County jail prompts lawsuit

By William Walker
Staff Writer

Attorney General Neil Hunter filed on Wednesday a lawsuit against Jackson County to seek action for correcting deficiencies in the jail. The suit was filed on behalf of the attorney general's office.

Jackson County was one of three counties sued for problems with their jails, said Jerry Owens, spokesman for the attorney general's office. McLean and Pulaski counties were the other two involved.

Owens said that the three counties were among 14 counties that have been threatened with lawsuits for failing to meet jail requirements. He said it is unclear at this time which will happen to the other 11 counties.

Owens said the state decided to take action against the three counties Wednesday because conditions in each of the three jails are extremely poor. "These three jails are in such bad shape that we felt action had to be taken," Owens said. "We just couldn't sit any longer."

The main problem in the Jackson County jail is overcrowding, Owens said, but there are other violations that include improper segregation of prisoners, failure to make lighting fixtures tamper-proof, and failure to provide academic instruction to youths.

Students not informed on issues, Forrest says

By William Walker
Staff Writer

College students today are not as enlightened on the pressing issues affecting society as students in times past, says Leon Forrest, a novelist and chairman of Afro-American Studies at Northwestern University.

Forrest, who was a guest lecturer in the University Honors Lectures Series Wednesday evening, told a news conference earlier in the day to discuss some of the problems facing the world and students today.

Students lack knowledge of important issues partly because of society's failure "to pass along a continuity of history," a problem that has come from too little emphasis on reading, said Forrest, a highly acclaimed author who has won the Carl Sandburg Award and the Illinois Arts Council Award for his work.

"Some of the brightest students I meet haven't read anything at all," Forrest said. "They haven't read any history, any literature, haven't read the Bible."

They have "no sense of tradition in literature, in history," he added. And that means there's probably very little reading going on at home.

Parents, Forrest said, should be encouraging their children to read by making sure they, too, read. But too often, he said, parents do not set a positive example and mistakenly believe that it is enough to make sure their children go to school.

"I think bright parents in this society in the middle class think, 'Let us put them in school,' and they end up in a good secondary school and then send them to a good university, and then waste their hands of it," Forrest said.

But just going to school is not enough, so reading "has got to become a part of the family organization," he said.

Forrest also blamed the "emergence" of the media for the failure of many students who are not deterred by history and culture.

The problem today of the emergence of media as the university in terms of student enlightenment has brought forth student demonstrations here and throughout the country calling for divestment of funds in companies doing business in South Africa, which has prompted student demonstrations here and throughout the country calling for divestment of funds in companies doing business in South Africa, which has brought the country's practice of apartheid.

He said that each action on the part of the student population is an important factor in getting universities to take student issues seriously.

"What always makes them cut corners more, of course, is an enlightened student body, that and a bright, bright group of professors," Forrest said.

The temperament of the times is important," Forrest continued, "but with the exception of St. Paul, you don't have this kind of volatility, this kind of seeing the emergence of the issues throughout society that you have today...the civil rights movement, for example."

University pleased by governor's budget plan

By David Sheets
Staff Writer

Pleased, not ecstatic, is the word to describe the University administration in response to Governor Thompson's higher education budget proposal.

Thompson announced a proposal Tuesday that calls for state funding for higher education to be increased by 9.5 percent, pulling the total financing for public colleges and universities up to $1.7 billion for the 1997 fiscal year.

"This budget," Thompson said in a news release from his office, "includes an increase over fiscal year 1996 spending of $118 million in general revenue funds, the second largest increase for higher education in almost three decades."

The total budget shows a 10.4 percent boost for higher education, the release says. But only $1.1 billion of that increase is tied to the passage of the 9.5 percent increase

University President John R. Bardo said the proposed budget would increase the University's general revenue fund by $118 million or 9.5 percent increase over this year's budget.

"This year they're interested in the salary increase, and the budget covers that," he said.

The proposed budget includes $1.2 billion in salary increases for faculty and staff. "And 6.5 percent is up in salary, and the budget is $1.2 billion in salary and spending and an 8 percent increase," he said.

Senate calls Philippine elections 'fraud'

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Senate Wednesday voted overwhelmingly to condemn the Philippine elections as a fraud despite a warning by Secretary of State George Shultz that the United States should not walk away from its strategically. But State Department officials said Shultz was not hinting at pulling out the bases and making no linkage between the election and the bases.

The Senate voted 85-9 for the resolution, which expresses the Senate's sentiments and does not carry any sanctions. It called President Ferdinand Marcos holding office in defiance of his people. It said the Feb. 7 presidential elections were marked "by such widespread fraud that they cannot be considered a fair reflection of the will of the people of the Philippines.

It said the Feb. 7 presidential elections were marked "by such widespread fraud that they cannot be considered a fair reflection of the will of the people of the Philippines.

Walter Mondale, a co-sponsor of the resolution, said the votes were "a message to the Marcos regime that the world is watching and that his days are numbered."

The resolution will mean "few substantive consequences, if any," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas, but "enormous moral leverage." Dole said he hoped the resolution would pressure the Marcos government to hold elections and act "more quickly than we have seen in the past."
Aquino wants governments to snub Marcos re-election

ANGELES, Philippines (UPI) — Brushing aside a threat by President Ferdinand Marcos to impose martial law, opposition leader Corazon Aquino escalated her anti-Marcos civil disobedience campaign Wednesday and said she would ask governors to withhold recognition of his disputed re-election. Foreign Ministry sources said the 20-year ruler of the Philippines had received no letters of congratulations from foreign governments, a standard diplomatic courtesy when a head of state wins an election.

Congressmen say POWs in Southeast Asia

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Members of a congressional delegation just back from Hanoi said Wednesday they are convinced some American military servicemen are alive in Southeast Asia and progress is being made to get them out. Rep. Gerald Solomon, D-N.Y., head of the nine-man congressional group told a news conference Wednesday, held after he had a classified briefing by the Defense Intelligence Agency, that he didn't want to raise hopes on the part of family members, but there is no longer any question about the existence of some Americans left behind in Southeast Asia.

Challenger's booster rocket found in debris

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Twisted pieces of wreckage strewn across the ocean floor 1,200 feet down were positively identified Wednesday as from Challenger's right-hand booster rocket, and officials said it could take up to six months to complete salvage operations, Air Force Col. Edward O'Connor, orchestrating salvage operations for NASA, said five large "debris fields" have been identified in a square-mile rectangular area off shore where shattered shuttle wreckage is known or thought to be resting.

Senate ratifies treaty condemning genocide

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate ratified a U.N. treaty condemning genocide Wednesday on a 73-22 vote, according to a group of conservative opposition to the pact, which President Reagan supported and 96 other nations have embraced. The ratification resolution was adopted after the Senate adjourned until Saturday for an amendment by Sen. Stevens Symms, R-Idaho, that opponents said would have blocked ratification of the treaty.

