Former judge files motion

Dismissal sought in group home case

Diana Penner
Staff Writer

The defendant in a civil suit concerning property he had planned to use for a home for mentally retarded adults filed a motion Wednesday in Jackson County Circuit Court to dismiss the case.

The motion was filed by Peyton Kuncie, a retired Jackson County Circuit Court judge who is being sued by Floyd and Mary Hart of Murphysboro.

Robert Schulhof, Hart's attorney, said the original suit was filed to clear the title of an alleged option on the disputed property so that Hart can sell the house.

Kuncie, who is the president of the Egyptian Association for the Mentally Retarded, said the motion to dismiss was filed on the grounds of an "equitable maxim" of law, which says plaintiffs do not have a right to relief by a court if their "hands are not clean."

Kuncie maintains Hart employed unethical and possibly illegal methods to bar him from purchasing the house.

Kuncie said he had given the owner of the house at the time, former SIU-C journalism instructor Ralph Johnson, a check for $1,000 as an option to purchase the house, located on 15th Street in Murphysboro.

"Hart bought the house from under us," Kuncie said.

However, Hart simply offered Johnson more for the house, an often-practiced procedure in business transactions, Schulhof said.

"Hart offered more than Kuncie did. It's that plain and simple," Schulhof said.

Schulhof said Kuncie did not actually have an option on the house because Johnson did not accept the check and returned it without cashing it.

Hart has not been able to sell the house because of Kuncie's claim of the option, Schulhof said.

Kuncie said the Egyptian Association for the Mentally Retarded planned to buy the house and set up a home for about eight mentally retarded adults who can function well in society. He said Hart purchased the house to block this plan.

Hart had purchased the house in 1952, said it in 1965 and purchased a home adjacent to it. In 1974, Johnson purchased the house, now referred to as the "Old Hart Home."

In the motion to dismiss, Kuncie says Hart "menacingly indicated that he would in 'one way or another' prevent the acquisition, establishment and operation of the group home 'to protect the value of my property and the safety and welfare of my wife and family from being physically attacked and molested by the people occupying the group home.'"

However, Kuncie said the people who would live in the home are not dangerous.

Motion to dismiss sex prejudice suit may be submitted

By Jacqui Koszczuk
Staff Writer

University officials will probably submit a motion to dismiss the sex discrimination suit brought against SIU-C and 11 other state universities by two women's athletics coaches at Northern Illinois University, Richard Grunz, legal counsel for the Board of Trustees, said Wednesday.

Grunz said the University received a court summons March 13 and has 30 days to file a response.

The coaches filed their charges against the universities as a class action, intended to represent all the women's athletics coaches and directors in the state.

Grunz said University officials have not had sufficient time to decide the exact nature of their response, but he said a request to have the suit dismissed on grounds that it was filed improperly is probably forthcoming.

Grunz contends that the coaches' attorney erred by naming SIU-C as a defendant rather than the SIU Board of Trustees. Since the board is "the only legal entity the state ever created" for the University, it is the only one capable of being sued, he said.

Grunz said the attorney, Edward Dierich of DeKalb, probably "just didn't know any better" when he filed the suit.

The suit charges the universities with discriminating against women's athletics personnel in the areas of salaries, working conditions, facilities, tenure contracts, health insurance and fringe benefits.

The two coaches, Roberta Farrick and Deborah Brue, contend in the suit that NIU's discrimination against them is "typical" of the kind that exists at all Illinois universities.

Grunz said the University will probably also argue that the suit should be dismissed because it does not qualify as a class action.

He said class actions by federal law can only be used when the plaintiffs "are so numerous that they can't conveniently be joined" as separate parties to the complaint.

The suit claims to represent "approximately 83" women. Grunz said, "It's a finite number, and we know who those people are, so let them represent themselves. Let them have the option of selecting their own lawyer if they wish to."

In addition, Grunz said that a coach or director who feels the suit does not apply to her must petition out of the suit, causing an unnecessary inconvenience.

Grunz said a date for a hearing will be set after the universities and the Illinois Board of Higher Education, which was also named in the suit, have responded.

The NIU coaches are seeking $250,000 in damages from each school, to be pooled and then distributed to the women's athletics directors and coaches.

The suit asks that the schools be ordered to comply with Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 and Title VI and VII of the Civil Rights Act.

Women's Athletics Director Charlotte West said SIU-C women's athletics coaches would probably choose to be part of the class action.

Undergraduate Student Organization Election Commissioner Tim Adams checks returns from a referendum held Wednesday on proposed working papers for the USO as Lula Fragg, a junior in journalism, looks on. One thousand votes were needed to validate the election. However, only 364 students cast ballots in the one-day election.

USO referendum turnout too low; constitution goes to senate for vote

By Charity Gould
Staff Writer

About the only lines at the Student Center Wednesday were those made by students and staff waiting to cash checks, buy food or check the magazine rack.

However, there were no lines of students waiting to cast their yeas or nays on the proposed new working paper for the Undergraduate Student Organization that was put on a referendum before the student body Wednesday.

Only 364 students voted at the six polling places set up by the USO for the balloting.

"This is something we have with every election," Student President Peter Alexander said of the low turnout.

The new constitution, which will now be brought to the student senate for approval, got 249 affirmative votes, and 115 students voted against approving the document.

The working paper required at least 660 yes votes for approval.

The structure of the USO was, not on the minds of some who voted on the constitution.

"I'd like to see a constitution: freezing student fees for a short length of time," said Mike Bauman, junior in forestry, who voted no for the constitution.

Another no vote was cast by Student Trustee Bob Saal.

"In any organization it is more important that you have people with the right attitudes than it is to change the structure every time it appears to be failing," he said.

Poll watchers Brian Wieberg and Leah Sughrue blamed the turnout on a lack of publicity.

Wieberg, a member of the student senate, said, "I think it's because the referendum wasn't made public properly. There wasn't enough time for it to be made an issue."

Sughrue, also a student senator, said, "A lot of people didn't know what it was all about. Students asked what the differences were between this constitution and the old constitution," she said.

Christ Cordogan, a former east side senator, said the referendum did not follow the rules set by the USO constitution.

"Poll watchers were supposed to put a mark on a person's fee statement so they would not vote twice. I went to Morris Library this morning and voted, but my fee statement was not marked."

Alexander acknowledged that many of the poll watchers neglected to check fee statements.

This is one of the new "frozen-price" sections. Stores in 24 chains nationwide are putting at Carbondale's National Super Market, price ceilings on basic grocery items.

Food stamps ease money woes

By Andrew Zinner
Staff Writer

The rent is overdue, the phone's been disconnected, and you're getting tired of eating peanut butter and drinking water. What's worse, you have nowhere to turn for extra cash. Your student work job is barely keeping your house heated and your water warm.

Where's your next meal going to come from?

If you can "stomach" questions about your financial affairs, and the resulting paperwork, then the answer is food stamps, obtained through the Department of Public Aid in Jackson County.

According to Dan Pittman, public information officer for the DPA, there are several requirements students must meet before being declared eligible for food stamps.

First, the student must be enrolled in school, carrying at least a half-time class load.

Second, if the student is unemployed, he must apply for work registration, and, if physically able to accept a bona fide job, must accept the job provided for by the state employment department.

The student's income will then be reassessed to determine eligibility. But Pittman added that accepting a job doesn't necessarily disqualify the student from the program.

Finally, the student must prove financial independence by showing that he is not claimed as a dependent by his parents on their income tax form.

He explained that this clause assumes parental responsibility for their children, adding that, in the past, there was a problem with the program.

"Food stamps were very accessible to students. They were getting stamps, not working, and their parents could afford to support them. This provision tightened up the requirements."

For a student in a one-person household to collect the stamps, he must earn a maximum net income of $306 per month. If the maximum amount is earned, Pittman said, the student would be eligible for $10 worth of food stamps per month.

Food chains apply limited price freeze

Patrons of National Super Market and grocery stores that carry Scott Lad products are benefiting from a federal request for temporary grocery price ceilings on the basic marketbasket of goods.

President Carter's special assistant for consumer affairs, Esther Peterson, requested voluntary price ceilings, ranging from one to six months, from 50 of the nation's largest food chains.

The request was made about three weeks ago and since that time, 24 chains have agreed to comply, said Midge Shubow, the office's director of consumer information.

"Some chains that weren't contacted are now participating, in competition with the ones that have been participating," Shubow said. "We don't have a tally of any but the original 24 participants, but every day, we're informed of more chains complying with the request."

National Super Market, at 915 W. Main, is the only local grocery chain member participating in the price ceiling, which affects their generic and private labels until May, Associate Manager Ken Kueper said.

"The president of our corporation said that we won't accept any price increases from our wholesalers and that we will hold prices as long as possible on other selected food items such as milk, produce and frozen food," Kueper said.

The Scott Lad company, the wholesaler that provides private label products for 700 grocery stores in 11 states, is participating in the price ceiling for 30 days, said Edward Dink, Scott Lad's vice president of merchandising.

