First lady to draft health care plans

WASHINGTON - President Clinton Monday put his closest adviser in charge of wl..: may well be his knottiest issue, naming first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton to head a White House task force that will draft a health-care plan to submit to Congress within 100 days.

The president said that the task force would work "day and night" out of a "war room" in the Old Executive Office Building to deliver on one of his fundamental campaign promises: to extend health insurance to all Americans and control spiraling health-care costs.

While first lady Rosalynn Carter once chaired a presidential commission on mental health, Mrs. Clinton's hands-on roledirecting Cabinet members and senior White House staffers as they draft some of the most substantively difficult and politically sensitive legislation of the administrationseems unprecedented for the wife of a president.

Her appointment reflects some of the unexpected problems in keeping Clinton's promises on the issue. Clinton reportedly decided to put his wife in charge after th administration's transition team produced alarming calculations of the costs of covering the 35 million Americans who lack medical insurance, even with a phased-in program, and said that savings probably would not

The University received only two proposals for construction of a campus hotel, but SIUC officials would not comment on whether they were disappointed with the response.

Fourteen requests for proposals had been sent by SIUC, but only two were returned by Friday's deadline.

The hotel would be adjacent to the Student

Harry D. Wirth, director of the Physical Plant, said he does not know why the University received only two proposals out of 14 requests.

SIUC President Guyon said the two

Sears cuts jobs, kills icon catalog

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Sears, Roebuck & Co. Monday announced its most dramatic steps to reverse a steady decline in its multibillion-dollar retail operations eliminating 50,000 jobs, closing more than 100 unprofitable stores and shutting down its famed 97year-old catalog.

The changes at Sears come as several other well-known U.S. corporations — IBM Corp., Motors Corp. are firing Westinghouse Corp. — are firing people and closing operations to reinvigorate themselves The moves illustrate how badly

Sears has stumbled in recent years Considered by many to be the most influential merchant in the nation's history, Sears sold more washing machines, coats and hand tools to Americans than anyone else.

In the 1980s, however, its sales ability began to wane, and in 1991 Sears lost its longheld title as the nation's largest general merchandise retailer to Wal-Mart Stores Inc. of Arkansas. Sears failed to keep pace with changes in the retail industry, according to industry executives and stock analysts, while Wal-Mart cut costs by using sophisticated distribution systems and attracted shoppers with top-notch customer service.

Sears' action in killing off the catalog, or "big book," a world-famous American icon, underlines the seriousness of its plight. The catalog, which had estimated sales of $3.3 billion in 1992, is the largest in the country but has been losing money for at least three Sears will have a "sharper focus on profitable businesses and considerably reduced debt, which we believe will enhance shareholder value" as a result of the moves, Sears Chairman Edward Brennan said in a statement.

All told, the restructuring will cost the company $1.7 billion, quarter of 1992. But Sears officials hope the steps will eventually increase profits by $300 million a While sales increased during the recent holiday season, the company recently reported its first quarterly loss in nearly 60 years—a deficit of $833.7 million in the third quarter, stretching from August through October. Its fiscal year will end

Lt. Gov. Bob Kustra, whose task force on higher education is expected to recommend booting expected to recommend booting two university governing boards out of power, is using a recent audit to back his charges.

The audit was released last week by Auditor General William Holland with findings for SIU, the Board of Governors and the Board of Regents, The findings, which include charges of shell-game accounting and misappropriations, fed the flames of protest from Kustra. flames of protest from Kustra, who wants to abolish the Board of Regents and the Board of Kustra seized on the audits as other indication of "sloppy management and a lack of fiscal responsibility."

The task force will release its recommendations Wednesday.

Kustra did not mention SIU in his comments. Jack Dyer, his comments. Jack Dyer, director of University Relations, said SIU might have been spared from Kustra's wrath because the 1990-91 audit contained only 17 findings, the lowest in SIU history.

"We essentially don't have any problems," Dyer said. "Most of the stuff was pretty routine and housekeeping, anyway. I don't know why he is targeting the boards."

Salukis beat 'Birds, 83-68

The second time is twice as nice. After losing to Missouri Valley Conference rival Illinois State in Normal on Jan. 11, the Salukis faced adversity and won, beating ISU 83-68 Monday night at the SIU Arena.

