Judge: Forest not subject to commercial use until new management plan is developed.

By Erik Bush
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A federal judge ruled Friday that the Shawnee National Forest will not be subject to commercial use until a new management plan is written, a decision environmental groups call a victory and Forestry officials say is "fair."

J. Phil Gilbert, federal judge for the U.S. Southern District of Illinois, ruled Friday that the U.S. Forestry Service has been negligent in its management of the Shawnee National Forest. The decision halts all current actions having any environmental impact on the forest and places any proposed actions under tight scrutiny by local environmental groups.

"Until the Forest Service has a chance to rework their management plan, certain activities will be illegal and enforced by the appropriate authorities," Gilbert said.

Gilbert ruled that commercial logging, all-terrain vehicle usage and gas and oil lease development would no longer be legal until the Forest Service rewrites or amends its current plan for forest management over the next three years.

"Bringing a close to this dispute would take the wisdom of King Solomon," Gilbert said. "Unfortunately, I am not King Solomon. Therefore, I make this decision in the best interest of the people."

The decision ends five months of negotiations between U.S. Forest Service lawyers and environmental groups regarding various aspects of Shawnee National Forest management.

Black Think Tank plans cooperative effort with other RSOs to register student voters

By Tammy Taylor
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Although noon today is the deadline for registering for the March primaries, an SIUC organization will still try to educate students and get students involved in November's election, a leader of the organization says.

Enoch X, founder of the Carbondale chapter of Black Think Tank, said the Black Think Tank is an SIUC registered student organization that helps to raise awareness of African-American issues.

He said the organization, in coordination with other registered student organizations, plans to sponsor a massive voter-registration drive in upcoming months to register people for the November general election. He said the plans have not been finalized, but ideas to work in the community registering voters for the election are being discussed.

X said he wants to register people to vote because they must have knowledge about their rights and freedoms in order to make educated decisions concerning which candidates serve their community's needs.

X said the upcoming presidential election is very important because it is the last election of this century. He said it is vital for Americans to realize the power of the freedoms they possess.

"Without knowledge of the freedom to vote, a person's vote goes to nothing," X said. "Too many people are ignorant of the voting process and can be easily manipulated and used."

As a way to get people to vote, the Black Think Tank, as part of an SIUC Black Affairs Council program to celebrate African-American History Month, sponsored a voter registration drive recently to increase voter participation in the March primary election.

Etta White, a voter registrar for precinct five, said the drive was geared toward African Americans, but people of all nationalities were encouraged to register. She said there was active participation by all races.

"For some reason, students seem more interested in voting for this election," White said.

She attributed this interest to students' increased awareness of the political process and how actively participating in elections can affect

Speaker discusses African art, heritage

By Mary Beth Arimond
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Rowland Abiodun, one of the world's foremost experts on African art, spoke about the connection of power and life itself Thursday as part of Black History Month, the co-chairman of the SIUC Black History Committee said.

Frederick Williams, director of the University Honors Program and co-chairman of the SIUC Black History Committee, said Abiodun was selected by the committee because he is a living part of the communication of human life.

Abiodun, a professor of fine arts and black studies at Amherst College in Massachusetts, said he showed how the power of leadership authorities in Africa related with one another.

"The audience will reconnect with their ancestral philosophy of wisdom," he said. "They're going to understand that some of the powerful verbal and visual metaphor enabled our ancestors to survive the difficulties of the middle passage."

Abiodun said he is an author and co-author of four prominent books: "Yoruba: Nine Centuries of African Art and Thought," "Yoruba Art and Aesthetics" and "The Yoruba Artist: New Theoretical Perspectives in African Art" for the Smithsonian. He just finished writing "What Follows: 6 is More Than 7: Understanding African Art."

Yoruba refers to members of a large ethnic group residing in southwest Nigeria and southeast Benin.

Robert Fox, associate professor of English and a member of the SIUC Black History Month Committee, said he has known Abiodun since 1978, when they lived in Nigeria. He said he wanted Abiodun to remind people of the African roots of the black experience.

"We want people to know the African roots are quite broad," Fox said. "The main goal of this lecture is to celebrate African-Americans."

Fox said the University plans to create a new Core Curriculum that is BALKAN LEADERS TRY TO SAVE PEACE ACCORD — ROME—The presidents of Bosnia, Serbia and Croatia began a weekend of critical negotiations here Saturday in an attempt to salvage the Bosnian peace accord. Gathering in a vast, white marble conference hall at the Italian Foreign Ministry, Presidents Alija Izetbegovic of Bosnia, Franjo Tudjman of Croatia and Slobodan Milosevic of Serbia shook hands and listened to diplomats from the United States, the European Union and Russia grimly remind them that none of them is fully complying with the peace deal to which they agreed in November near Dayton, Ohio. The fragile peace being built in Bosnia after 3 1/2 years of the bloodiest conflict in Europe since World War II could collapse, they were told, if they do not carry out the Dayton plan. Serbia and Croatia, for their part, have all but ignored requirements under the peace plan that they cooperate with the International War Crimes Tribunal.

