Library Buys Works Of Expatriate Writers

Hemingway, Miller, Stein Among Authors In Collection

The "left bank" of the Big Muddy now has something in common with the famed Left Bank of Paris--works, manuscripts and letters of English and American expatriates who made Paris the world's literary hub in the Twenties and Thirties.

Director of SIU libraries Ralph McCoy announced yesterday that the library has acquired an extensive collection of expatriate material from New York collector Philip Kaplan. No price was given.

The collection includes more than 600 book titles by 250 authors; 1100-plus letters and manuscripts by 75 authors, and more than 700 "little magazines." The "little magazines" are obscure, usually short-lived, periodicals which contain some of the first writings of the expatriates and served as sounding boards for avant garde ideas.

According to SIU rare book librarian Ralph Bushee, the collection includes material by Henry Miller, Lawrence Durrell, Hart Crane, Gertrude and Leo Stein, William Carlos Williams, Ford Maddox Ford, Ernest Hemingway and Harry and Ceresse Crosby.

"This is an extremely significant collection," Bushee said, "and ties in well with the library's present holdings--particularly the James Joyce collection.

"A great many of these people knew Joyce, and were friends of his. Some typed his manuscripts," he said.

Over 125 letters and manuscripts by Kay Boyle will be added to a growing manuscript collection of Miss Boyle's work. The two-time O. Henry Short Story award winner lectured here in April.

The library already owns the typescript to Lawrence Durrell's Mountolive, plus many letters. To these will be added eight relatively obscure titles of earlier Durrell writing plus another letter.

Other items include 200 letters by Henry Miller written just prior to and after, publication of Tropic of Cancer in 1934; an unpublished film scenario by Jean Genet; two corrected typescripts of books by Ford Maddox Ford, and 46 letters by William Carlos Williams.

An expatriate usually overshadowed by the Hemingways, Steins and Joyces in discussion of the Twenties, but who was closely associated with many of the people in Paris, is Bob Brown. Brown died recently, but in the Twenties and Thirties he was deeply involved with the expatriates, writing and attempting to find more efficient means of communication.

The rare book library currently has an annotated copy by Brown of a book written on the expatriates, plus five lengthy letters given to the library in April by Dr. H. K. Croessman.

"This collection adds substantially to Morris library's growing stature," McCoy said. "More importantly," he continued, "it contributes greatly to the amount of original material available for graduate programs and faculty scholarship."

Activities Honors Day Set Thursday

Outstanding students and faculty members in co-curricular activities will be recognized on Activities Honors Day Thursday at 10 a.m. in McAndrew Stadium.

The program, which was attended by almost 1,700 people last year, has been planned this year to be short because of the heat and is expected to last less than one hour. Choral selections by the University Male Glee Club will open and close the convocation. Dick Childers, outgoing student body president, will deliver a short commentary before the presentation of awards.

Jim Sappenfield, president of Sphinx Club, will welcome into the honorary 18 junior men and women and several faculty members who have contributed outstanding leadership to the university through its co-curricular program. Miss Elizabeth Mullins, co-ordinator of student activities and an honorary faculty member of the group, said that students who are elected by the Sphinx Club for membership must have been involved intensively in one area of activities, such as music or art, or must have exhibited service broadly in many areas. The members, 18 of whom are tapped for membership each spring and seven who are selected each fall, "usually have a four point average or higher," she said.

About 60 students will receive student council merit recognition awards. For the awards, each SIU club and living unit has selected one person whom its members believe has given the organization outstanding service. Certificates will also be presented to over 70 students who have displayed an outstanding service record in student government.

Other presentations will be certificates of merit to 22 faculty members who have been advisors to student organizations for two or more years and four student government distinguished service awards to organizations and programs which have made distinguished contributions to the university.

Also on the program will be the introduction of new members in Cap and Tassel,

SIU Intellectual Atmosphere 'Too Fine For Improvement'

The intellectual atmosphere at SIU cannot be improved, said Charles S. Blinderman, assistant professor of English, speaking before the "Aims of Education" conference audience at University Center Saturday morning.