Strikers refused entrance to AFL-CIO meeting

BAY HARBOR, Fla. (UPI) — Renegade workers at a Minnesota Hormel plant were refused entrance to an AFL-CIO Executive Council meeting Wednesday and they accused President Lane Kirkland and other labor leaders of being "out of touch" with workers. "Some people think we're pariahs coming to town," said Ray Thomas, a consultant to the militant local leadership of P9 of the United Food and Commercial Workers in Austin, Minn.

Angola denounces U.S. plans to aid rebels

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — Angola Wednesday denounced as a "declaration of war" plans by the United States to provide aid to Angolan rebels and warned the Reagan administration's move will lead to more violence in southern Africa. The charges by state-run Angola radio echoed earlier comments run Angolan press by President Jose Eduardo dos Santos, who condemned the warm reception given Angolan rebel leader Jonas Savimbi by U.S. officials in Washington earlier this month.

Floods, mudslides ravage western states

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — State officials asked President Reagan Wednesday to declare a disaster area for Reno and its surrounding areas, ravished by what is being called its worst water-related disaster this century. Roads into California were closed by mudslides and flooding as rain fell for a sixth day on western Nevada. Homeowners from several areas in Sparks, Carson City, Minden and Dayton fled their homes because of rising waters or the threat of weakened dams.

Jordan leader drops PLO from peace plan

AMMAN, Jordan (UPI) — Jordan's King Hussein said Wednesday he was dropping the Palestine Liberation Organization from his Middle East peace initiative because of PLO leader Yasser Arafat's refusal to accept U.N. resolutions that recognize Israel's right to exist. The monarch said, however, right to exist. The monarch said, however, he still hopes to work with Arafat, but for the Middle East peace plan will remain a basis of relations and he stopped short of totally rejecting the PLO.

City opposes federal tax legislation

By Jim McBride
Staff Writer

The City of Carbondale has decided to actively oppose proposed federal tax legislation that would limit the rights of cities to issue industrial development and general obligation bonds. The City Council Monday unanimously passed a resolution urging Congress to amend the proposed federal Tax Reform Act. The resolution also directs the city clerk to send copies to President Reagan, U.S. Rep Ken Gray, and U.S. Sens. Alan Dixon and Paul Simon.

The legislation, currently being reviewed by the U.S. Senate, is an attempt by the federal government to make the federal tax system more equitable. City Manager Bill Dixon said the House has already approved the legislation.

Dixon said the city is not opposing the legislation because it attempts to make the tax system more equitable, but because the legislation could have an "adverse" effect on the nation's cities by limiting the rights of cities to issue bonds for development projects.

"We would like to see it changed," he said. Mayor Helen Westberg said she attended a meeting Monday with U.S. Sens. Dixon and Simon and received some support for amending the proposed legislation.

Proposed amendments to the tax legislation contained in the council's resolution include:

- changing the enactment date of the legislation to Jan. 1, 1987
- retaining the current definition of public purpose for which bonds can be issued and reject proposed restrictions in municipal bond authority
- eliminating a requirement that any portion of a public purpose bond must come under a state volume cap imposed on bond sales within the state by the Illinois Development Finance Authority
- eliminating a requirement that 5 percent of the proceeds of bond sales must be spent by cities within 30 days and that the remainder of bond proceeds must be spent within 2 years after receipt of the bonds
- retaining complete authority for cities to do tax increment financing for large development projects
- restoring the abilities of cities to do private placement of bonds
- removal of extraordinary arbitrage and rebate requirements
- Under requirements of the pending federal legislation, bond interest proceeds would be returned to the federal government instead of being retained by cities and
- not applying the bonding volume cap to bonds issued for facilities owned and operated by cities or where the operation or rates are set by governmental bodies.

Ex-con holds 2 hostage, then releases

NEW YORK (UPI) — An ex-convent twice fired by H & R Block burst into the firm's midtown office with a shotgun Wednesday, took two hostages and later released them but refused to surrender and threatened to kill himself.

Edward Hernandez was holding a gun "to his throat" late Wednesday and was "talking about ending his own life," police spokesman Alice McGillivray said.

Hernandez, 24, of Manhattan, fired at least one shot from a sawed-off shotgun when he took the second-floor office about 7 p.m. EST, but no one was injured, McGillivray said.

Officers negotiating by telephone with Hernandez were the release of the first hostage, office manager Phyllis Novick, about 6:30 p.m. and her son, Michael, a tax preparer, at 7:30 p.m. McGillivray said.

Neither hostage was harmed.

Hernandez released the hostages after he received a letter written by his parole officer and signed by the state parole board, saying he would not be charged in violation of his parole.

Tuesday, Hernandez was fired for the second time from his job as an office worker.

Hernandez, who was on parole for an armed robbery conviction after serving a year in jail, first was fired at H & R for allegedly stealing about $1,000 from the firm. McGillivray said he later was rehired, she said.

Another Dillinger brought to justice?

DILLINGER. THE NAME conjures up memories of gangsters in America's recent past. John Dillinger terrorized the Midwest unitarily, but to death by J. Edgar Hoover's ever-efficient G-men in front of the Biograph Theater in Chicago. Now Dillinger was to add to his list of public enemies brought to justice.

J. C. Dillinger surfaced as a pretty nice guy, opening up his story to police in Carbondale, Illinois. Little did the city know that he would undermine the pubic's safety. But J. C. Dillinger has brought to justice by modern-day G-men, the city code enforcers.

ACCORDING TO THE CITY's agents, Dillinger was endangering an unsuspecting public by displaying his war's on the sidewalks of Carbondale, Illinois. They nabbed him under a 1939 public ordinance designed to protect pedestrians from hazardous public displays that encroached on sidewalks and other public walkways. Luckily for us, he was stopped 31 years later before anyone was maimed or killed.

The city's G-men made him move his tools, wires and wheelbarrows inside where they can't attack passersby.

The irony of all this is that the mayor gave him a plaque last year to commemorate his 50th year in business.

The further irony is that he was found in violation of the 31-year-old ordinance that the G-men are enforcing at a store that has become a Carbondale landmark. That may show that nobody is above the law. But it's a little sad that another bit of Carbondile history and color has been banned from public view.

Letters

Prof's don't need union

Nearly everyday, I receive campus mail from one union or another wanting me to join their ranks. The union wants to protect me, to help me gain recognition, authority, and higher pay. These unions like calling us professional employees. This bothers me more than anything else because I believe

1. Professional employees don't need anyone to protect them because they are the best at their job.

2. Professional employees don't need anyone to speak for them or anyone for speaking for themselves.

3. Professional employees are paid for their services and the greater the service, the greater the pay.

Blood user thanks donors

I am writing this letter to thank all those caring students who make the time and effort to give their blood for those who need it. I have been one of these people who needed blood several times and was dependent on the help of others. Blood given by others has literally saved my life, made surgeries safe for me, and at other times turned me into a functioning person again.