REFUGEES' RETURN SPARKS HOUSING SHORTAGE — KIGALI, Rwanda—As the governments of Rwanda, Zaire, Burundi and Tanzania step up pressure on Hutu refugees to return home, this nation faces a massive housing shortage that could crush its efforts to lure refugees back. "We realize this is a problem we must tackle," said Christine Umutoyi, a top official in Rwanda's Ministry of Rehabilitation. "We cannot have a situation where the refugees are coming back and find themselves with no place to settle." A solution to the looming housing crisis is critical because, historically, high population density has made land rights one of the most explosive issues in this small central African nation.

TENSIONS SPLIT POTENTIAL CAMPAIGN COALITION — MANCHESTER, N.H.—Can Patrick J. Buchanan forge a coalition of religious conservatives, Reagan Democrats and Perot voters? "Absolutely no; unequivocally no," said pollster Gordon Black, who has studied the Perot electorate. "Buchanan's social conservatism is anathema to the bulk of the centrist vote; it's one of the reasons that the Republican Party in general cannot recapture these voters." Maybe, argues Gary L. Bauer, president of the conservative Family Research Council. Bauer says the candidate who can appeal to those who feel "there is something wrong with the heart and soul of the nation," and those who believe "America's best economic days are behind us," has the potential to "upset all traditional voting alliances."

MARC TRAIN SPEEDING AT 63 M.P.H. BEFORE CRASH — WASHINGTON—The engineer of a Maryland commuter train that plowed into an oncoming Amtrak train... Friday night broke rules by traveling 63 mph as he approached a stoplight and then threw the emergency brakes too late to stop before the fiery crash that killed 11 people, National Transportation Safety Board officials said last night. The violent collision during a snowy evening rush hour ripped open the lead passenger car on the MARC train and ignited a fireball, killing three MARC crew members and eight young people headed to the Washington area from a Job Corps campus in West Virginia.

ENVIRONMENTAL GROUP TAKES POLITICAL ROLE — WASHINGTON—Conservation organizations including Friends of the Earth and the Oregon Natural Resources Council have formed political-action arms to help elect House and Senate members who are receptive to their agendas. Historically, most environmental organizations have engaged in education and lobbying activities but have not participated in partisan politics.

'Spring Festival' celebrates the Year of the Rat

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Assistant Features Editor

While the Chinese New Year is usually associated with fireworks and loud national celebrations in China, the holiday will be recognized by international students on a smaller, more personal scale at SIUC.

Chinese New Year, or "Spring Festival," marks the first day of the Chinese lunar year, which is today. The celebration includes various rituals that last for 15 days.

Vivian Yang, president of the Taiwan Student Association, said one of the most recognized beliefs in relation to the Chinese New Year is the Chinese Horoscope. She said the horoscope is more for entertainment than any serious purposes.

"Some people pay attention to the horoscope, some people don't," she said. "It's not really important in regards to our New Year celebration."

Yang said calendar years are represented by different animals. She said the animals are a clue to the personality traits of the people born in that particular year. This calendar year marks the Year of the Rat.

"This is not a popular year to be born in," Yang said. "A person born in the Year of the Rat will supposedly worry about everything for the rest of the year."

Serious attention is given to the festivities during the celebrations because of many strict rituals and superstitious practices, Yang said.

Yang said one ritual is celebrated within the family on the eve of the New Year. She said the celebration is an important time for family, so all family members get together to share a huge reunion meal and worship ancestors.

Yang said that at midnight, fireworks are exploded all over town, and people visit neighbors or relatives to pass out red envelopes containing "lucky money."

"The fireworks symbolize that all the bad luck should be scared away by the noise of the explosion," she said. "The money is also handed out in a way to ensure a prosperous and good year for both family and friends."

Mike Hwang, a senior in advanced technical studies from Taiwan, said many Chinese festivals have certain superstitions to ward off misfortune.

Hwang said during the first day of the New Year, people are not allowed to sweep, wear black or speak negatively about anything.

"According to superstition, if a person sweeps the floor, they will

Lieber, SIUC to return to court

By Signe K. Skinion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC will return to court Feb. 28 for not complying with a state court preliminary injunction, a local landlord says.

Stan Lieber, landlord of Stevenson Arms, 600 W. Mill St., and an SIUC geography professor, said Thursday the University sent his daughter some enrollment information that proves SIUC administrators are not complying with a December preliminary injunction.

He said the matter is scheduled to be heard again Feb. 28 if SIUC is not in compliance with the court order.

The information Lieber's daughter, who has applied for admission to SIUC, received was an enrollment packet that did not state the option of prospective freshmen to live in off-campus housing facilities, such as Stevenson Arms, which the court has ordered.

Lieber said his attorney, Thomas Peters, will wait until the University goes to court before anything is done on Stevenson Arms' part.