"Our ceiling is due to end around April 17, but we may extend that time period. It depends on the cost increases we receive from our manufacturers," Dink said.

"We're experiencing modest losses, but are participating in the ceiling as a service to our customers, and in the hope that other chains will be encouraged to do so also."

Some Carbondale grocery stores who use Scott Lad as their private label include Arnold's Market, Charlie's Market, L&L Market, Jim and Ruth's Market and Spire's Grocery. Murphysboro grocers who use Scott Lad include McCann Market, Modlin Self Serv Grocery and Pautler's Red and White Store.

Shubow said that her office is pleased with the response, and that the ceiling request was an effort to see if a voluntary cost-control program would work, so price freezes would not be necessary.

"It was initiated, basically, to see what the food industry could do to keep the nutritionally balanced basic marketbasket of food as low as possible in price."

"There's not much our office can do about mortgage rates or gasoline prices, but we can do something about food prices," she said.

'Godfather' parts I, II to be shown in Center

"The Godfather" and "The Godfather Part II," considered by some film critics to be two of the American cinema's finest moments, will be shown this weekend as a special presentation of the Student Programming Council Films Committee.

"The Godfather," the original adaptation of Mario Puzo's best-selling novel, will be shown at 6 and 9 p.m. Thursday and Friday. The sequel will be screened at 6 and 9:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. All films will be presented in the Student Center Auditorium. Admission is $1.

Francis Ford Coppola directed both installments of the epic film depictions of the American underworld. The films were selected as the best of their respective years, the original in 1972 and the sequel in 1974, by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Coppola received the Academy's best director award for "Part II."

Marlon Brando's performance as the aging Mafia patriarch, Don Vito Corleone, won him the best actor Oscar for "The Godfather." Al Pacino and Robert Duvall received nominations for best supporting actors. James Caan was also featured in the original.

Pacino was also nominated for best actor for his performance in "The Godfather Part II." Robert DeNiro was selected as best supporting actor in the sequel.

Robert Duvall and Al Pacino star in "The Puzo best-selling novel. The film won the Godfather Part II," the critically-acclaimed best director Oscar for Francis Ford Coppola sequel to 1972's film adaptation of the Mario along with a best picture award.

TV and gardening not as good as 'Being There'

By Edward R. Berry
Student Writer

Who knows what it takes to be a major candidate for president today? Do George Bush, Teddy Kennedy or Ronald Reagan? Nobody knows about them, but Chauncey Gardiner has his own method. All you have to do is watch plenty of television, learn how to mimic people and create off-the-wall analogies which leave listeners to draw their own conclusions about what you've just said.

Now you're probably asking the question: "Who the hell is Chauncey Gardiner?" Why, he is Peter Sellers of course. At least that's the part Sellers plays in director Hal Ashby's new film "Being There."

The whole story behind "Being There" concerns a gardener named Chance (Sellers) who has never been beyond the walls of his own domain. Chance's only skill is gardening. Other than that he is completely ignorant, except for the fact that he likes to watch TV and mimic the characters he sees on the screen. This is Chance's only touch with reality.

Could you imagine a person who reacts to every one of life's little tragedies as one of your favorite soap opera characters would? Or how about learning to cope with the frustrations of love-making while also learning how to correctly button a sweater with Mr. Rogers (my, wouldn't old Mr. McFeeley be surprised to see that one?)

Now, what if such a character was released into the real world with his only weapon being a remote control TV channel changer? Could he switch off any evil-doers to find another channel of life that is not quite so unpleasant? Chance seems to try while wandering through the streets of Washington, D.C. like a crazed TV repairman in search of his shop.

Chance is saved, though, when he is involved in an auto accident and taken into the home of Benjamin Rand (Melvyn Douglas), the chief advisor for the Financial Institute of America. Lowly, ignorant Chance gains the love of his hosts.

They, especially Rand's wife (Shirley MacLaine), interpret his mental ineptitude as highly profound though! He's a marvelous human being to them and Chance becomes Chauncey Gardener, respected thinker and possible presidential candidate.

As the story builds, the audience can't help but love "Being There." Ashby has created a funny, effective statement on the assumptions people can draw about others from a first impression. Chance-Chauncey is an ignorant fool, but nobody notices that from an initial handshake or casual hello. Sellers' great ability at dead-pan comedy adds depth to his characterization.

The greatest accomplishment of this fine film is not Ashby's swift direction, which keeps the plot moving along fluently, or the fact that it is a very funny comedy. The real reward is simply that the viewer observes someone learning what real love or emotion is for the first time. Chance is shown what it is like to have the admiration and love of good friends for just "being there."

The film leaves the audience with a good feeling. Everybody loves a simple person, especially if that person can make you feel good in return for your friendship.

WSIU fund-raising campaign nets $35,000 in two weeks

By Ken Mac Garrigue
Staff Writer

Inflation is up and the economy is down, but "The Friends of WSIU" still managed to run the most successful fund raising drive in its history.

This year's grand total was $35,000—a 38 percent increase over last spring's "Festival '79," said Kenneth J. Garry, director of development and ascertainment for WSIU (FM), WSIU-TV and WUSI-TV. The total includes corporate and in-kind donations.

Between March 1 and 16, 1,433 individuals pledged $32,501 with an average pledge of $22.68. Of the total pledgers, 927 (or 65 percent) were new, non-renewable "Friends..." members.

The "Friends of WSIU" was originally chartered in 1971 as a philanthropic and community outreach organization to get people to watch, talk about and invest time and money in the public broadcasting stations in Southern Illinois.

Garry said the increase is nice but added that it wouldn't be that large a part of the operating budget itself. Instead, he stressed the community involvement he feels these telethons bring to public stations.

"Rather than hanging everything on dollar signs, what the 'Friends' are really there for—sure, to bring in a few bucks—but they're there mainly to provide some sort of organization, a feeling of community for the people who happen to watch and say, 'Gee, they don't have commercials on the station. I like it. I can support it. I can write them a letter. Fine, they can put that in their public file' and that's nice, but if we join that's a measurable demonstration of our support," Garry explained.

London plan to put Chaplin statue next to Shakespeare's criticized

LONDON (AP) — Charlie Chaplin may have been born and raised here, but some Londoners oppose a city plan to put up a life-size statue of the Little Tramp in the motion picture center of Leicester Square.

The situation comes to a head Thursday when the Westminster district planning committee decides the statue's fate.

"Chaplin was a communist who never did a thing for this country or for America," said Irene Wolfe, leader of a petition drive that has collected 47 signatures.

Nicholas Thompson, Chaplin's chief opponent or the planning committee, claims the actor "doesn't deserve" such a prominent site, even though he was knighted in 1975.

Thompson is annoyed that the likeness of the baggy-panted, cane-twirling Little Tramp would be within gazing distance of a statue of another famous Briton — William Shakespeare. "It is objectionable to have Charlie Chaplin next door to Shakespeare," Thompson said Wednesday. "Leicester Square should be reserved only for great men, and Chaplin was not a great man."

A year ago, the Charlie Chaplin Statue Committee commissioned British sculptor John Doubleday to do the statue. The $18,700 price of the statue was raised by a public appeal for small contributions "from ordinary people."

Chaplin, son of a music hall finger, was born in 1889 in London's rundown Southwark district near the River Thames. His father died three years later, leaving the family almost penniless.

Chaplin made his acting debut at five, and within two years was helping put food on the family table by strutting across British stages.

He left Britain to seek his fortune in America in 1910 and never returned to live here because of his bitter childhood. He became a millionaire several times over.

University at Carbondale

Dear SIUC Student:

April 1, 1980, is an important day for all residents of Carbondale, including students. On April 1, the 1980 census will be taken. Sometimes there is confusion about where students should be counted. If a person is attending college, he or she is to respond to the census as living where he or she stays during the school year, not "back home" at his or her parents' house. This is very important to the city and to students.

Many federal and state funds are distributed based on population. If students were not included in Carbondale's population, the city's population would have been cut by approximately one-half in 1970. This would have cut down on the availability of funds to the city to provide many basic services to its residents, including our student residents.

It is important that students who live inside the city limits on April 1, 1980, answer the census questionnaire to show their residence as in Carbondale. (By the way, all on-campus housing is in the city limits.) Also, remember that the census questionnaire asks about everyone living in the dwelling. If you are sharing an apartment or house, make certain that everyone who lives with you answers the census questionnaire with you. If they don't, we will get an incomplete count.

The census form takes relatively little time for an average household to complete—some 15 minutes for those getting the short version, with 19 questions, and about 45 minutes for those receiving the long version, which has 65 questions. Only about one in six households, selected at random, will get the long form in 1980. Each person's answers to the 1980 census are confidential by Federal law.

If April 1, 1980, passes and you have not been contacted by mail or in person by the U.S. Census Bureau, please call Cleveland Matthews at City Hall, 549-5302, so he can put the Census Bureau in touch with you.