ISU was looking stronger than ever when senior forward Ashraf Amaya picked up two quick fouls in the first minute of the second half, to give him a total of four fouls and put him on the bench for the next eight minutes.

Sophomore forward Marcus Timmons was the first Saluki to respond to the challenge, starting a Saluki run with a monster onehand jam after a steal by junior guard Chris Lowery. The run gave SIUC its biggest lead to that point at 56-50 with 12:24 left to play. ISU coach Bob Bender said Timmons' dunk was definitely the big basket that got SIUC going.

"That was the bucket they really needed and it came in dramatic fashion," he said. "It got the momentum going for them."

ISU would not quit, though, bringing the fight back from the first half, when the lead changed between both teams 18 times and the biggest lead was three points.

SIUC was able to put the game away though, going on an 12-2 away though, going on an 12-2 run, led by sophomore guard Paul Lusk who had seven points. The run ended with a crowd-shattering trey by Lowery that put SIUC ahead 68-60 with 6:08 to play. The Salukis were unstoppable and the closet margin ISU would cut it to was airly and the closet margin ISU would cut it

Schott decision could come soon

The Washington Post

The process by which Major Baseball's League executive council will determine whether—and perhaps how—to discipline Marge Schott discipline Marge Schott apparently has entered its final stage. Sources close to the situation said Monday that Schott's lawyer tentatively is scheduled to meet again with baseball officials late this week, and a decision about possible punishments for the Cincinnati Reds owner for her alleged and admitted racial and ethnic remarks could announced shortly thereafter.

But Milwaukee Brewers President Bud Selig, the chairman of the executive council, was not imposing any deadlines Monday. Schott and her lawyer. Robert Bennett, addressed the executive council on Friday in Grapevinc. Texas, and council members now have Schott's lengthy written response to consider.

Nothing's different than Friday." Selig said by telephone Monday from Milwaukee.

Meanwhile, Bennett was in Cincinnati Monday to meet with local black and Jewish leaders on Schott's behalf.

Bennett reportedly provided the leaders with copies of the Reds new equal employment opportunity hiring policy and discussed the possibility of the team funding inner-city youth baseball programs. Bennett agreed to meet with the groups again on Sources continued to say

Monday that Schott likely will be fined but not suspended by the executive council. Schott's formal response, which was submitted to National League counsel Robert Kheel last week, made it clear that Schott almost certainly will fight any attempt to punish her BUFFALO-Don Beebe was floored.

City of Dallas goes wild with Cowboy mania

Newsday

DALLAS-An entrepreneur walked into the corporate headquarters of the Kroger supermarket chain last week and asked to speak to the head honcho.

The man said he had a novelty item that he thought could sell in the grocery stores and showed it to Bill Parker of the Kroger Corporation.

It was a genuine, shiny Cowboys helmet. The man said it had been dipped in sterling silver. He wanted to sell it for $1,600.

Parker told the man that a sterling silver helmet was hardly the type of item appropriate in Kroger stores. But he offered to take the helmet on consignment, display it in the lobby of the Kroger offices and put a price tag of $1,800 on it, which would produce a profit for Kroger. In two days, five helmets were

Marshall remembered as civil rights activist

Thurgood Marshall's achievements as the nation's leading civil rights lawyer and the first black Supreme Court justice place him among the few Americans to have an impact on society, an SIUC professor said.

Marshall died Sunday at 84. Thomas McAffee, associate professor in the School of Law, said the former Supreme Court justice's legacy will be better remembered for a trial against the Supreme Court than as a member of the Marshall secured a place in history in 1954 when he won the land-mark decision Brown v. Topeka Board of Education that desegregated public schools.

He was the main legal counsel that orchestrated the strategy in the Brown case, McAffee said. "It was a very effective strategy about segregation," he said.

He was appointed to the Federal Appeals Court by President Kennedy in 1961. President Lyndon B. Johnson appointed him to the Supreme Court in 1967.

On the Supreme Court, Marshall wanted to expand the Constitution to include greater equality in education and economic rights.
He created the NAACP Legal Defense Fund to work within the system to improve minority rights.

Antonio Washington, coordinator of Big Brother, Big Sister, said Marshall was the cornerstone of the civil rights struggle. He said Marshall was an individual who began helping the black community by helping himself. "He got himself an education and used it as a tool to better not only himself but others," Washington said. "He was a real person, down

Prof says Baird failed to get Democratic support

The withdrawal of President Bill Clinton's nominee for attorney general may be the result of a lack of public and party support, an SIUC law professor said.