Unless you have needed blood or have seen the blood supply dangerously low at the blood bank, you cannot imagine how grateful I am to those people who care and do.

This university and Carbondale should be very proud of all those young students who not only answered the call for the last blood drive. In a period of time when young people are seen as being more callous and less compassionate to the needs of others, to answer the call, your record proves differently! There is no greater gift of love than giving the gift of blood. — Peggy K. Estes, Carbondale

Ovum, conception, birth: The abortion debate rages on

Recently, a slate of letters have appeared arguing against abortion. Perhaps a new view of the present situation and moral questions is in order.

The simple fact is that the human ovum contains life transmitted from the mother, even if that life has no possibility of development and birth unless fertilized with a human spermatozoon. Since that is a readily available remedy, any woman who fails to attempt fertilization during any non-pregnant month between puberty and menopause could be considered guilty of negligent homicide.

Now, whether such homicide is a crime or a sin are entirely different questions. It is obviously not a crime, since no law has ever been passed against it. Whether or not it is a sin depends on one of a number of unproved and unproveable assumptions, beliefs, or values and usually involves some assumption regarding an earlier period essentially attached to the life in question. If one believes, with the majority of the world, that the soul suffers a series of reincarnations, then it is probably that destroying or failing to form the body (or potential body) chosen by a particular soul would be at worst, an inconvenience to that soul, and on balance, hardly a sin.

If, on the other hand, one believes, with somewhat fewer of his contemporaries (i.e., the Christian world), that a newly created soul inhabits the new individual, then the consequences may be more serious but depend on the time of occupancy.

In the extreme case, we could be talking about the millions of ovum as they develop by a special form of cell division in the ovaries of a baby girl while she is still a fetus in the uterus of her mother. Alternatively, soul occupancy might be delayed until ovulation, fertilization, some definite development of the brain, birth or baptism. Any such delay would help to resolve guilt feelings, but there is absolutely no basis in the Bible, or in the church philosophy for assuming that belief or accepting that relief.

Group didn't condone vandalism

We agree that vandalism on campus is a serious problem. We, the members of Gamma Delta Iota, would like to apologize on behalf of the individuals who defaced university property at our expense. Gamma Delta Iota does not condone this sort of action.

Our organization was established as an alternative to Greek life. It is not our intention to malign the Greek way of life, but rather to express ourselves as independent of the system.

Mr. Case's use of the word "gang" in his letter will probably be taken out of context by many people. We are not a group of delinquents. We are a group of people with common goals and beliefs, not unlike the Greeks, but far removed from them.

Mr. Case is correct in that we are not affiliated with the Inter-Greek Council, nor are we a registered Student Organization. We choose not to be involved in those groups. If we were affiliated with either group, would Mr. Case refer to us as a "gang"? Mr. Case, since we are all students here at SIUC, what makes you more affiliated with the University than us?

Gamma Delta Iota does not believe it is obligated to formally align ourselves as an RPS, or with the IGC. Our objective is to be independent, and that is how we shall remain. — Paul Butler, freshman, Pre-Major Studies.

rights movement and Vietnam.

Forrest also said black history has been particularly ignored in the United States. American programs in the universities and professional schools direct at Northwestern, have helped somewhat to reverse this trend.

However, he said he would like to see more awareness in depcting on black contributions in the arts, chemistry, literature, history and social sciences.

"What happens at many universities is they'll say, 'Well, there's an Afro-studies department over there let them handle that stuff and we'll remain pure,'" he said.

An encouraging sign, Forrest said, is that his More American program, which was established in 1970, has seen a recent increase in enrollment, a development that he attributes "to the result of a change in student attitude.

"There was a time in the late '70s when the career business meant so much that students didn't seem to see anything other than the proceeds from Evanston to the 1st National Bank.

"These is a type of student now, who we get who wants a career but also wants some knowledge of culture. That would be true for black students, as well as white students," he said.

In addition to his press conference, Forrest lectured on "What's Right about The Velocity of the Imagination," read from some new works in progress and his novel "The Blackworth Orphans.

The talk was sponsored by SIU's Black Affairs Council as part of Black History Month observances. The lecture was not completed at press time.

who are detained more than 36 hours.

Eugene Chambers, county board chairman said that he didn't hear he said. The building, which is not from the county board is closing to make for the new jail.

"I can't see how we can go any faster," Chambers said.

But, he said, if a court order said something about what might happen to the jail that the law has been filed.

William Schwartz, legal counsel for the building commission, agreed with the spraying is moving as fast as it can on the project and he said the law will probably not change anything.

Everything is moving along as fast as possible.

Nothing more can be done by the law. It is not from the county board is closing to make for the new jail but is not named in the lawsuit.

Although Schwartz said he doesn't believe there will be a major setback, for the building plans, he said that the state actually filed suit last month that the threat of such action was well known but that the state had agreed not to take action as long as the county agrees to correct the problems which is being named.

Owens acknowledged that some progress had been made but said it simply wasn't happening fast enough.

The Illinois Department of Corrections first issued a warning to the county in December 1983 requesting that corrections be made within six months but following assurances from the county that a new facility would be constructed the state decided not to take action as long as progress was being made.

But a planned ground-breaking for May 15, 1985, came and went and there have been numerous other delays since then. To date, there has yet to be an agreement on a final proposal for the new facility.

Unappointed Senator Albert Somit said the 5 percent "will make modest headways in his administration efforts and are intended to counteract the lack of University funding at private schools during the 70's." But he said, "It is holding up its end of the bargain." Somit said "You just have to wait and see where federal cuts in higher education will be implemented. Philippines.

We want to stay connected with the Philippines, Shultz told the Senate Budget Commission, so the Philippines won't walk away. How to do that under present circumstances is a difficult task.

Shultz called the controversy an election "fraudulent." But he said professional standards at Habib is still in Manila making an assessment of the election, in which Marcos has been declared the winner over challenger Corazon Aquino.

We shouldn't be doing anything about our aid levels right now, Shultz told the Senate committee. "We're making the point that we favor of democracy and freedom and we'll stick to our principles," he said, "We need to do with care.

Shultz was questioned by Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn, who has introduced legislation to rescind all $23.5 million in U.S. aid to the Philippines for the current fiscal year. Sasser would also bring home $12.9 million from the Philippines.

"I fear if we don't pull the plug on President Marcos that the Filipinos are going to lose the United States' support in this region of the world," said Sasser.

Shultz told Sasser the election "is essentially first a Philippine problem.

"But you're right," he added. "We have a big stake there. We have a stake in freedom. We have a stake in democracy. We've got the first over and above the bases. The bases are important.

President Reagan indicated last week that the bases were paramount. But a State Department official said "any interpretation to the contrary.