Cordially,

Students learn to appraise houses

By Chuck Hempstead
Staff Writer

George Karvel, associate professor in accounting, initiated a laboratory experience this semester to allow his students to "do exactly what they would be doing as professional appraisers."

"Real estate appraisal is more than just hearing about how it is done," said Karvel, who requires his Finance 378 students to participate in a cooperative project with Havens Realty evaluating the market value of local residences.

The class, divided into groups, was paired with salespersons from Havens and actually entered homes to measure floor space, determine the condition and evaluating the design of the house to ascertain the market value.

One of the cooperating salespersons, Jean Pratt, said, "All we did was open the house for the students and provide them with the lot size. They measured the rooms and made their own evaluations."

Pam Mueller, a junior in finance and economics, is a participant in the venture. "The program is excellent," she said. "The class offers book knowledge plus practical experience. When I graduate, I plan to work as an appraiser and this gives us an opportunity to operate in the real world."

"In the house we appraised," Mueller said, "we spent two and a half hours measuring everything from closet space to the number of electrical outlets. We took field trips to City Hall and the county clerk's office to get other information on the house."

To appraise the market value of a home, the students must also evaluate the community, Karvel said. Proximity to schools, shopping centers, recreation areas, industry and churches are relevant to a home's value.

When the students complete their evaluation, they appraise the house in relation to its replacement construction cost, the selling price of comparable homes and worth as a real estate investment, Karvel said. The students then present their findings to a panel composed of Karvel, Larry Havens, and Michael Wright, a local appraiser. The results are distributed to the cooperating salespersons and homeowners for their use.

Parents, teachers work together to stimulate 'above average' pupils

By Connie McWilliams
Student Writer

The Carbondale Association for Talented Education is helping local school children become critical and divergent thinkers, says CATE President Robert Klemm.

CATE is a local non-profit group of 55 parents who design "creative thinking" problems for children who score above average on basic skills tests given in the grade schools, said Jan Beckenbach, a CATE member.

Beckenbach said, "In addition to regular school classes, the children in the program attend a class in which they are motivated by their parents and teachers to think of a problem, define the problem and go through the steps in solving the problem."

CATE was organized in 1978 by Klemm and 19 other Carbondale residents. "We formed a steering committee after attending a workshop in Mount Vernon about these programs."

Society president to talk at seminar about biofeedback

A seminar about biofeedback at 3 p.m. Monday in Morris Library Auditorium will feature John Basmajian, president of the Biofeedback Society of America.

Biofeedback is defined in the dictionary as the technique of seeking to control emotions by using electronic devices to train a person to modify involuntary body functions, such as the heartbeat.

Basmajian, who is from Canada, was the first president of the International Society of Electrophysiological Kinesiology. He was responsible for the founding of ISEK, an international scientific society begun in the mid-1960s.

Herbert W. Ladd, current president of ISEK, has said of Basmajian that "it was partly through his research, teaching and unrelenting determination that both the orientation and the attitude toward anatomy was changed from a discipline of the dead to a discipline of the living."

Basmajian has been recognized for his contributions to the fields of anatomy and physical medicine.

The seminar is sponsored by the Medical Student Association, the School of Medicine, the Rehabilitation Institute and the Graduate Student Council.

Klemm said. "I drew up the initial constitution to set up requirements for election and to restate board policies in a formal manner."

CATE is financed by the federal government's Title VII program. Klemm said the program received about $325,000 for fiscal year 1980, but added that the amount of money received varies from year to year. The funding pays for teachers' salaries and supplies, he said.

However, Klemm also said that the Title VII Advisory Council will recommend that funding be provided for a three-year period rather than the current one-year term. He said that this would foster long-term planning.

Programs for the 200 children currently in the program are designed "by teachers in coordination with the program director, Ralph Litherland," Klemm said.

Marilyn Hughs, 7th- and 8th-grade teacher at Lincoln Junior High School, said, "We focus (the program) on critical thinking and research methodology to try to help students define a topic of interest."

For example, one student wanted to find out the attitudes of other students about the fire at Brush Elementary School three years ago.

"With the help of primary and secondary sources the student developed a questionnaire and gave it to 300 students and compiled the results himself," Hughs said.

There are only four other similar programs in the state and they are of varying stages of development, Klemm said.

Elementary School District 95 is one of the top 21 programs in the country as recognized by federal guidelines. Klemm said the reason is that the program "is one with continuity that helps provide community services through parental involvement."

CBS moves up in race for ratings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS moved closer to taking over first place in TV network ratings for the season with a hefty victory over from running ABC last week.

CBS took the week ending March 23 with a rating of 19.6, and won Monday, Thursday and Friday nights, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. ABC had a rating of 18.1 and took Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday nights.

The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 18.1 percent of the homes in the country with television were tuned to ABC.

NBC finished in third place with 17.9, but its shift of "DIPPs" from Saturday to Sunday helped it wrest Sunday away from CBS.

ABC holds a narrow lead in the ratings for the overall season with 19.6, compared to CBS, which has 19.5. NBC is a distant third for the year with 17.8.

CBS' Friday night combination of "Dallas" and "Dukes of Hazzard" continued strong and took the first two places in that order. The network's "60 Minutes" was third.

NBC's "Real People" was fourth, and fifth place went to NBC's repeat performance of "Smokey and the Bandit," which helped the network take Sunday night.

CBS' premiere of "Palmerstown, U.S.A." placed 17th in the ratings.

"United States," NBC's critically acclaimed new comedy, placed 64th in the ratings, "which has already been canceled, was dead last in 69th place.

The week's Top 10 programs: "Dallas," "Dukes of Hazzard," "60 Minutes," "Real People," "Smokey and the Bandit," "M-A-S-H," "That's Incredible," "Different Strokes," "Three's Company" and "Chips."

Geographical Limits:

Carbondale.

There are many precautions than an individual can employ to prevent assault. The following are suggestions you may wish to initiate as a means to a safer personal environment.

In and About Your Home

- 1) When you move into a new place, change all outside door locks to prevent former tenants from entering with old keys. Dead bolt locks that cannot be jimmied should be installed.
- 2) Install a chain lock secured by long screws or a peephole to allow you to check identification before admitting people. Locks are not impenetrable, but breaking them takes time and makes lots of noise, probably enough to discourage would-be intruders, or at least to allow you to get to the phone.
- 3) If you have double doors, be sure to lock both of them. Otherwise, when you open the inside door in response to a caller, you have removed your only barrier.
- 4) Install a lock on any window that can be reached from the ground. There are also devices that limit how far windows can be opened. Place a broomstick or pole in the tracks of sliding doors so that they cannot be opened.
- 5) Have brightly lighted entrances and hallways, and beware of places where attackers might hide, such as between buildings or parked cars, and under stairways.
- 6) Do not list your full name on the door or mailbox. Use only your first initial and last name. If you live alone, you may want to list nonexistent housemates too.
- 7) Keep shades and curtains drawn at night, as a potential assailant is more likely to enter when you seem to be alone.
- 8) Never let a stranger into your home. If someone comes to your door because of an apparent emergency, offer to make the necessary call while he waits outside. If you are expecting service persons, ask for identification before admitting them. If you are suspicious, have the person wait behind your locked door while you call the company involved, or the police.
- 9) When alone and answering the door, consider yelling, "I'll get it" to an imaginary companion. If you actually do have a companion, don't be overly secure. There is not much a spouse or anyone can do if the person you opened the door to has a weapon.
- 10) When returning home, have your key ready before you get to the door. If something seems amiss at your home, don't go in. Go somewhere else (neighbors, phone booth) and call the police.

On the Streets

- 1) Act very confident and purposeful.
- 2) Wear clothing that allows you to move fast if you need to. Spike heels, platform shoes, clogs, and some sandals can make running almost impossible.
- 3) You may want to wear a whistle around your wrist or carry some loud noisemaker to make a commotion if a problem arises, but have it handy (not in your purse).
- 4) Don't stop to "window shop," especially at night. Look deliberate about your travel, as if you are expected some place immediately.

- 5) Avoid using public restrooms alone or at night.

6) Plan your route, taking the most well-lighted, populated path possible. Be aware of spots along the way that you could run to in need. When on campus use the Bright Way Path.

7) Avoid dark parking lots, empty parks, and other areas in your neighborhood where assailants might likely hide. Especially avoid walking along bushes, alley entrances, garages, and places that you could be pulled or pushed into.

8) Be alert, listen and watch for people. Look around and behind you when you have suspicions so that you can anticipate problems.

9) If a motorist asks for directions, stay away from the car as you answer, and move away promptly thereafter.

10) If you are followed by a car, turn the wrong way up a one-way street (if possible) or just turn around in your tracks (a car can't) and go for help. Don't lead the follower to your own home.

11) If you are followed by someone on foot, try to head off an encounter before contact occurs. Either run (but only if you can make it to a lighted or busy place) or employ a defense technique before you are restricted by the follower.