Reasons given by Blinderman were that the intellectual atmosphere at SIU was already so fine that any tampering with it would result in a rarefication, and that the women's activity and scholarship honorary, and the recognition of Southern's outstanding freshman and sophomore man and woman as selected by the Sphinx Club.

In case of rain the convocation will be held in Shryock Auditorium.

forces retarding the improvement of an intellectual atmosphere were too firmly entrenched at SIU to allow for improvement.

Jim Barlow, educational affairs commissioner of student government, who was in charge of the planning for the conference, said that the conference had achieved its goals in that the 40 students attending appeared to be stimulated to think about what their aims of education were.

Council To Look Into Report Of Possible Parking Fee Hike

A Student Council committee has been named to investigate a reported proposal to hike the price of parking decals.

The action was taken after last Thursday night's council meeting when a council member, who serves on the University Parking Committee, reported the possible increase. It would affect more than 3,000 students and faculty members.

John Rendleman, chairman of the parking committee and executive director of business affairs, said his committee had discussed parking fees.

But he added "no action has been taken nor will be taken until complete information has been prepared for the president and the Board."

He pointed out that the parking committee is "just an advisory group" and any recommendation to the Board of Trustees would "have to be made by the President when he returns."

According to the discussion at the student council meeting, the fees could be raised as much as $10 per decal.

However, Dr. John E. Grinnell, vice president for operations, told The Egyptian, "any figure that has been mentioned up to now for the decals has no authenticity."

Faculty members, graduate, disabled and commuter students would be affected by any increase in parking fees.

Under present University regulations, holders of "P", blue and red "G", "C", and blue disabled stickers, pay $3 per year to use University parking facilities.

Holders of "O", "L", and "W" stickers pay no fee for automobile registration. These stickers do not allow parking on University-approved facilities.

There are approximately 3,200 cars carrying some type of University decal. Campus parking facilities are available for approximately 1,800 vehicles.

According to the council member who serves on the parking committee, the discussion centered around increasing the price of "P", red or blue "G", "C" or blue disabled stickers and the possibility of requiring all other drivers to pay at least one dollar for automobile registration.

Student Body President Dick Childrens, appointed Dale Klaus, Tom Gilooly and Pat Conway to the committee to look into the matter.

Joseph F. Zaleski, assistant dean of student affairs, announced Monday that all students who are considering engaging in any unsupervised water fights will be subject to disciplinary action by the University.

Problems Of Mass Education:

Dean Davis Is Worried About Education In 1980

I. Clark Davis, dean of student affairs and a man with ideas on higher education, is worried about the year 1980.

The problem: How to keep mass education from destroying the individual's incentives.

Davis cites the growing conflicts among the goals of the university's clientele -- students, tax payers, bondholders, labor unions and others striving for excellence -- as the sources of the trouble.

Conflicting viewpoints, such as whether a college student should acquire a general educational basis upon which to grow intellectually, or whether he should become a "Splendid splinter" armed with today's highly specialized techniques and skills that 20 years from now may be obsolete, cause me great concern that students in 1980 might lose their individuality," Davis said.

"Colleges and universities have a terrifying job ahead as they try to handle quantity -- individuality and academic excellence," Davis said. "We must set up an environment in which each student is important and in which each student will strive for that level of excellence within himself that he can attain. We must motivate him to adjust to his environment and to want to learn."

"Here at SIU we are trying to maintain a university where every human being is important," he continued. "Student individuality is inherent in Southern's bold new approach to give breadth of experience to those many talented students from all over the state who are from moderate and low-income families and who have not had the opportunity of enough broadening experiences."

Here students are exposed to a vast array of ideas through freshman convocations, guest lecturers and artists, campus musicals, concerts, plays, and many other programs.

Davis spends a great deal of time working for these student goals of adjustment, incentive, individuality, and academic excellence. As director of student affairs, he coordinates student housing, activities, welfare, financial assistance, and counseling and testing.

He is an associate professor of higher education and assists in the planning of new residence halls and the planning and development of the University Center. He currently is helping to develop a student health clinic and housing for student services. Davis is also advisor to Phi Eta Sigma, national honorary scholastic fraternity.

Born in Benton, Ill., in 1917, Davis attended high school there. He entered Southern in 1939 and, until graduation, worked as a publicity writer for the athletic department. In his junior and senior years he was the business manager for all sports.