Shultz was hinting at pulling out the bases is wrong." Shultz said a strong democratic system in the Philippines is essential to the long-term future of our bases," the official said.

Shultz said that both Congress and the administration have sent the Marcos government a "strong signal" of disagreement on fraud and violence in the election. He said Reagan's statement Saturday backing the Marcos government for the fraud and violence "reverberated strongly" in Manila.

Rogers, at a news conference last week, indicated that the bases were more important than democracy in the Philippines. He also said fraud occurred in both sides, a statement he corrected Saturday.

Shultz called the bases "important" and added. "We feel we have on our hands a very difficult and delicate situation and we don't want to jump at it through some preciptious action here.

The House, Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Asia, told Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger of a growing congressional consensus that most of the $23.5 million the administration has requested for the Philippines for 1987 be "put into an escrow account for release pending the establishment of a legal government that has the confidence of the Philippine people.

Weinberger said the aid is intended "to help the Philippine people to help ourselves" and vital for the Philippines to fight a growing communist insurgency.

AT THE CROSSROADS OF THE UNIVERSITY
Festival to showcase cultures

By Clotdia Slider
Staff Writer

The goal of the annual International Festival is to give people a chance to share their culture, talents, music and art with others, said Dennis Dorn, director of International Programs and Services.

"The average person doesn't get a chance to meet people from out of the United States," Dorn said, adding that the festival is a "combination of education and entertainment."

According to Dorn, almost 110 different countries will be represented in the festival, which runs from Friday to Sunday in the Student Center. Dorn said that the festival, founded by L. Clark Davis, has been held at SIU-C for over 25 years.

International artists will be on exhibit Friday from 4 to 9 p.m., Saturday from 2 to 8 p.m., and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. in Ballrooms A and B.

An international fashion show will be held Saturday at 7 p.m. in Ballroom D and a dance party at 9 p.m. in the Big Muddy Room.

A cultural talent show is set for 3 p.m. Sunday in Ballroom D. An international buffet featuring foods popular in Europe, India, Greece and South America begins at 11 a.m. in the Renaissance Room. Tickets are $7.75 for students and senior citizens, $8 for adults and $4 for children at the door.

A reception Saturday at 5 p.m. in the Gallery Lounge will highlight spouses and children of international families in the community, Dorn said.

With the assistance of its sponsors, the International Programs and Services, the International Student Council, which acts as the umbrella for the International Festival, and the Student Center, Dorn said the International Festival will be a success.

He said he expects over 1,000 people to attend the events, which he said will be as attractive as in previous years.

 Classes started by health group

The Delta Health Club, located at the intersection of routes 13 and 146, will start a new six-week session of classes Monday.

Classes will include swimming for persons beginning at 3 months and older, water aerobics, water exercise, aerobic dance, martial arts and a variety of child classes.

The club will also offer a Red Cross Lifeguard course this session. Completion of this course will enable students to be guards.

Registration must be in by Feb. 21. To register, call Pamela Barnes at 597-3377 or 597-3378.

SIU-C workers donate $58,000

SIU-C employees gave $58,070 to Carbondale's United Way Campaign, said coordinator Joan Choezn.

Contributions represented a $236 increase over the 1984 campaign totals, although the number of individual contributors decreased, Choezn said.

Winning awards for increases in contributions or contributors are the Office of Student Affairs, the Office of Campus Services and the School of Agriculture.

Ten campus units received awards for outstanding participation in the campaign. They were Airport Operations, the Bursar's Office, the Career Development Office, University Housing, the Office of International Programs and Services, the Ombudsmen, the Office of Project Development and Management, the Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance, University Communications, and the Zoology Department.

Groups offer practice at foreign conversation

By Darci Allen

If you speak a foreign language but don't have anyone to talk to, one of the foreign language clubs on campus may be the solution to your problem.

The difference between the two clubs on campus is their structure. Tables are informal gatherings of students interested in the language while clubs are registered Student Organization with the exception of the French club.

The Spanish table meets every Thursday at 5 p.m. at the Island Pub. According to Len Hartman, the group's adviser, occasionally, native speakers are not there and other times group members just sit and practice speaking Spanish. Hartman said, "We try to provide an atmosphere where no one worries about making mistakes," Hartman said.

The German table gets together at Papa C's after 5 p.m. on Fridays, said adviser Fred Beitz. He said at one time the group was very active, but for various reasons, it fell apart.

"Now, at times, we have parties like Oktoberfest that are based on German tradition," he said.

Like other tables, the German table mainly practices conversing in German. Betz said.

Olga Orecchiva, adviser to the Russian table, said it meets Tuesdays at noon in the Student Center cafeteria. "Only five or six students are there and we get a conversation going in Russian," she said.

Sarah Heyer, Orecchiva's graduate assistant, said the main purpose of the Russian club is to promote understanding of the Russian language and culture.

"We get together Fridays at noon at Papa C's and speak Russian," she said. "We also show contemporary Russian films, and at gatherings we have Russian style entertainment," Heyer said.

Maggie Childs, adviser to the East Asian club, said the club has no formal meeting time or place.

The group takes field trips to St. Louis to see Japanese movies or to eat Japanese food, Childs said. The number of students participating depends on the event, she added.

The French club is an inactive RSO, according to faculty adviser Ron Ciguerre, but steps are being taken to reactivate it.

The club meets at 4:30 p.m. Fridays at Papa C's, according to former faculty adviser Judith Adly.

The goal of the club is to foster use of the French language and become acquainted with the country's culture, Adly said.

Court decision to climax legal battle over innuendo

SPANAWAY, Wash. (UP) Matthew Fraser delivered his student campaign speech at Bethel High School in less than a minute. It prompted a three-year legal battle that is now about to be heard by the Supreme Court.

Fraser acknowledges that the speech, which contains sexual innuendo but no dirty words, was "travelous." Even his parents feel it was "not bad taste." But did the school have the right to discipline Fraser because they judged his words until the ears of students?

The Bethel School Board believes it's a fighting issue. It has appealed the case, first to the 4th Circuit Court in San Francisco, and now to the Supreme Court. The board is challenging a lower-court ruling by a federal judge that obscurely standards should be applied uniformly in society, whether or not a school co-education or on-skid row.

Board members see it as a question of local control of schools and whether administrators have a right, as they see it, to guarantee a level of decency and civility for their students.

"If I feel it's a case that needs to be tested and I'm very proud of our board," says Jerry Hoeman, the Bethel school superintendent, "they have taken a very difficult stand and I believe that in this day and age.

For Fraser, 20, winning his case before the Supreme Court would be a First Amendment free speech victory, not to mention the SBO in damages determined to be the value of instruction he lost during the two days he was suspended in 1981.

"It's very bizarre that this one gets all the notoriety, because it was so frivolous," says Fraser, now a political science major at the University of California, Berkeley. "You wouldn't have thought they would do anything about it.