In Your Car

- 1) Before you enter the car, always check to see that no one is inside.
- 2) Lock all car doors when you get out to insure that it will remain empty. Do not keep spare keys hidden anywhere. Give them to a trusted friend.
- 3) Don't park your car in unlighted or deserted areas. Have your keys ready as you return.
- 4) Keep your car in good repair and full of gas so that you will not be made vulnerable by a breakdown.
- 5) Don't leave house, trunk, or other keys with car keys when having your car serviced.
- 6) If your car does break down, open the hood, get back in the car, and lock the doors. Do not get out or roll down windows if someone stops. Ask them to make a call for you and give them a slip of paper with the necessary information on it through a small opening. If you go to a nearby residence, you may have to contend with dogs and the people inside, who may not be trustworthy or who may not trust you.
- 7) If you pass a disabled car and wish to help, don't get out of your car. Drive to the nearest phone and call the police or sheriff's department. They can offer more assistance than you can, and without the risks.
- 8) Avoid deserted routes. Take a well-traveled route to your destination, which, hopefully, is well policed. Be aware of places to go if a problem arises and help is needed.
- 9) Never pick up strangers.
- 10) If you are followed, note the car and driver descriptions and drive to a police station, all-night gas station, or other lighted, busy area. Do not lead the followers to your home, and don't speed up; that will only increase the dangers. Other possibilities include blasting your horn continually until you get aid or driving without lights at night in hopes that the police will stop you.

11) If a car follows you into your driveway, stay in the car with the doors locked and the windows up. Sound your horn repeatedly and await help.

When Hitchhiking

Hitchhiking should be considered the most dangerous situation in which a woman can place herself. When you get into the car of a stranger, you have removed all barriers between you and the driver. You cannot now avoid a confrontation if one is initiated and you cannot easily leave the vehicle. You have narrowed your methods of protecting yourself to direct encounter tactics (verbal and physical) - or none at all. Generally speaking, this is not good enough. Nonetheless, no one is naive enough to believe that knowing the vulnerability of a hitchhiker will wipe out this mode of travel. For women who insist that they must or will hitch, the best they can do is attempt to control the conditions of the rides they accept.

1) The first rule on hitchhiking is—don't! But if you do...

2) Whenever possible, avoid hitchhiking by yourself or at night.

3) Take well-traveled routes. If you accept a ride keep your window open, so that in case of attack you can be heard if you yell. A good whistle or other noisemaker might also be carried.

4) Try to accept rides only with female drivers. If you must ride with a male, never accept a ride with more than one or with a driver who made a big fuss about stopping (U-turn, slammed on brakes).

5) Before you get into a car, check the back seat to see if anyone is there, and look for any beer or liquor bottles in the car. Check the driver as well. Be sure he is fully dressed, and try to assess his intentions. Trust your evaluation, don't ride if you are suspicious.

6) Ask the driver where he is going before he asks you. Then you need not reveal your destination, and he cannot say he is going where you are, even if he isn't. If you distrust the situation, you can always say that you aren't going that way—thanks anyway.

7) Be certain there is a working door handle on the inside of the door where you would be riding. Don't get into the back seat of a two-door car.

8) Don't take a ride that will drop you off in a deserted area. Turn it down and wait for one that goes to a more convenient area so you won't be stranded and forced to take the first ride that comes along.

9) If possible, know the route to your destination so that if the driver makes a wrong turn you will know it immediately.