He later attended Midshipman's School at Notre Dame and was commissioned as an ensign in the Naval Reserve. After earning a master's degree at Indiana University, he became the director of student affairs at Purdue University. He returned to Southern in 1947.

Students Should Fill Out Change Of Address Form

"Students who are going home for the summer, permanently leaving school, transferring, or graduating, should fill out a change of address form," says Mrs. Katherine McCluckie, mailing service supervisor of the university post office.

Change of address forms are available at the university post office on campus, or the Carbondale post office downtown.

"When students go home for the summer, graduate or leave school, mail continues to come to their former address, and it is hard for us to find where to deliver it. However, when students fill out the change of address form, this delay is eliminated," she said.

The university post office and the Carbondale post office coordinate their services to find the students' right address when the address is wrong. "The only way we can find a student's right address is to check with the Registrar," Mrs. McCluckie said.

'Banners Of Steel' Needs Less Talk More Action

Producing "Banners of Steel," Barrie Stavis' new play about John Brown's raid on Harper's Ferry, was almost as formidable a task for the Southern Players as the original raid must have been for Brown and his motley crew of radicals and zealots.

Unfortunately, the play isn't much more of a success than the raid was.

At the outset, let it be noted that the actors have almost as much working against them as John Brown's raiders had. The play is unwieldy, there obviously wasn't enough time to trim and rewrite the play into a manageable production and the stage at the Southern Playhouse is entirely too small for such a large production.

But the actors, like Brown's raiders, were valiant. They tried despite overwhelming odds. And as a result, the audience opening night was treated to some fleeting moments of stirring drama and wry wit during the course of a production that seemed almost as long as the Civil War itself.

Soby Kalman was particularly good in the first act as one of the radicals who wanted to stop all the talking and get on with the raid. (By the end of the act, he certainly must have had all the audience agreeing with him). But most of the other would-be soldiers in Brown's rag-tag army on the stage had all the fire of a Girl Scout troop on its first camp out.

George Worrell, who plays John Brown, struggled through what seemed like interminable speeches that made Brown more of a pompous old wind bag than the half-mad religious zealot that history has proved him to be. Both Worrell and Brown deserve a better fate.

Marjorie Lerstrom, as the neighbor who spied on the Brown farm house and blackmailed the Brown women in a rather crafty manner, and Ralph Bushee, as Governor Wise of Virginia, managed to bring a bit of humor into a rather dull evening.

Despite what seems to be a rather disgruntled report, "Banners of Steel" has potential. Rewritten so illiterate slave, Bible-thumping religious radical and slow-witted farm hand didn't all sound exactly alike and staged out of doors so the director could really produce a rousing "raid", "Banners of Steel" probably would be stirring drama.

As it is, one can only surmise that if the real John Brown and his army did as much talking as those on the stage, there's little wonder the raid failed.

The play reopens tonight at 8 p.m. and will continue through Saturday.

CRAM COURSE NO. 5: SHAKESPEARE

Continuing our series of pre-final exam cram courses, today we take up the works of William Shakespeare (or "The Bard of Avon" as he is jocularly called).

First let us examine the persistent theory that Shakespeare (or "The Pearl of the Antilles" as he is affectionately referred to) is not the real author of his plays. Advocates of this theory insist that the plays are so full of classical allusions and learned references that they couldn't possibly have been written by the son of an illiterate country butcher.

To which I reply, "Fugh!" Was not the great Spinoza's father a humble woodcutter? Was not the immortal Isaac Newton's father a simple second baseman? (The elder Newton, incidentally, is one of history's truly pathetic figures. He was, by all accounts, the greatest second baseman of his time, but baseball, alas, had not yet been invented.) It used to break young Isaac's heart to see his father get up every morning, put on uniform, spikes, glove, and cap, and stand alertly behind second base, bent forward, eyes narrowed, waiting, waiting, waiting. That's all waiting. Isaac loyally sat in the bleachers and yelled, "Good show, Dad!" and stuff like that, but every-one else in town used to snigger and pelt the Newtons with overripe fruit—figs for the elder Newton, apples for the younger. Thus, as we all know, the famous occasion came about when Isaac Newton, struck in the head with an apple, leapt to his feet, shouted, "Europa!" and announced the third law of motion: "For every action there is an opposite and equal reaction!"

