Killing kindles China, Soviet tensions

PEKING (AP) — China accused the Soviet Union Tuesday of creating "a serious incident of provocation and bloodshed" on their border by killing one Chinese and wounding another just when both sides were preparing to talk about improving relations.

The official Xinhua (Hsinhua) news agency said about 20 Soviet soldiers lying in ambush at the Soviet border with northwest China's Xinjiang (Sinkiang) region killed a herdsman and wounded a veterinarian as they were inspecting a pasture on July 16.

Xinhua said a strong protest note to the Soviet Embassy in Peking accused the Soviet Union of a number of provocations, this summer "designed to create tension and threaten the safety and life of the Chinese border inhabitants."

The note declared: "The Soviet side has deliberately created a border incident of provocation and bloodshed at a time when concrete arrangements are being discussed for negotiations on the relations between China and the Soviet Union. This cannot but draw the serious attention of the Chinese side."

After notifying the Soviet Union it would not renew their amity treaty when it expires next year, China had proposed talks on their relations covering such matters as trade, technological cooperation, peaceful coexistence and non interference in each other's affairs.

After exchanges of notes, the Soviet Embassy in Peking said last week China had unconditionally accepted talks on a variety of government-to-government questions with the Soviet Union.

China's protest note said the Soviet soldiers intruded into China in the Tersadi area and took back the body of Li Baoqin (Li Pao-chin), the dead herdsman, and the wounded veterinarian, Burumbutug. It demanded Burumbutug's return, punishment for those who shot him, compensation for relatives of the victims, and a halt to all Soviet intrusions and provocations along the border.

The area of the shooting, it said, "is not a disputed area, for the boundary alignment there is clear."

It said a Soviet verbal statement to the Chinese

Senate delays profits tax vote

By David Espe
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders told President Carter Tuesday they have abandoned plans to push for passage of his proposed "windfall profits" tax before Congress begins a month-long recess on Aug. 3.

But Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee, assured the president that Congress will enact a tax on oil producers later this year that he "will be pleased to sign."

Carter learned of the Senate's bad-news, good-news intentions at a White House breakfast meeting with top Democrats in Congress, where energy legislation was the prime topic of discussion.

The president has several major energy proposals pending in Congress, and had hoped for final action on his "windfall profits" tax before the House and Senate begin their summer recess.

Carter needs the tax to finance his 10-year, $142.2 billion development program designed to reduce the nation's dependence on imported oil.

Approximately $68 billion of the $142.2 billion would be funneled through Carter's proposed Energy Security Corporation, to handle various alternative energy programs, while $24 billion would be provided for low income assistance and $16.5 billion would be spent on programs to improve transportation efficiency.

The remainder would be spent on such things as a solar energy bank, a program for reducing utilities' use of oil and for oil shale and natural gas tax credits.

The "windfall profits" tax had been passed by the House of Representatives earlier this year, but the measure has been in Long's Finance Committee ever since.

As recently as last Saturday, Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., told reporters he hoped the Senate could vote on the matter before Aug. 3. Byrd said he

Labor secretary comments

Higher jobless rate expected

By Cathy Howyn
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — U.S. Labor Secretary Ray Marshall on Tuesday reaffirmed the Carter administration's commitment to create more jobs for minorities, but admits a recession would push unemployment toward 7 percent.

Speaking before the 60th annual convention of the National Urban League, Marshall looked to the 1980s for improvement in employment opportunities for minorities and relief from the problems now facing the Carter administration.

Marshall said the administration plans to spend $142 billion in the next decade to build a new "energy base" that will constitute a "massive" public works project as alternative energy sources are developed. About $24 billion of that total has been earmarked for helping the "poor cope with energy problems," Marshall said.

"We spent $68 billion last year to pay for foreign oil," Marshall said. "Just think what we could have used that money for here in America instead... Importing oil is like exporting jobs."

At a news conference earlier in the day, Marshall said most of his efforts to reduce national unemployment will be aimed at the young and disadvantaged.

"I hope we can keep unemployment under 7 percent," Marshall said during the news conference. "I don't think we will be able to keep unemployment at (the current) 5.6 percent rate."

Despite the likelihood of rising unemployment during the next year, Marshall said the administration hopes to lower unemployment to 4 percent by 1983, the level mandated by Congress in the Humphrey Hawkins act.

SIU pegged as key force in city's growth

By Cindy Michaelson
Staff Writer

A four-year planning study unveiled at the City Council meeting Monday night pegs SIU as being the key force in future development of Carbondale as a retail, social, cultural and communication center of Southern Illinois.

Senior city planner Larry Bruno told the council that as SIU plans to emphasize research and service because of an expected decline in enrollment, the city should also plan for the attraction of industry, especially energy-related industry, because of the University's new goals.

The 69-page study, titled "Complan 1977-1988 2002," charts the city's physical growth for 25 years. It was prepared by the city's planning division and was discussed at a public hearing on the study held by the City Council.

While most of the council members seemed committed to improving "what Carbondale has now," part of the Complan clearly looks to a time when people refer to downstate Illinois as Carbondale rather than Peoria.

"The plan is, in many ways, remedial. But it will eventually bring the city to the point of being the transactional center of Southern Illinois. We do want to attract some new industry but the (first phase of the) plan is basically to work with what we have," Bruno said.

The Complan combines extensive data on citizen opinion with plans for achievable goals for the city. Cited by Bruno as three major areas of immediate concern were the preservation of existing neighborhoods, the development of an arterial street system and the restructuring of the downtown area.

Councilman Archie Jones cautioned that neighborhood factionalism would be detrimental to the goals of the Complan.

"We have to be careful that we don't become too enthusiastic about our own neighborhoods. We need to be cohesive and have all the neighborhoods working

Oil companies report rise in profits

NEW YORK (AP) — Gulf Oil Co., the nation's fifth-largest oil company, today reported a 65 percent rise in earnings in the second quarter. Standard Oil Co. of Ohio (Sohio) said its profits for the second quarter rose 70 percent.

