Faculty Senate votes for pay raise

SALARIES: Senate says faculty pay should be at least twice as much.

JENNIFER CAMDEN
DE POLITICAL EDITOR

The salary raises faculty receive when they are promoted should be two or three times as much as they are now. Faculty Senate members say.

The senate on Tuesday unanimously voted to recommend an increase in the monthly salary raises faculty receive when they are promoted from assistant professor to associate professor, and from associate professor to full professor.

According to the resolution, new associate professors should receive a $250 per month raise when they are promoted, up from the current $125 per month raise. New full professors should receive a $500 per month raise instead of the current $150 per month raise, the resolution states.

Allan Karnes, the senate's budget committee chairman, said the current promotional raises are inadequate.

"Looking at the history of promotional increases, we found they were put into practice in 1972, and they were $100 and $125 when they were first put in," said Karnes, the School of Accountancy director. "It's a real problem."

Karnes said the extra money for higher promotional increases would come from the $3 million faculty salary increase pool.

John Jackson, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, said 35 professors were promoted this year, which he said was an average number of promotions.

He said their salary increases cost $42,300, and, if their raises had been increased to the senate's

Area man found murdered

HOMICIDE: Victim's body found Tuesday in cemetery.

KENDRA HELMER
DE ASSOCIATE EDITOR

An apparent homicide victim was found in a local cemetery Tuesday afternoon, and law enforcement officials say they need the public's help in locating a suspect.

The body of Jerome Douglas Townsend, 40, of 230 Hanseman St., was found at 12:10 p.m. on the southeast area of Snider Cemetery by a private citizen, Jackson County Sheriff's Department officials said. The cemetery is located outside of the Carbondale city limits to the southeast of town.

Police said they believe the death is a definite homicide. Police said the cause and time of death are not known.

"It is evident, though, that the victim was murdered," a sheriff's department spokeswoman said.

Authorities said they will release more details after an autopsy is conducted today.

Police said they are seeking the public's help in locating Townsend's rental vehicle. It is described as a turquoise 1996 four-door Plymouth Neon with Missouri license plates R9M1760. Anyone who has seen the vehicle or who saw Townsend after Saturday is urged to call the Jackson County Sheriff's Department at 687-1303. Callers are not required to give their names to authorities.

Wet soil will cause incinerator to stay open longer

INCINERATOR

•The incinerator will be operating into early or mid-March.

•When contaminated soil is wet, the incinerator only processes 20 to 30 tons per hour, instead of 50 tons when the soil is dry.

RAIN DELAY: Weather forces incinerator to slow burning process.

TRAVIS DE NEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Wet weather is forcing the PCB incinerator at the Crab Orchard Wildlife Refuge to process contaminated soil at a slower rate, stretching its final days of operation into March, a project official says.

"When the soil is wet it clumps together and sticks to the conveyor," said project manager Richard Davis,

"and when more moisture is in the soil, it requires more energy to burn the volatiles (contaminants) off."

The incinerator was originally scheduled to be finished by the end of February.

Davis said a higher temperature is required to evaporate water from the soil, so the incinerator must have more diesel fuel and oxygen.

The gas emissions from the incinerator's kiln are measured for Environmental Protection Agency dioxin compliance in an afterburner chamber, Davis said, and the measurement is based on the volume of the gas mixture.

To ensure increased water vapor and diesel combustion gases do not distort the measurements, the amount of water-soaked soil going into the incinerator must be reduced, he said.

"Technically, the EPA allows us to process 50 tons of soil per hour, but we don't want to take a chance, so we're processing closer to 20 or 30 tons per hour," Davis said. "The wet soil is putting a brake on the operation."

Davis said the incinerator has processed 59,000 tons of contaminated soil and has 21,000 tons left to process.

During normal operations, polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) in the

STUDY ABROAD:
Program offers chance to broaden horizons in distant lands.

TRAVIS AKIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Kelli Dunaway says her recent travels have enlightened her and opened her eyes to a new world and a new way of life in a place that has sentimental meaning to her.

"When I heard about a trip to Egypt, I was ecstatic," said Dunaway, a senior from Eldorado, who went on a study abroad trip to Egypt in May 1996. "I am a history major, and I learned more than a book could ever teach me. I will never forget the trip and what I saw."

The Study Abroad program is a service allowing students to travel to different parts of the world and expand their educational experience. Each theme trip is under the advisement of faculty members.

Thomas Saville, the coordinator of the Study Abroad Programs, said the University has hundreds of options to fit students' needs. He said the trips all have themes and are geared to several different majors.

One trip offered this summer highlights the architectural designs of Europe. Another will focus on the philosophical debate of the origin of Western culture as being either Afro-centric or Euro-centric.

Jon Davey, an associate professor of applied arts and architecture technology, and Denny Hays, an associate professor of applied arts and interior design, will lead the Architectural Field Studies to Europe and will visit sights in Paris, London and other European locations from May 11 to June 8.

Davey said the trip is an extension of the idea of the "grand tour."

"The grand tour for architects and designers is a kind of rite of passage," Davey said. "It occurs sometime during the end of the educational process."

He said the grand tour is a way to see the world and look at the differences in cultures in the designs of the buildings.

Hays said the grand tour began in Europe in the 1800s. He said the idea started in America with Thomas Jefferson and has become a tradition for architects to make a trip after their education.

While the trip may concentrate more on the architecture of certain places, the trip does extend to other majors because it explores the culture as well as the architecture.

"The idea is to see things in a different light," Hays said. "Cultures built things differently because the cultures wanted to make their mark in the world."

The idea of culture and learning about other countries interested Jared Edwards, a junior in hotel, restaurant, travel and administration from Rockford; when he went to Egypt last May. He said he also learned to appreciate American culture.