Zoe Baird withdrew her nomina-tion early Friday morning after a grueling day of testimony defending her actions of hiring an illegal immigrant couple.

Leonard Gross, professor of law, said the public's perception of the incident and lack of Democratic support was Baird's final downfall. chance that Baird would be confirmed once the incident was made Baird's lack of support from Democrats stems from her lack of involvement with Democratic interest groups, he said.

"She was not associated with women's issues or civil rights groups," he said. "If she had gotten the backing of these groups, she might have succeeded, but no one was willing to go up to bat for her." was willing to go up to bat for her.

Barbara Brown, lecturer in political science, also said public awareness and disapproval for Baird took

Gross said Baird's crime is perceived worse because of the public

Brown said this incident should not hinder womens' opportunities in politics.

Baird's nomination may have been made in too much haste. Brown said.

Clinton's address challenges America

PRESIDENT BILL CLINTON'S inaugural address helped clarify for America what he means by change.

For the past year one of the most used words in Clinton's vocabulary has been change, but until the inauguration, it was not clear how he defined the word.

The newly sworn in president has assured the public that he doesn't want to change U.S. policy for no reason; he wants to help the United States adapt to a changing world.

...our founders...knew that America, to endure, would have to change. Not change for change's sake, but change to preserve America's ideals - life, liberty, the pursuit of happiness," Clinton explained.

HE SAID TO PRESERVE those ideals, the United States must remain competitive in the world market.

The market recently has opened up with the fall of communism in Eastern Europe and goodwill between more countries than ever. Because of advancing technology, it has become quicker and easier for competitors to make deals. Americans must be willing to embrace this new technology to compete, and they must try to advance technology even further.

Clinton made it clear he will lead the United States in adjusting to a more free world market because it will bolster the country's own economy. He wants the American people to change their views of the world because "There is no longer a clear division between what is foreign and what is domestic - the world economy, the world environment... they affect us all."

BUT THE PRESIDENT REALIZES some changes must be made within America as well. Although there are those people who can keep up with changes in the national and world economy, something must be done for those Americans who cannot help themselves.

...when most people are working harder for less,...when the cost of health care devastates families and threatens to bankrupt our enterprises,...and when...poor children cannot even imagine the lives we are calling them to lead have not made change our friend," Clinton said.

To help those in need and to preserve the economy, he said people must be willing to change their basic nature - they must be willing to sacrifice some, whether it be through taxes or through service to the country.

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE HAD NOT had to adapt to changes within the nation or within the world for a long time for two reasons: First, they did not realize how much the world had changed and they did realize selfchange was necessary. Second, they had not been asked to change.

The new president has pointed out that it is time to make these changes, and he has asked the people to do so.

"...the urgent question of our time is whether we can make change our friend and not our enemy," he said.

It will be the greatest undertaking of all for the new president to lead the way in making change a friend.

People, not just media, should get to read, interpret Bush diaries in full

ecial to The Washington Post

WASHINGTON occurred this month one of the culminating events of the six-year cummating events of the six-year inquiry into the Iran-Contra scandal. It was the release of excerpts from the personal diaries of George Bush — either 32 pages or 45 pages, depending on which paper you read — and 174 pages of a deposition given by Bush to Iran-Contra prosecutors in Iran-area. a deposition given by Bush to Iran-Contra prosecutors in January 1988. Neither had ever been previously made available to the press and, through the press— theoretically— to the American people.

They dealt directly with a question that has hovered, buzzardlike over Bush for several years: Had he been telling the truth or lying since 1986 about his involvement or non-involvement in this affair? They were not, as it turned out, as colorful as some of the Nixon tapes from the Watergate era. But they addressed an issue in which the public had a major interest. So did the special counsei in this case, Lawrence E. Walsh, who has been implying in recent weeks that Bush was vulnerable to a prosecution for these documents.

On Jan. 15, the documents were "made public" in the sense that the White House turned them over to newspapers, magazines, radio and television correspondents and whoever else qualified on that day as a member of the press corps.

They were not, however, "made public" in the sense that they were made available to the public by the press. The networks did not set aside time for "special reports" as they often do when important events occur. Time and Newsweek did not tear up their magazines that weekend to publish special sections on what the New York Times described as "the extraordinary stream-of-consciousness monologue" contained within the Bush diary.