Both sides will get their day in court when the Supreme Court hears arguments on the Bethel School District vs. Fraser in early March. Fraser plans to be there.

Attorneys will have the opportunity to dissect the short nominating speech Fraser delivered on behalf of a friend running for a student body office. It contained no four-letter words, but there was enough sexual innuendo that he was called into the principal's office the next day and suspended.

Fraser's speech went like this:

"I know a man who is firm. He's firm in his pants; he's firm in his shirt; his character is firm. But most of all, his belief in you, the students of Bethel, is firm.

Jeff Kubilin is a man who takes his point and pounds it in. If necessary, he'll take an issue and nail it to the wall. He doesn't attack things in spurs. He drives hard, pushing and pulling until finally he succeeds.

"Jeff is a man who will go to the very end, even the climax, for each and every one of you.

"So vote for Jeff for A.B. vice president. He'll never come between you and the best our high school can be."

Rather than accept his suspension, Fraser approached the American Civil Liberties Union. The ACLU connected Fraser with attorney Jeffrey Haley, who helped the then-17-year-old senior bring suit.

U.S. District Judge Jack Tanner found the school district's "disruptive conduct rule" as applied to Fraser to be unconstitutionally vague. Tanner also held that Fraser's speech was not obscene.

But Fraser wanted to be vindicated on the issue of free speech, so his attorney argued most vehemently in court.

"If students have a right to freedom of speech in a school, then there must be someplace where their rights apply," says Haley. "I submit students must have the right to gather in groups and speak to one another."

HECHT'S

University Mall Carbondale
WASHINGTON (UPI) - At least three key NASA officials did not know the company that made the shuttle booster rocket advised against launching the Challenger because of cold weather, the head of the panel investigating the disaster said Wednesday.

Chairman William Rogers also said the NASA officials did not know of the events that led to the reversal of Morton Thiokol's recommendation on the eve of the Jan. 28 launch explosion.

Furthermore, Rogers said in a statement read by spokesman Mark Rensager that although Thiokol management eventually approved flight plans, "a number of engineers at Thiokol still strongly urged against the launch.

THE CONCERN on the part of Thiokol engineers was that the unusually cold, bitter weather might stiffen the synthetic rubber O-ring gaskets used to prevent 5,000-degree gases from escaping from joints in the shuttle's booster rockets.

Photographs of the disastrous flight clearly show a jet of fire streaming from the joint area 15 seconds before Challenger's external fuel tank exploded 73 seconds after liftoff, destroying the ship and killing its crew of seven.

Rogers said the commission learned during a secret session Feb. 10 that Thiokol on Jan. 27 "had recommended Challenger not be launched due to weather conditions but later the same day reversed its decision."

He said the panel learned more details about that fatal decision-making process at a meeting Feb. 14 at the Cape Canaveral, Fla., launch site.

"IT WAS further learned that at least three key NASA officials had not been notified and did not know of the recommendation of Thiokol not to launch or the events leading up to Thiokol's change in mind as reflected in the telefax of Monday evening," Rogers said.

On Feb. 13, Rogers, a former secretary of state, issued a statement saying the decision-making process "may have been flawed" and that his panel - created by President Reagan - did not want NASA officials involved in that process investigating themselves.

Spokesman Weinberg declared to identify the key NASA officials who were not informed of the events leading up to the launch decision.

Rogers added that Thiokol and Thiokol were asked to collect "any and all documents, memoranda and personal notes by all persons who took part in that decision-making process." and deliver them over by the close of business Friday.

The commission scheduled public sessions Feb. 25-26 "to carefully consider all aspects of the weather, launch pad, concerns about the SRB (solid rocket booster) and any related problems with particular reference to the decision to launch the Challenger," Rogers said.

He also said working groups of commission members will shortly visit the Kennedy Space Center launch site, the Marshall Space Flight Center at Huntsville, Ala., and Thiokol's operations at Brigham City, Utah, "in order to obtain additional data and material."

The Washington Post reported in Wednesday's editions that one unidentified commission member said the revelations about Thiokol's decision "shook us to our socks."

Haitian youths seek help from United States

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti

As their campaign against the Haitian government intensified, the young people of Croix-des-Bouquets used a strange symbol — the American flag.

The act had two purposes — to appeal for U.S. support in the movement against near-Claudes Duvalier, and to allay U.S. fears that the campaign was communist-inspired.

“We didn’t want the United States to say we were communists,” said Etienne Grass, a 1-day-old student in the city about 90 miles north of Port-au-Prince. “They’re very afraid of communists in the Caribbean.”

Grass draped an American flag over his shelters shoulders and marched through Gonavises in the round of demonstrations that began Jan. 6.

Afterward, security forces came to search his house and Bishop Emmanuel Constant helped him hide in a nearby village.

Grass stayed in hiding until Duvalier was forced from power, in a U.S. Air Force jet Feb. 7, ending 28 years of authoritarian rule by the Duvalier family.

U.S. officials say they were not directly involved in pressuring Duvalier to resign. Many say Washington played a key role in events, as they say it has since the U.S. occupation of the Caribbean country from 1915 to 1934.

Perhaps more important, say many residents, is the role the United States takes in supporting the Haitians as they struggle to construct a government and economy devastated by years of mismanagement and neglect.

“The American presence is a necessary factor in politics here,” said a top Roman Catholic Church official who provided the spiritual backing for the anti-Duvalier movement, urging people of the western hemisphere’s poorest nation to demand better living conditions and rights.

The often stormy relations between the Haitian and American governments grew increasingly strained in 1984 as the United States pressed Duvalier for democratic reforms in exchange for continuing U.S. aid. Residents say.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Jeffrey Life described U.S.-Haitian relations at the time as “correct,” but conceded that some of Duvalier’s ministers might have appreciated the careful monitoring of U.S. aid, aimed at reducing the amount shipped off for personal use.

Claims that Haiti’s biggest aid donor and paid 25 percent of the $187.2 million the country received in foreign assistance in 1983, a General Accounting Office report showed.

“Duvalier couldn’t crush the opposition because he always wanted more money from the United States,” a businessman said. “That’s why he had to make that fake election” — the July 1985 referendum that increased Duvalier’s power by a startling margin.

“We were very disappointed in the referendum,” Life said.

“The government’s actions made it clear that its intentions were not in keeping with the president’s fine rhetoric earlier in the year.”

As the end of 1985 approached, it became clear that certification of a human rights report necessary for the release of part of the $56 million in U.S. aid slated for Haiti was in jeopardy. On Jan. 30, the State Department said it would not certify the report at that time.

“It signaled the removal of U.S. moral support,” the church official said. “Without U.S. support, there was nothing left holding up the government.”