Gulf, based in Pittsburgh, attributed the earnings rise to higher income from foreign operations, a reason cited by other oil companies in announcing their earnings bulges. And Gulf said earnings from domestic operations increased only slightly.

Gulf earned $291 million, or $1.49 a share.

Anti-school busing amendment killed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Tuesday decisively killed a proposed constitutional amendment aimed at eliminating busing as a tactic used to end school segregation.

On a vote of 216 to 209 the amendment failed to win even majority support. The proposal needed a two-thirds endorsement to survive and fell 75 votes short of that mark.

The House vote was the first time that either body of Congress has taken a stand on busing as a constitutional issue.

Company seeks way out of project

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Illinois Power Co. is trying to back out of building a second nuclear generating plant at Clinton without further blackening the eye of the battle-scarred nuclear industry, critics of the utility said Tuesday.

Hearings on the utility's $92 million rate hike request — some of it to finance work at the Clinton plant — are scheduled to begin Wednesday before the Illinois Commerce Commission.

Doctors' ad ethics proposal shelved

CHICAGO (AP) — A controversial new ethics code that would have let physicians advertise was shelved for more study Tuesday at the American Medical Association convention.

The AMA House of Delegates voted to send the ethics proposal to its state and local medical societies for comment.

The vote has the effect of delaying final action on a revision of the existing ethics code, which was first enacted in 1957, until at least December 1980.

Dr. James Todd of Ridgewood, N.J., chairman of the committee that wrote the ethics revisions, told the delegates they should not "shirk the responsibility" of voting on the code.

Judge grants stay to convicted killer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A federal judge granted a stay of execution Tuesday for convicted killer Howard Virgil Lee Douglas, who had been scheduled to die in Florida's electric chair on Thursday.

U.S. District Judge Ben Krentzman, in ordering the stay, said he was concerned over whether Douglas had been given a public trial as guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

"I think we've got our best opportunity," attorney Larry Spalding said before the hearing began.

Embassy in Moscow on July 17 accusing Chinese of trespassing into Soviet territory was an "outright distortion" and showed that the July 16 shooting "was wholly pre-arranged by the Soviet side."

China also publicized a protest to the Soviet Union in May last year, when it accused Soviet troops of intruding into northeast China's northeastern Heilungkiang province, shooting at more than 30 Chinese and wounding some of them. The Soviet Union said its troops became lost while searching for an armed Soviet criminal, but had not fired at Chinese.

Meanwhile, Japan's Kyodo news service reported from Peking that an open letter has been put up on "democracy wall" urging promotion of friendship with the Soviet people as opposed to the Soviet Government, which it accused of seeking hegemony, or world domination.

Windfall tax vote slowed was prepared to cut into the recess if that would help speed the bill along.

But House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said Long spent part of the White House meeting with the president "explaining why he couldn't get the excess profits tax out until Oct. 1."

After receiving Long's pledge of a satisfactory bill later in the year, Carter expressed his appreciation, according to House Democratic Whip John Brademas, D-Ind.

Byrd said after the session

he hopes to complete Senate approval of the tax, as well as other parts of Carter's energy program, before the end of September.

Carter invited the entire Finance Committee to the White House for a session Tuesday afternoon.

The Senate Budget Committee has decided to set up a special task force to look into the budgetary implications of a costly, crash program to develop synthetic fuels.

The task force is expected to take the month of August to do its work, and Byrd said he has dropped plans to cancel part of the recess as a result.

Retroactive clause opposed

City job residency action tabled

By Cindy Michaelson Staff Writer

Although the City Council appears to favor a proposal requiring city employees to live within the Carbondale city limits, Mayor Hans Fischer strongly suggests that he would oppose a "retroactive ordinance" on residency requirements.

In order to allow present city employees to review and respond to the proposal, Fischer suggested at the council meeting Monday that no action be taken in the near future on the matter. The council agreed and the proposal will be discussed again at the next informal meeting on Aug. 17.

Personnel Officer Fran Rogers presented a comprehensive report on types of residency requirements, outlining several options open to the council. When asked for her opinion on such an ordinance, Rogers said, "I don't think a residency requirement is necessary at this time."

Councilman Charles Watkins said he "had a problem" with considering an ordinance that would increase the city's present housing shortage.

"It creates a grave difficulty if we, as a council, are looking at a housing shortage and then do something to make it more severe," Watkins said.

According to the report, 164 of the city's 319 employees live within the city limits. Rogers told the council that about 40 percent of the department heads live outside the city.

The council seems to favor a proposal that would require all employees hired after a certain date to become residents of the city within a stipulated time after employment.

This proposal would require new employees to remain residents of the city for the duration of their employment with the city. Present employees would be exempt from the ordinance.

City Manager Carroll Fry urged the council to consider residency requirements for department heads and emergency personnel including police, fire and public works.

He said weekends are one example of when such a rule would be helpful. "Everyone knows that a water main ruptures only on Saturday," Fry said.

Police Chief Ed Hogan told the council that an "informal policy" already exists which requires emergency personnel to live close enough to the city to be able to respond to a call within 20 minutes.

In her report, Rogers indicated that city residents are given preference in hiring, although there is no durational requirement.

together," Jones said. Bruno agreed, saying that approval of the Complan would result in "a sense of total community."

The authors of Complan based their decisions on a projected population in Carbondale of 41,256 by the year 2002. A section on proposed city policy to coincide with the goals of Complan includes suggestions for intergovernmental cooperation through some type of local council of governments, strict enforcement of zoning and subdivision regulations, and environmental conservation.

The University will further be relied on to provide "continued excellence" in cultural and educational activities for the area, Bruno said.