In fact, by the Times's own standards, it gave short shrift to the materials, reprinting only 36 inches of excerpts.

The Post stripped the story across the top of its front page with a headline and opening paragraph suggesting that Bush was up to his neck in the Iran-Contra plot Strangely, however, it devoted no space at all to the transcripts — not an inch.

The Baltimore Sun interpreted the materials as a vindication of Bush (he was seen as a mere bit player in the affair) but printed less than a column of excerpts, which proved to be a few inches more than we got from the Wall Street Journal. Like The Post, the Journal printed no excerpts at all.

It is not often we have the chance to pry into the private diary of a sitting president of the United States. The New York Times reporter who read this "extraordinary" document wrote that it gave one the sense of being "a fly on the wall" observing while it happened the "panic and grope-ing-ness" that overwhelmed the White House when the scandal broke in November 1986.

The diary, he wrote, portrays Bush as a "blindly loyal" lackey to Ronald Reagan and as "an Ronald Reagan and as "an ambitious and calculating ambitious and calculating politician" whose main concern was the impact of Iran-Contra on his own presidential prospects. The Wall Street Journal, in an article written by one of my kinfolk, noted Bush's "fawning references to his boss" and his references to his boss and his frequent use of the "prep school homilies that helped create his public image problem." One of the quoted profundities was: "The joy and spirit of Christmas was fun." A White House aide is quoted as saying that the diaries are far more ious" than sinister.

all Why, given all these testimonials, were we denied the hilarity, insights and voyeuristic thrills of reading for ourselves the Bush diaries? Why were we not given the opportunity to peruse and digest big chunks of the legal deposition hat was said to be so sensitive and potentially incrim-inating that Walsh refused until a few days ago to make a copy available to Bush himself?

If the papers were to argue that newsprint is too expensive and space too dear, we would be unconvinced.

released, tons of newsprint and hundreds of pages of space were being lavished on evanescent preinaugural froth. If they were to argue that they distilled the essence of the material and told us all we needed to know, we would be unconvinced, because they disagreed among themselves on what was or wasn't pertinent and on what it all meant.

The Post implied (but never developed its innuendo) that the materials lent weight to the notion that Bush, on this matter, had been a continental liar.

The Times and the Sun concluded the opposite: that the materials tended to vindicate him. The Journal implied that the bombastic tug of war between the White House and special counsel had been empty posturing since they proved virtually nothing beyond the fact that Bush has no literary future.

This demonstrates, as all journalists are aware and as the public often suspects, that there are fewer certainties in the work we do than we like to admit. It demonstrates the subjectivities that go into our presentation and interpretation of events.

James Russell Wiggins, a former editor of The Post who now publishes at Ellsworth, Maine, the vorld's finest small newspaper, used to remind us that the customers are entitled to one unvarnished crack at the facts. uncolored by whatever opinions, prejudices or speculations we might wish to bring to them. But e often seem incapable of that, functioning more as spin doctors

The antidote in cases such as this one is obvious: Lay the undoctored evidence before the people so they can weigh their judgments against ours and render their own verdicts.

The Bush diaries and depositions were not released for the entertainment and titillation of a handful of people who, because of some accident of history, happen to possess press cards

The public, which, among other things, paid for them, also has an interest in what they contain, result until years down the road.

"I want it done—now," President Clinton told reporters as the task force began its first meeting. He said that Mrs. Clinton was "better at organizing and leading people from a complex beginning to a certain end than anybody I've ever worked with in my life.

And he added, "I also figured, if I did that, you'd know I meant it.

The appointment marked the emergence of Mrs. Clinton as a full-fledged and publicly acknowl-edged policy-maker in her husband's administration, with responsibilities well beyond the tra-ditional East Wing role of promoting such uncontroversial good causes as advocating literacy and opposing drug abuse.

Though she softened her image, submerged some of her outspokenness and shelved her trademark headbands when they became controversial during the campaign, since the election she has reclaimed her maiden name-in all White House documents she is referred to as Hillary Rodham Clinton-and Monday was even wearing a black velvet headband.

With her in charge, the task force presumably will not lack clour or the president's ear. As governor of Arkansas, Clinton appointed his wife to head the task force that devised his ambitious and ultimately successful education reform plan.

