Literacy in America ailing, speaker says

By William Walker
Staff Writer

Although reading is very important in America's economic development, the United States suffers from a general decline in literacy, says Sonoma State University's Morris Casting, a world-renowned writer and guest speaker at Wednesday's Honor Lecture Series.

"I agree with the doom-sayers. There is a great crisis in literacy in this country," Sonntag said at a press conference Wednesday afternoon after his lecture. "The problem, she said, can be traced in part to the educational system, but more importantly it is something that is found embedded in our culture, which often places negative connotations on knowledge.

"THERE IS A suspicion of the mind in this country except when it is harnessed to clearly practical purposes," Sonntag said. "People feel using the mind is the province of the intellectual, the elitist, highbrow. In other places it just seems normal, but here people get very defensive."

Sonntag, who began her career in 1963, has written in a variety of styles and on a vast number of topics, including politics, photography, films, illness and philosophy.

SHE HAS ALSO written and directed three films, directed a stage production and plans to direct an opera next year. Awards for her work include the Rockefeller Foundation fellowships and the Brandeis University Creative Arts Awards for her literature, "Traditions of the New," and her Stallwright lecture, "A Contemplation of the Human Race." Sonntag has been prominently displayed in a variety of ways, technologically being one of them.

ALTHOUGH SONNTAG agreed that high technology is encouraging "the intellectual and the responsible citizen," she said. But the quality of education has declined over the years, Sonntag said, with students now getting less education despite going to school longer than many students of a generation ago.

"THE PROCESS is being adulterated and diluted and depressed," she said. "It would almost be too hopeful to say that the colleges are now doing what the high schools were doing a generation ago. They may be doing even less.

Report says rentals changed neighborhood

By Jim McBride
Staff Writer

Rental housing has changed the character of the city's southwest central neighborhood, says City Code Enforcement Director Morris McDaniels.

Recent inspections of rental housing units in that area indicate that the neighborhood has departed from that of single-family to high-density residential, said McLain conducted by the City Council Monday.

The inspections were conducted in an area bordered by South University Avenue and South Poplar Street, and West Elm and West College streets.

The inspections were part of a continuing program by city code enforcement officers to inspect rental units to ensure compliance with city housing codes. Certificates of compliance are issued for units meeting city codes and must be prominently displayed in the units.

Citations were issued to 26 property-owners-of-record for failure to comply with time restrictions on code violations. Code officials brought the violations to the attention of the owners, a warning to a report issued by McLain's office.

Certificates of compliance were issued to 49 property owners and seven repair or demolish orders were issued to owners of necessary structures in violation of the minimum housing ordinance, the report said.

McDaniel said that of the 105 rental units inspected, 26 received only exterior inspections, refused voluntary inspection or were not present at the time of the inspection. Code officials left notices at 100 residences where tenants were not home and returned several times before conducting exterior-only inspections, he said.

Certificates of compliance will not be issued to units receiving only exterior inspections, he said.

Mayor Helen Westberg asked what the city's next step concerning the 86 units would be.

"We can't forget about them," she said. "Sometimes the exterior condition of a house cannot tell you whether the inside is inhabitable.

McDaniel said the city will continue its inspection program and would rely on

Contra aid vote postponed one day

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Efforts by Senate Republicans to reach a compromise with Democrats on $100 million in aid to Nicaragua's Contra rebels failed Wednesday, but GOP leaders predicted a narrow victory for President Reagan's plan.

"I think it's possible to pass it. It is going to be close," said Richard Lugar, Indiana, told reporters.

"We have 51 votes, but some amendments could come in and we might lose," said Lugar, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Republican leaders held up start of action on the bill, trying to consolidate their margin by announcing waving Democrats. Senate Republican leader Robert Dole announced all action on the Contra aid measure was postponed until Thursday.

Dole said a substitute version of the aid package was ready but indicated that more overnight discussions might be held to efforts to come closer to an agreement.

On the Senate floor, harsh debate over Reagan's plan to help the guerrillas - including a renewal of military aid - was the order of the day.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., called for an end to all aid to the Contras. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said the aid should be approved with no conditions on how Reagan spends to meet the threat of communist subversion he says the Sandinista government is spreading in the Americas.

Prospects for a Reagan victory in the GOP-controlled Senate were bolstered by reports from Honduras - northern neighbor of Nicaragua - that Sandinista troops had crossed the border to attack the guerrillas.

Bald Knob Cross, an Easter tradition

By Ellen Leong
Shawnee Post

The Cross of Peace on Bald Knob Hill at Alto Pass was the idea of Wayman Presley, whose devotion to God and humanity is a legend in the 30-acre rural area over which the 111-foot cross is seen.

An Easter sunrise service will be conducted at the cross Sunday.

"I'm expecting about 2,500 people from four or five states for this Easter's morning service," Presley said. "It's our sixth anniversary."

The Rev. A.D. Van Buren, president of Christian World Outreach, will give the sermon at the 7 a.m. service.

The hourlong Easter service will be broadcast live by two local radio stations and rebroadcast in another in the evening.

The huge white cross is visible each night, illuminated by 40,000 watts of floodlights. Presley said he hopes it reminds viewers of Christ dying for their sins and His gift of eternal life.

I believe that people of all denominations of the Christian faith should meet occasionally for combined worship to God without being hampered by denominations' rules," Presley said.

There are more than a hundred Christian denominations in the United States, often at odds with one another. Presley said, adding that their different doctrines create a stumbling block in explaining Christianity to people in other countries.

He studied long and hard, he was an artist. He could not be done to show that beneath all those denominational differences, there is a basic faith that unites all believers in Christ.

His attention was drawn to what seemed to be the highest and most prominent mountain, a hill in the middle of the island. There were no trees on the road to the summit, so there was an unobstructed view in all directions.

Presley, now president of Presley Tours, decided to build a cross and to gather people from all nations and all denominations to worship at its base.

"The cross means one of the greatest things of my life," Presley said. "My contribution to the welfare of Americans and to Christianity is to show my appreciation to God for the health I have and my life on earth.

The cross, 100 tons of steel and brilliant white porcelain, took 26 years to become a reality.

Presley borrowed $10,000 from a bank and purchased 111 acres of land at Bald Knob.

"I set out to find 113 people, the kind that I wanted, who would donate $100 each and become trustees of the newly formed Bald Knob Christian Foundation," Presley said. "I took me three years."

"A group of people interested in promoting tourism in Southern Illinois offered to donate a quarter of a million dollars to erect the cross, if they could make it a tourist attraction," he said.

"I told them that if the cross is built that way, it wouldn't have any meaning. If they want to build it, I don't want anything to do with it. So I turned the offer down and never regretted it.

"I started having people from all over the nation give a nickle or a dime, or a dollar bill to help build it, as a symbol of their unity of faith."

At dawn on Easter in 1937, hundreds gathered in a spirit of worship at the cross.

Presley said the people felt a closeness to God as they braved the chilling winds while remaining warm in spirit. They walked the break of a new day and heard messages in words and music.

The way to the cross is rough. The gravel road winds four miles up to Bald Knob. It is stony and dusty. On Easter mornings when hundreds of cars go up and down the path, the dust becomes so thick that many drivers, miss the curves and skid down the slopes.

Despite repeated requests, Illinois lawmakers turn a deaf ear to appeals for an improved road to Bald Knob. Presley said. "So we advertise best free the Easter services so as to keep the crowds down until we get a better road."

On the sides of the cross's marble base are carved the words "faith, hope, charity and peace." Presley, a former mayor, who said he has tried to live completely within the meaning of these four words.

"There was a time when he felt like giving up building the cross some 40 years ago," he said. "You will feel better at tempting to do things through to be impossible, and failing, than if you just drift through life doing the inane things," he said. "As you struggle, try to reach high ideals, you will become taller people, even if you fail to reach your goal."

Reagan funnels aid through back door

HAS RONALD REAGAN FOUND A newer, sneaker way to get aid to the Contras?

Maybe he looks at getting money for the Contras as a covert activity unto itself, since Congress has denied him his $100 million direct aid package.

Thanks to a rather convenient error by the Nicaraguan army, Reagan now has the necessary means to get aid for his "freedom fighters." Send money to the Honduran government as emergency military aid, and it will serve the same purpose as sending it directly to the Contra forces, most of which operate out of the mountainous southern reaches of Honduras.

According to U.S. military intelligence reports, 1,500 Sandinista troops entered Honduras sometime this month, pursuing a Contra raiding party. Until Reagan promised $20 million in direct military aid to the Honduras, their leadership lost knowledge of the incursion. After receiving the aid, though, their tune changed.

THE NICARAGUAN GOVERNMENT dismisses any knowledge of their troops being in Honduras. Presidential spokesman Manuel Espinoza claims that the report of invasion by the Contra administration in its campaign against Nicaragua. He may be right.

Honduran troops in the invasion area are under orders to keep journals of activities, and there is no hint in any of them of a Contra attack. Are they hiding something? Are there any Sandinistas in the Honduras?

The $20 million in aid translates to about $13,000 for each Contra "sculp." This sounds like a mercenary bent to our foreign policy. It is not the traditional American Indian so much per scalp for each British settler killed. Why would a force of 1,500 choose an attack against 1,500 Contra strongholds in Honduras? More than 20,000 Contras are reported to be held up in the mountains bordering Nicaragua. Would the Sandinistas send their troops there in the broad daylight to be shot down?