"After the 14th day, Tom (Peters) will go to the judge and request a citation for contempt," Lieber said.

Peters was unavailable for comment Sunday.

University officials said they are unable to comment on the alleged violation while litigation is pending.

"Definitely we'll be going back to court for a hearing on the discovery motion," Lieber said. "And then, we'll see how much the University is dragging their feet."

The Dec. 14 preliminary injunction ordered SIUC to discontinue telling prospective freshmen that unless they are married, over-21 or living with their parents, they must live in on-campus, University-owned housing.

The court said the University must return to the old freshman housing policy that allows freshman to live in either University-owned housing or off-campus University approved facilities, such as Stevenson Arms.

On Wednesday, the 20th Circuit Court in St. Claire County ruled in a discovery motion telling SIUC to release the names and addresses of students who have applied to the University since August to local landlords while a court preliminary injunction is pending.

Tribute concert moves audience

By Jason E. Coyne
DE Arts/Entertainment Editor

William Warfield's dedication of a song about losing a loved one, in which he asked the crowd to not applaud but to take the feeling home with them from Friday's tribute to Edwin P. Romain Jr. at Shryock, caused audience members to weep during the emotion-filled finale.

Earlier, when Warfield joined Wilfred Delphin's piano playing to sing Roland Hayes' "Excerpts From the Life of Christ," the already stellar evening was elevated beyond that point.

Warfield sang "Lil' Boy-How Old Are You?" while looking out at an imaginary child in the crowd. Pleading with his hands and shuffling his feet when he sang the question, he started a one-man stage show eclipsed only by Delphin's delicate sound that was the canvas to Warfield's painting.

The SIU String Quartet, coupled with Delphin's backbone piano, was the best combination of sound created.

When Delphin took the stage, he joked briefly with the crowd, letting them know how important this tribute to his former duet partner Romain was to him. SIUC's Black History Month events are dedicated to Romain.

While Delphin sat and calmly played the setting of "Molto Moderato Quasi Lento," the quartet fingered its instruments and shifted in their chairs with the intensity of the surreal string sounds. Each meaningful stroke of the bows over their instruments formed an emotional feeling for the audience's ears.

Friday's performances were astonishing in the least, and the ultimate in musical experiences at best.

Organist Marianne Webb started the evening looking visually overwhelmed by the gigantic organ in Shryock's balcony. The audience was mesmerized with eyes glaring upward and to their right, as if they were listening to an angel's message.

If the pearl lighting in Shryock was dimmed and of a different hue, it would have been a haunting performance. Instead, it was the cosmic carnival-sounding notes that Webb produced with her fingertips that kept the crowd's ears longing for more of Mozart's "Fantasia in F Minor."

When soprano Jeanine Wagner took the stage with pianist Margaret Simmons, the two created a fine wine of sound with Mozart's "Martern Aller Arten." With her shoulders pulled all the way back and hands out in front grasping the air to give her larynx the fuel it needed, Wagner sang with more grace than an olympic diver's launch from the elevated platform.

Overall, the crowd of approximately 400 witnessed an exercise in musical mastery. The ultimate musical experience is when the sounds and emotion of the artists penetrate the soul as well as the eardrum. Friday's performances were astonishing in the least, and the ultimate in musical experiences at best.

Mock Trial program retries Boston Massacre

By Lisa M. Pangburn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

"Captain Preston" of the British troops was on the stand Saturday, being questioned about the killing of eight people in Boston.

High school students representing Carbondale, Murphysboro, Triad (in St. Jacob), Mt. Vernon and O'Fallon re-tried the Boston Massacre of 1770 this weekend at the SIU Lesar Law Building.

The Boston Massacre occurred when Bostonians were angry at the presence of British troops and British taxes. The Bostonians were protesting when the British fired upon them, killing eight people.

The students went through courtroom procedures to either defend the British soldiers that fired upon the Boston crowd or defend the eight Bostonians that were killed in the shooting.

This was the High School Mock Trial program for the Southern Illinois region. In March, four of the five schools will advance to Springfield for a statewide competition. Students

Well-intentioned Internet restrictions infringe on rights

OCCASIONALLY, IN OUR ZEAL TO PROTECT children from perceived dangers, we overstep the boundaries of our free society and inhibit the rights of adults. That is what happened recently with President Bill Clinton's signing of the Communications Decency Act on Feb. 8, 1996.

One section of this legislation attempts to control indecent material that can be viewed on the Internet. The attempts by the government to control what can be viewed are broadly applied and inhibit the First Amendment rights of adults.

IT IS OUR BELIEF THAT THE INTERNET should be considered in the context of obscenity, as are telephone and mail usage - not the narrowly defined indecency provision that is applied to public television and radio broadcasts.

Obscenity must pass a three-part test defined in the 1973 Supreme Court case Miller v. California. The three tests are (a) violates existing state statutes for sexual or excretory acts that cannot be depicted, (b) material must be "patently offensive" and "appeal to prurient interest," and (c) material must lack literary, artistic, scientific, political or other social value.