(How profoundly true these simple words are! Take, for example, Marlboro Cigarettes. Light one. That's the action. Now what is the reaction? Pleasure, delight, contentment, cheer, and comfort! And why such a happy reaction? Because you have

Mrs. Naoma Kinney discusses sports photos with Rip Stokes, head of SIU's photo service.

Meet Naoma Kinney, Unofficially She's A 'Member' Of All SIU Teams

What is your pleasure—brains or brawn?

Mrs. Naoma Kinney, better known to "all of the fellas" as "Naoma," readily admits that in her job as chief clerk for the SIU athletic department she encounters a great deal of both.

Among her many duties are keeping track of the athlete's budgets, arranging for trips and scholarships, and managing the ticket office.

"Do you have any tickets on the 50-yard line?" came a telephone request last Homecoming. "No," replied Mrs. Kinney. "But I have some on the 30-or 40-yard line." "Well," the female voice asked, "do you have any on the 100-yard line?"

Humor is abundant. If the coaches or the athletes aren't displaying their talents along that line, the unusual requests from sports-loving fans manage to fill the gaps.

Mrs. Kinney's personality adds to the pleasant atmosphere.

"Telephone questions are numerous," says Mrs. Kinney. "People ask such questions as 'what are the ticket prices for the Cardinals baseball game,' and 'what are the rules for ice hockey.'" One gentleman asked what a S-luki is. When Mrs. Kinney replied an Egyptian racing dog, he said "no wonder the SIU track boys are so fast."

Mrs. Kinney, who has been with the department for eight years, never misses an athletic event unless it is held during working hours. When tickets are needed, Mrs. Kinney is always on hand.

If it isn't evident, Mrs. Kinney "loves her job." "All of the fellas are so nice that I hate to see them graduate." Proudly she admitted that at one time or another they all come back to visit. Often times they bring candy or flowers to the office girls.

started with a happy cigarette—a felicitous blend of jolly tobacco, a good-natured filter, a rollicking flip-top box, a merry soft pack. As Newton often said, "You begin with better makin's, you end with better smokin's." Small wonder they called him "The Swedish Nightingale!"

But I digress. Back to Shakespeare (or "The Gem of the Ocean" as he was rildly appelted).

Shakespeare's most important play is, of course, Hamlet (or Macbeth, as it is sometimes called). This play tells in living color the story of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark, who one night sees a ghost upon the battlements. (Possibly it is a goat he sees; I have a first folio edition that is frankly not too legible.) Anyhow, Hamlet is so upset by seeing the ghost (or goat) that he stabs Polonius and Bare Bodkin. He is thereupon banished to a leather factory by the King, who cries, "Get thee to a tannery!" Thereupon Ophelia refuses her food until Laertes shouts, "Get thee to a beaunery!" Ophelia is so miffed that she chases her little dog out of the room, crying, "Out, out damned Spot!" She is fined fifty shillings for swearing, but Portia, in an eloquent plea, gets the sentence commuted to life imprisonment. Thereupon King Lear and Queen Mab proclaim a festival—complete with amateur theatricals, kissing games, and a pie-eating contest. Everyone has a perfectly splendid time till Banquo's ghost (or goat) shows up. This so uningles Richard III that he drowns his cousin, Butt Malmsey. This leads to a lively discussion during which everyone is killed. The little dog Spot returns to utter the immortal curtain lines:

Associated Press News Roundup

President Wants More Atomic Weapons Money

WASHINGTON - President Kennedy asked Congress to appropriate additional money to help cover costs of nuclear weapons tests and to produce atomic weapons.

Kennedy sent Congress a proposed change in the 1962-3 budget, including $120 million to restore current funds now being spent in connection with the test program.

He recommended an increase of $44.5 million for production and for a detailed study of a new approach to be design of nuclear power reactors.

NEW YORK -- Publisher Gardner Cowles, who recently interviewed Soviet Premier Khrushchev, says he doubts that the Soviet leader fully grasps great changes sweeping the world.