"It signals that Clinton believes that this is an important issue and one that he does not intend to let " said Joshua M. Wiener of the Brookings Institution.

SIU avoids major audit problems

By Mike Kuciak

Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs John Haller said SIU does not have the same problems as those of the Board of Governors and the Board of Regent found in the auditor general's report because SIU has been very careful in its actions. We have our own auditors here who watch over us pretty carefully," he said. "The Board of Trustees is very careful about that kind of thing."

Haller said SIU is able to skirt the same problems by being (SIU Chancellor James) Brown is good in demonstrating to the Board of Trustees and the Illinois Board of Higher Education that their recommendations are taken very seriously," he said. "From the past year, we have reduced the budget of our office and the number of people working here by at least one-third. A lot of us are doing double-duty, but I think that has worked out very well.

With actions like that, it makes us examples to look at, rather than examples to avoid," Haller said.

Brown said that the SIU chancellor's office was able to reduce costs and personnel by 40 per-

Here are some of the findings from Auditor General William Holland iiscal year 1990-91 audit of the Board of Governors and the Board of Regents. released last week:

■ In 1991, the Board of Governors moved from a 6.177 square foot office to 13, 000 square feet in a Springfield hotel. The annual lease cost shot up from $85,025 to $181,473 - an increase of more than 100 percent. The leasing agreement included purchasing $107, 331 of office furniture, use of 144 free hotel rooms and an addi-tional 15 days in the "Capital

■ The Board of Governors for spending $312,500 out of funds for the Minority Internship Program on office and compute equipment in 1991. Because of the overhead costs, only $197,500 was spent on 49 internships, unlike 1986 and 1987, when $300, 000 was spent on 61 interns.

■ The Board of Regents also spent $2,381 on coffee and condiments for board employ-

Barb Gossrow Holland's spokeswoman, said the findings ere not surprising.

'We've had these audit findings before for these agencies," she said. "It is really nothing new. The Board of Governors had similar findings in 1989 in using locally held funds to circumvent the state's normal appropriation process. It was not found in 1987

"They're using funds in a different way than what they're appropriated for," Gossrow said. "It's rather serious when they use funds from other sources.

Michelle Brazell, spokesper-son for the Board of Governors, said she was not surprised by the audit, either.

"We get audited every year, and the opinion this year was no different," she said.

Lana Creekmer Kains, a spokesperson for the Board of Regents, said the board is taking the audit seriously and making changes in their spending habits. "There are so many meetings conducted here that it was reasoned it would be OK to provide coffee out of appropriate funds," she said. "Given the report, we have changed. Employees and visitors have to pay for their donuts now.

"Why Kustra has seized up this audit is beyond me," she continued. "Linking this audit to his desire to abolish us is suspicious. One of the findings that he attacks us on has to do with the audit of the lease for our new offices. Why now? Why not when we first moved two years

John Haller, vice chancellor for academic affairs, said he was not sure why Kustra was pushing for getting rid of the two boards.

"I don't have an opinion on why he has picked the two boards," he said. "I am no privy to the committee's discussions in that regard. All the report is is a recommendation that will entail a full discussion by the legislation. Quite frankly, other aspects of the report will be more significant. One is Kustra might recommend giving the Illinois Board of Higher Education greater author-

Kustra is head of a state task force charged with finding ways to cut costs and increase accountability in the Illinois educational system. He has been pushing to erase the two boards for weeks, claiming that doing so would streamline public universities and cut costs.

The auditor's report targeted the Board of Governors, which over-sees Chicago State, Eastern Illinois, Governor's State, Northeastern Illinois and Western Illinois Universities, for sloppy accounting of a locally held fund, a costly new office lease and high overhead costs for a minority internship program. The Board of Regents, which overns Illinois State, Northern Illinois and Sangamon State, spent

$6,464 unnecessarily.
"This report is a black eye on higher education which will only heal with abolition of these two boards and their expensive staffs and offices," Kustra said.

Protesters plan peaceful march

By Candace Samolinski International Writer

The expulsion of 418 Palestinians from Israel prompted three SIUC student organizations to plan a peace march for Wednesday.

A silent peace march by the Committee for Peace in the Middle East, General Union of Palestine Students and Mid-America Peace Project is planned for 12 p.m. at the Student Center.

The march is designed to send a clear message to everyone about the Palestinians who are living under extreme conditions," said Omar Kasam of the General Union of Palestine Students. "They have been expelled without a trial and their human rights have been violated."