It is the last test for obscenity that is absent from the government's new indecency legislation. When the legislation was passed, a report was attached stating "patently offensive" material is intended to be judged indecent, not educational material. Unfortunately these comments are not an actual portion of the law. The American Civil Liberties Union said it is concerned that judges will only interpret the law without reviewing the report's comments.

Two Supreme Court cases illustrate the different applications of indecent and obscene definitions. The first is Sable Communications v. FCC (1989). The federal government attempted to ban dial-a-porn services. The court ruled sexual expression that is indecent, but not obscene, is protected by the First Amendment, and the government did not apply its guidelines narrowly enough without infringing upon adults' rights of free speech.

In FCC v. Pacifica Foundation (1978), the Supreme Court upheld a ruling that determined a radio station's broadcast was indecent and the government had legitimate interest in regulating broadcast because of its pervasiveness and open access.

THE INTERNET IS NOT AN OPEN BROADCAST as is television or radio. It requires an active intent to use, the same as buying a magazine or dialing a phone, so the indecency standard is improper for its regulation as it is for mail or phone use.

The ACLU, along with 19 individuals and groups, filed a lawsuit against the legislation shortly after it was signed by Clinton. On Thursday, a federal judge blocked the enforcement of the indecency act by the federal government but upheld the provision that criminalizes the display of "patently offensive" material in a venue accessible to minors.

With Internet still a relatively new medium, as with television and radio when they were first invented, how to define what should and should not be applied to control content is going to be crucial in the coming years.

While commendable in their intent - to protect children - our legislators send those same children a more chilling message when they restrict the people's rights to freely communicate.

Letters to the Editors

Rip-offs cause declining enrollment

Recently, one cannot turn on the radio or glance at a newspaper headline without seeing or hearing about the decreasing SIUC enrollment. Suddenly, many different institutions on or around campus are concerned an perplexed about this new problem. Committees and think tanks have been established to find reasons why this has become a problem.

Declining enrollment means less money for the University as well as the community. While many reasons are behind this decline, as a student I can provide some underlying causes.

Many students are fed up with having to deal with unscrupulous landlords, towing companies that take the law into their own hands, utility companies and police harassment.

The University itself is a wonderful learning institution. The entities mentioned above, however, are alienating students. The city allows the tow truck companies to extort thousands of dollars from students.

The police strut around bars in an attempt to find underage drinkers so they can write them a ticket. Anyone who has been to city court is aware that these tickets are simply a free $250 for the city. The police harass students only because they know they are easily frightened into paying the outrageous fines the court imposes.

Landlords have taken hundreds of thousands of dollars in student security deposits and other money because again, they know their stunts are intimidating. The utility companies are allowed to charge outrageous fees to turn on services such as water and cable. Everyone realizes that a $50 deposit for water is nothing more than extortion.

I am amused at how the "bloodsuckers" are scrambling as they try to figure out how to entice students to stay at SIUC and get new ones to come. It is humorous to me how so many residences and institutions that once whined and cried about students are now so concerned about keeping them.

If city and University officials really wanted to improve the image of SIUC they would spend less time worrying about college parties and Recreation Center hours and pay more attention to getting rid of tow trucks, landlords and utility companies that tarnish the University's image. If students would feel welcome in Carbondale, maybe more of them would come back and other prospective students would be compelled to come here.

Law school a 'relatively sane' place

The purpose of this letter is to say that despite the recent Simpson-Defense-Team-style public whining by certain law school faculty members, it is safe to say that the faculty (and even the administration) are mostly a sane bunch over here, as far as law people go at least. Besides an occasional bomb threat, harassment or other "petty" criminal charge against a law student, we students are a relatively sane bunch too - at least I think.

So with only 80 or soon days left until I graduate from this ob-so-peculiar place (that is, if I'm not crucified for writing this), even though I find myself muttering over and over the words "tolerance ... tolerance" and counting backward from 10 a lot, I would like to remind my fellow Dawgs of the positives of the SIU School of Law, such as:

- Small class sizes
- One of the top student/faculty ratios in the nation
- One of the most inexpensive law schools in the nation
- High-quality library and overall

- facilities
- Excellent moot court and legal writing programs
- Yes, even positive race relations

Prospective law students: (to borrow a line from one of my favorite hymns) Be not afraid, come follow me ... to our mostly sane, mostly high-quality law school. It is not at all like the silliness of what you might be reading in this newspaper.

Ruling

A lawsuit filed in 1992 by the Sierra Club and the Regional Association of Concerned Citizens (RACE), environmental groups claimed the Forest Service was short-sighted in its management of plants and wildlife.

In September, Judge Gilbert ruled Sierra/RACE claims were valid and directed both environmental groups and the Forest Service to negotiate terms that would address any management shortcomings. After both sides failed to come to an agreement, Gilbert stepped in to settle questions of forest management for the next two to three years.