IT IS POSSIBLE THAT a detachment of Sandinista troops entered Honduras without realizing where they were. The region in question is a mountainous jungle, with no roads to navigate by, and so signs welcoming you to the Honduras. Maybe the troops entered Honduras without their government's knowledge, and were eventually discovered, perhaps while they were being there. This hardly signifies an invasion by Nicaragua.

To further complicate matters, Honduran and Contra intelligence sources have reported that up to four battalions of Nicaraguan troops will move in to help their embattled compatriots within the next 24 hours. Reagan has promised to use U.S. helicopters to move Honduran troops into the battlezone. One could expect that Contra troops may become hard to distinguish from Honduran troops over the next few days.

And who will be there to distinguish the Contra troops from the Honduran troops? The Contra army has only been involved in the confrontation. There will be no press around to document the military activity. Once again, the American public has been left in the dark, as it is today in Nicaragua. The press may not be biased, but we know the President is.

After all, he's a Contra, too.

Abortion would split groups

I doubt those feminists who feel so certain of the rightness of removing material (from the uterus) because they find offensive would be as supportive of removing material from church groups who are in all we decide next to remove such magazines as McCall's and Cosmopolitan because they feature articles on abortion. By the same token, I doubt the boys who are rushing to defend the First Amendment would be quite so vocal if the issue involved the removal of gay magazines with pictures of nudists or articles regarding gay male fantasies.

As for myself, the only magazine I buy at the bookstore is the National Geographic. I am a Westf ein graduate student, theater.

This is an interesting society we live in: When someone decides to quit smoking and makes that decision public by flushing all his cigarettes down the toilet, it's perfectly all right.

Recently, however, a group of individuals, in an attempt to publicize their decision to stop listening to music they considered harmful to their own personal lives, destroyed hundreds of dollars worth of records and tapes with a sledgehammer. And everyone hollers "censorship" and "fascism."

But if I jeopardize the speaker's ability to communicate my views and I choose to listen to him (say I rip out his tongue, or worse, destroy him altogether), that's censorship.

The record-smashers have decided for themselves to not listen to the musicians whose views and comments they considered questionable. But since they have not imposed that decision upon anyone else, they provide an opportunity for others to still go on and on despite the actions of these so-called "censors." This fact makes destroying one's own personal property in this context cannot be called censorship.

-- Mark Bowden, Carbondale.

A foreign student's perspective

As much as Olive Dyl often points out, there is a war between cartoon characters Popeye and Brutus, foreign students in the United States increasingly find themselves the duck of the push-pull match that divides educators, politicians, businessmen and various factions of the government. Most of the time, it can be a little confusing for us students.

A lot of students on campus often make remarks about how many foreigners attend SIU. Some say that international students have no business being here.

This group of people often forget that the benefits of foreign students in the U.S. and at SIU-C as a whole are mutual.

In 1984, SIU-C was ranked sixth in the nation for international student enrollment. This boosts the image of SIU-C not only in the U.S. but by other foreign countries.

Many university officials feel that the presence of foreign students and economic gains have helped beat back the "fanatics." However, there is ample evidence that international students provide a galvanizing boost to the community of both the SIU-C community and the U.S. as a whole.

The institute of International Education in New York has estimated that foreign students in the U.S. spend more than $1.8 billion only on living costs yearly, and with the current rate of inflation, this estimate is about to increase.

The foreign connections the international students at SIU-C make also keep the enrollment: number alive. Last semester international students made up 12.5 percent of the entire student population. This is 1.6 percent increase from 1984-85.

In fact, on the average, international students pay twice as much for tuition as an Illinois resident to receive the same education. We pay through the proverbial nose to study here, and experience as much financial difficulties if not more, as Americans do.

Apparently, we are more competitive and willing to take risk in obtaining quality education at SIU-C, which also provides the positive economic benefits of having cultural diversity. The international perspective a varied foreign population brings to campus is an asset.

It brings to campus is an asset. It brings to campus is an asset. It brings to campus is an asset.

The international student associations have tried everything in their capacity over the years to show the richness of their cultures. To this effect, the International Festival, organized by the International Student Council, is an example of sharing our cultures, ideas and customs, but not many Americans take advantage of this.

Some foreign students that graduate form SIU-C may end up in influential posts in government and industry when they return home. This will also help boost the image of SIU-C, and not only that, many might leave as supporters of this system of government and continue to buy American products once they return home.

Next time you see foreign students, don't think we are here to compete and take your jobs, just think on the positive side that the benefits are mutual.

Film showed truth about life

It reflects life in our society, whether good or bad, and the implications which are tied to it. Yes, it deals with abuse, lesbianism, deceit, and prejudices, topics we are often confronted with on a daily basis. Just because it exposes these controversial issues to us, should we condemn it? They do not ask us to accept or condone it, merely to acknowledge its existence in one woman’s life.

I feel nothing in this film reflects a racist attitude, unless it is superficially examined with those preconceived opinions in mind. I believe that in itself is a form of prejudice, one which I hope will not further distort the integrity of this moving and beautiful film for those who have yet to experience it.

—Paula Ingwersen, Senior, Early Childhood Education.

Clean up dorm janitorial services

As an example, women’s gymnastics at SIU-C should be retained, not eliminated, and men’s wrestling should be restored, if for no more of a reason than the student body is the one that must bear the costs of these programs. Men that are now or will be participating in these sports feel they are a part of the tradition, and they are proud of these accomplishments.

Dear Ron:

Men’s competition has been invaded by 15,000 commute-back, marauding cockroaches. I have been able to cut them off between the couch and the dresser. As far as the 2,000 are missing outside my door and windows. Due to the complexity of the problem, I’m sure you can understand my plight.

Although $20 million is a lot for roach motels, I’m willing to take slightly less. —Brian Reynolds, Senior, Electrical Engineering.

Keep minor sports for nation’s fitness sake

Recently the news media announced 40 percent of U.S. boys and girls reach their mature height before reaching age 15. It is a public health issue that all students should not have to pay the costs of the results of this change of related sports. Besides the fact that the sport without the aid of good contraception is almost certain—there is the danger to the health of the student. The last thing we could do is to tell our students to accept more of the financial and emotional responsibilities in life. Free male students who lack both the financial and emotional responsibilities in life may be well served by a reduction of the activities which will save the financial and emotional responsibilities for those who disagree with this sentiment. We are a school that has no modernization of the same kind for the same reasons.

For those of you who feel “The Color Purple” is a racist film, I submit that you have missed its intent entirely, and the fact that some of you were inclined toward this belief prior to having seen it has no doubt shaded your perception of its meaning.

Based upon the Pulitzer Prize-winning novel by Alice Walker, the story revolves around the life of a black woman whose life has been suppressed by dictates of the men in it, including her father, her step-children, and her husband. The story is centered about one woman’s life, from a woman to a man, and a woman to an animal. This is the point that some people miss.

No one in this film, or in any book, is portrayed as all good, or all bad, just as in life. The physical stereotype of the men are often cruel, but given below the background, feelings, and emotions that should not be taken as an excuse for their behavior, but rather as an attempt to show their humanity and the weaknesses that accompany this trait.

Keep minor sports for nation’s fitness sake

It is SIU a non-profit organization? I don’t think it is. I submit that you have missed this intent entirely, and the fact that some of you were inclined toward this belief prior to having seen it has no doubt shaded your perception of its meaning.

I live in one of the triads and I am waiting to get 1,200 worth of the dead out of the building. In September one of our two showers went out. That meant 14 guys to one shower and long waits in line. Then in October we had sewage flowing out of our bathrooms and into our rooms. Housing came and fixed the plumbing and va.'sumed up the mess.

What Housing didn’t do was clean the facets out of our showers. Instead they left that job for us to do, and we did it. Can you imagine why? When we were an inordinate number of the same needs.

Parents should be reasonable here.

I am embarrassed for you, Mr. Capp. Embrasser and ashamed because you, as an individual, are beingfooled over a government bure:ure: the IBMs in their backyards.

More than anything else, if we could declare our campus a non-smoker-free zone, we could be making a statement to the world, that we care about human health. This is something we have to say about human health, and something to say about the environment, the issues to which we are often confronted.

The few moments I spent ‘dead’ on the ground outside of Fassler Hall made me realize I shouldn’t make myself stupid enough to raise awareness among my fellow students, and I did.

Marine study in Bahamas available

By Cleotie Slidell

Picture yourself sitting under a palm tree and sipping on a Singapore Sling at a beach in the Bahamas this summer.

Is this picture vague because you see yourself attending summer school?

Continuing Education has arranged a summer school program in the Bahamas where students can take vacation while studying the complexity of the ecosystem, said Dr. Christopher C. Kohler, assistant professor in the Zoology Department.

"Tropical Marine Ecology," Zoology 496, and some electives will be conducted by Kohler at the Caribbean Marine Research Center. Kohler said that interested individuals should have some background in biology or an instructor's consent.

The classes will be limited to 12 students. The cost for the trip is $250, which "other said covers food and gong but not transportation on Fort Lauderdale, Fla., site," said Kohler.

Participating students will research methodology, do field work and study coral reefs, man-grown swamps, sea growth beds and flacks, as well as conduct individual projects, Kohler said.

Facilities will be available for individuals with scuba diving licenses.