"I think you gain appreciation for what we have here," he said. "People get stuck in the same routines and do not see what life

School board votes for further study of Ebonics

Los Angeles school board member Barbara Boudreaux's effort to expand ebonics programs was rejected Monday by the Board of Education in favor of further study of existing programs and the cost of broadening them, drawing groans as well as applause from the audience.

Though Boudreaux said little immediately after her colleagues voted 4-to-3 for additional analysis, due back to the board on May 1, later she slammed it as a political maneuver aimed at diffusing the controversy.

In fact the two camps agreed on only one thing: voting for further study was a delaying tactic aimed largely at putting off a decision until after the district's $2.4 billion bond bid appears on the April 8 ballot.

Mother starts 'war on drugs'

Faced with the inability of government, church or community institutions to overcome the drug problem, one mother sought her own solution.

Isabel Estrada founded the Future Progress Group nearly five years ago when her husband's drug use made her life impossible. "It was a terrible situation — all those sleepless nights," recalled Estrada, 43, a Garifuna Indian who lives in Bluefields, the Nicaraguan Atlantic coast's largest city.

Worried that her three children and their friends would become involved in drugs because of the bad examples they saw, she decided to keep them busy with sports and sewing. Now, 185 youths participate in the program run by volunteers in six Bluefields neighborhoods.

Her husband has stopped using drugs and coaches the girls' softball team.

However, such success stories are rare and virtually nonexistent in fishing communities like Sandy Bay Tara.

"In our community, the mothers and fathers are all weeping because of drugs," said Eduardo Rales, a member of the community's council of elders. "We are trying to find a way to end this before our sons all die."

Student sticks to 'medical red tape'

ST. GO ELSEWHERE: Patient blames hospital and insurance company for unexpected bill.

DAVE ARMSTRONG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Jefferson Hankla says he paid 37 times too much money for his emergency care during Christmas break, a problem he attributes to "rampant hospital bureaucracy."

Hankla, a 41-year-old junior in visual communication from Sesser, said he has a health problems he attributes to his 20-year stint with the military. He said operating radio headphones caused him to develop boils and cysts behind his ears.

On Dec. 26, he said he sought treatment for his condition at the Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, 405 W. Jackson St., because SIU Health Services was not open during semester

Assuming his treatment would cost no more than the standard $5 door fee of SIU Health Services, Hankla said he accepted treatment, which totaled $183.20 because the insurance company determined his case to be a "non-emergency condition."

Hankla said he had no idea the treatment would cost more than that of SIU Health Services, located in Beinfuhr Hall on Greek Row.

"I walked around the hospital, asking where I should go," Hankla said. "I was told to go to the emergency room. There was no advisement there, and nobody to tell me how much it would cost. If they can't show students in the right direction, then there is a problem."

Cheryl Presley, director of Student Health Programs, said Hankla could have received the same treatment for about $178 less if he had waited a few days to go to the SIU Health Services. Presley also said students receive a detailed pamphlet outlining SIUC health care options and policies.

"The treatment would have undoubtedly cost him $5, unless we had to refer him out," Presley said. "Students pay $84 each semester to cover all primary health care, labs, X-rays and Urgent Care visits."

Presley said Memorial Hospital will honor the SIUC Health Services' price for students, but not if they receive emergency room care in a non-emergency situation.

"It was an emergency room visit for what wasn't determined to be an emergency," Presley said. "The most expensive care is emergency care. This is a way to keep our health costs lower."

Presley said students who seek medical attention during times SIUC Health Services is closed should go to the Memorial Hospital

Healthy choice

Increasing efficiency at clinic would be well worth fee hike

WITH SIUC'S EVER-GROWING LITANY OF reasons to support proposed student-fee increases, it is easy to become cynical when another need is expressed. However, before we close our minds completely to the idea of spending an extra $12.50 per semester on health care fees, we would do well to listen to the arguments.

THE DOCTORS AT SIUC'S STUDENT HEALTH Service currently have only one examining room each — two less than the medical industry's national average. Students with non-urgent needs such as routine check-ups, Pap smears or immunizations often wait two weeks or more to get an exam, because Health Service has an appointments-only policy that keeps the doctors' schedules full.

THE PROPOSED FEE INCREASE WOULD PAY for an expansion of the current building, which is an old dormitory that is not in compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act. If the building were expanded to include more exam rooms, doctors could see more patients, because one patient could get ready to see the doctor while another actually has an exam. For example, a nurse could draw blood and ask confidential questions of one patient while a second patient actually sees the doctor and a third gets dressed following a pelvic exam.

BECAUSE NONE OF THESE ACTIVITIES CAN take place in the waiting room, the current system is less efficient than it would be with more exam rooms. Streamlining the process by tripling the number of exam rooms would make health-care providers available to take more appointments, providing faster service to more students.

Health Service officials say there is no way to accomplish this without the proposed expansion. Muriel Narve, clinic services manager, says the Health Service, which moved into its current location in 1966, uses "every inch of space."

THE BUILDING WAS INTENDED TO HOUSE the clinic for only five years, but those five years stretched into 31, and increases in the size of the student population — with a corresponding rise in demand for on-campus health care — have resulted in some overcrowding.

If the expansion really will alleviate some of the inefficiency in the current system and allow more students to see doctors when they need to see them, it would be unreasonable not to agree to the necessary fee increase.

TWELVE DOLLARS AND 50 CENTS WILL BUY the average student roughly two six-packs of beer, eight packs of smokes or a large pepperoni pizza.

Most of us pay for these items — which are hazardous to our health — willingly. If we can reach into our pockets for $12.50 worth of carcinogens and saturated fat, surely we can spare the same kind of change for something that stands to improve our health in the future.