Ed Cook, co-chair of the Sierra Club's Shawnee Defense team, said addressing governmental control of the forest was the main issue, and questions regarding use of the forest can now be looked at by all sides.

"The main question we have always wanted to get settled is that Shawnee be protected," he said. "We believe letting the Forestry Service proceed unchecked in its management of the forest would result in irreparable harm to certain habitats in the forest."

Mark Donham, RACE president, said he agrees with Cook because all groups have special interests in the case, but he said the best course of action has been reached.

"Judge Gilbert's decision is a comfortable victory," he said. "This gives us room to check on habitat management for the forest and its endangered or threatened species."

Jim Hippliff, a lawyer with the U.S. States Attorney's office, argued that intervention into the forest management by the environmental groups was unnecessary. He said such intervention would complicate the Forest Service's revision of the management plan.

"The government believes that there is no irreparable harm being done in the current management of the forest," he said. "If there was any harm, it is balanced by the benefit of what the Forestry Service is trying to do."

The claims of irreparable harm — actions on the forest which may result in negative effects on plants and wildlife — were the focus of environmental concerns, Donham said.

Louise Odegaard, Shawnee forest supervisor, said she agreed with the court's decision, yet she emphasized the inability of the Forest Service to please all parties involved.

"The judge issued a fair, balanced decision," she said. "Some of the problems we are experiencing are staff and funding shortages. This hinders our management. The forest is used by many people, it is hard with a limited staff to keep resource damage from occurring."

Odegaard said amending the forest plan can now be a priority, but visitors to Shawnee will see little changes in their usage of the area.

sweep all the good luck away," he said. "Also, wearing black or talking bad about anything can bring negative luck for the year."

Hwang said businesses are closed for the first few days of the year because the festival is a time of rest.

He said on the third day, businesses reopen and dances are performed by people dressed in lion or dragon costumes.

"It's really a time of national celebration," Hwang said. "All the Chinese community participates together for the New Year."

The Lantern Festival falls on the 15th and final day of the celebration.

Yang said everyone carries colorful lanterns and gathers in a public place for a "Lantern Fair."

She said fireworks and riddle-guessing games also are part of the festival.

will re-try the same case.

Students spent months researching and studying the time period, the events that occurred and the reasons why the events occurred, Jen Scovitch, a participating student from Triad said.

"I spent about three months reviewing the case," she said.

Students from these five high schools served as attorneys and witnesses for the trial. Area attorneys and judges evaluated the students' efforts.

Craig Reeves, an attorney from Carbondale who evaluated the competition, said he was particularly impressed with the effort given and the research done by the students.

"I think they've demonstrated they care enough about justice in the courtroom to educate themselves, and I am very impressed," he said.

The courtroom was complete with a judge, jury and bailiff. When the judge left the courtroom at the end of the trial, everyone was asked to rise. When the judge returned, a verdict was not read. Instead, the judge gave positive and negative comments to the students on their courtroom performances. Some student attorneys were told to leave their notes behind when they questioned witnesses because the notes slowed them down. Some students were reminded to speak slower, and some were commended on their performance.

The evaluation by the judge was the most helpful part of the program because it gave the students a chance to improve. Anna King, a participating student from Murphysboro, said.

Suzanne Schmitt, the regional coordinator for the mock trial, spoke at the closing ceremony and awarded each school a certificate for participation.

Schmitt then announced the four teams that would be attending the state competition: Mt. Vernon, Triad, O'Fallon and Murphysboro.

When the winners were decided, King said she was very excited with her team's victory but said she was not surprised.

"We are very happy that we have been given this chance to go to Springfield. Our team worked very hard, but we have a lot more work to do and some rearranging also," she said.

supposed to include African art.

"This would be a great asset to SIUC," Fox said. "African art is part of our human heritage. It's also influenced artists like Picasso and Braque."

Some SIUC students who have a liking for art came to the speech to support Abiodun and his beliefs.

Tamara Robbins, a junior in design from Chicago, said that because she is a design major, she wanted to get inspiration from Abiodun's views on African art.

"I want to see if I can actually apply the art styles to my class projects," she said. "At SIUC, there aren't many African-American art instructors or classes, so I wanted to get further insight on what my culture as an African-American student has to offer."

Taron Walker, a freshman in administration of justice from Chicago, said she wants to understand art containing black history better.

Nikki Wilson, a freshman in psychology from Chicago, said Abiodun's lecture on African art is one of the many Black History events she is trying to attend.

"Since this lecture focuses on art, I hope I'll have a better understanding of African art," Wilson said.

Williams said Abiodun's lecture gave a new perspective on African art, one the audience will not soon forget.

"He wasn't just a researcher; instead, he lived the part," Williams said. "He was down in Africa eating those cola nuts that represented the spirits of his ancestors."

them.

Lorenzo Henderson, chairman of the Black Think Tank's Political Action Committee, said this was the first time the organization sponsored a voter-registration drive. He said he was pleased with the number of students who registered.