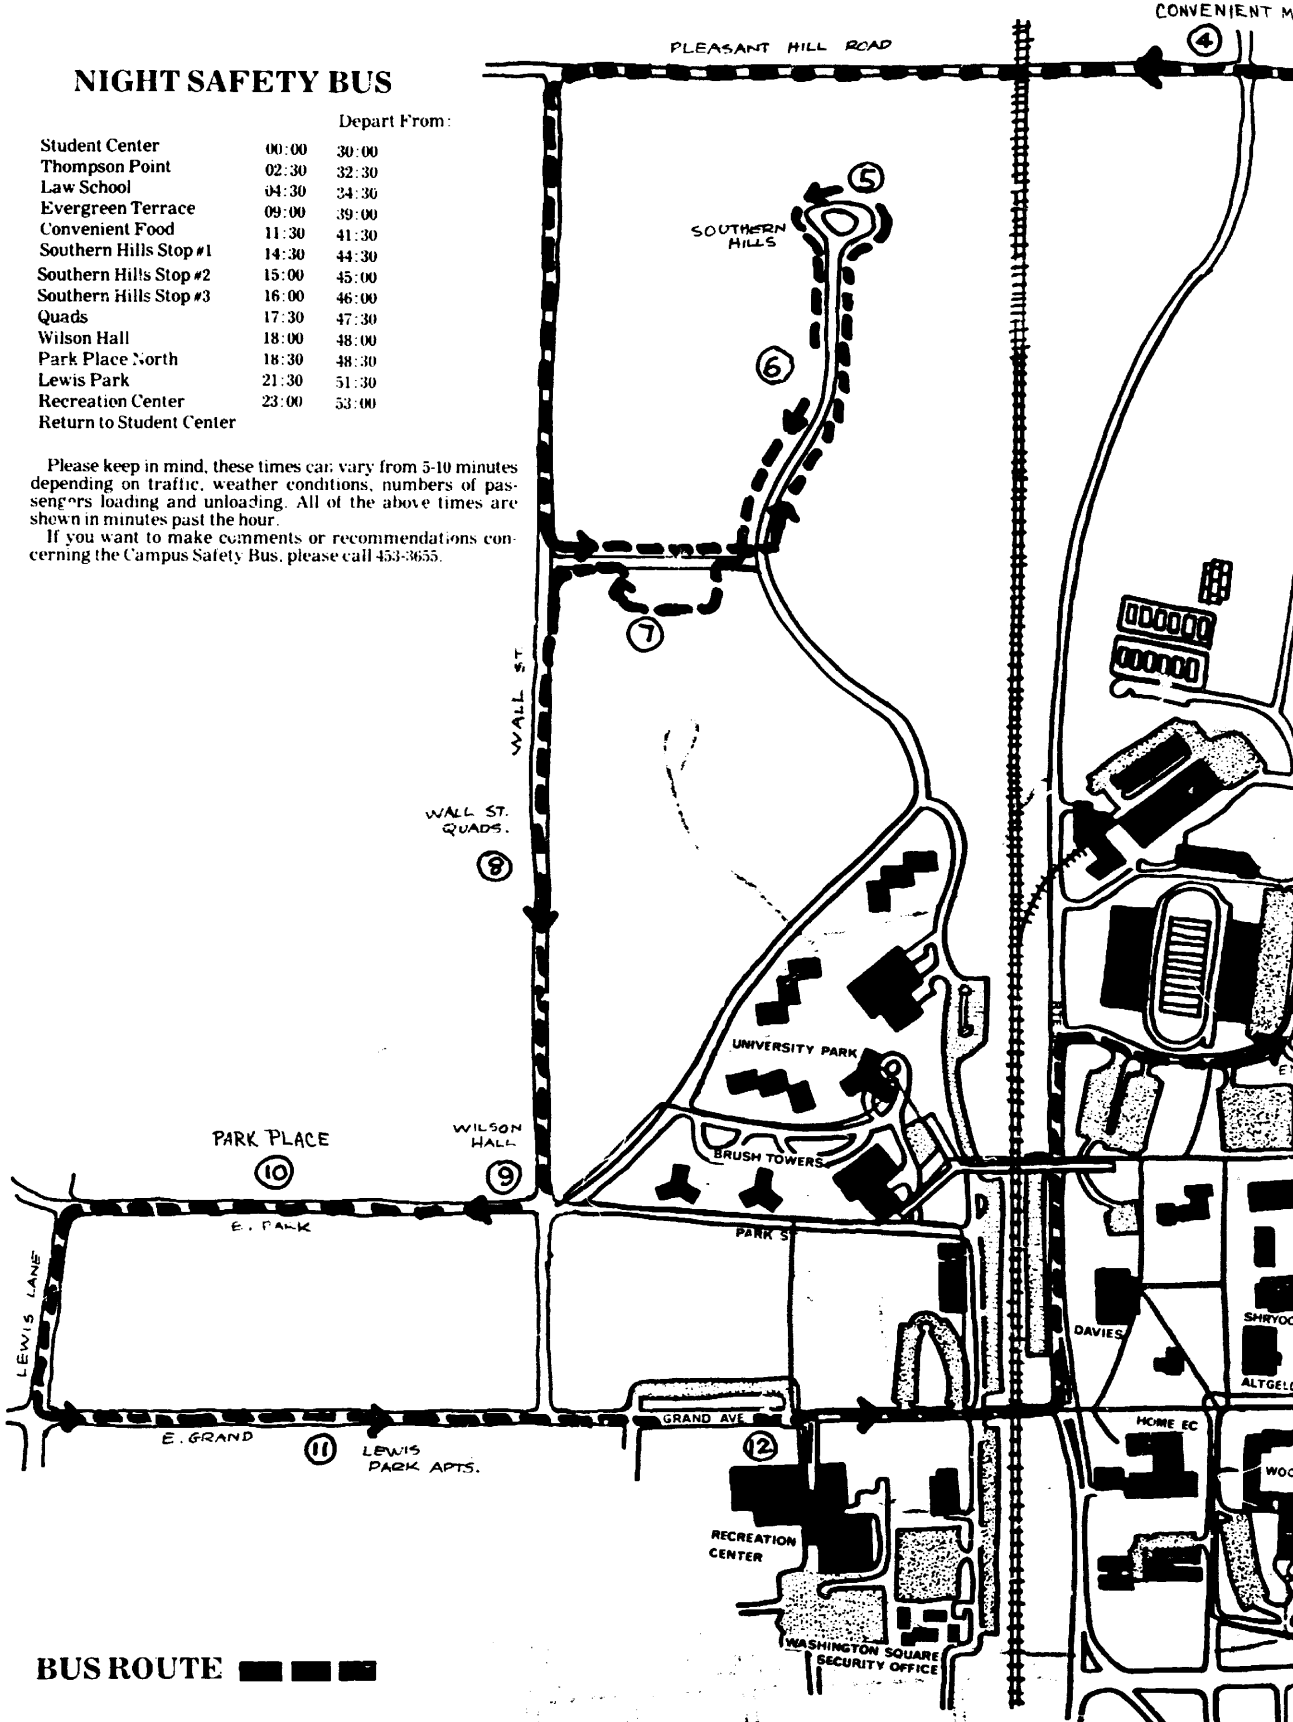

10) If you ever must jump out of a moving car, be sure that no other cars are coming that might run over you. Protect your head and keep your body curved so that you will roll, rather than scrape, over the ground. Keep your arms in close to your body to decrease the chances of injury.

Dean of Library Affairs selected to chair inter-library loan group

By Lynn Diak
Student Writer

Kenneth Peterson, dean of Library Affairs, has been chosen as chairman of the Inter-Library Loan Committee, one of seven committees of the Association of Research Libraries.

The ARL is a national organization of directors from 110 libraries throughout the United States. The ARL board of directors chooses the chairmen of its committees.

Peterson said the purpose of the committee is to formulate policies and procedures related to inter-library borrowing and lending.

"Borrowing and lending is a big activity between libraries," Peterson said. "It will be even more important in the 1980s because the prices of materials are going up about 15 percent a year and very few library budgets are increasing by that much."

Phone service gives information about university

By Connie McWilliams
Student Writer

Students who have questions concerning University procedures and policies now need only to pick up their phones and call Action Line to get the answer.

Action Line, which began operating recently, will operate from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and until 7 p.m. on Wednesday. The phone number is 538-2066.

"The purpose of the system is to eliminate for students the hassle of going through University red tape when trying to get information," said Sue Crusoe, Undergraduate Student Organization public relations commissioner.

Nancy Owens, a junior in accounting, said students often miss class withdrawal deadlines and fail to withdraw from school properly because they are sent to many different offices and receive inconsistent information from the workers at each office.

Crusoe said students still may not know how to do something, but will often give up. "This system will reduce the amount of misinformation passed to the students," she said.

Information on all University procedures and regulations was compiled by the USO earlier this semester. The information was then put into a directory. When students call Action Line, the USO secretary answering the phone uses the directory to give appropriate information to answer the caller's question. USO president, Pete Alexander said that he proposed the phone system because of the "obvious problems students have when trying to get information about University policies. USO had easy access to the information and could easily put it all together," he said.

ORDER APPEALED

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The Boston Herald American says it will appeal a civil contempt of court order on a reporter who refuses to turn over material sought in connection with a murder case.

"... A reporter ought not function or be required to function as an investigative arm of the police," the newspaper said after the order was issued Monday to Paul Corsetti, 30.

Last year, Peterson said, SIUC loaned 28,837 items to other institutions and borrowed 7,575 items.

Peterson said that because of the extensive borrowing and lending among libraries and the expected increase in it one of the main objectives of the committee will be to review the present regulations and consider revisions.

Another goal will be to set up regulations for international lending, Peterson said. There is currently lending with foreign countries, he said, but there is no international code to set standards for it.

A third goal of the committee will be to help review the 1978 federal law that limited the copying of papers, articles and other materials to one copy. The law prevents libraries from keeping more than one copy of materials on reserve. This poses a problem to students and faculty because it limits the copies available for use, Peterson said.

When Congress passed the law it stipulated that in five years there would be a review of its effect on students and faculty. Peterson said that the Inter-Library Loan Committee plans to be a major participant in this review.

The library committee meets twice a year during the two-day ARL convention.

Graduate Council elections should be finished in April

By Beth Williams
Student Writer

Annual elections for the Graduate Council are under way and the results will be announced April 3, according to John S. Jackson, associate dean of the Graduate School.

Graduate students have five openings on the council and there are eight faculty seats available, one from each of the colleges of Agriculture, Communications and Fine Arts, Human Resources, Education, Science, and three from the College of Liberal Arts.

The newly-elected members will meet on May 1 with the present Graduate Council. Each faculty member on the council serves a three-year term and graduate students hold one-year terms.

The Graduate Council makes policies for the Graduate School. The faculty of the Graduate School is then responsible for administering the policies.

Jackson described the basic graduate catalog as the book of rules for the Graduate School. Any changes to the rules must first be submitted to the Graduate Council for approval, he said.

Jackson said the elections have two rounds. The nominations are made in the primary and then the top two nominees from each college are voted on in the general election. Elections are staggered so that approximately one-third of the faculty council members are elected each year, he said.

The council comprises 22 faculty and five graduate student members, as well as five ex-officio members, who do not vote. The ex-officio representatives are the president of SIUC, the dean of the Graduate School, the vice president of academic affairs, the dean of library affairs and one representative dean for the colleges.

A faculty member is qualified for the council if he has graduate faculty membership, a full-time appointment at SIUC, faculty appointment in a graduate degree program and does not belong to the Faculty Senate.

A graduate student is eligible if he has been admitted to a graduate degree program and has registered for graduate credit.

Each college has a varied number of representatives on the council based on the number of faculty members in each college. The College of Liberal Arts has six members, the colleges of Science and Education have four, Communications and Fine Arts has three, Human Resources has two, and the colleges of Agriculture, Business and Engineering each have one member.

Greek Week to feature keg roll

By Joseph Mason
Student Writer

Ugly men and booze hounds will be given the chance to compete for the top prize in their field during the last week in April.

The Inter-Greek Council will sponsor this year's Greek Week, April 26 to May 4, to allow members of all social Greek organizations to interact and have a good time.

Kathy Mullen, a member of the Sigma Kappa sorority, is chairwoman for the upcoming event. Mullen and her committee, which is composed of various members of Greek chapters, have been planning and scheduling in order to get participation from all the Greek houses.

Because the activities to occur during the week are tentative, Mullen said there is still time for chapters to schedule events.

Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity is sponsoring a keg roll on April 26. Participants of this event are to push a shopping cart with an empty keg from Small Group Housing to Giant City State Park. Delta Upsilon will sponsor a pig roast and a sorority softball tournament.

Other activities include an ugly man contest sponsored by the Sigma Kappa sorority and a tricycle race for all sororities sponsored by Delta Chi.

Alpha Tau Omega fraternity will sponsor a tug-of-war contest. The Sigma Tau's bar race, in which the participants will race from bar-to-bar on Southern Illinois Avenue, will follow.

Other events that are planned but not yet scheduled include a gnp-gnop tournament by Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity and a drinking derby by Sigma Chi Alpha fraternity.

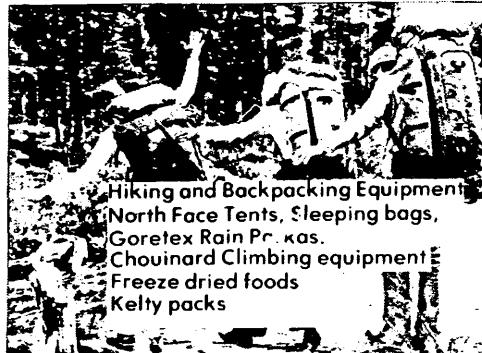

Greek Week will close with an awards banquet to honor winners of the various events and the most distinguished chapters.

One decade may produce changes in election norms, says professor

By Cindy Peper
Student Writer

It's another presidential election year- 1986. This election will bear little resemblance to those of a decade ago. State primaries are a thing of the past, the electoral college has been abolished, and the president is elected by the direct vote of the American population.

The candidates have changed as well. There are no moderates and it is difficult to discern party affiliation. The candidates in the 1986 election are one-issue extremists. The individual who emerges as the president-elect will likely be the most photogenic and charismatic figure from the field of candidates.

This is one scenario for the future of American politics by John Jackson, associate dean of the graduate school and professor of political science.

For the past eight years, Jackson has been attending political conventions to study the change in the American political party system.

"Based upon the trends that have been developing in American politics during the past decade several key variables will determine the type of politics and election process that will be evident a decade or two from now," Jackson said.