"Our Word" represents a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

America's favorite pet should bark, not purr

Recently there has been a considerable amount of discussion concerning the importance of animals as compared to that of humans. Some believe that animals are equal to humans whereas some believe that an animal's only purpose on the planet is to benefit humans. Blah, Blah, Blah, Blah, Blah, the opinions just keep coming. To break up this monotony about the importance of animals, what we need is a funny cat story.

A recent poll of Americans has offered the suggestion that cats are edging out the dog as Americans' favorite pet. For years it has been the barking dog that has held on to first place with his wagging tail and cordial attitude. Because cats are known to seem arrogant, uppity and rude, one might question why the feline would finally be coming in to its own as America's favorite pet. A friend of mine explained to me that the reason cats are becoming more popular is because cats seem to be more intelligent since they don't succumb to performing asinine tricks such as "playing dead" or the ever popular "urinating on my newly washed tire." Americans themselves are becoming more intelligent, he explained, because of the Internet and Latino dance crazes, so we, as a nation, demand a more intelligent animal.

Possibly cats as a species are the more intelligent animal, but my cat, Mojo the Dumbest Cat There Is, certainly does not help explain this reasoning. Mojo, like most animals, is always hungry, even when she is unconscious. Therefore, whenever my roommates are eating, she will come to their person and demand a taste. One of my roommates has devised a specific meal, named after himself, which is made up of microwaved bologna, mustard, potato chips and pickle bits (don't ask). Whenever this roommate is eating his meal, Mojo will come up to him and demand a taste of a pickle bit.

The roommate will then place a bit onto the floor. Mojo, interested, will walk up the pickle bit, sniff the pickle bit, taste the pickle bit, then immediately turn around and sprint upstairs and into my room and hide for a number of hours. Apparently Mojo the Cat is afraid of pickles. What makes this stupid story funny is that days later, when this roommate is eating the same meal again, Mojo will return. She walks up to my roommate and gives him a look that basically says, "OK, I'm going to assume that last pickle bit I ate wasn't up to par with other pickle bits, and now I'd like to taste a real pickle bit." The roommate complies, Mojo smells the pickle bit, tastes it, then immediately turns around and runs up to my room, hiding for a number of hours.

Here we have a cat that not only finds a specific food unappealing, she is actually afraid of it. However, because she is the dumbest cat there is, she forgets how afraid she is of the food only hours after eating it. Even the most ignorant of dogs is well aware that a rock, once digested, shan't be digested again. The ability to learn from past mistakes is something even the lesser species have a fairly firm grasp on, but not Mojo the Cat, the same cat that will beg to be allowed outside only to sit and stare at you through a window once you've placed her outside, or the same cat that won't move a muscle as you make the bed and doesn't seem to mind once you've completed the job, thus securely tucking her underneath three blankets, or the same cat that spends her waking hours chasing invisible mice and leaping after transparent butterflies.

In conclusion, I don't think any dog lover needs to worry about the lowly feline becoming America's most popular pet. Based on my personal experience with cats, they seem to be bizarre at best and schizophrenic at worst. And, after all, when you place food on the floor for a dog, you know good and well you won't have to worry about picking that food back up and throwing it away — at least not for awhile.

Union comment illustrates ignorance of organizations

Dear Editor:

In response to the "Faculty Debates Union" article in the Feb. 5 Daily Egyptian Dr. Clark's condescending remarks about union members is proof of why so many of the so-called intellectuals are ridiculed by the working class for not having any common sense. To say unions are for unskilled workers and are for losers and lazy people wanting a free ride shows a lot of ignorance for a college professor. I suppose changing the word to association such as in Bar Association or American Medical Association sounds more sophisticated and professional.

In reality, these are just synonyms for unions. Whenever a group of workers with similar occupational interests decides to organize themselves, does it really matter what title they give the organization? Obviously Dr. Clark has never been on his feet working 12-hour shifts in a factory or production line. He should visit the National Coal Museum in West Frankfort and experience first-hand the dangers coal miners face every day.

When he has had these experiences, maybe he could have a more educated opinion about these lazy union members. You don't have to be a rocket scientist or biology professor to understand the concept of strength in numbers.

Labor force skilled, have degrees

Dear Editor:

In response to Dr. David Clark's comments in the Feb. 5 Daily Egyptian article "Faculty debates need for unionization," I am deeply offended by Dr. Clark's classist reference to "unskilled labor" (as opposed to "scholars or researchers"). I am a "bargained-for" civil servant in one of many under-compensated positions that can be described as para-professional/clerical with a fuzzy border where my word processor only can provide a slash. Like a large number of my colleagues, I have a bachelor's degree. Some of my colleagues, like myself, also have a master's degree. I do not consider myself unskilled. Dr. Clark's language reflects a social pattern that does nothing to reduce the inequities of "class" so strenuously denied by those who believe in the values upon which this country is founded.

Gross generalizations such as those made by Dr. Clark (unions are "for losers and lazy people who want a free ride") are in the background of every act of exploitation (those who are exploited are inferior and deserve to be exploited).

Apparently since the word "liberal" has become unpopular, enlightened "scholars or researchers" like Dr. Clark can be reactionary and still be politically correct. The mind-set reflected by Dr. Clark's comments is what leaves SIUC open to the criticism that it does not, in intrinsic and concrete ways, value the values it pretends to promote.

Wal-Mart condom policy ridiculous

Dear Editor:

I read Donna Colter's article ("Local prophylactics mist shoppers") in Monday's edition of the Daily Egyptian. I was one of those unexpected Wal-Mart shoppers who was subjected to the store's humiliating policy. Buying condoms is a personal experience, and as if that is not already a pain, the sales person stands there the entire time you are deciding on your selection. As I made my selection, I felt as though I was somewhat being judged by the sales person.

I, personally, feel that locking away these items will discourage the use of such products by the younger population. This could lead to more unwanted pregnancies than before.