"About 115 people registered in three days," Henderson said. "The majority of those had never been registered before."

Bulls may have to pay MJ his worth in order to keep him

The Hartford Courant

Along with lesser folk such as Shaquille O'Neal, Alonzo Mourning, Kenny Anderson and Reggie Miller, the one, the only, The Michael Jordan becomes an unrestricted free agent July 1. Would Michael ever leave the Chicago Bulls?

More important, would the Bulls ever let Jordan leave? The answer to the second question would seem to be an unqualified "no."

But then again... "Business for the Bulls has been great," Jordan said, "because I haven't demanded what I'm worth because I felt I had to honor my contract. Now my contract states I'm free, and I'm going to maximize my value. At the time I signed it (eight years, $25 million), I went for security. If I wanted to maximize my dollars, I would have gone short. I've told (agent) David Falk, "Don't make (Bulls' owner) Jerry Reinsdorf an offer."

"They know the industry. And that will tell me what their evaluation is of me. We have no fixed number (just to be highest paid). I want Jerry to step forward and say what he thinks is fair and not fair. I'm very curious. For years we've been doing that, using other contracts. We're going to wait. It will easily determine what my value is to see what other guys do. My market value is still very similar to the peak of my career. I've proven myself. I've proven I can still play the game. Show me the negative effects I've had on this team and this league. I hate to think about (leaving Chicago). But anything is possible."

Making sure no one threatens his newly reclaimed No. 1 status seems to be a prime passion of His Amness.

What, you may ask, would the game's greatest and richest player have to worry about?

Does he really care that Grant Hill of the Detroit Pistons was the leading vote-getter for the All-Star Game? Before the All-Star Game, Jordan criticized the NBA for pushing Hill, a second-year pro, too fast.

"Trying to promote Grant Hill so soon is the wrong way to do it," Jordan said. "The league didn't promote us. We promoted us, and then it all followed from there. You've got to let Grant play his game and then let things take off from there. You've got to let him be the person he is. All comparisons of Grant should be toward Scottie Pippen, not me. He has more of a Pippen game than mine. I don't have any worries about him because he's a very nice person with a great work ethic. He's going to live up to everything. I can remember being in the same situation looking up to the Lakers and Celtics when I was young. We all have to grow up."

What Jordan doesn't say is that a big reason the NBA worked at promoting a class act such as Hill from the get-go was that the league had been whipsawed by the loss of its three wise men, and was increasingly being perceived as a league for sullen multimillionaire crybabies.

A bad back retired Larry Bird after the 1992 Olympics. Jordan retired to baseball after the Bulls' 1993 championship season and Magic Johnson retired in Nov. 1991 after revealing that he had HIV, the virus that causes AIDS.

Now that Michael and Magic are back, the league has regained considerable luster.

It loses some when its star performer appoints himself judge and jury of all who have come after him.

Blues' Fuhr happy to play for volatile Mike Keenan

By Mark Fukalo
The Hartford Courant

Giving up goals isn't bothering him. Fatigue hasn't hit him hard. His off-injured knees feel strong.

Heck, the way Blues goalie Grant Fuhr is talking, his coach, Mike Keenan, sounds like a kind old parish priest.

"I heard the usual rumors (Keenan) is tough on goalies before I came to St. Louis," said Fuhr, in his 15th season. "But it's been exactly the opposite. He's been easy to play for. He's been really good to me, giving me the opportunity to play and the time off when I needed it."

Keenan, the Bobby Knight of NHL coaches, hasn't had to be difficult with Fuhr. Fuhr, after playing 49 games the previous two seasons for

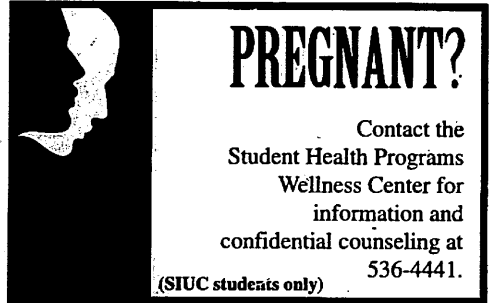

Los Angeles and Buffalo, has started all 57 of the Blues' games.

Fuhr, 33, doesn't think he's doing anything special. He plays better when he has more work. When he played sparingly last season in Los Angeles, his numbers dropped. When he was injured with Buffalo, Dominik Hasek took his spot.

Fuhr said he and Keenan have not spoken about the streak.

He just prepares for each game and waits for the decision. Fuhr, a five-time Stanley Cup winner with Edmonton, doesn't see any reason he can't surpass his NHL record of 75 games, when he won the Vezina Trophy in the 1987-88 season.

Ed Johnston was the last goalie to play in every game, for the 1963-64 Bruins, but that was 70 games, a six-team league and less travel.

ball to the glass at anytime in the game. When they turn up their defense they can take things totally away from a team.

"I honestly believe this is as good a Southern team as I have seen."