SEOG check delay continues

By Karen Guilo
Staff Writer

Students who have been waiting to receive their summer Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant checks since the third week of summer session will have to wait another two weeks because of delays at the financial aid office, Gordon White, director of Student Work and Financial Aid, said Monday.

The delay also caused money used for National Direct Student Loans, which are often given in tandem with SEOGs, to remain unspent and get sent back to the federal government.

"I don't know what else to say except we delayed in processing the grants," White said. "This will affect between 70 and 80 students."

Funds for the SEOG ran out in June. Grants not issued before then will be paid with student-to-student grant funds which are being transferred to the SEOG account, White said. The transfer process slowed down the vouchering of SEOG checks, he added.

Because the financial aid office did not disperse NDSL checks before the fiscal year ended June 30, the funds for the loan were sent back to the federal government, White said.

"I put the NDSL files on hold status until the financial aid staff decided whether to use funds for next year to pay out the loans or not pay any of the loans," White said. "We decided to disperse NDSL funds to the students we already made commitments to. No NDSL money will be available for the rest of the summer."

The NDSL operates on a fiscal-year basis, he said. The funds are obtained through new appropriations from the government and repayments of loans from previous semesters.

Governor: Dirtier air OK if more Illinois coal used

By James Litke
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Gov. James R. Thompson said Tuesday that he's willing to live with "dirtier air" so more of Illinois' dirty-burning coal can be used while the search for energy alternatives goes on.

Thompson, speaking to the annual conference of the National Urban League, called for "more rational" environmental laws and the use of high-sulfur Illinois coal to help meet the energy needs of the United States.

The governor said he would be willing to put up with "dirtier" air from coal burning for "the next 10 or 15 years." Current environmental laws restrict the use of Illinois coal because it releases so much sulfur into the air when it is burned.

"We don't want to go back to the days when you couldn't see across the street because of all the smog, but we do want to make our environmental laws in the short term more rational," the Illinois Republican said.

Thompson held a news conference afterward.

One possible approach would be amending the federal clean air act of 1977, he said. He added that a national approach was necessary and that a state-by-state approach to environmental standards would wreak havoc.

However, Thompson said, "if the clean air act is written in stone, so be it. We'll have to move on" and consider other alternatives.

Concerning the gasoline situation in Illinois, the governor said an 8 to 10 percent shortfall of supplies in July has not caused problems because motorists have observed the 55 mph speed limit and gas dealers have cooperated in distributing the product.

He also said he has no plans to impose an odd-even system of gas sales used in other states or minimum or maximum purchase requirements.

Thompson suggested that the federal government should allocate a certain amount of oil to each state, thus encouraging the states to devise ways to live within those limits in dealing with their own needs.

On nuclear energy, Thompson said he is "leery" but also a "realist." He said he wanted more safeguards, more inspections and a more uniform plan for waste disposal.

The governor said that red tape has made federal funding inefficient.

Book has no sympathy for devilish Stones

"Keith was really panicking now. His hands were shaking, and he had broken into a cold sweat. 'I'm sick, Tony,' he moaned. 'I've got to get some stuff right away.' I rang all my contacts. Pushers somehow intuit when addicts are desperate, and Keith was forced to pay an extortionate $1,000 for a mere quarter ounce of heavily cut, very low-grade heroin. He was so grateful he didn't quibble. 'Thank Christ for that,' was all he said as the colorless liquid pumped into his arm from the syringe."

Those are the words of Tony Sanchez, who reportedly worked for eight years as a drug-carrier and paid companion of Keith Richard, guitarist for the Rolling Stones. On August 28, "Up and Down With the Rolling Stones," Sanchez' memoirs of his life with the most famous rock and roll band in the world, will be published by William Morrow and Co. Examination of advance galleys of the book indicate that it will give an unprecedented look into the stark, depressing netherworld that lies beneath the dream-like surface of rock superstardom.

Although stories about the eccentric lifestyle followed by the Rolling Stones are common—the band has thrived on its reputation as hedonistic, hard-living men teetering on the edge of society's conventions—Sanchez' first-person account shows them to be desperate and almost pathetic in their reliance on hard drugs. Mick Jagger, Keith Richard, and the late Brian Jones are the focus of the book; the other two Rolling Stones, Bill Wyman and Charlie Watts, are shown to be moderate and staid in their living habits.

Among the allegations that will be detailed in the book:

Keith Richard's heroin addiction has been so severe that most of his waking hours have been devoted to obtaining drugs, taking them, then beginning the search for more drugs.

Brian Jones' death at the bottom of a swimming pool came after years of drug addiction. While the world thought of him as the glamorous leader of the Rolling Stones, he was in fact scorned by others in the band, who had not yet developed their own severe habits. At one point Sanchez says to Richard, "Seems like you and Mick hardly ever speak to Brian anymore," to which Richard replies, "Well, he's burned out, isn't he? The only problem now is what to do with him."

Mick Jagger calculatingly built himself a public reputation as a satanic, demonic, dangerous presence, but has always really been conventional and middle-class in his attitudes. He needs cocaine to get himself on stage for appearances, but is ridiculed behind his back by the rest of the band because he secretly represents so much of what the Rolling Stones are supposed to stand against. One of Jagger's dreams is to become a member of the British Parliament, as a member of the Labor Party: "It is so much more significant and worthwhile than just writing and singing songs for the rest of my life," he said.

On at least two occasions, Keith Richard's heroin addiction became so threatening that he flew to a clinic in Switzerland where an entirely new blood supply was transfused into his body, replacing his own drug-laden blood.

During Brian Jones' sad final days, Jones—who was the original founder of the Rolling Stones—was made an object of fun by the rest of the band. He would go to the recording studio, and Jagger, Richard and the others would direct him to go into a soundproof room for some guitar work. They would then make him play, but refuse to turn on the tape recorders, and laugh at him while he could not hear them. During the last years of his life, while he was a musical idol to millions around the world, Jones' work did not appear on Rolling Stones' albums.