He said, "I expect students to gain an understanding of the complex ecosystem that we live in."

Those interested in taking courses in the Bahamas should attend the meeting scheduled for April 2 in Lawson Hall, Room 31, from 4 to 6 p.m.

Kohler lived in Puerto Rico for three years before he received a master's degree in marine biology.

R-T Week to feature broadcasters, talks

By Nola Cowser
Staff Writer

Several broadcast professionals will be on campus March 31 to April 4 in conjunction with Radio-Television Week.

Rand Welker, acting head of the Department of Radio-Television, said this will be an opportunity for those interested in network broadcasting to talk with professionals.

Feather Regan, vice president for affiliate relations at CBS, will speak at 7 p.m. Monday in the Student Center Ballroom D. The tape "Inside CBS" will be shown and Regan will available afterward, Welker said.

Regan and Richard Ducey, director of audience research and technology planning with the National Association of Broadcasting, will lead a panel discussion on the future of broadcasting at 7 p.m. Tuesday at Davis Auditorium in Wham Building. Welker said the panel will discuss new technology, the industry, CBS and the NAB.

Paul Davis, news director for WGN-TV in Chicago, will speak at the Virginia Marine Life Lecture, scheduled for 3 p.m. April 4 in Paner Museum. A reception will follow.

Ralph Becker, R-T Alumna of the Year and the 1985 SIU-C Alumnus of the Year year will speak at a banquet Friday evening. During the banquet, three scholarships will be awarded. Becker, of Davie's Conn., is the president of Television Station Partners, a group which owns five television stations.

Tickets for the banquet are $15 and can be purchased from the R-T Department in the Communications Building.

Radio Television Week began Monday. Welker stressed the importance of the following week for students interested in the industry but not in R-T.

Micrographics essay contest set for scholarship

A $500 scholarship will be awarded for the best short essay on using micrographics in a career.

Eligible students must have an interest in micrographics, either through their employment or coursework regardless of major. Financial need will not be a primary factor in the selection.

The scholarship, for use in the fall semester, is made possible by the St. Louis Chapter of the Association for Information and Image Management and the John E. Scholarship Fund of AAIM's national organization.

Entries must be submitted by April 10. For application guidelines, call Shirley Lillard at 433-4381.

Paul Davis, news director for WGN-TV in Chicago, will speak at the Virginia Marine Life Lecture, scheduled for 3 p.m. April 4 in Paner Museum. A reception will follow.

Ralph Becker, R-T Alumna of the Year and the 1985 SIU-C Alumnus of the Year year will speak at a banquet Friday evening. During the banquet, three scholarships will be awarded. Becker, of Davie's Conn., is the president of Television Station Partners, a group which owns five television stations.

Tickets for the banquet are $15 and can be purchased from the R-T Department in the Communications Building.

Radio Television Week began Monday. Welker stressed the importance of the following week for students interested in the industry but not in R-T.

Micrographics essay contest set for scholarship

A $500 scholarship will be awarded for the best short essay on using micrographics in a career.

Eligible students must have an interest in micrographics, either through their employment or coursework regardless of major. Financial need will not be a primary factor in the selection.

The scholarship, for use in the fall semester, is made possible by the St. Louis Chapter of the Association for Information and Image Management and the John E. Scholarship Fund of AAIM's national organization.

Entries must be submitted by April 10. For application guidelines, call Shirley Lillard at 433-4381.
Philippine military on alert to counter rebels

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) - Armed Forces General Paulino Ramos ordered the military on an "alert" against rebel attacks Wednesday in the first such command under the government of President Corazon Aquino.

The deaths in a month of fighting between rebels and government troops rose to more than 300 Wednesday, despite Aquino's repeated calls for national reconciliation to end the 18-year-old communist insurgency.

Armed forces spokesman Col. Luis San Andres said the alert order took effect at 6 a.m. Wednesday and was relayed to all field commanders. Under the red alert, the highest state of readiness, all troops are to be in barracks and leaves and furloughs are canceled.

Military commanders on the strife-torn southern island of Mindanao reported fresh attacks by the communists led by New Peoples Army this week killed 57 people in the province of Maguindanao.

The attacks brought to 303 the number of people killed in rebel incidents since Aquino came to power Feb. 25 in a civilian backed military revolt that ousted Ferdinand Marcos.

The chairman of Aquino's newly established Presidential Committee on Human Rights called Wednesday for the release of rebels detained for ambushes, illegal possession of firearms and political actions carried out when Marcos was in power.

"The first thing that the committee resolved upon was that all persons who, for one reason or another, were still in jail, and whose crimes were political, should be set free," said former Sen. Jose Diokno, chairman of the seven-member committee.

In the Mindanao island port city of Cagayan de Oro, the military spokesman Air Force Col. Ernesto Ponce said five people were killed and more than 1,000 people fled their homes in separate rebel-related incidents.

Ponce said 30 heavily armed NPA rebels, clad in military fatigues, Monday attacked the northern Mindanao town of Medina, 40 miles northeast of Cagayan de Oro, which is 560 miles southeast of Manila.

The rebels started several houses, killing two local inhabitants, and abducted three villagers, whom they suspected of being government informers, Ponce said. He said the corpses of the three villagers were discovered Tuesday.

Another NPA raid last week forced the evacuation of at least 1,000 residents from the town of Chavista, 20 miles from Cagayan de Oro, into nearby school houses and churches, Ponce said.

LaRouche followers listed on 19 state, local ballots

By United Press International

Hundreds of radical followers of extremist Lyndon B. Johnson's followers are running for Congress and statewide and local offices in at least 20 states, with more expected before filing deadline, a nationwide survey showed Wednesday.

United Press International state capital bureaus found that LaRouche's National Democratic Policy Commission has candidates running in 19 states.

California, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and Washington. And a LaRouche sympathizer is running for the Senate in North Carolina.

The survey showed so far as many as 50 other states, but there are indications they will make ballot efforts in some, including Georgia, Alaska, Florida, Idaho, Tennessee, and Louisiana.

In most cases the LaRouche candidates are running in Democratic Party primaries and are often not clearly identified with their radical anti-Semitic and neo-Nazi philosophies. Often their technique is to run unopposed in House primaries for seats where Democrats seldom challenge entrenched Republicans.

In the March 18 Illinois primary, LaRouche candidates defeated Democratic candidates for lieutenant governor and secretary of state who had anticipated easy victories. That forced Democratic gubernatorial candidate Adlai Stevenson to renounce his ticket, saying he won't run as a regular Democrat with a radical.

"The future of the Democratic Party is now seriously threatened," said Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., who said the LaRouche followers are members of an anti-Semitic "fascist cult."

"These people are wild," he said. "Hitler was wild and people dismissed him."

Nationally, the Democratic Party is seeking legal methods to remove LaRouche candidates from the ballot, including checking to see if they have proper party registration. The party is undertaking a nationwide effort to alert voters, many of whom are apparently unaware what LaRouche stands for.

"It is not accurate to call them right wing: they're not even close to the mainstream political dialogue," said spokesman Terry Michael of the Democratic National Committee.

Michael said the party has started a program of "necessary public education so the voters will know who the people are on the ballot."

Calling the Illinois result a "fiasco," Michael said he hopes the news spotlight on the LaRouche candidates will end their victories. In addition to statewide office in Illinois, LaRouche candidates have won isolated races for school boards, state legislatures and local offices.

Michael said it is very difficult to compile a list of LaRouche candidates because they often don't identify themselves and often run for obscure offices that don't normally attract mainstream Democrats.
Milk intake, bone disease linked

By Elizabeth Cochran
Staff Writer

People never outrun their need for milk. They can, however, keep pace with the National Dairy Council, because it provides calcium and people need it throughout adulthood to prevent the bone disease osteoporosis.

It is characterized by bone thinning, which makes bones susceptible to fractures. It is the curvature of the spine and, in some cases, the neck as well. The Curly Central Food Service Office gave slide presentations by the Dairy Council about the disease in the dairy cafeteria this week in support of National Nutrition Month.

According to the presentation, 99 percent of the body's calcium is found in bones and teeth. If the supply isn't replenished daily, the body will take the calcium it needs to function properly from the bones and transfer it to the blood stream.

Bone growth doesn't stop at adulthood. From ages 20 to 30, bones increase in mass, gain strength and hardness. The NDB says this is a critical period for calcium intake because lack of it during these years can "set the stage for osteoporosis" and the disease is irreversible.

The disease is much more common in women than men and the National Dairy Board says two of every three women older than 17 don't get enough calcium.

The board says women are more susceptible because they generally have smaller frames and menopause causes bone loss due to the loss of estrogen.

After age 40, bone loss is a natural part of aging, but calcium intake can slow the process.

Most calcium, in fact 72 percent, in the U.S. food supply is found in dairy products. The NDB says that to prevent osteoporosis adult women need 600 milligrams of calcium each day. Two glasses of milk provide 600 milligrams and people can get the remaining 300 milligrams from other dairy products such as cheese and yogurt.

The NDB recommends dairy products as opposed to calcium pills because dairy products provide other essential nutrients.

Seminar focuses on suicide prevention

A two-day suicide prevention seminar focusing on protective measures in jails, police lockups and holding centers was held Thursday and Friday at the Student Center.

The seminar is conducted by the Center for the Study of Crime Delinquency and Corrections and the School of Criminal Justice at Michigan State University. It is designed for law enforcement personnel and will look at the chronic and persistent problem of suicide in custody settings.