By preventing easy access to these products, people are going to be less likely to use them because of the humiliation of having to get help. Carbondale is also a town where people know whose kid is whose, and if someone has to ask a familiar face for help in this area, they may just forego the entire product.

I also believe that it may be better for someone to steal condoms than not have them at all.

Wal-Mart may lose $2.50 for a box of condoms, but if a customer cannot get a condom, then we may risk paying thousands for a child on welfare.

I think this was an exceptional bad move on the part of Wal-Mart, especially because if you walk to the other side of the store and Wal-Mart has bows and other hunting accessories, like bullets, proudly displayed without any locks or glass cases. Now, maybe I am wrong, but is this not quite ironic? I mean, we allow easy access to slugs and other bullets but not condoms. This just does not seem to make much sense to me.

Wal-Mart is allowing easier access to possibly harmful and deadly weapons than to condoms that could prevent the spread of diseases, such as HIV, sexually transmitted diseases, etc.

I believe we should take a closer look at Wal-Mart's ethics.

Framing tests Web laws

TRADEMARK: Web sites that present content from other sources are under fire.

WASHINGTON POST

On the World Wide Web, there are Web sites, and there are parasites.

At least that's the view of some online publishers, who are chagrined to see their content packaged by others who affix their own advertising to it.

The debate involves a technology called framing, which enables one Web site to display content from another Web site, partially superimposed with a new frame or border. The practice is testing the boundaries of copyright and trademark law on the Web, where complex material can be copied with a few strokes at a keyboard.

A site called TotalNews.com illustrates the possibilities. It generates no original content. Rather it presents content from news organizations such as the Los Angeles Times, CNN, and the Post.

"A lot of news organizations are very pleased by what they're doing," because TotalNews generates more visitors to their sites, said Lisa Farringer, a Washington attorney representing TotalNews.

But several news organizations, including The Post, have accused TotalNews of violating their rights. In a December letter to Godzich, New York lawyer Bruce P. Keller said that "TotalNews 'reaps' where it does not 'sow.'"

"Its business — the sale of advertising space — depends entirely on its ability to misappro-prate the news and other material appearing on the Web sites of others," Keller wrote on behalf of Time, CNN, the Los Angeles Times, Dow Jones and The Post. The wire service Reuter also has raised objections.

TotalNews casts the dispute as a David and Goliath story. "I think it's a question of access — whether the Internet is going to be about free access to information or about control by large media corporations," TotalNews President Roman Godzich said. TotalNews says that it is within its legal rights.

Scott Woelfel, vice president and editor in chief of CNN Interactive, said framing is disruptive because it alters the layout of Web pages, changing what the viewer sees.

CNN has fought back with a software fix that eliminates the frame, but Woelfel doesn't view that as the last word.

suggested level, they would have cost $96,000, a $53,700 increase.

Though Jackson said the increase would come off the top of the salary increase pool, senators said spending more money on promotional raises would not deplete that fund too much.

Karnes said the proposed salary increases mirror the recommendations outlined in an October 1996 report released by SIUC's Oversight Committee to Monitor the Implementation of the Faculty Salary Increase Plan.

Also on Tuesday, the senate voted down a resolution calling for a committee comprised of a senate member and chancellor's office and president's office representatives to study SIUC's Nakajo campus.

The resolution also called for senate input into the new contract between the University and its Japanese partners, which is being negotiated.

SIUC President Ted Sanders has said the contract could be finalized in three weeks.

Because of Japan's ailing economy, the SIUC Nakajo campus may have to convert its business dealings to Japanese currency, and condense its core curriculum to one year, Sanders has said.

In other business, the senate voted to appoint a task force to study the University's image and recommend improvements to the administration.

Al Melone, Faculty Senate president and political science professor, said W. Russell Wright, associate professor of medicine, will be the committee's chairman.

The senate also unanimously passed a resolution supporting last semester's Undergraduate Student Government resolution calling for a late-night campus escort service program.

contaminated soil are removed in a three-step process.

First, the soil goes into a rotary kiln and is heated to 900 degrees. PCBs are left in a vapor mixture in the kiln.

Next, the vapor is sent to a combustion chamber, heated to 2,000 degrees, where the toxic PCBs are turned into water and carbon dioxide.

Trace amounts of dioxin, a carcinogen, are also released in the process, and this was the source of protest in the past year by environmentalists.

The EPA said the amount of dioxin released is too small to be harmful.

The PCBs were left in the soil by manufacturing plants who operated on the Wildlife Refuge area from the 1940s through 1960s. The incineration is part of the EPA's Superfund national environmental cleanup program.

While the incinerator may be present at the Wildlife Refuge longer than originally expected, Davis said, it is more important to take necessary time to do the job right the first time.

"We need to do this exactly right the first time," he said. "It's better to do the job slowly than to get it wrong."

is like in the third world."

Robert Hahn, associate professor of philosophy, said Egypt is an important place because it is integral in the debate of the origin of Western civilization.

Hahn said he is leading a trip to Egypt and Greece for a close examination of the question of whether or not Western culture is Euro-centric or Afro-centric.

"The right way to answer this question is not to sit at home, but go to Greece and go to Egypt, and that is the only way to really understand the question," he said of the trip to Egypt, which will be from May 15 to May 27.

To appeal to a wide range of interests, the trip to Greece will include lessons in Greek plays.

Frederick Williams, director of the University Honors program, is going on the trip to Greece and said he will be instructing students on Greek comedies.

The trip will be from May 27 to June 13.

Williams said he has translated "The Clouds" by Aristophanes and will allow the students to perform it and see the differences and similarities of Greek culture to the United States.

"Nothing is sacred in Greek comedy, but there are things sacred today," he said.

"Forinstance in Christianity today, you will never see a nativity with three wise men coming in with big noses, a mustache and a cigar. In Greek thought, it would be a requirement."