The increasing role of the mass media in the political selection process is one of the most notable variables, according to Jackson. He points to the immense coverage given to the presidential primaries and the resulting importance placed on these primaries.

As an example, Jackson cites the 1968 presidential election when Hubert Humphrey won the Democratic nomination without entering a single primary. In 1980, however, there will be 38 primaries with many being labeled "crucial" for various candidates, he said.

"The March 18th primary in Illinois selected the third largest number of Republican convention delegates and the fourth largest Democratic convention delegation," Jackson said. "Yet, the media did not focus on Illinois as they did on New Hampshire, where relatively few delegates are chosen. Thus, New Hampshire is labeled a vital state for many candidates because of media hype when, in reality, important primaries are those such as Illinois where a large contingent of delegates will be selected," he said.

The declining power of the political party is another factor that will shape the politics of the future, Jackson said.

"The political parties need to clarify the role and contribution of the party organization," Jackson said. "They must attempt to motivate people to work for the party."

"Single-issue politics may be the most threatening variable to the democratic process," Jackson said. "A democratic government demands compromise but it is difficult to reach compromise with each governmental figure intensely battling it out for one issue."

The increase in the number of primaries and the associated costs may also make a national primary very feasible for the future, according to Jackson.

Other structural changes for the future may include the abolishment of the electoral college, the popular election of the president and the establishment of federal funding for congressional elections, he said.

Despite the variables that are continually reshaping American politics, Jackson is optimistic about the future of the democratic system.

"I can describe pessimistic and optimistic scenarios for the political system of the future," Jackson said. "As an educator, I believe that people can learn and be rational, and therefore, I tend to buy a more optimistic outlook."

"During the next decade, I believe that the political parties can get it back together; that we can disregard single-interest groups so that a more moderate, consensus-oriented candidate emerges, and that the media will be attuned to American politics in the future and increase their ability to educate the voters," Jackson said.

Jackson plans to attend the Republican and Democratic conventions in July and August to continue his study. Following the conventions, Jackson will write papers about the convention, articles for academic journals and lecture on his findings.

His continuing study of American politics will serve as the basis for a book Jackson said he hopes to write covering the American political system since 1968, a time describes as "a remarkable period of change."

His assessment of the change and reform in the political party system is funded by an internal grant through the "SUC" Research Development Administration.

Cigarettes harm nonsmokers, too

BOSTON (AP) — For the first time, researchers have shown that working in a roomful of smokers is harmful to nonsmokers because the smoky air damages the tiny air tubes and sacs in their lungs.

The report is the first scientific evidence that breathing other people's smoke is bad for healthy people. It is expected to have an important impact on the war already being fought between smokers and nonsmokers over banning cigarettes in restaurants, airplanes and other public places.

The study, conducted on 2,100 middle-aged men and women by the University of California at San Diego, measured the effects of on-the-job passive smoking—the fumes people breathe from their neighbors' cigarettes, pipes and cigars.

"We conclude that chronic exposure to tobacco smoke in the work environment is deleterious to the nonsmoker and significantly reduces small airways function," the researchers wrote.

The report, written by James R. White, a physiologist, and Dr. Herman F. Proeb, a physician, was published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

There is no evidence that small airways disease alone causes long-term problems, but it often precedes more dangerous lung diseases, such as emphysema. There is a well-established association between smoking and lung cancer, but the tobacco industry has maintained it has not been proved that smoking causes cancer.

"We know that if a person works around another smoker for a period of time, he will experience lung damage," White said. "Now whether it will impair him or cause emphysema, we don't know. But who wants it?"

The California study follows a report last year from Beth Israel Hospital and Harvard University in Boston that found poorer lung function in children of parents who smoke.

In the California study, researchers measured damage to the alveolar sacs, the organs where oxygen is fed into the blood, as well as the tiny tubes that connect them with the bronchial network of the lungs.

When exposed to smoke, White said, the small airways become scarred and permanently damaged. In the passive smokers studied, at least 10 percent of these tubes and sacs were injured.

The study found that nonsmokers who work with smokers had about the same degree of small airways impairment as people who smoke without inhaling or inhale less than 11 cigarettes a day.

Care for a smoke? No thanks, kicking the habit is worth it

By Ellen Nimmons
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Yes, I occasionally think about smoking. No, thanks, I don't want a cigarette. I became a non-smoker a year ago, wising up after thousands of morning coughs, cancer warnings and too much bad breath.

In fact, I'm almost an anti-smoker now—indignantly shunning elevators carrying illegal smokers, wailing my co-workers' smelly cigarette butts and bringing out my lone ashtray at home only for the best of friends.

After 12 years—I started smoking at 18, when I knew better—I'd had enough. Statistics on lung cancer in women were rapidly approaching the fatal forecast for male smokers, and I felt an outcast among my mostly non-smoking friends.

I signed up for one of those courses promising "You WILL stop smoking in five weeks," paid my $295, and quit after wholeheartedly, even excitedly, swallowing the brain-washing, behavior modification—the course handed out.

I chanted their jingles, counted my cigarette's, brushed my teeth, drank orange juice and gargled, keeping to their rules. On the appointed day, I deserted two packs of cigarettes on a table in a French restaurant in Greenwich Village while a friend applauded.

I felt nauseous and light-headed the next day. I decided it was the wine.

I haven't had a cigarette since. I used to be a nearly-two-packs-a-day-when-I-was-honest smoker. And while a year is just a start on a non-smoking life, it's a milestone nonetheless.

I expected to be miserable, and sometimes I was during the past year, but the misery had nothing to do with cigarettes. Usually, it is people—often yourself—who make for misery.

I expected to be healthier, and I was. I don't cough anymore, and I get over colds more quickly. I didn't sign up for the New York Marathon, but I CAN jog a mile.

I expected to be cleaner, and I was. Long hair smells a lot better from Vidal Sassoon shampoo than from Marlboros. And my teeth—I finally went to the dentist and had the nicotine scraped off—are whiter without cigarettes. Fillings, sadly, hurt just as much.

I expected to gain weight, and I did, about five pounds. I lost it later, and regained it during a luscious week off in New York City—much of it spent in restaurants. Food always tasted wonderful, so I can't really say it's better now. But at least I no longer rush the meal for the cigarette.

I haven't burned a hole in a skirt—or anything else—in a year. Or almost run off the road reaching for a fallen butt while driving. Or started a fire in an ashtray or singed my hair with a match.

I didn't expect pleasures from not smoking.

But there they were: —Shakespeare at Stratford, Ont. Five plays in seven days—including the two Henrys—without a cigarette or a nicotine fit. (I did get restless at times. Too much Shakespeare.)

—Flying. No need to stare at the "No Smoking" sign. Just get on, buckle up, grab a book and forget the world.

—Camaraderie with other former smokers. Or the people I

Speaker says modern Africa reflects institutions of the past

By Steve Grant
Staff Reporter

Contemporary Africa should be moving toward models of rational development consistent with objective realities in Africa today.

So says Cecil Blake, an assistant professor of speech communication who is a native of Freetown in Sierra Leone-West Africa.

In a recent lecture on "Contemporary Africa," delivered in conjunction with Black History Month, Blake contended that there are institutions in contemporary Africa that are not suited for national development because they reflect legacies of the colonial past.

Blake, who has widely traveled through Europe, the United States, Canada and three African nations, said he has researched and published on intercultural communications, with specific emphasis on language and culture and on black studies.

Blake's research interests include diplomatic communication strategies, race and ethnic relations and what he calls black diaspora relations.

Black diaspora relations are the bonds maintained by persons of African descent as they were taken from their mother country and dispersed in the New World, Blake said.

The educational institutions in Africa today are trade oriented and lack emphasis on technical and skilled areas of production.

"Our educational institutions must stress scholarship, craftsmanship and technology in order to enhance national developments," Blake said.

The health and medical care delivery system in Africa today is inefficient and underdeveloped, as a result of political leaders on the continent not being committed to basic problems of human development, he said.

"If future leaders in Africa get their people well socialized into believing in themselves and in national development, no force on earth could destroy that commitment," he said.

Blake cited Julius Nyerere of Tanzania, Samora Machel of Mozambique and Sekou Toure of Guinea as leaders who are committed to enhancing the quality of the lives of Africans.

To understand contemporary Africa, Blake said, one must be aware of its past because it yields information that helps shape the present and guide the future.

group best in my quit-smoking group, two are not smoking at all, one is smoking on occasion and the fourth is back to his normal half-pack-a-day habit.

—Cross-country skiing. I counted miles at the family farm, with no need to take time for a smoke, no sully of the western Massachusetts woodland and only occasional shortness of breath.

—Small Purses. Without the cigarettes and matches, I just don't need a big saddlebag.

—Wrinkles. Fewer wrinkles, that is. My mirror doesn't prove this one yet, but I believe the scientists who say smoking aggravates the lines of care. I know I squint less.