The Palestinians were expelled from Israel on Dec. 16 and are currently living between Israel and Lebanon.

Benjamin Goldman, a member of the Hillel Jewish student organization said he supports the expulsions.

"What happened in this case was a disaster and it is not a good situation," Goldman said, "but I don't think they should be allowed back into the country."

Police Blotter

SIUC Police arrested Sherese Wofford, 18, of Boomer III after a female student complained about threatening phone calls. She was released. The court date is Feb. 11.

SIUC Police arrested Timothy Hawthorne, 20, of Desoto, Mark Winnings, 20, of Carterville, and Scott Allen Nauman, 17, of Cambria Friday morning for illegal consumption of alcohol by minors.

Art of storytelling survives in information age By Christian Kennerly in today's hectic age of information, where time is a commodity and televisions vie for our attention, sometimes the simplest of things are forgotten - such as how to tell a story But a new continuing education course can reconnect students to the lost art of storytelling.

She said the oral tradition is still flourishing in modern culture, as is evident by the rumors and individual stories that spring out of incidents such as Watergate, until the stories become major parts of this nation's history.

New NAACP leader teaches appreciation of self, others

By Angela L. Hyland Special Assignment Writer

No mysterious stranger lurking in a hat and trench coat is visible as NAACP President Linda Flowers turns to look over her shoulder. Nor is there a dark figure leaping into a doorway. Yet Flowers still has the eerie feeling she is being followed.

Anidst brightly colored blouses and silk scarves, Flowers feels a pair of eyes following her. She looks up. A saleswoman hastily adjusts a shirt dangling from a rack. Flowers moves further into the store. The saleswoman is still there — refolding sweaters, rehanging pants, picking up lint — but always there and always watching.

"A lot of people think racism doesn't exist anymore, but 1 still confront it," said Flowers, an SIUC graduate student in curriculum and instruction. "I go into stores and I'm treated like I'm going to take something. It makes me angry. It makes me indignant. I find myself thinking, I probably make more money than you do.

Flower's encounter with a suspicious store clerk is far from being an isolated incident, she said.

"Since I (was selected NAACP president), I've received hundreds of calls on discrimination," she said, "It isn't something you read about in the papers or hear about on the news, so the average (Caucasian) person doesn't think it's a problem anymore.

"People look at Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and his dream and a lot of people think this dream has been fulfilled," Flowers said. "But discrimination. racism and prejudice is deeply imbedded in our society. People who think it's not an issue anymore are wrong. Unless you live it everyday, you can't know (the extent to which) it still exists."

Although Flowers has always been aware of racism, she had never seriously considered taking an active, political role in fighting it.

This month, when she takes over the position of NAACP president, she plans to do just that. "I really wasn't looking for

"Î really wasn't looking for something else to do, but I felt like a hypocrite." she said. "Adults are always telling kids 'you can be whatever you want to be." But I realize there are limits not related to their intellectual capacity. You can tell an African American kid that if they want to and if they work hard, they could become president. Fut we've never had one."

Flowers said when she urges children to work toward their dreams, she doesn't tell them there are limits on what they can become: "I still tell kids they can be whatever they want to be," she said. "It might not be true today, but maybe one day (it will)."

but maybe one day (it will)."
During the day. Flowers teaches first graders at Parrish School in Carbondale. She fills her classroom not only with colorful posters, maps and mobiles, but with encouragement.

"I try to instill in my students a sense of values and a belief in themselves," she said. "At this age, it's easy to make an impact on their lives."

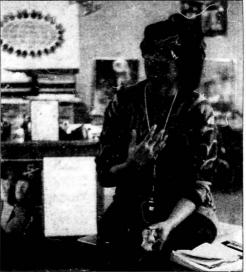

Teachers can play a very significant role in people's lives. Fiowers said. In her own life, the dedication of teachers helped her become the person she is today.

"I got into trouble a lot when I was in school but my teachers never wrote me off," she said. "They kept working with me.

"Sometimes, we're too quick to write kids off. Even if you don't ship them off (to a learning or behavior disorder class), you write them off mentally. You have low expectations for them. I try not to do that. I try to teach them the value of hard work."

Many values Flowers works to instill in her students are lessons she was taught by her parents.