"He said a trip to Greece helps students not only learn about Western culture, but they also learn something about themselves.

"A student's first contact with Greece is a self-defining moment," he said. "It sounds kind of mystical, but it is true.

Each student comes face-to-face with some reality about themselves that they have never confronted before.

"It is different for everyone, but I can guarantee that it happens to everybody."

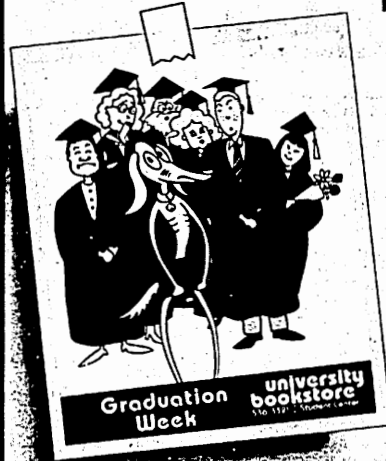

He said the program is 15 years old, and more than 500 students have participated in the program, which has included joint participation with other universities.

The average cost of summer study trips is $2,000-$4,000 and does not include tuition for the credit hours offered as part of the trips.

Hahn said the program is open to the community.

"Our program is open to everyone," Hahn said. "We have a woman in her fifties bringing her two 30-year-old daughters. We want to discuss themes that are an interest to everyone in the community."

Store offers wide video selection

REELIN 'EM IN: Blockbuster Video offers wide selection of films for students.

MIKAL J. HARRIS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Kevin Mendenhall said searching in local video stores for a hard-to-find film for class led him to the wrong version of men in tights. "I was taking a Shakespeare class and I was trying to find 'Hamlet,' but all I could find was Mel Gibson," he said.

Film students like Mendenhall, a senior in cinema and photography from Springfield, may have another option for locating hard-to-find films in Carbondale with the recent opening of Blockbuster Video, 1330 E. Main St.

Patrons visiting Blockbuster can walk through a wide selection of videos with separate sections of film like drama classics, foreign films and special-interest videos like documentaries.

Mendenhall said although some Carbondale stores have varied selections, he said he missed Varsity Video that was located next to the theater of the same name on 418 S. Illinois Ave.

"Rosetta News has a pretty good selection of weird videos, and Plaza Records has a pretty good selection of off-the-wall videos," he said. "Varsity had a great selection, but they closed."

Mendenhall said inadequate parking on the Strip where those stores are located is one reason he does not find some of the videos he would like to see.

Even if it might be easier for some to find a parking space at the new Blockbuster, Michael Buila, an employee at Rosetta News, 210 W. Freeman St., said his store beats Blockbuster in a more important area for film students.

"We'll probably have more foreign videos than they will because that's one of our main focuses, not more of the mainstream titles," he said.

Buila said people who prefer the new mainstream releases may find those at the new Blockbuster. He said Rosetta News carries about 1,400 out-of-print films, fine art films and documentaries, as well as foreign videos.

Plaza Records, 825 S. Illinois Ave., has a number of different types of films ranging from classics to cult films.

Store employee Chris Lee said Plaza Records carries at least 2,000 titles.

"A lot of ours wouldn't be found there (Blockbuster)," he said. "We have much older specialty films."

Company policy forbids Blockbuster employees to speak to media outlets, and a representative from its corporate headquarters could not be reached as of press time.

John Riesch, store manager of Discount Video, 110 N. Glenview Drive, said his store started a foreign film section about two years ago. He said the store has about 100 foreign titles, as well as about 200 films made pre-1950 in its classics section.

Julie Slinman, a sales associate at Circus Video Store, 600 E. Walnut St., said although the store has a large collection of Japanese animation and a smaller selection of foreign films, she said that was the extent of the store's non-mainstream titles.

Doug Purviance, a store clerk at Movie Magic, 883 E. Grand Ave., said his store does not have a specialty film section. Assistant Manager Tanya Nicholas at Pick-A-Flick Video, 2321 S. Illinois Ave., said her store disbanded their specialty section to make room for more new releases.

Susan Duhig, an assistant professor in cinema and photography, said she often finds other ways to get the films students need.

"I try to get the library to order in films that I teach, and sometimes I put the department's copies on reserve," she said.

Mark Watson, head of the Undergraduate Library at Morris Library, said that out of the 1,500 titles the library buys, about 1,000 of those titles are foreign, classic American or other specialty films.

IRS's record-keeping blamed in lawsuit

INTERNAL PROBLEM:
Revenue service accused of throwing away old documents.

WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON—Any taxpayer who's ever been audited by the IRS undoubtedly learned the hard way how important it is to hold on to records, especially really old ones. If not, the Internal Revenue Service certainly hammered home the message. But the IRS allegedly isn't practicing what it preaches. The nation's tax collector is being accused of tossing out, shredding or failing to keep safe thousands of documents that could have historical significance.

A tax research group and three historical associations filed suit last Friday in U.S. District Court, alleging that the IRS has huge gaps in documenting its history in the 1890s, the 1910s and the 1940s.

Historians believe the records could provide insight into the history of taxation in this country and the transformation of the income tax from a "class tax" to a "mass tax" in the aftermath of the Depression and World War II.

Instead, the lawsuit said, the IRS isn't taking care of the records. Documents are "scattered willy nilly" throughout IRS headquarters, with no inventory to provide a hint of their significance, while others are left to rot in leaky basements where insects get them if the water doesn't, the suit said.

As a result, "much valuable documentation of IRS activity and of the history of taxation in the United States has been lost or its loss is threatened and imminent," attorney William A. Dobrovir said in the lawsuit filed on behalf of Tax Analysts of Arlington, Va., and the American Historical Association, the Organization of American Historians and the Society of American Archivists.