Cowles said the development of the European Common market is one of the changes "the Russians just can'tathom."

"It's fabulous growth is contrary to all the lessons of Marx, Lenin and Khrushchev," Cowles said. "It leaves him stunned."

Other important changes noted by Cowles are: the end of colonialism; the schism between Red China and the Soviet Union; the lack of an alternative by the United States and the Soviet Union to find "some kind of a tolerable understanding" because each has the power to incinerate the world, and the United States' leadership toward creating a genuine free-world community.

The United States is known to want its troops as close as possible to Laotian danger points but far enough away to emphasize the defensive intent.

Khorat is considered the most logical site for the headquarters because of its airstrip and good backstop railway communications.

TAIPEI, Formosa - Nationalist China offered Monday to help solve the refugee problem threatening to overwhelm British Hong Kong, saying it is ready to accept all fugitives from Red China who wish to come to Formosa.

This will furnish no quick solution, however. Resettlement will be a slow and costly process and many of the Chinese in Hong Kong do not want to come to Formosa.

Fleeing from hunger in south China, the Chinese have overflowed the facilities of Hong Kong since May 1. British police and soldiers have sent possibly 32,000 back behind the Bamboo Curtain.

DENVER -- The 174th general assembly of the United Presbyterian Church has approved a record general mission budget of $30,354,672 for next year.

An Irishman Writes A Love Letter To Dublin

Dominic Behan's Autobiography

Is A Fine Broth Of A Book

"Tell Dublin I Miss Her," by Dominic Behan
(G. P. Putnam's Sons, 234pp. $3.50)

Everybody knows Brendan Behan. Even if you haven't read any of his books or been to any of his plays, you've seen his snaggle-toothed face and listened to his grand blarney on the Jack Paar show. Or you've read in the papers about his binges, some of which have been the most monumental since Dylan Thomas floated from one end of the country to the other on an endless sea of booze until he drowned in it. Yes, Brendan is probably the best-known Irishman since Barry Fitzgerald.

How difficult, then, to be Brendan Behan's younger brother and have to stand in the shadows next to his spotlight. Such good, healthy sibling jealousy was probably one reason Dominic Behan turned to writing, and if so, we've got something else to thank Brendan for, because this is a fine broth of a book.

It's supposed to be an autobiography, but it's different from most of the species. Ford Madox Ford also used to write what he called autobiographical books, but he had to explain in one of them that though "this book is full of inaccuracies as to facts...its accuracy as to impressions is absolute." Dominic Behan's "autobiography" is of this kind. He forewarns us that "If some of the incidents in this book did not occur, then it's only because two people can't be in the same place at the same time," whatever that means. And if he sometimes reports inaccurately, it is because "some incidents—the Crucifixion, for example—took place before I was born."

A great deal, enough to fill one-sixth of the book in fact, takes place before Dom is finally born. Among other things, there is the Easter Monday uprising of 1916, when the Irish Volunteers tried once again to smack off the Sassenach yoke; there is the marriage of Don's future parents (praise be), his mother a widow with two sons; there is the birth of brother Brendan in 1923 while father is serving a jail sentence for rebel activities; and in between there are odds and ends of anecdotes and incidents before Dominic makes his appearance (p. 40) on Oct. 22, 1928.

There were finally six children all told (one girl), and times were hard. It was the midst of the depression, and like everyone else, Da, a house painter, could get work only now and then. Nonetheless, life in the tenement section of Dublin was rollicking, for the place abounded with characters like Annie Nolan, who said prayers on Good Fridays for the repose of the soul of King Brian Boru, who died in 1014; "Sailor" Clancy, "who went to Glasgow on Mondays and came back on Fridays with a Scots accent"; Mrs. Carroll, the "coalman," whose big, strapping son "watched from behind a pack of cards as she stumbled to the top of a house with a hundred weight of coal on her back, and said bitterly: 'Isn't it a disgraceful country where an owl woman like her'd have to do a job the likes of that?'"