Anita Pallenberg, the mother of Keith Richard's children, has also been the lover of both Jagger and Jones. Although she had joined the Stones' inner circle because of her love affair with Jones, when he died was living with Richard, and said, "Thank Christ, it was only Brian." She was a beautiful, stylish actress when she first met the Stones, but degenerated into a physically filthy junkie who had no regard for ever her own personal cleanliness and hygiene.

As a "joke," Keith Richard and Tony Sanchez rammed powerful drugs down the throat of Sanchez' pet dog. The dog became violently ill, fell into a moat and almost drowned as Richard laughed.

Trying to devise new ways to smuggle drugs past customs officers, Richard heard of a man who had strapped money bags filled with cocaine under his children's clothes. "What a great way to do it," Richard said. "Perhaps I can get Marlon (his infant son) to do that for me when he gets a bit older."

Brian Jones liked to beat women in bed. Sanchez would see girls leave Jones' apartment with black eyes and puffy lips. But none ever went to the police or caused trouble, and many of the girls came back for more—"I surmised that though they might not have enjoyed being slapped around, they were prepared to tolerate it if it was the price they had to pay for sharing a Rolling Stone's bed."

Mick Taylor was a shy, drug-clean, relatively innocent teenager when he was asked to join the Rolling Stones to replace Brian Jones after Jones' death. Five years later, when he left the band, his nasal septum had been burned away by cocaine, soon his marriage ended, he began living with a cocaine dealer, and he had been reduced to selling his gold records.

The Rolling Stones are currently in Paris, recording an album. A spokesman for the band said, "They haven't seen the book yet. Morrow won't give them a copy. The book publisher is hiding the book. The Rolling Stones can't comment because they haven't seen it."

"I asked Keith Richard about Sanchez, and what Sanchez' job was. Keith just said, 'He was there.'"—Copyright 1979, Field Enterprises, Inc.

Rep. Paul Simon

Washington skeptical of cabinet shake-up

One of my staff members mentioned to me as I came into the office that she had just received a phone call from a friend in Illinois saying the Dow Jones stock market ticker had reported that the cabinet and White House staff had resigned.

We both laughed, assuming it to be a false report, though retaining a lingering doubt.

One minute later the CBS station in Chicago called and wanted to go on live with me to get my reaction. They confirmed what I had thought to be a wild rumor.

About two hours earlier I had been in a small meeting with Speaker of the House "Tip" O'Neill, several members of the House, and Secretary of the Treasury Mike Blumenthal, discussing the status of the economy and how we might respond to some soft spots in the economy.

As the clock approached three, Blumenthal excused himself because he had to go to a meeting at the White House. Little did any of us (including Blumenthal) guess the significance of the meeting!

While the reaction of House members to the Sunday-night-after-Camp-David talk was generally favorable, the reaction to this particular Carter move came in overwhelmingly negative. I do not know a single member of Congress who feels it has been well handled. But that is no indication that Main Street America reacted the same way. My guess is that most people don't care about cabinet shifts.

The reaction of members of the House and Senate did not come because of enchantment with all the members of the Cabinet or White House staff, but because the incident provided an air of instability. It was not the way most of us would have handled the firing of someone.

The big question is where the President leads us from here.

Having a chief of staff in Hamilton Jordan may help. Certainly the elevation of Stuart Eizenstat—universally respected on Capitol Hill—is welcomed by all of us who have had the chance to work with him.

The poll done in Columbus, Ohio immediately after the President's television speech showed that a majority of those watching and voting want the President to be even tougher.

I believe that accurately reflects the mood of the nation.

We yearn for firm, dedicated, stable leadership—leadership which has a solid sense of where it is going, what it is doing.

To get there the President will have to lean more heavily on people like Stuart Eizenstat, and less on the media relations people and pollsters. For what we want is substance, not showmanship.

Letters

Can't trust corporations to protect our environment

One would hope that the apocalyptic message delivered by President Carter last Sunday would be prelude to decisive action. Yet, it is foolish to think that giant industries will voluntarily desist from the profitable spoliation of the environment; and it is impossible for a government committed to maximizing the autonomy of those corporations to take the drastic action that is needed to stop the conflict between the corporate interest and the common good.

Free enterprise, for all its sophistication, cannot make desperately needed social investments, plan comprehensively and massively cope with energy and the environment. Private decision-making is no longer capable of regulating a technology whose social consequences become more and more destructive.

Government cannot leave environmental resources from the privately profitable sector of the economy to the socially necessary. This is a decision only the government has the power to make and which must be taken as a result of democratic processes. It can only be accomplished on a national scale and within the framework of planning.

For years the management of environmental resources has been to serve the interests of stockholders and stockholders controlled the management. But, environmental resources are in the public interest and it is only logical that the appointed representatives of the public control the management. In this scheme, corporations would be left to their own devices as long as it conforms to a National Environmental Policy and did not irresponsibly impose social costs upon the country.

There are, in short, no perfect solutions, to the enormous and complex problems of the environment, and any intelligent person can foresee difficulties in any proposal. Nevertheless, the formation of a National Environmental Policy, with responsibility seated with democratically elected representatives is, with all the problems admitted, a right step in the best direction.

Activist says Palestinians will continue to struggle

By Jacqui Koszczuk
Staff Writer

"We cannot accept the Camp David accords because they shortchange the Palestinian people of their basic birthright, the right of 4 million people to inhabit, freely and independently, the region they had inhabited for 2,000 years," a Palestinian activist and author told a group of about 150 students and faculty Monday night at the Student Center.

Fawaz Turki, who lives in Washington, D.C., said he is visiting campuses across the country in order to "inform the misinformed American public about the Palestinian conflict."