The lawsuit alleges that the IRS and the National Archives and Records Administration have failed to comply with the Federal Records Act that requires all federal agencies to turn over all historically significant documents.

Wilson Fadely, an IRS spokesman, declined comment, saying the agency does not discuss pending litigation.

The battle over the records has been raging for years. Congress urged the IRS and NARA to stop bickering and cooperate as long ago as 1984, but it hasn't happened yet, the lawsuit said.

of Carbondale, but should make an appointment, unless they are certain the treatment is an emergency. Students also have the option of waiting for Health Services to re-open before seeking treatment, she said.

Bonnie Salvetti, a Memorial Hospital of Carbondale representative, said many students do not know about how insurance companies operate; they just want to take care of their problems.

"I don't think a lot of students understand how the billing system works," Salvetti said. "It is not our responsibility to tell a patient whether their situation is an emergency or not. Our only concern is to give that patient prompt care and treatment.

"I would question the ability of the insurance company to determine emergencies after the fact. I think this comes down to an informational issue between the company and the students. Students simply aren't made aware of what can happen."

Hankla said he was unaware of the rules surrounding emergency and non-emergency care. He also said he believes there should be a better way to get information to students about health care on campus.

"The companies and hospitals don't make their procedures very well-known," Hankla said. "Students aren't in the habit of memorizing a 20-page pamphlet. They do what people tell them to do. They need to disseminate the information about health care better."

SIUC Health Services is open 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. every day except holidays. It will be closed March 10 and May 26.

Big season looming for diamond Dawgs

DEPTH ON THE MOUND:

The Salukis are fielding a strong lineup this season — especially in pitching.

RYAN KEITH
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A marked improvement in the standings last season and a solid nucleus of returnees have helped place the Saluki baseball team in the hunt for the 1997 Missouri Valley Conference title.

This season, the Salukis are picked to finish third in the MVC's preseason poll, behind No. 1-ranked Wichita State University and No. 2-ranked Southwest Missouri State University.

One reason for the lofty expectations is the fact that the Salukis made the greatest improvement of any team in the conference standings last season. SIUC finished 1996 with a 29-26 overall record and an 18-12 conference mark and ended the regular season just one-half game out of second place.

The finish was a dramatic improvement for the Salukis, who finished in last place in conference play with an 8-21 mark in 1995.

Sophomore third baseman Jerry Hairston said last year's success has the Salukis eager to open their 1997 season, which gets underway Friday against top-ranked Arizona State University in Tempe, Ariz.

"I think we're going to have a really big year," he said. "With the players we had come in this year and the players we have coming back, we're going to compete for the MVC championship this year."

However, the Salukis will have to overcome the loss of several key players from last year's squad. SIUC lost catcher Tim Kratochvil, pitcher Brad Blumenstock and infielders Jay Mansavage and Frankie Jaramillo to professional baseball.

Sophomore pitcher Jason Frasor said the Salukis will miss those players on offense.

"I think it will hurt us on offense," he said. "We had some big losses on the hitting side, especially guys like Kratochvil and Mansavage."

But the Salukis also have several talented players from the 1996 season to help fill those gaps.

Senior first baseman Aaron Jones, who was picked to win the 1997 MVC Player-of-the-Year award by Collegiate Baseball, Hairston and sophomore center fielder Joe Schley top the list of returnees offensively, while senior shortstop Jamold Little and senior catcher Bret Horace provide experience and consistent play.

1997 Baseball Outlook

On the mound, the Salukis have one of their deepest staffs in several years. SIUC's pitching staff is composed of 15 hurlers, led by returning starters senior Tory Hattan, junior David Piazza and Frasor.

Expected to make immediate contributions on the mound for the Salukis are junior college transfers and left-handed juniors Donnie Chester and Dave Anderson. Returning lettermen also include right-handers Mike McConnell, Chris Schullian and Chris Kulg.

Hattan said SIUC has a much-improved pitching staff with the new additions.

"We're a lot better than last year," he said. "We've got a couple of lefties (Chester and Anderson) that give us some quality depth."

Frasor said the Salukis should have one of the conference's top staffs.

"We'll definitely be better than last year," Hattan said. "Wichita State should have the best staff, but we should definitely be in the top three."

The Salukis have also brought in a number of newcomers who can make an impact since last season. Junior transfers include infielder Matt Dettman, catcher Brad Benson and infielder/outfielder Joel Peters. Freshmen include infielder Steve Ruggeri and outfielders Cory Roper, Marc Nunn and Marty Worsley.

SIUC begins its season with an early three-game showdown with the Sun Devils.

That early start, combined with an NCAA rule-change that reduced college baseball's spring practice time by one week, have given the Salukis less time to get ready for this season.

Saluki Baseball Lineup

Pitcher: Joe Schley, Cory Roper

Infielders: Steve Ruggeri, Joel Peters, Donnie Chester, Jason Frasor, Tory Hattan, Mike McConnell, Dave Piazza, Chris Schullian (*does not designate rotation)

Outfielders: Marty Worsley, Carl Kochan, Jamold Little, Jerry Hairston, Aaron Jones, Matt Dettman

Designated hitters: Brad Benson, Dave Pohlman, Matt Dettman

Coaching Staff: Dan Callahan (Head Coach), Kent Henderson (Associate Coach), Derek Johnson (Assistant Coach)

Source: Southern Illinois Baseball

By: Susan Rich, Daily Egyptian

Saluki coach Dan Callahan said his team came to spring camp in better condition because of the early start.

"One thing we had to emphasize was that our athletes came to camp in better throwing shape, mainly the pitchers," Callahan said. "We told them they didn't need to come back in game shape per se, but they needed to be in good throwing shape."

While the Salukis are building in the right direction, they have their work cut out for them this season. Texas Tech University, Murray State University, the University of Illinois and St. Louis University highlight SIUC's non-conference season.