—Stress, and dealing with it alone. I got mugged on a dark corner after working late—a week after quitting—and didn't smoke. It was, however, a long night.

—Staying home. Also known as never being forced out into the rain, cold or dark of night because you're out of cigarettes.

—Parties. One hand to drink with, one hand for snacks and never a search for an ashtray.

—Fresh air. Even inside my too-small Manhattan apartment.

—Children. I don't feel like I'm setting a bad example anymore.

—Money. About $500 a year, or more, that I'm not spending on cigarettes.

—Freedom. Let the others worry about where their next cigarette is coming from, and how soon.

—Kissing. You figure it out.

Professor cites inflation cure

By University News Service

The discipline required to whip inflation can only come through steadfast government action and regulation, says an agricultural economist at SIU-C.

"Everyone will have to suffer some to beat back inflation, but a voluntary system will not work," said Walter Willis, professor of agribusiness economics in the School of Agriculture.

"Discipline will work if everyone uses it," Willis said. "But everyone insists that a solution must not affect his relative income situation. The situation is now so serious--with inflation reaching an annual rate of 18 percent--that nearly everyone must accept that adverse consequences will occur in the short run.

Willis said that President Gerald Ford tried voluntary discipline with his "Whip Inflation Now" program but it didn't work.

"Those WIN buttons didn't beat inflation then," Willis said, "and they won't now."

"The government must not only say 'tighten your belts everybody' but also must punch the extra holes in the leather and fasten the belt itself," he said.

"If credit controls are enacted, they must be enacted--period. No waivers. No exceptions," Willis said. "There must be increased personal savings and a reduction of purchases on credit."

Willis said that it is most important to curb government spending and that deficit spending, which makes inflation a foregone conclusion, must be stopped.

"Government programs will have to be cut," Willis said. "Government spending to influence votes and gain political brownie points works against the common good."

Willis said inflation marks a major problem in the economy.

"Our serious inflation is a cruel tax on many persons with fixed incomes," Willis said. "The steps necessary to correct it will be painful."

Speaker says Africa today reflects legacies of the past

Blake cited the European excursion to Africa in the 18th and 19th centuries as the "unhappy era" that resulted in social disorganization, loss of land and law, abuse of human beings and displacement of belief systems.

Blake said negative images of Africans developed because Europeans failed to understand the African culture and civilization.

"Africans were shipped to the Caribbean, the United States and Latin America," he said. "This led to the creation of diaspora."

Blake emphasized the strong organic relationship that exists among Africans in the diaspora and the continent.

"If all in the diaspora came together and gave serious thought and suggestions for the future of Africa," Blake said, "then models consistent with objective reality in Africa could be achieved."

Traditionally, white slaveholders defined the world of black Americans, thus instilling negative images of their African ancestry. However, the contemporary scene shows a greater degree of consciousness by some black Americans in regard to their African ancestry, Blake said.

Warner named All-American diver

By Rod Smith
Staff Writer

Las Vegas, Nev., the home of gambling casinos, dancing girls, big-name entertainment and night life that never ends, was the site of the end goal of Julia Warner and Carol Lauchner—the AIAW national swimming championships.

Even through all the glitter and bright lights, the performances of the two Salukis shined bright in the meet that took place over spring break.

Warner, a junior from Louisville, Ky., earned All-American honors thanks to her 11th-place finish in the one-meter diving competition. She also finished 30th in the three-meter competition. This was the third consecutive season Warner advanced to the national championship.

"This was the first time I was a finalist, so I was excited," Warner said. "I wish I could have done better off the high board. I probably could have done even better in the one-meter."

Julia Warner

Warner credited much of her success to diving Coach Dennis Golden.

"Denny really helped me a lot," Warner said. "He took a lot of pressure off of me by telling me to just go out and have fun."

All-American honors are given to the top 16 placers in each event. As a result of her finish, Warner already has qualified for next year's national championships in one-meter diving.

Warner currently is preparing for the AAU national championships, to be held next week in Knoxville, Tenn.

Carol Lauchner, who started her swimming career at SIU as a distance freestyler, took 18th in the 200-meter butterfly in 2:05.7, her second-best time of the year. She missed All-American honors by 4 seconds.

"Carol's determination and dedication this season really paid off," women's swimming Coach Rick Powers said. "Being among the top 18 fliers in the nation is quite an accomplishment, especially since she's only a sophomore."

The Lady Salukis finished their season as the only undefeated team on campus with a 6-0 dual meet record. They also finished third in the Illinois Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women state championships.

Homer gives Sox 1-0 exhibition win

By The Associated Press

Glenn Borgmann smacked an eighth-inning home run off Tom Underwood to give the Chicago White Sox a 1-0 exhibition baseball victory Wednesday over the New York Yankees at Sarasota, Fla.

The solo blast, Borgmann's third of the spring, gave the triumph to lefthander Steve Trout, who checked the Yankees on six hits through eight innings. Randy Scarberry hurled the ninth for Chicago.

Ron Guidry pitched four perfect innings for the Yankees before giving way to Luis Tiant in the fifth. Underwood came on in the eighth.

The game was marred by a shouting match and near-fight between Tiant and White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa, who had to be restrained by three umpires.

LaRussa had gone onto the field twice to protest against what he felt were illegal pickoff moves by Tiant, who shouted at LaRussa the second time.

"He was trying to show me up. I don't care who he is. He's not going to do that to me," said LaRussa.

'Classic' tickets to go on sale

Tickets for the 1980 Collegiate Classic will go on sale Monday, SIU women's gymnastics coach and event director Herb Vogel announced Wednesday.

Vogel said the Classic, an event that features 18 of the top American women gymnasts, will be "bigger and better" than last year's event, which drew over 5,000 spectators to the arena. The event will take place April 19.

"We have moved the Classic from January to April—the end of the season—to ensure the highest quality field," Vogel said. "With our event coming after the AIAW national championship, we'll be able to hand-pick bona fide All-Americans."

"A gymnast will have to score 9.2 or finish among the top six in an event in the championship to receive an invitation from us this year," Vogel added.

Tickets, which will be available at the SIU Women's Athletics Office, the Athletics Ticket Office in the Arcata and the Student Center, are priced at $5, $3, $2 and $1.

Tracksters to open outdoor season

By Ed Dougherty
Staff Writer

Claudia Blackman believes the women's track team can improve on last year's 12th-place finish in the Memphis State Lady Tiger Invitational. In fact, she thinks the team could finish higher this year than ever before.

The Lady Salukis will open their 1980 outdoor track season Friday and Saturday in the 20-plus team meet.

"We are in a much better position than we've ever been going into our first outdoor meet," Blackman said. "In 1978, we scored 26 points and finished in eighth place."

"I think we've been looking really strong. I hope we'll be very close to finishing in the top five," she said.

Blackman said several tracksters should do well in the running events. Cathy Chiarello should win the 1500-meter run and place in the 800-meter run, the coach said.

"I also think Lindy Nelson should be able to win the 3000-meter run on Saturday, and place in the 5000-meter run," Blackman said. "I'm also expecting Cindy Bukauskas to finish either first or second in the javelin."

Bukauskas is the only Saluki from last year's squad to score at the Lady Tiger Invitational in 1979. She finished fourth in the javelin with a throw of 120-9 3/4 feet.

Even though she hopes her team will do better than it did last year, Blackman said she does not know what to expect "until the gun goes off."

Blackman said Tennessee and Tennessee State usually outclass the other schools, but there always is a tough fight for third place. Last year, the two schools scored over 100 points apiece and the third-place team scored in the 50s.

SIU has six meets remaining after this weekend's meet, including one meet at home. SIU's next meet will be a triangular with Indiana and Illinois April 5 at Bloomington, Ind. The Salukis' only home meet of the season will be the Saluki Invitational April 19.

Earlier, the Salukis had three outdoor meets. These were held at Illinois State, the University of Illinois and the University of Missouri. All three were invitational.

Baseball negotiations begin again

By the Associated Press

Negotiations on a basic agreement between major league baseball owners and players reopened Wednesday in Scottsdale, Ariz., with owners guardedly optimistic and players' representatives flatly pessimistic about avoiding a strike at the start of the season.

Major league executives met Tuesday with their chief negotiator, Ray Grebey, who said no modifications were made in the owners' latest offer.

"No votes were taken or policy decisions made today," Grebey said following a 90-minute meeting with the owners' negotiating committee.

The committee is composed of Grebey, the presidents of the American and National leagues, and six team executives: Daniel Calbreath of Pittsburgh, Bob Howsam of Cincinnati, John McHale of Montreal, Joseph Burke of Kansas City, Ed Fitzgerald of Milwaukee and Clark Griffith of Minnesota.

The executive director of the Players' Association, Marvin Miller, was dismayed by the news that the owners made no policy moves Tuesday.

"Since the Players' Association finds that the owners' demands are unacceptable and the owners apparently are unwilling to change their position," Miller said he could see no reason for any of the optimism expressed by the owners.

"As long as we have bargaining sessions left, there's hope of avoiding a strike," Grebey said.