"We have been viewed as cutthroats and terrorists, or as a group of refugees standing in line with our beggar bowls," said Turki. "In reality, we are a people seeking peace and freedom. We, as the Palestinian Liberation Movement, are dedicated to the establishment of a secular and democratic Arab state."

Turki, who left Palestine in the refugee exodus of 1948 at the age of 8, said the Palestinian leaders in the Middle East would not

"negotiate with, or in any way dignify the illegal regime in Palestine."

"The Palestinians will continue to fight. We have nothing to lose, we have already lost everything," said Turki, author of "The Disinherited: Journal of a Palestinian in Exile" and "Poems from Exile."

He said the Palestinian territory on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, according to the Camp David treaty, amounts to only 19 percent of the total original Palestinian territory, and is inhabited by only 40 percent of the total Palestinian population. Most of the population spread to regions outlying Palestine after the United Nations partition in 1948, Turki said.

Turki said the world could expect to soon see the re-emergence of the Palestinian movement as a result of "the vacuum created by the Camp David treaty."

"Things started to go wrong for Sadat when he signed the Camp David accords. He came back to the Arab leaders of the Conservative Arab Right power block (meaning an alliance between Saudia Arabia, Jordan, Syria, and Egypt) with a treaty that was too outrageous for them to accept," said Turki.

He said the treaty reduced the Palestinian conflict to "a fragment of the Middle East conflict, when in reality it is much more than that."

Turki, who was member of the Palestinian Liberation Organization's delegation to the United Nations in 1974, said the other three Arab powers believed they could not perpetuate their ascendancy in the Arab world without the assurance that the treaty could provide a stable climate

Club throw, shotput records broken by Squids at Cerebral Palsy games

By Karen Gullo
Staff Writer

The SIU Squids broke three records and took 17 first-place ribbons at the Ohio Cerebral Palsy Regional Championships recently at Wright University in Dayton.

The eight-member team competed in swimming, track, softball throwing and pentathlon events at the third annual event in Dayton for multihandicapped individuals and individuals with cerebral palsy.

Each competitor in the event was placed in one of seven classes, depending on the severity of his or her disability and whether they use a wheelchair, according to coach Richard DeAngelis.

Marvin Whittaker of the Squids, competing in class four, set a new record in the club throw with a distance of 22 feet 10 inches, 21 feet farther than the old record. Whittaker also took first place in three swimming events and the bowling event.

Tom Patton, also in class four, broke the shotput record for the Squids with a record put of 11 feet 3 inches. He also took a first place in the 60-yard dash.

A new club-throw record in class one was set by the Squids' Pat Lee, who achieved a distance of 38 feet 5 inches, eight feet more than the old record.

Four other first-place ribbons were awarded to Tim Stout for his javelin and discus throws and his time in the track event.

DeAngelis explained that the games were mainly a practice event for the athletes.

The athletes must compete again in the national competition at New Haven, Conn., in August, he said. After the national games, the athletes who qualify will represent the United States at the International Games scheduled for August 1980 in Holland.

The International Cerebral Palsy Society organized the first meet for the multihandicapped, known as the European Spastic Games, in 1972. The format of the games follows that of the Olympics.

To be eligible for the competition, athletes must be 12 or older, have cerebral palsy or other disabilities, and not compete in the National Wheelchair Games.

Black students helped by NAACP

By Lula Fragg
Student Writer

Members of the Carbonale Community High School Board are working in conjunction with the education committee of the local chapter of the NAACP to formulate plans for a permanent community advisory panel.

Reid Martin, superintendent of schools, said in a meeting with the education committee last week, that he hopes to get input from the group, which will voice individual and community concerns about ways of improving the schools and "student situations".

Margaret Nesbitt, member of the NAACP education committee, said the organization first expressed their concerns to the administration and offered their assistance in an advisory capacity when only one black student qualified for admission to the high school honor society this year.

"The high rate of absenteeism among black students and the lack of participation by blacks in extracurricular activities, excluding sports, in which blacks are well-represented, are also areas of concern," she said. "And since our interest is in all children, we are willing to assist in other areas."

Martha Farris, chairwoman of the committee, said, "Perhaps we could meet with the heads of the extracurricular activities in order to think of ways to motivate students to participate more effectively in these programs."

Other possible function of the group, such as setting up a community advocate to work with the administration in advising individual parents about student problems, forming "help sessions" for students needing academic assistance, planning parent-teacher workshops to discuss academic expectations and study habits and improving career counseling were also discussed at last week's meeting.

Martin said the administration will determine ways to establish the panel and define the functions of the group, tentatively referred to as Concerned Parents for Educational Improvement.

He said the interaction between the panel and the school board will be a "two-way street" because of the "need for sounding boards and the school board's desire to promote any group in the community to voice problems and concerns.

Friendship exchange program results in shared work, homes

By Jack Stillman
 Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — When the Georgians of Newcastle and the Georgians of Atlanta swapped homes in the inaugural exchange of the Friendship Force, they fell for each other like hamhocks and grits or fish and chips.

Since then, the two cities — one in a corner of northeastern England, the other in a corner of the Deep South — have made several exchanges, and fast friendships have sprung up.

That is what President Carter's Friendship Force set out to do when it began two years ago on the Fourth of July. That first comfortable exchange involved about 300 Americans exchanging homes, work, friends and adventures with about 300 Britons for 10 days.

The Rev. Wayne Smith, whose brainchild the project is, said he hopes to have 1 million persons involved next year in a greatly expanded program. So far, fewer than 20,000 persons have been involved in exchanges.

"Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter believe in this. They're supporting this program with their unofficial endorsement," Smith said.

Since Smith took over the program, there have been 30 exchanges, involving 16,430 "friendship ambassadors," from 14 foreign countries, 23 states and the District of Columbia.