Along with those teams, the Salukis also will face tough competition within the Valley.

Callahan said perennial-powerhouse Wichita State University once again will be the conference favorite this season, but the Salukis have proven they can compete with anyone in the conference.

Callahan said the Salukis are confident and are setting their sights toward reaching the NCAA Tournament.

"I think we've taken a step, not necessarily a quantum leap to get there, but that's what we're going to shoot for," he said.

Hairston said Salukis will have a tough road before they play in the postseason.

"It's going to be a battle for us, but I think we've got the players to do it," Hairston said. "We look good on paper, and hopefully, we'll show it on the field."

Baltimore, Washington compete for '08 Games

WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON—The friendly rivalry between Washington and Baltimore is about to become more intense as both cities prepare to make runs at hosting the 2008 Olympic Games.

Representatives from each city will attend a seminar in Philadelphia Wednesday sponsored by the U.S. Olympic Committee for organizations considering a bid on the Olympics or an Olympic-related event.

Seven people from the Washington D.C. Exploratory Committee and three from the state of Maryland will be among the 83 people from 38 sports and development organizations attending the session.

The competition will be intense and Washington's financial and crime problems will not help. Nevertheless, who would have believed Atlanta would have won the right to host the 1996 Olympics?

Jets plot new course

BILL TAKES OVER:

New York sets sights on Superbowl with Parcels in the captain's seat.

NEWSDAY

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y.—When the dawn of the New York Jets' rebirth arrived on schedule Tuesday, its soft light found Bill Parcels already on the scene at Weeb Ewbank Hall, unloading boxes along with longtime friend and assistant Bill Belichick.

Their work, however, was just beginning.

That much was made obvious six hours later when octogenarian Jets Owner Leon Hess, unsteady of foot but strong of voice, officially proclaimed Parcels as the cure for a comatose franchise that has had two more head coaches than victories over the past year.

"He's going to satisfy our fans, bring our team back and have us all at the point where we're proud that we're part of the Jets family," Hess told a crowded news conference at the team's Hofstra complex. "We're proud to follow him and his coaches."

Parcels, fresh from his third

Super Bowl appearance, inherits a team that is 10-38 over the past three seasons and has had only one postseason appearance since 1986. In that 10-year span, the Jets have employed six head coaches, including Belichick's seven-day stint as a fill-in.

"I view this as a consummate challenge and hopefully I can revitalize this franchise to the point where we can compete for the championship," Parcels, 55, said yesterday. "Every place I've ever been, that's been my goal, to try to compete for the championship and instill in the players the pride to try to do that."

With that in mind, the Jets, who since the merger in 1970 have lost more games (244) than any other NFL franchise, paid a heavy price to obtain Parcels. NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue, settling a two-week dispute between the Jets and Patriots, on Monday awarded New England four Jets draft picks, including the team's No. 1 selection in 1999, as compensation for Parcels' services.

The Jets also will surrender their third- and fourth-round picks in April's NFL draft, and their second-round selection in 1998.

the top performers in Conference USA and the Sun Belt respectively.

"We need to come in as focused as possible and not worry about those swims or dives we've had in the past," he said. "If we do that then we should do well."

Kluemper said the women's team needs to focus on the month of practice if it wants to contend for the meet title.

"We need to do all of the little things it takes to win," he said. "We cannot make any mistakes because we are thin in depth."

Walker said the Salukis have been improving throughout the season, so he expects added improvement during the Salukis' extra practice time.

"These guys are bound together," he said. "We've improved every time, and I'm proud of these guys."

David Dunn, a senior from Champaign, said the team's unity has helped it prepare for the NIC meet.

"This team has really gelled," he said. "Everybody on the team is concerned about the team and not just individual scores."

Kluemper said having the NIC's at SIUC is exciting because SIUC is only allowed to host the championships every three to four years.

"It will be nice to have the home advantage," he said. "We would hope that we have larger crowds than the rest, and it will be nice to sleep in our own beds."

The NIC's begin Feb. 28 at the Rec Center and will last through March 2.

PROCTOR

the basketball court.

Proctor is averaging 6.3 points and 3.8 rebounds per game for the Salukis this season. Proctor said she has been in an offensive slump this year but still believes she brings something else unique to the team, aside from a decent scoring average.

"I haven't really had a good game since I have been here," she said.

"But I am always on the floor hustling and improving my defense."

There is no statistics column for hustling, but Proctor said her consistent hustling helps her become a better ball player.

"I am always going to crash the boards and contain my girl (on defense)," she said. "I always give effort."

Coach Cindy Scott said despite Proctor's lack of offensive sparkle, she starts her because of what she will bring to the team in the future.

"She has great quickness and athleticism," she said.

"She brings an aspect to our game that we don't get from anyone else. She is young and has great potential!"

“She (Proctor) is one of the first to say, ‘Keep your head up.’ She is one person who can always find something positive in a situation.”

MELANIE BARDLEY
FRESHMAN SALUKI CENTER

Scott said she believes in what Proctor can contribute offensively to the team because she is the best offensive rebounder for the Salukis.

"Sometimes you have to ride with kids," she said, "and let them get out of their slump."

Freshman center Melaniece Bardley said Proctor is one of the greatest assets to the Salukis.

"She is one of the first to say, 'Keep your head up,'" she said. "She is one person who can always find something positive in a situation."

Despite her low scoring, Proctor has found a positive note in her lack of offense, and she said she knows exactly what she needs to do to start scoring.

"I am moving too fast," she said.

"I just need to settle down. I am not worrying about it, because I know it will come."

Scott said the effort Proctor gives everyday is positive for the Salukis.

"The team appreciates her effort," she said.

"Everyone is an O'Desha fan, and they want to see her shoot better."