Speakers for the seminar are Robert A. Lorinskas of Crime Study Center; Richard Urbanick of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, Marion, Myles J. Jones a physician from Herrin, Thomas County.

Mary Lou Higgerson, an associate dean for personnel and budget for the College of Communications and Fine Arts at SIU-C, has been named an American Council on Education (ACE) Fellow for 1986-87.

The ACE fellows program selects academicians who have administrative potential and gives them working internships at cooperating colleges and universities. Thirty to 35 fellowship applicants are nominated annually at the national competition. ACE fellows are typically assigned to a president's office at their home institution or a guest office.

Higgerson said the details of her fellowship aren't complete, but that she will be working in the office of President Albert Somit.

Higgerson is an associate professor in speech communications and an associate dean in the College of Communications and Fine Arts since 1982. She is a former "Outstanding Teacher" award winner in the college that was selected as an Outstanding Young Woman of America in 1976.

She has a bachelor's degree from Clarion State College (now Clarion University), a master's degree from Central Michigan State University; and a Ph.D. in organizational communication from the University of Kansas.

That's right! We wanted to be able to tell you that Alabama will be at Fred's - but we can't. When we found that they were going to be in the area, we offered them a chance to play at Fred's. We even offered them $200 more than they were paying for their books at a local bookstore! Fred's pays their bands about $800! We know that Alabama had to travel a little further so we figured a bar offer would be $225 a man. ($5 extra for gas.) But they turned us down! It's happened before! A band cuts a record or two, gets a few disc pickers behind them and a band could get a good price for playing at Fred's! But hey, we're only $200 away! What are we to do? If we give in and raise our offer our bands would want more money. Hey, it's fair! And why shouldn't we? It's what's wrong with the $80-a-night gig? There's a lot of unemployed people in Southern Illinois that would jump at an offer to make a little money.

So Fred's is standing firm, we've got to raise our offer one dime, let alone $200 we now Alabama was holding out for. If they can't play at Fred's - it's their loss! They had the chance to play for 600-700 people! It thought Alabama could use the exposure!

And another thing: what kind of big-shot college is Alabama anyway? They hand out a humble enough to settle for city names like Manhattan Transfer, Oak Ridge Boys, Chicago, Bay City Rollers, Flesher, etc. But out this whole thing from the South. Why didn't they just go ahead and call themselves USA or North America "for that matter?"

We know Alabama accepted a gig somewhere in Carbondale on April 3. Well folks we have Charlie T. & The Family Tradition. It's your choice. You can opt for the humble Charlie Trier (who plays music for the fun of it) or this hoity-toity Alabama bunch who plays for the bucks.2

and Economic Research Associates developing strategies for economic growth in the area. Planning Resources has public meetings regarding the road scheduled for March 31 in the Hardin County Public School cafeteria, April 1 in the Goreville Elementary School cafeteria and April 2 in the Cobden Elementary School cafeteria. The meetings will begin at 7 p.m.

In addition to environmental concerns, other restrictions on the road include sharp turns, highly erodible soils and steep slopes along the present roadway.

The road would increase access to several recreational areas in the Shawnee National Forest, which stretches from the Mississippi River to the Ohio River, such as Garden of the Gods and Clear Springs. It would pass directly through Clear Springs, which is a proposed wilderness area.

Ann Phillipi, assistant professor of zoology, expressed concern over having the road pass through proposed wilderness areas. A proposed road would be a "large, expensive undisturbed area that is undeveloped," she explained.

"If a highway passes through the wilderness, it would be very unlikely for the government to declare the area a wilderness area," she said. Her main areas of concern are east of Okaro and west of Cobden.

But Stan Leiber, associate professor of geography, says the economic gain the road would provide outweighs its drawbacks. He estimates Southern Illinois could receive $75 million annually from tourism if the road is completed, based on preliminary economic studies. Leiber also argues that the Shawnee National Forest is not unique. It's not so special that we shouldn't touch it.

The federal government purchased the land now considered the Shawnee National Forest in 1933. "Why did people sell land in 1933? To get money, for worthless land," argues Leiber.

I am for a reasonable trade-off between economic development and preservation," says Leiber. But he stresses that "conservation means wise use, not no use."

Phillipi says she doesn't feel there will be a positive economic benefit from the project. She contends that the studies she has been shown on the road's economic benefits do not stand up to close inspection.

The road, which has a minimum right of way of 60 feet in the present study, would be designed to accommodate speeds of 30 mph on rolling ground and 60 mph on flat ground. However, a spokesperson responding to calls on the "River-to-River Hotline" operated by Planning Resources has explained the design speed does not mean people will necessarily travel at those speeds.

Presented speeds between 40 and 50 mph are being considered, but the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has suggested the highway will be too considered. Posted speeds will vary according to road conditions, explained Pat Richmond of the River-to-River Hotline.

According to information released by DeLeu, Cather & Co., "In those areas where additional right of way could be provided with no adverse impacts, a right of way width of 130 to 170 feet would be considered."

Other considerations would be relocation of existing road and right-of-way. "Stratifying the road would change the character and nature of the road," says Phillips.

Phillipi is a professor of zoology, American Cheese, Chips 'n' pickle (5pm - 7pm Mon.-Fri.), $1.00 Heinieken $1.00 St. Pauli Girl ALL DAY!

McDaniel's report said two units using unauthorized basement space for dwelling areas and two units using unauthorized attic space for dwelling areas and one unit using "Occupancy Prohibited" by code officials.

He said those units will be periodically checked to ensure compliance. Councilman John Yow, former city code enforcement director, said sometimes landlords instruct tenants not to permit code officials to enter their dwellings and stressed that tenants have the right to permit code officers to enter their residences.

"The inspections are for the good of the landlord and not for the good of the landlords necessarily," he said.

Westberg urges tenants to permit code officials to inspect their dwellings. He said that by making it easier for the code enforcement officials to conduct inspections, tenants would be making their own housing situations better.

Phillipi says she doesn't feel the road should be constructed at all. She feels Highway 141, which is located farther south than the proposed road, is the only acceptable alternative.

Leiber argues that Highway 141 is already developed and is also reasonably far away from recreational sites in Southern Illinois. He argues that opponents of the road "think trees have rights and people don't. Resources and areas are not significant, outside of man's existence."

"No decision has been made whether to build or not build this road. We are still seeking public input regarding issues of special information which should be considered by the project team. We are also looking for ideas on special features or attractions, which would enhance recreation and tourist potential," explains a letter from DeLeu, Cather & Co.

Illinois coal could be affected by $5 billion acid rain proposal

By Catherine Edman
Staff Writer

Illinois coal production and reserves are under some changes as a result of President Reagan's 1985 coal proposal. The $5 billion, five-year proposal benefits the United States to help alleviate acid rain.

According to James Swisher, director of the Illinois Mining and Mineral Resources Institute, Illinois says this is a step in the right direction.

Reagan has in the past skirted the issue of acid rain and his recent endorsement of this plan may mean that he is bowing to continuing pressure on him, Swisher said.

"I DON'T think that she situation is the crisis stage but the evidence is building that it is a problem that we have to start paying attention to," he said.

The institute, which is responsible for the coordinating Illinois coal research at SIUC, may receive additional funding for research as a result but it will have to compete with others to get it.

Swisher said the government will issue contracts to have the work done by private industries who would in turn subcontract to the institute if it is chosen to do the research.

Jewish ceremony prints on display

A series of prints by Mauricio Lasansky will be on display Thursday through April 30 at the University Museum.

The series focuses on the Kaddish, a Jewish mourning ceremony. It requests eternal bliss for the dead and peace for all mourners.

Lasansky has been a faculty member at the University of Iowa since 1945 and his prints are part of more than 100 public collections in museums in the United States, West Germany, Argentina, Mexico, Italy, Spain, Australia and other countries.

The University Museum is in the north wing of Fawor Hall. The museum is open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday and Sunday from 1:30 to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

Arson possible in cycle shop fire

Arson has not been ruled out as a cause for a fire that destroyed Cycletech, a motorcycle sales and service shop on Rt. 51 South, during spring break, according to a Carbondale Township Fire Department spokesman.

Residents of a neighbor reported the fire shortly after midnight on March 9, after hearing an explosion inside the shop. A fire department official said there were "motorcycles hale" inside the building. Only one wall was standing when the firefighters arrived.

Carbondale Township firefighters were assisted by Malokia and Carbondale fire crews in putting out the blaze.

A spokesman from Carbondale Township Fire Department said Cycletech was destroyed and loss estimates were around $100,000.

The state fire marshal is still investigating the blaze.
All quiet at ‘line of death’;
U.S. forces roam gulf freely

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Navy forces roamed freely deep in the Gulf of Sidra Wednesday without encountering Libyan opposition, and the battle for the U.S. right to cross Moammar Khadafy’s “line of death” appeared to be over, Pentagon sources said.

No hostilities were reported throughout the day by the three U.S. ships and planes of Task Force 60 in the gulf and the Mediterranean north of Libya. the Pentagon said. Sources said the ships steamed further into the gulf than ever before, but stayed outside the internationally recognized 12-mile limit off the Libyan coast.