"They do not go as tourists," Smith said. "We tell them that if they want to tour, they should take a tour. We are not interested in tourism. We are interested in people."

Under the program, an American family stays with a foreign one, then acts as host in this country.

Smith estimates that by the end of this year, more than 50,000 persons will have been hosts to foreign visitors all over the world as a result of the Friendship Force.

This has spawned some strange relationships. A woman from West Virginia visited with a prostitute in Germany, where prostitution is legal.

A chimney sweep in Great Britain took his American visitor with him to work. They swept chimneys.

A man from Costa Rica visited an Idaho farmer just when it was time to fertilize the fields. The visitor had paid his $300 fee just like other "ambassadors" and for his money spent four days spreading manure.

Birth defects rise in West Virginia

CHARLESTON (AP) — Intermarriage among blood relatives has caused West Virginia's incidence of rare illnesses and birth deformities to soar much higher than the national average, a geneticist says.

Dr. Stephen S. Amato, director of a genetic evaluation and counseling center at West Virginia University, said the frequency of birth defects in the state is about 3.4 percent of all live births, compared with a rate of about 2.5 percent in the nation as a whole.

"We see many cases of first cousins marrying; we even see a lot of families where the husband and wife share the same grandparents on both sides," he said.

Amato said he also sees a variety of incestuous relationships that contribute to such problems.

Inventor's work of 15 years goes up in smoke after theft

Before Rufus Stokes could show his invention to the world, it was stolen.

For 15 years the self-styled inventor worked on what he described as "an experimental prototype smoke eliminator" to be mounted in industrial smokestacks to reduce pollution.

Stokes, 57, a security guard, told police that his project cost $50,000 to create. It is powered by a 310-horsepower diesel engine, donated by General Motors Corp.. Stokes told police. It also incorporated four large fans and a big burner.

He said his invention was patented and that testing by independent firms showed that it reduced particulate matter 24 percent better than required by state Environmental Protection Agency requirements and 23.5 percent better than those set by the city.

While most inventors keep their inventions under lock and key, Stokes had his on a flat bed trailer in a vacant lot near a sheet metal company.

'Easy' show for guitarist

By Debbie Drees
Student Writer
Friday night, Illinois Avenue (the strip) was sprinkled with moving bodies wandering around looking for some type of action. People were in town to drink, eat, listen to rock or jazz music, or to find other people.

The scene inside the Eaz-N Coffee House on Illinois Avenue at Grand was different. A large candle-lit room held about 20 people who were relaxing on huge overstuffed pillows, talking quietly, sipping on soft drinks, coffee or tea and listening to folksinger and guitarist Kathi Sellers.

Sellers, a University of Illinois graduate in psychology, is a newcomer to Carbondale. She moved here from Champaign to work as an admissions officer in Woody Hall. In the evenings she works on her music, playing for herself or her friends.

Sellers plays a variety of songs by women artists such as Joni Mitchell, Janis Ian and Carly Simon. Friday she also played an old Hebrew song and one that was taught to her by a German composer friend.

With the night scene on Illinois Avenue as a backdrop against the windowed front of the coffee house, Sellers sang in a soft and flowing style to the small and intimate audience. The flickering candle light complemented the music.

Although Sellers has been playing guitar for 12 years and singing longer, she was always reluctant to perform. "I feel like a closet musician," she said. "I think there are quite a few of us."

Sellers said that she has used her music as an "emotional release" and played mostly for herself.

"There is a certain positive feeling I get from performing but only if it's a good performance," she said. "All the years I played alone, I just didn't want the pressure."

She said that she needs to relax before she can perform. Maybe that's why her performances have a relaxing and warm effect on her audience. That's the way it felt at Eaz-N Friday.

Ashford and Simpson shine for MRF's PBS performance

By Lula Fragg
Student Writer
Amidst the cool breezes rolling off the Mississippi River and the still darkness of the SIU-E campus, sounds of soul permeated the night. The combined efforts of Con-funk-sion, Raydio and Ashford and Simpson brought the "par-r-ty" spirit to the hillside site of the Mississippi River Festival Friday night.

Perhaps it is a hazard of being the lead-off band, but Con-funk-sion seemed to fake the funk until the audience cheered them on during "Chase Me," the hit from the band's latest album, "Candy."

Ray Parker of Raydio, in a most unusual audience participation number, "Rock On," danced before the cameras filming the concert for PBS stations across the country. This set the stage for the stars of the show: Ashford and Simpson.

On the rebound from the Kool Jazz Festival, Ashford and Simpson once again proved that "it's still there."

Nikolas Ashford and Valerie Simpson, rhythm and blues artists, are a husband-and-wife team, and this fact was evident throughout the night's performance. Opening the set with a new cut, "Still There," from their upcoming album, the audience immediately felt the energy flow between the two performers.

For those who were expecting to hear only love ballads, Ashford and Simpson threw some live "funk" their way. The newly released single, "Found A Cure," from their album to be released in August, is destined to be a hit.

Ashford said that they are "into some new ideas, new thoughts," as the two downshifted into a slow ballad, "Stay Free," also from the new album. He said the trends in modern male-female relationships.

The duo and a ten-piece backup band brought the audience to its feet with "Don't Cost Ya Nothing," the hit single from their second album, "Send It."

Ashford and Simpson exhibited their song-writing abilities by doing versions of hits that they have written for other artists including Chaka Khan, "I'm Every Woman," and last year's hit by Quincy Jones, "Stuff Like That."

A soft, sensuous love song, "Somebody Told a Lie," showcased the unique blend of vocals by Ashford and Simpson and became the highlight of the evening. As a spellbinding quiet fell over the crowd and emotion flowed from the stage, one young man in the audience stood up and shouted, "They're in love." That truly described the feeling when watching Ashford and Simpson.