In the seven days between the mistaken White House announcement that Duvalier had fled and his actual departure, Haitians in the capital reacted with a mixture of hope and relief, the United States seemed to intensify the anti-Duvalier protest, and the Duvalier government had not been able to provide the United States had not been able to provide.

The 30-year-old president was in a Paris hospital at the time. Meanwhile, the United States government had been in a Paris hospital at the time. Meanwhile, the United States government had been

Body tests, nutrition quiz focus of Rec’s Fitness Day

By Catherine Edman
Staff Writer

People using the Recreation Center Wednesday afternoon tested their areas of fitness with tests to determine deficiencies and learn about their “Fitness Day.”

Two types of tests could be taken on that day, one for those who had high blood pressure readings and another for those with high cholesterol readings. The tests were conducted by Student Health Service.

Both tests were administered by Student Health Service personnel. The blood pressure test included testing for high blood pressure, and the cholesterol test measured total blood cholesterol levels.

Participants were required to fill out a questionnaire prior to taking the tests, which included information on their medical history and habits.

The results of the tests were revealed to the participants on the spot, and they were given advice on how to improve their health.

Officials to investigate cyanide link in deaths

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (UPI) — Medical authorities Wednesday secured reports on areas of deaths this year, checking for any links to cyanide-laced Tylenol, and Johnson & Johnson placed full-page newspaper ads in its campaign to regain consumer confidence.

Officials said there was a "remote possibility" of cyanide contamination as authorities pressed the investigation into the Feb. 11 death of Diane Eshroot from cyanide-laced Extra Strength Tylenol capsules.

A preliminary review of autopsy reports on 14 people who died since Jan. 1 in the immediate area where Eshroot was killed showed no cyanide poisoning, officials said.

Experts on computer-aided design design contest

Ian Bloomfield of Elkins, a student in advanced technical studies, has won an honorable mention in a nationwide contest for his computer-aided design entry.

T&W Systems, a computer aided design (CAD) and computer aided manufacturing (CAM) software company, sponsored the competition as one way to encourage undergraduate students to pursue careers in computer-aided design fields.

Bloomfield designed a poster which featured the Wright brothers’ plane, that has been chosen to promote the aviation program.

Computer-aided design uses two-dimensional structures to produce working designs in fields such as engineering, graphics and interior design. Bloomfield was awarded $50 and SIU-C received a $1,500 computer aided design software package.
Anti-Marcos businessman shot to death

GLENDALE, Calif. (UPI) — An executive for an anti-Marcos Filipino newspaper was found shot to death in his home Wednesday, a day after he received a letter threatening his assassination, authorities said.

Oscar Salvatierra, 41, marketing director of the Philippine News, received a letter threatening his life, said Ben Aniceto, editor of the weekly English-language newspaper with a national circulation of about 100,000.

"Based on this threat, we can only attribute this drastically act to politics because the Philippine News has always reported the truth about the Marcos regime," Aniceto said.

A second threat was also received by the newspaper's sales executive, Aniceto said.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., informed of the killing by the newspaper's San Francisco office, called for an FBI investigation of the slaying.

"In the basis of Marcos' behavior in the Philippines, there is every reason to believe that these suspensions are well-founded," Cranston said.

Marcos was declared the winner last week in a national election tainted with fraud.

Glenview police were called to Salvatierra's shortly after 11 p.m. by residents who heard shots.

Baby food examined for glass contamination

ATLANA (UPI) — Food and Drug Administration analysts examined Gerber Products Co. baby food jars from three Georgia stores Wednesday to determine if any contained glass particles like those reported by consumers in Georgia, Florida and New York.

Lamar Farr, director of compliance for the FDA in Atlanta, said the jars were picked up from groceries in Statesboro and Savannah, where an unidentified woman said she found the glass while feeding her 9-month-old daughter.

"We'll be looking to determine which Gerber plant filled the units," Farr said.

The Georgia contamination was reported in jars of strained bananas and strained carrots while glass slivers were reported by a Miami couple in a bottle of Gerber cherry apple juice.

The glass was found less than 24 hours after Gerber said there was no basis for "all the hoopla" surrounding claims by Kathleen Ringhoff of Schenectady, N.Y., that she found glass particles in a jar of Gerber strained peaches.

Saturday Night Live’s end near as critics call for cancellation

By Mark Schweb
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI).—The crisis cannot continue much longer: Kill Saturday Night Live, producer Lorne Michaels and studio executives urge NBC to pull the plug, trash it, kiss it goodbye.

Controversy has been something of a warm feeling for Saturday Night Live since it came alive at 11:30 p.m. on Dec. 11, 1975 in NBC’s Studio 6B, Chicago. Just over a quarter of a century of time passed before Chevy Chase, Dan Aykroyd, John Belushi, and Laraine Newman and Garrett Morris were collectively revered by a generation as the modern, day-equals-generation Millennial ideal.

They were master peddlers of humor and the show clicked time and again.

BATTLES BETWEEN network censors, producers, cast members, and guest hosts just added to the legend. Over the years, through the cast changes, and after Belushi’s death, Saturday Night Live still sailed with creativity and originality, but the show to watch on any network, much like the David Letterman Show is the “TV” show today.

But as the show evolved from renegade outtake series to comedy institution, something was lost. It has never been more apparent than this season, with a new cast and an old producer, Lorne Michaels, riding shotgun over a dead horse.

Nothing can erase the low blows, not Mick Jagger, the bad boy of rock, nor even Madonna, the holy roller of pop, nor President Reagan’s son, especially not President Reagan’s son in his undergarments.

“IT IS an embarrassment, not only to NBC, but to television. It’s time someone showed some mercy and pulled the plug,” a TV Guide reviewer wrote this week, after First Son Ron Reagan stripped to his skimpily Fruit of the Looms and appeared on the takedown of Tom Cruise’s strut in the movie “Risky Business.”

You say Saturday Night Live has taken heart before? Sure enough, the NBC savant was always next week’s show, which soothed egos irritated the week before, or fell back within the censer’s frame of taste, or stopped all over the funny bone again.

This season, there has been no “next week” to look forward to. When big-name name Madonna and Reagan wind up wallowing in the SNL wasteland, it is time for Saturday Night to make peace with itself and die gracefully, but, with no chance of another Frankensteen-like rebirth.

Before we cremate the remains, a quiet moment of TRUMPED ORDER.

Every SNL fan remembers Belushi wiggling his anti-war circles in the circle Joe Jackson, swishing his sword through sets of Samurai, or the way he said, “Pepsi, no coke.”

It was great when Bill Murray was the comic of the Nativity scene, but the Martin consumed mass quantities of beer and potato chips as the Coneheads, when Joe Piscopo did Sammy Davis Jr., when Murphy did Gunby, Steve Martin did Deadbeat.

Those were the days.

It is hard to live up to one past and that is the final nail in the coffin for the current cast of SNL characters. The best is impossible to beat.