Bardley said she believes it is Proctor's love for the game that will help spark her offense.

"She is in a slump right now, but she loves basketball," she said.

"That is what keeps her playing without her points being there."

Tartabull rejects Phillies

Free-agent outfielder Danny Tartabull has rejected what the Philadelphia Phillies say was its final offer, a $2 million, one-year contract that offered Tartabull another $300,000 in bonuses. The rejection came despite reported recommendations from Tartabull's agents and his wife that he sign the deal.

"Pops" returning to Pirates

The Pittsburgh Pirates have announced that Hall-of-Famer Willie Stargell is re-joining his former team as assistant general manager. It is a return to Pittsburgh for one of that city's most popular athletes. "Pops" Stargell played left field, then first base for the Pirates from 1962 through 1982 and was a key member of World Series champion teams in 1971 and 1979. A seven-time All-Star, he still holds Pirate career records with 475 homers and 1,540 RBIs. Stargell was a two-time league home run champion and shared the National League Most Valuable Player award in 1979. He was inducted into the Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility in 1988.

Lasorda looks at Devil Rays

Tommy Lasorda, who has worn the Dodger uniform for 48 years, has expressed interest in managing the Tampa Bay Devil Rays.

"Yes, I would talk to (Tampa Bay). The challenge would be there," Lasorda, 69, told the St. Petersburg Times. "I feel good. I've lost 25 pounds and my energy level is as high as it ever was. When you've managed 20 years in the majors and eight years in the minors and six years in winter ball, it's in your blood."

The Devil Rays, who begin play in the American League in 1998, have not hired a manager and will wait until after the season. Lasorda, now a vice president with the Dodgers after retiring last summer, has not spoken with anyone from the Devil Rays.

"If they are interested they'll let me know," Lasorda said.

Alberts, Alt considering retirement due to injuries

The NFL careers of linebacker Trev Alberts of the Indianapolis Colts and Kansas City Chiefs offensive tackle John Alt could be in jeopardy.

The Indianapolis Star reported Tuesday that the oft-injured Alberts is considering whether it's worth it to continue his career. Several unidentified players tell the newspaper that Alberts has made up his mind to walk away from football.

"I think Trev has made up his mind," one veteran told the Indianapolis Star. "You can take it to the bank," added another unnamed Colt. Alberts was the fifth player chosen in the 1994 NFL Draft out of Nebraska.

Meanwhile, the Chiefs' Alt has two bulging disks in his neck that could force him into retirement as well. Alt told Tuesday's Kansas City Star that he found out about the injury last week and that doctors are urging him to wait another month before deciding on possible surgery. The 13-year veteran says he suffered the injury in a Dec. 9 game against the Oakland Raiders. In fact, Alt says he still has a tingling sensation in his left arm. The Chiefs say they haven't yet heard from Alt concerning POWER PLAYER: Saluki forward O'Desha Proctor, a sophomore from St. Louis, looks to pass the ball during practice Tuesday in the Arena. Proctor is averaging 6.3 points and 3.8 rebounds per game.

HUSTLE FACTOR:

"Tweety" doesn't lead SIUC in scoring but she's No. 1 in hustle.

DONNA COLIER
 DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The career of SIUC women's basketball forward O'Desha Proctor did not start in a summer camp during adolescence but rather on a St. Louis playground defending a basketball from the boys in her neighborhood.

Proctor, an undecided sophomore from St. Louis, said she began playing basketball when she was in third grade. Playground basketball with the boys at school peaked Proctor's interest and also helped her visualize her future in the sport.

"I realized my talent when we had a game on the playground, and I wasn't the last one picked," she said. "The boys would say, 'Yeah, I got Tweety,' and I knew I could hold my own hooping it up with the guys."

"Tweety," Proctor's nickname that she acquired when she was 3 years old, still is affectionately used by her teammates and family today.

"When I was younger, I didn't have hair until I was 3, except for three strands on top," she said. "So my aunt named me Tweety, after Tweety Bird."

While known for her nickname, Proctor is not known for her offensive game. But despite not shining in the points column, Proctor shines in the effort she displays while on

SIUC swimmers have championship hopes

HOME POOL ADVANTAGE: Salukis hope to dominate when National Independent Championships come to SIUC.

BRAD WEBER
 DAILY EGYPTIAN WRITER

Thirty days at home have been a welcome relief for the SIUC men's and women's swimming teams.

The teams, which normally have seven days to prepare for their next meet, have had an additional three weeks to prepare for the National Independent Championships Feb. 28 through March 2 at the Recreation Center pool.

The last meet SIUC competed in was Feb. 1 at the University of Evansville, where both teams emerged victorious in dual-meet action.

Saluki men's swimming coach Rick Walker said having practically the entire month of February off has helped to ease some of the Salukis' competition pressures.

"I want the team to rest," he said. "I don't want them to get up and change the channel on the television; but instead use the remote to save less trips."

On the other hand, Saluki women's coach Mark Kluemper said while the time off is nice, he prefers to have three weeks to work with rather than four.

"I wish that we would have had a meet in between to give us some work, but everything can't be perfect," he said. "In the meantime, we're going to have inter-squad meets so that we can stay sharp."

MAKING WAVES: Saluki men's swimming coach Rick Walker discusses their practice routine with his swimmers Tuesday afternoon at the Rec. Center pool. The meet returns to competition Feb. 28 when the National Independent Championships come to the Rec Center.

The championships will feature teams from other conferences besides the Missouri Valley Conference. Two of those conferences, Conference USA and the Sun Belt, will give the Salukis tough competition, Walker said.

"The championship hinges on every event," he said. "For us, the key is the 500 freestyle because last year, we placed seven out of eight swimmers in the top eight."

Walker said the University of Cincinnati and Western Kentucky University will present the toughest challenges. Both teams are