The commander of the 6th Fleet, Vice Adm. Frank Kelso, later raised the possibility that U.S. forces had not sunk any Libyan missile boats. The Pentagon had said three were sunk during confrontations Monday and early Tuesday.

The Pentagon said missiles launched by U.S. light bombers and the cruiser Yorktown on Monday and early Tuesday sank at least three Libyan missile boats, damaged a fourth and knocked out the fire control radar at Sidra that directed batteries of Soviet-built SAM-5 anti-aircraft missiles.

The Pentagon said.

Later, however, Kelso told pool reporters aboard the aircraft carrier Saratoga that U.S. forces “definitely severely damaged” only two missile boats and that evaluations were under way of other “engagements.”

He also said only six SAM-5 missiles were fired by Libya. The Pentagon has said as many as 12 may have been launched against U.S. planes.

The discrepancies in the number of Libyan targets attacked and hit by U.S. ships and planes have been a source of confusion since hostilities erupted Monday.

The crash, touched off Monday when Soviet-made Libyan SAM-5’s missiles were fired at U.S. jets that had crossed Khadafy’s “line of death” across the mouth of the gulf, resulted in no American losses.

Pentagon sources said they expected the flight operations of three carriers positioned just north of the imaginary line to end as early as Thursday.

Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims declined to estimate when the maneuvers would end. Trei began Saturday and are scheduled to run until Tuesday.

Expecting that Libya might resort to more sinister reprisals for the U.S. defiance of Khadafy, the State Department said the United States was taking “every precaution” in light of evidence Libyan agents may be scouting American targets overseas for terrorist attacks.

Philadelphia future slim, company says

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Contac and Teldrin, recalled after several capsules were laced with rat poison, will be reintroduced to the market in a nationwide fashion/fitness expo Wednesday, the manufacturer said Wednesday.

Alan Wachter, a spokesman for SmithKline Beckman Corp., said the company had not yet decided whether the popular cold medicine Contact and the over-the-counter medicine, would be brought back as capsules or in another form.

Wachter indicated, however, that Dietac, an appetite suppressant, might not return to drugstore shelves. “Dietac is a minor product and its future is uncertain,” he said.

SmithKline said the recall of Contac, Teldrin and Dietac could cost $8 million.

Capsules of Contac, Teldrin and Dietac were pulled from the market in a nationwide recall last week after several capsules from Orlando, Fla., and Houston were found laced with rat poison.

The discovery of the poison followed calls from a man calling himself “Gary” who told news organizations and the company he had poisoned capsules in Orlando, Houston, St. Louis and Chicago.

The caller said he poisoned the drugs to force the removal of all capsules from the market; for safety reasons.

Bill Grigg, a spokesman for the Food and Drug Administration, said the agency’s laboratory had examined some 37,000 capsules from Orlando and Houston.

Synergy enables people to help themselves

By Sandy Merlie
Student Writer

The best way to help people is to help ourselves. In this way, we can help others — at least that’s the premise behind Synergy.

Synergy, 903 S. Illinois Ave., is a non-profit community-based agency that provides crisis intervention through a 24-hour phone line and walk-in service, counseling, referrals and emergency services such as food and gas.

The name “Synergy” means the same thing as the adage “Two heads are better than one,” said President of Synergy, Bringle-Naar, a volunteer at Synergy.

BRINGLE-NAAR, who has worked with the agency for three years, said its philosophy holds that people grow by helping themselves.

“Mostly, we help people clarify their situation,” she said.

Relationship-oriented problems, such as between boyfriends and girlfriends, exemplify the most common kinds of situations encountered at Synergy. Bringle-Naar added that many people mistakenly think that the agency deals with a lot of suicide situations.

“We may get one suicide call a month, and that’s a lot,” she explained.

She said the 24-hour walk-in service is Synergy’s most important function. “It helps people by letting them talk to real people.”

These “real live people” consist of about 100 volunteers who take turns working an average of one six-hour shift per week. Only four of Synergy’s staff members are paid, and that payment covers about half of the hours these staff members work, Bringle-Naar said.

Synergy receives some funds from UIUC and grants from Carbondale United Way, Big Muddy and the Illinois Attorney General’s Office. But the volunteers form the backbone of Synergy.

They undergo a 12-week training program, in which they concentrate on learning basic communication and monitoring phone calls. Bringle-Naar said Synergy does not require that volunteers have previous counseling experience.

“We look for interest, sincerity, clarity and good listening skills,” she said.

Volunteers come from various backgrounds and occupations. They are considered para-professional counselors. Synergy has one professional counselor, but the agency is not affiliated with a mental health association: one critic, some have of Synergy, Bringle-Naar said.

That also stands as one primary difference between Synergy and Network, the 24-hour crisis hotline, said Reid Christiansen, Network supervisor and member of the Jackson County Mental Health staff.

Network is funded by Jackson County Mental Health, which also trains Network volunteers.

“THERE ARE A lot of problems at Synergy requiring more expertise than what professionals can give,” Christiansen said, referring to the possibility of dangerous situations that Synergy volunteers might encounter, since they often deal with people in person, whereas Network is only a phone service.

If face-to-face counseling is needed, we can forward the individual to a bona fide counselor,” he added.

Although Synergy is not affiliated with a mental health association, local agencies don’t hesitate to use it. Social Services and churches refer people to Synergy, Bringle-Naar said.

Christiansen said that Network could not handle all of Synergy’s calls plus its own, adding that it would be an incredible work load. “We’d hate to lose Synergy,” he said. “It is a valuable referral, even for us.”

Soviet girl tours capital on peace visit

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Soviet schoolgirl Katya Lycheva arrived in the nation’s capital today in her whirlwind peace tour of the United States and met with American students at an elementary school.

Katya, a 13-year-old peacemaker whose U.S. trip is in memory of American schoolgirl Samantha Smith, arrived at Washington’s National Airport and was whisked away to an elementary school in the city’s northern suburbs.

She was expected to meet Mayor Marion Barry today, but no meeting with President Reagan was planned. On Thursday, Katya will tour the city’s historic sites.

In New York Tuesday, Katya visited the United Nations, met with sixth-graders at a Bronx school.

She was greeted Tuesday morning at the United Nations with a medal from Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, who is also the UN’s general-secretary.

“I want to come here to express the desire of Soviet children for peace,” she said in New York. “I want the International Year of Peace to last forever and nothing would stop the arms race,” Katya later said, through interpreter of her U.N. mission.

This house is dedicated to peace and is for the future of the children of the world, of the United States, the Soviet Union and children everywhere that the United Nations was created,” she said in a message to Katya.

The United States may get scant international support for its military action against Libya and also may now be targeted for terrorist attacks by Libyan sympathizers, according to the view of a U.S. political scientist Manfred Landecker.

Landecker, whose field is international politics, says the United States' decision to continue naval maneuvers at a time when nations are hoping for productive peace talks may draw criticism from European countries.

"MY PERCEPTION of European countries' positions is that they would think we've been too aggressive - pursuing a sort of chip-on-the-shoulder foreign policy," Landecker said.

Although European governments talk a lot for Moammar Khadafy and his national policies, they feel shackled by economic and trade considerations.

"EUROPEAN COUNTRIES certainly aren't sympathetic. They wish Khadafy would go away. But they're not sure. It's their perception that their hands are tied. There are still very extensive contacts in natural gas and oil and tourism," Landecker said.

Right now, the European community is gummed up for more "level-headed" somwhat cooler environment in world affairs to promote productive peace talks between the United States and the Soviet Union, Landecker said.

"OBVIOUSLY THE inclusion of Libya and the in-conductive to promoting those talks, and in that sense, Europe's reaction will be negative," he said.

"We could have declared the principle of open seas without necessarily being provoked with these naval exercises," he added.

Landecker's analysis is that Libya's Arab neighbors also will side with Khadafy. While it may only be a show of support on other Arab countries, Landecker said the United States could have predicted that this kind of confrontation between a Third World nation and the United States would solidify Arab sympathy for Khadafy.

Landecker DEBUTS that the Libyan skirmishes will push the Soviet Union and the United States into open conflict, but says the United States is now a high-risk target for more terrorism - attacks against American installations and workers overseas, and European civilians, as well.

He regards the Libyan actions as well as those in Nicaragua, Honduras and the recent U.S.-Libya test as "suggestive of a 'chip on the shoulder' model for international policy making."

"I THINK THERE'S a realization that this administration only has too many years left to make a difference, and they're acting on their values, which is to be provocative at this point," Landecker said.

But Landecker credits the Reagan administration with doing a good job of convincing the American people of the direction in which the country needs to go.

"Comments suggest that the American public is supportive of these short-run actions of our government," Landecker said. "I think the Reagan administration has probably seen signals correctly and done something that politicians and the public as a whole are prepared to support."
Church leaders urge President to halt testing

WASHINGTON (UPI) - More than 166 religious leaders, including 53 Roman Catholic and Protestant bishops and 11 rabbi, urged President Reagan Wednesday to join the Soviet Union and immediately suspend nuclear testing.

In a letter to Reagan, the religious leaders said one of those moments is at hand "where decisive action can change the course of history."

"We URGE YOU to take that essential next step: Immediately call a halt to nuclear test explosions until the summit meeting and indicate your willingness to a further extension if the Soviets do not resume testing," the letter said.

"As religious leaders in a nation which places great reliance on religious values, we are deeply troubled by our nation's growing reliance on weapons of mass destruction as our source of security," the letter said.