Porter musical coming

SIU's Summer Playhouse will present the famous Cole Porter musical "Kiss Me Kate" on July 27, 28, 29, and August 2, 3, 4 and 5 at 8 p.m. in the University Theater.

"Kiss Me Kate" is about the entertainingly temperamental stage couple who are very much in love with each other between fights at a pre-New York play tryout. They are trying for a place in the production of Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew." Fred Graham and Lilli Vanessi met while performing in an old-fashioned schamitz waltz operetta, which, though their ways have since parted, they recall mockingly to each other in the song, "Wonderbar." To its carefree strains, they dance gaily around in the confines of her dressing room. They are jolted back to reality, though, by some exasperating trials encountered by the traveling Shakespearean company in which they have the leading roles.

Science to be simplified

NEW YORK (AP) — This fall, the publishers on the nation's top scientific journal will break a 131-year tradition by introducing a new magazine intended to "take the abracadabra out of science."

And the magazine — aimed at bringing science to the general reader — will not be alone for long.

Suddenly, such magazines are one of the hottest ideas in publishing. At least four other companies have mulled a science magazine for non-scientists in the last year. Two of them, including the powerful Time Inc., appear near publishing.

"We live in a time when science is affecting our lives more and more. In a year of Skylab, the DC-10 and Three Mile Island, that's self evident. If you look for where people can get information on that in a magazine, there aren't many places," says Allen Hammond, editor of the new magazine Science 80 which debuts in October.

Hammond and others sense a growing public appetite for science.

They cite the success of Smithsonian magazine, which rode a science-rich editorial mixture to a circulation of 1.8 million — comparable to that of Popular Science — in only nine years.

The weekly newsletter Science News has doubled its readership to 175,000 in the last five years. Time magazine's best-selling issue of 1977 featured anthropologist Richard Leakey on the cover.

Young gymnast Ardy Pierce of Columbus, Ind., gets coaching pointers from Olympic-bound Kurt Thomas during SIU's annual summer gymnastics camp. Saluki coach Bill Meade, director of the camp, looks on. (University News Service)

Thomas sparks Olympic hopes

By University News Service
Olympic hopeful Kurt Thomas is one of the best things that's ever happened to the sport of gymnastics in this country—just ask Kurt Thomas.

The youthful Indiana State University product says he and other world-class performers like Bart Connors are just setting the stage for a resurgence of American prominence in gymnastics that should last for a long time.

"The attention I've gotten has placed a lot of pressure on me, but it's good pressure. It gives me incentive and it gives incentive to these guys who are just getting started," said Thomas, pointing toward scores of high school gymnasts training in the Arena.

Thomas, who is one of several performers and coaches participating in an SIU gymnastics camp this summer, says the opportunity is finally here for young American gymnasts to develop into world-class performers.

"These kids are fortunate to have coaches and training opportunities like those in this camp that will enable them to start out learning the basics and progress much faster than I did," said Thomas.

"I got started just by horsing around in a gym, often learning the basics wrong and later having to undo and relearn much of what I had acquired."

Despite what he describes as a crude beginning in the sport, Thomas has come on to establish himself in international competition as one of America's first Olympic gymnastics gold medal hopefuls in years.

"I think Bart Connors, Larry Girard, Jim Hartung and I all have shots at Olympics medals at Moscow," said Thomas. "We'll be able to tell a lot from our performances next year at the World Championships in Dallas-Fort Worth. That's a meet none of the big guys miss."

That meet is the one Thomas is priming for with six-hour-a-day practices.

"There are about 10 international meets before the Olympics, but Dallas-Fort Worth is the big one. Nobody sits out the World Championships," he said.

According to Thomas, the Japanese and Russians are still the teams to beat in Dallas-Fort Worth or Moscow.

"Their big asset is they have about five years age-wise on our gymnasts, and that maturity and extra training makes a real difference. But we're definitely on the verge of being there right now," he said.

Thomas refused to rap about the amateur restrictions on American gymnasts—as so many U.S. athletes do.

"A lot of people talk about the problem of amateur athletes in this country. They say it is hard to train and carry a job, but we've got it a lot better than athletes in many countries, thanks largely to the support we get from the Olympics committee and others," he said.

Thomas said one of his reasons for wanting to do well at Moscow and in other international competition is the fact that the sport has been good to him.

Grid Salukis sign tight end recruit

By Mark Pabich

The list of football recruits continues to grow as head coach Rey Dempsey announced the signing of 6-4, 205-pound tight end Pierre Pugh from John F. Kennedy High School in Cleveland, Ohio.

The big tight end, who runs the 40-yard dash in 4.8 seconds, missed playing his senior year in high school along with hundreds of other Cleveland prep athletes. Because of the city's financial condition, Cleveland cut out athletic programs in most of the area's schools.

Dempsey however sees a great deal of potential, despite the fact that Pugh hasn't played in a year. "He had a very good junior season and was doing well his senior year before the program was cut," Dempsey said. "He's very quick and strong, we're really looking forward to having him."

Despite his big size, Dempsey feels that Pugh can add a considerable amount of weight and increase his strength to go along with his ability to catch the ball well.

In other football news, the Salukis are less than three weeks away from their opening practice Aug. 13th. Dempsey expects 115 candidates to open the practice.

Gymnasts face top foes

The women's gymnastics team will face a tough schedule this season highlighted by home meets with 1978 AIAW National Champion Cal State-Fullerton, runner-up Penn State and the second annual Collegiate Gymnastics Classic.

Coach Herb Vogel said that although the season is the "most demanding that has ever been assembled at SIU," the home meets in particular are designed to return national prominence to the Salukis. Last year, they finished with a disappointing 9-5 dual record and first-time losses in state and regional competition.

The season opener is Dec. 1 against Memphis State, newcomer to the SIU schedule. Other home engagements include fifth-ranked Southwest Missouri, 11th-ranked Nebraska, Missouri, Ohio State and Michigan State.