So farwell, Saturday Night Live. It’s been real. Well, our loss of laughs. Merci, merci. |
Transportation for disabled topic of meeting

By Tricia Yocum
Staff Writer

Discussion of transportation in Carbondale, especially as it relates to disabled people, will continue at the meeting of the Partnership for Progressive Approaches to Disability issues at 5 p.m. Thursday in the City Council chambers.

Carol Potter, partnership president, said the Transportation Committee has been gathering data about different systems and has kept in touch with the Illinois Department of Transportation. IDOT has expressed an interest in working with the partnership and will meet with city and partnership officials during the first week in March.

The expertise of IDOT could help the partnership develop a feasible transportation plan, Potter said.

The group is looking at the possibility of a dial-a-ride system for the disabled, perhaps with fixed routes to areas outside Carbondale. Although the partnership deals basically with needs of the disabled, Potter said, those who need public transportation might be able to use the system as well, depending on available space.

Although the Undergraduate Student Organization is looking into a system of mass transit, especially for students, Potter said that’s not exactly the partnership’s plan.

“We’re wanting to use the resources that are in Carbondale now,” she said.

Coordinating the vehicles and services of various agencies is one way to do that.

“We’re not asking the agencies to give anything up totally,” she said. “That wouldn’t be fair to anybody.”

However, agencies may be asked to make either vehicles, services or funds available to create a more efficient system.

The partnership is drafting a letter to Gov. James Thompson to keep him up to date about plans for transportation for the disabled in Carbondale.
Ticket manager Lee Trueblood wore a broad smile Saturday night as fans searched for their seats while many more waited to get in.

The battle between SIU-ED versus 12th-ranked Missouri State was not in question.

If the game wasn't sold out, it seemed at least 80 percent of the Arena's 10,000 capacity was filled. Many thought that almost 9,000 occupied the noisy, excited Arena. Mike Reis, play-by-play announcer for WDLW, estimated the crowd at 9,000.

Conservatively estimated at around 7,500, assistant athletic director Bruce McCutcheon said:

Whatever the estimate, there seemed to be little doubt the Salukis would entertain well over 7,000 spectators that night but it didn't turn out that way.

After the game, the official attendance was listed at 6,550 amid cries of "No way!" "There were a lot more than that!" and "You have to be kidding!" Saluki coach Rich Herrin became even more dismayed after learning he drew a seven-point lead, gruffly saying, "I just can't believe there were 7,000 people here."

"We really caught a lot of flak about it," McCutcheon said. "People would ask, 'How many were there? 7,500?' When we'd tell them, they'd say, 'No, you're crazy. It was sold out.'"

After taking more criticism, McCutcheon and Trueblood presumably had enough

From the Press Box

and tried to find out what was wrong with the attendance figures. The official's turnstile number of 6,961, indicated nothing unusual, but with careful observation, he and Bruce believe they may have pinpointed the problem.

"In the upper concourse where the bleachers are, seats are 18-inches long," Trueblood explained. "People who buy in sold-out sections, say sections EP or QQ, don't want to be crowded. So they'll go sit in sections LL or UI where we won't sell a seat. It looks like those sections are sold when they're not."

Simply stated, one could say the problem lies in where the spectators park their fannies. Parents are able to spread out in the bleachers and it looks like there are more people than there actually are. McCutcheon thought.

"But when you see how much space 6,000 people can take, you have to wonder where you're going to put an additional 1,000," he added.

Other than unfulfilled expectations, attendance has been good this year, McCutcheon said.

"On average, we're up by over 500 people per half game from last year," he said.

McCutcheon said the Saluki's long-time interest in coach Rich Herrin is obviously a factor, but he has his own opinions.

"This is a very exciting team to watch, constantly hustling, constantly working. They're playing a lot better than anyone ever dreamt. It's that exciting brand of basketball that people come to see," he said.

"The Arena is here to have large crowds, Trueblood said, more of the same.

"The students just look at the bottom line. They're not looking at how well you play."

Teutopolis ranks as state's best; looking for undefeated season

TEUTOPOLIS, Ill. (UPI) — Coach Ken Crawford doesn't have to look for a weak spot the way most coaches do.

"I can't find any real weaknesses. If there's a weakness here, it's probably in me," Crawford said.

The Teutopolis Wooden Shoes, ranked the best team in the state among small schools by the United Press International Board of Coaches, take on a team into this week's Illinois High School Association regional tourney.

The players, denied a trip to the state tournament in Champaign the last two years after being defeated by Flora, are thinking about an undefeated season.

"They aren't cocky," Crawford said of his players. "I think they're confident but they're not cocky. They come to the point where they think when they walk into the damn gym people will bow down."

Four of this year's starters were starters on last year's 21-7 squad. Crawford's fourth team, Teutopolis finished 5th in Crawford's first season but improved steadily since.

Teutopolis averages nearly 70 points a game and each of the five starters are at or very near double figures. Opponents are being forced to miss 60 percent of their shots.

"I have some great individual defensive players," Crawford said. "If you don't rebound and you don't play defense, you don't play at Teutopolis."

Crawford said the Teutopolis fans, who saw the girls team finish second in the state last year, appreciate good defense. "The fans here will give the players more credit for playing defense than for playing great offense," Crawford said.

Crawford maintains a close, friendly and relaxed relationship with his players.

He laces their ankles before games and practices and leashes them about their girlfriends, or lack of.

The players are allowed a few minutes before each practice to run scrimmage during which each player tries to dunk the basketball, although only 6-foot-6 center Bob Zerrusen can do it with any consistency.

The scrimmages run during practice are also loose: the play is rough and the players, no matter how big or small, bully each other physically and verbally. A missed shot by a starter brings howls of satisfaction from the reserves.

Crawford and the players are also looking forward to a possible rematch with Flora Saturday after Zerrusen, who leads the team with an 18-point-per-game average, "dropped it in the bowl" the last meeting.

Scholarship limits upset Cornell

By Steve Koulos
Staff Writer

Unlike football or basketball, soccer is a team sport. Bill Cornell doesn't have the luxury of playing the role of coach. His recruiting budget is limited to scholarships. Now the NCAA allows a tiered program of 14 full-ride scholarships, Cornell has to divide the scholarships among his 24 athletes in order to have a well-balanced team with depth. With 17 events in the indoor season, Cornell says he needs 30 athletes in order to have a competitive team and doesn't understand the NCAA's rationale for allowing only 14 scholarships.

"You never had a scholarship, and he's hurt more than you do. SPORTS in the numbers as scholarship athletes for the number of participants needed," Cornell said. "Then again, maybe I'm biased because I'm in the track coach.