By the break, SIUC only led by two, 37-35.

However, the quickness of McClendon and Gilmore took over for SIUC in the second-half, propelling the Salukis to a 9-0 scoring run and a 16-point lead — a lead from which the Panthers were unable to recover from.

"I did think those two kids (McClendon, Gilmore) worked real well," DiCocco said.

"They complimented each other. Their distribution was very, very good."

Saluki coach Cindy Scott said SIUC is more or less an unstoppable force when Gilmore and McClendon are on top of their game as they were Saturday.

"I thought it was very appropriate that we honor Kasia and Nikki before the game," Scott said.

"They are two great players and when they are on at the same time, our club is really very difficult to beat."

"It's fun to watch them because they are both so talented."

With Saturday's triumph, SIUC took over sole possession of second place in the Valley with a mark of 12-2, while Northern Iowa continues to struggle at 4-10 in conference action.

Complimenting a 44 percent shooting performance from the field, SIUC once again dominated the glass by out rebounding the Panthers 49-34.

Following a commanding glass attack against Bradley last week, Scott said she has been pleased with SIUC's attack on the boards lately.

"We out rebounded them by 15 and I think that has been one of the biggest things that we have turned around," Scott said.

Gilmore said McClendon's performance is what propelled the Salukis on to another victory.

"I think Kasia's defense helped us," Gilmore said.

"When things go well for us we feed off of it and build on the positive."

The Salukis take to the road once again this week when they battle Illinois State on Thursday. Tip-off time is scheduled for 7:00 p.m.

Bulldogs

SIUC coach Rich Herrin took the never say die approach to questions about the loss' affect on the season after the game, and said the season must be played one game at a time.

"You can't get me to talk about that (the near elimination from the tournament). We just try to play each game, and that's the way you do it," he said. "You don't put yourself in a position, and you do the best that you can. Before we even played a game this year, I told everyone it would be tough to get to St. Louis, and we've tried, and tried, and will continue to try. We'll just do the best that we can. We've got three games left, and that's about all we can do."

SIUC ended the game in much the same way it started it. The Salukis did not score in the first half until 4:30 had run off the clock, and missed its first five shots before freshman forward Monte Jenkins came off the bench to hit a wide-open three-pointer.

To end the game, SIUC missed nine of its last 12 shots — two of them potential three-pointers by Hudson and senior forward Scott Burzynski that would have tied the game at 71.

"We had some good looks, but we just couldn't put the basket in the hole — and that's going to happen," sophomore guard Shane Hawkins said. "The thing was that we were working, and we got pretty good shots for the most part, so you can't complain about that."

What was missing for the Salukis against Drake was the same thing that has been missing all season, a go-to guy that can deliver in the clutch. SIUC shot 45 percent in the game from the floor, and 40 percent has been the magic number for a Saluki victory this season.

The 45 percent effort was SIUC's sixth-best of the year, and the Dawgs outrebounded Drake 37-36 behind a game-high eight boards by senior center Aminu Timberlake.

Herrin said rebounding was the difference in the game, and Drake's late-game dominance of the glass put the Dawgs to sleep.

"They had nine offensive boards, and we got three between our big guys. All four of our big guys played, and we had two offensive rebounds in the first half and they got nine offensive boards. Right there is the ball game," Herrin said. "That's what Tulsa did to us (Feb. 14). The last 18 boards, they got 16 of them, we got two, and we're lucky to even be that close."

Hawkins, who had 12 assists and nine points in the game, said the momentum swung mid-way through the second half, but the cheering crowd of 4,328 kept the Salukis in the game.

"(The momentum swing was) probably in the second half when we got a couple buckets and cut it to one (64-65 with 1:48 left), or whatever it was, and once you get the fans into it, which was one of the biggest crowds of the year, we felt a little more comfortable," he said.

Osco Drug/Sav-on Drugs is a retail drug store chain consisting of over 800 stores nationwide. We offer a SUMMER BUSINESS MANAGEMENT INTERNSHIP position leading to a possible Management Trainee position. Our program will introduce students to our management training program and is based upon hands on experience, in conjunction with our structured training manuals. Track squads make strides during Open

The 1996 Saluki/USA Open proved to be a good experience and an improvement for both the men and women's track and field teams.

Overall, men's track coach Bill Cornell said the performances, of those on his team who competed, were better than in weeks past, and they competed "tough".

Cornell said although competing in last weekend's meet was optional for his athletes, he was happy with the performances and he thought the competition was good for them.

"Our biggest improvement was the high jump," Cornell said. "Cameron (Wright) went 7-4 1/2 and Neophytos (Kalagerou) went 7-3 (personal best), and we don't have any doubt that both of them will get into the National Championships," Cornell said. "That's a feather in our hat to have two high jumpers in the National Championships."

Cornell said other members of the team who competed also had brilliant performances.