There is also Brendan, and this is my favorite story about him. Like many Irishmen, Brendan, though only 16, went to England in 1939 to work in the war factories and, on the side, to commit an occasional act of subversion on behalf of the Irish cause. The night before he left he and Dom had a row because Dom wouldn't go next door for a piece of string so Brendan could tie his packages up. Well, Brendan wasn't in England long before he was clapped in the reformatory for bomb-throwing and the like. (Brendan's entertaining book of a few years ago, "Borstal Boy," is an account of these experiences. "Boy," is an account of these experiences.) He was finally released in 1942, and the homecoming was a joyous one. But he was about to shake Dom's hand when he remembered, "Yeh little _____" he said, "Yeh wouldn't get me a piece of string in '39!"

But the most memorable character of the lot is Da, and Dominic's love for the man shines through the book. Da might have drunk a bit too much, might have lied a little on occasion, and was perhaps on the lazy side (see the story of Da and the pile of fertilizer), but his warmth and kindness generated the love his family felt for him. He is right out of Sean O'Casey.

The book is not devoted exclusively to the quirks and oddities of its rich cast of characters. This was, after all, a time of incredible misery for the poor, of an Ireland in rebellion against its foreign master, of labor troubles, of Franco, Hitler and the rest. All of this is here as backdrop. But it is the Dubliner, loving, hating, brawling, drinking, comic and pathetic—in short, human—who stands in stage center.

Dom stops abruptly in 1942 with the funeral of his beloved uncle Peadar Kearney. (He wrote the words of the Irish national anthem, and maybe that is where Brendan and Dominic inherited their gifts.) Dom was only 14, so we'll probably hear more from him. I hope so.

Strawinsky Gives Critics The Back Of His Baton

Igor Strawinsky and Robert Craft
Expositions and Developments
(Doubleday and Co.)

Now approaching eighty years, Igor Strawinsky is obviously as keen as ever. "Expositions and Developments" written in collaboration with secretary Robert Craft is by turns witty, informative, occasionally probing and finally devastating as regards certain critics who have written unknowingly of his works. This last "appendix" portion of the book is by far the most intriguing and it is hoped his pseudonym critics H. P. Langweilich and S. W. Deaf are left with very little of their critical self respect.

Obviously Mr. Lang and Mr. Seargent (of the New York Herald Tribune and The New Yorker respectively) touched Mr. Strawinsky to the quick. I find Strawinsky's vigorous objections extremely well taken. The quotations illustrate once again the critics' glaring, almost unforgivable errors and lace of understanding which become perpetuated in print and carry considerable weight with the casual reader. Matters of style and techniques of communication to which a composer may have given a lifetime are so often disposed of glibly, with a superiority that is compounded with haste and half knowledge. Surely the remarks here quoted will be worth of inclusion in a new edition of Slonimsky "Lexicon of Musical Invective."

The influence of Mr. Craft seems somewhat less obtrusive here than in earlier books—the same series (Conversations With Igor Strawinsky etc.). The questions posed are brief and answers discourse or ramble in length on subjects dealing with his childhood, his first musical awareness, his music heritage, his precompositional techniques and many valuable remarks about the performance problems and practices of his work.

Without question the value of these remarks will increase with age. There appears little doubt that Strawinsky's music will have a prominent place in future repertory. What tremendous assistance it would be to have similar observations from a Bach or Mozart. Viewed as part of a series "Expositions and Developments" takes its place in bringing greater insights to the music of one of the twentieth century's most prominent and influential creative artists.

Trackmen Win Second Straight IIAC Title

SIU won its second straight interstate Conference track and field title Saturday with 13 points only one point away from the all-time record for most points by a winning team.

Coach Lew Hartzog's squad of three of four new IIAC records in the meet that saw Salukis win eight of the 15 events. The record for most points in a winning effort is Eastern Michigan's 36 7/8.

Finishing behind SIU in order were Western Illinois 8 1/2; Northern Illinois 1 1/4; Eastern Illinois 9 1/2; Central Michigan 4 3/4; Illinois State 10 1/2 and Eastern Michigan 6 1/2.

Jim Gualdoni, Bill Cornell and Jim Dupree turned in the record-breaking performances in Southern's last appearance in the IIAC track and field meet. SIU withdraws from the conference June 30.

Gualdoni set new school and conference records in the broad jump when he leaped 24 feet 1 inch in Friday's preliminaries. The old conference record of 24 feet 5/8 inch was held by Eastern Michigan's Hayes Jones.