Whoops

HAMILTON, N.Y. (UPI) - The Colgate university basketball team will probably be more careful to check for distractions after getting lost and facing a stiff game because the team arrived at the wrong college. A sign between Binghamton and Colgate University Monday night had to be delayed for an hour after the Boston team ended up at an airport in Binghamton University in Binghamton, some 60 miles northwest of the intended college, university officials said. The Bu - terriers had drawn into a huge game in New York on Saturday and boarded a bus that was not the right one. It was mistakenly been given the directions to Cornell, said a spokesman for the Colgate sports information office. Apparently, the team had never been sleeping on their journey and did not realize they were in Binghamton until they arrived at Cornell. "I must call from the team at 10:45 p.m. from Cornell and we thought they were kidding," the spokesman said. "We've never had anything like this happen." The mixup did not stop the Toros too much, as they beat Colgate by a final of 50-39.

In order to justify who deserves the greatest amount of scholarship money, Cornell's a great deal of emphasis on how his athletes perform in the Missouri Valley Conference indoor and outdoor meets. In basketball you can lose a conference game and bounce back two days later by posting a win, but in track the regular-season scholar should protect his conference ranking. Cornell said. In track, the only thing people will remember next year is in which you finished in the conference meet and how you did in the nationals." But Cornell stressed that just because an athlete performs well in the conference championships, it doesn't mean he can get away with slacking off in the regular-season meets. We look how our athletes perform the entire season," Cornell said. "We do want them to give 110 percent." Cornell said if an athlete doesn't perform well in the MVC meets or in the regular-season meet, it doesn't necessarily mean he'll refuse to renew their scholarship. "If an athlete is trying his best and is working hard in practice, it's very likely keep him on scholarship," Cornell said.

But if he's lazy, practices don't and doesn't try, there is a good reason why he won't be around next year. I tend to be more flexible with the freshmen because it's tough being away from home for the first time and adjusting to college life,

Cornell said he evaluates his athletes' performances by updating a weekly point system, which gives him an idea on how well his athletes are producing.

The leading point scorer on the team is weightman Tom Smith, who has racked up 29 points and has qualified for the nationals in the 25-pound weight event.

The second through fifth leading scorers on the team are sprinter Connor Mason (29), and middle-distance runners Andreas Pettigrew (21), Mike Elliott (20.75), and Brett Garrett (15.75). Even though Cornell isn't surprised with the performances of any of his top point scorers, he said Mason is the most improved athlete this year and Garrett is doing an ex-

Excellent.

Mason, a sophomore from Paducah, Ky., has set personal bests this season in three events the 60-yard dash (6.34), the 200-yard dash (21.50), and the 440-yard dash (49.47). Garrett, a sophomore from Sparta, has set personal bests this season in the 600-yard dash (11:16.7), and the 1000-meter run (3:29.34).

"Garrett said that although most of his scholarship athletes are pulling their weight, seven athletes are not living up to their potential.

Blues’ owner in feud: mayor says he’ll sue

ST. LOUIS (UPI) - Mayor Vincent Schoenheit and Harry Ornest, owner of the St. Louis Blues, are engaged in a public battle, and the mayor of the city is publicly again what the other said and won't make any public comment on the matter. The two have clashed publicly in recent months.

In a letter dated Feb. 12, Schoenheit told Ornest he "respected your persistent efforts, as a responsible leader of the community's financial institutions, as a tireless worker for the betterment of the city of St. Louis. I give you my utmost respect and admiration, and I respect your efforts to provide the best possible facilities for St. Louis sports fans."

Ed Bushmeyer, a spokesman for the mayor, said Tuesday there should be no reason for a lawsuit because of Ornest's pledge to keep the Blues in St. Louis. However, Ornest said the mayor's talk of a lawsuit stirs ill will against the team.

What he is doing is using a "hypothetical issue to neutralize all his failures to meet commitments," Ornest said.

Ornest's suit over the 5 percent sales tax as pending in St. Louis circuit court.

Such a move was resisted by the Board of Aldermen.

Last month, Ornest rejected a offer to a Canadian group to move the Blues to Hamilton. He has said repeatedly he is committed to move the team in St. Louis and that the city is not about to go "anywhere."

Saluki centers enjoy competition

By Anita J. Stoner Staff Writer

When opposing basketball coaches talk about recruiting players, they tend to comment on speed, size and the Salukis' physical strength. They all mention Mary Bergbush, who can dead lift 310 pounds.

The 6-6, 215-pound starting center pumps iron whenever she can, otherwise she saves her energy for games against opposing teams.

Bergbush classifies her in two types and prefers to challenge the hefty strong front to the quicker, stronger center because she figures her size to hold her ground.

"Leaning on a person legally, you can't let them do that," she said.

But the sophomore Bergbush faces the slower quick version in practice against 6-4 Saluki freshman Cathy Kampwerth, a matchup which keeps proving both players.

"Cathy's good competition because she's taller," Bergbush said. "Last season was the first time I faced someone of her size, but a sure lot.

"If Bergbush and Kampwerth could be cloned, science would make them major accomplishments.

Saluki basketball and bowl players work hard to reach their goals. They have to "be a lot tougher to play defense against her and if I ever want to score against her," Kampwerth said.

Saluki Coach Cindy Scott says Bergbush only drawback is lack of quickness. "Nobody gets her around, for sure.

She's very physical, very competitive and her parents do not let them do that," Scott said.

Scott counts the blessings of having two verbal commitments, especially when Bergbush strength turns into foul trouble. The current starter did not worry about the future when Kampwerth, one of the nations' most sought-after 1985 recruits, fights for that spot in the line-up.

"Who knows — Cathy may blossom over the summer. I do not know what happens," she said. "We're fortunate to have two good centers because neither of these girls in the game, it's no problem, the job will get done.

Earlier in the season, Bergbush and Kampwerth both started. A lineup egot the Saluki coaches might try next year.

Diving into her starting role as a freshman and emerging with one of the best freshman statistics in Saluki history, Bergbush obviously did become a force in the lane overnight.

Growing up on a dairy farm at Brilliant, Wash., Bergbush said she "had a lot to do in her spare time. Bergbush started shooting to a hoop attached to the barn. Paul would compete with her, but he never became as interested.

A six-footer by seventh grade and a student athlete for basketball for St. Mary's grade school because there were two girls' basketball teams. The mom and dad pushed Bergbush to basketball.

Bergbush said she learned good work habits early and got tough.

As she grew up in the skin, Bergbush used to ride to school near a city. "But when my dad got here, I wanted to go back to the country, to the farm, where no one else is around," she said. "I love walking on trails in the woods to get away from it all.

A recreation major, Bergbush would like to return to the Brilliant area and work at one of the many nearby state parks or at least find some type of outdoor job after graduation.

Driving long distances hurts her father's back, so her parents don't see many games in person. She enjoys both games in Iowa to watch her brother Paul, a graduated Drake and Northern Iowa.

"Throughout the year, having my parents come to games makes Christmas. My family's became more important to me," Bergbush said. "I think about them a lot."
