin Field.

But for SIUC, erasing the memories of the WSU (35-8, 13-3) series may last longer than the two days it has to prepare for the Thoroughbreds.

"These losses are seeming to become contagious to us right now," senior center fielder Joe Schley said. "We just have to find some way, somehow, some confidence. We have some confidence, but when it comes down to crunch time, we seem to choke."

In Sunday's 5-2 loss, the Salukis had many opportunities to erase the Shockers' early 4-0 lead. But unfortunately for the Search Diane Daugherty's office all you want. The Missouri Valley Conference championship women's golf plaque the Salukis won last year is nowhere to be found.

The runner-up trophies from 1994, 1995 and 1997 are there, but where's the big one? Well, Daugherty wanted everyone who walked into the SIUC Athletics Department to know what her team accomplished. So, there the plaque sits on a table in the center of the Intercollegiate Athletics office.

"Nobody sees it in here," said Daugherty, who is in her 13th season as Saluki coach. "I just put it out on the table and have never taken it off."

Daugherty and the Salukis are set to begin their trek to add another trophy to the table. SIUC is favored to win its second straight MVC tournament, which begins today and concludes Tuesday in Peoria.

"Hopefully, [being picked first] will give us confidence, not cockiness," Daugherty said. "We're going to use that to our advantage. We've been there and we've handled it."

The Salukis have competed against all the other Valley schools this year except Wichita State University, who is predicted to finish second. Southwest Missouri State University is the only team to place higher than the Salukis in a tournament this season, but Daugherty has her eye on the Shockers.

"[Wichita State's] scoring average is lower than ours," she said. "They average 321, and they have the top scoring leaders in the Valley. So on paper, they are stronger than we are."

The Salukis' lineup consists of freshman Alison Hiller (No. 1), sophomore Elizabeth Uthoff (No. 2), senior Jami Zimmerman (No. 3), freshman Andrea Walker (No. 4), senior Renee Myers (No. 5) and senior Jane Starkweather (No. 6).

Did you know...

the rain forests exist on only 2% of the earth's surface, yet they are home to plants used to produce 1/4 of today's medicines and up to 70% of tomorrow's cancer fighting drugs...

Despite this, every minute an area of rain forest equal to 10 city blocks is destroyed.