"I think I inherited a lot of their strictness," she said. "My family lived in the inner city of Chicago. We went to the public schools and we had only 15 minutes to get all the way up to the 11th floor and get home (after school).

NAACP Carbondale Chapter president Linda Flowers

"My mom's name was Percy. As kids, we used to joke about her being a warden. We'd say 'Percy shows no mercy."

Despite her parents' strictness, Flowers said she could always count on her family being there for her in times of crisis. This sense of community and support has been invaluable to her throughout her life.

Dividing her time between her family, her job, her classes and her new position as president will undoubtedly be difficult, but Flowers said she is confident she will be able to handle it.

"It will be hard, but with people supporting you and the branch, the challenges won't be insurmountable."

nes Decides

Lear Reader,

I now turn to the D.E., hoping the university community does not endorse censorship in any form, to answer the question I am most often asked, "What do you mean by "being born again." The question should be, what does Christ mean in the third chapter of the gospel of lohn when he repeats with a double warning of "Verily, Verily," except you become born again you can in "no wise see" or "enter" the Kingdom of God.

The reason for that warning is that sin in no way can enter the aven. Like it or not, you and I are sinners. Not sinners because we sin, rather, we sin because we are sinners. Born sinners. Romans 323, "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of "Od." Scripture makes no exceptions. Issaich 43.27, "by first father (Adam) hath stin sd, and thy teachers (the religious) have transgressed against me".

exceptions. Issain 43:27, "thy institution (Adam) nat me and any academs (the religious) have transgressed against me".

Isain 53:6, "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have unned everyone to his own way; and the Lord halt laid on him(Christ) in he iniquity of us all." Isain 64:6, "But we are all as an unclean thing..."

Nothing has changed in the past 2000 years. The religious still gransgress against god with their attempt to still the tword of God. Like you an I, "hey must turn that rebellious spirit into a God-ward spirit. In transgress against god with their attempt to stiffe the word of God. Like you an I, they must turn that rebellious spirit into a God-ward spirit. I Peter 1:23. Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible seed, by the word of God which we liveth and abidetti forever". By the word of God. Romans 10:17, "So then faith (in God) cometh by hearing and hearing by the word of God".

How do you hear the word of God? By asking God's holy spirit to give you the light of God's holy words as you read a good bible. Only God's holy spirit, by the power of Jesus Christ can give you a new God-ward spirit. It is not water baptism. Matthew 3:11, "I glohn the bap with indeed because we will water into premance that be Cristly that spirit to give you the light of God's holy words as you read a good bible. Only God's holy spirit, by the power of Jesus Christ can give you a new God-ward spirit. It is not water baptism. Matthew 3:11, "I (John the bap tist) indeed baptize you with water into repentance; but he (Christ) that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear; he shall baptize you with the holy ghost and fire". Hebrews 10:10 states that Christ died once and for all. II Cor 5:4 exis with, "If one died for all then we're all dead" (in sin). Remember, scripture gives no exception.

that Christ died once and for all. II Cor 54 evids with, "It one died for all then we're all dead" (in sin). Remember, scripture gives no exception. Hear Mary the mother of the r-san Jesus Christ (I tim 25) in Luke 1:47, "and my spirit rejoiced in Go a my savior".

Seek God through his holy word. Repent your sins, your sinfulness. Make Christ savior and Lord of your life. Only he can cause in you a new God-ward spirit. Only he can write your name in the Lambs book of life. The names in the Lambs book of life are not taken from deach ware between the reduced with the can be a seen to the can be s church membership roles.

Salvation is not, cannot be, a life long process. For how long is a lifetime?

Knowing about Christ is not knowing Christ.

Yours in Christ William D. Curtis Paid Advertisement

miss another golden opportunity."
The city (pop. 330,000) hasn't had an overall championship since 1905, when the Bills won their second consecutive AFL title. The hunger for a championship has spawned incredible enthusiasm. They even have a name for it: Bills Fan-demonium.

The Bills averaged almost 78,000 per game at Rich Stadium, which seats 80,290. The city, an ethnic, blue-collar town, derives much of its enjoyment from the Bills, who generate an estimated $100 million a year for the local paraphernalia. The stands are at beleaguered NBA team, has benefited from the Cowboy mania.

The Mavericks own several sports paraphernalia stores, which stock a huge line of Cowboys items. One member of the Mavericks organization said about 90 percent