Junior Jonathan Sweetin had a personal best performance, tossing the 35-pound weight throw 55-04 3/4, while Junior Patrick Harris and senior Jubal Alvis finished second (22.55) and third (22.61) respectively in the 200-meter dash.

Freshman David Waddleton had a personal best time in the 600-meter run finishing second with a time of 1:22.32.

SIUC assistant coach Mike Giesler explained why some athletes stayed away from the Open over the weekend.

"We have such a slim team, so we elected not to compete some people," Giesler said. "Last year we competed some people in the same meet and they got injured, so they were out for the (MVC) Championships, and we didn't want to do that again."

Cornell said the Open will not be at SIUC next year because of the National Conference Championships, which will be held in Carbondale next year.

"That's a feather in our hat to have two high jumpers in the National Championships."

Women's coach Don DeNoon said his team's "phenomenal efforts" produced several personal bests.

"We started last night in the (20-pound) weight throw with (senior) Stefany Saracco's personal best (47-09)," DeNoon said.

Sophomore Amy Stearns provisionally qualified for the NCAA Championships in the 20-pound weight throw with a distance of 49-04 1/4.

Senior Joy Williamson gave a lifetime best performance in the long jump (19-10 3/4), and tied her school record in the triple jump with a distance of 40-0 3/4.

Other outstanding performances were turned in by sophomores Leah Steele and Raina Larsen in the 1000-meter run. Steele pulled ahead of Larsen and turned in a time of 2:58.70, while Larsen crossed the line in 2:59.84.

"Leah Steele, in the 1000-meter, running as well as she did, moved up to fourth or fifth in the conference with her 1000-meter time," DeNoon said.

Freshman Felicia Hill and senior Stephanie Smith tied their first place heights in the high jump of 5-05 3/4.

DeNoon also said the coaching staff tries to promote personal improvement of the athletes over the course of the year.

"We just continue to build through the year, and when we get to the conference, we should peak at our highest peak at that particular time. And it seems like we're rolling right along," DeNoon said.

Bulldogs' sizzling three-point shooting burns Dawgs, 71-68

By Chad Anderson

Even though the Salukis are ranked seventh in the nation in three-pointers made per game (8.8), the men's basketball team could not overcome a 50 percent shooting spree by Drake University from behind the arc Saturday at SIU Arena.

The Bulldogs shot a blistering 64 percent from behind the three-point line in the first half, and 48 percent from the floor in the game, to outpace a motivated Saluki squad that pulled ahead 67-65 with 1:10 left in the game on a clutch three-pointer by sophomore guard Troy Hudson, who had 25 points in the contest, but fell short 71-68.

In essence, the loss to Drake eliminated the Dawgs' hopes for a seed in the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament March 2-4 in St. Louis.

In order for the Salukis, currently in ninth-place (11-15, 4-11), to grab the eighth-place position in the conference, and qualify for the tournament, the Dawgs must win their final three games; and now eighth-place Northern Iowa must lose all four of its remaining games.

Saluki guard tandem guides squad to 84-54 win over Northern Iowa

By Michael DeFord

The crowd at Saturday's SIUC women's basketball game witnessed just why Saluki guards Kasia McClendon and Nikki Gilmore were worthy of pre-game honors at SIU Arena Saturday afternoon.

McClendon and Gilmore combined for 23 of SIUC's 47 second half points to help pace the Salukis to an 84-54 victory over the University of Northern Iowa.

To the cheer of Saturday's home crowd, McClendon was recognized as SIUC's all-time steal leader with 207, while Gilmore was recognized as only the 14th player in SIUC history to score 1000 points.

Not surprisingly, McClendon garnered eight steals on the evening while Gilmore led the Salukis in scoring with 18 points.

Saturday's contest marks the eighth straight time that Gilmore has scored in double figures. McClendon has averaged six steals in her last three games.

Northern Iowa coach Tony DiCecco said this year's Saluki squad is perhaps the best he has witnessed as a coach.

"SIUC is a great basketball team," a frustrated DiCecco said. "They have great quickness. They have the ability to take the Saluki Hall of Fame member and two-time Olympic thrower, Connie Price-Smith landed a mark of 58-2 in the shot put Saturday morning at the Saluki/USA Track and Field Open, which placed her more than 11 feet ahead of the nearest competitor.

Price-Smith was the 1995 USA Field Athlete of the Year.

Former Saluki Hall of fame member and Olympian Elvis Forde, finished second in the 400-meter dash on Saturday with a time of 49.61.

The Detroit Pistons retired Isiah Thomas' No. 11 jersey Saturday. Thomas once scored 25 points in one quarter of a Finals game and dropped 16 points in 94 seconds in a playoff game. Thomas played on the All-Star team his first 12 years in the NBA earning was most valuable player twice and was MVP of the NBA Finals in 1990.

Dwight "Doc" Gooden is making a comeback with the New York Yankees. Once known as "Dr. K," his career plunged due to alcohol and drug abuse. Gooden has not had a winning season since 1991 and has not thrown a pitch in the majors since June 1994.