"Our home meets are all tough," Vogel said. "Practically everyone who will be coming to Carbondale beat us or placed higher nationally than we did last season."

A new feature this year will be several home meets held on Sundays, Vogel said the idea behind the Sunday meets is to provide a day families can spend together at SIU gymnastic events.

"The meets should also prove popular with our students by giving them the chance to see sports entertainment as a break from late weekend studies," Vogel added.

The Salukis will also spend a great deal of time on the road. In December, they face Louisville and Minnesota again before taking a western swing to such schools as Brigham Young, Arizona State and New Mexico during all of January.

None of the away opponents can be taken for granted, Vogel said, since many are pushing to make a name for themselves in women's gymnastics.

"They would like nothing better than to do it at the expense of those schools who have traditionally composed the old guard," he said.

The team closes out its regular season against rival Illinois at Champaign March 1. Post season action features the state meet in DeKalb, the AIAW National Championship in Baton Rouge, La., and the All-Americans All Collegiate Classic at SIU April 26.

Erickson on Midwest squad

Connie Erickson, a freshmen recruit on the Lady Saluki basketball team who lead her Niles North High School team to the Illinois State Championship last year, has overcome the first obstacle in making the U.S. National Junior Team. Erickson is one of 12 players chosen for the Midwest Regional squad, one of four sectional teams from which the final national team will be selected.

The national team will be chosen July 27 through August 1 at the National Olympic Festival in Colorado Springs, Col. Erickson, who just missed making the national squad last year, was excited about her second chance at gaining a spot. "The whole thing is very exciting to me," Erickson said. "Just the chance to go to Colorado and play with other athletes is quite an experience."

Erickson was originally chosen as the first alternate on the Midwest team, but after an injury prevented Laura Gardner of Bloomington, Ind. from competing, Erickson was named to the squad.

"I was really disappointed until I heard the news that I would be going to Colorado after all," Erickson said. "There were so many excellent players, I don't know how the coaches made their decision."

The standout point guard comes to SIU after averaging 11.8 points a game, 5.8 steals and 7.7 assists during her senior year in high school. Erickson was an All-Area Chicago selection.

Life in war-torn Nicaragua recalled

By Jenell Olson
Staff Writer

Even though Nicaragua's bloody civil war has ended, there are still open wounds ... which are bound to leave scars. Nonetheless, two Nicaraguan students at SIU who lived with the war for nearly a year were happy to see an end to the destruction and bloodshed as the 42-year Somoza dictatorship ended.

"Peace is finally coming!" said Eduardo Blanco in an interview at his home in Carbondale. "Peace is coming."

Eduardo and his brother, Mario Blanco, students of the Center for English as a Second Language, left their home in the war-torn city of Chinandega in March when their father decided to send them to SIU.

Speaking in broken English, Mario, 19, recalled the violence and the fear that characterized life in his homeland during the war.

"When I walked in the streets, I would see the policemen's car coming and think maybe they will kill me. I see them kill other people — all for no reason."

Mario added that neither he nor his brother nor any of the other Nicaraguan civilians would leave their homes after 6 p.m. because of the heavy fighting between National Guard troops and the Sandinista guerrillas.

It was especially dangerous for people between 14 and 26 years of age, said Mario. "Because Anastasio Somoza and the National Guard didn't like young people ... they thought they were all Sandinistas."

The Blancos' mother and nine brothers fled to Guatemala during the uprising in June. Their father has not seen his family since they left because he doesn't want to abandon his business in Managua.

Eduardo, 20, attended a university in Managua before the Nicaraguan government refused to continue funding the school, which eventually closed. When Pedro Joaquin Chamorro was killed (a reporter for the Nicaraguan newspaper, La Prensa, who was believed to be killed by Somoza's son), students became restless and wanted the National Guard to find out who was responsible. They supported the reporter and could not understand why he was killed. This student unrest prompted the government to close the school, Eduardo explained.

He added that he remembers incidents when the National Guard went into the university while he was attending classes and randomly shot and killed several of his classmates.

"There were no reasons or questions — they just started shooting," he said.

Despite the adverse conditions in their country, Eduardo and Mario hope to return to their home and family.

"If Father says stay, we'll stay. But if he says we can do what we want to do, we will return to Nicaragua when we are finished with CESL in October," Mario said.

years before coming to the United States eight years ago. She returned to her native homeland last March in order to help her family.

"It was hard to imagine how bad the city looked until I saw it for myself. The way Managua looks now is five times worse than it looked after the earthquake in 1972," Ms. Boehne said.

"While I was there, my family was taking Valium as if it were candy because they were so nervous and afraid. Many Nicaraguans have suffered nervous breakdowns or committed suicide," she added.

When the Sandinistas took over the village in which Ms.

Boehne's family lived, they fled to a friend's house where they lived with 80 other people.

"There was not enough food or any electricity in the house. Luckily, they had a swimming pool and were able to drink the water from it," Ms. Boehne said.

Many Nicaraguans have fled to neighboring Honduras where they live in crowded refugee camps, afraid to go home. Ms. Boehne said she visited such a camp about three weeks ago while she was in Honduras.

"It smelled bad, there wasn't enough food and 70 percent of the people were sick with malaria or typhus. Little naked boys and girls were begging for clothes because they weren't able to pack before leaving Nicaragua. It was depressing.

Ms. Boehne said her brother is currently in Honduras and the Nicaraguans are being taken advantage of there. Her brother is paying $300 a month for a room which cost only $20 shortly before he rented it.

Ms. Boehne said she expects positive changes to take place now that the junta is in power.

"The National Guard made more mistakes and are responsible for more damages than the Sandinistas. I only wish that the United States had moved in and forced Somoza to resign last September," she said.