"THROUGHOUT THE Scriptures, nations are warned not to trust in weapons and warriors for security, but in God. To do otherwise, Scripture teaches, is to invite destruction and history is littered with the remains of those who ignored this warning," the letter said.

Signers of the letter came from across the religious spectrum and even included one Mormon signer, Edwin B. Furguson, professor of law at the University of Utah, who joined 21 Episcopal bishops, 20 Methodist bishops, from both black and white denominations, seven Lutheran bishops, four Roman Catholic bishops and one bishop from the Moravian Church.

MORMONS NORMALLY do not sign open letters with members of other denominations.

In addition to the bishops and rabbis, signers included the general secretary of the National Council of Churches and the heads of the American Baptist Churches, Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), Church of the Brethren, National Baptist Convention USA, Reformed Church in America, Religious Society of Friends, United Church of Christ and the Unitarian Universalist Association.

A DELEGATION of the signers of the letter were scheduled to meet later in the day with State Department officials, according to a spokesman for the group.

Asia Bennett, executive director of the American Friends Service Committee, said last weekend, a test by the United States was "a provocative and distressing act."

"BUT DESPITE that test, the United States can still keep alive the promise of a mutual test," the letter said. "If the president will now announce a halt to U.S. testing," she said.

"This will be in the president's court," said Rabbi Balfour Brincker of the Stephen Wise Free Synagogue in New York. "There will be no more nuclear test explosions as a result of that by either side unless President Reagan continues to give the go-ahead. If he does, then the arms race is off and running again."

11 more killed in S. Africa as police fire into crowd

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) - Police opened fire on a crowd of blacks in a Johannesburg township Wednesday, killing 11 and bringing to 25 the number of deaths in the bloodiest 24 hours in South Africa in a year, authorities said.

Security forces clashed with blacks in several violence-torn townships and the tribal homeland of Bophuthatswana, authorities said.

In Eghothathsiana, security forces said they opened fire on a crowd of blacks this morning who were allegedly holding an illegal meeting, killing 11 people.

Police spokesman Col. M.A. Motlop of the tribal homeland said dozens of people were injured and about 1,000 arrested in daylong rioting in the homeland, 50 miles north of Johannesburg.

Authorities in Pretoria said police in Port Elizabeth's black township of Kwa-akale fired on the crowd of blacks today when it attacked the state-run liquor store, killing eight.

Police killed two more men in Kwaazale late Tuesday when about 2,000 blacks attacked a police patrol with gasoline bombs, authorities said.

11 killed in bombings in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - A car bomb turned a crowded street into a inferno Tuesday, killing 11 and another bomb gutted an apartment in Christian east Beirut Wednesday as rival artillerymen pounded the capital and its outskirts. At least 11 people died and more than 100 were injured in the explosions that killed six people and wounded about 80 others were aimed at offices of a Christian political party loyal to President Amin Gemayel.

People who illegally park in handicapped parking spaces are setting themselves up for financial loss, says Marilyn Hogan, parking manager. Violators are subject to a $50 fine and towing charges if possible. If they can't be located, workers spot the car, she said.

Hogan said people ticketed illegally in handicapped parking because it's closer to their cars than the spaces they don't want to walk. Many times

Seminar on future of books

The future of books in a society that relies heavily on electronic technology will be discussed during a daylong seminar from 8:30 a.m. to 5:15 p.m. Wednesday in the Morris Library Auditorium.

The seminar is geared for Southern Illinois' librarians and teachers. The featured speaker will be Lawrence W. "Bill" Towner, director of the Newberry Library, Chicago.

His morning session speech is titled "Small, Portable, Handicapped parking are the ones who report offenders to the police, she said.

"You must be handicapped to park in handicapped parking," said Hogan. Also, if someone is driving a handicapped person's car, the handicapped person must be in the car with the driver in the parking lot in designated spaces.

Ron Blosser, of Disabled Student Services on campus, said his office issues about 80 or 90 handicapped parking permits to faculty, staff and students per year who are permanently disabled. The permits are valid for campus handicapped parking spaces, but not city streets.

Handicapped parking spaces are closer to classrooms or pedestrian paths, and are three-and-a-half-feet wider than most other parking spaces on campus, said Blosser. The extra width gives handicapped parked spaces permits the operation of a van wheelchair lift, or allows car doors to be opened fully to provide enough room to maneuver freely, he said.

Student comic’s ‘nerd’ image stands up in quest for success

By Maureen Cavanagh
Staff Writer

Jim Berridge is in the big business of comedy. As a young comedian attempting to become professional, he banks on laughs. "It started as a hobby," said the junior in radio and television, "and it’s really gotten out of hand now."

Berridge, 21, and an O’Fallon native, transferred to SIU-C this semester from Belleville Area College. He said he first became interested in becoming a comedian after his friends in O’Fallon encouraged him to enter a contest sponsored by KSHE-FM in St. Louis. The winner got two tickets to theFunny Bone nightclub to see Larry "Bud" Melman.

ALTHOUGH BERRIDGE lost the contest for his own comedy routine because he was, in his words, "horrible," he pursued his interest and called Funny Bone to perform as an "open-mike" the following week. He bombed again. After that, Berridge was off to Georgia for his training with the National Guard.

"It took me four and a half days to dislocate my knee," he said. While he was inactive and waiting to be sent home, he said there was nothing to do but "play games with your mind and wrestle," he dreamt up a character whom he dubbed Alvin.

UPON HIS return, he performed his act in St. Louis and it became a hit. He says the stage character was inspired by several comedians but mostly derived from his own personal life. "I took everything that I knew stood out about me, all the things I’ve done to me and I blew them out of proportion. Then I added features of stage characters that other comics use that I really like and knew that I could play.

"For instance, I got gesture from Howie Mandel. I got the basis of my character from being real dead pan and laid-back from Steve Martin, and bit of innocence from Lily Tomlin’s character, Edith."

BERRIDGE said he keeps his comic in mind. He Flairs it out on all sides and tils his glasses. He wears an old, wrinkled maroon jacket. It’s ripped out and he buttons the sleeves unequally. He hac’his mother fix blue jeans with unusual pant leg lengths, and he wears only one shoe. Alvin is like someon from "Revenge of the Nerds," he explains.

Some of the act, although "corny as hell" can knock an audience "dead," Berridge said.

I have a standard way that I start: all the acts, we’ve got quite a few little trademarks as far as what he says and does on stage.

ALVIN, WHOM everyone, including his girlfriend, calls "Maggol," carries a blue denim bag that he drops, and it crashes on stage. Then, he stumbled to another microphone stand, which inevitably needs to be lowered for 5-foot-4 Berridge.

I’lI stand there and stare off in space and sniffle until people start to laugh," he said. "I will not twitch or move until I get at least one chuckle out of the audience, which sets up my first joke. The first thing I say is “I’ve got a lot of problems, in a whiny, whimpier voice.”

“SOMETIMES, if they laugh hard enough I’ll say, “That ain’t funny. That’s the clean version of it, though. Berridge said he added a "disgusting" feature to Alvin, which is a bulge that runs down the inside of his pant leg about half way down the shin.

"The character is very, very bizarre" to say the least, he noted.

He named the character Alvin because he used to be a hit with a Southern accent.

WHEN I first started doing it," Berridge said, "I was afraid to stray from my act. Since then, my mind has began to develop as far as spon- taneity goes. I’m not nervous on stage anymore I enjoy it. Instead of getting nervous right before I go on stage, I get excited.

It’s not just comic lingo, says Berridge. "You can really feel the pulse of an audience.

Now, he plays at two Funny Bone comedy clubs: in St. Louis, the Westport club in the Westport Plaza and the South County club. Some Mondays he performs at the Westport club, at the "Best of St. Louis," and every other Monday night he performs "open mike night" at the South County club. On Tuesday nights, if he can make it, he plays during "open mike night" at the Westport club. Wednesday nights when school is not in session, he performs at the Off-1st nightclub in St. Louis.

STEVEN WRIGHT is the one comedian Berridge says he wants to emulate.

"He is definitely my style. He stares off into space and speaks in a monotone like he’s on qualaudes or something." The comedian Berridge says he respects the most is Bill Cosby, because Cosby performs a "cleaner".

"Being a comic myself, I find it really difficult to just go out and do even a 20-minute show without using a four-letter word to really be funny. Bill Cosby does it for an hour or hour and a half and doesn’t use one four-letter word."

"JUST ABOUT anyone can tell a good dirty joke. I use some bad language, but the words are tools of the character. The mere shock of the words does not account for the laughs, he said.

"I don’t like Eddie Murphy very much," Berridge says, "not because he’s foul, but because I don’t think there’s very much talent there. He’s a good comedic actor. I’ll grant that.

"Woody Allen I’ve been compared to a lot, and I think it’s a great compliment because he’s another person who my base looks and build are very similar to. I wouldn’t be surprised if, in about 10 or 15 years, I’m still doing something like him.

As a student, Berridge said he only performs at open-mike clubs to get experience, but eventually he hopes to "control his own career.

Berridge, who has been performing around the area for the past year, feels that his success is due to his "nerd" image, which is different from the usual comedy image.

"I think Alvin is just like me," Berridge said. "In a way, I wish everyone was like me. I don’t like the typical comic image of the guy who’s wearing glasses and no one knows his name. It’s like, ‘Hey, you’re just walking around the stage. I wish I was a different guy."