Negotiating talks were planned daily through Friday, and Miller also is scheduled to meet with players from seven more teams this week to discuss the negotiations and the possibility of a strike.

Players from 19 teams already have authorized a strike on or after April 1 if a new four-year basic agreement is not hammered out by then.

"We see no reason for the strike talk," Grebey said. "Major league baseball's objective is the same as it has been—to attempt a negotiated settlement."

The success of the talks apparently hinges on several key issues left unresolved at the last session on March 18, particularly including an owners' proposal to have a player, rather than an amateur draft choice, as compensation in certain cases when a team loses a player to free agency.

Players argue that such a rule would kill the free agent system, since few teams would be willing to part with a player from their roster in order to sign a free agent.

Other important issues yet to be settled include an owners' proposal to restrict to one-year contracts any player with four years' service or less, and another that would force an arbitrator to give extra weight to a player's time in service, rather than performance, when ruling on a salary dispute.

Miller planned to meet in Phoenix with members of the San Francisco Giants and Cleveland Indians before Wednesday's negotiations.

Two assistants named to football staff

By Mark Pechie
Staff Writer

Two weeks ago when two of Key Dempsey's assistant coaches resigned, the Saluki football head coach knew he had to fill the vacated spots two ways—adequately and quickly, before spring practice began March 31.

Dempsey accomplished both objectives.

Rick Trickett, 32, and Richard "Moe" Smith, 33, have been named to replace Bill McConnell and Mike Barry. Barry resigned to take a position at the University of Arizona and McConnell took a position with West Virginia University.

Ironically, Trickett comes to SIU after four years as an assistant coach for West Virginia. A graduate of Glenville State College, Trickett, a former linebacker, was in charge of West Virginia's offensive line for two years and was defensive line coach for two.

Before his four-year term with the Mountaineers, Trickett coached linebackers and defensive ends at Glenville State and coached offensive and defensive lines at Indiana University (Pa.).

Trickett also served in the U.S. Marine Corp for three years, including a tour of duty in Vietnam.

Smith comes to SIU with excellent defensive credentials from Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh, Pa. As defensive coordinator, Smith's units ranked first in NCAA Division III scoring defense and fourth in total defense.

The Pennsylvania native started four years as a defensive back for Indiana University (Pa.). He spent two seasons as a graduate assistant for his alma mater before coaching receivers at the University of Rhode Island. Smith also spent three seasons at Indiana University as a backfield coach before working at Carnegie-Mellon.

Smith said he was pleased with the opportunity to coach at a Division I football school.

"This is a great chance for me," Smith said. "Going into a big football program which is a winner is something a lot of young coaches don't get a chance to do."

Smith said learning the Salukis' system would take some time, but added that defense basically is the same everywhere.

"Defense always remains constant," he said. "It's hit, hit, hit. Just get out there and play solid, nasty defense. It's pretty simple."

Dempsey said the decision to hire Trickett and Smith took only about five days.

"I've met the two new coaches before," Dempsey said, "and they both have good backgrounds and fit into our style of playing."

"At this point in time, with our spring game right around the corner, we had to act quickly to hire the right people," he said. "This was an emergency situation and I feel both Rick and Moe were excellent choices. The hiring didn't take long because we knew what we needed, and they both have it."

Netters open abbreviated home slate vs. St. Louis

By Rick Klatt
Staff Writer

If Mother Nature permits, the women's tennis team will open its abbreviated home schedule Thursday with a 3 p.m. match against St. Louis University at the University tennis courts.

The Lady Salukis, 3-1 for the season, will be hosting the Billikens for the first time ever. The match is the first of two home dual matches for SIU, the other being April 14 against Principia College.

"We've never played against them before, but I do know that they've got a couple good players at the top of their lineup," Saluki Coach Judy Auld said. "They've also had some playing time outdoors. They were in Louisiana while we were."

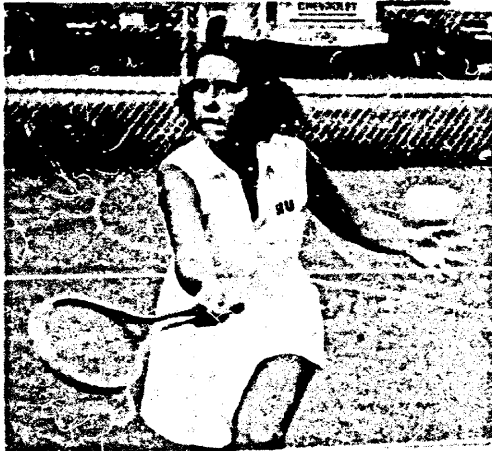

Outdoor playing time is something Auld hopes her team can get before it leaves April 2 for the 19th annual Southern Collegiate Tennis Tournament in Columbus, Miss.

"We really need to play this match with St. Louis and the one next Wednesday against Memphis State," the fifth-year coach said. "The Southern tournament is going to be really tough and we'd like to have some playing time before we get there."

The Salukis lost valuable outdoor matches over their spring trip. Of seven scheduled matches, the lady netters were able to play only four. Matches against Southeast Louisiana, South Alabama and Alabama were canceled because of rain.

The Salukis defeated Millsaps College, 5-4, Nicholls State, 6-3, and Mississippi University for Women, 6-3, before falling to Mississippi, 7-2.

"We had a really good trip

Carol Foss (left) and Jeannie Jones helped lead the SIU women's tennis team to a strong doubles effort on the Salukis' Southern trip last week. Foss and Lisa Warren were

We had the slow start that I expected because of the lack of outdoor playing time," Auld said, "and our concentration was suspect. The girls would be up for one or two points and then they'd lose it. Overall, I'm really pleased with the way we played."

encouraging aspect was the play of the doubles combinations. The No. 2 team of Lisa Warren and Carol Foss went unbeaten in four matches, while the No. 3 duo of Debbie Martin and Fran Watson lost only once. Jeannie Jones and Mauri Kohler, the No. 1 team, were 2-2.

Ozark rivers offer canoeing, scenery

The Ozark National Scenic Riverways include the beautiful Current, Jacks Fork, and Eleven Point rivers.

The Current River probably is the easiest of the three to float. The river is open, with smooth water and no ledges or rock gardens to maneuver through. There are many gravel bars and occasionally snags of trees or bushes along the banks.

Akers Ferry is a good starting spot, with a campground, canoe rental and ranger station. The campground usually is crowded on warm spring weekends, so be sure to get there early. Springs along the river increase the volume of water and make for interesting stops.

The spring at Cave Spring flows right into the Current River—canoes can enter the cave for about 100 feet. Round Spring, further down the river, has a campground and can be used as a take-out point.

The distance from Akers

Touching Nature

Debbie Sugerman

Ferry to Round Spring is 18 miles. The next take-out point is another 19 miles downstream at Two Rivers Access, the junction of the Current and Jacks Fork rivers.

The Eleven Point is a more difficult river than the Current. A National Forest Service Recreation Area close to Greer Spring provides access to the river. Greer Spring is privately owned, but may be visited—it is a definite must. The spring gushes out 214 million gallons of water each day, the second largest spring in Missouri.

Extremely rocky areas occur at Mary Decker Shoals, and this area should be canoed with extreme caution. It is a good idea to stop on the shore before the shoals and scout the best way to canoe through the rocks. Remember to follow the downstream V's.

The Eleven Point has many interesting sites to explore. Turner's Mill is an old logging mill which still has some of the machinery remaining. White's Creek Cave is large, with several adjoining small rooms. Bliss Spring is a good spot for a chilly dip!

The best spot to take out on the Eleven Point is Riverton, a 19-mile paddle from Greer Spring.

The upper portion of the Jacks Fork River is narrow and twisting, but provides the best canoeing and the most interesting scenery. Spring is the best time to float the upper portion, which can be reached by an access at Buck Hollow. The upper river is beautiful, with bluffs and several caves.

Jam Up Cave is exciting and is entered by climbing up a small waterfall. The river is fast and challenging down to Alley Spring, 25 miles from Buck Hollow.

A campground is located at Alley Spring, and it is a good spot to take out or put in if you are not ready for the upper river. From here you can canoe to Eminence (seven miles) or Two Rivers (14 miles.)

These rivers are beautiful in the spring, but must be canoed with caution. Spring rains cause fast water, logjams and flash floods. Keep an eye on the weather—if it is raining, do not camp on a sandbar. Camp on shore where you can escape quickly if there is a flash flood. Be aware of hypothermia. The combination of chilly wet weather can be a disaster if you are not constantly on the watch.

SOAR has planned three weekends on the rivers of Missouri.

April 18-20 will be spent on the Eleven Point, April 25-27 on the Jacks Fork, and May 2-4 on the Black River—a river similar to the other three, but less traveled and more scenic.

The trips are $27, which includes transportation, canoes, instruction and other group gear.

For more information on the rivers, where to rent canoes, or if you are interested in going with SOAR, stop by the LES-SOAR office in the Student Recreation Center.