It was only the second time in Gualdoni's career that he had jumped past the 23 feet mark and the first time that the senior jumper had gone past 24 feet.

Cornell turned the mile in 4:11.3 only one-tenth of a second off the IIAC record set last year by Western Illinois' Bill Kozar of 4:11.4. Cornell finished third in the two mile run.

Jim Dupree established a new IIAC mark in the half-mile with a time of 1:50.3 breaking the old record of 1:52.6 held jointly by SIU's John Saunders and Western's Bert Ohlander, Saunders, last year's winner, finished no better than fifth this year.

Ed Houston won the 440 with a time of :48.8. Houston also ran on SIU's winning mile relay team.

Bob Green, freshmen hurdler from Washington, D.C., won the 120-yard high hurdles with a time of :14.7. He finished second in the 220-yard low hurdles.

Gerry Eskoff and Dennis Harmon finished one-two for Southern in the javelin. Eskoff threw the javelin 201 feet 9 1/2 inches.

Sam Silas won the discus with a toss of 147 feet 2 1/2 inches and finished second in the shot put behind Northern Illinois' Bob Hoover who set a new IIAC record in the event.

SIU's mile relay team of John Peters, Ed Houston, John

Saunders and Jim Dupree finished first in the event with a time of 3:17.5 far off the school record of 3:13.9 set against Oklahoma State May 12.

Southern's next appearance is scheduled for Friday when Hartzog takes Dupree, Saunders, Cornell and Brian Turner to Modesto, Cal. for the California Relays. The quarter will run the two-mile and distance medley relays.

Salukis Edge Out Normal To Take IIAC Tennis Title

Illinois State Normal prodded SIU with some anxious moments Saturday in the Interstate Conference tennis meet before bowing to the Salukis, 18-16. The IIAC title is Southern's fourth in the last five years.

Illinois State led 13-9 before Saturday's competition but after the competition, Southern had won four of the 14 singles division titles and two of three doubles division rounds to edge out the ambitious Illinois State Redbirds.

Pacho Castillo, John Geremich, George Domenech and Larry Oblin all won singles titles while Geremich and Domenech teamed to win the division one doubles and the team of Castillo-Oblin won the division two doubles.

It was a sweet victory for SIU coach Dick LeFevre, who last year saw his team finish fourth after several mid-tournament forfeitures.

Castillo and Geremich with their victories kept their winning streak going. Castillo won two matches during the two-way competition while Geremich won two matches en route to his division two title.

"Lady Luck" dealt Larry Oblin a winning hand for a change as the sophomore netter won the division four singles title. Previously this year Oblin had lost six of 16 matches but this week he atoned for the earlier losses.

Central Michigan Throws Roadblock In SIU's Path To 5th IAC Title

Larry Tucker, who celebrated his 22 birthday Friday, did his share in trying to help SIU clinch its fifth straight IAC Conference Title.

The Salukis took a 6-3 victory over the Chippewas of Central Michigan. Tucker was a standout on the mound as well as at the plate. He struck out 8 batters while only walking 3. In the batters box he ripped out 3 hits in 4 trips, and collected 3 RBI's. Tuckers first hit was followed by Duke Sutton's blast which sailed over the left field fence for a home run to give the Salukis a 2-0 lead in the third inning.

The Salukis broke the tie in their half of the fifth. Tucker doubled and Glenn Bischof singled for the third run. The Salukis scored again in the sixth on singles by Mel Patton and Jerry Qualls and a walk by Jim Long to fill the bases for Tucker who came through with a three run double.

The first game of the twin-bill Saturday the Chips turned the other cheek to take the victory 4-2.

Saluki hurler Harry Gurley turned in a fine performance on the mound but had no help from his teammates. Gurley struck out 10 while walking only 2. The Salukis only runs came in the fifth on a hit, a walk and two errors.

The second game of the twinbill and the final chance for Abe Martin's baseballers to secure the conference championship was pretty rough on the Salukis pitchers. For in the sixth inning four were used to try to stop the Chips run producing machine.

The Salukis scored in the first inning and again in the third. They came back in the seventh with two more runs on a walk and a triple by Bischof.