His own image, he said, is like "the guy next door. I don’t want to be one of these people who are so corny. I’m not a socially out student, but I definitely am a nerd."
comedy, if my act isn't very similar to Allen's.

THE LAST time he performed, Berridge said his lines were 50 percent improvisation. The ratio, he says, is usually about 80 percent prepared material that he writes himself.

He says he has received good response from people in the business and, he said, "If I were to quit college now, I just might be able to make a living at it."

"You have to start out doing one-nighters, which is what I'm going to be doing this summer. Hopefully, that will lead to an entire week in a comedy club as an opening act."

IF THAT is a success, then Journalism jobs available through minority program

The American Society of Newspaper Editors is sponsoring a summer job program for college freshmen and sophomores, and are Asian-American, black, Hispanic and Native American, under its Project Focus program.

The program has been designed to secure summer jobs for minorities at their hometown newspapers to expose them to the newsroom environment. The ASNE program's intention is to attract minority youth toward choosing print journalism majors and careers upon graduation.

Employment lasts from six to 12 weeks and pays minimum wage. ASNE will grant a $250 bonus for students who successfully complete the program.

Application deadline is Tuesday. Applications are available in the Black Affairs Council Office on the third floor of the Student Center.

Phew! It's tough sometimes to listen to these. He says he has never encountered "an entirely hostile" audience, although one guy did get kind of mad when he shot him with a plastic dart gun one time.

"It gets a tremendous laugh and hecklers shut up and leave me alone. I'm not doing it to hurt or embarrass them.

With my character, I show a lot of faults that I think the people see in themselves. Alvin really strikes a chord with people."

HE SAID his worst experience was at a club that attracted about a dozen drunks. After delivering about three or four minutes of his act, amidst the chattering of people, a mug of beer flew by and smashed the wall behind him. He sort of shuffled off, went out the back door, went home and forgot about it.

The hardest thing about being a comedian is being critical of yourself and controlling your ego."

"It's been a long time since I've bombed," he said, "although it sounds concocted."

NO ONE can accuse Berridge of being underconfident.

"All these things are developing within me. My sense of humor, my ability to write, my timing has never been sharper and I've developed consistency.

Not allowing the audience to "intimidate you is the key. If they see you sweating, you might as well pack up," Berridge said. He also does not drink alcohol before going on stage.

"If you do well at night after night after night, your head just gets bigger and bigger. All of a sudden, you're ready for the Letterman show, and, at a moment's notice, a needle can come along and pop it."

BERRIDGE SAID it's "humbling" to go see the professionals. "Ninety percent of the time you're going to be overwhelmed."

Scientist say new virus could lead to AIDS cure

ROSTON (UPI) — Researchers said Wednesday they have found a new, possibly harmless, "close relative" of the AIDS virus in healthy adults, a discovery that could eventually lead to a vaccine for the deadly disease.

At the same time, scientists at the Institute Pasteur in Paris said they had discovered a new form of AIDS virus in two male AIDS patients in Senegal who showed no signs of the viruses previously believed to cause AIDS.

Harvard scientists said their newly discovered virus may be part of the family tree of the AIDS virus, and similarities between the two may lead to the discovery of a vaccine able to teach the body to recognize and fight the AIDS virus without causing a fatal immune deficiency.

The HTLV-4 virus, a member of the family that generally causes cancer and is isolated by researchers at the Harvard School of Public Health from 10 patients, has been linked from about 15 healthy people in Senegal. HTLV-3, the virus believed to cause AIDS.

The French called their virus LAV-2. They had reported just before U.S. researchers that LAV-1 was the cause of AIDS. LAV-1 and HTLV-3 have since been found to be nearly identical.

The HTLV-4 virus bears a striking resemblance to one found in healthy African green monkeys, leading researchers to believe it may have crossed the biological bridge from animal to man.

In the same way that the smallpox vaccine was created using the cowpox virus, it may be possible to use new virus to mimic the molecular "envelope" of the AIDS virus, which is known as HTLV-III, said Dr. Phyllis Kantki, a veterinarian and Harvard research fellow who spearheaded the research.

"If you believe that the monkey virus and the new virus and the AIDS virus at some point in time were related," Kantki said, "then you can say there must be some element of the envelope that is the same, that never changes.

And that conserved part may be important for the vaccine," Kantki said. "We think it provides a new approach to vaccine development that we didn't previously have."

So far, the new virus has only been found in healthy people, including prostitutes, heterosexual pregnant women and others. Since writing the report that will appear in the April 11 issue of the journal Science, the team has found the virus in about 35 more people, Kantki said.

If HTLV-4 proves to be harmless, it may be used in a vaccine itself. But the strain's existence also indicates nature may have produced other AIDS-like viruses that could be used.

The discovery also removes a chief stumbling block in the search for an AIDS vaccine by providing a reference point for scientists trying to identify the particular parts of the AIDS virus that cause the disease.

However, before the discovery of the new virus can be put to use in finding a vaccine, researchers must learn more about its molecular structure.

Shuttle crash causes need for rockets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A top Air Force official, saying shuttles may be grounded for one to two years, said Wednesday it appears the nation will need to more expendable rockets and another shuttle to meet the launch backlog caused by the Challenger disaster.

Air Force Undersecretary Edward Aldridge said the additional Titan rockets will cost an estimated $2.5 billion over the next five years and NASA has said a shuttle to replace Challenger will cost $2.8 billion over a similar period.

Aldridge told a Senate appropriations subcommittee that a White House task force has not yet made a recommendation to President Reagan on the need for more rockets and another shuttle, but Aldridge said it appears there is a "general consensus" for such a proposal.

"We strongly support procurement of a Titan III," Aldridge said.

Aldridge said the Challenger loss has created a "national emergency" that highlighted the "universality of our reliance on a single space transportation system" for all satellite launchings.

"The objective of our recovery strategy should be to learn from this tragic lesson and rebuild a stronger and more balanced national capability that is largely independent of failures in a given system."

Rear Adm. Richard Truly, NASA's new shuttle chief, agreed that a replacement shuttle is needed and he said a combination of shuttles and expendable rockets "appears to offer the best and most effective approach through at least 1995."

Before the shuttle accident eight weeks ago, NASA officials said the then-fleet of four shuttles would be able to accommodate all military as well as civilian and foreign satellite launch needs.

Men netters face challenge of seven teams

By Martin Folan
Black River

The Saluki men’s tennis team awaits its second major challenge of the season as it prepares to hit the road for a field of seven qualified teams at the Mid-America Invitational Thursday through Saturday at Wichita, Kansas.

The top three teams in the Missouri Valley and Big Eight Conferences and two randomly picked teams will vie for the No. 1 berth.

SIU-C will face top-seeded Oklahoma State in the first round, with the winner advancing to play the winner of the Oklahoma-Nebraska match, said Saluki coach Dick LeFevre. The losers will drop to the left side of the tournament schedule.

Tulsa will meet Oral Roberts University and Kansas will face Wichita State in the bottom bracket. The winners will meet on the left side of the championship bracket, and the losers will aim for a third place finish.

Saluki No. 1 singles player Per Wadmark, still nursing a tender ankle, may return as tournament champion, LeFevre said.

"If Per is playing well he could win all of his singles matches," he said.

Wadmark lost to the No. 2 seed from Oklahoma at last year’s tournament but LeFevre hopes no doubts about any of his players.

Saluki No. 2 singles player Chris Visconti will have quality competition across the net, but LeFevre said he believes Visconti will rise above the challenge.

Matchplay for freshman Jairo Aldana, Saluki No. 3 singles player, may be his toughest because of his competitors’ experience.

"Jairo ... he’ll be playing with some top people," LeFevre said, regarding Aldana’s first season of collegiate tennis versus the experience of his opponents.

At Nos. 4, 5 and 6 singles, LeFevre says either Lars Nilsson, Fabiano Ramos or Juan Martinez may advance to the winner’s bracket.

Win or lose, LeFevre said his team will return more well-prepared to bring home the MVC crown.

"We schedule the kids to go where they can play the best competition," LeFevre said.

British police arrest perilous soccer fans

LONDON (UPI) – Police Wednesday arrested seven people they described as Britain’s most violent soccer supporters in a series of dawn raids aimed at cracking down on the so-called “British disease of soccer hooliganism.”

In an operation nicknamed “Owl Goal,” which had been planned for four months, 45 officers swooped on seven homes in and around London and seized a spiked knuckle duster, blackjacks, knives, a sword, a crossbow and two air rifles.

British soccer violence has disfigured stadiums throughout Europe for almost 15 years. In the worst incident, rioting supporters from England’s Liverpool club were blamed for starting a stampede at the Heysel stadium in Brussels last May in which 39 people were killed.

Mexico is alarmed about the prospect of British fans travelling to this year’s World Cup finals.

The British government and the Football Associations of England, Scotland and Northern Ireland have issued a blacklist of violent fans whom they have urged the Mexican authorities not to admit.

Travel companies in Britain have been advised to issue plane tickets only to genuine fans with tickets for World Cup matches and to check their names against the blacklist.
Holmes calls Spinks bout 'reveng'e'

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — Heavyweight champion Holmes, who lost his International Boxing Federation heavyweight title to Michael Spinks last fall, Wednesday said he might drop his hands in their June 19 rematch "to see what he's got."

Holmes, champion for 7 1/2 years, will be 26 when he and Spinks enter the ring the Las Vegas Hilton in the second of at least seven bouts in the Heayweight World Series to unify the title.

"They call this fight vindication," Holmes said at a news conference. "I call it revenge. I feel the same way as when I left the ring on the 22nd of September, that I didn't lose. I'm the man and no way in hell can a light heavyweight win that upset.

"He predicts he'll knock me out. He has the opportunity. He won't have to look for me. You might see me walk into McCandless with my hands down to see what he's got."

Holmes, who already is training in Las Vegas, said he expects much from Spinks, the five-lightweight champion, to capture the heavyweight championship.

"I hope it's on television," Holmes said, "but I haven't gotten much for the running. I feel born again and I'm going to take full advantage of it.

"Spinks, seven years younger than Holmes, laughed off the thought that he ran to the champion.

"I didn't run," he said, "and I wasn't a lightweight that night. I was a heavyweight. In the game of boxing, it's not standing there toe-to-toe, although I did that when he held on to me.

"Plan A has got to be seen. He wants it, he's got it. I want to Plan B in the fight. If he wants to wrestle, play football, ice hockey, soccer ... whatever he wants, he's got. I'll be there to do it."

Age, Spinks said, had nothing to do with the September 22nd fight.

Spinks said he did not see last Saturday's opening bout of the series — Trevor Berwick's victory over Pinklon Thomas for the World Council heavyweight title — as "care who won," he said. "I want to win, (the tournament). I need it. When the smoke clears and everyone tries to get the smoke and blood away, I'll be there.

Saluki woman golfer earns Gateway honor

For capturing first place in her opening spring performance, Tina Kozlowski earned Gateway Golfer of the Week honors.

Kozlowski's 199 total notched a career low, netted fifth place among individuals in the event and led the Salukis to a third place team finish.

Alt. coach Sonya Stalbergen said Kozlowski deserves the honor.

Soldier Field lease dispute continues

(UPI) — The Chicago Bears will continue discussing their lease of the Chicago Park District to work out a new agreement that will be agreed to by both parties, Bears President Michael McCaskey said.

The team will play "tough, aggressive and smart" defense if the park district over lease problems at Soldier Field. But also is looking at suburban sites for a new stadium, McCaskey said Tuesday.

"We are not becoming hysterical about this," he said. "They're reasonable men at the park district and we'll try to talk through our problems and see if we can't come to a solution.

The Bears lease at Soldier Field runs through 1999, but speculation that a lapse in insurance coverage for the Bears during last season's playoff games may be enough to void the lease, officials said.

The Bears made the comments after the team put its $20,000 sterling silver Super Bowl trophy on display at the State of Illinois Center.

The Bears moved the trophy from their Lake Forest headquarters to allow fans to see it more. Bears fans have admired it and see pictures. It will be at the state building, enclosed in a glass case, for two or three weeks.

McCaskey expressed concern about the trophy's safety after hearing about the theft of an 18-ton statue of one of the city's parks earlier this year, but he said guards promised to guard it if it were their own.

The Tiffany-designed trophy, named after former Bears star Bear Packer and Washington Redskins coach Vince Lombardi, was unveiled at opening ceremonies Tuesday.

Final four expected to channel over $7 million into Dallas' tills

The No. 1 Final Four basketball tournament is expected to attract an estimated 15,000 to 20,000 spectators this weekend who are expected to pump more than $7 million into the local economy, according to the Dallas Chamber of Commerce. An official at the Chamber of Commerce said he expects the figure to be around $7.7 million, with basketball fans spending mainly at hotels and motels at restaurants, as well as for entertainment, souvenirs and rental cars.

Reunion Arena, site of the tournament, normally seats 17,000 but the capacity will be reduced to less than 16,400 because of the hosting of media personnel sent to cover the tournament.

Officials within the Chamber of Commerce say the impact of the tournament could be worth a lot more than the projected $7 million because of business that may be directed to the Dallas area in the future.

be 'trendy.' Gymnastics continues to be one of the most popular sports in the Olympic Games, and with proper promotions, the SIU's women's gymnastics is a sport that could be one of the hottest sports on campus.

It's interesting, Undergraduate Student Government Chairman from Evergreen Terrace, suggested that we 'wait out the storm' on dropping gymnastics because other schools are doing it, while the feeling in saying we are 'jumping ship at the wrong time.'

The team has been called both in Spillman, Jennifer Moore, and Drew Romeo, and Dan DeFosse, plus his and Dawn Romeo, plus two recruits who have given verbal commitments to the team. With time, the Salukis could become that powerhouse they once were.

DeFosse called gymnastics 'in its current state an educated art form' and said the reason it can continue to be talked about with other student organizations before a decision is made. It's unfortunate that this decision was pushed through so quickly since no time was given for the Graduates and Professional Student council and the USO to consider it and see if it could have been done differently.

There's no disputing the fact that women's gymnastics has DECISION, page 28 up that ratio and the athletics departments are in big trouble for areas. If the "line item budget" doesn't strike fear in the hearts of those who know that athletics (24 members on 1986 field hockey team vs. nine members on the 1986 gymnastics team) Dan DeFosse , a USO student and assistant swimming coach at the time, was the decision made and the committee who the women had been asked to add in to make more money. Help can we not just find more money and then we can save the program. DeFosse, ever the knight in shining armor, suggested.

I'm sure Livingston, West and some people in the athletics department would like to know where Mr. DeFosse suggested this money be found. Perhaps DeFosse plans on giving the university and campus a treasure map, or a secret scientific way to follow rainbows to pots of gold. Maybe, as one IAAC coach suggested, one solution would be to find a bunch of candles in support of the athletics programs.

It's easy to sympathize to Vogel and gymnastics, and the gymnasts who planned on coming here next season, and it's even easier to wonder if the right decision was made.

There was a cold heart not to feel the second highest per capita cost of any sport. The budget for women's gymnastics this fiscal year was just over $80,000, compared to a little more than $70,000 spent on field hockey, one of the other sports considered for termination.

Coach Herb Vogel suggested that better promotion of gymnastics meets would generate some income. Come to think of it, when was the last time you heard on the radio or TV an announcement of an upcoming gymnastics meet? Everyone has heard about basketball, baseball and football games to be played in the near future. Even a 30-second spot telling who's competing, where and when, would be helpful in building attendance.

Gymnastics is not a sport included in the Gateway Conference. Illinois State has also dropped the sport, leaving Illinois State the only Gateway school to offer the sport. But why the trend? The Salukis currently compete at the Division I level, which is much higher than competing in a lower division.

The women's team might be willing to drop to a lower division rather than not to be able to compete at all. But that's entirely academic now because the team was never given the chance. The team asked the first question that comes to mind at a meeting like this, "Why my sport?" The athletics directors or their answer dealt mainly with finances, but he also mentioned the fact that only five gymnasts could make the team and that was an disadvantage to the action. Eliminating field hockey, for example, would affect 24 athletes.

Oh, now that's a good reason. There are only nine gymnasts, so let's kill the sport. It doesn't matter that they've been at it for 25 years. How many other sports have had that kind of record? And now for the $64,000 question. What about Michelle? Spillman, a junior has set four SIU all-time scoring records but will not be an athlete without a sport. She (and the other remaining team members) could transfer to other schools, but there is always the possibility of losing credits, not getting a scholarship or just not fitting in.

The gymnasts and their families spent a lot of time deciding what school had the offer to them in terms of gymnastics as well as academic merits. It's a shame they didn't know they were boarding a sinking ship.

Dogs’ defense shaky game one of twinbill

By Ron Warnick
Staff Writer

The baseball Salukis’ erratic defense caused a 13-6 loss in the rainy first game of a Wednesday doubleheader against the Below East gymnasts on the women’s national team. The Saluki’s defensive breakdowns cost them six errors.

The defense of the women’s gymnastics program is now that the men’s basketball team has just earned a bid to the NCAA tournament.

The team and their coach feel that if the they had been held earlier directors thought they could probably run the 13-6 lead. Garcia thought that it would not have been an easy decision for either one of our top athletic administrators.

Another problem is that the academic world, combined with the pressure they have been under, has not been easy.

Athletics Director Jim Smith has not been easy.

Auburn, although a relatively new comer on the SIU scene, has proved that he is open, willing to talk and not afraid of being a man of both thought and action.

Combine the assets of the two, and they could match any team in the country. Heck, they’ve been in the business longer than our presidents.

Would these two be telling us something if they didn’t believe it was true?

From the presentation made to the IAAC Tuesday afternoon, it was clear that a lot of time, effort and thought had been put into the decision. It could not have been an easy decision for either one of our top athletic administrators.

After all, they are here to administer athletics — why would they be cutting part of their own jobs?

Some questioned the timing of the announcement. But it was said if there was any mistake, it was in announcing it a year or two too late. And Livengood stressed the importance of solving the issue by April 9, national letter of intent day.

To wait past that deadline would have cost the school more money — for the next four years.

Others asked why something so serious was not communicated to the student-athletes from the spotlight than gymnastics — something like football, hockey, women’s basketball shouldn’t be playing anyway — wasn’t cut instead.

With the Office of Civil Rights monitoring SIU for compliance to Title IX, cutting 24 women athletes would have more impact on the 60 percent male-to-female ratio that must be maintained.
